138. M. BINGHAM (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je ne chercherai nullement à faire des observations détaillées au sujet de la longue déclaration prononcée cet après-midi par le représentant de l'Union soviétique. Nous présenterons, le moment venu, nos vues sur la question qui fait l'objet du débat. Etant la plus ancienne des puissances anticoloniales, nous ne le cédon à aucune autre nation dans notre dévouement à la cause de la liberté et du droit de tous les peuples à l'autodétermination. Je voudrais cependant présenter de brèves observations sur certains points de la déclaration du représentant de l'Union soviétique qui révèle clairement que son attaque contre le colonialisme est en réalité une attaque contre le monde occidental.

139. Le Ministre des affaires étrangères de Nigéria a exprimé hier [1047^{ème} séance] la crainte que l'on n'introduise une propagande de guerre froide dans la discussion générale sur cette question. Ses craintes étaient pleinement justifiées, comme le montre le discours prononcé cet après-midi par le représentant de l'Union soviétique. Sous le couvert d'une attaque contre le colonialisme, le représentant de l'Union soviétique n'a laissé aucun doute qu'il cherche en fait à atteindre divers objectifs soviétiques de la guerre froide. Il attaque les Etats-Unis et leurs alliés parce qu'ils disposent de bases militaires, mais il sait pertinemment que cet appareil défensif n'est nécessaire que parce qu'il existe un danger évident d'agression communiste.

140. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique s'en prend aux efforts déployés par les Etats-Unis pour aider de nombreuses populations du monde à atteindre par leurs propres moyens un niveau de vie plus élevé, dans un régime de liberté. Ces efforts, dit-il, sont une manifestation d'impérialisme. En revanche, l'assistance accordée par l'Union soviétique est bien entendu purement philanthropique. Je laisse aux représentants siégeant dans cette salle et connaissant ces questions le soin de faire les comparaisons et les rapprochements qui s'imposent.

142. En revanche, j'ai écouté avec plaisir certaines déclarations du représentant de l'Union soviétique.

Je l'ai écouté avec plaisir citer textuellement le paragraphe 2 de la Déclaration adoptée l'an dernier par l'Assemblée générale sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Ce paragraphe stipule:

"Tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique . . ."

143. Je l'ai écouté aussi avec plaisir préconiser certains principes comme ceux de la liberté de parole, de la liberté de la presse, des élections libres et du suffrage universel des adultes. J'ose espérer que ces admirables déclarations, que nous approuvons entièrement, seront bientôt mises en pratique dans les régions du monde placées aujourd'hui sous la domination de l'Union soviétique.

La séance est levée à 17 h 35.

Déclaration du Président

1. Le PRÉSIDENT: L'ordre du jour de la présente séance comporte deux questions. La première concerne la suite du débat sur les points 88 et 22, a; la deuxième concerne la troisième partie du rapport de la Première Commission sur les points 73 et 72. Dans la lettre qu'il m'a adressée, le Président de la Première Commission suggère que cette question soit examinée "le plus tôt possible" par l'Assemblée générale en séance plénière. Je propose que nous commencions aujourd'hui par la suite du débat sur les points 88 et 22, a, que nous avons entamé hier.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique:

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance (suite)

2. M. LUNS (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ce que nous devons discuter ici maintenant n'est pas simplement une nouvelle mesure dans la voie qui conduit du colonialisme à l'égalité de statut de tous les peuples du monde. C'est bien plus que cela; il s'agit en fait de mettre fin à une période de l'histoire. Dans son essence comme dans son objet, notre débat doit nous conduire à un accord sur les mesures finales à prendre si l'on veut que l'application pratique de trois ensembles de règles aboutisse à des résultats concrets. Ces trois ensembles de règles sont: premièrement, les principes généraux inscrits dans la Charte des Nations Unies; deuxièmement, les obligations particulières que la Charte et diverses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale imposent aux Etats Membres qui administrent des territoires non autonomes; troisièmement, les directives énoncées dans la résolution 1514 (XV) sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

3. Si le Président veut bien me le permettre, je vais énumérer brièvement ces principes, ces obligations et ces directives.

4. Tout d'abord, nous trouvons dans la Charte, au paragraphe 2 de l'article 1, le principe de l'égalité de droits des peuples et de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes, et, au paragraphe 3 de l'Article 1, le principe du respect des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales pour tous sans distinction de race, de sexe, de langue ou de religion.

5. Parmi ces droits de l'homme et ces libertés fondamentales, le droit d'autodétermination occupe une place prédominante. Le droit des peuples et des nations à disposer d'eux-mêmes a été l'objet de la résolution 637 (VII) A de l'Assemblée générale qui, après avoir réaffirmé que les Etats Membres de l'Organisation doivent soutenir le principe du droit de tous les peuples et de toutes les nations à disposer d'eux-mêmes, stipule en son paragraphe 2:

"Les Etats Membres de l'Organisation doivent reconnaître et favoriser la réalisation, en ce qui concerne les populations des territoires non autonomes et des territoires sous tutelle... du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes et doivent faciliter l'exercice de ce droit aux populations de ces territoires compte tenu... de la volonté librement exprimée des populations intéressées, la volonté de la population étant déterminée par voie de plébiscite ou par d'autres moyens démocratiques reconnus, de préférence sous l'égide des Nations Unies."

6. Au paragraphe 3 de la même résolution, il est dit qu' "en attendant la réalisation du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes et afin de préparer cette réalisation", il faut assurer la participation directe des populations autochtones aux organes législatifs et exécutifs du gouvernement de ces territoires, ainsi que les préparer à l' "autonomie complète ou à l'indépendance".

7. Les obligations des puissances administrantes ont été précisées plus en détail dans la résolution 1541 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Cette résolution précise que la tâche de toute puissance administrante est de conduire les populations qu'elle administre à la pleine autonomie par l'accession du territoire non autonome au statut d'Etat souverain, par sa libre association à un Etat indépendant ou par son intégration à un Etat indépendant. Pour ce qui est de l'intégration à un Etat indépendant, le principe IX de l'annexe à cette résolution stipule:

"a) Le territoire intégré devra avoir atteint un stade avancé d'autonomie, avec des institutions politiques libres, de telle sorte que ses populations aient la capacité de choisir en pleine connaissance de cause, selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées;

"b) L'intégration doit résulter du désir librement exprimé des populations du territoire, pleinement conscientes du changement de leur statut, la consultation se faisant selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées, impartialement appliquées et fondées sur le suffrage universel des adultes. L'Organisation des Nations Unies pourra, quand elle le jugera nécessaire, contrôler l'application de ces méthodes."

8. Je passe enfin aux directives de la résolution 1514 (XV) dont l'application est l'objet de la question actuellement en discussion. J'en détache les déclarations suivantes:

"L'Organisation des Nations Unies a un rôle important à jouer comme moyen d'aider le mouvement vers l'indépendance dans les territoires sous tutelle et les territoires non autonomes;

"Tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique;

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires... conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés... afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

9. Les directives que je viens de rappeler ont été approuvées par l'Assemblée à d'imposantes majorités et ont suscité de grands espoirs, particulièrement en Asie et en Afrique où l'évolution vers l'autonomie n'est pas encore terminée. Ce qu'on attend de nous maintenant, ce n'est pas que nous nous engagions dans de longues discussions théoriques, mais que nous mettions au point des méthodes pratiques pour atteindre nos objectifs, et les dirigeants des Etats africains l'ont souligné expressément.

10. Pour ne prendre qu'un exemple, la déclaration publiée le 18 septembre 1961 à l'issue de la Conférence de Tananarive^{1/} déclare que les Nations Unies doivent accélérer le processus de décolonisation en faisant usage de tous les moyens possibles pour appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV). Ce que cette déclaration demande, ce sont des solutions pratiques.

11. De nombreux dirigeants africains ont souligné d'autre part que leurs pays et leurs aspirations ne doivent pas servir de pions dans la guerre froide. Ma délégation comprend et partage entièrement cette préoccupation. Nous nous plaisons à croire, nous aussi, que le grand objectif de la pleine autonomie pour tous les peuples ne sera pas masqué ou trahi par ceux qui se soucient plutôt de mener leurs propres batailles politiques que d'aider les peuples et territoires dépendants à accéder au plus tôt à l'indépendance. Il importe de hâter l'application pratique des principes directeurs adoptés l'an dernier, dans l'intérêt non seulement des peuples encore dépendants, mais aussi bien de tous les autres, car la persistance de l'inégalité engendre des tensions dangereuses que notre monde divisé peut difficilement supporter.

12. Avant d'aborder un cas particulier d'application de la résolution 1514 (XV), permettez-moi de résumer une fois de plus les desiderata énoncés dans la Charte et dans les diverses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale que j'ai citées. Ce sont les suivants: la primauté des intérêts des habitants; la prise en considération des aspirations politiques des populations; l'évolution vers la pleine autonomie ou la pleine indépendance; le droit d'autodétermination; la détermination de la volonté de la population par voie de plébiscite ou par d'autres moyens démocratiques reconnus, de préférence sous l'égide des Nations Unies; le refus de l'intégration à aucun Etat indépendant sauf si elle répond au désir librement exprimé des populations, la consultation se faisant selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées, impartialement appliquées et fondées sur le suffrage universel des adultes; enfin, le rôle important qui est dévolu aux Nations Unies dans l'ensemble de ce processus.

13. Comment avons-nous appliqué ces principes au seul territoire non autonome restant sous l'administration des Pays-Bas, la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale?

14. Premièrement, nous avons pris toutes les mesures en notre pouvoir pour répandre l'enseignement, accélérer l'évolution culturelle, économique et politique des habitants, autant qu'il est humainement possible de le faire. Nous avons créé le Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée, dont les membres sont en majorité élus au suffrage universel des adultes. Sur 28 membres, 23 sont des Papous. Il existe un certain nombre de conseils locaux, élus selon les mêmes méthodes, et de nombreux autochtones ont été nommés à des postes dans les services administratifs, qui comptent actuellement plus de 50 p. 100 de Papous.

15. Deuxièmement, nous avons offert de transférer la souveraineté sur le territoire à sa population dès que les Nations Unies pourront assumer les services administratifs nécessaires dont la population n'est pas encore en mesure de se charger complètement elle-même.

16. Troisièmement, nous avons émis la proposition que les Nations Unies, conscientes du rôle important qu'elles doivent jouer dans cette évolution, créent une autorité à cette fin.

17. Quatrièmement, nous avons posé comme condition unique, mais essentielle, que le plein et libre exercice du droit d'autodétermination des Papous dans le territoire soit garanti sans équivoque et assuré de bonne foi au moyen d'un plébiscite organisé sous l'égide des Nations Unies. Je répète une fois de plus que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas respectera entièrement toute décision que prendra la population papoue, y compris naturellement la décision de se rattacher à l'Indonésie.

^{1/} Tenue du 6 au 12 septembre 1961.

18. Cinquièmement, nous avons annoncé que nous sommes disposés à continuer de contribuer au développement du territoire sur la base de notre présente contribution, qui est de 30 millions de dollars par an, jusqu'à la date qui pourra être fixée ultérieurement.

19. Sixièmement, si les Nations Unies le désirent, les Pays-Bas sont également disposés à prier certains fonctionnaires néerlandais se trouvant en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale d'y rester encore quelque temps.

20. Septièmement, comme premier pas vers la réalisation de ces objectifs et, pour éviter de donner l'impression que nous préjugions le moins du monde la décision à prendre, nous avons proposé que l'Assemblée générale crée une commission des Nations Unies et lui donne pour mandat de se rendre dans le territoire et de se renseigner sur la situation politique, économique, sociale et de l'enseignement dans le territoire, ainsi que sur l'opinion de la population quant à la situation actuelle du territoire et son avenir. Nous avons aussi proposé que cette commission fasse rapport sur la possibilité d'organiser un plébiscite sous le contrôle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour connaître les vœux de la population au sujet de son avenir, sur la date à fixer pour le plébiscite et sur la possibilité de placer le territoire, pendant la période intérimaire, en partie ou en totalité sous l'administration d'une autorité internationale de développement créée par l'Organisation des Nations Unies et fonctionnant sous son égide.

21. Huitièmement, nous avons proposé que la commission fasse rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa prochaine session, et l'Assemblée pourrait alors, sur la base de ce rapport objectif, prendre toutes mesures nécessaires pour continuer la mise en œuvre du plan que nous présentons.

22. Nous avons estimé nécessaire de prévoir ces deux phases dans nos propositions pour trois raisons. La première raison est que la Nouvelle-Guinée, bien qu'elle soit la deuxième île du monde par sa superficie, est, pour bien des Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, une terre très lointaine qui, malgré les rapports volumineux présentés chaque année depuis 12 ans par le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas à l'Assemblée générale par l'intermédiaire du Secrétariat, est restée en quelque sorte terre inconnue et sur l'avenir de laquelle ces Etats Membres auraient peut-être quelque difficulté à se prononcer définitivement dès maintenant.

23. La deuxième raison est que notre proposition est si neuve que les Etats Membres préféreront peut-être ne pas se prononcer, par exemple, sur l'idée d'une autorité internationale de développement créée par l'Organisation des Nations Unies, jusqu'à ce que toutes ses conséquences possibles aient été étudiées à fond par une commission. Je soulignerai encore que pareille offre n'a jamais été faite par aucune puissance administrante aux Nations Unies et que la situation qui nous a incités à faire cette offre est elle aussi sans exemple.

24. La troisième raison résulte de l'attitude, des revendications et des allégations d'un troisième Etat: l'Indonésie. Les membres de l'Assemblée ne savent que trop bien que l'Indonésie a revendiqué le droit d'incorporer la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise — l'Irian occidental, comme elle l'appelle — à son territoire, et cela sans permettre au peuple papou de s'exprimer sur cette incorporation "selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées, impartialement appliquées et fondées sur le suffrage universel des adultes", sous le contrôle des Nations Unies — je cite l'annexe à la résolution 1541 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Je ne veux pas me lancer, maintenant du moins, à discuter les arguments avancés par l'Indonésie à l'appui de cette revendication vraiment extraordinaire. Y faire droit serait violer manifestement tous les principes, toutes les obligations et toutes les directives de la Charte et des résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée générale.

25. Je me bornerai pour le moment à dire qu'à l'appui de ses prétentions l'Indonésie a déclaré que les Papous se considéraient comme appartenant à l'Indonésie et souhaitaient lui être intégrés, que l'administration néerlandaise opprimait cruellement la population papoue et l'empêchait de réaliser son désir de s'intégrer à l'Indonésie. Si je me contentais de réfuter ces contrevérités grossières, certaines délégations pourraient encore concevoir des doutes sur la situation véritable. C'est aussi pour cette raison que le Gouvernement néerlandais accueillerait avec faveur une enquête complètement impartiale effectuée sur place par une commission des Nations Unies, qui pourrait faire rapport sur la situation dans le territoire et rendre compte sans parti pris de l'opinion véritable des Papous et de la gestion néerlandaise, de façon que l'Assemblée générale puisse se prononcer définitivement l'an prochain en pleine connaissance de cause.

26. C'est donc en vertu de ces considérations que je recommande à l'attention de tous les Etats Membres le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. Les propositions qui s'y trouvent ont été accueillies favorablement par de très nombreuses délégations. Quelques délégations, cependant, nous ont demandé pourquoi nous n'avions pas tenu compte de l'Indonésie — comme elles disent — en faisant ces propositions et pourquoi le règlement du différend territorial entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie ne serait pas réglé en premier lieu.

27. Ma réponse à ces questions est simple. D'abord, nous n'avons pas pu consulter l'Indonésie auparavant parce qu'elle a rompu les relations diplomatiques avec mon pays et est même allée jusqu'à refuser d'accepter la procédure normale en pareil cas, à savoir qu'un Etat tiers soit autorisé à représenter les intérêts néerlandais en Indonésie. En outre, tous les dirigeants et porte-parole indonésiens ont répété à satiété que l'Indonésie ne pourrait accepter qu'une seule solution: l'intégration du territoire et du peuple de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise à l'Indonésie, sans consultation préalable du peuple papou.

28. Quant au règlement du différend territorial, je ferai observer qu'à l'heure actuelle ce qui importe n'est pas tant la question juridique de savoir si la souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée appartient aux Pays-Bas ou à l'Indonésie, encore que nous ayons proposé à plusieurs reprises — on me pardonnera de le rappeler — que cette question juridique soit soumise à la Cour internationale de Justice et que l'Indonésie s'y soit constamment refusée. Ce qui importe actuellement et plus que toute autre chose, c'est l'avenir de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise. Nul n'a le droit d'en décider, sauf les Papous eux-mêmes. Leur laisser la décision est la seule méthode conforme aux principes de la Charte. C'est d'ailleurs aussi la seule qui permette de régler le différend de manière pacifique et durable.

29. Je continue d'espérer que l'Indonésie comprendra enfin que cette méthode est juste et que notre retrait de la Nouvelle-Guinée et l'installation d'une autorité des Nations Unies dans le territoire permettront aux deux pays de rétablir entre eux des relations plus amicales. Pour leur part, les Pays-Bas offriront toujours leur coopération en ce sens.

30. M. WINIEWICZ (Pologne) [traduit de l'anglais] : Comme le montrent la discussion générale et les délibérations de nos grandes commissions, le problème de la liquidation finale du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, avec toutes ses implications et ses conséquences, continue de retenir l'attention de l'Assemblée au cours de la présente session, et des Nations Unies en général. Il n'est que trop facile de comprendre pourquoi.

31. La domination coloniale n'est pas seulement la forme la plus inhumaine d'oppression politique qui entrave l'évolution nationale indépendante des peuples qui sont privés de leur liberté, c'est aussi une des formes les plus brutales de l'exploitation économique, qui favorise et accentue l'injuste inégalité et la disparité dans l'utilisation des ressources naturelles et de la main-d'œuvre. De même, la domination coloniale freine la libre évolution culturelle des peuples qui, bien que non indépendants, ont comme toute autre nation le droit d'apporter leur part au fonds commun de civilisation de l'humanité.

32. L'impact de forces sociales et nationales puissantes, libérées après les années tragiques de la seconde guerre mondiale, a ébranlé le fondement du système colonial. C'est alors que la décadence et la chute du colonialisme se sont accélérées. La Charte des Nations Unies, rédigée et signée après la fin des hostilités, ne pouvait pas ne pas tenir compte de cette évolution historique.

33. Si imparfaits et limités qu'ils soient, le régime de tutelle des Nations Unies et le régime des territoires non autonomes ont joué un rôle utile en exerçant une pression constante sur les puissances coloniales afin de les amener à respecter les principes fondamentaux de la Charte, le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes et le droit à l'indépendance politique des habitants des territoires dépendants.

34. Mais les dispositions des Chapitres XI et XII de la Charte seraient restées longtemps lettre morte sans les mouvements massifs de libération nationale en Asie, en Afrique et ailleurs. Les pays socialistes, bien entendu, se sentent complètement solidaires de ces mouvements de lutte pour la liberté et l'indépendance, si vastes et si puissants qu'ils n'ont pas de précédent dans l'histoire de l'humanité.

35. Ainsi, le nouvel équilibre des forces dans le monde a créé un climat favorable et des conditions propices à la lutte pour l'indépendance. En effet, ceux-là mêmes qui ne reculeraient devant rien pour empêcher tout changement doivent maintenant admettre l'existence de ces faits nouveaux.

36. Une preuve évidente en est la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique. Quatre-vingt-neuf Etats ont voté pour cette charte de la liberté. Nul n'a osé voter contre. Les puissances coloniales se sont abstenues. A la face du monde, le colonialisme a été condamné et finalement mis hors la loi en vertu de cet acte historique.

37. Reposant sur les principes de la Charte, la Déclaration anticolonialiste a un caractère obligatoire pour tous les Etats Membres. Elle proclame la nécessité de mettre inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme et stipule en son paragraphe 5 que des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires. Les auteurs de la Déclaration ont insisté sur son application inconditionnelle, je le répète, inconditionnelle et immédiate.

38. Une année à peine s'est écoulée depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration, mais parmi des vingtaines de territoires dépendants le Sierra Leone est le seul qui ait accédé à l'indépendance durant cette période. Ce fut certes un grand plaisir que d'accueillir le Sierra Leone parmi nous en tant que nouveau Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. En fait, les commissions discutent déjà des projets de résolution dont le Sierra Leone est l'un des auteurs; le Sierra Leone se montre déjà actif aux Nations Unies.

39. Le Tanganyika doit accéder à l'indépendance en décembre. Le Samoa-Occidental doit accéder à l'indépendance en janvier. Mais c'est tout. En d'autres termes, ce qui aurait dû être en 1961 la règle générale s'est limité à des cas isolés, et ce malgré le fait que plus de 70 millions d'habitants d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine subissent encore le joug colonial, malgré le fait que certains territoires comme le Ruanda-Urundi, l'Oman, l'Ouganda ou le Kenya possèdent des hommes d'Etat remarquables et des rouages administratifs bien organisés qui leur permettraient d'exercer immédiatement tous les pouvoirs, malgré le fait aussi que l'Assemblée ne pourrait que bénéficier de la contribution à ses débats des Kenyatta, des Jagan et autres dirigeants de ces territoires encore dépendants jusqu'à présent.

40. Tout en retardant l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays dont le droit à l'indépendance est explicitement garanti dans la Déclaration adoptée en décembre dernier par les Nations Unies, les puissances coloniales ont recours à la force armée et aux représailles massives pour étouffer les mouvements de libération nationale, au mépris des termes de la Déclaration, bien entendu.

41. Les événements sanglants qui se sont déroulés au cours des derniers mois en Angola ont fait pleine lumière sur la brutalité de la domination coloniale. Réagissant à leur façon à l'héroïque lutte pour sa liberté que mène le peuple angolais, qui n'a reculé devant aucun sacrifice, les colonialistes ont pris des mesures impitoyables, exterminant des dizaines de milliers d'Angolais. L'Angola continue à baigner dans le sang. Plus tard, au titre d'autres points de l'ordre du jour, nous aurons l'occasion de parler plus longuement de la situation en Angola et aussi de la situation en Algérie, où depuis sept ans la population mène héroïquement son juste et courageux combat pour sa libération.

42. Nous ne pouvons manquer de rappeler en même temps que le colonialisme non seulement viole directement les droits fondamentaux de l'homme et le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, mais encore essaie de tourner les dispositions de la Déclaration de décembre qui interdisent strictement d'imposer aucun lien arbitraire entre colonie et métropole.

43. Nous savons en effet que des liens juridiques doivent être créés qui enchaîneront au Portugal les habitants de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée portugaise, de Goa, de Timor et d'autres territoires. Mais les colonialistes se trompent s'ils pensent que leur décision arbitraire fera taire les voix qui s'élèvent à cette tribune et les résolutions adoptées par les Nations Unies pour défendre le droit des peuples de ces territoires à disposer d'eux-mêmes.

44. Nous continuerons — et nous ne serons certainement pas les seuls — à insister pour que l'indépendance soit accordée à l'Angola et aux autres colonies portugaises. Nous élèverons une protestation contre toute action illégale commise dans ces territoires. Nous persisterons à refuser de classer parmi les "Portugais" des peuples qui veulent briser le plus tôt possible les liens détestés qui les attachent au Portugal.

45. Il est prévu dans la Déclaration de décembre que tous les pouvoirs législatifs et exécutifs seront transférés immédiatement aux populations des territoires en cause. Voyons comment ce principe est mis en pratique dans la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland, par exemple. Sur 7 900 000 habitants de la Fédération, 7 600 000 sont des Africains et 292 000 des Européens. Mais, dans les organes territoriaux, la représentation est exactement à l'inverse de la proportion effective des deux populations. Quatre cinquièmes des sièges de l'Assemblée fédérale appartiennent aux Européens et les membres du Cabinet de la Fédération sont en majorité Européens. En Rhodésie du Sud, les Européens ont reçu tous les sièges à l'Assemblée législative. Les Européens détiennent 22 des 26 sièges de l'Assemblée de la Rhodésie du Nord et 18 des 23 sièges de l'Assemblée législative du Nyassaland.

46. Les constitutions que l'on prépare en ce moment pour les deux Rhodésies et le Nyassaland maintiennent la discrimination en vigueur contre la population africaine et refusent à cette population le droit de prendre part aux élections selon la règle de l'égalité de suffrage. C'est là ignorer ouvertement le principe du gouvernement représentatif et c'est se refuser à appliquer la Déclaration anticoloniale. The Observer, respectable hebdomadaire anglais, a fait remarquer avec ironie que seul un professeur de mathématiques pourrait démêler le mystérieux écheveau du système électoral de la Fédération. Est-ce là un des principes didactiques et éducatifs recommandés par le représentant du Royaume-Uni pendant la discussion générale à la présente session? Faut-il apprendre les mathématiques pour pouvoir saisir les complications des constitutions coloniales?

47. Je ne crois pas qu'il soit nécessaire de répéter ici cette vérité évidente, que les colonialistes refusent d'abandonner leur domination à cause des avantages économiques, politiques, et stratégiques qu'ils en retirent. L'exploitation des ressources naturelles et de la main-d'œuvre, les marchés ouverts aux articles industriels chers fabriqués dans la métropole, tout cela constitue certainement des sources de grands bénéfices. En fait, cela semble être le véritable motif qui se cache derrière ce que les avocats du colonialisme prétendent si souvent ici être une mission d'éducation et de civilisation accomplie par les puissances coloniales dans les territoires qu'ils administrent.

48. La signification politique qui s'attache à la possession d'une colonie va bien au-delà des limites de son territoire. Le colonialisme rend possible l'exercice d'une pression non seulement sur la population du territoire intéressé, mais aussi sur les gouvernements de ses voisins indépendants. La "présence française" en Algérie accroît les tensions dans toute la région du Maghreb et ralentit la stabilisation et le renforcement de la souveraineté complète des pays de cette région. Est-il besoin de rappeler l'affaire de Bizerte?

49. Le but des mesures répressives en Angola n'est pas seulement de défendre la domination coloniale dans ce pays, mais aussi d'empêcher l'émancipation politique des nations dépendantes dans d'autres parties non libérées du continent africain. L'indépendance de l'Angola serait un coup porté au triste régime d'esclavage qui est appliqué au Sud-Ouest africain. C'est pourquoi le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud s'opposent ensemble à l'indépendance de l'Angola et c'est pourquoi ces deux pays s'opposent ensemble à l'autodétermination au Sud-Ouest africain. De même — j'aimerais donner un exemple à ce propos —, si ce n'avait été de l'existence des colonies, la position des puissances occidentales à la Commission économique pour l'Afrique aurait été différente, comme l'auraient été les travaux de la Commission si elle avait eu pour seul but de protéger les intérêts de l'Afrique. C'est pourquoi il s'agit ici d'un problème qui touche à l'activité et à l'efficacité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies tout entière.

50. Il y a encore autre chose. Dans la discussion générale, les représentants du Ghana et de la Guinée ont souligné fortement que le problème de la liquidation du colonialisme était étroitement lié à celui du désarmement général et complet. Ils ont fait ressortir que le colonialisme constituait l'un des motifs de la poursuite de la course aux armements et que le désarmement et la décolonisation impliquaient l'élimination de l'esprit de conquête et d'exploitation.

51. Il serait difficile de le contester. Nous savons tous très bien quels sont les liens qui existent entre le colonialisme et les alliances militaires occidentales. C'est précisément l'OTAN qui, grâce à la solidarité politique de tous ses membres et par ses fournitures d'armes, aide les puissances coloniales à poursuivre des actions armées qui permettent de subjuguier toujours plus complètement les populations qui se trouvent encore sous une domination coloniale. Sans cette assistance, serait-il possible de faire traîner des guerres comme celle d'Algérie pendant des années et des années? Serait-il possible d'utiliser les derniers modèles d'armes allemandes, sans parler de celles qu'ont fournies d'autres alliés de l'OTAN, pour décimer en Angola les guérilleros qui ne disposent que d'armes primitives?

52. Je ne pense pas qu'on puisse refuser, même si on compte parmi les ennemis les plus résolus de la responsabilité collective, d'admettre que les événements d'Angola, d'Algérie et d'ailleurs engagent la responsabilité de l'OTAN dans son ensemble.

53. Si les dirigeants de Washington, de Londres et d'autres capitales de pays de l'OTAN veulent nous amener à croire — c'est bien ce qu'ils essaient de faire — qu'ils sont capables de freiner l'expansion et l'esprit agressif du militarisme revanchard allemand, qui constitue pour mon pays un grand sujet de préoccupation, comment peuvent-ils expliquer qu'ils sont sans pouvoir dans le cas du Portugal? La vraie explication ne peut être que la suivante: ils refusent de désapprouver les mesures répressives appliquées en Angola. Est-ce bien la conclusion que nous devons tirer?

54. Le fait que des bases militaires sont situées sur un territoire non autonome est l'un des obstacles les plus importants qui empêchent ce territoire de parvenir à l'indépendance. Les pays d'Asie et d'Afrique usent, aux Nations Unies, de leur pouvoir de persuasion pour faire progresser le désarmement; ils luttent pour empêcher que leurs pays ne soient entraînés dans la course aux armements; ils réclament la création d'une zone dénucléarisée couvrant tout le continent africain. Mais tout cela ne peut être réalisé que par l'élimination définitive du colonialisme et l'application complète de la Déclaration anticoloniale.

55. L'expérience nous apprend que, partout où les puissances coloniales constatent qu'en raison de la force grandissante des mouvements de libération nationaux elles ne peuvent plus maintenir leur domination par les méthodes coloniales traditionnelles, elles recherchent d'autres formes de domination en vue de maintenir leurs positions.

56. Nous dénonçons le "colonialisme classique" sous tous ses aspects et nous sommes tout aussi fermement opposés aux tentatives faites pour perpétuer ou rétablir la domination coloniale sous la forme d'un néo-colonialisme. Le droit de tous les peuples à l'indépendance doit être respecté entièrement même après qu'ils sont parvenus à l'indépendance. L'indépendance ne doit pas être truquée ou restreinte. L'accession à l'indépendance ne doit pas être dénaturée par des obligations liant le nouveau pays indépendant à l'ancienne métropole en matière d'affaires intérieures ou d'affaires étrangères, de politique économique ou de politique de la défense nationale.

57. Il n'en demeure pas moins que des pays très développés, faisant usage de leur supériorité matérielle, cherchent à poursuivre l'exploitation de jeunes pays anciennement colonisés et à empêcher ou déformer leur développement harmonieux par toutes sortes de mesures d'ordre politique, économique ou militaire. Cela ne peut manquer de conduire à de nouvelles crises et de nouveaux conflits qu'il est nécessaire de prévenir.

58. Si l'intention véritable est de mettre fin à l'exploitation néo-coloniale et d'aider les nouveaux pays à surmonter les premières difficultés qui gênent la formation de leur existence indépendante, la délégation polonaise estime qu'avant toute autre chose trois conditions doivent être remplies.

59. Premièrement, les pays intéressés doivent être libérés de toutes les charges et de toutes les obligations imposées autrefois par le colonialisme, puisque ces charges ne peuvent que retarder ou détourner le cours normal de leur évolution.

60. Deuxièmement, la liberté de mouvement de ces pays ne doit pas être restreinte par des accords conclus entre les métropoles et leurs anciennes dépendances dans des conditions d'inégalité évidente.

61. Troisièmement, les nouveaux pays indépendants doivent recevoir une assistance économique et technique, unilatérale ou multilatérale, qui puisse accélérer le processus d'accession à la souveraineté totale et à la pleine indépendance économique.

62. C'est seulement si ces conditions sont remplies que nous pourrions apporter une aide substantielle aux pays libérés de la domination coloniale. Comme l'a écrit l'économiste britannique A. H. Hanson, ces pays,

"conscients de leur statut de nations et désireux de participer aux affaires internationales aussi vite que possible, ne sont pas disposés à accepter l'actuelle division du travail parce qu'elle comporte l'acceptation de l'actuelle division des pouvoirs"^{2/}.

63. L'élimination du colonialisme implique non seulement un changement dans la division des pouvoirs. Elle implique aussi un changement dans la structure de la division internationale du travail. Les nouveaux pays indépendants ne doivent pas seulement se libérer de la domination politique et militaire des puissances coloniales; ils doivent aussi cesser de constituer une simple annexe de l'économie métropolitaine. Ils doivent se libérer de ce que Gunnar Myrdal a appelé "le bilatéralisme imposé", qui, incidemment, pourrait bien se transformer en de nouveaux liens imposés, dans le sens des conceptions du Marché commun européen. C'est précisément ce marché commun européen qui pousse certains anciens pays colonisés à accepter une forme de coopération économique imposée, correspondant moins bien à leurs besoins qu'à ceux des grandes puissances européennes. Cela aussi peut constituer une forme de néo-colonialisme et il ne faut pas l'oublier non plus lorsqu'on examine la question de l'assistance à l'Afrique.

64. En bien des cas, les anciens maîtres cherchent à appliquer la maxime classique du colonialisme "diviser pour régner", dans leur politique néo-colonialiste à l'égard des nouveaux pays indépendants. C'est ainsi que nous assistons à des tentatives de démembrement de pays nouvellement libérés en vue d'établir un régime néo-colonial dans une certaine province ou une partie de leur territoire.

65. L'exemple le plus frappant et le plus tragique à la fois est naturellement celui que nous offre le Congo, où nous assistons à des efforts qui ne sont que trop manifestes pour organiser la sécession du Katanga, la province la plus riche du pays, sous la bannière de l'Union minière. Un autre exemple frappant de violation de l'intégrité territoriale semble être l'attitude des Pays-Bas en ce qui concerne l'Irian occidental, où l'on cherche à créer une forme nouvelle de relation de dépendance.

66. Nous avons écouté avec respect le distingué Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, mais nous regrettons de dire qu'il n'a pas réussi à nous convaincre. Nous savons tous trop bien que l'Irian occidental est une partie intégrante de l'Indonésie, comme le Gouvernement néerlandais le reconnaissait dans un rapport présenté aux Nations Unies en 1949. Dans ce rapport, la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale était expressément citée comme faisant partie de la chaîne d'îles qui forme l'Indonésie. Mais ce territoire est resté sous administration néerlandaise. La proposition des Pays-Bas, faite dans le projet de résolution [A/L.354] tendant à remettre aux Nations Unies les pouvoirs sur ce territoire, est contraire aux dispositions de la Déclaration anticoloniale qui interdit manifestement toute tentative visant à détruire l'unité nationale d'un pays. La proposition des Pays-Bas est évidemment contraire également aux dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies.

^{2/} A. H. Hanson, Public Enterprise and Economic Development (Londres, Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1959), p. 9.

67. Cette divergence avec les textes de base des Nations Unies ne peut pas être camouflée par des manœuvres tactiques ou par des sollicitations des textes comme celles dont il est fait usage dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas. Nous devons rejeter ce projet. La seule décision juste que les Nations Unies puissent prendre en ce qui concerne l'Irian occidental est de déclarer qu'il fera retour à la mère-patrie et sera incorporé au reste de l'Indonésie. C'est aussi, pensons-nous, la seule solution acceptable pour les enclaves de Sidi-Ifni, de Ceuta, de Melilla et d'autres qui se trouvent encore sous administration coloniale alors qu'elles sont parties intégrantes du Maroc.

68. Nous avons écouté hier avec intérêt les observations du représentant de Ceylan [1048ème séance] qui a présenté des arguments extrêmement intéressants et méritant réflexion sur le problème de la liberté d'association et sur la question des colonies dont divers Etats Membres revendiquent la souveraineté.

69. L'étude de la situation dans les territoires non encore libérés du joug colonial et l'examen des événements survenus depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration anticoloniale de décembre dernier conduisent ma délégation aux conclusions suivantes:

70. Premièrement, tous les droits et libertés démocratiques doivent être immédiatement assurés aux peuples des territoires non autonomes pour leur permettre d'assumer sans délai tous les pouvoirs législatifs et exécutifs ainsi que l'administration de ces territoires. Deuxièmement, toutes les bases militaires et tous autres moyens permettant d'exercer une pression militaire doivent être retirés de ces territoires, et tous accords qui pourraient empêcher les peuples intéressés d'exercer leur souveraineté lors de leur accession à l'indépendance doivent être déclarés nuls et non avenus. Troisièmement, tous les décrets et règlements qui lient un territoire à la puissance administrante en vertu de diverses formes d'accords imposés au peuple colonisé doivent être rapportés. Quatrièmement, les puissances qui administrent des territoires coloniaux doivent être priées de se conformer aux dispositions de la Déclaration de décembre [résolution 1514 (XV)] et de l'appliquer aussi rapidement que possible.

71. Ces conclusions, qui sont conçues pour servir de base à des mesures particulières pour l'application de la Déclaration de décembre, sont reprises dans le projet de résolution présenté par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355].

72. Dans ce projet, il est proposé que l'application des dispositions de la Déclaration et la liquidation définitive du colonialisme doivent être achevées à la fin de 1962 au plus tard. Il y est également proposé qu'une commission spéciale soit créée pour mener une enquête d'ensemble sur la mise en œuvre des décisions des Nations Unies dans ce domaine.

73. Il faut admettre que le temps et l'existence d'un mécanisme approprié ont une grande importance pour ce qui est de la solution du problème. Chaque nouvelle année de retard apporté à la liquidation définitive du colonialisme peut être la cause de nouveaux conflits, de nouvelles tensions et de nouvelles menaces à la paix. D'autre part, l'élimination définitive du colonialisme apportera une amélioration sensible du climat international et une consolidation positive de la paix. C'est là ce qui importe.

74. Au cours de la discussion générale on s'est efforcé, du haut de cette tribune, de nous faire croire que toute solution des problèmes coloniaux exige du temps, que ces problèmes ne peuvent être résolus qu'avec de la patience, de la bonne volonté et de la fermeté. Bonne volonté, fermeté, oui; patience, non! On ne peut pas dire aux peuples qui souffrent sous l'oppression coloniale, qui sont plongés dans la misère et la dégradation, d'attendre patiemment pendant des années qu'on leur fasse cadeau de leur indépendance. On ne peut leur demander cela en une époque où les forces de production et la technologie connaissent un développement sans précédent, en une période de l'histoire caractérisée par un effort gigantesque pour mettre pleinement en œuvre les principes de justice sociale et de libération nationale et sociale, en une ère, ajouterai-je, où le tiers de la population du monde vit sous le régime du socialisme.

75. Il est vrai que les pays dont l'indépendance est encore très jeune se heurtent à des obstacles divers en faisant progresser leur cause, mais il est également vrai que ces obstacles sont dus à une longue période d'administration coloniale. Si le colonialisme devait être maintenu sous une forme quelconque, il ne ferait que multiplier ces obstacles.

76. La vie elle-même a démenti la théorie colonialiste, qui persiste encore en certains lieux, suivant laquelle on peut diviser les peuples en peuples civilisés et peuples non civilisés, entre peuples suffisamment mûrs pour avoir une existence indépendante et peuples trop jeunes encore. Or, notre génération a pu constater que les membres de la nation qui a donné le jour à Goethe et à Beethoven ont commis les actes de barbarie les plus monstrueux dont l'histoire de l'humanité ait jamais donné l'exemple. Les gouvernements et les administrations coloniales des puissances dont la tradition culturelle est fort ancienne et qui en affirment leur fierté portent la responsabilité de l'oppression cruelle imposée à d'innocents habitants autochtones. La conclusion de tout cela est que la ligne de démarcation entre les peuples "civilisés" et les peuples "non civilisés" passe sans doute ailleurs qu'on ne croyait.

77. Quant aux pays anciennement colonisés, leur prestige et leur influence sur la vie internationale se sont très rapidement accrus. On peut voir quelle utile contribution ils apportent aux conférences internationales, à la conclusion d'accords, aux réunions et discussions portant sur les problèmes les plus urgents de notre temps. On a pu le voir des vingtaines de fois, de Bandoung à Belgrade, en passant par de nombreuses autres réunions qui ont marqué dans l'histoire contemporaine.

78. Ces pays apportent une grande et précieuse contribution aux travaux de l'Organisation. L'Organisation des Nations Unies serait inconcevable, l'Assemblée le serait aussi, sans l'Inde, l'Indonésie, la Birmanie, le Maroc, le Mali, le Ghana, la Guinée. J'espère que les représentants d'autres pays que je n'ai pas nommés me le pardonneront.

79. Nous attendons maintenant les représentants d'autres nations qui, si les principes de la Charte et de la Déclaration anticoloniale doivent être appliqués immédiatement, devraient recevoir rapidement leur indépendance, jouir de la plénitude de leurs droits et pouvoir ainsi contribuer à la mise en œuvre du principe de la coexistence pacifique des nations, sans conquête et sans oppression.

80. Pays socialiste, la Pologne ne peut ressentir qu'une sympathie et manifester une entière solidarité à l'égard des aspirations et de la lutte des peuples opprimés pour leur indépendance. Nous leur donnons notre plein appui et notre complète assistance. La Pologne qui, pendant les heures sombres de la seconde guerre mondiale, a traversé toutes les souffrances, subi au milieu des larmes et du sang tous les sacrifices imposés par l'application du principe hitlérien de la race maîtresse et du "Lebensraum", la Pologne, dis-je, est profondément attachée à la cause de la paix. La liquidation du colonialisme servira à renforcer la paix. Les puissances que l'on appelle aujourd'hui les puissances coloniales en bénéficieront aussi, le moment venu. La lutte contre le colonialisme est menée aussi à leur profit. Il ne s'agit donc pas ici de guerre froide, mais d'intérêt commun.

81. Dans son préambule, la Déclaration envisage la liquidation du colonialisme de la manière suivante:

"Consciente de la nécessité de créer des conditions de stabilité et de bien-être et des relations pacifiques et amicales fondées sur le respect des principes de l'égalité de droits et de la libre détermination de tous les peuples..."

"Convaincue que le maintien du colonialisme empêche le développement de la coopération économique internationale... et va à l'encontre de l'idéal de paix universelle des Nations Unies..."

Tels sont les termes de la Déclaration. C'est pourquoi nous posons le problème de la liquidation du colonialisme d'une voix ferme et avec une conviction sincère.

82. M. SHUKAIRY (Arabie Saoudite) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je regarde en arrière pendant un moment. Ce que je contemple, rien ne semblait le désigner particulièrement à l'attention, ce n'était que la quinzième session ordinaire de l'Assemblée générale. Pourtant, cette quinzième session est entrée dans l'histoire comme le jalon le plus important qui ait marqué la vie des Nations Unies. Point n'est besoin de demander comment et pourquoi. La question, c'était le colonialisme; la résolution, ce fut la liberté.

83. Le colonialisme est cependant tout autre chose qu'un simple point de l'ordre du jour — et combien nous en avons déjà examiné et discuté! Le colonialisme est le problème par excellence et il cache le premier de tous les maux. C'est l'asservissement d'un peuple par un peuple; c'est l'exploitation d'une nation par une autre nation; c'est l'humiliation d'une race par une race; en un mot, c'est la domination de l'homme sur l'homme.

84. Le débat n'a pas été un simple débat ordinaire. Nous y avons assisté à un long défilé de souffrances humaines, à une tragique exposition d'oppressions, un lamentable déploiement d'exploitation. Des millions d'êtres humains ont traversé l'an dernier la scène de l'Assemblée, capturés, mutilés, trébuchant sous le poids des chaînes de la servitude. Tant de pays d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine nous ont été représentés, conquis, partagés, lotis. Des camps de concentration et des files ininterrompues de réfugiés ont passé devant nos yeux, paillards, les uns après les autres. Ce fut un véritable film, un vrai drame faisant ressortir le bilan de l'impérialisme et relatant la tragique histoire du colonialisme. Tous les personnages et les héros du colonialisme, tous les architectes et les agents de l'impérialisme figuraient dans la pièce: le soldat avec ses armes, l'explorateur avec ses cartes et sa boussole, l'aventurier avec ses rêves, l'industriel avec ses capitaux, le gouverneur avec sa maxime "diviser pour régner", le geôlier avec son fouet et ses menottes, le missionnaire à la voix douce-reuse prêchant une mission d'amour, de paix et de fraternité entre les hommes.

85. En vérité, le drame était fascinant, passionnant, sensationnel, mais aussi véritable, représentant des faits d'actualité. Trois continents étaient en scène: l'Asie, l'Afrique, l'Amérique latine. Tout y était: les peuples avec leur terre, leur liberté et leurs richesses, leurs marchés et leurs mines, leur labeur et leur fatigue, je dirai même leur sueur et leurs larmes, n'ayant rien à perdre sauf leurs fers et leurs chaînes.

86. C'était une tragédie à faire dresser les cheveux sur la tête, mais dont le dénouement nous a finalement apporté réconfort et soulagement. L'Assemblée générale a adopté sa résolution historique contre ce mal historique. La décolonisation a été la réponse donnée à la colonisation. La résolution [1514 (XV)] a été adoptée par 89 voix contre zéro, avec 9 abstentions. Parmi les abstentions, je citerai celles des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni et de la France, les "trois mousquetaires" du monde libre.

87. Autant nous nous sommes réjouis de l'adoption de cette résolution par l'Assemblée, autant nous avons déploré ces abstentions. Le règlement intérieur autorise l'abstention. C'est une façon de voter. Mais comment peut-on s'abstenir de soutenir la liberté de l'homme, comment peut-on s'abstenir d'appuyer la dignité de l'homme, comment peut-on, en vérité, se dérober à la Charte des Nations Unies et à ses principes?

88. Cette résolution ne comportait rien de honteux ou de déshonorant qui justifiait l'abstention. Ce n'était qu'une simple paraphrase de la Charte. Elle proclamait "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Quel est l'homme qui, possédant une conscience, je souligne le mot "conscience", et du bon sens, je souligne le terme "bon sens", pouvait s'abstenir d'appuyer la cause de la liquidation du colonialisme, le plus grand mal dont l'humanité ait jamais souffert? La résolution déclarait d'autre part qu'il devait être mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants. Avec le moindre respect pour l'humanité, pouvait-on se dérober à cette exhortation à se conduire comme un être humain, sinon avec humanité?

89. Il se trouve que les abstentionnistes ne venaient ni d'Afrique, ni d'Asie, ni, en général, d'Amérique latine. Ils venaient de ce qu'on appelle "le monde libre", à savoir un reste d'empires, que l'on qualifie souvent de monde libre et dont on vante si souvent la liberté en des placards publicitaires voisinant avec ceux du Coca-Cola et des bas de nylon.

90. Quoi qu'il en soit, la résolution a été adoptée et est devenue la résolution des Nations Unies, la résolution de l'Organisation qui est le dernier refuge du genre humain et qui représente la conscience de l'humanité. A l'origine, la question avait été proposée par l'Union soviétique^{3/}, mais une fois inscrite à l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée générale elle est devenue la propriété des Nations Unies. Elle n'appartient plus à l'Union soviétique; elle est la propriété et l'un des biens les plus précieux des Nations Unies. Il est également vrai que la résolution reprenait en grande partie les termes d'un projet de l'Union soviétique^{4/}, mais une fois adoptée par l'Assemblée générale elle n'était plus la propriété de l'Union soviétique. Elle appartient aux Nations Unies et c'est pour elles un bien sacré.

91. Nous étions donc en droit d'attendre que la résolution ne reste pas une voix perdue dans le désert du colonialisme. Nous pensions que le désert se transformerait en un paradis de liberté. Nous espérions que cette magnifique résolution toucherait enfin le cœur des puissances administrantes et guérirait le monde de cette plaie qui a flétri l'histoire de l'humanité. Je dis bien cette "magnifique résolution", à dessein. Sur les 1 640 résolutions qui ont été adoptées jusqu'à ce jour par l'Assemblée, la résolution sur le colonialisme occupe la première place, car elle est sans parallèle et sans précédent dans l'histoire de l'Organisation. Peut-on trouver un bien plus précieux que la liberté? Aucun problème ne peut primer celui de la dignité de l'homme. En somme, quel est l'état d'un homme dominé dans son propre pays, quelle est la valeur de la vie pour une nation humiliée sur son propre sol, quelle vie peut-on mener en dehors de sa patrie? Sans liberté, la vie est sans valeur; sans dignité, la vie est sans valeur; sans foyer, sans patrie, la vie n'est plus une vie. C'est l'abomination de la désolation, l'abîme du désespoir, le crime des crimes.

92. Ce fut donc de la part de l'Union soviétique une initiative dont nous devons véritablement lui savoir gré que de demander, l'an dernier, l'inscription de cette question à notre ordre du jour. Cette année, l'Union soviétique a demandé que l'Assemblée se saisisse à nouveau de la question [voir A/4859]. Mais ce qui rend cette initiative plus éclatante — je le répète, ce qui la rend plus éclatante — de la part de l'Union soviétique, c'est qu'elle a présenté cette demande aux Nations Unies par télégramme, et ce n'est pas souvent que l'on a vu, dans les annales des Nations Unies, une demande d'inscription ainsi présentée par un télégramme de l'Union soviétique. Bien entendu, j'entends d'ici les commérages et les murmures: on dira naturellement qu'il s'agit là d'une mesure de propagande de la part de l'Union soviétique, d'une demande vexatoire faite dans l'intention de démasquer la communauté occidentale. Je ne veux pas entamer une polémique ni réfuter pareille affirmation. Vraie ou fausse, cela n'a pas d'importance. Ce qui compte réellement, c'est le fond de la question. Le fait demeure que c'est l'Union soviétique qui, à la dernière session, a ouvert le dossier des peuples dépendants et des pays asservis. L'initiative n'eût pas été moins heureuse si elle avait émané des pays occidentaux, s'ils avaient eux-mêmes porté la question devant les Nations Unies. Après tout, les puissances occidentales ne représentent-elles pas "le monde libre", du moins de nom, sinon de renom?

93. Mais, en laissant de côté le bon renom, ou plutôt le mauvais renom, si vous le voulez bien, du colonialisme ou de l'impérialisme, c'est l'impérialisme occidental qui, une fois encore, a obligé les Nations Unies à examiner le problème. Certes, la question a été inscrite à la demande de l'Union soviétique, mais ce sont les puissances occidentales qui lui ont donné son urgence. On pourra bien dire que l'Union soviétique cherche une nouvelle fois à acculer les puissances occidentales. Mais — et je pose la question en toute humilité et avec tout le respect dû aux puissances occidentales représentées à l'Assemblée — pourquoi les puissances occidentales choisissent-elles toujours de se laisser ainsi acculer? Si elles ne veulent pas avoir le dos au mur, pourquoi choisissent-elles toujours de s'appuyer au mur de l'impérialisme? Pourquoi l'Occident ne sort-il pas de cette impasse pour avancer dans l'espace découvert de la liberté et de l'indépendance? Pourquoi l'Union soviétique doit-elle toujours être le défenseur de la liberté des peuples dépendants et pourquoi les puissances occidentales s'obstinent-elles à être leurs geôliers, leurs exploiters cupides et leurs oppresseurs entêtés? Enfin, pourquoi les puissances occidentales n'envoient-elles pas des télégrammes aux Nations Unies pour annoncer l'émancipation des peuples "libres", avant que l'Union soviétique ne demande par télégramme leur libération?

94. Je ne lance pas ces accusations au hasard et sans raison. Les puissances occidentales n'ont pas pris garde au mouvement de décolonisation, elles n'ont pas tenu compte de la résolution adoptée par les Nations Unies, le plus noble appel jamais lancé par l'Organisation. La résolution de l'an dernier n'était pas une condamnation. Elle ne calomniait ni n'offensait personne. Elle visait simplement la liberté politique, l'émancipation économique et la libération sociale. Elle signifiait que l'homme ne pouvait être opprimé à cause de sa peau foncée ni méprisé à cause de ses cheveux crépus.

96. Si nous jetons un regard d'ensemble sur notre planète, nous constatons avec stupeur qu'il n'y a pas moins de 88 territoires, dans notre monde, qui sont encore sous domination étrangère. Nous avons parcouru un long chemin sur la route de la liberté. Les Nations Unies sont maintenant une Organisation de plus de 100 nations. Mais ce n'est pas représenter l'universalité que de refuser à 88 territoires d'Asie et d'Afrique le droit de jouir de la souveraineté dont nous jouissons et d'être indépendants comme nous le sommes.

97. Si nous parlons chiffres, si nous ne devons être impressionnés que par les chiffres, nous dirons que ces territoires ne comptent pas moins de 75 millions de personnes foulées aux pieds, avilies et découragées. Leurs terres sont riches d'or et de diamant, de pétrole et de caoutchouc, d'étain et de zinc, d'uranium et d'argent, mais ces peuples sont les plus pauvres du monde. Ils ont en abondance de la laine, du coton et de la soie, mais ils vont nus jusqu'à la cheville. On tire des médicaments de leurs herbes, de leurs fleurs et de leurs arbustes, mais ils sont malades et victimes d'infections et d'épidémies. L'érudition, la culture et la civilisation jalonnent leur histoire, mais ils sont ignorants et analphabètes.

98. En Afrique seulement, il reste 27 territoires comprenant 50 millions d'habitants qui gémissent sous le joug de la civilisation occidentale, synonyme de l'impérialisme occidental. Le Royaume-Uni, à lui seul, asservit encore 35 millions d'hommes sous son joug, 35 millions d'hommes qui sont le dernier vestige de l'empire de Kipling. C'est la domination de l'homme blanc sur la race noire. Si la couleur est une honte, alors la couleur honteuse ne doit pas être celle de l'Africain. La couleur honteuse, c'est celle du cœur noir de l'Europe et de la noire conscience de l'Occident. En ce sens, la couleur n'est pas seulement une honte, mais le fléau des fléaux.

99. Néanmoins, n'examinons pas le colonialisme en général, mais voyons-le dans son actualité, non pas dans le passé, mais dans le présent. Le passé s'est envolé avec toutes ses misères et toutes ses détresses, mais le présent est devant nous, nous pouvons le voir, en prendre conscience et le sentir.

100. L'impérialisme est toujours à l'œuvre au Congo. Les diamants et l'uranium en sont la cible. Ce que l'on a qualifié de scandale des richesses congolaises est devenu un scandale international, et sa récente victime — victime grande et aimée — a été Dag Hammarskjöld. La Belgique, la France et le Royaume-Uni — tirant de différents angles sur différentes cibles — ont précipité le Congo dans la guerre civile, dans le chaos et dans un bain de sang. La raison en est l'impérialisme, et la sécession du Katanga n'est rien d'autre que de l'impérialisme, pur et sans déguisement. Ce qui est avilissant, c'est bien ce cessez-le-feu avec le Katanga. En politique internationale, le cessez-le-feu est une pratique très louable en elle-même. Mais lorsqu'il s'agit d'agresseurs et d'envahisseurs, il ne peut pas y avoir de cessez-le-feu; lorsque l'intégrité territoriale est en jeu, il ne peut pas y avoir de cessez-le-feu.

101. En fait, les forces de l'impérialisme ont privé de leur substance toutes les résolutions des Nations Unies qui insistaient sur l'unicité du Congo, l'unité de son peuple et l'intégrité de son territoire. De même qu'Israël fit son apparition sous le parapluie d'un cessez-le-feu, de même le Katanga naît actuellement à la faveur d'un arrangement de cessez-le-feu. Tout comme l'impérialisme occidental a profondément enfoncé Israël comme un coin au cœur du Moyen-Orient, le Katanga est maintenant enfoncé dans le cœur de l'Afrique: ce sont toujours les mêmes tactiques et la même stratégie.

102. En Angola, le tableau est des plus sombres. Les souffrances humaines y sont incroyables. L'impérialisme procède à une extermination en masse. Par définition, c'est un génocide. Le peuple de l'Angola lutte afin de détruire un vieux mythe de l'empire portugais. Le Portugal se dit innocent de toute discrimination raciale, mais il est coupable d'un crime encore plus odieux: l'extinction d'une race par assimilation. Le Portugal continue à s'agripper à cette hérésie périmée d'un Angola qui serait un autre Portugal au sein de l'Afrique. Ni l'histoire, ni la géographie n'ont encore enseigné au Portugal sa situation sur la carte du monde. L'océan Atlantique ne semble pas assez vaste pour séparer l'Angola du Portugal. En fait, l'attitude du Portugal n'est elle-même qu'un océan d'arguments fallacieux, caractéristiques de l'impérialisme et du raisonnement des impérialistes.

103. En Algérie, la France rumine la négociation et vomit le principe de l'autodétermination. La guerre est entrée dans sa huitième année et le président de Gaulle a perdu dans le désert du Sahara la piste glorieuse de la liberté. Le Gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne, qui est toujours résolu à lutter, reste prêt à négocier, mais le peuple algérien n'est pas disposé à se rendre. Par conséquent, c'est pour la France un suicide que de continuer cette guerre coloniale; il est particulièrement atroce de ne pas mettre fin aux atrocités de la guerre. La semaine dernière, le jour de la Toussaint, ce jour sacré en France, les Français ont abattu non moins d'une centaine d'Algériens et en ont blessé des centaines, victimes sans défense, sans armes et innocentes, comprenant des hommes et des femmes, sans discrimination. Qu'aurait donc fait la France si ce jour avait été non pas le jour de tous les saints, mais celui de tous les démons? Sur ce calendrier de cette guerre, chaque jour est voué aux démons pour la France et voué aux saints pour l'Algérie. La France se bat pour maintenir sa domination. L'Algérie se bat pour réaliser sa libération. Voilà qui suffit à flétrir l'impérialisme et tous ceux qui l'appuient.

M. Padilla Nervo (Mexique), vice-président, prend la présidence.

104. A la porte de l'Algérie, il y a Bizerte, où la France conserve une base militaire contre la volonté d'un Etat Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, d'un Etat pleinement indépendant et souverain. C'est là du pur colonialisme, du pur impérialisme, mis en comprimé dans une base militaire. La France prétend qu'elle conserve la base navale de Bizerte pour sa défense et celle du monde libre. Je dirai simplement qu'il s'agit ici d'une base qui ne repose sur aucune base. Il n'y a même pas l'apparence d'un droit légitime, pour la France, de conserver une base navale sur le territoire d'un autre Etat et contre la volonté de sa population. On ne peut maintenir en Tunisie une base militaire contre l'opposition résolue de la Tunisie. Le président Bourguiba — et je sais que le président Mongi Slim peut m'entendre — a courageusement demandé à la France d'évacuer Bizerte, de s'en aller de son territoire, de sa patrie. La Tunisie n'entend pas devenir un champ de bataille, ni dans une guerre froide ni dans une guerre véritable. La Tunisie n'est ni un satellite ni un vassal de la France. Que la France se défende, mais en France! que le président de Gaulle défende la France en Europe, je vous prie, mais non en Afrique, à Marseille, mais non à Bizerte! Si une guerre devait se déclencher — que Dieu nous en préserve —, pourquoi Bizerte devrait-elle devenir une cible, pourquoi la Tunisie devrait-elle devenir un champ de bataille, pourquoi le continent africain tout entier devrait-il devenir un cimetière?

105. En Afrique du Sud, tout un peuple est persécuté. La discrimination raciale est la politique déclarée du Gouvernement de l'Union sud-africaine. Je crains bien qu'il ne s'agisse ici ni d'un gouvernement, ni d'une union, ni de l'Afrique, et je le dis avec tout le respect qui convient. En fait, il y a un gouvernement, mais un gouvernement par lequel le blanc règne sur le noir; il y a une union, mais une union de discrimination et de persécution; enfin, il n'y a rien d'africain là-dedans, car l'Afrique ne peut pas être partie à des actes si honteux, qu'ils se réclament de la religion ou de la race. Le Portugal a défié au moins une quinzaine de résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée générale; à la seule exception d'Israël, il n'y a pas un seul autre Etat parmi les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui puisse produire un pareil bilan de défi et de résistance aux volontés de la communauté internationale, exprimées dans les résolutions adoptées par les Nations Unies. La situation en Afrique du Sud est des plus terribles. Non seulement elle est déplorable, mais elle est devenue humainement intolérable. L'Afrique du Sud a récemment été proclamée république; mais une république sans le soutien de son peuple, en fait une république conçue pour tourmenter, torturer et persécuter son propre peuple. Les nombreuses résolutions adoptées contre l'Afrique du Sud se sont révélées stériles et il est grand temps que l'Afrique du Sud soit expulsée de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est la seule sanction qui permettra d'extirper la discrimination raciale et la persécution du sol de l'Afrique. Peut-être un gouvernement pourra-t-il être formé en exil pour représenter le peuple de l'Afrique du Sud, lui rendre son indépendance et rejoindre les Nations Unies? Ce serait là une journée historique pour les Nations Unies et une occasion de joie pour toute l'humanité.

106. Passant à l'Asie, nous nous trouvons devant le problème de la périphérie de la péninsule arabe. Pour y maintenir leur emprise, les Britanniques ont érigé un "mur du pétrole" — c'est la dernière invention de leur stratégie — autour de ce berceau antique du peuple arabe. Depuis Aden sur la mer Rouge jusqu'aux territoires méridionaux du Yémen et à la côte d'Oman, un rideau d'acier a été érigé par les Britanniques, avec des bases militaires disséminées ici et là. Des guerres de libération battent leur plein dans cette région et il en est de même des mesures de répression prises par les Britanniques. Il ne se passe guère de jour où l'on n'enregistre des combats, des bombardements aériens, des destructions de villes ouvertes ou de villages sans défense. L'histoire de l'agression britannique contre le peuple de l'Oman est trop bien connue pour être relatée maintenant dans le détail. En 1957, la question a été portée devant le Conseil de sécurité sous le feu des avions à réaction britanniques, pour ainsi dire. L'an dernier, la question a été portée devant l'Assemblée générale avec accompagnement de chars et de canons britanniques. La question sera discutée en temps voulu. Mais je dirai que cette semaine même, alors que la délégation du Royaume-Uni parlait de désarmement à la Première Commission et de droits de l'homme ou d'autodétermination en d'autres commissions, des armées britanniques apportaient au peuple de l'Oman le massacre et la destruction. Les renseignements officiels les plus récents révèlent le débarquement de nouvelles troupes britanniques, de nouveaux raids militaires, de nouveaux emprisonnements de dirigeants de l'Oman et, fait tragique, l'imposition du couvre-feu au peuple de l'Oman, dans sa propre patrie, par les autorités britanniques.

107. Je me demande bien en vertu de quelle autorité les Britanniques sont en Oman; je serais reconnaissant au représentant du Royaume-Uni de bien vouloir monter à cette tribune pour dire à l'Assemblée en vertu de quelle autorité les Britanniques sont en Oman. Leur seule présence, pour ne pas parler de leur agression militaire, est une violation des dispositions de la Charte et des obligations qui incombent au Royaume-Uni en sa qualité de membre permanent du Conseil de sécurité. Quelle autorité leur donne le droit d'imposer le couvre-feu en un territoire qu'ils ne possèdent pas et à un peuple qui n'est pas le leur? S'il faut imposer le couvre-feu à quelqu'un, c'est aux forces armées britanniques qu'il faut l'imposer, il faut leur imposer un couvre-feu qui leur interdise à jamais de quitter le Royaume-Uni, un couvre-feu immédiat et éternel, afin que le peuple de l'Oman, de même que le reste du monde, puisse jouir d'une paix et d'une tranquillité éternelles. Voilà le couvre-feu que le Royaume-Uni peut imposer, un couvre-feu retenant ses forces dans les Iles britanniques et leur interdisant à jamais de les quitter. Alors le peuple de l'Oman, de même que tous les peuples d'Afrique et d'Asie, pourra demeurer en paix dans son propre pays. Voilà quel est le couvre-feu que le Royaume-Uni doit imposer, à ses propres forces, mais non au peuple de l'Oman.

108. En ce qui concerne l'Irian occidental, nous voyons, à la présente session, les Pays-Bas chercher à maintenir le colonialisme sous le masque de la décolonisation. L'an dernier, les Pays-Bas se sont abstenus dans le vote sur la résolution contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux; à la présente session, les Pays-Bas fondent leur thèse sur cette même résolution qu'ils se sont précédemment abstenus de voter et ils présentent aujourd'hui à l'Assemblée un projet de résolution [A/L.354] fondé sur cette résolution. Cela suffit, en soi, pour révéler les mobiles cachés de ce projet de résolution que nous présentent maintenant les Pays-Bas; une preuve supplémentaire nous en est fournie par la déclaration qu'a faite cet après-midi le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas lorsqu'il a parlé de la "Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise". Je me demande bien comment il se fait que la Nouvelle-Guinée soit néerlandaise alors que les Pays-Bas se disent si désireux de lui accorder l'indépendance.

109. Le fond de ce projet de résolution est plus regrettable encore que sa rédaction. Ce texte réclame une enquête sur la situation dans le territoire et il vise un plébiscite et l'institution d'une tutelle des Nations Unies. Ces mesures sont inacceptables. Elles sont contraires à la résolution de l'Assemblée générale sur laquelle on prétend les fonder. L'indépendance ne peut se substituer à l'unité d'un territoire ou à son intégrité. L'autodétermination ne peut d'aucune façon signifier l'autodestruction, ni être interprétée ainsi. L'Irian occidental est partie intégrante de l'Indonésie, ce qui rend tout plébiscite inacceptable. Pour les Pays-Bas, l'idée d'un plébiscite en Irian occidental est acceptable, puisqu'il ne s'agit pas de leur territoire. Il est facile de parler d'un plébiscite lorsque le territoire intéressé n'appartient pas à votre propre patrie. Les Pays-Bas accepteraient-ils un plébiscite portant sur une province néerlandaise, sur une province faisant partie intégrante des Pays-Bas? Cela explique pourquoi l'Indonésie n'accepte pas cette proposition: qui pourrait en effet accepter le partage de son territoire et une mesure détruisant l'unité de sa population?

110. Au lieu de fabriquer un plan aussi compliqué, complexe et inacceptable, les Pays-Bas feraient mieux de négocier avec l'Indonésie sur la restitution de l'enfant à sa mère. L'Organisation des Nations Unies ne peut être une mère pour ceux qui ont déjà une mère prête à s'occuper d'eux, à les aimer et à se sacrifier pour eux. En agissant ainsi, les Pays-Bas s'assureraient non seulement l'amitié du grand peuple indonésien, sous la direction éclairée de son distingué président, mais aussi le respect et l'amitié de tous les peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique.

111. Finalement, il est encore un autre aspect du colonialisme. Je veux parler du sionisme, sous sa forme et dans sa manifestation les plus repoussantes. Ici, je donne l'assurance à l'Assemblée que je ne me laisserai pas entraîner par les passions d'un Arabe ou par les émotions d'un réfugié. Ce ne sont pas mes propres paroles que je vais prononcer, ni mes propres idées que je vais exposer, ni mes anciennes déclarations que je vais répéter. Je vais laisser parler les dirigeants sionistes eux-mêmes et leur laisser énoncer leurs propres idées.

112. Dans son discours inaugural au Congrès sioniste, réuni à Londres en 1900, Theodor Herzl, le père du sionisme, disait: "L'Angleterre, qui promène son regard sur toutes les mers, nous comprendra et comprendra nos objectifs." Il s'adressait à l'Angleterre, qui était alors le plus grand des pays impérialistes.

113. Le 18 mai 1901, Herzl, au cours de sa première entrevue avec le sultan ottoman, offrit 1 600 000 livres sterling pour obtenir une charte ouvrant la Palestine à la colonisation juive. Le sultan, souverain d'une grande intégrité, rejeta l'offre et refusa en ces nobles termes de se laisser corrompre:

"Conseillez à M. Herzl de ne pas insister. Je ne puis aliéner un pied carré de terre, car ce n'est pas la mienne, mais celle de mon peuple. Mon peuple a combattu pour sa terre, cette Terre sainte de Palestine, et il l'a fertilisée de son sang. Que les Juifs gardent leurs millions. Si mon empire est démembré, peut-être recevront-ils la Palestine gratuitement, mais on ne mutilera que nos cadavres. Jamais je n'accepterai la vivisection."

114. Le 27 octobre 1902, le même Herzl demandait au Secrétaire britannique aux colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, d'autoriser la colonisation juive à Chypre. Non en Palestine cette fois, mais à Chypre — c'est toujours la même idée générale d'impérialisme, où que ce soit. Le ministre britannique refusa d'accéder à la requête. Le lendemain, Herzl proposait au Secrétaire britannique aux affaires étrangères, lord Lansdowne, l'établissement d'une colonie juive dans la péninsule du Sinaï. Herzl se rendit au Caire pour négocier avec lord Cromer^{5/}, mais le Gouvernement égyptien repoussa le projet purement et simplement. En fait, dès 1840, en Grande-Bretagne, lord Shaftesbury avait proposé — c'est un point très intéressant pour nos amis d'Asie et d'Afrique — un plan de colonisation juive comme moyen d'utiliser "la richesse du peuple juif" pour le développement économique de régions arriérées. Plus tard, lord Lansdowne offrit aux sionistes une certaine superficie sur les hautes terres d'Afrique orientale britannique. Je répète: Afrique orientale britannique.

115. Le 8 février 1920, faisant allusion au succès futur du sionisme, M. Churchill, le plus grand ou le dernier architecte de l'empire britannique, s'exprimait en ces termes:

"Si, dans le cours de notre vie, était créé, sur les rives du Jourdain, sous la protection de la Couronne britannique, un Etat juif qui pourrait compter peut-être trois ou quatre millions de Juifs, un événement se serait produit qui serait particulièrement en harmonie avec les intérêts les plus véritables de l'empire britannique."

C'est-à-dire: les intérêts britanniques les plus véritables dans cette région.

116. En fait, l'Encyclopædia Britannica, dans sa dernière édition, rattache la colonisation juive en Palestine à "la sécurité permanente des abords du canal de Suez". C'est un fait enregistré dans des documents historiques que le mouvement sioniste, qui n'est qu'impérialisme et colonialisme, s'est adressé à toutes les grandes puissances en tenant un seul et même langage, celui du colonialisme. A chaque grande puissance il a tenu un seul et même langage.

117. Aux Etats-Unis, le sionisme a été exposé comme un mouvement de mise en valeur économique tendant à assécher les marécages, à irriguer le désert et à amener le progrès dans toute la région. Notons que le colonialisme utilise exactement les mêmes arguments en Afrique et en Asie.

118. A la Grande-Bretagne, on a prôné le mouvement sioniste en lui attribuant l'objet de "défendre le canal de Suez et la route des Indes".

119. A la France, le plan sioniste a été expliqué en termes particulièrement passionnants et capables de susciter l'intérêt:

"Le pays que nous nous proposons d'occuper comprendra la Basse-Egypte, le sud de la Syrie et le sud du Liban. Cette position... nous rendra... maîtres du commerce de l'Inde, de l'Arabie, de l'Afrique du Sud et de l'Afrique orientale... La France ne peut que souhaiter voir la route menant aux Indes et en Chine occupée par un peuple qui la suivra jusqu'à la mort... Quel peuple est mieux fait pour cet objectif que le peuple juif, qui est voué au même objectif depuis le commencement de l'histoire? Il ne fait aucun doute que le Français et le Juif ont été créés l'un pour l'autre."

120. A l'Allemagne, les chefs sionistes ont présenté leur programme en ces termes:

"Nous voulons établir sur les rives orientales de la Méditerranée une culture moderne et un centre commercial qui, directement et indirectement, seront un appui pour le germanisme. Grâce à l'émigration juive, la Palestine pourra devenir une base politique et commerciale, un Gibraltar germanoturc aux confins de l'océan anglo-arabe."

121. A l'Union soviétique, en 1944, Ben Horin, chef israélite notoire, tenait ce langage:

"En encourageant l'émigration juive, la Russie soviétique non seulement gagnerait la gratitude éternelle de nombreux groupes juifs dans le monde entier..., mais aussi s'assurerait une excellente position au Moyen-Orient."

122. On voit ainsi comment le mouvement sioniste a expliqué ses mobiles selon qu'il s'adressait à la France, aux Etats-Unis, au Royaume-Uni, à l'Allemagne ou enfin à l'Union soviétique. Le sionisme a progressé par bonds, tout comme un autre mouvement impérialiste. Il s'est adressé à tous. Mais ce sont les Britanniques qui, le 2 novembre 1917, au milieu de la première guerre mondiale, ont cherché à s'assurer l'appui du sionisme dans leur effort de guerre et, à cette fin, ont remis à Rothschild, l'un des piliers de la colonisation, une déclaration par laquelle ils s'engageaient à faciliter la colonisation juive en Terre sainte. Aussitôt après la première guerre mondiale, contre la volonté de la population autochtone et sous la protection des baïonnettes britanniques, la colonisation juive a commencé.

123. En application de cette déclaration, 700 000 colons juifs ont été admis dans le pays. Pour financer la colonisation, le sionisme a créé deux institutions, le Keren Kayemît et le Keren Haysod, à l'instar des nombreuses institutions de financement créées en Algérie par la France et au Congo par la Belgique.

^{5/} Agent britannique et consul général de Grande-Bretagne, conseiller du khédive Tewfik.

Selon le témoignage de sir John Simpson, expert officiel du Gouvernement britannique, des milliers et des milliers de paysans autochtones ont été déposés de leurs terres. Ils ont été dépossédés de leurs terres à la suite de cette colonisation juive. Plus tard, avec l'avènement d'Israël et du fait de la terreur et des atrocités exercées, 1 200 000 Arabes, musulmans et chrétiens, ont été dépossédés de leurs terres. En fait, ils ont été dépossédés non seulement de leurs terres, mais aussi de leurs foyers. Ils sont devenus des réfugiés et ils vivent en exil depuis 14 ans.

124. Tel est le sionisme, révélé par ses auteurs et ses partisans, illustré par ses réalisations. Le sionisme a provoqué le partage de la Palestine et l'expulsion du peuple palestinien — les deux plus grands maux qu'ait jamais connus la Terre sainte au cours de sa longue histoire.

125. Mais ce qui est extraordinaire, c'est qu'un tel mouvement impérialiste ait son centre aux Etats-Unis, le premier, le plus grand pays qui se soit rebellé contre le colonialisme et l'impérialisme, les Etats-Unis au glorieux passé anticolonialiste. Le sionisme siège aux Etats-Unis et tire de ce pays ses ressources financières. Tout se passe comme si, présentement, les Etats-Unis étaient une sorte de bourse des valeurs spécialisée dans les actions et les obligations sionistes. Que les Etats-Unis le veuillent ou non, il y a là un mouvement impérialiste qui s'exerce en leur nom. La raison en est très simple. Aider le sionisme, s'en faire le complice, ce n'est rien d'autre que de l'impérialisme sous sa forme la plus haïssable et dans sa manifestation la plus odieuse. Les peuples épris de paix, les combattants de la liberté sont fondés à demander aux Etats-Unis de mettre le sionisme hors la loi et d'interdire son activité, si les Etats-Unis veulent reconquérir la situation morale que leur a valu leur tradition anticolonialiste.

126. Mais il ne suffit pas de dénoncer le colonialisme, il faut encore parvenir à la libération. La quinzième session est celle qui a proclamé une déclaration. Nous devons faire de la présente session celle qui aura pris des mesures d'application et la proposition de l'Union soviétique tendant à créer une commission chargée d'organiser l'application de la déclaration doit être accueillie favorablement, comme le point de départ de mesures positives. Nous appuyons pleinement la création d'une commission des Nations Unies chargée de donner enfin du corps à la résolution sur la décolonisation. Mais nous avons certaines réserves à faire sur le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355]. L'Union soviétique propose une représentation des "trois principaux groupes d'Etats". Telle est l'expression utilisée dans le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique. Elle propose que les trois principaux groupes d'Etats soient représentés à la commission. Nous ne sommes pas en faveur de cette manière d'envisager cette question particulière. Ceux qui ont partie liée avec le colonialisme, directement ou indirectement, doivent être exclus de la commission. Le condamné ne peut être juge, le criminel ne peut être accusateur public, sinon le procès est une parodie et l'accusation est un simulacre. Si dans cette commission ne siègent ni les impérialistes ni leurs collaborateurs, le cadre sera prêt pour des mesures franches et une véritable mise en application de la déclaration.

127. Nous souhaitons ardemment que la commission puisse nous informer qu'elle a abouti à des résultats positifs. Elle emportera tous nos vœux pour le succès de sa mission. Aucune autre commission des Nations Unies n'aura été chargée d'une mission aussi noble: celle d'émanciper l'homme en lui rendant la liberté. Nous comptons que la commission pourra nous apprendre que la décolonisation est complète et universelle, afin que nous puissions fermer ce chapitre sanglant du colonialisme et entreprendre de réhabiliter l'histoire de l'humanité.

128. A propos de l'unité, nous espérons que la commission pourra nous apprendre l'union du Katanga au Congo, de l'Iran occidental à l'Indonésie et du littoral sud de la péninsule arabe au Yémen.

129. A propos de l'indépendance, nous espérons que la commission nous apprendra l'indépendance de l'Algérie, de l'Angola, de l'Oman et de l'Afrique du Sud.

130. Enfin, à propos de l'unité et de l'indépendance à la fois, nous espérons que la commission pourra nous apprendre que la Palestine a retrouvé l'unité et l'indépendance pour ses citoyens légitimes, musulmans, chrétiens et juifs, sans discrimination. Certains me diront peut-être que cela signifiera vraiment la fin d'Israël. C'est tout à fait vrai, mais il ne peut y avoir aucun doute que cette fin ne serve la cause de la paix en Palestine et celle de la stabilité du monde entier.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

131. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de passer à la deuxième question inscrite à notre ordre du jour, je vais donner la parole à quatre orateurs qui désirent exercer leur droit de réponse.

132. M. GODBER (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je ne veux pas retarder les travaux de l'Assemblée, qui entend sans doute passer au point suivant, si important, de l'ordre du jour de cette séance. Cependant, certaines observations faites par l'orateur qui m'a précédé à cette tribune étaient si fâcheusement loin de la vérité que je ne puis les laisser sans réponse.

133. Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite parle avec une ferveur et une passion que je n'ai aucun espoir d'égaler. Il parle aussi avec un mépris des faits que je n'ai aucun désir d'imiter. Il a cru devoir faire certaines observations sur la politique et les actes du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, particulièrement en ce qui concerne le territoire du Sultanat de Mascate et d'Oman. Il est extrêmement regrettable que le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite ait voulu se livrer une fois de plus à ces allégations extraordinaires. Ma délégation les rejette totalement et nous prouverons la fausseté absolue lorsque la question sera discutée à la Commission politique spéciale. Il me suffira pour l'instant de rappeler un bref passage du discours du représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite et de le réfuter directement. Je rappellerai simplement à l'Assemblée ce qu'il a dit à un certain moment:

"Mais... cette semaine même, alors que la délégation du Royaume-Uni parlait de désarmement à la Première Commission... des armées britanniques apportaient au peuple de l'Oman le massacre et la destruction."

Et il a ajouté:

"Les renseignements officiels les plus récents révèlent le débarquement de nouvelles troupes britanniques..."

134. Il n'y a pas un seul mot de vrai dans tout cela. Il n'y a absolument aucune force britannique stationnée dans la région. Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a dit ensuite qu'il serait reconnaissant au représentant du Royaume-Uni de bien vouloir monter à cette tribune, ce que j'ai fait, de dire pourquoi les choses sont ainsi et d'expliquer pourquoi les Britanniques imposent le couvre-feu au peuple de l'Oman. Je réponds qu'il ne le font pas. Ils ne le font sous aucune forme; je le nie complètement et absolument. Cela, je pense, vaut beaucoup mieux que l'explication que le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a demandée. Tels sont les faits. Je ne m'y attarderai pas. Les faits sont les faits et n'importe qui peut les vérifier et en chercher la preuve.

135. Je dirai maintenant quelques mots sur un seul autre point. Le tout et la teneur du discours que nous venons d'entendre constituent en fait une attaque contre l'histoire de la politique coloniale de mon pays. Cette attaque, je la rejette. J'espère avoir l'occasion, au cours des jours prochains, de rappeler à l'Assemblée générale la vérité sur la colonisation britannique. J'en suis fier. La colonisation britannique a conduit plus de 600 millions d'êtres humains à l'indépendance durant ces 15 dernières années et la preuve vivante en est fournie par le spectacle de l'Assemblée elle-même.

136. Tels sont les faits. Je n'ai ni envie ni besoin d'entamer une polémique à leur sujet. Je préfère m'appuyer sur les faits; moi-même et ma délégation ne demandons qu'à être jugés d'après ces faits. Je ne veux rien dire de plus pour l'instant. J'espère y revenir, comme je l'ai dit, lorsque j'aurai l'occasion de m'expliquer complètement sur la question devant l'Assemblée.

137. M. COMAY (Israël) [traduit de l'anglais]: Puisque le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite trouve le moyen de prononcer un discours contre l'Etat d'Israël à propos de n'importe laquelle des 94 questions inscrites à l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée, ma délégation devrait prendre beaucoup trop du temps précieux de l'Assemblée si elle devait démentir toutes les fausses allégations et démasquer toutes les citations fabriquées que cet orateur vient de lui offrir. C'est pourquoi je me bornerai à dire que l'histoire du sionisme telle que le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite vient de la raconter est un tissu d'absurdités. Le sionisme est le mouvement de libération nationale du peuple juif. Il nous a permis de regagner notre indépendance sur le sol de notre ancienne patrie, après que nous eûmes combattu la Grande-Bretagne, puis les armées arabes qui envahirent notre pays et essayèrent sans succès de détruire notre Etat. Israël est un membre permanent de la communauté mondiale, un élément permanent de la configuration politique du Proche-Orient. Que cela plaise ou non au représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite n'a guère d'importance.

138. M. SCHURMANN (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je me bornerai à une seule observation, et la voici. Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a rejeté les propositions que les Pays-Bas ont faites concernant la Nouvelle-Guinée. Certes, c'est son droit, bien que ce soit regrettable. Mais il les a rejetées pour une raison fondée sur ce qu'il appelle un fait, et qui est faux. Cela, ce n'est pas son droit, et c'est encore plus regrettable. Il a prétendu qu'il rejetait nos propositions parce que nous étions des hypocrites. Et pourquoi étions-nous des hypocrites? Parce que, a-t-il dit, lorsque l'an dernier l'Assemblée avait discuté et adopté la résolution sur la décolonisation, les Pays-Bas s'étaient abstenus, alors que maintenant, tout à coup, ils l'acceptaient. Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a vraiment tiré tout ce qu'il pouvait de cet argument. Il l'a répété plusieurs fois avec de grands gestes et de grands éclats de voix. Il a dit que l'an dernier nous nous étions abstenus et que maintenant nous l'acceptons.

139. Lorsqu'on lance des accusations de ce genre, s'assurer de l'exactitude des faits est en général une précaution utile. Si le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite s'était donné la peine de consulter les comptes rendus de la quinzième session où le vote par appel nominal sur cette résolution est consigné, il aurait constaté que les Pays-Bas ne se sont pas abstenus sur cette résolution, mais ont voté en sa faveur. C'est pourquoi tous ses arguments sur notre hypocrisie et tous les effets qu'il a voulu en tirer reposaient sur ce prétendu fait et, maintenant qu'il est établi que ce fait est faux, tout s'écroule.

140. Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a cru bon de terminer en nous donnant ce qu'il considérait comme un bon conseil. Il a dit que ce que nous devrions faire, ce serait de remettre la Nouvelle-Guinée à l'Indonésie. Eh bien, je peux l'assurer que nous n'y manquerons pas, mais que nous le ferons seulement si la population papoue de la Nouvelle-Guinée en exprime le vœu. Tant qu'elle ne l'aura pas fait, nous ne suivrons pas le conseil que le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a bien voulu nous donner.

141. M. WIRJOPRANOTO (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Au nom de ma délégation, je remercie le Président de me donner la possibilité de faire usage de mon droit de réponse.

142. Lorsque la délégation indonésienne écoutait la déclaration du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, elle avait l'intention de ne pas demander la parole, puisque demain le chef de notre délégation aura amplement l'occasion de préciser notre position. Mais aujourd'hui notre silence pourrait être interprété à tort comme constituant une approbation de la position des Pays-Bas; or, nous n'approuvons pas la position des Pays-Bas.

143. Nous regrettons profondément que les Pays-Bas ne soient pas encore disposés à admettre notre position, qui est la suivante: l'Irian Barat, ou Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, est une partie de l'Indonésie — les anciennes Indes néerlandaises —, parce qu'avant la guerre il y avait en Indonésie une seule administration et que l'Indonésie était gouvernée par un seul gouverneur général.

144. Je n'ai pas l'intention de traiter de nombreuses questions dans le détail aujourd'hui; il est cependant un point que je ne puis manquer de relever, à propos de la fin du discours du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas. Si le Président veut bien me le permettre, j'en citerai ce passage:

"Ce qui importe actuellement et plus que toute autre chose, c'est l'avenir de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise."

Je dois ajouter entre parenthèses que pour nous la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise n'existe pas. Pour nous, il n'y a que la Nouvelle-Guinée indonésienne. Je continue la citation:

"Nul n'a le droit d'en décider, sauf les Papous eux-mêmes. Leur laisser la décision est la seule méthode conforme aux principes de la Charte. C'est d'ailleurs aussi la seule qui permette de régler le différend de manière pacifique et durable,"

145. Ma première observation concernant cette déclaration est que le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas a commis une erreur, en fait une erreur monumentale, en appelant les habitants de l'Irian occidental des Papous. Le nom de "Papou" n'est pas très flatteur, c'est même une insulte. Que signifie le mot "Papou"? Il désigne un peuple non civilisé.

146. Nous n'appelons jamais nos frères et nos sœurs d'Irian occidental des "Papous". Mais pendant 350 ans avant la guerre et pendant 16 ans depuis la guerre, les Hollandais ont appelé nos frères et nos sœurs des Papous; ils continuent à les appeler des Papous, c'est-à-dire à les traiter de peuple sans civilisation. Cela, je ne peux l'accepter. C'est une erreur monumentale.

147. Il y a autre chose. Le peuple que les Pays-Bas appellent des Papous, ce sont nos frères et nos sœurs d'Irian. Nous appartenons tous à la même nation: la nation indonésienne. Depuis de nombreuses années nous ne reconnaissons qu'une seule nation: la nation indonésienne. Il n'y a qu'un pays: l'Indonésie. Il n'y a qu'une langue: la langue indonésienne. Il n'y a qu'un drapeau: le drapeau rouge et blanc.

148. Je rappellerai au Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas un mot qui était très répandu avant la guerre et avant la proclamation de notre indépendance. Les Pays-Bas appelaient les autochtones d'Indonésie, ceux qui sont nés en Indonésie, des "inlanders". C'est un mot hollandais qui signifie "indigènes". Chacun sait — et la délégation des Pays-Bas le sait fort bien — que nous détestions le mot "inlander" parce que nous le considérions comme une insulte. C'est une insulte à notre nation qui avait une population de 70 millions d'habitants avant la guerre et qui a maintenant une population de 90 millions d'habitants que d'appeler nos compatriotes des "inlanders". Nous ne pouvons l'accepter.

149. Mais les Pays-Bas ont oublié une chose. Le 17 août 1945, ces mêmes inlanders sont devenus un peuple différent. Nous avons proclamé notre indépendance. Cela signifie qu'à cette date toute la nation, tout l'archipel s'est levé en masse contre la domination des colonialistes néerlandais.

150. Comme nous tous, originaires des autres îles, nos frères et nos sœurs d'Irian ne font qu'un avec nous. Nous formons un tout parce que nous avons eu autrefois le même sort. Nous avons souffert. Nous avons été exploités. Maintenant, nous sommes libres. Mais nos frères et nos sœurs d'Irian ne sont pas encore libres.

151. Sans préjudice de notre attitude à l'égard de la proclamation de notre indépendance, je voudrais me référer à nouveau à la déclaration du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas. Il a déclaré en fait que les Papous, comme il les appelle — et je demande à mes frères et mes sœurs d'Irian de m'excuser si j'emploie ce mot, qui est du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas —, ont le droit de décider. C'est clair; c'est même très clair.

152. Dans notre délégation, nous avons des collègues qui viennent de l'Irian. Si je ne me trompe pas, il y a dans la délégation néerlandaise des membres qui viennent de l'Irian — des frères et des sœurs. Je voudrais poser une question au Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, par l'intermédiaire du Président. Le Ministre autoriserait-il les membres de sa délégation qui viennent de l'Irian à rencontrer les membres de notre délégation qui en viennent aussi? Cette question que je pose au Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas est très importante, parce qu'elle se rapporte à la déclaration qu'il a faite. Pour notre part, nous donnons à nos collègues qui viennent de l'Irian toute liberté de rencontrer leurs frères de l'Irian, partout, en tout temps, sans conditions. Puis-je espérer que le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas adoptera la même position? J'ai posé une question catégorique. Puis-je avoir une réponse catégorique? J'ai posé une question simple. Puis-je avoir une réponse simple?

153. M. SCHURMANN (Pays-Bas) [de sa place] (traduit de l'anglais): Ma délégation demande à faire usage de son droit de réponse.

154. Le PRESIDENT: Je préférerais que les autres délégations qui désirent exercer leur droit de réponse attendent jusqu'à plus tard pour le faire, afin que l'Assemblée puisse maintenant commencer l'examen du second point de son ordre du jour.

217. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de lever la séance, je donne la parole au représentant des Pays-Bas qui désire exercer très brièvement son droit de réponse.

218. M. SCHURMANN (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je serai extrêmement bref, mais j'ai cru devoir répondre à la question catégorique qui m'a été posée cet après-midi par le représentant de l'Indonésie. A mon sens, c'est la question la plus extraordinaire qui soit, car il nous a demandé si la délégation des Pays-Bas autoriserait ses membres papous à parler à des membres de la délégation indonésienne. Je dois dire que je ne comprends même pas la question, car la réponse est, de toute évidence: "Naturellement!" Tous les membres de notre délégation ont le droit de parler ou de refuser de parler à qui leur plaît et il n'existe aucune différence entre les membres néerlandais et les membres papous de notre délégation. Telle est la seule réponse que je puisse lui donner.

219. J'ajouterai que l'Assemblée aura pu constater que j'ai parlé de Papous et je l'ai fait à dessein. Le représentant de l'Indonésie a dit que ce terme était injurieux. Il se peut qu'en Indonésie il soit injurieux d'appeler quelqu'un "papou", mais je puis vous dire que ni aux Pays-Bas ni en Nouvelle-Guinée ce terme n'est considéré comme injurieux. Au contraire, en Nouvelle-Guinée, la population est très fière de ce nom et les habitants souhaitent être appelés des Papous, et ne veulent pas d'autre nom. Très récemment encore, le Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée lui-même a adopté une résolution constatant le désir des habitants d'être appelés des Papous.

220. Les observations que nous avons entendues cet après-midi sur ce point montrent donc, une fois de plus, combien mon ami Sukardjo Wirjopranoto est mal renseigné sur ces habitants, qui, dit-il, sont ses frères et ses sœurs.

La séance est levée à 19 h 15.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (A/4859, A/4889, A/4915, A/4944, A/4954, A/4959, A/4960, A/L.354, A/L.355) [suite]

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance (A/L.357)

1. M. WACHUKU (Nigéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Comme notre délégation l'a annoncé, je m'occuperai avant tout du deuxième point de notre ordre du jour, c'est-à-dire de la partie a du point 22: "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance". Après quoi j'aurai certainement l'occasion de parler de notre projet de résolution [A/L.357].

2. Les deux points jumelés que nous examinons ont leur petite histoire, qui remonte à certains incidents de la quinzième session. L'Assemblée générale se rappelle en effet que la résolution 1514 (XV) a eu pour origine la déclaration de l'Union soviétique et son projet de résolution^{1/} qui demandait la suppression des colonies du monde entier. Les Etats africano-asiatiques ont repris la proposition soviétique et l'ont remaniée sous la forme d'un projet de résolution; la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale était donc en fait le résultat de ce remaniement africano-asiatique. Cette résolution est une déclaration de caractère général, mais elle ne précise pas par quelles méthodes on pouvait abolir le colonialisme.

3. A la même session, le représentant des Etats-Unis a, dans une lettre^{2/} au Secrétaire général, proposé pour l'Afrique un programme spécial. Plus tard, après la reprise de la session, la délégation des Etats-Unis a déposé un projet de résolution^{3/}, elle l'avait également adressé au Secrétaire général.

^{3/} Ibid., document A/4515/Add.1.

4. Ce programme, intitulé: "Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance et le développement", concernait particulièrement les Etats africains. Les représentants qui se trouvaient alors à la Première Commission ont certainement gardé le souvenir du désaccord qui m'a opposé au représentant des Etats-Unis. Quand nous avons entendu sa déclaration, nous avons eu l'impression qu'il n'avait pas fait une proposition concrète, et qu'il était assez injuste de nous demander de prendre l'initiative, car ce n'était pas de nous que venait la proposition. A la suite de cette discussion, les Etats-Unis ont fait une nouvelle proposition, que nous avons reprise, car on nous défiait de prendre l'initiative; j'ai eu l'honneur de présider le Comité de rédaction à qui l'on doit le projet de résolution qui figure dans le rapport que la Première Commission^{4/} a adressé sur ce point à l'Assemblée générale lors de sa quinzième session.

5. Le projet de résolution qui est venu devant la Première Commission traitait de deux sujets différents. Le texte était en deux parties: la partie A traitait de l'indépendance, la partie B ne traitait que du développement économique. Un passage de la partie A n'était pas pour plaire aux grandes puissances, spécialement à celles qui ont des colonies en Afrique. Je veux parler du paragraphe essentiel, le paragraphe 3 de la section A du projet de résolution, qui est ainsi conçu:

"Charge la Quatrième Commission de mettre au point, au moyen d'un dispositif approprié, des modalités précises, et de fixer notamment des dates limites, pour la mise en application de la résolution 1514 (XV), en particulier du paragraphe 5 de la déclaration qui y figure".

6. En d'autres termes, les puissances coloniales ne voulaient pas fixer de date limite. Le paragraphe mentionné, le paragraphe 5 de la déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV), est le suivant:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

7. Le projet de résolution des Etats africains n'est pas venu en discussion à ce moment-là, pour deux raisons. L'une était la question des dates limites, comme je l'ai déjà dit, et l'autre était la proposition de créer une banque africaine de développement. Les grandes puissances n'étaient pas très satisfaites de ces deux importantes propositions; c'est pourquoi

^{4/} Ibid., document A/4747.

L'Assemblée a reporté à sa seizième session l'examen du point auquel se rapportait le projet de résolution. Comme je l'ai signalé, la forme même de ce texte ne conviendrait plus maintenant, car nous mentionnions certains organes subsidiaires de l'Assemblée qui auraient rempli certaines fonctions et auraient fait rapport à l'Assemblée à la présente session. L'Assemblée n'ayant pas discuté le projet de résolution, ne l'ayant donc ni adopté ni rejeté puisqu'elle en a différé l'examen, les organes en question n'ont pas pu fonctionner. Quand cette question de l'assistance à l'Afrique est revenue à l'ordre du jour de la présente session, nous avons constaté qu'elle était divisée en trois: nous discutons ici la partie a du point 22, tandis que les parties b et c du point 22 ont été renvoyées à la Deuxième Commission.

8. Comme le représentant des Etats-Unis avait défié les Etats africains de prendre l'initiative, comme j'avais participé à l'initiative du projet de résolution, et comme je savais qu'une des pierres d'achoppement était précisément la question des dates limites, ma délégation n'a évidemment pas dormi sur ses deux oreilles. Il ne nous échappe pas que l'on ne peut résoudre aucun problème relatif aux questions coloniales de l'Afrique sans prendre en considération le Gouvernement britannique. Quiconque se figure qu'il peut faire une déclaration ici et ne pas tenir compte du Royaume-Uni perd son temps. On ne peut pas voter l'indépendance de tous les pays d'Afrique sans prendre en considération le Royaume-Uni. Connaissant ses particularités et ses réactions habituelles, nous savions que la seule chose à faire était de négocier et de discuter avec lui. C'est ce qu'a fait mon pays pendant l'intervalle. Si le Gouvernement britannique s'est constamment refusé à envisager toute idée de dates limites, la Nigéria a eu pourtant la chance de l'amener à admettre qu'il faudrait au moins fixer une date au-delà de laquelle il ne subsisterait en Afrique aucun vestige des colonies. J'ai bien dit: "en Afrique", sans spécifier tel ou tel territoire. J'insiste sérieusement là-dessus, parce que l'interprétation qu'une certaine propagande a donnée du projet nigérien a eu des conséquences très fâcheuses.

9. Au début de la présente session, avant que la Nigéria n'ait officiellement déposé son projet de résolution [A/L.357] pour distribution à tous les Membres, nous en avons donné connaissance, comme il est normal, à d'autres Etats africains en sollicitant leurs observations; mais je dois dire qu'au lieu de susciter des critiques objectives et constructives, cela a fait naître ici une sorte de sinistre propagande qui laissait entendre que la Nigéria avait retardé de 10 ans l'indépendance des Etats d'Afrique. Ce bruit m'a semblé particulièrement injuste. Mais, comme il semblait se propager, tout ce que ma délégation pouvait faire était de déposer le texte officiellement, pour que toutes les délégations puissent en prendre connaissance une fois qu'il serait traduit dans toutes les langues officielles. C'est ce que nous avons fait.

10. Je dois dire que les allégations dont je viens de parler ont trouvé leur écho dans les débats. Mardi 7 novembre, au cours de la discussion générale, M. Lapine, représentant de l'Union soviétique, a fait les remarques suivantes:

"Certains prétendent qu'il faut reculer de 10 ans, en Afrique par exemple, la date de liquidation du colonialisme. Mais cela signifierait que nous devons accepter que le peuple du Sud-Ouest africain subisse encore pendant des années la barbarie moyenâgeuse des racistes sud-africains; que les peuples du Kenya et de la Rhodésie du Nord vivent dans un régime de terreur et d'oppression. Pouvons-nous l'admettre? Certes non. Nous trahirions notre devoir à l'égard de l'humanité si nous ne nous opposions pas à la persistance du système colonial." [1048ème séance, par. 80.]

11. C'est parce que certains avaient intensifié leur propagande contre le projet de résolution, parce qu'ils en avaient faussé le sens de propos délibéré, que le représentant de l'Union soviétique a été amené à faire cette déclaration, dont on ne peut certes pas dire qu'elle s'inspire du texte du projet nigérien.

12. Qu'y a-t-il dans ce projet de résolution? Si l'on examine le préambule et si l'on en compare le texte et le texte des différents paragraphes à la série de résolutions que l'Assemblée a adoptée sur le colonialisme, on s'apercevra que l'Assemblée en a déjà, sous une forme ou une autre, accepté tous les termes, de même que le préambule. Ainsi, personne ne saurait s'opposer sérieusement au préambule, puisque son texte peut se retrouver dans les documents de l'Assemblée générale. La seule innovation d'importance se trouve au paragraphe 1 de la déclaration qui en constitue le dispositif, et que je vais lire pour que personne n'ait de doute sur sa teneur. Je lis depuis le dernier considérant:

"Fermement convaincue que tous les peuples d'Afrique ont un droit inaliénable à la pleine liberté, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national,

"Proclame solennellement:"

Le paragraphe 1 se lit comme suit:

"Que tous les territoires et peuples coloniaux, dépendants ou non autonomes d'Afrique doivent accéder à l'indépendance d'ici au 1er décembre 1970 au plus tard".

13. "D'ici au 1er décembre 1970 au plus tard", cette déclaration concerne expressément l'Afrique. On a appelé cette période de 10 ans "la décennie africaine". La Nigéria ne veut pas qu'il soit dit que "décennie africaine" n'était qu'un mot, elle ne veut pas que ces 10 ans se passent sans être effectivement la "décennie africaine". Le projet de résolution dit que "d'ici au 1er décembre 1970 au plus tard", toute l'Afrique doit être complètement libre et indépendante. On notera que nulle part le projet de résolution n'énumère des territoires, que nulle part il ne fait mention d'un seul territoire non autonome d'Afrique.

14. Nous sommes bien entendu assez réalistes pour comprendre qu'on ne peut pas arriver ici à des conclusions sur la date où tel pays doit devenir libre et indépendant, en ne tenant compte que des facteurs historiques. Bien des facteurs sont à prendre en considération. Il faut consulter les dirigeants politiques des régions intéressées. Après tout, ce sont eux qui gouvernent ces régions, et non pas nous. Il faut aussi consulter les puissances qui ont autorité sur ces régions, parce qu'elles sont intéressées à toute l'affaire. L'Assemblée a adopté beaucoup de résolutions qui concernent l'Afrique du Sud, à propos du Sud-Ouest africain. Quel en a été le résultat? L'ONU n'est pas un gouvernement et n'a pas le pouvoir d'imposer sa volonté à aucun de ses membres indépendants. L'Assemblée adopte une résolution, sans plus; les conséquences varieront selon que l'Etat Membre est capable ou non de s'acquitter des obligations que lui fait la Charte et de se plier aux décisions de l'As-semblée générale. Quand ce pays refuse de reconnaître l'autorité des Nations Unies et d'appliquer les décisions de l'Assemblée générale, on n'y peut rien, sinon revenir ici et dire que ce pays-là a refusé de se plier à la décision. L'autre jour encore, quand nous avons dit qu'il fallait censurer l'Afrique du Sud, c'était un tollé. On a dit que nous étions en train d'essayer d'enlever à l'Afrique du Sud sa liberté de parole. En vérité, nous figurons-nous qu'une simple déclaration faite ici, sans tenir compte des vœux des peuples intéressés ni de ceux des puissances qui ont autorité sur la région, permettrait au peuple d'accéder à l'indépendance? Nous ne saurions croire, en Nigéria, à une telle possibilité.

15. Qu'avons-nous fait à cet égard? Tout ce que nous demandons, c'est que l'Assemblée générale, considérant sa résolution 1514 (XV) ainsi que la proposition faite par les Etats-Unis et acceptée par les Etats africains (l'assistance à l'Afrique fait l'objet d'un point spécial de notre ordre du jour; l'Afrique est donc le premier continent à considérer; c'est d'ailleurs celui où il y a la majorité des colonies), déclare explicitement à sa seizième session, sans attendre la dix-septième ou la dix-huitième, qu'à une date donnée, et cela au plus tard, le continent tout entier sera libre et indépendant.

16. La déclaration est d'ailleurs rédigée de façon que nul obstacle ne puisse s'opposer à l'indépendance d'un territoire qui serait prêt, à tel ou tel moment, à devenir indépendant.

17. L'intention de cette déclaration est aussi que, dès l'instant où les Nations Unies l'auront adoptée et dès l'instant où le Royaume-Uni se sera engagé, les Etats africains se verront automatiquement obligés de travailler ensemble, par l'intermédiaire des nationalistes de la région intéressée, et avec les puissances coloniales en cause, pour faire en sorte que cette résolution particulière s'applique sur le continent africain.

18. Il ne faut plus que les Africains viennent ici faire une déclaration et s'aperçoivent ensuite que l'on n'a rien fait pour y donner suite. Chacun d'entre nous sera appelé à aider en quelque manière à soulager nos frères des difficultés, des épreuves et des tribulations qu'ils connaissent en Afrique. On demandera sa contribution à chacun d'entre nous. Chacun d'entre nous sera appelé à proposer un plan positif pour la libération de l'ensemble de l'Afrique. Voilà ce dont nous avons besoin.

19. Je tiens à répéter qu'en déposant ce projet de résolution, la Nigéria estime qu'il faut en Afrique une évolution méthodique et pacifique. Nous n'avons pas de fusées, nous n'avons pas de canons, nous n'avons pas les moyens techniques et scientifiques de développer nos immenses ressources. Nous avons relativement peu de spécialistes qualifiés, eu égard aux dimensions de notre continent, qui puissent s'occuper de développer nos ressources. Nous voulons empêcher la subversion à l'intérieur de notre continent. Nous voulons que les conflits idéologiques s'arrêtent aux frontières de notre continent. Toutes ces réalisations ne peuvent s'accomplir dans le désordre.

20. Je crois nécessaire que nous tirions du Congo la leçon qui s'impose. Je sais par expérience personnelle ce qui s'est passé là-bas. Ici aussi, à l'Assemblée, nous avons suivi de près les événements à mesure qu'ils se déroulaient.

21. Quand on examine la question des colonies africaines, on découvre que, dans le nord-ouest du continents, entre la Mauritanie et le Maroc, se trouve un petit territoire que l'on appelle le Sahara espagnol. Je suis sûr que les nationalistes qui s'y trouvent n'aiment pas que l'on appelle ce territoire Sahara espagnol. Puis, au large, il y a les Canaries. Un peu plus bas, entre le Sénégal et la Guinée, il y a un autre petit territoire que l'on appelle la Guinée portugaise et, dans une enclave, au Sénégal, se trouve la Gambie. Puis, au large de la Nigéria, il y a les îles de Fernando Poo et de São Tomé. En face de ces îles se trouve le Rio Muni, sous domination espagnole. Puis, à l'estuaire du Congo, on trouve Cabinda, qui est entre les mains du Portugal, et juste au-dessous du Congo, il y a l'Angola, puis le Sud-Ouest africain et, à la pointe extrême du continent, il y a l'immense territoire colonial de l'Afrique du Sud.

22. Ensuite, sur la mer Rouge, près de son débouché sur le golfe d'Aden, on trouve la Somalie française. Puis nous trouvons l'énorme bloc colonial qui comprend le Kenya, l'Ouganda, le Ruanda-Urundi, le Tanganyika, la Rhodésie du Nord et le Nyassaland, la Rhodésie du Sud, le Betchouanaland et le Mozambique. Viennent ensuite les enclaves dans la République sud-africaine — car ce pays s'appelle maintenant République sud-africaine —, enclaves qui ont nom: le Souaziland, le Bassoutoland, le Pondoland et le Barotséland. Parmi ces territoires, l'Ouganda, le Kenya, le Tanganyika, la Rhodésie du Nord et celle du Sud, le Nyassaland, le Betchouanaland, le Bassoutoland, le Souaziland, le Pondoland, le Barotséland se trouvent sous l'autorité du Royaume-Uni.

23. Un regard sur la carte d'Afrique vous permettra de constater que les régions en question la traversent de part en part. D'un côté, il y a l'Angola, le Sud-Ouest africain et le Congo, puis de l'autre, en bordure de la mer, il y a le Mozambique et tous les territoires que j'ai énumérés du Kenya jusqu'au Betchouanaland, et qui forment une sorte de vallée entre deux rangées de montagnes.

24. Quand on parle de la libération des colonies, il est tout à fait évident, quand on a la carte sous les yeux, que, si les colonies doivent être libérées, tout doit être fait en liaison avec le Gouvernement britannique, puisqu'il domine ces vastes régions. S'il doit y avoir pression, c'est sur ce gouvernement qu'il faut l'exercer. Si des négociations et des conversations doivent avoir lieu, c'est avec ce gouvernement. Pour ce qui est de l'Angola, c'est avec le Portugal qu'on doit traiter, et il en va de même pour le Mozambique. En ce qui concerne le Sud-Ouest africain, nous sommes en pourparlers avec l'Afrique du Sud depuis plus de 10 ans, mais sans résultat.

25. On a dit que notre projet de résolution condamne ces peuples à attendre encore 10 ans, ce qui n'est pas. C'est ainsi que, pendant que je parle, les représentants du Kenya sont à Londres en train de négocier leur indépendance avec les représentants du Gouvernement britannique. S'ils réussissent autour d'un tapis vert à obtenir l'indépendance pour l'année prochaine, la Nigéria en sera très heureuse et fera tout son possible pour les aider dans cette entreprise. Nous croyons que le Kenya pourrait être indépendant l'an prochain.

26. Les trois groupements sociaux du Kenya doivent parvenir à s'entendre. Il faut que les deux partis africains se réconcilient; il faut aussi prendre des mesures pour protéger les minorités et faire qu'elles ne vivent pas dans la terreur. En d'autres termes, il faut que le pouvoir passe à la majorité et qu'il y ait en même temps assez de garanties dans la constitution pour assurer la sécurité de la minorité. C'est, à notre avis, la condition de la paix en Afrique. Le reproche que nous faisons à l'Afrique du Sud est que le pouvoir est aux mains d'une insignifiante minorité qui ne veut pas respecter cette loi.

27. Nous apprenons de même que, après des négociations autour d'un tapis vert, les représentants de l'Ouganda et ceux du Royaume-Uni ont déclaré que l'Ouganda serait indépendant en octobre 1962. Nous sommes heureux de ce résultat.

28. Nous savons tous que le mois prochain, le 9 décembre 1961, le Tanganyika deviendra indépendant, et ma délégation sera heureuse et fière de voir ce nouvel Etat devenir Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

29. La Rhodésie du Nord, le Nyassaland et la Rhodésie du Sud ont subi certaines modifications constitutionnelles, ce qui a suscité certains malentendus en Rhodésie du Nord. L'accord a pu se faire sur un certain plan, après quoi, le chef du gouvernement fédéral, sir Roy Welensky, s'est rendu à Londres où ont été prises certaines décisions arbitraires qui étaient contraires à ce qu'attendait le dirigeant de la majorité du peuple nord-rhodésien, M. Kaunda, qui n'a pas hésité à protester. Il en est résulté des difficultés et des troubles dans le territoire. Mon gouvernement n'a pas hésité à faire savoir au Gouvernement britannique que nous ne pouvions tolérer cette situation, où le vote de 3 millions d'habitants serait égal à celui de 72 000 autres. C'est de la mauvaise arithmétique; il faut donc faire certains changements pour répondre aux vœux des dirigeants de la majorité, tout en sauvegardant comme il convient les droits de la minorité.

30. Je suis persuadé à ce propos que les élections auront lieu en avril 1962, comme prévu, si l'on apporte à la Constitution les changements voulus. Nous ne doutons pas que, comme cela a été le cas au Nyassaland, où le Dr Banda a été victorieux aux élections, à une énorme majorité, M. Kaunda et son parti n'obtiennent la majorité en Rhodésie du Nord. Bien entendu, nous sommes d'avis que le pouvoir doit passer à la majorité et qu'il faut des garanties pour la minorité. Cette politique correspondrait à celle que nous suivons en Nigéria. Nous voulons que cette région évolue dans l'ordre. Nous ne pouvons pas ignorer qu'il y a là des colons dont les intérêts vont très loin; on ne peut pas les exterminer. Il faut résoudre le problème humain; il n'y a pas de baguette magique qui puisse le résoudre du jour au lendemain. Nous ne nous dissimulons pas que ces points sont délicats.

31. Il y a aussi, dans la Fédération rhodésienne, la Rhodésie du Sud qui donnera plus de fil à retordre que la Rhodésie du Nord, car le pouvoir y est entre les mains des colons qui paraissent pencher vers le racisme sud-africain. Mais il semble qu'un vent nouveau commence à y souffler: j'ai lu récemment que les femmes des colons prennent l'initiative et commencent à faire preuve d'amitié envers les Africains au milieu desquels elles vivent. Elles s'efforcent de s'habituer à l'idée que ce sont des êtres humains de la même communauté, et avec lesquels elles doivent vivre. Quiconque constate une telle transformation a le devoir, je crois, de l'encourager. Ces gens sont venus vivre en Afrique et ils veulent y être heureux. Tant qu'ils voudront bien reconnaître les droits de la majorité, je ne vois aucune raison pour que ceux de leur minorité ne soient pas également garantis. Telle est l'attitude de la Nigéria à l'égard du développement de notre continent.

32. Il y a eu quelques changements. Jusqu'ici, les Africains n'ont jamais eu de représentants. Mais le Gouvernement a décidé que, dans une chambre de 65 sièges, je crois, les Africains en occuperont 15. Il s'agit là d'un progrès indéniable, mais chacun sait qu'il n'est pas à la mesure de nos aspirations. On ne peut pas avoir une majorité dominée par une minorité. Il faut faire pression sur le Gouvernement britannique, qui exerce l'autorité suprême sur ce pays, pour qu'il y prenne des mesures conformes à la tradition britannique.

33. Nous en arrivons, après la Rhodésie du Nord et la Rhodésie du Sud, au Betchoualand, territoire qui est également sous la protection du Royaume-Uni. Le Betchoualand touche à l'Afrique du Sud et au Sud-Ouest africain. J'ai énuméré soigneusement ces territoires car l'indépendance aurait pour cette région au moins deux conséquences. Nous avons cherché une solution au problème du Sud-Ouest africain; nous venions de chercher une solution au problème du racisme de l'Afrique du Sud. Or, un coup d'œil à la carte nous enseigne que, si cette région entière devient indépendante, le Betchoualand aura une frontière commune avec le Sud-Ouest africain et la majorité noire de l'Afrique pèsera de tout son poids sur l'Afrique du Sud. Je ne vois pas comment elle pourrait résister à cette pression très longtemps; elle sera obligée de changer de politique. Nous pouvons voter des résolutions année après année, la politique raciale de l'Afrique du Sud ne changera que lorsque tous les pays dont je viens de parler auront leur indépendance.

34. On a proposé de donner l'indépendance à tous ces pays l'année prochaine. Cela part d'une bonne intention, je le sais; mais, est-ce réalisable? Et si oui, est-ce de l'intérêt de la communauté africaine? Prenons le cas du Sud-Ouest africain. Nous avons lu le rapport. Qui dirige le Sud-Ouest africain aujourd'hui? Ce n'est pas la majorité. Supposons que nous lui accordions l'indépendance; à qui donnerons-nous ainsi le pouvoir? N'est-ce pas précisément à ceux qui oppriment aujourd'hui la majorité? Ne serait-ce pas condamner la majorité à une complète servitude pour un temps indéterminé? Si demain vous accordez l'indépendance au Sud-Ouest africain, si cet Etat vient siéger ici comme Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, y aura-t-il un moyen d'intervenir dans ses affaires intérieures pour transformer la condition de la majorité noire du pays? "Indépendance immédiate", c'est très joli sur le papier. Mais ceux qui ont analysé la situation du pays avec les meilleures intentions du monde n'ont pas assez tenu compte du facteur humain. C'est l'Afrique. La situation du Sud-Ouest africain est terrible, c'est vrai. Mais nous voulons trouver un moyen qui permette à notre organisation, en collaboration avec les Etats africains et les puissances coloniales intéressées, de mettre en place un dispositif pratique pour transmettre le pouvoir à la majorité en sauvegardant les intérêts de la minorité, au lieu de nous contenter de jeter l'indépendance à la tête du peuple: en agissant ainsi, on croit faire quelque chose pour les Africains, alors qu'en réalité on les vend comme esclaves.

35. Pour en revenir à la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland, supposons que vous lui accordiez l'indépendance aujourd'hui. Il y a là-bas un gouvernement, à la tête duquel se trouve sir Roy Welensky.

A qui, dans ces conditions, transmettriez-vous le pouvoir? A sir Roy Welensky? Que ferait son gouvernement? Il a autorité sur l'armée et la police, a tous les moyens d'écraser l'opposition, puisqu'il n'y a personne pour aider l'opposition. Tout ce que demande le projet nigérien, c'est une déclaration. Si les Nations Unies la font, le Royaume-Uni sera forcé de collaborer avec les autres Etats d'Afrique et avec les dirigeants des régions intéressées, et ils pourront ensemble mettre sur pied un dispositif pour chaque territoire. Voilà pourquoi nous nous sommes abstenus, de propos délibéré, de mentionner nommément aucun territoire.

36. Nous ne pouvons pas, siégeant ici, fixer une date pour l'Ouganda, une date pour le Kenya, une autre pour la Rhodésie, une autre encore pour ce que l'on appelle le Sahara espagnol. Les dirigeants de toutes ces régions sont dispersés un peu partout. Nous voyons sans cesse les chefs politiques du Sud-Ouest africain venir ici pour présenter quelque requête à la Quatrième Commission. Certains dirigeants sont à New York, d'autres sont à Londres, d'autres sont en visite à Lagos, d'autres s'en vont à Accra, d'autres encore à Conakry. Nous le savons bien. Il faut rassembler tous ces gens-là afin qu'ils puissent, autour d'une table, élaborer un programme pour leur pays. Ce sont eux, après tout, les chefs de ces territoires. La Nigéria n'a aucune ambition territoriale. Elle ne veut voir naître dans aucun territoire d'Afrique un nouvel impérialisme africain. Elle ne veut pas qu'aucun territoire d'Afrique s'empare d'un autre territoire, si petit qu'il soit. Et c'est pourquoi elle estime qu'il faut donner aux Etats africains l'occasion de siéger ensemble et de définir une politique pour leur propre continent. Si c'est pécher que de vouloir cela, c'est un glorieux péché, et la Nigéria est fière de le commettre.

37. Une fois de plus, je voudrais que mes frères africains se souviennent de ce qui s'est passé au Congo. Quand vient le moment de l'indépendance, ceux qui étaient frères d'armes dans la lutte pour l'indépendance deviennent ennemis dans la lutte pour le pouvoir; c'est inévitable. Nous avons vu cela au Congo. Et si trop de mains, au Congo, se sont tendues vers l'assiette au beurre, n'était-ce pas sous l'influence de forces extérieures? C'est ce que j'ai dit en parlant à la presse. Si l'on jette l'indépendance à la tête du pays, sans préparation sérieuse ou sans assurer formellement au pays l'aide des Etats africains déjà Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ou de pays amis dans toutes les parties du monde, comment être sûr qu'il ne se trouvera pas des gens pour chercher à opposer les dirigeants les uns aux autres, de façon à pécher en eau trouble? C'est ce qui s'est produit au Congo, et c'est une des raisons pour lesquelles un des dirigeants du Congo a trouvé la mort: on l'avait bien mal conseillé. Nous voulons éviter cela. Nous ne pouvons pas nous permettre de faire disparaître nos propres dirigeants africains. Nous devons les protéger pour leur permettre de servir leur pays.

M. Ortiz Martín (Costa Rica), vice-président, prend la présidence.

38. Il y a aussi le commerce des idéologies. On a dit que la personnalité africaine doit se projeter. Mais comment une personnalité pourrait-elle se projeter si elle ne s'est pas affirmée? Il faut que je raconte une histoire qui déplaira peut-être à certains. En mai et en juin 1961, les envoyés d'un pays d'Europe méridionale sont venus à Stanleyville, ont ramassé une centaine d'écoliers de plus de 6 ans et les ont emmenés. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a été au courant de l'affaire. En était-il de même du Gouvernement congolais? Quel était le but visé? Si ces enfants sont tenus éloignés de leur pays jusqu'à l'âge de 21 ans, seront-ils encore Congolais? Veut-on les élever dans certaines idéologies incompatibles avec leurs propres articles de foi?

39. Il faut nous prémunir contre pareils dangers. C'est pourquoi notre objectif actuel doit être l'accession systématique des pays africains à l'indépendance, accession organisée par les Etats africains eux-mêmes, en collaboration avec l'Organisation des Nations Unies et les pays amis. Nous ne devons pas permettre que l'Afrique resserve de champ de bataille aux grandes puissances.

40. Nous voulons abolir le colonialisme une fois pour toutes. Il ne faut pas que le colonialisme sorte par la porte et rentre par la fenêtre sous une autre forme. Voilà le but du projet nigérien. Nous voulons protéger l'Afrique contre les rivalités internes.

41. On voudra bien se rappeler que dans mon intervention dans la discussion générale [1031ème séance], j'ai posé, au nom de mon gouvernement, trois conditions que nous voulions voir le Portugal remplir en ce qui concerne l'Angola et le Mozambique: le Portugal doit reconnaître le principe de l'indépendance des régions qui sont sous son autorité; le Portugal doit reconnaître la légitimité des dirigeants politiques de ces régions; et le Portugal, s'il désire s'assurer la bonne volonté de la population de ces régions, doit être prêt à mettre au point le dispositif qui permettra de transmettre le pouvoir aux dirigeants de ces régions. Le Portugal n' imagine même pas que ces peuples puissent devenir indépendants. Comment pouvons-nous songer à conférer l'indépendance à l'Angola l'an prochain? Voulons-nous remettre entre les mains du Portugal les Angolais que nous prétendons vouloir délivrer? Comment pouvons-nous songer à donner immédiatement l'indépendance au Mozambique? Voulons-nous le remettre entre les mains du pays qui l'administre actuellement? L'Organisation des Nations Unies n'a aucun moyen d'imposer l'indépendance à un pays. Connaissions-nous d'ailleurs les dirigeants de ces pays? Comment pouvons-nous savoir si le Portugal ne choisira pas les gens qui lui plaisent en déclarant: "Voilà les chefs"? Comment pouvons-nous savoir si le Portugal ne va pas rentrer par la petite porte pour reprendre le pouvoir?

42. Le but du projet de résolution est donc de créer un dispositif qui permettra aux Etats indépendants d'Afrique de surveiller étroitement l'évolution des régions qui ne sont pas encore indépendantes.

43. A propos de l'indépendance, on a employé pendant une douzaine d'années l'adjectif "immédiat". Le mot a perdu toute signification. Chez nous, en Nigéria, "immédiat" ne veut pas dire que l'on va mettre l'affaire au garde-meuble. C'est pourquoi le paragraphe 2 de notre projet de résolution déclare:

"Que des mesures immédiates doivent être prises d'urgence dans tous les territoires coloniaux, dépendants ou non autonomes d'Afrique, pour préparer les peuples de ces territoires à assumer l'entière gestion de leurs affaires d'ici à 1970".

44. Cela ne veut pas dire qu'il s'agisse d'atermoyer. "Préparation" ne signifie pas qu'il faut renvoyer tout le monde au cours préparatoire. Par "préparation", ne faut-il pas entendre l'élaboration de diverses constitutions? Ce mot signifie que les peuples eux-mêmes, par l'entremise de leurs partis politiques ou de tout autre organe politique prendront l'initiative de gouverner leur territoire. On ne gouverne pas en restant dehors. C'est en gouvernant que l'on apprend à gouverner. Tel est le sens que nous donnons au mot "préparation". Cela ne veut pas dire qu'il faut mettre à l'université toute la population d'une région et que la région ne deviendra indépendante que lorsque tous ses habitants seront diplômés. Quelle absurdité! La plupart des chefs politiques n'ont jamais été à l'université. Mon père, par exemple, n'a jamais été à l'université, mais il a gouverné. "Préparation", comme je l'ai dit, ne signifie pas nécessairement aller à l'école secondaire ou à toute autre école du type occidental. Cela ne veut pas dire que, pour gouverner, il faille connaître l'anglais, le français, l'allemand ou le russe. Quelqu'un peut gouverner selon ses propres traditions, mais il faut qu'il soit préparé à mesurer les responsabilités du pouvoir. Il ne faut pas prendre le pouvoir pour détruire ceux que l'on est censé servir. Voilà ce que nous entendons par "préparation" en Nigéria.

45. Quand les Etats d'Afrique se sont réunis à Monrovia^{5/}, ils ont fait certaines déclarations communes. Ils ont reconnu que, si l'on veut vivre en Afrique dans la paix et la tranquillité, il faut résoudre certains problèmes fondamentaux. Un d'entre eux est celui de la compréhension mutuelle. Par suite du régime colonial, on parle français dans certaines régions d'Afrique, anglais dans d'autres. On nous a tenus séparés. Il faut maintenant que nous puissions communiquer entre nous. Les moyens actuels de communication, par route ou par téléphone, ne sont pas suffisants. Il faut les développer. Un grand nombre d'entre nous se rencontrent pour la première fois aux sessions de l'Assemblée générale. Les Etats africains entendent profiter de leur indépendance pour instaurer la compréhension mutuelle et pour collaborer en matière économique, culturelle, scientifique et technique ainsi qu'entre gouvernements.

46. La Conférence des Etats d'Afrique doit reprendre à Lagos, capitale de mon pays. Si l'Assemblée adopte le projet de résolution, fixant ainsi la date au-delà de laquelle on ne peut pas différer l'indépendance de l'Afrique, nous avons l'intention de proposer à la Conférence des Etats d'Afrique de fixer la date de l'indépendance des différentes contrées intéressées. Nous comptons inviter à cette conférence les chefs politiques de ces différentes régions, de façon à connaître de première main la situation qui est la leur. Combien d'entre nous ont-ils visité ces territoires ou les connaissent-ils pratiquement?

47. Nous avons délibérément laissé pendante la date exacte à fixer pour l'indépendance de chacun des territoires. Avec des plans soigneusement élaborés et bien exécutés, certaines de ces régions deviendront évidemment indépendantes en moins de cinq ans; d'autres ne mettront pas plus de cinq ans à le devenir. Mais nous ne devons pas oublier l'Angola, le Sud-Ouest africain et le Mozambique. Le Gouvernement britannique a déjà pris des engagements de principe en ce qui concerne l'indépendance des territoires qui sont sous son influence. Le Portugal a-t-il pris les mêmes engagements? L'autre jour, j'ai lu dans la presse que le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis avait déclaré qu'il était partisan de ce plan progressif. N'est-ce pas que notre idée fait son chemin, si les deux plus grandes puissances occidentales se sont mises d'accord pour accepter le principe d'une date limite pour l'indépendance de l'ensemble du continent africain, et non pas pour tel ou tel pays? Ayant pris cet engagement de principe, ces deux puissances ne peuvent donc pas refuser une date particulière que les Etats africains auront fixée après entente avec les dirigeants des territoires intéressés. Ce serait trop de présomption de fixer une date pour un pays avant d'avoir consulté ses dirigeants. Et nous n'en avons pas l'intention.

48. Mais nous avons raison, nous Etat indépendant, de songer à une évolution ordonnée et pacifique, à une évolution harmonieuse de notre continent au cours de ces 10 années, et de penser que la fin de cette décennie verra la fin du colonialisme en Afrique. Nous avons raison de l'affirmer, et de prévoir en même temps une certaine marge. Qu'arrivera-t-il, en effet, si nous fixons la date de 1963 et si rien n'est encore fait à cette date? Les peuples ne se sentiront-ils pas profondément déçus? Supposons que nous fixions la date de 1965 et que rien ne se soit encore fait à cette date; qu'arrivera-t-il? On m'a souvent demandé: "En vertu de quoi pouvez-vous fixer une date donnée? En vertu de quoi pouvons-nous proposer que l'Afrique tout entière soit indépendante au plus tard le 1er décembre 1970?"

49. La réponse est que nous fixons ces dates à la lumière de notre expérience nigérienne, et parce que nous sommes certains que les Africains pourront s'organiser pendant cette période et mettre au clair la situation du continent. Si l'on doit en arriver à une épreuve de force, si elle est inévitable, on ne l'évitera pas. Mais combien y a-t-il aujourd'hui en Afrique d'Etats qui, fiers de leur indépendance toute neuve, soient aussi en mesure d'organiser leur économie et leurs ressources de telle manière qu'elles aient pour d'autres pays de la valeur et de l'utilité? Si, au moment où ces pays reçoivent leur indépendance, nous ne pouvons pas les aider, ils chercheront de l'aide d'un autre côté. C'est alors qu'en cherchant une aide ils risquent de tomber dans certains pièges, les pièges mêmes que nous voulons éviter.

50. Ce sont quelques-uns des points que nous avons en tête quand nous avons réfléchi à cette situation. J'ai évité soigneusement de faire une proposition d'ensemble au sujet des colonies. Que l'on ne croie pas un instant que la Nigéria ne s'intéresse pas au problème général de l'abolition des colonies. Mais, puisque nous avons fait une déclaration générale dans la résolution 1514 (XV), tout autre projet de résolution soumis à l'Assemblée générale devait, à notre sens, proposer un plan concret pour une région donnée et ne pas seulement donner matière aux débats habituels.

51. J'ai écouté certaines des déclarations faites ici; aucune d'elles n'offre un programme tangible et concret pour aucune région; j'excepte la proposition des Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. Le Gouvernement néerlandais a offert ici un plan qui est un sujet de controverse entre le Gouvernement néerlandais et le Gouvernement indonésien. Il s'agit d'une proposition concrète; mais, je le répète, elle fait l'objet d'une controverse. Je pensais que ceux qui voulaient voir appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale choisiraient une région donnée et diraient: "Nous voulons que ce pays soit indépendant à telle date", qu'ils nous diraient ensuite pourquoi il doit en être ainsi et qu'ils affirmeraient enfin que ce pays est prêt à l'indépendance. J'ai recherché une déclaration de ce genre dans tous les procès-verbaux, mais sans succès. Je n'ai trouvé que les mêmes vieilles déclarations sur le colonialisme, toujours le colonialisme.

52. Le colonialisme est certainement pour nous quelque chose de très important. J'aurais pensé que la question de l'Algérie ferait l'objet d'une proposition. Dans un projet de résolution^{6/}, les Etats africains ont proposé que l'ONU y organise un plébiscite, dont elle surveillerait le déroulement. Mais qu'est-il advenu quand nous avons déposé ici notre projet de résolution? Avons-nous réussi à le faire adopter? N'y a-t-il pas eu des abstentions, et ainsi de suite? Cela prouve à l'évidence que le moment est venu où les Africains devront prendre eux-mêmes l'initiative sur leur propre continent. Il y a maintenant en Afrique assez d'Etats indépendants pour qu'ils puissent se grouper et trouver une solution pour leur continent, une solution et non pas simplement une déclaration générale. Tout ce que nous avons demandé, c'est une déclaration applicable à l'ensemble de l'Afrique, et non à un pays particulier. Mais les détails qui concernent chaque pays, un par un, ce sont les Etats africains qui doivent les recueillir et les analyser en collaboration avec les nationalistes d'autres parties de l'Afrique.

53. Je me suis étendu sur cette question parce que je ne veux pas que l'on répande une propagande mal-faisante contre le projet nigérien, que l'on interprète toute l'affaire de travers et que l'on dise que nous cherchons à condamner les nationalistes africains à 10 ans de servitude en attendant leur indépendance. Il n'y a rien de pareil en aucun endroit de notre projet de résolution. On a toujours eu tendance, parmi les nationalistes, à ne considérer que le côté négatif des questions. Puisque nous avons obtenu notre indépendance, je pense que le moment est venu pour nous de considérer les aspects positifs de l'indépendance et des problèmes qui en découlent. Avec l'indépendance vont nécessairement certaines responsabilités, et nous voulons jalousement préserver l'avenir de notre continent.

54. A l'heure actuelle, beaucoup d'Africains se rendent à l'étranger. Certains y vont pour acquérir des connaissances qui seront utiles à leur pays, et constructives. Mais reconnaissons aussi que d'autres s'éprennent, à l'étranger, de choses inutiles à leur pays. Ils perdent de vue l'avenir de leur propre pays, leurs traditions, leurs parents et amis, et deviennent les agents d'idéologies étrangères et de gouvernements étrangers. C'est pourquoi l'indépendance de l'Afrique ne doit pas être, aujourd'hui, une indépendance purement formelle, mais une indépendance véritable. Les dirigeants actuels de l'Afrique doivent penser à l'Afrique d'abord avant de penser à un pays étranger.

55. Ce que nous voulions faire entendre, en déposant notre projet, c'est qu'il faut tout faire pour prévenir l'intervention étrangère dans les affaires africaines. Il faut tout faire pour écarter de la communauté africaine les dictatures, quelque forme qu'elles prennent. Il faut tout faire pour s'opposer au genre de gouvernement qui ne recherche pas le bien du peuple, mais convoite le pouvoir et le seul pouvoir, au genre de gouvernement qui détruit l'âme et la source de sa force. L'Afrique veut tirer parti de ses ressources et les développer, restaurer sa culture si longtemps étouffée. Elle veut devenir un bastion de paix dans le monde, mais elle ne peut pas devenir un bastion de paix si le désordre accompagne son indépendance.

56. Je me suis efforcé d'expliquer le sens de notre projet de résolution. Je n'ai pas dit grand-chose de l'autre projet de résolution [A/L.355] que l'Union soviétique a déposé à l'occasion du point 88 de l'ordre du jour, parce que j'estime que ceux qui l'ont discuté en ont assez dit. Dans le présent débat, je me borne exclusivement à l'assistance à l'Afrique et je serai heureux d'entendre toute proposition qu'une autre délégation pourrait faire. Nous l'examinerons d'un œil critique, nous l'analyserons avec objectivité et l'appuierons selon qu'elle coïncidera ou non avec nos propres idées. Nous ne pouvons pas nous permettre de nous laisser entraîner dans des controverses. Nous ne voulons pas nous engager ici dans des conflits idéologiques. Nous voulons rester sur notre propre terrain.

57. J'ai indiqué le principal point de doctrine qui inspire notre projet de résolution. Personne, que je sache, n'a nié son intérêt; mais on l'a critiqué pour cette question de date. Je demande humblement à toutes les délégations qui croient sincèrement que l'Afrique mérite un peu de paix pour développer ses ressources, qui croient que l'Afrique doit se développer paisiblement, harmonieusement et sans désordre, de voter pour le projet nigérien. La question est très claire et très simple. On nous a demandé de prendre l'initiative: nous avons pris l'initiative. J'espère du moins que mes amis les représentants des pays d'Afrique comprennent maintenant dans quel esprit nous avons rédigé notre projet de résolution.

58. On a soutenu que nous n'aurions pas dû déposer ce projet de résolution avant de nous être assurés de l'approbation de certains. A vrai dire, je ne vois rien dans le règlement qui empêche aucune délégation de déposer un projet de résolution. A mon avis, si l'on dépose un projet de résolution, c'est pour qu'il circule, pour que les autres délégations aient la faculté de l'étudier et de décider de leur conduite à son égard. N'importe qui peut examiner ce projet de résolution, la Nigéria n'y voit pas d'objection; mais elle en voit à une propagande concertée, subversive contre ce projet et à une fausse interprétation de nos intentions. Cela étant maintenant bien clair, je tiens à dire que nous sommes heureux de savoir que le Gouvernement britannique est disposé à appuyer la date limite proposée pour l'Afrique. J'ai bon espoir également que, lorsque des dates limites particulières auront été fixées pour des pays déterminés, en collaboration avec le Royaume-Uni et avec les dirigeants de ces territoires, le Gouvernement britannique appuiera aussi ces dates. Nous le connaissons et nous croyons que, en se retirant de ces territoires, il veut conserver l'amitié et la sympathie des populations qui les habitent.

59. Je crois que l'intention du Royaume-Uni est de continuer à garder des liens d'amitié avec les habitants de ces territoires, de les garder longtemps, et de forger de nouveaux liens d'amitié, fondés non pas sur la domination, mais sur l'association et la compréhension mutuelle. C'est ce genre d'amitié que nous désirons voir s'édifier sur tout le continent africain. Nous n'avons pas d'ennemis. Nous entendons conserver nos amis et en faire de nouveau; mais nous ne voulons nous mettre à la remorque de personne.

60. Etre indépendant, c'est par définition pouvoir déterminer sa propre politique, ses propres objectifs, pouvoir tirer ses propres conclusions sans avoir à subir l'ingérence de forces extérieures. Notre pays a exercé son droit, en qualité de Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et en toute indépendance, de déposer un projet de résolution, parce que nous sommes persuadés que, si l'on fait ce grand pas sur notre continent, nous découvrirons, vers la fin de ces 10 années, que nous serons bien près de résoudre le problème racial que nous a posé l'Afrique du Sud. Nous savons qu'il y a en Afrique assez d'Etats indépendants pour exercer sur l'Afrique du Sud une pression telle qu'elle ne pourra pas résister à la poussée d'indépendance du continent africain. Nous savons que, si ce projet est adopté, et si les Etats d'Afrique agissent dans l'esprit qui en a inspiré le texte, l'éternelle question du Sud-Ouest africain sera réglée.

61. Je suis certain que, avec l'appui du Gouvernement britannique et du Gouvernement américain, le Portugal sera obligé de changer d'attitude. Le Royaume-Uni est un vieil ami du Portugal; s'il décide que l'heure est venue de faire sonner les cloches de l'indépendance pour l'Afrique tout entière, le Portugal ne pourra pas continuer à cacher sa tête dans le sable. Il devra ressentir le souffle irrésistible du vent nouveau. Que les Etats-Unis, en particulier, qui donnent actuellement à l'Europe occidentale sa force économique, se soient engagés à suivre sur ce point une ligne anticolonialiste, c'est un fait qui ne manquera pas d'avoir des conséquences et des répercussions d'une grande portée pour le Portugal et pour son comportement sur la scène africaine.

62. S'il en est ainsi — et j'attends avec impatience de voir se réaliser ce qu'annoncent les journaux, c'est-à-dire que les grandes puissances fassent une déclaration publique à cet égard —, si ce que je dis est vrai et si tout ce que j'ai dit auparavant est exact, je suis bien certain, si l'Assemblée adopte le projet nigérien, que le continent africain tout entier sera indépendant avant le 1er décembre 1970.

63. M. SUBANDRIO (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le point que nous discutons en ce moment est extrêmement important. L'année dernière, l'Assemblée générale a adopté une déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Elle a solennellement proclamé la nécessité de mettre rapidement fin au colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

64. Il n'est guère besoin de m'étendre ici sur ce que le colonialisme a signifié pour l'humanité. On a prononcé des millions de mots dans cette enceinte pour décrire la condition d'un nombre infini d'êtres humains qui, au cours de centaines d'années, ont eu à souffrir du fléau du colonialisme, de la domination et de l'exploitation de l'étranger. L'histoire de ces êtres humains est une histoire d'oppression et de misère, d'humiliation et d'exploitation. Mais ils ont également connu la guerre et les luttes héroïques pour la liberté.

65. En fait, le colonialisme s'est toujours heurté à la résistance. Plus le colonialisme s'imposait durement, plus forte était la résistance. Les guerres coloniales, même localisées et à petite échelle, sont inhérentes à l'histoire du colonialisme. Ce n'est que grâce à leur supériorité technique et matérielle que les puissances coloniales ont réussi, dans le passé, à imposer leur domination aux populations de vastes régions du globe.

66. Chaque puissance coloniale a fondé des colonies ou des dépendances pour sa commodité particulière. Mais, quand a grandi la résistance à cette domination et à l'exploitation qu'il l'a suivie, elle a pris la forme d'une résistance nationale et d'une lutte nationale pour l'indépendance et la liberté. Tous les habitants de ces territoires asservis étaient liés par un sort et un intérêt communs: se libérer de la servitude coloniale. C'est ce nationalisme, cette force collective d'un peuple qui se considérait comme une entité nationale, que craignaient le plus les puissances coloniales. Et c'est cette force collective, soutenue par l'idéal humain de liberté et de dignité, d'égalité et de progrès, qui est parvenue à conquérir l'indépendance nationale de bien des territoires dépendants.

67. Cependant, lutter pour l'indépendance nationale n'a jamais été facile. Il a fallu surmonter tous les efforts — politiques, économiques et militaires — que les puissances coloniales déployaient pour écraser les mouvements nationaux de liberté, pour anéantir la force collective nationale. Cette lutte s'est toujours heurtée à la politique coloniale: diviser pour régner, à la subversion et même à l'intervention directe dont le but était de briser la volonté et l'unité nationales.

68. Et même l'indépendance une fois conquise, après de durs mais victorieux combats, les puissances coloniales se sont efforcées par les moyens les plus divers, notamment par la conclusion de prétendus accords, de protéger leurs intérêts le plus longtemps possible.

69. Je ne dis là rien de bien nouveau. A beaucoup de membres de cette assemblée, à ceux en particulier qui ont subi les épreuves des luttes coloniales, ces caractéristiques du colonialisme sont familières. Beaucoup, dont l'Indonésie elle-même, doivent encore lutter contre le colonialisme dans leur propre pays. C'est pourquoi nous estimons comme d'une extrême importance que l'Assemblée examine soigneusement et sérieusement ce problème du colonialisme. C'était, et c'est encore une tâche difficile et ardue que d'éliminer le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et manifestations, comme le demande la Déclaration adoptée par les Nations Unies.

70. Cette déclaration, dont nous discutons actuellement la mise en œuvre, représente une victoire morale pour toutes les forces anticoloniales. Les puissances coloniales, de leur côté, n'ont pas, dans leur ensemble, appuyé cette déclaration, encore qu'elles n'aient pas pu se permettre de s'opposer directement à l'exigence de la liberté pour tous les peuples et nations encore dépendants. Cela veut dire qu'il faut travailler à l'application de la Déclaration avec tous les moyens politiques et moraux dont nous disposons. Cette tâche réclame notre effort total et concerté.

71. Il serait d'ailleurs inexact de dire que cette déclaration n'a eu aucune influence sur l'attitude des puissances coloniales. Après tout, le colonialisme est une attitude et un état d'esprit. La lutte pour la liberté et la dignité de l'homme, où qu'elle se soit déroulée, a certainement fait apparaître le visage d'un monde nouveau aux yeux de ceux pour lesquels le monde s'était limité jusque-là à leurs propres intérêts étroits. Elle a élargi l'esprit humain. Elle n'a pas émancipé seulement les peuples coloniaux; elle a aussi émancipé les puissances coloniales dans leurs conceptions et leur attitude. C'est une bonne chose. Il faut s'en féliciter.

72. Pourtant, si certaines puissances coloniales ont évolué dans le sens de l'émancipation, d'autres résistent encore. Elles s'incrument aveuglément et cherchent à résister à la marée de l'histoire. Il est donc du devoir de l'Assemblée d'accélérer le processus d'émancipation et de libération, pour le plus grand profit des puissances coloniales comme pour celui des peuples colonisés. Car la fin du colonialisme n'apporte aux puissances coloniales ni moins de liberté, ni moins de dignité qu'aux peuples anciennement colonisés. C'est là, je crois, le vrai sens de la Déclaration adoptée par les Nations Unies.

73. La Déclaration cherche à améliorer les relations internationales dans l'égalité et la liberté. Elle recherche la paix et la sécurité dans le progrès et le bien-être pour tous. Il y a, on l'a déjà dit, quelque 70 millions d'êtres humains dispersés dans le monde — mais surtout en Asie et en Afrique — qui vivent sous la domination des puissances coloniales ou dans leur dépendance. Cette situation doit prendre fin sans tarder, comme l'exige la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Nous ne pouvons plus atterrir. Tant que des êtres humains souffriront du colonialisme, tant qu'il y aura des gens — peu importe le degré actuel de leur développement social — qui sont privés de leurs droits fondamentaux, le monde ne connaîtra pas de paix. C'est leur manque de liberté, et non pas le degré de leur développement social, qui menace la paix entre les nations. Nous ne le répéterons jamais assez.

74. C'est dans la liberté que doit se faire cette évolution politique et sociale, guidée par les idéaux nationaux et inspirée par la volonté de bâtir une nation forte et unie. Nous ne voulons pas que le colonialisme ne prenne fin que sur le papier. Nous voulons apporter la liberté aux peuples encore dépendants dans des conditions qui leur permettront véritablement de se développer politiquement, socialement et économiquement, en collaboration avec les Nations Unies. Notre propre expérience nous a prouvé que c'est là une tâche d'une immense ampleur.

75. C'est pourquoi ma délégation appuie l'idée de créer, pour mettre en œuvre la résolution 1514 (XV), une commission composée de Membres à qui les aspirations des peuples colonisés sont vraiment familières, et qui les comprennent vraiment. Ceux qui participeront aux travaux de cette commission des Nations Unies devront être imbus de l'esprit de lutte pour la liberté qui anime les peuples colonisés.

76. L'Assemblée n'est pas sans savoir que le groupe africano-asiatique, dont fait partie ma délégation, est en train, après avoir rédigé la Déclaration que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée à sa quinzième session, d'étudier le problème de son application et la possibilité de rédiger un projet de résolution à cette fin — sans préjudice, bien entendu, du projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355], qui mérite toute notre attention. Je voudrais par conséquent me réserver le droit de prendre plus tard la parole sur tous les projets de résolution dont nous pourrions être saisis au titre des points 88 et 22, a.

77. Mon intervention d'aujourd'hui s'adresse plus particulièrement à la déclaration qu'a faite hier [1048ème séance] le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, qui a ajouté au dossier du présent débat un projet de résolution [A/L.354] qui concerne une partie de mon pays: l'Irian occidental.

78. J'ai écouté très attentivement le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas expliquer, hier, sa proposition — à première vue très généreuse — de décoloniser le territoire de l'Irian occidental, partie intégrante de la République de l'Indonésie. Pour cela, les Pays-Bas renonceraient à leur autorité et transfèreraient la souveraineté à la population dès que l'ONU pourrait se charger des services administratifs que cette population elle-même est incapable d'assumer actuellement.

79. J'ai été particulièrement frappé d'entendre M. Luns dire que cette mesure des Pays-Bas aurait un caractère unique et nouveau, aucune puissance n'ayant jamais tenté auparavant d'en prendre une semblable.

80. Si nous ignorions ce que sont les relations internationales, si nous n'étions pas aussi familiarisés avec la lutte contre le colonialisme, si nous n'avions jamais entendu parler du violent combat que le peuple indonésien a mené contre les colonisateurs pour gagner son indépendance, et si cette proposition de M. Luns était immédiatement applicable aux colonies que les Pays-Bas conservent encore — comme le Surinam et Curaçao —, je serais le premier à féliciter M. Luns et à lui exprimer mon admiration pour son attitude humaine et anticoloniale. Il mériterait même le prix Nobel de la paix, au même titre que M. Luthuli en Afrique du Sud.

81. Mais un examen plus approfondi de l'apparente générosité des Pays-Bas mène inexorablement à une conclusion bien différente de celle de M. Luns.

82. Tout d'abord — et j'insiste sur ce point —, l'indépendance de l'Indonésie n'a pas résulté d'un généreux cadeau de Noël que nous auraient fait les Pays-Bas. Nous avons gagné notre indépendance au prix d'une guerre cruelle et acharnée, menée de 1945 à la fin de 1949. La lutte pour son indépendance a coûté à l'Indonésie plus d'un demi-million de vies humaines. A cette époque-là, les Pays-Bas disposaient d'une force matérielle supérieure: ils s'en sont servi avec une impitoyable cruauté. Les massacres d'habitants étaient presque quotidiens. Nous avons connu des tribulations sous l'occupation japonaise, mais on peut dire que ce n'était rien en comparaison de la cruauté néerlandaise.

83. Pour ne citer qu'un exemple, je rappelle que le fameux capitaine Westerling a réussi, en l'espace d'une semaine, à tuer 40 000 personnes dans le sud de Célèbes; c'étaient pour la plupart des vieillards, des femmes et des enfants, les jeunes gens en âge de porter les armes ayant gagné la jungle pour organiser la guérilla contre les Pays-Bas. Cet épisode de notre lutte nationale est encore frais dans notre mémoire; chaque année, nous commémorons le massacre du sud de Célèbes, pour rappeler à la population que nous avons acquis notre indépendance au prix de durs combats et de lourds sacrifices.

84. Même après avoir reconnu notre indépendance, à la fin de 1949, les Pays-Bas ont continué leur politique coloniale de subversion contre la jeune république. C'est à leur instigation, et pour diviser l'Indonésie, que s'est proclamée la soi-disant République des Moluques méridionales. En quelques jours, avec nos seuls moyens militaires, nous avons écrasé ce mouvement séparatiste. Les Pays-Bas ont alors fomenté des insurrections de toutes parts et ont à cet effet renvoyé le capitaine Westerling en Indonésie. Il a dirigé contre le gouvernement central un coup de force qui a lui aussi échoué.

85. Après cet échec, les Pays-Bas se sont employés à envenimer le problème de l'Irian occidental, allant jusqu'à faire figurer ce territoire en litige dans leur constitution, comme faisant partie du Royaume des Pays-Bas. A l'origine, le maintien temporaire de l'administration néerlandaise d'occupation avait constitué une mesure opportuniste, destinée à calmer les réactions intérieures néerlandaises à la suite de la perte de l'Indonésie; mais, par la suite, les Pays-Bas ont entrepris de se servir de ce territoire comme d'une base pour augmenter les difficultés que connaît l'Indonésie et semer la subversion dans d'autres territoires indonésiens.

86. Cette attitude anti-indonésienne des Pays-Bas s'est aussi manifestée dans leur refus constant d'engager des discussions bilatérales sur le fond du problème de l'Irian occidental. Quand on en est venu à des discussions de procédure, les Pays-Bas sont allés jusqu'à faire attendre une délégation indonésienne deux mois durant, aux Pays-Bas, avant de daigner assister à la séance. En outre, pour montrer en quel dédain il tenait les Indonésiens, M. Luns, au cours de la Conférence de Genève, en 1955, s'est soudain absenté pour aller passer quelques semaines de vacances en Méditerranée.

87. Si je mentionne ces faits, ce n'est que pour donner une idée des sentiments violemment anti-indonésiens qui animent le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas. Il saisira toute occasion d'humilier l'Indonésie et le peuple indonésien. De 1954 à 1957, nous avons présenté à l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies des projets de résolution d'une extrême modération, dont l'objet était simplement que l'Assemblée recommande des négociations pacifiques entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas sur le problème de l'Irian occidental. M. Luns a refusé même cela, sous prétexte que l'Irian occidental était une affaire intérieure des Pays-Bas. Plus tard, en 1959, les Pays-Bas ont envoyé en Indonésie le porte-avions Karel Doorman, sous le prétexte typiquement néerlandais qu'ils s'agissait de réprimer certains aspects de la politique agressive de l'Indonésie envers les Pays-Bas. Telles se présentent nos relations avec les Pays-Bas depuis la seconde guerre mondiale, en pleine période de décolonisation.

88. Après cette expérience, personne en Indonésie, et je l'espère dans cette auguste assemblée, ne peut considérer comme particulièrement généreuse l'attitude des Pays-Bas à l'égard des problèmes coloniaux. Je présume que M. Luns lui-même doit se sentir gêné de ce qu'il a dit de la nouveauté de la politique de décolonisation désintéressée des Pays-Bas, pour peu que l'on compare ses paroles avec ce qu'il a fait lui-même ces dernières années. J'y reviendrai.

89. En second lieu, si le Ministre des affaires étrangères est vraiment si généreux, d'idées si avancées en matière d'évolution humaine, que n'applique-t-il sa proposition aux colonies néerlandaises de Curaçao et de Surinam, qui attendent jour après jour d'être libérées de la servitude coloniale? Au lieu de cela, il a jugé à propos d'appliquer exclusivement sa proposition au territoire d'un Etat indépendant et souverain, à tout le moins d'un territoire en litige.

90. En troisième lieu, si les Pays-Bas adoptent une attitude généreuse dans la lutte contre le colonialisme, que ne donnent-ils leur appui au peuple de l'Algérie et de l'Angola, dont les fils se sacrifient par milliers dans une lutte héroïque pour la liberté?

91. Il est facile de voir que rien ne demeure de la générosité affichée par le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas.

92. On peut se demander pourquoi, dans ces conditions, les Pays-Bas font soudain leur proposition de prétendue décolonisation d'une partie du territoire indonésien, qu'ils ont réoccupée par la force, même avec l'offre tentante d'un paiement annuel de 30 millions de dollars. D'aucuns diront peut-être que c'est une grosse concession de la part des Pays-Bas. Non, cela n'a rien à voir avec une concession.

93. Tôt ou tard, les réalités de l'heure devaient contraindre le Gouvernement néerlandais à mettre un terme à sa vieille politique coloniale. Cependant, même à cet égard, les Pays-Bas ont du retard sur d'autres puissances coloniales: ne s'accrochent-ils pas à leurs colonies de Curaçao et de Surinam? Et quelles sont les réalités qui ont contraint le Ministre des affaires étrangères à se montrer généreux?

94. C'est, tout d'abord, la pression de l'opinion mondiale, qui réclame l'abolition du colonialisme partout, sous toutes ses formes et manifestations; ce qu'exprime la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. C'est, en deuxième lieu, le danger que les Pays-Bas se voient boutés hors de l'Irian occidental par les forces anticoloniales qui existent en Indonésie même. Car les forces anticoloniales d'Indonésie sont aujourd'hui matériellement en mesure (ce n'était pas le cas il y a quelques années) d'éliminer à bref délai de l'Irian occidental le colonialisme néerlandais.

95. En fait, quoi que nous puissions penser de la politique suivie par le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, nous lui devons, nombre d'entre nous aussi bien que moi, une expérience des plus instructives, sinon très constructive; à savoir que nous pouvons affronter et défaire la politique coloniale des Pays-Bas à condition d'appliquer notre force nationale dans sa totalité: politique, économique et militaire. C'est ce que nous appelons la politique du front total.

96. A regret, il nous a fallu affecter à l'achat d'armements une part appréciable de notre revenu national, laquelle en d'autres circonstances, aurait pu aller à la reconstruction nationale ou au bien-être social du peuple indonésien. Mais ce n'est que grâce à cette politique du front total que les Pays-Bas ont commencé à comprendre que leur occupation illégale de l'Irian occidental par la force armée pouvait prendre fin sous l'action des forces de l'Indonésie elle-même. Cette vérité, jointe à la pression qui s'exerce universellement pour la décolonisation, a créé, dans l'opinion néerlandaise, un climat propice à l'abandon de la domination néerlandaise en Irian occidental.

97. Les Pays-Bas ont dénoncé notre politique du front total comme une politique de force. A la lumière de l'histoire de la lutte indonésienne pour l'indépendance, l'Assemblée discerne pourtant sans peine, je l'espère, qui a eu recours à la coercition et à la répression, en vertu d'une supériorité militaire, de 1945 à 1949; qui a eu recours à la coercition et à la répression en réoccupant militairement l'Irian occidental; qui emploie des tactiques de coercition, de répression et d'intimidation en envoyant le porte-avions Karel Doorman dans les eaux indonésiennes. Ai-je besoin de poursuivre cette énumération?

98. En toute humilité, nous ne faisons que nous armer, parfois au prix de dures privations, pour protéger notre intégrité nationale contre les attaques et les mesures répressives d'une puissance coloniale, les Pays-Bas.

99. Nous avons donné maintes preuves de nos sentiments pacifiques, depuis 1954 jusqu'à 1957, année où nous avons demandé l'appui des Nations Unies. Mais nos projets de résolution, encore qu'approuvés à une majorité substantielle, n'ont pas obtenu la majorité requise, les deux tiers des voix. Nous étions donc seuls pour affronter la violence et les entreprises subversives d'une puissance coloniale. Que devons-nous faire? Nous soumettre humblement aux caprices de la politique étrangère des Pays-Bas? Nous ne le pouvions pas, nous ne le ferons pas.

100. Les 90 millions d'habitants de l'Indonésie ont leur fierté nationale et le sentiment de leur dignité. Ils ont proclamé leur indépendance le 17 août 1945 et l'ont défendue dans une guerre sans merci. Si la guerre anticoloniale a pris fin en 1949, ce n'est que parce que nous espérions, que nous étions sûrs, à cette époque, que le problème qui restait encore à résoudre avec les Pays-Bas pouvait l'être dans un esprit de bonne volonté et d'une manière pacifique. Nous avons toujours espéré que les Pays-Bas considéreraient l'abandon de leur dernier territoire colonial d'Indonésie comme le moyen d'améliorer les rapports humains, et non comme un échec dans leur vie nationale.

101. Nous n'aurions jamais pu imaginer que l'Irian occidental — la partie la moins explorée et la moins exploitée de l'Indonésie avec 700 000 habitants seulement — créerait un tel problème que l'Indonésie dût prendre les armes pour achever son indépendance.

102. Je sais que l'Assemblée n'a, jusqu'ici, pas toujours pu empêcher une puissance coloniale de faire usage de sa supériorité militaire contre les peuples colonisés ou anciennement colonisés. En revanche, j'espère sincèrement que l'Assemblée ne dénoncera pas, en le qualifiant de violence, le geste des peuples colonisés ou anciennement colonisés qui recourent aux armes contre les forces arrogantes et agressives d'une puissance coloniale.

103. A l'heure actuelle, pour des raisons que j'ai déjà indiquées, les Pays-Bas sont disposés à abandonner leur pouvoir en Irian occidental. Si l'on met vraiment à profit l'heureuse atmosphère politique qui nous a conduits à cette étape et si l'on désire sincèrement de part et d'autre résoudre ce litige, je crois que nous pourrions toujours parvenir à une formule transactionnelle.

104. Malheureusement, ce n'est pas ce que l'on fait. Au contraire, les Pays-Bas cherchent à tirer parti de cette atmosphère propice pour faire la sourde oreille aux légitimes revendications de l'Indonésie, ce qui ne fait qu'envenimer les rapports entre nos deux pays.

105. D'ailleurs, même en admettant qu'un compromis avec l'Indonésie n'intéresse pas les Pays-Bas, ils ne se comportent pas en Irian occidental comme M. Luns a cherché à l'exposer devant l'Assemblée.

106. S'il semble qu'il y ait, aux Pays-Bas, un climat favorable à l'abandon du pouvoir en Irian occidental, il n'en demeure pas moins que le nombre des expulsés a subitement augmenté. Au cours de la discussion générale [1030ème séance], j'ai dit que le nombre des réfugiés est d'une centaine par mois.

107. Il me faut corriger ce chiffre; en rentrant chez moi, à Djakarta, au mois d'octobre dernier, je me suis arrêté à Singapour et j'y ai rencontré 1 100 réfugiés transportés par bateau de l'Irian occidental à Djakarta. Et un autre bateau, chargé de plus de 1 000 passagers, se dirige maintenant vers Djakarta. La campagne anti-indonésienne en Irian occidental s'étend de foyer en foyer et s'accroît de jour en jour. Elle s'accompagne de violences physiques contre ceux qui osent élever la voix en faveur d'une réunion à la République d'Indonésie. Les autorités hollandaises hissent encore le prétendu drapeau national de l'Irian occidental et cherchent à lancer un hymne national, pour essayer de créer artificiellement les symboles de l'Irian occidental, Etat indépendant. Dans ce territoire, le hollandais a remplacé l'indonésien comme lingua franca.

108. Tels sont les faits réels, qui contrastent nettement avec les paroles mielleuses et conciliantes du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, qui nous dit que le peuple de l'Irian occidental aura toute liberté de s'associer à l'Indonésie.

109. Nous avons pensé que, si la population de l'Irian occidental avait ainsi liberté de choix, la campagne anti-indonésienne, l'expulsion de milliers d'habitants et la répression de ceux qui souhaitent l'association à la République d'Indonésie devraient au moins y prendre fin immédiatement. Lancer — je devrais même dire imposer — un prétendu drapeau national et un prétendu hymne national de l'Irian occidental, cela peut-il avoir un autre but que de préjuger, dans un sens trop évident, l'issue de ce prétendu choix?

110. Une fois de plus, je rappelle que, si les Pays-Bas recherchent un compromis avec l'Indonésie, s'ils veulent résoudre leur litige avec l'Indonésie, chacun devra faire des concessions. D'ores et déjà, je puis dire qu'un tel accord ne pourra pas se faire au prix d'une concession totale, soit de la part de l'Indonésie, soit de la part des Pays-Bas. Mais si nous sommes sincères de part et d'autre, je ne vois pas pourquoi nous ne trouverions pas une formule d'accord sur la question de l'autodétermination et celle de la compétence des Nations Unies.

111. Mais que se passe-t-il à l'heure actuelle? Le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas a complètement passé l'Indonésie sous silence au cours de la discussion générale, à la 1016ème séance de l'Assemblée. Il a complètement passé l'Indonésie sous silence dans le projet de résolution qu'il a déposé. Hier, nous avons été sensibles à l'obligeance qu'il a manifestée à notre égard en parlant de l'Indonésie comme d'une nation qui s'intéresserait peut-être au problème de l'Irian occidental. Mais, étant donné l'attitude des Pays-Bas en Irian occidental, j'hésite même à croire sincère cette allusion rapide et tardive à l'Indonésie. Je crois plutôt qu'elle répond au désir de paraître raisonnable dans cette enceinte internationale pour y rallier quelques voix.

112. Nous pensions que le Gouvernement néerlandais aurait profité de cette atmosphère propice pour sonder les réactions de l'Indonésie. S'il ne pouvait pas le faire directement, un autre pays se serait certainement trouvé pour faire les premiers sondages. A cet égard, le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas a trouvé un prétexte; je cite sa déclaration: "... Puisque l'Indonésie a rompu les relations diplomatiques avec les Pays-Bas et a même été jusqu'à refuser d'accepter la procédure normalement suivie en pareil cas, qui consiste à permettre à un pays tiers de représenter les intérêts néerlandais en Indonésie ..." [1049ème séance, par. 87].

113. C'est vrai, nous avons rompu les relations diplomatiques avec les Pays-Bas; quelques mois plus tard, après la tentative d'intimidation que représentait l'envoi du porte-avions Karel Doorman dans les eaux territoriales indonésiennes, nous avons décidé qu'il était temps de faire disparaître nos restes de rapports avec les Pays-Bas.

114. En Indonésie, les esprits sont tellement échauffés que la nation tout entière commence à exiger que nous nous préparions à nous mesurer une dernière fois avec les Pays-Bas, pour la défense de l'intégrité de notre territoire. Il semble que les Pays-Bas ne cesseront jamais de harceler l'Indonésie, ne cesseront jamais de livrer l'Indonésie à la subversion, ne cesseront jamais d'humilier l'Indonésie, du moins tant qu'ils se sentiront militairement supérieurs à l'Indonésie.

115. La guerre coloniale de 1945-1949 semble ne pas avoir suffi aux Pays-Bas. La création d'un mouvement séparatiste, qui a connu son apogée lors de la création de la République des Moluques méridionales, ne paraît pas avoir mis le point final à l'hostilité néerlandaise à l'égard de l'Indonésie. Aujourd'hui, les Pays-Bas se préparent à jouer le dernier acte du drame Indonésie-Pays-Bas en retranchant l'Irian occidental du reste de l'Indonésie.

116. Je ne me propose pas d'examiner en détail, au point où en est le débat, le projet néerlandais de résolution. Mais, pour donner aux délégués qui n'ont pas assisté aux sessions de 1954 à 1957 une idée claire de la question, je vais me permettre de rappeler certains faits.

117. Tout d'abord, l'Indonésie ne revendique le territoire d'aucun autre peuple. Tous les Indonésiens auraient honte si leur lutte contre le colonialisme dégénérait en expansionnisme et les amenait à coloniser un autre peuple. Les Indonésiens, sous la conduite du président Soukarno, non seulement luttent pour leur propre indépendance nationale, mais, je puis le dire en toute modestie, contribuent sans relâche à la lutte des autres peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique pour l'indépendance.

118. L'Irian occidental, que les Hollandais appellent Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, faisait partie des Indes orientales néerlandaises. C'est un fait historique. Constitutionnellement, les Pays-Bas eux-mêmes ont remplacé le nom "Indes orientales néerlandaises" par le nom "Indonésie", dans la Constitution du royaume des Pays-Bas.

119. On pourrait s'appuyer sur quantité de citations des déclarations officielles des Pays-Bas pour confirmer non seulement que l'Irian occidental fait partie intégrante de l'Indonésie, mais encore qu'il n'a jamais été question, au cours des pourparlers hollando-indonésiens qui ont abouti à un règlement pacifique^{7/}, de séparer de l'Etat indonésien la "résidence" administrative d'Irian occidental. Pour ne mentionner que quelques sources, le Gouvernement néerlandais a déclaré officiellement, dans le rapport qu'il a adressé aux Nations Unies sur l'Indonésie pour les années 1948 et 1949:

"L'Indonésie se compose d'une série de groupes d'îles, dans la région équatoriale, s'étendant depuis le littoral asiatique jusqu'à l'Australie. Les principaux groupes d'îles sont: les grandes îles de la Sonde (Java et Madoura, Sumatra, Bornéo et Célèbes et quelques autres petites îles adjacentes), les petites îles de la Sonde (Bali, Lombok, Sumbawa, Florès, Timor, Sumba, Roti et quelques autres petites îles), les Moluques et la Nouvelle-Guinée située à l'ouest du 141ème degré de longitude est^{8/}."

120. De plus, M. H. J. van Mook, alors gouverneur général de l'Indonésie, a déclaré, lors d'une conférence réunie par les Pays-Bas à Den Pasar (Bali), en 1946, pour discuter la formation du sous-Etat d'Indonésie orientale, qu'il "n'était nullement dans l'intention (des Pays-Bas) d'exclure la Nouvelle-Guinée de l'Indonésie".

121. Ainsi, il n'y avait pas le moindre doute, pour les parties intéressées, que l'ensemble de l'Indonésie, y compris l'Irian occidental, constituerait le territoire du nouvel Etat indépendant d'Indonésie, ce qui est d'ailleurs tout à fait logique et naturel. Confirmant cet accord, M. van Roijen, représentant des Pays-Bas au Conseil de sécurité, a déclaré le 22 décembre 1948, alors que le Conseil discutait de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie:

"Comme je l'ai expliqué dès le début, il ne s'agit pas, en fait, de savoir si oui ou non l'Indonésie doit devenir indépendante. Toutes les parties s'accordent pour dire que ce qui constituait jadis les Indes orientales néerlandaises doit devenir un Etat indépendant aussitôt que possible^{9/}."

122. Telle était en effet la base de l'accord conclu pour mettre fin à la guerre coloniale et reconnaître la création d'un nouvel Etat indépendant, l'Indonésie, qui comprendrait tout le territoire des anciennes Indes orientales néerlandaises.

123. Ainsi donc l'unité indonésienne a toujours été reconnue, malgré les différences ethniques et raciales de sa population, et par le Gouvernement néerlandais aussi. Dans son rapport officiel adressé aux Nations Unies, en 1948, au sujet de l'Indonésie, le Gouvernement néerlandais déclarait:

"Au point de vue racial, les populations indigènes peuvent être divisées en deux groupes: les Malais, à l'ouest, et les Papous, à l'est. Comme ces races se sont mélangées dans une grande mesure, elles ne sont pas séparées par des lignes de démarcation bien nettes^{10/}."

124. Puis, en décembre 1948, M. van Roijen, représentant des Pays-Bas au Conseil de sécurité, a donné d'autres précisions:

"... la population de l'Indonésie se compose d'environ 17 groupes ethniques et linguistiques principaux, qui, à leur tour, comprennent un nombre encore plus élevé de sous-groupes ... La vie en commun sous la Couronne des Pays-Bas a fait naître un sens de la nationalité indonésienne et la volonté d'établir un Etat indonésien ...^{11/}"

Ce qui n'est pas tout à fait exact, car, avant l'arrivée des Pays-Bas, il y avait un Etat encore plus grand, l'Empire de Çrividjaya, qui s'étendait vers l'est, depuis l'Afrique jusqu'à ce qui constitue actuellement l'Irian occidental, et même jusqu'à la partie orientale de l'île de Nouvelle-Guinée, et de la Thaïlande à l'océan indien.

125. Tous ces faits historiques sont bien connus de la plupart des membres de l'Assemblée, et hier encore [1049ème séance] le représentant de l'Arabie saoudite les a exposés de façon très lucide et très convaincante.

126. En fait, si l'on parle des groupes ethniques d'Asie sud-orientale, il y a aussi les groupements plus vastes: Mélanésiens à l'ouest et Polynésiens à l'est. Ces considérations de groupes raciaux n'ont bien entendu rien à voir avec l'indépendance de l'Indonésie qui nous intéresse ici. Ce qui compte, c'est que le peuple indonésien, à l'est comme à l'ouest, partout même, indépendamment de toutes les différences de races, constitue depuis des siècles une entité nationale et une nationalité indonésienne, comme les Pays-Bas eux-mêmes l'ont confirmé.

127. Après tout, je crois que la population de pratiquement tous les Etats nationaux est composée de divers groupes raciaux ou ethniques; en fait, on peut souvent y discerner des groupes raciaux très différents. Cela n'a rien d'étonnant, c'est dans l'ordre des choses.

128. C'est pourquoi les Pays-Bas agissent de façon mesquine et perverse en essayant de se servir des différences ethniques pour atteindre leurs objectifs politiques au détriment de l'Indonésie. Ils disent que les habitants de l'Irian occidental sont du type négrito, donc liés aux races d'Afrique, et devraient donc comme elles obtenir leur propre indépendance. Cette affirmation n'est pas seulement fausse; elle est très tendancieuse, sinon même insidieuse. Tout d'abord, on trouve les prétendus négritos d'Indonésie non seulement en Irian occidental, mais dans toute la partie orientale de l'Indonésie — les Moluques — et même dans des endroits isolés de Sumatra et de Java. Comme il était dit dans la déclaration officielle des Pays-Bas que j'ai déjà citée:

"Comme ces races se sont mélangées dans une très grande mesure, elles ne sont pas séparées par des lignes de démarcation bien nettes."

129. Si l'on veut tirer des arguments du facteur racial, il faudra noter que les Indonésiens ont d'étroits liens de race avec les habitants de la Malaisie et des Philippines. Nous parlons la même langue que la Fédération de Malaisie. Pourtant, je puis assurer l'Assemblée que l'Indonésie n'a jamais eu de revendication territoriale sur la Malaisie ou les Philippines. L'inverse est également vrai. Ce sont des Etats indépendants et souverains, et nous nous en réjouissons. Même dans la grande île de Bornéo (Kalimantan), dont le nord est territoire britannique, et dans la moitié de l'île de Timor, qui est portugaise, nous ne revendiquons aucun territoire. Nous ne considérons, en effet, comme l'Indonésie, comme le territoire indonésien, que l'ensemble du territoire de l'ancienne colonie des Indes orientales néerlandaises. C'est pourquoi nous ne revendiquons pas non plus la partie orientale de l'île de la Nouvelle-Guinée, qui est administrée par l'Australie.

130. L'Irian occidental, partie intégrante des anciennes Indes orientales néerlandaises, est évidemment territoire indonésien. Qualifier de revendication territoriale notre droit à l'Irian occidental est déformer de propos délibéré les faits et l'histoire, pour brouiller les cartes et justifier l'injustifiable occupation coloniale de ce territoire par les Pays-Bas.

131. Le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas a proclamé très haut le droit du peuple de l'Irian occidental à disposer de lui-même. Mais ce n'est pas en criant très fort que l'on change les faits de l'histoire. Il a essayé de faire oublier que le peuple de l'Irian occidental avait déjà exercé son droit à l'autodétermination, non pas comme groupe ethnique, comme les Pays-Bas le voudraient, mais comme partie intégrante de la nation indonésienne, qui, en 1945, comptait 70 millions de citoyens.

132. M. Luns a également laissé entendre que les habitants de l'Irian occidental n'avaient jamais combattu le colonialisme néerlandais d'Indonésie ou ne s'étaient jamais associés à cette lutte. Voyons les faits. Pendant la période coloniale, c'est en Irian occidental que les Pays-Bas ont installé leur tristement fameux camp de concentration, Boven Digul, où ils reléguaient les chefs politiques de l'Indonésie. Des milliers de combattants de la liberté ont vécu, relégués et misérables, dans ce camp de concentration, et des centaines d'entre eux sont morts de maladie ou à la suite de mauvais traitements. C'est ainsi que le sang de nombreux combattants indonésiens de la liberté a baigné l'Irian occidental. La population de l'Irian occidental savait fort bien ce que signifiait la lutte pour l'indépendance indonésienne et elle était étroitement associée à ce combat.

133. Aussi, quand l'Indonésie a proclamé son indépendance en 1945, la population de l'Irian occidental a immédiatement et activement participé à la défense de la République. Des partis politiques locaux se sont créés, dirigés par les Irianais eux-mêmes, comme le Partai Kemerdekaan Indonesia Irian (Parti irianais de l'Indonésie indépendante), dirigé par Silas Paparé. Mais, quand les forces néerlandaises ont réoccupé l'Irian occidental, la liberté politique a disparu et les dirigeants politiques ont été emprisonnés ou chassés du territoire.

134. Le peuple de l'Irian occidental n'a jamais voulu être séparé de l'Indonésie. Quand la Conférence patronnée par les Pays-Bas allait se réunir en 1946 à Den Pasar (Bali), sous la présidence de M. van Mook, alors lieutenant-gouverneur, ceux des dirigeants politiques qui se trouvaient encore là ont réclamé, le 12 décembre 1946, par un message aux autorités néerlandaises: premièrement, que l'Irian occidental ne soit pas exclu de la Fédération indonésienne et reste partie intégrante de l'Indonésie; deuxièmement, qu'un groupe représentatif de l'Irian occidental soit autorisé à se rendre à la Conférence de Den Pasar; troisièmement, que l'Irian occidental ne soit pas recolonisé. Ce message était signé de MM. C. M. Kré, M. Indey et N. Jouwé, tous habitants de l'Irian occidental. En fait, M. Indey est maintenant membre de la délégation néerlandaise dont il est le conseiller pour le présent débat.

135. Nous sommes heureux, à ce propos, de voir que les Pays-Bas ont amené ici des personnalités de l'Irian occidental et nous espérons, puisque nous en avons aussi dans notre propre délégation, que les uns et les autres seront autorisés à causer ensemble, à siéger ensemble, à sortir ensemble. Nous espérons que la délégation néerlandaise donnera pleine liberté à ces Irianais de rencontrer leurs compatriotes ici, à New York, sans cerbère, sans être surveillés par les Hollandais. Je dis cela parce que, malheureusement, quand ces délégués se sont rencontrés par hasard dans un restaurant et ont commencé à causer en amis, le cerbère hollandais a immédiatement payé l'addition sans même laisser finir leur repas aux Irianais de la délégation néerlandaise. On ne voulait pas que ces Irianais puissent se rencontrer, même s'ils venaient du même village. En ce qui nous concerne, nous permettons aux Irianais qui font partie de la délégation néerlandaise de prendre contact avec ceux de notre propre délégation. Nous sommes tout prêts à autoriser les Irianais de la délégation néerlandaise d'essayer de convaincre ceux qui font partie de notre propre délégation qu'ils doivent ou devenir un peuple indépendant ou faire partie des Pays-Bas. Nous voulons la liberté de contact et de mouvement entre les Irianais des deux délégations, d'autant plus qu'ils viennent des mêmes villages.

136. Je pourrais mentionner bien d'autres exemples d'opinions exprimées en Irian occidental en faveur du maintien de l'Irian dans la République d'Indonésie, et cela malgré les efforts non dissimulés que les Hollandais faisaient pour maintenir indéfiniment leur domination sur l'Irian occidental, tout particulièrement à la veille de la Conférence de la table ronde de La Haye, au second semestre de 1949. Je donnerai tous ces exemples en temps utile, s'il y a lieu.

137. Les dirigeants qui, dans le passé et récemment encore, ont été emprisonnés en Irian occidental, et notamment ceux qui ont été relégués dans le camp de concentration de Boven Digul — lequel existe toujours — pourraient aussi faire bien des révélations qui réfuteraient les allégations de M. Luns, selon lesquelles le peuple d'Irian occidental n'a jamais exprimé son désir de liberté. Cette allégation est, en fait, une insulte à l'intelligence et à la dignité du peuple de l'Irian occidental, et nous ne saurions l'accepter.

138. Il n'est toutefois pas surprenant d'entendre de telles déclarations de la part du porte-parole du Gouvernement néerlandais. Ce gouvernement n'a jamais accepté que des peuples qu'il préfère considérer comme retardés et non civilisés puissent exprimer leur désir de liberté. De telles déclarations de la part des gouvernements coloniaux sont aussi familières à mes amis d'Asie et d'Afrique qu'à nous-mêmes.

139. Pour toutes ces raisons, nous devons rejeter sans réserve le projet néerlandais tel qu'il se présente actuellement. Nous constatons que le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, au lieu de chercher une formule de compromis, tient à exploiter le mieux possible l'atmosphère propice qu'il y a dans son pays pour mettre la dernière touche à son hostilité envers l'Indonésie en séparant, sous le masque du généreux bienfaiteur qui dispense l'indépendance à des peuples coloniaux, le territoire de l'Irian occidental du reste de l'Indonésie.

140. Subitement, le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas déclare solennellement que les Pays-Bas ont la mission sacrée d'accorder la souveraineté à la population locale de l'Irian occidental et qu'il leur faut irrévocablement accomplir cette mission. Nous, qui avons récemment obtenu notre indépendance, nous connaissons très bien ce mythe de la "mission sacrée" des puissances coloniales. Le résultat de cette "mission sacrée" des Pays-Bas en Indonésie, au cours de 300 ans de domination sur les vastes empires autrefois prospères de Çrividjaya et de Matjopahit, le voici: quand les Pays-Bas ont quitté l'Indonésie, il n'y avait que 500 médecins, 200 avocats et 50 ingénieurs diplômés, pour une population de 70 millions d'habitants.

141. Quelle différence, maintenant qu'il y a une administration nationale! Avant la guerre, 750 000 enfants allaient à l'école primaire. Maintenant, ils sont environ 11 millions. Nous avons 11 universités, qui reçoivent 50 000 étudiants, comparés aux 200 étudiants d'avant la guerre. Et même maintenant, que font les Pays-Bas pour la population de l'Irian occidental? Au cours des 10 dernières années, il n'y a pas eu plus de trois étudiants de ce territoire qui aient réussi à accéder au niveau universitaire, alors que, même parmi les réfugiés d'Irian occidental qui viennent dans notre pays, il y a plus d'une douzaine d'étudiants d'université.

142. C'est dans ces possibilités d'épanouissement de la nature et de la dignité humaines que réside la différence essentielle entre une société nationale libre et une société coloniale. Cela nous pousse encore davantage à vouloir libérer le peuple de l'Irian occidental de cette injustice, de cette tragédie humaine.

143. Pour l'Indonésie, une chose au moins est claire: si les Pays-Bas font de la séparation de l'Irian occidental un fait accompli, s'ils proclament l'indépendance de ce territoire comme ils ont proclamé la République des Moluques méridionales, nous serons contraints de nous servir de tous les moyens dont nous disposerons pour rendre nulle une telle proclamation, même si cela signifie qu'il nous faut faire la guerre aux Pays-Bas. Tous les pays feraient de même. A la proclamation de l'indépendance d'une partie intégrante de notre territoire national, à l'instigation d'une puissance étrangère, nous répondrons par la force.

144. C'est parce que certains essaient d'abuser ainsi de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale qu'il y a à l'heure actuelle des troubles en Asie et en Afrique. Dès que, dans ces régions, des dissensions se produisent entre certains groupes, les puissances étrangères, et en particulier les anciennes puissances coloniales, cherchent toujours à favoriser les mouvements séparatistes. A vrai dire, il n'est pas difficile de créer ou de favoriser le séparatisme après plus de 10 ans d'occupation militaire. Ce n'est pas un phénomène limité aux pays d'Asie ou d'Afrique. Nous l'avons vu se produire également dans l'Europe occupée par les nazis, en application de la maxime: "Diviser pour régner". Je connais fort bien les Pays-Bas; et, si l'Indonésie avait la possibilité d'occuper ce pays pendant 10 ans, je puis assurer l'Assemblée qu'il ne nous serait pas difficile d'y créer trois Etats indépendants en employant la résolution 1514 (XV), mais en en déformant le sens. Même à l'heure actuelle, il y a dans certains pays d'Europe des tendances favorables à la sécession et au séparatisme. Toutefois, les puissances étrangères n'ont pas, d'une manière générale, exploité ces dissensions. Dans ces conditions, c'est véritablement un crime et une honte que les puissances coloniales puissent s'abuser de la résolution 1514 (XV) que lorsqu'il s'agit de nations d'Asie et d'Afrique. Ces nations ont déjà à faire face à bien des difficultés pour reconstruire et rebâtir leur pays. Si elles sont forcées par surcroît de faire face à la politique de séparatisme des puissances coloniales, les difficultés se multiplient alors — jusqu'à devenir peut-être impossibles à maîtriser.

145. En Indonésie, nous sommes décidés à relever ce défi — en employant de préférence des moyens pacifiques, des contacts directs ou la médiation directe de l'ONU. Si cela n'est pas possible, j'ose espérer que l'Assemblée ne privera pas les pays colonisés ou anciennement colonisés de leur droit d'user de tous les moyens dont ils disposent pour parfaire leur indépendance. Je ne demande pas ici aux Pays-Bas de faire preuve envers l'Indonésie d'une générosité qu'il ne lui ont jamais témoignée dans le passé. Ce qui a toujours, en effet, caractérisé leur politique, c'est une étroitesse de vues et une mesquinerie qui ont coûté à l'Indonésie, de 1945 à nos jours, plus d'un demi-million de vies humaines et d'indicibles souffrances. Ce que je veux, c'est faire appel au bon sens des Pays-Bas, ne serait-ce que dans leur propre intérêt national. Ne poussez pas trop loin votre haine de l'Indonésie, car nous avons notre fierté nationale. Et nous avons certainement les moyens, plus puissants qu'en 1945, de nous opposer à toute politique agressive et provocatrice de la part des Pays-Bas.

146. Pour terminer, je veux aussi m'adresser à mes collègues de l'Assemblée, et tout particulièrement à ceux des pays d'Asie et d'Afrique qui viennent, tout comme l'Indonésie, de recouvrer leur indépendance et leur souveraineté. On sait que l'Indonésie est un champion tenace de la lutte pour l'indépendance — dans quelque partie du monde qu'elle se déroule — et cela parfois au détriment de ses intérêts nationaux immédiats. Nous pouvons dire, en toute modestie, que nous avons apporté notre part à la lutte qui doit mettre fin au colonialisme. La lutte pour l'indépendance qui s'est déroulée en Asie a eu de profondes répercussions sur la lutte anticolonialiste qui se déroule en Afrique et a été pour elle un appui. Réciproquement, la lutte farouche et héroïque que les peuples africains et leurs dirigeants mènent pour l'indépendance nous aidera à éliminer le colonialisme, une fois pour toutes, de l'Asie.

147. Dans cette lutte commune contre le colonialisme, nous n'avons pas été divisés dans le passé; nous ne le serons pas dans l'avenir. Ce n'est qu'avec ce sentiment d'être unis, et la détermination de le rester, que nous nous avancerons dans notre énorme tâche: reconstruire, rebâtir, consolider notre nationalité. Quelles que puissent être les différences de nos conceptions particulières de politique intérieure ou extérieure, ne tombons pas dans les pièges de la politique coloniale de "Diviser pour régner". Nous devons encore faire face, même après avoir atteint l'indépendance, à des tentatives dangereuses de pénétration et de subversion venues de l'extérieur, sous l'étiquette politique, économique ou militaire. Et nous ne pouvons en avoir raison qu'en faisant efficacement échec à la politique de "Diviser pour régner".

148. L'Assemblée tout entière a, dans ce problème de l'Irian occidental, une lourde responsabilité. Il ne s'agit pas d'un problème de décolonisation, comme voudraient le faire croire les Pays-Bas, mais bel et bien d'un différend entre deux Etats souverains, l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas. Si l'Assemblée adopte le projet néerlandais [A/L.354], elle légitimera l'emploi de la force par la puissance coloniale pour réoccuper une partie de l'Indonésie; elle légitimera aussi par conséquent le droit de l'Indonésie à rejeter par la force les Pays-Bas de l'Irian occidental — donc, la guerre entre deux Etats souverains. Ce n'est pas une menace; ce n'est pas non plus un cliquetis de sabre. Mais tels sont les faits, telle est la conclusion à laquelle ils pourraient mener.

149. En vérité, les Indonésiens sont las de la guerre. Ils continuent à souffrir des séquelles de la guerre. Rien n'est plus cher à leur cœur que de vivre et de travailler dans la paix. Mais si une guerre coloniale nous est imposée, si nous n'avons pas d'autre choix que de reprendre les armes pour parfaire notre indépendance, nous ne reculerons pas devant cette responsabilité.

La séance est levée à 17 h 50.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite*)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite*):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. U ON SEIN (Birmanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: La question que nous débattons ici depuis une semaine environ est d'une importance primordiale pour nous et par conséquent pour l'humanité tout entière. Il s'agit du point 88 et de la partie a) du point 22; l'Assemblée a fort sagement décidé d'examiner ces deux questions ensemble. Nous savons tous qu'elles ont pour origine la résolution 1514 (XV), que l'Assemblée a adoptée il y a un an, presque jour pour jour, à une écrasante majorité. Les délégués n'ont pas oublié, j'en suis sûr, que mon pays était un des auteurs de cette résolution, avec plusieurs autres pays d'Asie et d'Afrique.

2. Au risque de répéter ce que l'on sait déjà, je me permets d'affirmer une fois de plus que ma délégation attache une très grande importance à cette résolution, qui s'intitule: "Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". Ma délégation considère cette résolution comme un monument qui marque un tournant dans l'histoire des pays coloniaux et dans l'histoire du monde. C'est en vérité la proclamation d'une ère nouvelle et ma délégation espérait ardemment que toutes les puissances coloniales y répondraient avec le même empressement. Un an après l'adoption de cette importante déclaration, il convient de se demander si elle a trouvé l'écho que nous espérions.

3. Voici le paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

La Déclaration s'applique aux territoires sous tutelle ainsi qu'aux territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires dépendants.

4. Comme nous le savons tous, le Tanganyika, le plus vaste des territoires sous tutelle, célébrera son indépendance le 9 décembre 1961. Ma délégation se réjouit à l'avance d'accueillir officiellement l'Etat souverain du Tanganyika, pendant la session actuelle de l'Assemblée générale, dans notre communauté mondiale. Le Samoa occidental, qui, si je ne me trompe, est le plus petit des territoires sous tutelle, deviendra également Etat indépendant à la fin de l'année. Nous avons déjà parmi nous les représentants de l'Etat indépendant du Sierra Leone; ma délégation est heureuse de leur adresser ses félicitations et ses vœux les plus chaleureux.

5. Le cas de ces divers pays montre de façon positive que certaines puissances coloniales donnent ou vont donner une réponse positive à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. La délégation birmane sait parfaitement ce que signifie l'indépendance et ce que signifie aussi l'asservissement colonial. Aussi partage-t-elle entièrement la joie, les espérances et l'enthousiasme de la population de ces Etats récemment apparus sur la scène mondiale. Pour exactement la même raison, elle ne peut pas oublier les souffrances et la détresse de ces millions d'êtres demeurés sous la domination coloniale en Afrique, en Asie et dans certaines régions de l'Amérique latine.

6. Il reste encore sous la domination étrangère plus de 50 millions d'êtres humains, répartis sur quelque 70 territoires. Au premier rang de ces territoires, citons l'Angola, l'Algérie, le Sud-Ouest africain, le Ruanda-Urundi, l'Irian occidental. Il me souvient à ce propos de ce que ma délégation déclarait l'an dernier, du haut de cette même tribune et sur le même sujet. Elle disait notamment:

"... si l'on retarde trop longtemps le processus d'accession à l'indépendance, un sentiment de frustration et de désespoir s'empare des esprits et engendre malheureusement la rancœur et la haine. Si un pays doit lutter trop longtemps pour son indépendance, des forces extrêmes apparaissent à la surface et prédominent, qui ne sont certainement pas de nature à favoriser la cause de la démocratie — but que la plupart d'entre nous recherchent — ni celle de l'amitié entre les nations^{1/}."

*Reprise des débats de la 1050^{ème} séance.

^{1/} Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quinzième session, Séances plénières, 930^{ème} séance, par. 9.

7. Au siècle où nous vivons, les preuves ne manquent pas de l'exactitude de cette maxime; citons par exemple la tragique situation de l'Angola, de l'Algérie et du Sud-Ouest africain. Ma délégation croit fermement que le haut idéal de paix et de tranquillité, de démocratie et de liberté, de justice et d'amitié sera inconcevable tant que le colonialisme et ses manifestations n'auront pas disparu. De l'avis de ma délégation, l'ensemble des événements actuels ne semble pas indiquer que toutes les puissances coloniales appliquent fidèlement les dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Il est prouvé qu'il y a encore des exterminations massives et des répressions violentes. Les injustices économiques et sociales s'y donnent libre cours. La haine et l'amertume sévissent partout.

8. Il est vraiment navrant que le colonialisme puisse engendrer une telle myriade de maux concomitants. Ma délégation estime que le colonialisme est actuellement une des principales causes, sinon la principale cause, de conflits internationaux. Cela ne fait de bien à personne; ma délégation est donc persuadée que, si elles ont un peu de bonne volonté et de prévenance, toutes les nations s'uniront contre le colonialisme. Nous espérons également que l'Assemblée générale voudra bien être le point de ralliement où nous prendrons toutes les mesures possibles pour mettre fin au colonialisme.

9. Il est fort heureux, à notre avis, que nous examinions aujourd'hui où en est l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. L'Assemblée générale devrait faire tous ses efforts pour défendre les principes proclamés dans cette déclaration. Ma délégation presse instamment toutes les puissances coloniales de montrer un peu de prévoyance et de bonne volonté, de prouver qu'elles savent lire les signes des temps, non dans l'intérêt de tel ou tel secteur de la communauté mondiale, mais dans celui de toute la famille des nations, dont elles font elles aussi partie.

10. On a beaucoup parlé de la date de l'indépendance. Les opinions diffèrent à ce sujet. Pour sa part, ma délégation rejette d'emblée la thèse très souvent soutenue par certaines puissances, et qui voudrait que telle ou telle nation ne soit pas prête ou mûre pour l'indépendance, parce qu'elle manquerait de personnel qualifié, etc., etc. Après tout, c'est en forgeant qu'on devient forgeron. Il est bien évident que, dans tout pays colonisé, il y aura peu de gens instruits dans l'art de gouverner, pour la simple raison que, pendant de nombreuses années, ces pays ont été gouvernés par des puissances étrangères. Inutile de répéter ici que les habitants des pays colonisés ont leur propre conscience nationale et savent ce qui leur convient le mieux. C'est pourquoi ma délégation se prononce en faveur de l'indépendance sans délai pour tous les pays qui sont sous la domination étrangère.

11. S'il m'est permis de me résumer, ma délégation est prête à appuyer toute proposition qui aurait les objectifs suivants: premièrement, renforcer autant qu'il est possible les principes énoncés dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale; deuxièmement, faciliter dans toute la mesure possible l'extinction du colonialisme dans toutes ses manifestations; troisièmement, indiquer certaines dispositions qui faciliteraient l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) ou pourraient y contribuer.

12. C'est en fonction de ce que je viens de dire que ma délégation prend position à l'égard des divers projets de résolution dont nous sommes saisis.

13. M. BITSIOS (Grèce): On nous demande souvent, à nous Grecs, si, parmi les concepts et les institutions politiques que nos ancêtres ont légués à l'humanité, il faut aussi compter le concept de la colonisation.

14. Dans le bassin méditerranéen et au-delà, vers les côtes de la mer Noire et vers le continent asiatique, bien des villes célèbres par leur histoire et par leur civilisation portent des noms grecs et nous fournissent ainsi le témoignage que la notion de la colonisation n'était pas étrangère à la Grèce antique. Cependant, pour qu'il n'y ait pas de confusion, il me faut ajouter tout de suite que la Grèce a donné l'indépendance à ses colonies bien avant l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], dont l'application fait aujourd'hui l'objet de nos débats. En d'autres termes, nous avons donné le bon exemple, il y a 2 000 ans. Mais ce qui est encore plus important, c'est que nos ancêtres ont conçu le colonialisme surtout comme une projection de leur rayonnement culturel et de leur civilisation. Ils ont transplanté, dans les territoires colonisés, les richesses de leur pensée, de leur libéralisme, de leurs institutions démocratiques. Ils ont ainsi réussi à faire de leurs colonies des centres de civilisation aussi rayonnants que la métropole elle-même. Voici un autre exemple qui, bien souvent, n'a pas été imité par les colonisateurs contemporains.

15. Cette référence à un passé un peu trop éloigné n'eut qu'un seul but: celui de mieux souligner, par l'évocation des traditions qui empreignent notre pensée, la position favorable de ma délégation à l'égard des tendances qui se dessinent au cours de la seizième session de l'Assemblée, quant à la façon dont la résolution adoptée au cours de la dernière session sera appliquée. Notre tâche consiste dorénavant à mieux définir, là où il y a lieu, le principe énoncé dans le texte de cette résolution et à consacrer les mesures pratiques qui assureront son application.

16. L'autre jour [1048ème séance], le distingué représentant de Ceylan, dans son très éloquent et très constructif discours, a posé la question de savoir si, l'histoire suivant son cours, nous assisterions à l'extinction du colonialisme, même si l'ONU s'abstenait de formuler les principes qui doivent mener à l'indépendance des pays colonisés. Il est d'autre part vrai que la Charte des Nations Unies consacre ses chapitres XI et XII, à la rédaction desquels ont collaboré les puissances coloniales, aux territoires non autonomes et aux territoires sous tutelle.

17. Ces considérations n'ôtent, aux yeux de ma délégation, rien de la valeur et de la nécessité des efforts entrepris par cette assemblée pour établir un programme plus systématisé concernant, en premier lieu, le rôle qui incombera à notre organisation au cours de la période qui s'écoulera jusqu'à l'extinction du colonialisme.

18. En effet, le temps n'est pas si loin — et les chapitres XI et XII faisaient alors, comme aujourd'hui, partie de notre charte — où cette assemblée était empêchée, par les règles des majorités requises, de dépêcher au peuple chypriote le message que, selon notre charte, il avait droit à son indépendance.

19. Voilà pourquoi nous jugeons nécessaire, indispensable, la consécration d'un programme régissant la marche vers la décolonisation et établissant le rôle des Nations Unies.

20. J'ai déjà dit qu'à notre avis les tâches de cette assemblée sont à présent au nombre de deux: la première est de mieux définir, là où il y a lieu, les principes contenus dans le texte de la résolution 1514 (XV); la seconde est de tomber d'accord sur les mesures pratiques qui assureront son application.

21. En ce qui concerne les principes, ma délégation estime qu'il est d'une importance primordiale d'affirmer que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance doit être appliquée à tous les peuples du monde qui revendiquent leur droit à l'indépendance ou leur droit de décider eux-mêmes de leurs institutions politiques et sociales; car la notion de la liberté est et doit rester indivisible.

22. Ma délégation pense aussi que les termes indépendance et liberté employés par les rédacteurs de la résolution devront être par la suite clarifiés. Avec un réalisme frappant, le représentant de Ceylan nous a démontré, dans le discours que je viens de mentionner, que la souveraineté n'est pas la forme exclusive de l'indépendance. L'annexe d'une autre résolution, la résolution 1541 (XV), contient en effet certains principes qui doivent prendre leur place dans le texte complété de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette annexe stipule notamment [principe VI] que l'on peut dire qu'un territoire non autonome a atteint la pleine autonomie: a) quand il est devenu Etat indépendant et souverain; b) quand il s'est librement associé à un Etat indépendant; c) quand il s'est intégré à un Etat indépendant.

23. Une condition préalable est cependant nécessaire pour sanctionner ces solutions dans chaque cas spécifique: la volonté de la population du territoire en cause, exprimée librement et par des moyens démocratiques. Ce sont les principes VII et IX de l'annexe à la résolution 1541 (XV), principes qui, comme je l'ai dit, devront être incorporés au texte complété de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance.

24. Un troisième principe qui doit être défini plus clairement est celui contenu au paragraphe 3 de la Déclaration. Il y est dit:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

25. C'est un principe juste dans le contexte des responsabilités de la puissance administrante. Mais il est de la responsabilité de notre organisation de veiller à ce que la communauté internationale entreprenne, elle, le soin d'assister les populations qui accèdent à l'indépendance sans avoir atteint un degré suffisant de développement, surtout dans le domaine économique. En ce sens, l'initiative prise, en 1960, par la délégation des Etats-Unis^{2/}, quand elle nous a demandé d'envisager un programme pour le développement économique de l'Afrique, devra, pendant cette session, retenir toute notre attention et aboutir à l'élaboration par l'Assemblée de propositions concrètes dans ce sens.

26. En ce qui est de la méthode, c'est-à-dire des mesures pratiques concernant l'application de la Déclaration, ma délégation estime qu'il importe de procéder avec réalisme, avec le souci de ne rien préconiser qui soit irréalisable. La hâte, la précipitation ne feraient qu'affaiblir sa valeur morale. Dorénavant, à côté des cas où, de toute évidence, la solution applicable sera l'indépendance souveraine, nous nous trouverons, par la nature des choses, devant d'autres cas où, en raison par exemple du nombre très limité des habitants ou de l'exigüité des ressources économiques, des solutions spéciales, nécessitant un processus parfois plus lent, devront être recherchées. Dans cet ordre d'idées, nous pensons que les auteurs de la résolution 1514 (XV) ont sagement agi en ne fixant pas, dans leur texte, une date limite pour l'indépendance de tous les territoires sous régime colonial, sans distinction. Une date trop rapprochée risquerait de se révéler inopérante. Une date éloignée serait un message décourageant pour certaines populations qui sont en droit d'aspirer à l'indépendance immédiate, et encouragerait peut-être certains milieux à retarder le processus de développement d'autres peuples qui n'ont pas encore atteint un degré suffisant de maturité.

27. Nous pensons également qu'une ligne de conduite devra être soigneusement étudiée pour permettre aux Nations Unies de veiller à l'application des principes qu'elles ont adoptés quant à la décolonisation, tout en évitant une ingérence trop directe de leur part dans le domaine des responsabilités des puissances administrantes, surtout dans la mesure où une telle ingérence provoquerait des anomalies et par conséquent retarderait l'accomplissement de nos objectifs. La délégation hellénique est convaincue que nos débats sur cette importante question, et les décisions que nous serons amenés à prendre, contribueront positivement au progrès du monde et au raffermissement de l'ordre et de la paix internationale. Plus que toute chose, elle souhaite que les milieux dirigeants de certains pays rapprochent leur politique de ce qui constitue la conviction, le credo unanime des membres de cette assemblée. Aucune formule fictive et irréaliste n'a pu résister aux impératifs de l'histoire. La voie vers l'indépendance de tous les territoires qui ne bénéficient pas encore de ce bienfait suprême est maintenant grande ouverte. Ceci a été rendu possible par l'attachement des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies aux principes de l'égalité des êtres humains, du respect de leur droit de décider eux-mêmes de leur destinée, de leur droit de vivre sous le système politique et social de leur propre choix. Ceci a été aussi rendu possible par l'esprit de compréhension, de réalisme et d'adaptation qui a caractérisé la ligne de conduite de certaines puissances coloniales. Rendons-leur ce qui leur est dû.

28. Ayant ainsi défini la position de la délégation hellénique sur le problème de l'application de notre déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, je désire réserver notre droit d'intervenir de nouveau dans ce débat quand les divers projets de résolution seront examinés en détail.

29. M. BRUCAN (Roumanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Depuis la seconde guerre mondiale, plus d'un million d'êtres humains se sont libérés de la domination coloniale ou semi-coloniale et ont pris le chemin de l'indépendance.

30. Voici 15 ans à peine, la plupart des pays d'Asie étaient des colonies ou semi-colonies; il y a trois ans, l'Afrique était encore un continent en majeure partie colonial. Aujourd'hui le colonialisme agonise; malgré sa résistance désespérée, plus rien ne peut en écarter le coup fatal. Ces transformations majeures, qui se reflètent de plus en plus dans la composition de l'Assemblée, n'ont aucun précédent dans l'histoire du monde.

31. Il est essentiel de comprendre la pleine signification de ce phénomène mondial, et de connaître les facteurs qui l'ont provoqué et déclenché. C'est essentiel, car, si nous comprenons mieux les dimensions internationales de l'effondrement du colonialisme, et si nous comprenons mieux les facteurs qui l'ont déclenché, nous saurons mieux définir les meilleures méthodes et le rythme qui convient le mieux pour mener à bonne fin la décolonisation. Il est tout aussi important d'avoir une idée juste des forces qui s'opposent à ce que les peuples coloniaux obtiennent la liberté et l'indépendance. Nous verrons ainsi plus nettement les obstacles qui se dressent sur le chemin et les moyens de les abattre.

32. Après tout, si nous voulons mener à bon terme cette histoire de décolonisation, c'est naturellement sur les forces qui ont abattu le colonialisme que nous devons nous appuyer — et non pas sur les forces qui ont essayé et qui essaient encore, avec l'énergie du désespoir, d'en maintenir l'existence. Ce sont des vérités bien banales, mais il faut bien rappeler les truismes quand certains les mettent en doute.

33. L'indépendance politique est avant tout le résultat de la lutte que les populations mènent pour rejeter la domination impérialiste, et non pas le résultat d'une persuasion amicale exercée sur l'opprimeur. Nous en avons par-dessus la tête d'entendre les colonialistes prétendre que c'est grâce à leur générosité et leur grandeur d'âme que tant de pays ont pu devenir indépendants. Si les mouvements de libération nationale avaient accepté la thèse que l'on obtient l'indépendance en la mendiant aux impérialistes, la main tendue, très peu vraiment de délégations asiatiques et africaines siégeraient aujourd'hui à l'Assemblée.

34. La vérité, c'est que les colonialistes n'ont jamais donné et ne donneront jamais l'indépendance à aucun pays en cadeau de Noël. C'est la lutte des populations, c'est leur volonté d'être libres, c'est la condamnation universelle du colonialisme dénoncé comme la faute et la honte de notre temps, et c'est surtout la pression exercée par l'énorme masse des forces anti-impérialistes qui ont brisé le colonialisme.

35. C'est l'unité, la lutte commune des Etats anti-coloniaux au sein de l'ONU qui ont donné sa force à la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux; c'est l'échec des tactiques colonialistes de division qui a permis d'adopter cette déclaration à la quasi-unanimité.

36. Cette victoire marquait un grand progrès dans l'histoire de l'ONU. N'oublions pas que, jusque-là, c'est-à-dire jusqu'en décembre 1960, les puissances coloniales avaient réussi à rendre l'ONU pour le moins neutre dans le conflit entre colonialisme et peuples asservis. N'oublions pas — pour ne citer qu'un exemple frappant — que la République sud-africaine a réussi pendant de longues années à obtenir la bénédiction des Nations Unies, malgré nos protestations, pour sa tutelle du Sud-Ouest africain.

37. Après tout, ce n'est pas par hasard que les puissances coloniales se sont abstenues de voter la Déclaration en question. Cette abstention avait deux significations, qui devraient être deux leçons pour ceux qui ont encore des illusions sur la nature du colonialisme: d'abord que les puissances impérialistes résistent obstinément à l'octroi de l'indépendance aux peuples coloniaux; ensuite que, lorsque les forces anticolonialistes de l'ONU font bloc, les colonialistes n'osent pas les affronter directement et doivent battre en retraite.

38. Ce n'est qu'en gardant ces deux leçons à l'esprit que les Nations Unies peuvent avec succès mener à bonne fin les principales tâches que leur assigne la Déclaration, et avant tout la libération des peuples encore asservis à l'étranger.

39. Les précédents orateurs ont déjà longuement décrit l'attitude des alliés colonialistes, qui mettent tout en œuvre pour sauver de la désintégration complète le système colonial, et pour se maintenir en Afrique, leur dernier bastion.

40. Je voudrais, pour ma part, m'occuper de ce qui est au cœur de la politique colonialiste, c'est-à-dire de l'exploitation éhontée de toutes les ressources naturelles des peuples "colonisés", qui fournissent aux monopoles occidentaux des bénéfices fabuleux. C'est la protection de ces intérêts acquis et leur conservation par tous les moyens qui dictent la plus impitoyable des politiques coloniales, les répressions les plus brutales et les guerres coloniales les plus sanglantes, qui menacent la paix et la sécurité internationales.

41. Prenez par exemple les intrigues des colonialistes au Katanga, et le rôle joué dans cette sale affaire par un Etat voisin du Katanga, la Rhodésie du Nord. Ce n'est pas par hasard que sir Roy Welensky est devenu le plus proche allié de Moïse Tshombé. Le 7 octobre 1961, l'Economist, hebdomadaire londonien, a, dans l'article intitulé: "The brass behind the copper", révélé les motifs cachés de cette étroite association entre les deux partisans du colonialisme.

42. L'Economist nous dit que le Katanga et la Rhodésie du Nord fournissent à eux deux un cinquième de la production mondiale de cuivre, et que cette industrie minière est aux mains de quatre grands groupes: Anglo-American Corporation, Rhodesian Selection Trust, Tanganyika Concessions, et British South Africa Company. Pour n'oublier personne, rappelons que l'Union minière belge a des intérêts dans ces groupes, et notamment dans les Tanganyika Concessions, dont le conseil d'administration compte plusieurs Belges. Mais le président du Conseil d'administration est un ancien ministre du Gouvernement britannique — le capitaine Charles Waterhouse. Il appartient donc à l'"Establishment", dont il personifie les deux fonctions: faire de la politique et faire de l'argent.

43. Quant aux profits qu'extraient de l'Afrique ces gros monopoles, l'Economist nous en donne un chiffre éloquent: la British South Africa Company a gagné au cours des cinq dernières années, au seul titre des redevances, 150 millions de dollars, soit 30 millions de dollars par an. Qu'est-ce que ces redevances? En vertu de l'accord signé en 1895 entre la British South Africa Company et les chefs africains, la Compagnie reçoit une redevance sur chaque tonne de minerai extraite du sol. C'est là du pur colonialisme, et je n'ai pas besoin d'expliquer plus longuement pourquoi les colonialistes britanniques ont pris une part si active aux récents événements du Katanga.

44. Une situation analogue s'observe dans les colonies portugaises. Dans le Mozambique, les industries de base, charbonnages de Moatize, coton et thé sont aux mains d'une compagnie qui appartient à des Britanniques. Les gisements d'uranium de Tete appartiennent à la British South Africa Company, et le charbon de Moxico, en Angola, appartient au groupe Krupp, d'Allemagne occidentale. Les chemins de fer de Benguela appartiennent à la British American Belgian Company et aux Tanganyika Concessions. L'industrie des mines de diamant d'Angola est aux mains des trusts américains, tandis que la bauxite est entre des mains françaises. C'est la Standard Oil and Gulf, dont il est inutile de rappeler la nationalité, qui est chargée de la mise en valeur des ressources pétrolières.

45. Bref, les capitaux britanniques, américains, belges, ouest-allemands et français s'allient aux capitaux portugais dans le pillage colonialiste de l'Angola et du Mozambique. En Algérie, l'American Standard Oil et la British Royal Dutch partagent avec la Compagnie française des pétroles l'exploitation du pétrole saharien. On pourrait dire que c'est la raison d'être de l'OTAN.

46. De très riches ressources naturelles, les salaires très bas payés aux Africains, tout cela promet aux investissements occidentaux des profits sans précédent, même selon les normes coloniales. Une étude du Congrès des Etats-Unis montre que le capital américain investi en Afrique rapporte en moyenne 30%, alors que pour tout autre capital américain investi à l'étranger, le taux ne dépasse pas 26%. Des primes aussi extraordinaires sont irrésistibles pour les gens du groupe Rockefeller. Ils viennent de saisir un tiers des stocks des Tanganyika Concessions, et ont obtenu par ce détour de très gros intérêts dans l'Union minière du Haut Katanga.

47. Et les Africains? Les statistiques relatives aux Africains donnent des chiffres d'une tout autre nature. En Algérie, environ 800 000 Algériens ont trouvé la mort dans la guerre coloniale, au cours des sept dernières années. En Angola, plus de 50 000 habitants ont été tués en 1960 et 1961, et, comme la presse l'a rapporté, les colons portugais ont l'intention de massacrer encore 100 000 Angolais. Plus de 20 000 habitants du Kenya ont été tués ces dernières années au cours de répressions massives. Voilà pour les statistiques africaines. Autrement dit, pendant que les compagnies occidentales se font des bénéfices, les compagnies africaines se font trouer la peau. Telle est la division du travail dans le monde moderne.

48. Voilà le vrai visage du colonialisme, aucune belle parole ne pourra le rendre reluisant.

49. Passons maintenant à la question de l'Irian occidental.

50. Un trait spécial de la décolonisation en cours, c'est la complexité des formes de lutte et de tactique que les colonisateurs emploient pour sauvegarder leurs possessions ou du moins une partie d'entre elles.

51. Pour atteindre leurs buts, les colonialistes font grand usage de tout ce qui est anachronique et maintenu artificiellement: le système tribal, les conflits intertribaux, l'ignorance, la superstition. Ils divisent volontairement des unités ethniques compactes en groupes distincts, ils isolent les uns des autres des parties de tribu ou de nationalité, ils brisent les liens économiques et historiques, ils divisent les communautés ethniques et linguistiques.

52. Tant que les puissances coloniales maintiennent leur domination sur un territoire, elles s'efforcent par tous les moyens de conserver l'intégrité du territoire. Jamais, pendant les siècles d'occupation hollandaise de l'Indonésie, les colonialistes n'ont remarqué que l'Irian occidental aurait dû avoir un statut distinct pour les raisons qu'ils soulignent maintenant. Mais, dès qu'il leur a fallu accorder l'indépendance à l'Indonésie, ils ont subitement exagéré et exacerbé tous les éléments possibles de division pour empêcher le nouveau gouvernement d'affirmer son autorité sur l'ensemble du territoire, et pour séparer finalement de ce territoire indépendant une partie qui aurait un gouvernement spécial, dirigé par eux. Telle est l'histoire de l'Irian occidental.

53. Mais quel droit a donc la puissance coloniale de conserver un morceau du territoire d'un pays qui a conquis son indépendance? L'Irian occidental appartient à l'Indonésie; la seule chose que les Pays-Bas aient à faire, c'est le laisser tranquille. Ce n'est pas l'affaire des Pays-Bas ni de personne d'autre de s'occuper de l'Irian occidental. C'est l'affaire de l'Indonésie, dont il constitue une part inaliénable.

54. La délégation roumaine appuie donc très fortement la position de l'Indonésie dans ses justes prétentions sur l'Irian occidental.

55. Notre opinion dûment réfléchie, c'est que 1962 doit être l'année de l'indépendance pour tous les territoires et pour tous les peuples qui sont encore colonisés, comme l'a proposé la délégation soviétique dans son projet de résolution [A/L.355].

56. Nous appuierons de tout cœur les mesures proposées par l'Union soviétique et nous estimons qu'il faut les prendre de toute urgence pour assurer très vite la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration.

57. Puisqu'à la Conférence de Belgrade les chefs d'un bon nombre de pays indépendants d'Asie et d'Afrique, hommes politiques experts en colonialisme, sont arrivés à la conclusion que 1962 devrait marquer la fin du joug colonialiste, cela devrait convaincre tout le monde non seulement que cet objectif est politiquement et moralement urgent, mais encore qu'il est pratiquement très accessible.

58. Oui, il est accessible, pourvu que les forces qui ont accéléré la décolonisation ces dernières années demeurent unies.

59. Prenez par exemple l'Afrique. En deux ans seulement, 1960 et 1961, 20 nouveaux territoires, peuplés au total de près de 100 millions d'habitants, sont devenus indépendants. Pourquoi donc, au nom du ciel, faudrait-il attendre une dizaine d'années pour libérer les 50 millions de gens qui vivent encore asservis de l'étranger? C'est une question de simple calcul. Mais qui pourrait donc prétendre que les Algériens, les Angolais, les Kényens ne sont pas prêts à l'indépendance ou y sont moins prêts que ceux qui l'ont déjà obtenue?

60. Non, l'histoire et l'expérience même de l'ONU ont réfuté, et réfutent encore tous les jours, les prétextes d'immaturité politique ou économique que les colonialistes inventent pour excuser leur lenteur à accorder l'indépendance. Ce sont la liberté et l'indépendance qui favorisent et accélèrent le développement politique et économique d'une nation, et non pas l'esclavage et l'oppression.

61. Quant aux facteurs et aux forces qui ont contribué à accélérer la décolonisation, ces facteurs et ces forces se manifestent avec plus de vigueur que jamais. Ils sont plus nombreux que jamais. Ils sont plus unis que jamais. D'ailleurs, les peuples encore asservis d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine ont le droit d'attendre de ceux qui sont récemment sortis victorieux de ce grand combat, c'est-à-dire les nouveaux Etats indépendants d'Afrique, qu'ils soient un facteur accélérateur de la décolonisation. Après tout, le grand objectif de ce processus n'est pas seulement la libération des peuples encore asservis, mais c'est aussi la décolonisation complète et totale — économique, politique, culturelle et militaire — des territoires qui ne sont parvenus à l'indépendance qu'à une date récente.

62. La question n'est donc pas de savoir si, dans un avenir plus ou moins éloigné, le colonialisme sera aboli. Les colonialistes eux-mêmes savent qu'il le sera. On ne devrait même pas s'étonner de les entendre le dire. La véritable question dont s'occupe l'Assemblée, c'est de libérer d'urgence les peuples coloniaux: de mettre fin aux guerres coloniales qui se déroulent en Algérie, en Angola et ailleurs: d'arrêter le massacre des populations innocentes et l'interne abusif des dirigeants politiques; de mettre fin une fois pour toutes au régime féroce de la discrimination raciale, et de prendre des mesures immédiates pour remettre tous les pouvoirs au peuple des territoires coloniaux et des territoires sous tutelle. Voilà ce que les malheureuses populations esclaves d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine attendent de l'Assemblée. Voilà ce que nous devons faire.

63. Le PRESIDENT: Je n'ai plus d'orateurs inscrits pour cet après-midi, mais je me dois d'informer l'Assemblée qu'il reste encore à entendre 42 orateurs pour le débat général sur la présente question.

64. Etant donné les travaux de la Première Commission et étant donné que nous ne pourrions disposer que de quatre séances au cours de cette semaine, il m'apparaît nécessaire de tenir des séances de nuit, de façon à pouvoir terminer, le plus rapidement possible, le débat général sur cette question. Nous aborderons ainsi, dans le meilleur délai, la discussion des projets de résolution et aurons le temps de discuter des deux grandes questions qui restent à notre ordre du jour. Compte tenu de ces circonstances, je vous propose donc de tenir demain, mercredi et jeudi des séances de nuit.

65. En conséquence, je prie les orateurs qui se sont fait inscrire de bien vouloir prendre leurs dispositions pour prendre la parole dès que possible.

La séance est levée à 16 h 25.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. M. NORIEGA (Colombie) [traduit de l'espagnol]: La quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale a commencé, comme tous les représentants s'en souviennent, avec les acclamations et les applaudissements qui fêtaient l'admission à l'Organisation des 16 nouveaux Etats africains et de la République de Chypre. L'allégresse des nouvelles nations, qui s'était communiquée à toute l'Assemblée, était parfaitement justifiée: un événement d'une importance primordiale venait de s'accomplir. Mais cet événement ne devait rien à la génération spontanée, ni au hasard, ni à des pressions momentanées, ni à la poussée de réclamations prématurées. C'était le point culminant d'un processus, ce processus irréluctable de libération des peuples asservis, qui deviendra dans l'histoire, comme c'est déjà un lieu commun de le répéter, le trait caractéristique de notre époque.

2. S'agissant des deux questions en discussion, je voudrais faire une sommaire analyse de ce processus en insistant sur la tâche accomplie par les trois protagonistes du drame: les peuples qui ont lutté et luttent encore pour leur indépendance, les puissances qui se chargeaient ou se chargent encore de les administrer, et enfin les Nations Unies.

3. De vieilles nations avaient acquis au cours des siècles certaines suprématies dans les domaines de l'esprit et du progrès matériel; cela suscitait chez elles une vocation d'empire, également signe de leur temps; il leur était naturel d'ajouter à leurs suprématies la domination sur de nombreux autres territoires. L'aventure engendrée par les découvertes et les conquêtes d'autrefois et que l'on appelle la colonisation européenne était un phénomène d'expansion, normal chez les pays qui font leur crise de croissance.

4. Si nous envisageons la colonisation comme un événement historique, nous concluons de ce premier aperçu que certains la critiquent comme un mal en soi et que d'autres tentent de la justifier avec des notions comme celles d'"intelligence plus mûre" ou de "nations avancées", au risque de choquer certaines susceptibilités. Je crois inutile d'ouvrir ici une querelle rétrospective sur la genèse de la colonisation sous prétexte d'en rechercher les causes. Considérons-la comme un fait et suivons-en le cours pendant ces derniers siècles.

5. La rivalité de forces où se débattaient les nations européennes au début de la colonisation explique que chaque territoire nouvellement conquis ait d'abord été considéré comme un simple apport à la puissance du conquérant. Avec ce critère, on a vu tant de fois s'estomper le sens profond de l'entreprise civilisatrice (parfois même, il n'y avait aucun sens de ce genre), que les colonies ont fini par être considérées comme un objet d'exploitation économique, si cupide et si brutale que non seulement les richesses naturelles, mais même les êtres humains sont devenus objets de troc et de commerce. C'est aujourd'hui un anachronisme que de rappeler le temps où l'on discutait pour savoir si les aborigènes des territoires conquis avaient à quelque titre des droits qui méritaient d'être respectés par les conquérants. Ce qui est grave dans le passif de la colonisation, ce n'est pas que l'on ait ouvert cet étrange débat, c'est qu'il était absolument nécessaire, nécessaire au point qu'il marquait un progrès, le commencement de la mobilisation de la conscience chrétienne du monde occidental, en l'incitant à étudier ce qui s'est appelé plus tard l'aspect moral de la colonisation.

6. Quand on fait allusion aux souffrances indubitables qu'apporte la colonisation et si l'on veut entreprendre une étude impartiale et intègre, il ne faut pas oublier ceci: les pays conquérants, les pays métropolitains eux-mêmes, dont la cupidité inhumaine envers les colonies résultait surtout de la rivalité féroce entre gouvernements, sont ceux-là même où prirent naissance les courants d'opinion qui plaidaient pour les droits des peuples colonisés et qui condamnaient les pratiques abusives des gouvernements. On ne peut oublier, surtout aujourd'hui en réponse aux attaques inconsidérées lancées à la Quatrième Commission, que l'Eglise catholique eut l'honneur de prendre l'initiative de la campagne en faveur des aborigènes des terres conquises: il y eut des statuts édictés par le pape, des études techniques écrites par des religieux éminents, l'abnégation et le sacrifice héroïque d'une foule de missionnaires. Rappelons que Vitoria, dans la première moitié du XVI^e siècle, déclarait que le gouvernement des colonies devait s'exercer dans certaines limites, de manière à servir le bien-être et les intérêts des Indiens, et non pas seulement les profits des Espagnols.

* Reprise des débats de la 1052^e séance.

7. Il n'est pas étonnant que l'Eglise ait été à l'origine de ces mouvements qui tentaient de sauver la dignité humaine des habitants des terres conquises, puisque la défense des droits inaliénables de l'homme a toujours été et sera toujours sa fonction essentielle. A ce propos, si l'on nous permet d'insister, nous voudrions rappeler une citation: "Les droits de l'homme, au sens occidental, ne sont rien d'autre que des valeurs religieuses transférées dans le domaine séculier. Quand on ne conçoit plus l'homme à l'image de Dieu, il n'est plus protégé si on veut l'utiliser comme moyen à des fins simplement humaines. Ses droits et ses libertés fondamentales ont perdu leur finalité métaphysique." Mais l'effort visant à ennoblir l'œuvre colonisatrice n'est pas particulier à l'Eglise seule. Si dans les plans des gouvernements conquérants la convoitise et l'intérêt matériel prédominaient, l'élite des grandes nations qui travaillait sur le plan culturel — à la fin comme au début, partout et toujours, l'intelligence réclame ses droits —, cette élite ne pouvait accepter l'idée que "coloniser" signifie seulement exploiter. Elle a refusé d'admettre que les pays soient frustrés de ce qui devait être avant tout une immense action civilisatrice. C'est alors que de tous côtés les partisans des droits des peuples aborigènes commencèrent leur exégèse. A la fin du XVIII^{ème} siècle, Burke disait à propos de ce qu'il appelait le principe de la "morale géographique":

"Le pouvoir politique étant toujours exercé sur des hommes, les privilèges réclamés ou exercés au mépris des hommes sont totalement artificiels et contraires à l'égalité naturelle: ils devraient s'exercer en quelque façon à l'avantage de tous les hommes... Ces droits ou privilèges, qu'on les appelle comme on voudra, n'appartiennent aux conquérants que comme des biens en tutelle et la tutelle ne va pas sans la responsabilité... la charte même, qui charge le parlement de corriger toute fraude relative aux garanties accordées à la société, nous fait en même temps un droit et un devoir d'intervenir activement toutes les fois que le pouvoir et l'autorité conférés par nous seront pervertis quant à leurs objectifs et se transformeront en instruments de violence et d'injustice."

8. Les Anglais à morale utilitaire, Bentham à leur tête, réclamèrent l'émancipation rapide de toutes les colonies. Les associations d'intellectuels, de politiciens, de philanthropes se multipliaient, stigmatisaient leurs gouvernements pour la mauvaise administration coloniale, dénonçaient les injustices qui frappaient les indigènes et réclamaient la protection des prérogatives inhérentes à leur condition d'êtres humains. Les partis d'opposition, dans les parlements de la plupart des puissances coloniales, en tirèrent une foule d'arguments polémiques. Grâce à cet effort patient de nombreuses années, la colonisation, il faut bien le reconnaître, a eu aussi un certain bilan positif. Est-il imprudent de le rappeler aujourd'hui? Au-delà et à côté des impératifs purement économiques, des problèmes de marchés, de libre-échange, de zones d'influence et de ce qu'on appelle la politique du pouvoir camouflé, il s'est produit peu à peu un échange de valeurs essentielles qui ont balayé bien des conceptions européennes périmées et qui, chez les peuples neufs, ont provoqué cet éveil impressionnant de nationalités vigoureuses, tumultueuses dans leur jeunesse, sûres de leur destinée, appelées de nos jours à jouer un rôle marquant dans la tâche difficile qui consiste à débrouiller une situation internationale compliquée.

9. Pour les colonies espagnoles d'Amérique, l'heure de l'émancipation est arrivée au début du siècle dernier. Nous avons lutté durement et, lorsque s'est tu le fracas des combats, lorsque à la fureur iconoclaste des premiers moments — et dans la vie des peuples les moments durent des dizaines d'années — ont succédé la réflexion, le calme et la sagesse, nous nous sommes rendu compte que nous avions lutté entre frères. Une même langue, une même religion, une même conception de la vie et de l'univers, dont nous sommes fiers, nous rapprochent tellement de l'Espagne, que, pour clore cette étape de son œuvre colonisatrice, nous avons adopté une expression qui est un symbole et un hommage: nous l'appelons maintenant la mère patrie.

10. La lutte pour la libération des autres peuples non autonomes a été malheureusement beaucoup trop lente. Tandis que la conscience nationaliste s'éveillait et se répandait progressivement dans les populations des territoires asservis, dont l'aspiration légitime à la souveraineté était secondée par les pays indépendants et par des groupes, des courants d'opinion, des partis, à l'intérieur même des puissances administrantes, celles-ci réagirent de façons diverses, mais, jusqu'à la première guerre mondiale, elles refusèrent toujours avec une agressive obstination de satisfaire les demandes légitimes des populations coloniales. C'est le moment où naquit le principe du "double mandat" auquel les empires coloniaux britannique, hollandais et français adhérèrent volontairement, mais avec des restrictions; selon ce principe, les colonies représentaient une double tutelle, au profit des peuples coloniaux et du monde en général. Vers 1914, on commença timidement à reconnaître certains droits aux colonies: par l'Acte de Berlin (1885) sur la liberté de commerce et de navigation au Congo et en Nigéria, l'Acte général de la Conférence de Bruxelles (1895) sur la suppression de la traite des esclaves en Afrique, l'Acte du Congo (1885) dans lequel on a voulu voir un précédent du "Mandat" apparu en 1919, la Conférence d'Algésiras (1906) où l'on parlait du Maroc non comme d'une colonie, mais comme d'un pays en tutelle ou d'un protectorat, avec droit de recevoir des rapports sur l'application de cette tutelle et droit de vérification et d'inspection. Le vaste empire colonial se secouait péniblement. Les puissances coloniales s'évertuaient à maintenir intacte leur domination, mais déjà chez elles et dans la conscience universelle grandissait un sentiment de rébellion contre la situation existante. Même dans les mesures que prenaient ces puissances en affectant avec arrogance de faire des concessions généreuses, prenaient force les thèses et les principes qui devaient plus tard entrer dans le droit international dans la période entre les deux guerres mondiales et dans celle qui a suivi et que nous vivons aujourd'hui.

11. Nous n'allons pas parler des "mandats" de la Société des Nations, sinon dans la mesure où c'est indispensable pour mettre en évidence les progrès réalisés sur les années précédentes et pour montrer en quoi ces mandats diffèrent essentiellement du régime international de tutelle ou de la déclaration relative aux territoires non autonomes, que l'on trouve dans la Charte des Nations Unies. Nous n'avons pas l'intention de chercher si la théorie du régime des mandats a été exposée pour la première fois dans un mémorandum de 1917 du parti travailliste-indépendant britannique, dans les propositions faites en

1918 par la Conférence travailliste et socialiste interalliée de Londres, dans le cinquième des 14 points de Wilson, dans la théorie du général Smuts, certes regrettablement étroite, dans les efforts du ministre britannique des affaires étrangères, ou dans les travaux de l'Américain Beer. Ce qui est certain, c'est que la Société des Nations a adopté ce régime et qu'elle a divisé les mandats en trois classes, A, B et C; elle a rangé dans la classe A les régions enlevées à l'Empire ottoman, auxquelles l'existence comme nations indépendantes était reconnue provisoirement, la Palestine et l'Irak sous administration britannique, et la Syrie et le Liban sous administration française; elle a rangé dans la classe B les colonies allemandes d'Afrique centrale, le Cameroun et le Togo placés aussi sous administration française et sous administration britannique, l'Afrique orientale sous administration britannique, et le Ruanda-Urundi sous administration belge; enfin, elle a rangé dans la troisième catégorie le Sud-Ouest africain allemand, confié à l'Union sud-africaine, les îles allemandes du Pacifique au nord de l'Equateur confiées au Japon, les îles du Pacifique austral, dont la Nouvelle-Guinée allemande confiée à l'Australie, les Samoa à la Nouvelle-Zélande et l'île de Nauru à l'administration conjointe de l'Australie, de la Grande-Bretagne et de la Nouvelle-Zélande.

12. Le régime des mandats reposait sur sept principes; si certains d'entre eux n'ont pas été observés, cela ne portait pas atteinte aux obligations solennelles de caractère international que l'on peut énumérer ainsi: non-annexion, tutelle confiée aux nations développées, porte ouverte, non-exploitation militaire, consultation du pays sous mandat, indépendance définitive ou autonomie et contrôle international. On a dit que, conformément aux termes de l'Article 22 du Pacte de la Société des Nations, le destin définitif des territoires sous mandat n'avait pas été très nettement fixé, mais que les auteurs du texte avaient à l'esprit un processus qui devait aboutir à l'indépendance, avec, comme étapes intermédiaires, la participation aux organes de gouvernement, puis l'autonomie.

13. Le contrôle des mandataires était de la compétence du Conseil de la Société des Nations, mais la surveillance et l'application directe du régime des mandats étaient confiées à la Commission permanente des mandats, composée en majeure partie de ressortissants de puissances non mandataires, qui devaient agir en toute indépendance de leurs gouvernements et dont étaient exigées certaines qualités et compétences particulières. Les puissances mandataires devaient faire rapport tous les ans et les habitants des territoires avaient le droit de pétition devant la Commission, dont l'autorité et l'efficacité ont été si bien reconnues que l'on doit compter au nombre de ses grandes réalisations le fait qu'elle a réussi à étendre à des territoires simplement coloniaux le niveau d'administration propre au régime des mandats.

14. Nous comprenons sans peine que le régime des mandats de la Société des Nations ait éliminé ce que l'on pourrait appeler l'ancienne conception tyrannique du colonialisme, en obligeant les puissances coloniales à régier leur conduite, livrée jusque-là aux caprices de leur libre arbitre, selon la notion de tutelle qui tout à la fois donne des droits et impose des obligations que l'on doit remplir selon les principes énoncés par Burke. Cette évolution a été le résultat de la première guerre mondiale, ce qui nous amène à méditer sur le tragique et pourtant splendide destin de l'homme, condamné à ne gravir les échelons du perfectionnement qu'à l'issue des folles aventures d'extermination où son orgueil le précipite.

15. Durant la période d'entre les deux guerres, grâce au nouveau climat international, et s'étant soustraits au régime des mandats, l'Irak, le Liban et la Syrie ont consolidé leur indépendance. Mais il a fallu la deuxième guerre mondiale pour qu'une nouvelle conception des droits des peuples asservis abattît les derniers vestiges des pratiques colonialistes qui sévissaient dans le monde occidental. Il est déplorable que, parallèlement à ce progrès, on ait vu s'installer et s'affermir dans le vaste et silencieux empire du monde communiste d'autres formes d'asservissement qui sont les plus répandues aujourd'hui et qui constituent vraiment le néo-colonialisme.

16. Il est inutile de s'attarder à examiner et comparer les antécédents immédiats de l'élaboration et de l'incorporation à la Charte des Nations Unies des textes qui en sont devenus les Chapitres XI, XII et XIII. Il convient cependant de signaler, à propos du régime international de tutelle, qu'à la Conférence de Téhéran Staline avait trouvé "excellent" le régime de tutelle suggéré pour l'Indochine française par Tchang Kai-shek, avant une demande du président Franklin D. Roosevelt, que l'Union Soviétique a défendu l'administration de tutelle directe pour les trois colonies italiennes et enfin qu'à San Francisco cette même délégation de l'Union soviétique a pris une part si importante aux travaux du comité chargé d'étudier le régime de tutelle, qu'il existe un éloge très flatteur de cette précieuse collaboration, prononcé par M. Stassen, représentant des Etats-Unis.

17. Plus tard, dans la lutte qu'elle a menée pour étendre ses zones d'influence — lutte acharnée avec domination du type militaire — et qui a atteint l'an dernier un point culminant (nous y reviendrons plus loin), l'Union soviétique s'est mise à rejeter les accords de tutelle sous le prétexte que les autorités administrantes ne pouvaient, d'après elle, établir des bases militaires, navales ou aériennes et entretenir des forces nationales que dans les zones déclarées zones stratégiques, qui sont sous le contrôle du Conseil de sécurité.

18. Pour apprécier ce qu'a été le régime de tutelle dans les territoires où il a fait suite au régime des mandats (sauf pour le Sud-Ouest africain et la Palestine) et dans les territoires détachés des Etats ex-ennemis après la seconde guerre mondiale, il suffit de suivre les rapports annuels du Conseil de tutelle à l'Assemblée générale. Dans celui qui a trait à la période du 10 juin 1960 au 19 juillet 1961 [A/4785], on voit que, l'an prochain, les seuls territoires encore soumis au régime de tutelle seront la Nouvelle-Guinée et Nauru, sous administration de l'Australie, et le territoire sous tutelle des îles du Pacifique, zone stratégique sous administration des Etats-Unis. Le Tanganyika obtiendra sa liberté le 9 décembre 1961 et le Samoa-Occidental le 10 janvier 1962. On espère que le rapport de la Commission spéciale pour le Ruanda-Urundi fournira des renseignements qui permettront de décréter l'indépendance de ce territoire.

19. En ce qui concerne la troisième catégorie de territoires placés sous le régime de tutelle, c'est-à-dire les territoires qui seraient volontairement placés sous ce régime par les Etats responsables de leur administration, ce cas, qui était visé par l'Article 77, c, de la Charte, ne s'est pas encore présenté. Pourtant (mais je tiens à préciser que je n'entends pas définir en ce moment la position de ma délégation sur cette question), la proposition des Pays-Bas [A/L.354] avec son mémoire explicatif, portant sur le territoire appelé Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale ou Irian occidental, pourrait ressembler à une forme de tutelle volontaire et conditionnelle, où l'autorité administrante serait, conformément à l'Article 81, l'Organisation elle-même.

20. Pour terminer cette brève analyse des Chapitres XII et XIII de la Charte, nous dirons que M. Trygve Lie, secrétaire général, avait raison quand il affirmait que le régime international de tutelle n'est pas une simple prolongation du régime des mandats de la Société des Nations. C'est un nouveau système de contrôle international. Il a une portée plus large, des possibilités bien meilleures, des pouvoirs plus grands que le régime des mandats. Nous ajouterons que ses réalisations suffiraient à justifier l'existence de l'ONU et les espérances que l'humanité a mises en elle.

21. Mais entrons dans un domaine où les progrès accomplis satisfont les aspirations les plus exigeantes et peuvent être qualifiées de surprenants. Les rédacteurs de la Charte des Nations Unies à San Francisco n'ont éprouvé ni hésitations ni scrupules à indiquer la destinée finale des territoires sous administration étrangère, malgré la résistance acharnée des puissances intéressées à maintenir leurs prérogatives colonialistes. Cette destinée finale ne pouvait être que l'indépendance et c'est bien ainsi que la définit la Charte, expressément et sans la moindre équivoque.

22. On a beaucoup écrit sur les limites et la portée des Articles 73 et 74, en étudiant leur texte de la manière la plus minutieuse. On a été jusqu'à prétendre que dans le titre du Chapitre XI, "Déclaration relative aux territoires non autonomes", les puissances coloniales s'étaient permis ce qu'un certain juriste a appelé une sorte de "restriction mentale" en sous-entendant qu'il s'agissait d'une forme d'obligations de catégorie différente de celles que contractaient les signataires de la Charte. Mais, selon ce même juriste, s'il y avait une telle arrière-pensée, la pratique a montré que ce fut en vain. Dans l'Article 73, b, le membre de phrase "dans la mesure appropriée aux conditions particulières de chaque territoire et de ses populations et à leurs degrés variables de développement" a été inséré dans la disposition qui fait obligation aux puissances administrantes de développer la capacité des populations de s'administrer elles-mêmes, de tenir compte des aspirations politiques des populations et de les aider dans le développement progressif de leurs libres institutions politiques. On a dit que cette incise était une formule transactionnelle qui retirait sa force à la proposition originale de la Chine, proposition qui fixait comme but à la politique coloniale l'autonomie et l'indépendance. Mais l'incohérence de cette observation devient manifeste si l'on remarque seulement que le destin prévu pour les territoires non autonomes est la pleine autonomie, les autorités administrantes ayant l'obligation contractuelle expresse de favoriser leur progrès afin de rendre cette autonomie possible. Prétexter, pour empêcher ou retarder l'indépendance d'un territoire, qu'il est encore insuffisamment évolué, serait pour l'autorité administrante tenter d'alléguer sa propre faute pour se dispenser d'une obligation, ce qui est juridiquement inacceptable.

23. Chaque fois qu'une autorité administrante prétend qu'un territoire non autonome n'a pas atteint un degré de développement suffisant pour assumer décemment et sans risques la direction de son propre destin, l'Organisation se trouve devant une alternative: ou bien il existe réellement des obstacles exceptionnels qui ont empêché le progrès du territoire malgré les efforts loyaux de l'autorité administrante; ou bien celle-ci montre sans le vouloir qu'elle est incapable d'accomplir la mission qu'elle a acceptée en tant que Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Dans chacun de ces cas, l'Organisation doit agir. Nous envisageons maintenant la question de savoir comment, par quels moyens et jusqu'à quel point, les Nations Unies peuvent maintenir leur autorité, d'autant plus indispensable quand il s'agit de préserver les dispositions fondamentales de la Charte et d'en assurer l'application.

24. Dans le processus qu'ont suivi les relations des puissances administrantes et les territoires non autonomes, et les relations des unes et des autres avec les Nations Unies, l'insistance sur l'emploi du mot "processus" n'est pas due à un caprice, mais à un choix voulu du terme le plus juste pour décrire la situation; on peut constater une suite indiscutable de progrès de plus en plus nets. Lorsqu'en 1949 l'Assemblée a adopté la résolution 332 (IV) qui portait création d'un comité spécial chargé d'examiner les renseignements communiqués en vertu du paragraphe e de l'Article 73 de la Charte, si une délégation avait alors eu l'audace non pas même de proposer, mais de suggérer que parmi les renseignements fournis par les puissances administrantes devraient figurer des renseignements de caractère politique et constitutionnel, une pareille prétention aurait été qualifiée de témérité abusive et inacceptable. Pourtant, l'année dernière, comme corollaire fondamental des obligations que le Chapitre XI de la Charte impose aux puissances administrantes dans la résolution 1535 (XV), qui a été adoptée sans la moindre difficulté, l'Assemblée a jugé indispensable que de tels renseignements sur la situation politique et constitutionnelle des territoires non autonomes soient fournis et elle a prié instamment les puissances administrantes de les lui communiquer.

25. A ce propos, il n'est pas sans intérêt de citer les paragraphes 64 et 65 de la première partie du rapport du Comité [A/4785] pour l'année actuelle, dans lesquels on lit:

"Sur les 51 territoires non autonomes au sujet desquels des renseignements ont été communiqués en 1960, 41 sont administrés par le Royaume-Uni, trois par la Nouvelle-Zélande, trois par les Etats-Unis, deux par l'Australie, un par les Pays-Bas et un conjointement par la France et le Royaume-Uni.

"Certains membres du Comité ont relevé que si l'Australie, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, la Nouvelle-Zélande et les Pays-Bas communiquaient régulièrement des renseignements d'ordre politique, le Royaume-Uni ne l'avait jamais fait."

Le Royaume-Uni a annoncé solennellement ces renseignements dans le discours prononcé par son ministre des affaires étrangères dans la discussion générale [1017ème séance].

26. Nous ne résistons pas à la tentation de citer le commentaire d'un auteur brésilien sur les résultats de la première réunion du Conseil culturel interaméricain, tenue à Mexico en 1951:

"La culture intellectuelle ne peut se dissocier de la vie politique et économique des peuples ni de leur vie morale, en sorte que leur développement culturel est intimement lié au niveau de leur condition politique et de leur situation économique, ainsi qu'au niveau de leur élévation morale."

27. Devant des vérités aussi élémentaires, il est surprenant qu'il y ait eu des doutes à l'ONU pendant un certain temps sur le devoir des puissances administrantes de fournir des renseignements d'ordre politique et constitutionnel, au lieu de limiter les renseignements communiqués à de simples renseignements statistiques et autres de nature technique relatifs aux conditions économiques, sociales, de l'instruction, alors que ces renseignements d'ordre politique et constitutionnel sont essentiels et fondamentaux si l'on veut savoir comment s'accomplit la mission sacrée que la Charte a confiée aux puissances administrantes dans les territoires non autonomes.

28. Mais c'est une surprise relative. Tournons nos regards vers le chemin, marqué de laborieux progrès, qu'il a fallu parcourir en se dirigeant vers le but de la disparition définitive du colonialisme. Tenons compte du fait que ces progrès considérés isolément peuvent provoquer une certaine inquiétude si l'on est intransigent, ou encore une sorte de désenchantement, mais que vus dans leur ensemble et avec un certain recul ils peuvent inspirer le plus sincère optimisme. C'est ce qu'il faut affirmer nettement, pour renforcer notre foi en l'efficacité de l'Organisation.

29. Nous n'allons pas examiner d'autres points sur lesquels, comme ce fut le cas pour les renseignements d'ordre politique et constitutionnel, les premiers balbutiements de l'Organisation des Nations Unies de 1949 contrastent avec l'arrogance belliqueuse qu'elle a manifestée ces dernières années pour la défense indispensable de ses privilèges. Le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, créé presque timidement avec des attributions très limitées, s'est transformé en un bastion chargé de surveiller jalousement la conduite des puissances administrantes et rivalisant avec le Conseil de tutelle. La Quatrième Commission, forum ouvert à toutes les querelles et toutes les discussions, a soumis à l'Assemblée générale pour approbation définitive les principes directeurs qui déterminent l'obligation de communiquer des renseignements, ainsi que des résolutions qui invitent les puissances administrantes à s'acquitter de leur devoir d'assistance dans les domaines de l'éducation, de la culture, de l'administration, de la technique, de l'économie, et qui condamnent les pratiques discriminatoires et recommandent "d'accorder à tous les habitants le plein exercice des droits politiques fondamentaux, en particulier du droit de vote et d'établir l'égalité entre tous les habitants des territoires non autonomes, sans distinction de race".

30. Il en est résulté que, sous réserve de quelques déplorables exceptions que nous mentionnerons brièvement un peu plus loin, les puissances coloniales ont répondu, presque toujours honnêtement, à ces exigences successives et systématiques. Des questions comme celle de savoir quels sont les territoires sur lesquels elles doivent communiquer des renseignements, celle du maintien de l'obligation de communiquer des renseignements sur des territoires pour lesquels des renseignements ont été fournis autrefois mais ne le sont plus, celle du droit pour les organes compétents des Nations Unies de visiter officiellement les territoires ou d'entendre des pétitions qui en émanent, celle du fondement de ce qu'on appelle la souveraineté résiduelle, et d'autres questions du même genre, ne sont plus aujourd'hui des questions compliquées et controversées, et si l'on en discutait le dénouement pourrait se deviner facilement.

31. Y aurait-il une nation de bonne foi qui pourrait nier ces progrès? N'oublions pas que depuis la réunion de San Francisco une trentaine d'Etats ont été soustraits au régime de l'administration étrangère, ont reçu tous les attributs de la souveraineté et sont entrés à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

32. Comme exemple de ce que les Nations Unies ont fait et continuent à faire dans le domaine de la tutelle, prenons la résolution 1515 (XV), si noble et si généreuse dans ses objectifs, mais méprisée et dénaturée par ceux qui ont voulu en faire un misérable instrument de propagande pour favoriser leurs manœuvres de guerre froide.

33. Nous avons encore toutes fraîches dans la mémoire les escarmouches qui se sont déroulées dans cette salle de l'Assemblée, éberluée: coups de soubliers sur les pupitres, injures et vociférations allant certain jour jusqu'à faire lever la séance, et ce marteau, emblème de l'autorité présidentielle, brisé, lorsqu'on a discuté la question de l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

34. L'Union soviétique avait présenté un projet de résolution et un amendement qui ont été rejetés. Ne perdons pas de vue que toutes les décisions se prennent ici par l'adoption ou le rejet de projets de résolutions. Finalement, c'est avec une majorité écrasante et avec neuf abstentions seulement qu'a été votée la proposition des 43 Etats africaino-asiatiques qui est devenue la célèbre résolution 1514 (XV), dont le dispositif stipule, en son paragraphe 5:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs, aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complète."

Au paragraphe 3 de la même résolution, l'Assemblée déclarait:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

35. Laissons de côté, car l'occasion d'une telle étude de fond peut se présenter dans un proche avenir, la question de savoir si dans le membre de phrase "tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance", venant après la mention expresse des territoires sous tutelle et des territoires non autonomes, on fait allusion à la domination silencieuse du véritable néo-colonialisme, dont nous avons tantôt mentionné l'existence. Occupons-nous de certains problèmes sérieux que pose cette même résolution.

36. Demandons-nous en premier lieu si cette résolution a aboli automatiquement les Chapitres XI, XII et XIII de la Charte, puisque depuis l'an dernier, de nouveau cette année, on parle d'accorder immédiatement, et de force pourrait-on dire, la pleine souveraineté et l'indépendance aux territoires sous tutelle et aux territoires non autonomes. Ce mouvement déjà trop connu a provoqué à la Quatrième Commission l'ajournement de la résolution habituelle que l'on vote chaque année, aux termes de laquelle l'Assemblée générale prend note du rapport du Conseil de tutelle et recommande aux autorités administrantes de tenir compte des recommandations et observations qui s'y trouvent. Il semble que le même fait va se produire (une demande officielle est déjà déposée) à propos de la résolution concernant le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, en attendant que l'Assemblée ait pris une décision sur le point 88 de l'ordre du jour, celui que nous examinons en ce moment.

37. Autrement dit, tout se passe comme si l'on donnait congé au Conseil de tutelle et si l'on refusait de proroger, comme on l'a fait en 1952, 1955 et 1958, le mandat du Comité des renseignements qui expire cette année.

38. Posons ici une question, qui a déjà été posée une fois, comme unique argument pour apaiser ces précipitations excessives: "Peut-on reviser la Charte par une simple résolution de l'Assemblée?"

39. Dans le document A/L.355, l'Union soviétique propose un projet de résolution où figure ce qui suit au paragraphe 2 du dispositif:

"L'Assemblée...

"Déclare que la liquidation définitive et inconditionnelle du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations devra être achevée à la fin de 1962 au plus tard."

40. Si l'offensive serrée et virulente contre les objectifs connus dont rendent compte les documents qui ont provoqué ce projet de résolution, et si l'alinéa c du paragraphe 3 du dispositif ne découvriraient nettement ses intentions véritables ou, comme on dit, ne laissent pas pointer les oreilles du loup, on pourrait être porté à croire que cette résolution est bonne et ingénue comme un agneau pascal. Vouloir précipiter le processus de décolonisation, non point l'accélérer, ce qui serait très différent, mais vouloir l'achever en l'espace d'un an, comme le propose le texte de l'Union soviétique, nous paraît, pour être correct, une erreur monumentale. Avec un tel précédent, l'Assemblée ne serait-elle pas tentée d'adopter, dans un geste humanitaire, une résolution déclarant que le cancer serait vaincu et supprimé à une date précise, disons en 1962, ou, pour continuer cet inoffensif exercice de dialectique, une résolution déclarant que cette même année 1962 devrait voir disparaître de la terre l'ignorance, la faim et la misère?

41. Dans le projet de résolution [A/L.357] présenté par la Nigéria et surtout dans le brillant exposé de son ministre des affaires étrangères devant l'Assemblée [1050^{ème} séance], on trouve une conception réaliste, sérieuse et constructive du problème de l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce projet fixe également, pour le continent africain seulement, une date limite pour atteindre cet objectif, mais le délai de 10 ans qu'il propose est du moins un hommage à la prudence et au sens des responsabilités.

42. Sans qu'il s'agisse d'une proposition formelle ni d'une prise de position à l'égard dudit projet de résolution, car le moment viendra pour l'une et pour l'autre quand la discussion deviendra plus précise, nous pensons que si on l'étendait à d'autres zones géographiques et si on le complétait par le renouvellement des fonctions du Conseil de tutelle et du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, ce projet pourrait apporter une conclusion satisfaisante au problème que nous discutons.

43. Deux faits sont évidents. D'une part, le Conseil de tutelle, à moins qu'une réforme de la Charte ne le supprime, existera tant qu'il y aura des territoires non autonomes pouvant lui être confiés volontairement pour administration, conformément à l'alinéa c de l'Article 77. D'autre part, pour répondre précisément à l'appel pressant contenu dans la résolution 1514 (XV), comprise dans sa signification véritable, et pour que certaines fonctions accomplies grâce à la bonne volonté des puissances administrantes tombent sous la stricte juridiction et compétence du Comité des renseignements, ce dernier, si son mandat est renouvelé, ou le nouveau Comité qui sera créé pour lui succéder, doit être doté de moyens suffisants pour accomplir avec efficacité sa très importante mission. Ce n'est pas un des problèmes les moins sérieux que d'éviter le chevauchement des fonctions qui entrave parfois l'activité de certains organes des Nations Unies. Nous avons, par exemple, une proposition de la Quatrième Commission tendant à créer un comité spécial [A/C.4/L.704/Rev.1] pour s'occuper du regrettable refus du Portugal de donner des renseignements sur ses territoires, et les problèmes que pose la conduite non moins déplorable de l'Union sud-africaine à l'égard du Sud-Ouest africain.

44. En dehors des autorités les plus importantes, selon l'évolution actuelle de ces questions et compte tenu de la nouvelle situation créée par la résolution 1514 (XV), donnons au Comité des renseignements, ou à celui qui le remplacera, un personnel suffisant pour établir des sous-comités ou des comités de travail chargés d'examiner et de régler en collaboration tous les conflits qui peuvent survenir dans tout territoire non autonome et chargés aussi de suivre d'un œil vigilant les lacunes de l'administration, afin de les signaler en temps utile du haut de cette tribune devant la conscience universelle, ce qui est, comme la preuve en est faite, une manière de les corriger.

45. Nous avons une foi inébranlable en l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est pourquoi nous l'invitons à se défendre des impatiences dangereuses et de tout ce qui pourrait altérer la solennité austère qui lui est indispensable. Ainsi gagnera-t-elle chaque jour un peu plus d'autorité pour servir les idéaux qui ont présidé à sa création.

46. Nous vous prions maintenant de nous excuser d'avoir parlé si longtemps et nous remercions l'Assemblée de l'attention qu'elle a bien voulu nous prêter.

47. M. DOSUMU-JOHNSON (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Une fois de plus, l'Assemblée est appelée à réfléchir sur l'un des problèmes les plus révoltants, les plus inhumains qui aient tourmenté l'esprit de l'homme au cours des dernières années. Sans doute ce problème se posera-t-il à l'Organisation jusqu'au moment où les derniers vestiges de l'odieuse pratique du colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes, auront été supprimés de la surface de la terre, et où nous aurons créé à sa place une franche atmosphère de liberté et d'égalité, de collaboration confiante et de respect naturel pour les droits de tous les êtres humains à la vie, à la liberté, à la recherche du bonheur, sans limites imposées de l'étranger.

48. Débarrassé des foules de mots qui l'habillent, le problème que l'Assemblée doit résoudre se réduit à ceci: "Que toutes les colonies soient libérées dans le monde entier, libérées dès maintenant".

49. Vous nous comprendrez si nous consacrons la majeure partie de nos remarques à l'Afrique. Tout en souhaitant et appuyant de tout cœur l'abolition immédiate du statut colonial dans toutes les parties du monde, nous sommes mieux placés pour parler de la situation en Afrique.

50. A sa quinzième session, l'Assemblée générale a adopté le 14 décembre 1960, par 89 voix contre zéro, avec 9 abstentions, la résolution 1514 (XV) proposée par 43 pays d'Asie et d'Afrique.

51. On ne soulignera jamais trop l'importance de cette résolution pour les pays coloniaux et pour les peuples d'Afrique en particulier. Elle a attiré l'attention du monde sur les horreurs du colonialisme comme on ne l'avait jamais fait jusque-là. Elle a tendu à rendre les grandes puissances conscientes de leur responsabilité envers les peuples administrés par elles. La Déclaration qui figure dans cette résolution a condamné la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères. Elle a affirmé notamment:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises ... pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires [dépendants] sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

Elle a affirmé également:

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression... dirigées contre les peuples dépendants ... et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée."

52. Cette déclaration a fait l'objet d'interprétations diverses, mais, de l'avis de ma délégation et de mon gouvernement, c'est bien plus que le simple exposé d'objectifs généraux; c'est une décision de l'Assemblée et elle impose donc aux Etats Membres des obligations immédiates, d'ordre juridique et moral.

53. Nous avons la chance de compter parmi nous des puissances coloniales et d'anciennes puissances coloniales qui sentent les tendances sociales et politiques universelles et qui s'adaptent aux circonstances avec dynamisme. C'est en elles que nous plaçons notre espoir. Elles nous encouragent par leurs votes qui montrent et signifient que nos efforts en vue de faire reconnaître la dignité et la valeur de tous les êtres humains aboutiront à une réussite dans un délai déterminé et sans plus de résistance.

54. Il reste cependant des colonialistes irréductibles qui forment une catégorie à part. Ils feignent d'ignorer l'évolution historique: leur politique étrangère est dictée par les passions, les sentiments, les idéologies et les craintes, plutôt que par la pensée logique et le dynamisme du progrès historique.

55. L'orientation de la politique étrangère d'une nation est parfois influencée par l'état de sa civilisation. Une culture jeune et en pleine croissance est active, audacieuse, tandis qu'une civilisation vieillie se fige dans sa forme présente et songe surtout à sa sécurité. Un des traits les plus inquiétants chez les colonialistes irréductibles est qu'ils manquent absolument des connaissances que procurent seuls le contact direct et les associations sur le plan international. La principale tâche de l'Assemblée sera de rééduquer les dirigeants de ces civilisations décadentes en les envoyant visiter d'autres territoires afin qu'ils y prennent des leçons de respect mutuel et de démocratie. Ils sont rivés à leur pays, leurs idées sont toutes faites, ils n'ont pas la moindre expérience directe de ce qui se passe autour d'eux. Si on les encourageait à se rendre régulièrement dans des territoires désormais souverains et indépendants, ils ne pourraient plus faire autre chose qu'une politique de prudence et d'adaptation.

56. Ma délégation croit sincèrement que l'Afrique est de droit et de fait le foyer des hommes dont les ancêtres l'ont occupée les premiers et même y sont nés. Cela est confirmé par les récits bibliques et d'autres documents historiques. Malgré ce qu'on pourrait prendre pour des avis différents, les Africains ont toujours estimé que le continent leur appartient et ils ont tout fait pour résister à la pénétration et la domination européennes, que ce soit en Algérie, en Afrique du Sud, en Angola, à Fernando Po ou en Rhodésie. Ils ont toujours jugé immorales et indéfendables la pénétration et la domination européennes. Si, en apparence, l'Africain a semblé se soumettre à la domination étrangère ou coloniale, c'est uniquement parce qu'il était écrasé par une force supérieure. L'amour de la liberté, l'espoir chéri de l'émancipation sont innés dans le cœur de chaque Africain.

57. L'esprit nationaliste en Afrique n'est pas nouveau, il n'est pas suscité par de prétendus agitateurs. Il a commencé le premier jour où les premiers colonisateurs ont tenté d'occuper une partie du continent. Il n'y a jamais eu un instant d'acceptation passive; toute tentative étrangère pour soumettre l'Afrique s'est heurtée à la résistance africaine. Nos ancêtres étaient des hommes qui croyaient au droit de gouverner et d'être gouvernés selon la formule de leur choix et de résister par tous les moyens en leur pouvoir à ceux qui tenteraient de leur enlever le droit de gérer leurs propres affaires. Pour ne citer que quelques exemples, la domination européenne a rencontré une résistance dans le Haut-Sénégal de 1890 à 1893 sous Mamadou Lamine, au Dahomey de 1890 à 1893 sous le roi Benhazin, au Sierra Leone de 1897 à 1900 sous le roi Bai Bureh, en Ashanti sous le roi Prompeh, en Rhodésie du Sud de 1892 à 1894 sous le roi Lobengula des Matabélés, en Guinée sous Alimini Samouri, au Tanganyika de 1891 à 1894 sous Mkwawa qui était alors le chef suprême des Héhès. Ce sont simplement quelques exemples pour illustrer ce qu'était réellement la situation au sud du Sahara. Il est étrangement stupide et sans aucun fondement d'insinuer que les Africains étaient favorables à la domination étrangère.

58. Le colonialisme a été une source de conflits perpétuels entre les colonisateurs et les colonisés, ainsi qu'une source de tension entre les puissances coloniales elles-mêmes. De la disparition du colonialisme dépend la solution du conflit Est-Ouest. Il faut donc supprimer le colonialisme et ce sera le premier pas vers la paix universelle et la fraternité humaine. Le colonialisme qui comprend à la fois la subjugation et l'exploitation a été la source de toutes les guerres qui ont eu lieu depuis le début du XVIII^{ème} siècle et, par suite, a menacé constamment la paix et la sécurité de l'univers. Contrairement à tous motifs humanitaires, c'est l'intérêt économique et commercial qui a inspiré l'Europe dans ses entreprises en Afrique et en Asie. La liberté, la souveraineté et l'indépendance de l'Afrique et de l'Asie apporteront pourtant aux anciennes puissances coloniales et de façon générale au monde occidental lui-même d'immenses avantages économiques.

59. Le principal argument contre l'émancipation immédiate des territoires coloniaux est qu'ils doivent y être préparés et que pour cela il faut du temps. Si ma délégation est prête à reconnaître que les peuples doivent être préparés à l'autonomie, elle incline à penser que la meilleure façon d'y arriver est de commencer par la solution politique. La solution fonctionnelle qui est la thèse des colonialistes irréductibles n'est possible que s'il existe une similitude ou une communauté d'intérêts. Cette communauté d'intérêts peut être renforcée par la solution fonctionnelle, mais non pas être créée par celle-ci. L'histoire de l'Australie et de l'Amérique nous a appris que le règlement politique a été la clef des problèmes fonctionnels dans ces continents. En outre, avant l'arrivée des Européens sur notre continent et contrairement aux idées préconçues, les Africains avaient eu leur propre éducation. Ils avaient eu leurs rois et toutes les institutions nécessaires pour s'instruire dans les domaines de l'éducation et du gouvernement. Ils avaient bâti des royaumes et des empires. Leurs normes de vie familiale et de moralité étaient impeccables. Ils avaient eu les empires de Sokoto, Gando et Kano, du Ghana, du Mali, des Songhaï, du Bornou, du Harar, de Gondar et bien d'autres. En de nombreux cas, la domination européenne en Afrique s'est exercée par la méthode indirecte. L'argument de la nécessité d'une préparation ne doit donc pas faire obstacle à la décolonisation immédiate de tous les territoires non autonomes.

60. La question dont l'Assemblée est saisie est celle de l'indépendance d'un peuple, d'un peuple dont les foyers ont été pillés et détruits, d'un peuple qui a été contraint de fournir aux colons les moyens d'une vie confortable et raffinée tandis qu'on l'empêche de prendre la moindre part à cette vie en légalisant la pauvreté, l'ignorance et la discrimination.

61. La plus haute aspiration de l'homme, partout dans le monde et quelles que soient ses conditions de vie, est un insatiable désir de voir reconnaître sa valeur et sa dignité en tant que personne humaine, d'avoir une place respectée dans la société où il vit, de pouvoir participer sans restriction aux possibilités que présente le monde et de jouir de la liberté personnelle; dans un groupe ou dans une nation, ce désir se traduit par des mouvements visant l'indépendance politique et l'entière liberté de développer leur pays à leur gré au point de vue social et matériel, sous un gouvernement de leur choix. C'est tout ce que les Africains vous demandent, en Algérie, en Angola, à Bissão, à São Thomé, au Mozambique, en Rhodésie, au Sud-Ouest africain, en Afrique du Sud et dans tous les territoires coloniaux. C'est tout ce qu'ils demandent: le droit de se gouverner eux-mêmes.

62. Les méthodes par lesquelles la plupart de ces territoires ont été acquis sont d'une honnêteté fort douteuse. Les hauts principes humanitaires des puissances coloniales n'étaient ni hauts ni humanitaires. H. R. Rudin a écrit dans son ouvrage African Perspective:

"Quiconque a tenu en main les traités que des chefs sans instruction ont signés d'une croix hésitante, signifiant ainsi qu'ils acceptaient la domination de l'homme blanc, ne peut échapper à la certitude qu'on a dû employer toutes sortes d'artifices pour persuader les Africains de signer des documents qu'ils ne pouvaient comprendre."

63. Du nord au sud, de l'est à l'ouest, le cri de guerre en Afrique est: "Indépendance!" Le pouvoir politique et l'autodétermination sont les objectifs suprêmes de tous les Africains encore soumis au joug colonial. C'est le seul moyen pour les Africains de pouvoir un jour s'exprimer et se développer, même dans les régions où la domination blanche paraît fermement établie.

64. Dans cette lutte, ils ne sont pas seuls; ils ont l'appui sans réserve de tous les Etats indépendants d'Afrique, comme on le voit dans une résolution adoptée par la récente Conférence de Monrovia^{1/}, réunissant les chefs d'Etat d'Afrique et de Madagascar, résolution où ils affirmaient:

"leur détermination unanime de prêter assistance matérielle et morale à tous les territoires dépendants des puissances coloniales en vue d'accélérer leur accession à l'indépendance".

65. Les problèmes les plus difficiles et les plus dangereux en Afrique aujourd'hui sont ceux qui se posent lorsqu'on essaye d'intégrer à la métropole des territoires d'outre-mer ou encore de dresser les blancs contre les Africains. La discrimination raciale sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes les parties du monde atteint l'homme dans ses sentiments les plus profonds. L'Afrique du Sud avec sa politique d'apartheid appliquée par le gouvernement sera l'objectif que viseront les nationalistes africains et les libéraux européens jusqu'à ce qu'elle soit détruite. Elle sera certainement détruite et peut-être plus tôt que nous ne pensons.

66. Passant maintenant au projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354], l'Assemblée est une fois de plus saisie de la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée ou Irian occidental. Le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas est présenté dans le cadre de la résolution 1514 (XV) à propos du point de l'ordre du jour intitulé: "La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". Sous ce titre, il convient de poser la question de l'autodétermination et de l'indépendance des peuples coloniaux et toute délégation a le droit de le faire. Le Gouvernement néerlandais a soulevé la question pour les habitants de l'Irian occidental. Une puissance coloniale qui cherche à octroyer l'indépendance à un peuple asservi a ce droit et ce privilège.

67. Si nous ignorions la situation qui existait voici trois ou quatre ans en Irian occidental, nous ne mettrions pas en question, nous admirerions sans réserve la mesure prise par le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas en faveur de l'Irian occidental. Mais, connaissant la situation et l'historique du problème, ma délégation est portée à croire que toute mesure prise par l'Assemblée générale en ce qui concerne l'Irian occidental doit également tenir compte de la revendication émise depuis longtemps par l'Indonésie sur ce territoire. Un règlement de la question de l'Irian occidental doit intervenir, à notre avis, en consultation avec l'Indonésie.

68. Le Gouvernement indonésien revendique l'Irian occidental depuis que l'Indonésie est un Etat indépendant. Il a fondé cette revendication sur les négociations et les résultats de la Conférence de la Table ronde. Le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas a rejeté cette revendication parce que, disait-il, les habitants de l'Irian occidental sont des Papous et non pas des Indonésiens, ni de la même race que les Indonésiens. Même si tel est le cas, nous estimons que les différences ethniques n'empêchent jamais un peuple de former un Etat paisible et harmonieux.

69. Les Pays-Bas proposent un plébiscite qui permettrait à la population de l'Irian occidental de faire connaître ses aspirations. Le Gouvernement néerlandais sait fort bien que cette population est illettrée, et il l'a d'ailleurs qualifiée lui-même, voici quatre ans, de population arriérée et ignorante, primitive de mœurs et de culture et il a déclaré qu'à son avis elle avait besoin d'un tuteur ou d'un guide; le Gouvernement néerlandais ne pouvait donc pas être très sérieux en proposant un plébiscite. Quant à proposer que les Nations Unies agissent comme une sorte d'autorité administrante, ce serait imposer à l'Organisation un rôle sans précédent.

70. L'Organisation des Nations Unies n'a jamais, dans toute son histoire, assumé directement l'administration d'un territoire. Dans tous les cas qui se sont présentés, l'administration a été confiée à une puissance qui avait déjà une certaine expérience des peuples non autonomes. Or les seules puissances qui ont cette expérience sont les puissances coloniales. Etant donné les attaques auxquelles ces puissances sont en butte actuellement, je suppose que pas une d'entre elles ne serait disposée à assumer une telle responsabilité.

71. En ce qui concerne les pays d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique du Sud, qui ont connu à une époque ou à une autre la domination coloniale et qui ont conquis, dans bien des cas, leur liberté au prix du sang, ils ne voudraient pas, nous en sommes sûrs, assumer le rôle d'autorité administrante. Par suite, même si le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas était adopté, il ne serait pas mis en œuvre, car nous estimons que ce serait une grave erreur que de vouloir appliquer ce projet de résolution sans tenir compte de la revendication de l'Indonésie, qui est appuyée par la majorité des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Il faut observer que les projets de résolution présentés par l'Indonésie sur le même sujet, jusqu'à présent, ont toujours obtenu la majorité simple à la Première Commission.

72. Certes, mon gouvernement défend le droit de tous les peuples à l'autodétermination, mais il ne pourrait soutenir aucune solution, même fondée sur le principe de l'autodétermination, si elle devait provoquer des effusions de sang, surtout chez les peuples que nous voulons protéger. L'autodétermination et l'indépendance doivent apporter la liberté et le bonheur, non pas la crainte, la haine et les effusions de sang.

73. Les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie se prétendent tous deux les porte-parole de l'Irian occidental. On nous dit que pour donner du poids à leurs prétentions ils ont invité des habitants de l'Irian occidental à faire partie de leurs délégations. On ne peut porter un jugement ni parvenir à une décision en se fondant sur la présence de représentants de l'Irian occidental dans la délégation de l'Indonésie, ni d'après la déclaration de cette délégation devant l'Assemblée. Ma délégation regrette que toute cette question ait été mise en discussion à l'Assemblée générale, car nous pensons sincèrement qu'elle finira par diviser la population autochtone en factions qui se prononceront en faveur d'une thèse ou de l'autre et nous estimons donc que cette question devrait être retirée.

74. Tout en admirant les idéaux qui ont inspiré le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, ma délégation estime que toute mesure qui serait prise devrait l'être en pleine coopération avec la délégation de l'Indonésie et le Gouvernement indonésien. Dans les circonstances actuelles et pour prouver son désir ardent de voir résoudre à l'amiable la question de l'Irian occidental, ma délégation propose de lancer un appel aux Gouvernements des Pays-Bas et de l'Indonésie, et de les inviter à reprendre les négociations pour trouver une solution pacifique. Si nous proposons cet appel, c'est parce que nous savons bien que certaines résolutions que l'Assemblée pourrait adopter ne pourraient être appliquées sans l'emploi de la force, auquel les Nations Unies répugnent toujours. Lorsque des questions de ce genre sont soumises à l'Assemblée, elles restent inévitablement à l'ordre du jour pendant des années sans aboutir à un résultat. Au contraire, beaucoup de questions ont été résolues par négociations directes. La question de Chypre en est l'exemple classique. Nous espérons donc vivement que nos amis entendront cet appel et entreprendront immédiatement des négociations.

75. Les mots sont insuffisants pour exprimer la reconnaissance de ma délégation envers les représentants qui ont donné leur appui à la cause de la liberté des peuples coloniaux. Tous les gouvernements représentés ici, à l'exception des colonialistes irréductibles, ont contribué d'une façon ou d'une autre à la lutte pour l'indépendance des peuples asservis en Afrique et en Asie. Certains ont fait beaucoup, d'autres un peu moins. Quoi qu'il en soit, ils ont fait quelque chose pour le succès de notre cause et nous leur en sommes reconnaissants. Nous les prions maintenant, dans le même esprit, de devenir les vedettes du dernier acte de cette tragédie de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme et, à cet effet, d'appuyer toutes les résolutions conçues pour mettre fin à la servitude, à l'exploitation, à la discrimination, à la misère et à la domination étrangère, en Afrique, en Asie, dans les Amériques et dans les régions les plus reculées de la terre.

76. En fin de compte, les projets de résolution qui nous sont soumis demandent de la bonne foi et de l'impartialité. L'Afrique est notre héritage; elle doit être libre du point de vue politique. Avec l'aide de l'Assemblée, par l'intermédiaire de tout dispositif que les Nations Unies pourront élaborer, que les peuples des territoires non autonomes décident eux-mêmes les dates auxquelles ils devront accéder à l'indépendance. Nous ne mentirons pas à notre promesse d'appuyer toute résolution conçue à cet effet.

77. Les Nations Unies ne doivent pas faillir à leur tâche actuelle qui est de créer un monde nouveau, de le faire grandir et de le conduire pas à pas vers le but de la perfection. Avec la force morale, le courage et la foi dans les destinées de l'homme, toutes les difficultés seront vaincues et l'Afrique sera libre.

78. M. KURKA (Tchécoslovaquie) [traduit du russe]: Près d'un an s'est écoulé depuis le moment où l'Assemblée générale a adopté la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [1514 (XV)]. Cette Déclaration, adoptée sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique par une majorité écrasante des Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, était l'expression de la volonté de toute l'humanité pacifique et progressiste qui avait le droit de s'attendre que la plus haute organisation internationale prit les mesures décisives pour abolir un des plus odieux anachronismes de notre temps, le colonialisme. La résolution 1514 (XV) — cette condamnation symbolique, par les peuples, du colonialisme — est, sans aucun doute, parmi les décisions les plus importantes prises par l'Organisation des Nations Unies depuis sa création.

79. C'est précisément pour cela qu'elle a été accueillie par tous les peuples épris de liberté avec un sentiment de profonde satisfaction. Cette déclaration confirmait à nouveau que tous les peuples ont un droit inaliénable à la pleine liberté, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national, et que la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales. Voilà pourquoi l'Assemblée générale a proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

80. Mais l'adoption de la Déclaration à la dernière session de l'Assemblée n'a pas mis fin à la responsabilité de l'ONU à l'égard de plus de 70 millions d'hommes qui, sur notre planète, souffrent encore maintenant du joug pesant du colonialisme ou d'une semi-exploitation coloniale. Des efforts semblables à ceux qui, l'an dernier, ont précédé l'adoption de la Déclaration, sont à déployer tant que le dernier peuple, le dernier pays asservi, ne pourra vivre librement, sans crainte pour son indépendance. C'est pourquoi l'Assemblée générale doit prendre de nouvelles et énergiques mesures pour assurer en conséquence l'application du programme de libération prévu dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance.

81. Le colonialisme, cette honte du XX^{ème} siècle, est toujours vivant bien que les représentants des puissances coloniales cherchent à nous convaincre du contraire.

82. Les événements de ces derniers mois confirment, une fois de plus, que les puissances coloniales sabotent, par tous les moyens, l'application de la Déclaration, poursuivent leurs sanglantes guerres coloniales et appliquent des mesures de répression à l'encontre des peuples coloniaux et des territoires non autonomes. Les puissances coloniales cherchent, par des moyens militaires, à conserver les derniers vestiges de leur domination coloniale et, là où une pression les contraint à céder, ils cherchent à acquérir des positions encore plus dangereuses grâce à de nouvelles formes de colonialisme.

83. Qui pourrait affirmer, dans ces conditions, que le colonialisme est mort?

84. C'est à l'Organisation des Nations Unies qu'incombe l'immense responsabilité de liquider sans délai les séquelles du colonialisme, afin que soit mis en œuvre le principe de coopération pacifique internationale et que, par là-même, on aboutisse à la paix et à la sécurité générales. Le colonialisme est la manifestation du déni de la liberté et du grossier mépris des principes fondamentaux des rapports entre les peuples. Le déni des droits fait naître des conflits et des guerres qui peuvent, dans l'état actuel des choses, avoir les conséquences les plus terribles que l'on puisse imaginer. Le lien étroit qui unit la nécessité d'exiger la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, à celle qui exige la consolidation de la paix et de la sécurité internationales est la conséquence de la nécessité irrécusable de respecter le droit, étant donné l'évolution internationale contemporaine. Les actes malintentionnés des colonisateurs et de leurs acolytes, au Congo, en Angola, en Algérie, en Afrique du Sud et ailleurs, fournissent des exemples patents des efforts convulsifs, visant à l'écrasement des mouvements de libération nationale, qu'ils déploient pour retenir les vestiges de la domination coloniale, et font voir comment peut ainsi s'aggraver la menace d'une catastrophe mondiale.

85. Voilà pourquoi la non-observation, par les puissances coloniales, de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux exige de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies de nouvelles mesures décisives. Aussi le Gouvernement de la République socialiste tchécoslovaque accorde-t-il une grande valeur à la proposition faite par le Gouvernement de l'Union soviétique de voir inscrire à l'ordre du jour de la seizième session de l'Assemblée générale la question de l'application de la Déclaration adoptée à la quinzième session de ladite assemblée.

86. Une des exigences fondamentales de la résolution 1514 (XV) était exprimée par un appel lancé aux puissances coloniales afin que celles-ci mettent immédiatement fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants.

87. A cette exigence humanitaire de la Déclaration, les colonialistes ont cyniquement répondu, comme on le sait, en intensifiant leurs guerres coloniales d'anéantissement, en employant la terreur et des mesures de répression contre les populations des pays coloniaux et non autonomes.

88. Un exemple saisissant de l'arbitraire des colonialistes nous est fourni, avant tout, par l'action terroriste brutale des militaires portugais en Angola, contre le mouvement de libération du peuple angolais, qui cherche à accéder à l'indépendance et à faire disparaître la domination coloniale. Il est indispensable de souligner que le Portugal, qui refuse systématiquement d'appliquer les décisions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale relatives à l'Angola, a déclenché une guerre coloniale contre le peuple angolais juste après l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV) par l'Assemblée générale de l'ONU à sa quinzième session.

89. La cruauté avec laquelle le régime fasciste de Salazar écrase le mouvement de libération nationale dans ce pays est sans exemple. Selon les informations du magazine américain Newsweek et selon les quotidiens britanniques The Observer et The Guardian, au cours de quatre mois seulement de leur campagne d'extermination les mercenaires portugais ont tué environ 50 000 Angolais. Par milliers des Angolais ont été jetés dans les camps de concentration de Baia dos Tigres, Dembos, Porto Alexandre et Silva Porto. Des unités de la Légion portugaise appliquent en Angola des méthodes aussi cruelles que celles employées par la criminelle organisation nazie "SS", au cours de l'occupation allemande en Europe.

90. Des dizaines de milliers de fugitifs, qui, pour sauver leur vie, passent de l'Angola au Congo voisin, apportent des témoignages bouleversants sur l'extermination massive de la population et sur l'indicible terreur par laquelle les colonisateurs portugais cherchent à maintenir leur domination en Angola.

91. Qui peut donc, à la lumière de ces faits, déclarer que le colonialisme est mort? Que les représentants du Portugal osent encore parler de leur "mission civilisatrice" en Angola. C'est bafouer le bon sens et la dignité!

92. Un autre exemple de l'arbitraire des colonialistes est la situation en Algérie, où la France, depuis sept ans déjà, poursuit une sanglante guerre coloniale dans le dessein d'écraser le mouvement de libération du peuple algérien pour la liberté. Cette guerre a causé au peuple algérien des pertes considérables et de dures souffrances, mais elle n'a pas brisé son inébranlable détermination de conquérir son indépendance. Les colonialistes français se refusent toujours obstinément à reconnaître qu'il n'y a qu'une seule voie pour atteindre la solution du problème algérien, c'est celle qui consiste à donner au peuple algérien la liberté d'exercer son droit à disposer de lui-même.

93. On peut ajouter à cela les projets provocateurs de la France qui tendent à diviser l'Algérie et à en détacher la région la plus riche du territoire algérien, notamment le Sahara, avec ses immenses richesses naturelles.

94. Il faut souligner que ces projets sont en opposition totale au paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV) qui déclare:

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

95. Mais l'Angola et l'Algérie ne sont pas les seuls exemples des méthodes pratiquées par les puissances coloniales pour fouler impudemment aux pieds les recommandations de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays, aux peuples coloniaux, et pour tenter, à main armée, d'écraser le mouvement de libération des peuples.

96. Ceux qui ont ici objecté que les débats sur l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) intensifient la guerre froide, devraient cependant reconnaître que des "guerres chaudes" sont menées en Afrique et en Asie par les colonisateurs, contre des peuples dont le seul tort est de lutter avec abnégation pour la liberté de leur pays.

97. La Grande-Bretagne, depuis des années, poursuit son agression armée contre l'Oman; elle écrase, par la force armée, le mouvement de libération de la Rhodésie du Nord et de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Kenya, du Nyassaland et autres territoires d'Afrique. Les peuples de la Guyane britannique, des colonies espagnoles et de l'Irian occidental occupé par les Pays-Bas doivent continuer de lutter pour leur liberté.

98. En ce qui concerne l'Irian occidental, je voudrais, à ce propos, remarquer que la délégation tchécoslovaque rejette catégoriquement les manœuvres des

Pays-Bas; elles sont, à proprement parler, à ce point absurdes qu'elles trouvent dans la résolution 1514 (XV) le moyen de perpétuer la domination des colonisateurs hollandais sur ce territoire qui fait incontestablement partie de l'Indonésie. Le Gouvernement tchécoslovaque appuie sans réserve la seule solution équitable et possible qui soit: le retour du territoire de l'Irian occidental à qui il appartient, c'est-à-dire à l'Indonésie.

99. Jusqu'à présent, on n'a pas vu cesser non plus l'ingérence des colonialistes dans les affaires intérieures du Congo, pas plus que n'ont cessé leurs intrigues contre l'intégrité et la souveraineté de ce jeune Etat. Les colonisateurs, à l'aide de leurs fantoches, cherchent encore à détacher du Congo la province la plus riche, le Katanga, en employant, à ces fins, la force armée.

100. Au moment où s'accroît la lutte des peuples colonisés et non autonomes pour leur libération, on ne peut, à ce propos, s'empêcher de rappeler le rôle joué par le groupement agressif de l'OTAN dont le noyau est constitué par les anciens et les nouveaux colonisateurs agissant de compagnie.

101. Ce n'est un secret pour personne que les colonisateurs portugais, pour écraser les patriotes angolais, se servent des armements de l'OTAN et, avant tout, de ceux fournis par l'Amérique et l'Allemagne de l'Ouest. Des divisions portugaises en Angola, françaises en Algérie, faisant partie des cadres du commandement de l'OTAN, et au su du Conseil de l'OTAN, ont été dirigées contre les peuples angolais et algériens. Les unités françaises en Algérie sont, en majorité, équipées d'armes américaines, acquises par l'intermédiaire de l'OTAN. La France effectue, au profit de l'OTAN, des essais nucléaires en territoire africain.

102. Il est clair que, sans une large aide militaire, financière et politique de l'OTAN et des Etats-Unis, les puissances coloniales auraient été, depuis longtemps déjà, contraintes de mettre fin à leurs actions armées contre les peuples colonisés, et obligées de leur accorder l'indépendance.

103. Dans sa déclaration du 7 novembre 1961 [1048ème séance], le représentant des Etats-Unis avait accusé les délégations des pays socialistes d'attaquer les pays occidentaux sous prétexte de lutter contre le colonialisme; et il a tenté d'expliquer que, lorsque les pays socialistes dirigeaient leurs critiques justifiées contre la politique coloniale des Etats impérialistes de l'OTAN et autres blocs agressifs, il s'agissait là d'une opération de "guerre froide".

104. Nous affirmons que semblable calomnie contre les pays socialistes ne peut cacher la faiblesse des arguments présentés par la délégation américaine. Nous n'attaquons pas le dénommé "monde occidental" ni les alliés des Etats-Unis, mais nous luttons pour accélérer la liquidation des derniers vestiges du colonialisme et ce n'est pas notre faute si tous les derniers Etats coloniaux sont les alliés les plus proches des Etats-Unis, dans le bloc militaire de l'OTAN.

105. Mais ce n'est pas tout. Le même jour, le représentant des Etats-Unis voulait nous faire croire que son pays, en sa qualité de "puissance anticolonialiste la plus ancienne", est de tout cœur avec ceux qui luttent pour la liberté et l'indépendance des peuples coloniaux. Mais nous croyons, au contraire, que la vérité est tout l'opposé. Les Etats-Unis possèdent non seulement des territoires coloniaux, comme Porto Rico, Okinawa, une bonne partie des îles du Pacifique, mais encore ils sont, en fait, l'appui principal des blocs militaires agressifs qui donnent aux puissances coloniales la possibilité d'écraser la lutte de libération des peuples coloniaux et non autonomes.

106. Ce n'est un secret pour personne que c'est aux Etats-Unis que sont formées les unités de subversion qui doivent être envoyées ensuite dans d'autres pays afin d'y réduire les mouvements de libération nationale, d'organiser les sabotages et la subversion dans les pays nouvellement constitués et dont le régime et la politique ne sont pas du goût des impérialistes. Par exemple, ces unités de subversion organisent déjà des campagnes de terreur contre les mouvements de libération des peuples du Sud-Viet-Nam.

107. Comme on le sait, contrairement aux accords de Genève sur l'Indochine de 1954, le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis envoie systématiquement au Sud-Viet-Nam du personnel et du matériel militaires, et encourage les autorités vietnamiennes à saboter les accords de Genève.

108. Cette ingérence des Etats-Unis crée ainsi au Sud-Viet-Nam un dangereux foyer de tension qui représente une menace sérieuse à la paix et à la sécurité de l'ensemble de l'Asie.

109. Mon gouvernement condamne cette ingérence américaine et exige que, dans l'intérêt du peuple vietnamien et de la paix en Asie, le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis observe strictement les accords de Genève sur l'Indochine.

110. C'est vraiment payer d'audace que parler ainsi de la position anticolonialiste des Etats-Unis. Si c'est là de l'anticolonialisme, alors qu'est-ce donc que le colonialisme, au regard du représentant des Etats-Unis?

111. Nous affirmons que toutes les interventions militaires des puissances coloniales de l'OTAN, ou parties à d'autres pactes militaires, contre les mouvements de libération nationale représentent une menace sérieuse à la paix mondiale, car elles peuvent entraîner facilement à des conflits aux conséquences les plus sérieuses.

112. Aussi, dans l'intérêt de tous les peuples, l'Assemblée générale doit prendre des mesures décisives pour faire mettre un terme aux guerres coloniales et aux campagnes de répression des colonialistes et pour assurer la mise en application immédiate de la résolution 1514 (XV). Ce serait le seul moyen de réussir à ce que le processus de libération et d'indépendance se produise sans autres effusions de sang et pertes matérielles.

113. En cherchant à retarder au maximum l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, les puissances coloniales déploient de grands efforts et imaginent toutes sortes de prétextes, afin de justifier, devant l'opinion publique internationale et devant celle de leur propre pays, leur politique coloniale et la couvrir d'un voile pseudo-humanitaire.

114. Ces puissances se targuent de ce qu'elles accomplissent aux colonies une "mission civilisatrice", de ce que les territoires autonomes placés sous leur administration ne seraient prétendument pas mûrs pour l'indépendance, qu'ils ne sont pas en mesure de "voler de leurs propres ailes."

115. Toutes ces échappatoires des colonisateurs non seulement ne correspondent pas à la réalité, mais sont aussi en contradiction avec les dispositions du paragraphe 3 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV), dont voici le texte: "Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance".

116. Je voudrais dire à ces avocats du colonialisme: ne parlez pas de "mission civilisatrice" alors que vous pensez au pétrole, à l'uranium, à l'or et autres richesses naturelles des pays non autonomes, alors que vous pensez aux moyens d'édifier votre bien-être sur la misère et l'exploitation des autres peuples.

117. Voilà les "idéaux élevés" au nom desquels vous exercez vos épouvantables violences sur les peuples d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine.

118. L'expérience de nombreux pays nouvellement indépendants démontre que, si un peuple est libéré du joug colonial, suivant une image connue, il peut "déplacer des montagnes" et ne craint aucun obstacle. Nous avons l'exemple des nouveaux Etats d'Afrique et d'Asie lesquels, après le départ des colonialistes et avec des ressources limitées, obtiennent des succès importants dans le développement de leur économie et dans l'amélioration du niveau de vie de leur population, parce que leurs peuples ont secoué les chaînes du servage colonial qui paralysaient toute initiative libre et créatrice. Il est temps de mettre fin à l'humiliation des peuples coloniaux et non autonomes; il est temps d'en finir avec la démagogie — en matière de supériorité des colonisateurs — dont le but est de justifier la prolongation de l'existence du colonialisme.

119. Les impérialistes aiment poser aux "bien-faiteurs" et ils cherchent à faire croire au monde qu'ils ont accordé volontairement l'indépendance à leurs colonies et territoires non autonomes. En vérité, ils ne sont partis volontairement d'aucun de ces territoires; c'est l'héroïque lutte de libération des peuples qui les y a contraints, tout comme le rapport des forces dans le monde, qui devient de plus en plus défavorable au régime impérialiste.

120. Les peuples et les pays coloniaux ne reçoivent pas, de leurs anciens colonisateurs, leur indépendance "par bon vouloir". Ils l'obtiennent grâce à l'exercice du droit inaliénable de tous les peuples à la libre détermination et, en règle générale, à la suite d'une longue lutte. Donc, ils ne sont pas forcés de racheter leur indépendance par des concessions à longue échéance à leurs anciens maîtres les colons, lesquels, soit dit en langage imagé, "veulent revenir par la fenêtre là où les peuples les avaient chassés par la porte". Les diverses théories sur le transfert, par libre consentement, de la souveraineté aux Etats nouvellement constitués, ne visent qu'à maintenir les éléments de domination et à créer des prémisses permettant d'imposer à ces nouveaux Etats des obligations qui, normalement, seraient considérées comme une grossière violation des droits souverains de l'Etat.

121. Pour maintenir dans ces pays leur influence politique, économique et culturelle, les anciens Etats coloniaux s'efforcent, de préférence par voie d'accords arbitraires, de contraindre ces nouveaux Etats à s'intégrer dans divers groupes économiques et politiques, et à créer des bases militaires sur leur territoire et, sous le masque de l'aide dite économique, à conserver dans ces pays leur influence politique, économique et culturelle.

122. Les accords d'aide militaire et la création de bases militaires étrangères sur leur territoire constituent un danger particulièrement grand pour les nouveaux pays indépendants.

123. Il suffit de se rappeler le rôle joué par les bases militaires belges au cours de l'attaque armée des colonialistes contre la République du Congo, après que ce pays s'est vu accorder l'indépendance.

124. La base française de Bizerte, dont la liquidation est résolument exigée par le peuple tunisien depuis la création même de l'Etat tunisien, a servi de prétexte, cette année, à l'agression armée française contre la Tunisie, agression qui a entraîné des pertes humaines et matérielles énormes.

125. Les bases militaires des impérialistes sur territoires étrangers constituent non seulement une menace perpétuelle à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté de ces pays, mais elles servent également aux colonisateurs à écraser les mouvements de libération dans les régions qui les avoisinent.

126. L'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies ne peut passer sous silence une situation dans laquelle, aux formes manifestes de la domination coloniale contraires à la Charte des Nations Unies et au droit international, se substituent des méthodes détournées de domination coloniale. C'est pourquoi l'Assemblée générale doit condamner les accords inégaux, qui représentent l'un des principaux instruments de ces nouvelles formes du colonialisme et un obstacle sérieux à la libération totale des peuples et des pays qui souffrent encore des conséquences d'une longue domination coloniale. L'existence de ces accords et leur maintien en vigueur sont inadmissibles au point de vue du principe de la libre détermination des peuples et du point de vue de la nécessité absolue de liquider complètement le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Les accords inégaux présentent également un danger pour le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, et leur existence est incompatible avec les principes de coexistence pacifique des peuples, telle que la proclame la Charte des Nations Unies. A notre avis, l'Assemblée générale se doit de prendre une décision qui aurait pour effet d'annuler tous ces accords inégaux produits directs de la domination coloniale. Le droit de refuser ces accords devrait être reconnu à tous ces pays. Il est également indispensable d'abroger tous les accords grâce auxquels les puissances coloniales violent l'unité territoriale de tous les territoires sous tutelle et non autonomes, et, à l'avenir, de ne plus admettre d'agissements de cette nature.

127. La résolution 1514 (XV) indique nettement le problème essentiel qu'il est indispensable de régler immédiatement, à savoir mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin à la domination coloniale, cause de la misère et de l'état arriéré d'une grande partie des pays d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine. C'est pourquoi nous sommes convaincus que l'application de cette déclaration doit précisément servir de base à tous les programmes de l'ONU destinés au renforcement de l'indépendance et du développement économique de telle ou telle région.

128. Par exemple, de quoi l'Afrique a-t-elle le plus besoin aujourd'hui? Les pays africains exigent, avant tout, la liquidation pleine et entière du colonialisme sous tous ses aspects, et l'octroi de l'assistance dont ils ont besoin pour éliminer immédiatement les lourdes conséquences de l'exploitation coloniale en matière économique, sociale et culturelle. Il faut accorder le plus rapidement possible, aux pays africains et autres pays sous-développés, une aide qui leur permette de récupérer dans le domaine économique ce dont ils ont été privés par des lustres et des lustres d'esclavage colonial.

129. Certes, toutes les formes d'"assistance" ne sont pas effectivement une aide pour le développement de l'économie nationale de ces pays. On a bien souvent constaté que sous l'étiquette d'"assistance" se cachent fréquemment des objectifs diamétralement opposés aux intérêts des pays peu développés économiquement. Sous ce rapport, les monopoles américains font figure d'avant-coureurs en déployant, dans divers pays du monde, des efforts considérables pour se saisir des ressources naturelles et s'emparer des positions clés au point de vue économique. Ce n'est pas sans raison qu'ils concentrent leur attention sur les immenses richesses naturelles des anciennes colonies et pays non autonomes. Ce n'est pas par hasard que ces monopoles accordent une importance majeure aux transferts de capitaux et particulièrement à ceux qui, sous forme d'investissements directs à bénéfices rapides, permettent une mainmise sur de nouveaux marchés et ressources de matières premières.

130. Ainsi, de 1950 à 1958, les investissements américains dans les pays sous-développés représentaient 4 milliards de dollars, alors que les bénéfices tirés de ces investissements ont atteint le chiffre énorme de 11 milliards de dollars. Ainsi donc, les monopoles ont fait plus de 100 p. 100 de bénéfices. On peut donc dire que comme "la misère sur le pauvre monde" les monopoles américains se sont jetés sur le continent africain, où plus de 200 sociétés américaines déploient leur activité et où les investissements américains privés s'élevaient en 1959 à 843 millions de dollars contre 104 millions en 1943.

131. Un danger très grave pour les nouveaux pays indépendants, c'est la pénétration des monopoles d'Allemagne occidentale, qui, dans des proportions toujours plus grandes, occupent les positions des anciennes puissances coloniales. Ils pénètrent par la porte de service dans les régions d'où les concurrents anglais, français ou belges ont été chassés par la population autochtone.

132. Outre les transferts de capitaux, et pour écraser les mouvements de libération des peuples coloniaux et non autonomes, on peut encore signaler, toujours d'Allemagne occidentale, les fournitures d'armes et autres équipements à destination de l'Espagne, de la France, du Portugal et autres puissances coloniales. On sait également que, dans les opérations de répression, menées par les forces armées contre les mouvements de libération, un rôle important est dévolu aux hordes mercenaires de fascistes et criminels de guerre d'Allemagne occidentale.

133. Voilà pourquoi la lutte contre le colonialisme est tout aussi importante dans le domaine économique que politique. L'impérialisme utilise le retard économique — qu'il a causé lui-même — des pays libérés afin de les maintenir dans une position d'infériorité à l'égard de la distribution capitaliste internationale du travail, cela pour s'assurer la mainmise sur les richesses naturelles de ces pays et se réserver le contrôle de leur développement économique et politique.

134. Cependant, le capital étranger, qui, du fait de l'exploitation économique des pays sous-développés, rapporte chaque année plus de 8 milliards de dollars, a déjà perdu sa position de monopole dans l'économie de ces pays.

135. Les Etats du système socialiste mondial, dont la puissance économique va croissant, jouent maintenant de ce fait un rôle important quant aux relations avec les sphères économiques des pays sous-développés, ce qui affaiblit la pression économique des monopoles capitalistes et contribue, par cela même, à l'achèvement victorieux de la lutte des peuples pour leur libération nationale.

136. Grâce à la coopération économique avec les pays socialistes, les pays nouvellement indépendants peuvent plus facilement se débarrasser de leur fatal asservissement aux lois de l'économie capitaliste, et s'arracher aux griffes des trusts impérialistes bien avant que leur puissance de production n'atteigne le niveau des pays développés.

137. Les pays socialistes offrent à ces pays nouvellement indépendants des crédits, des prêts, les machines les plus modernes, de l'équipement et une assistance technique, et cela inconditionnellement et sans atteinte à leur souveraineté. Cette assistance ne vise qu'un but: favoriser le développement économique indépendant des anciennes colonies, les aider à s'intégrer comme partenaires à droits égaux dans la distribution internationale du travail, et à se débarrasser de l'exploitation des puissances capitalistes industriellement développées.

138. Voilà pourquoi, nous pouvons, sans hésitation, rejeter la grossière calomnie par laquelle les représentants des puissances coloniales cherchent à faire croire aux peuples libérés que les pays socialistes ont certains "objectifs secrets" à l'égard de l'Afrique, de l'Asie et de l'Amérique latine. Les clameurs de ces chevaliers de l'anticommunisme renforcent encore notre conviction que nous accomplissons une bonne action qui va carrément à l'encontre des intérêts des colonisateurs de tout poil et qui est au profit du renforcement de l'indépendance des Etats nouvellement constitués.

139. La délégation de la République socialiste tchécoslovaque estime que l'adoption de mesures efficaces pour la mise en œuvre immédiate de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux représente une des tâches essentielles de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale.

140. La conscience humaine ne peut prendre son parti d'aucune forme du colonialisme et ne peut demeurer indifférente à son égard. L'amitié entre nations, en l'occurrence, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, a non seulement le droit, mais le devoir de ne pas tolérer plus longtemps le colonialisme.

141. Le colonialisme, dans toutes ses manifestations, est la négation des normes morales, politiques et juridiques de la communauté internationale contemporaine et une menace directe aux bases d'une édification pacifique et équitable du monde. Voilà pourquoi une lutte constante pour extirper tous les vestiges du colonialisme doit être le fait de tous les peuples, qu'ils soient ou non directement menacés de la domination coloniale.

"Nous sommes opposés à toute forme de colonialisme, ancien ou récent, qui empêche le développement créateur des nations qui se sont engagées dans la voie de la liberté et de l'indépendance."

a déclaré le Président de la République tchécoslovaque, M. Antony Novotny, au cours de la discussion générale de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, et il a ajouté:

"Nous sommes fermement aux côtés des Etats nouveaux qui se sont libérés du joug colonial. Nous pensons que toutes les nations doivent leur venir en aide par tous les moyens pour leur permettre d'occuper dans le monde une place digne et pour empêcher toute ingérence dans leurs affaires intérieures qui mettrait en danger la paix et la sécurité internationales." [871ème séance, par. 59.]

142. Ma délégation estime qu'il est indispensable, avec tout le sérieux qui convient, de tirer les conclusions de ce que les puissances coloniales s'opposent obstinément à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. L'Assemblée générale doit prendre des mesures concrètes pour expliciter encore davantage la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et pour amener la liquidation la plus rapide du colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

143. Les mesures qu'il est indispensable de réaliser, et dont j'ai déjà parlé, figurent au projet de résolution déposé par la délégation de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355]. Ma délégation estime que les mesures proposées sont de toute urgence, et elle est convaincue que leur application conduira à la liquidation définitive du colonialisme; c'est pourquoi nous appuyons pleinement ce projet de résolution.

144. Nous estimons également que pour empêcher, de la part des puissances coloniales, toute obstruction et manœuvres dilatoires à l'égard du processus de liquidation du colonialisme, la nouvelle résolution qu'adoptera l'Assemblée générale de l'ONU doit fixer à ces puissances coloniales un délai obligatoire au terme duquel elles devront octroyer l'indépendance aux territoires placés sous leur tutelle et qui ne s'administrent pas eux-mêmes. Nous estimons que, en fixant la date limite à la fin de 1962, ce délai serait largement suffisant. C'est pourquoi il est indispensable de mettre au point immédiatement et pour chaque territoire un programme concret et réel d'accession à l'indépendance et d'en fixer la date de réalisation.

145. Nous appuyons également la proposition selon laquelle, pour assurer le contrôle sur l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, une commission spéciale serait créée, qui ferait rapport, à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale, sur les résultats de ces travaux.

146. Nous sommes convaincus que les mesures décisives de l'Assemblée générale destinées à soutenir la réalisation immédiate des principes contenus dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, auront un retentissement favorable aussi bien parmi les peuples ayant déjà obtenu leur indépendance que parmi ceux qui, en ce moment, passent par l'étape décisive de leur lutte pour la libération. Ces mesures leur seront une aide réelle dans cette lutte et, en même temps, une assurance de l'entière solidarité des autres Etats épris de paix. Elles renforceront la foi des jeunes Etats dans l'Organisation des Nations Unies et dans la justesse des principes de l'entente internationale à laquelle ils se joindront.

147. C'est pourquoi il est essentiel que le processus historique de la liquidation du colonialisme soit accompli le plus vite possible de manière que tous les peuples puissent réaliser leur droit inaliénable à la liberté, à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté de leur pays, et que soit éliminée la menace à la paix, fruit du colonialisme et des guerres coloniales.

148. M. MIYAZAKI (Japon) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'an dernier, lorsque la question de l'abolition du colonialisme a été discutée à l'Assemblée, ma délégation a eu l'occasion d'exposer son point de vue. Il n'a pas changé: c'est de ce même point de vue que nous examinons la question dont l'Assemblée est saisie maintenant. Pour qu'on le constate, j'aimerais donc rappeler le point de vue de ma délégation.

149. En premier lieu, je préciserai que la délégation du Japon a toujours été en faveur de l'abolition du colonialisme. Le colonialisme est une notion dépassée qui n'a plus de place dans le monde d'aujourd'hui. Il n'y a pas de doute sur ce point. La question est de savoir comment mettre fin au colonialisme et c'est là que les opinions diffèrent. Une première thèse met en relief l'urgence et la nécessité d'agir immédiatement au-dessus de toute autre considération. Selon cette thèse, il n'y a plus de temps à perdre pour mettre fin au régime colonial. Une autre thèse préconise une progression pacifique de l'état de dépendance à l'état d'indépendance. Ma délégation estime que les arguments présentés par ces deux thèses sont d'une égale importance et qu'il faut les associer si l'on veut vraiment réussir la décolonisation. La première thèse trouve un reflet dans le paragraphe 3 de la Déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV):

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

150. L'idée de ce paragraphe est que le manque de préparation ne doit jamais servir de prétexte si un peuple désire l'indépendance, quel que soit son état de préparation. Ce paragraphe ne conteste cependant pas l'intérêt de cette préparation; il est inutile de démontrer qu'une préparation suffisante est toujours recommandable pour une nouvelle nation.

M. Kurka (Tchécoslovaquie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

151. A cette même thèse se rattache l'idée de fixer une date limite et une seule pour tous les territoires encore non autonomes. Ma délégation a des objections contre cette idée d'une seule date limite applicable dans le monde entier, quelle que soit la situation qui varie forcément selon les territoires. La fixation d'une date limite unique est trop mécanique. Elle peut tout au plus exprimer une espérance ou rappeler que le problème est urgent. Les partisans de la date unique doutent parfois eux-mêmes de sa validité. On est tenté de craindre que la fixation d'une date unique et très rapprochée ne soit inspirée par une arrière-pensée, par exemple l'idée de plonger le territoire dans la confusion si la puissance administrante respecte cette date avant que les mesures nécessaires aient été prises, ou encore l'idée de préparer le chemin à la critique si la puissance administrante s'abstient de quitter le pays au jour fixé afin d'éviter le chaos. C'est donc une attitude malintentionnée, c'est l'attitude des agitateurs. Heureusement, à l'exception d'un petit groupe minoritaire, ce n'est pas l'attitude de la grande majorité des Etats. Même si les partisans de la date limite unique sont de bonne foi, une date applicable à tous les territoires uniformément n'aurait guère de sens. Elle viendrait trop tôt pour certains territoires et trop tard pour d'autres.

152. Une date limite revêt pourtant une certaine signification lorsqu'elle s'applique à un territoire particulier et à lui seul. Là encore, on ne peut la fixer arbitrairement. Il est indispensable d'examiner sérieusement la situation du territoire et de décider d'après des critères objectifs.

153. Notre deuxième point de vue fondamental en matière de décolonisation est que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance doit être appliquée dans le monde entier, quelle que soit la désignation officielle d'un territoire qui présente des attributs et caractères coloniaux. Un territoire sous tutelle ou un territoire non autonome ne prêtent pas à confusion, mais un territoire peut être qualifié de partie intégrante du pays métropolitain ou de membre d'une union ou fédération. Chacun de ces cas doit être retenu pour examen. Si l'on découvre qu'un territoire présente certains caractères coloniaux, il y a lieu de procéder à une étude de sa situation.

154. Notre troisième point de vue est que les règles de la décolonisation, telles qu'elles figurent dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, doivent être appliquées avec souplesse. Vu la variété infinie des conditions et des situations qui règnent dans les territoires dépendants, vu les particularités des divers territoires, il faudra agir avec circonspection et étudier séparément chaque territoire pour lui appliquer les règles de la décolonisation.

155. Un autre élément auquel ma délégation attache de l'importance est la collaboration des puissances administrantes. Après tout, c'est la puissance administrante qui est le plus intéressée à la question et qui est directement responsable de l'indépendance d'un territoire.

156. Lorsque l'Assemblée a examiné le titre de la Déclaration de t nous discutons aujourd'hui l'application, on a émis l'avis que le mot "octroi" était humiliant. On a proposé que l'indépendance ne fût pas octroyée mais obtenue, que la puissance administrante fût consentante ou non. Cette idée n'a pas été acceptée. Elle a été désapprouvée parce qu'elle pouvait causer des heurts et des conflits inutiles. L'intérêt de la collaboration des puissances administrantes ne peut être négligé, car sans cette collaboration le transfert des pouvoirs ne peut être pacifique et le passage de l'état colonial à l'autonomie et l'indépendance sera hérissé de difficultés. Ma délégation attache une importance primordiale à une transition pacifique et harmonieuse. Non seulement les populations coloniales et les puissances administrantes intéressées, mais les Nations Unies elles-mêmes doivent s'épargner les conflits inutiles et regrettables qui accompagnent les actes de décolonisation tentés sans la collaboration de la puissance administrante intéressée.

157. Ma délégation ne veut pas dire par là que la libération des peuples coloniaux doit être laissée au bon plaisir des seules puissances administrantes. Comme je l'ai dit, l'urgence d'agir est aussi importante que l'harmonie de la transition. C'est pourquoi ma délégation estime que les puissances administrantes doivent être instamment et constamment priées de se préparer sans délai à accorder l'indépendance.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

158. L'indépendance n'est pas un fruit tombé qu'on ramasse, c'est une récolte, et une bonne récolte exige le labeur persévérant de ceux qui la désirent, les habitants des territoires intéressés, les puissances administrantes et les Nations Unies.

159. Contrairement aux temps passés où la libération ne pouvait se réaliser que par une guerre d'indépendance, nous avons aujourd'hui la Charte des Nations Unies et la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, qui ont pour but de favoriser l'autonomie et l'indépendance des pays coloniaux dans l'ordre et la paix. C'est vraiment un progrès énorme dans l'évolution de la pensée humaine.

160. Aux Nations Unies, nous appuyons les peuples colonisés dont nous sommes des amis sincères. Nous estimons qu'il est de notre devoir d'inciter et d'encourager les puissances administrantes à se préparer sans délai à leur octroyer l'indépendance. De plus, nous estimons qu'il est de notre devoir de faire tout ce que nous pouvons pour aider les nouvelles nations indépendantes à se suffire à elles-mêmes le plus vite possible.

161. Il faut reconnaître que dans certains territoires la tendance de notre époque se reflète nettement et que les mesures de libération sont en bonne voie. Pour ces territoires, il est inutile de pousser à l'action. Il suffit d'attendre encore un peu pour voir prendre les mesures finales. Ne soyons donc pas trop exigeants envers la puissance qui administre de tels territoires. Ce sont les autres territoires qui doivent recevoir toute notre attention et qui ont besoin de nos encouragements. Je veux parler des territoires qui sont encore aujourd'hui sous le joug d'une domination coloniale à l'ancienne mode.

162. Pour favoriser le progrès de manière continue et organisée, un certain mécanisme est proposé. Cela nous amène à envisager l'aspect pratique de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

163. Je me souviens qu'un représentant a fait observer que toutes les résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée générale devaient être appliquées. Cela ne fait aucun doute et par suite il est bizarre d'adopter maintenant une nouvelle résolution sur l'application d'une résolution déjà adoptée. Si la question que nous examinons était seulement celle de l'application, cette observation serait justifiée. A mon avis, la question essentielle n'est pas de savoir comment appliquer la Déclaration, en appliquer les dispositions. Tout cela est déjà prévu dans les paragraphes de la Déclaration. Ces dispositions seront appliquées lorsque les puissances administrantes les accepteront et prendront des mesures en conséquence. La question la plus importante est donc de savoir comment encourager les puissances administrantes à prendre ces mesures, spécialement lorsqu'elles temporisent ou lorsque leur carence est évidente.

164. Le dispositif à cet effet devrait être créé sous l'égide des Nations Unies. Il surveillerait tous les territoires dépendants du monde entier. Il ne gênerait pas les puissances administrantes dans leur administration des territoires, mais chaque fois qu'il pourrait rendre un service constructif dans le processus de la décolonisation il porterait la question à la connaissance de l'Assemblée et il la ferait étudier et discuter pour décider des mesures à prendre. Ma délégation estime que ce dispositif pourrait fonctionner à l'avantage des peuples dépendants ainsi qu'à celui des puissances administrantes et apporterait une contribution tangible à la cause de la décolonisation.

165. En 15 ans, depuis l'instauration du régime international de tutelle, cinq territoires sous tutelle sont devenus indépendants; trois autres sont sur le point de le devenir. C'est un succès remarquable. Ma délégation félicite tous les Etats Membres qui ont participé aux travaux du Conseil de tutelle pour leur féconde contribution à la libération de millions d'êtres qui vivaient sous domination étrangère. L'Assemblée mérite également des éloges pour le rôle important qu'elle a joué dans cette œuvre mémorable.

166. Puisque le nombre des territoires sous tutelle a diminué ainsi, les territoires non autonomes vont prendre plus d'importance. Si nous comptons seulement les territoires au sujet desquels les puissances administrantes communiquent des renseignements conformément à l'Article 73, e, de la Charte, ces territoires sont au nombre de 51. Il existe en outre plusieurs territoires que les résolutions de l'Assemblée qualifient de territoires non autonomes, mais que les puissances administrantes intéressées refusent de considérer comme tels.

167. La Charte prévoit des dispositions différentes pour les territoires sous tutelle et pour les territoires non autonomes. Je vais citer ici quelques exemples de ces différences. Premièrement, la communication de renseignements d'ordre politique et constitutionnel est obligatoire pour les territoires sous tutelle, mais facultative pour les territoires non autonomes. La décision annoncée à l'Assemblée [1017ème séance] par lord Home, secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni, selon laquelle ce pays communiquera désormais des renseignements d'ordre politique et constitutionnel sur les territoires non autonomes qu'il administre, va au-delà des obligations énoncées au Chapitre XI de la Charte, comme lord Home lui-même l'a fait remarquer.

168. Deuxièmement, l'Assemblée générale est compétente pour recevoir des renseignements fournis par les pétitionnaires des territoires sous tutelle, alors qu'il n'existe aucune disposition de ce genre en ce qui concerne les territoires non autonomes.

169. Troisièmement, des missions de visite peuvent se rendre dans les territoires sous tutelle sous les auspices des Nations Unies, alors que rien de tel n'est prévu pour les territoires non autonomes.

170. Quatrièmement, l'autonomie ou l'indépendance est l'objectif visé pour les territoires sous tutelle, selon le Chapitre XII de la Charte. En ce qui concerne les territoires non autonomes, la Charte ne mentionne pas l'indépendance.

171. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, au contraire, envisage l'indépendance pour tous les territoires dépendants. Elle ne mentionne l'autonomie simple dans aucun de ses paragraphes. Si un territoire désire devenir partie autonome d'un autre pays, ce territoire, après avoir obtenu l'indépendance, doit être libre d'entrer de son plein gré dans le pays de son choix.

172. A en juger d'après divers indices, il semble que les distinctions existant dans la Charte entre les territoires sous tutelle et les territoires non autonomes soient de plus en plus sous-estimées. On peut se demander si cette tendance va à l'encontre des dispositions de la Charte. Ma délégation n'adopte pas une interprétation trop rigide en ce qui concerne la compétence de l'Assemblée générale. En fait, l'Assemblée a souvent adopté des résolutions sur des questions pour lesquelles la Charte ne lui attribue pas expressément compétence.

173. Point n'est besoin de dire que ces résolutions tendent en fin de compte à marquer le progrès de la coopération internationale et visent à favoriser la paix et la sécurité internationales et le bien-être de l'humanité.

174. L'application de ces résolutions n'est pas obligatoire comme si elle était imposée par les dispositions de la Charte. Ces résolutions n'en sont pas moins salutaires et par conséquent leur application est recommandée.

175. Dans le domaine des questions coloniales, nous voyons beaucoup de cas où, même si l'application des résolutions n'est pas obligatoire, il est bien préférable de leur donner effet.

176. Comme les dispositions de la Charte sont plus précises pour les territoires sous tutelle que pour les territoires non autonomes et comme le problème le plus important est maintenant celui de ces territoires non autonomes, on tend actuellement à faire en sorte que les dispositions primitivement prévues pour les territoires sous tutelle soient de plus en plus appliquées aux territoires non autonomes.

177. Le dispositif dont j'ai parlé plus haut pourra peut-être également jouer un rôle utile dans l'étude de cette question.

178. En conclusion, ma délégation espère que sera créé un dispositif du genre de celui que j'ai esquissé: ainsi l'application de la Charte et de la Déclaration sera constamment suivie, nul retard ne se produira sans raison valable et l'évolution ordonnée et pacifique vers l'indépendance deviendra possible dans le plus bref délai pour tous les territoires dépendants.

179. L'intérêt essentiel de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance est qu'il est universellement reconnu, pour la première fois, que l'indépendance de tous les pays et peuples coloniaux est indispensable pour la solution de tous les problèmes relatifs au colonialisme.

180. Ma délégation est persuadée que grâce à l'application de la Déclaration la coopération internationale dans le domaine politique sera élargie et renforcée et qu'on se rapprochera par la suite de la paix et de la sécurité internationales.

181. L'an dernier, ma délégation a exprimé devant l'Assemblée [933ème séance] l'espoir que l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance mettrait fin à une ère de haine et d'antagonisme et ouvrirait une ère nouvelle de coopération harmonieuse. Ma délégation croit fermement que cet espoir peut se réaliser grâce à l'application de la Déclaration.

182. Des projets de résolution ont été présentés sur le point 88 (La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux) et le point 22 (Assistance à l'Afrique: a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance); d'autres projets seront présentés bientôt. Ma délégation se réserve le droit d'exposer plus tard dans le débat son opinion sur tous ces projets de résolution ou sur certains d'entre eux, afin d'expliquer ses votes.

La séance est levée à 23 h 35.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

g) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. M. PLIMSOLL (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le présent débat fournit une utile occasion à l'Assemblée générale d'examiner les problèmes qui surgissent et les perspectives qui s'ouvrent dans un important secteur des relations internationales et humaines. Très naturellement et à juste titre, l'Assemblée générale a consacré dès le début une grande partie de son attention à l'extinction du colonialisme dans le monde entier. En participant aujourd'hui à ce débat, je me présente devant vous, très franchement et sans m'en excuser, comme le représentant d'une des puissances administrantes, d'un pays qui administre deux territoires sous tutelle, Nauru et la Nouvelle-Guinée, et un territoire non autonome, le Papua, qui est situé au sud du Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée.

2. L'Australie a toujours reconnu l'intérêt légitime et le rôle des Nations Unies en ce qui concerne les aspirations et les problèmes des peuples dépendants. Elle n'a jamais pensé qu'à ce point de vue les Nations Unies fussent une organisation dont l'existence nous était imposée contre notre volonté. Au contraire, l'Australie a joué un rôle important à la Conférence de San Francisco lorsqu'on y a fait figurer dans la Charte des Nations Unies des dispositions efficaces ayant trait aux territoires sous tutelle et aux territoires non autonomes. À San Francisco, ce sont surtout l'Australie, la Nouvelle-Zélande et les pays d'Amérique latine qui ont insisté pour que la communauté internationale, et plus spécialement l'Organisation, puissent agir efficacement en vue de mettre fin à l'ancien régime colonial. Hier soir [1054^{ème} séance], le représentant de la Colombie, dans les observations qu'il a présentées dans ce débat, a souligné certaines des considérations historiques et aussi des notions théoriques, sentimentales et juridiques dont on a tenu compte lors de l'élaboration de la Charte des Nations Unies sur cet aspect particulier de la responsabilité internationale. En outre, l'Australie a toujours coopéré avec les Nations Unies lorsqu'elle s'est acquittée de ses obligations internationales et de ses responsabilités dans ce domaine.

3. La Charte des Nations Unies est le document de base. La Charte des Nations Unies est le document qui définit les responsabilités des puissances administrantes, les droits des populations des territoires non autonomes et des territoires sous tutelle, ainsi que les responsabilités de l'Organisation internationale. En conséquence, l'Australie a, par traité, une obligation envers la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée. En tant qu'Etat Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, nous avons nos obligations internationales envers les autres Etats Membres, mais nous avons aussi des obligations très précises envers la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée. Ce sont des obligations que nous avons essayé de remplir, des obligations que nous entendons remplir. Conformément à ces obligations, acceptées de bonne grâce et que nous avons nous-mêmes contribué à faire inscrire dans la Charte, nous avons, par exemple, communiqué régulièrement depuis la naissance de l'Organisation des renseignements sur les divers aspects de notre administration, y compris, dès le début, des renseignements sur le progrès politique. Nous avons, par exemple, reçu régulièrement des missions de visite dans les territoires sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée et de Nauru, et ces missions de visite ont eu accès à tous les renseignements qu'elles désiraient, ont pu s'entretenir avec les habitants autochtones des territoires, se sont rendues dans la capitale de l'Australie afin d'avoir des entretiens non seulement avec les habitants comme elles l'avaient fait dans les territoires, mais aussi avec les ministres responsables de la politique du gouvernement et avec les fonctionnaires australiens chargés de l'exécution de cette politique.

4. Nous avons rendu compte régulièrement aux Nations Unies de la façon dont nous nous acquittions de nos obligations en vertu de la Charte. Nous avons notamment présenté des rapports annuels sur nos territoires, répondu à des questionnaires et à d'autres enquêtes sur des questions précises, comparu devant la Quatrième Commission et le Conseil de tutelle, répondu à des questions, exposé notre politique, pris en considération des recommandations et des déclarations faites par d'autres gouvernements. Nous avons conçu notre rôle dans ce domaine comme ayant deux faces. Nous avons essayé de rendre compte de notre action aux Nations Unies, et nous avons essayé, inversement, de tenir compte des opinions que les gouvernements et les organes des Nations Unies nous ont fait connaître. Le rôle de l'Assemblée générale dans ce domaine est difficile et délicat. Il consiste à favoriser le développement des colonies qui existent encore tout en évitant, par exemple, des désordres du genre de ceux qui sont survenus au Congo.

5. Les Nations Unies doivent donc faire preuve de réalisme et coopérer avec les Autorités administrantes; quant aux puissances administrantes, elles doivent s'efforcer honnêtement de donner effet au principe de l'autodétermination. Il s'agit donc, comme je l'ai dit, d'une coopération dans les deux sens. La puissance administrante doit faire quelque chose et elle doit faire beaucoup. Les Nations Unies doivent faire quelque chose et on attend d'elles qu'elles le fassent.

6. L'Assemblée générale doit aussi reconnaître que le colonialisme varie dans ses effets et dans ses possibilités, selon la politique et l'attitude générale des différentes puissances coloniales, et aussi selon les différents territoires. Comme le président Senghor du Sénégal l'a dit lorsqu'il a pris la parole récemment devant l'Assemblée [1045ème séance], les puissances coloniales ne sont pas toutes dans la même situation. On ne peut aborder la question en partant de l'hypothèse que les puissances coloniales suivent toutes la même politique. Lorsque je dis cela, je ne pense pas seulement à la question générale de savoir si les puissances s'efforcent honnêtement, énergiquement, de régler les problèmes qui se posent dans leurs territoires, mais je pense aussi au fait que, en raison du caractère différent des divers territoires, différentes autorités administrantes ont à régler des problèmes de différentes sortes et des politiques différentes conviennent dans chaque cas particulier.

7. Nous avons entendu jusqu'ici dans le présent débat deux discours, l'un prononcé par le représentant de Ceylan qui a été l'un des premiers orateurs à prendre la parole sur la question [1048ème séance] et l'autre par le Premier Ministre de la Nigéria [1047ème séance], qui ont présenté un tableau très clair de la manière dont différents problèmes se posent dans différents territoires. Par exemple, la superficie des territoires peut varier dans de larges limites et ces territoires peuvent en conséquence présenter des problèmes très différents. L'Australie, par exemple, administre d'une part Nauru, île peuplée de 2 000 habitants, nombre inférieur à celui des personnes qui sont dans cette salle en ce moment, et elle administre également la Nouvelle-Guinée, qui compte 1 800 000 habitants. Nul ne peut dire que la façon dont ces territoires se développent, ou la situation politique qui prévaudra lorsque ces territoires deviendront indépendants ou autonomes ou parviendront à la solution qui leur conviendra et qu'ils choisiront lorsqu'ils exerceront leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes, devront être identiques dans les deux territoires. Le représentant de Ceylan a signalé qu'il existe de nombreux territoires, dans bien des parties du monde, qu'il est difficile, en raison de leur exiguité ou pour d'autres raisons, de concevoir comme des entités complètement indépendantes et séparées, au même titre que des territoires sensiblement plus grands.

8. Par conséquent, la dimension est un facteur à considérer; l'histoire en est un autre. Certaines colonies, avant de connaître leur régime actuel, étaient des pays ayant une longue histoire, une société complexe et hautement évoluée, peut-être un sens très fort de leur identité nationale, des pays qui peut-être avaient été des Etats nationaux florissants, importants et indépendants. D'autres peut-être n'avaient jamais existé en tant qu'Etats nationaux et n'avaient jamais eu le sentiment d'une conscience nationale.

La Nouvelle-Guinée est parmi ces derniers. J'y reviendrai dans quelques instants.

9. Notre collègue du Libéria, M. Dosumu Johnson, a fait hier soir [1054ème séance] quelques remarques très intéressantes sur l'état où se trouvaient certaines régions d'Afrique avant de passer sous une domination coloniale; il y a là un état de choses et une situation historique qui doivent assurément jouer un rôle dans l'évolution politique et le développement de ces régions d'Afrique. Un tel passé historique n'a pas existé partout dans le monde. Dans notre façon de considérer les questions coloniales, nous devons tenir compte du fait que l'histoire diffère d'un continent à l'autre et peut même différer d'une région à l'autre d'un même continent.

10. Un autre élément nous impose de considérer de façon différente les diverses colonies: c'est leur degré d'homogénéité. Certaines régions ont une population homogène; généralement, ce sont celles qui peuvent facilement constituer un Etat national unifié. D'autres comprennent des populations extrêmement variées, soit dans leur composition tribale ou raciale, soit dans l'expression de leur civilisation, et si, dans ce cas, il n'est nullement impossible d'arriver à la création d'un Etat national qui rassemble une grande variété, cela présente néanmoins des difficultés considérables, à moins qu'il n'existe un fonds commun d'histoire qui puisse aider les populations à se rapprocher rapidement.

11. Il y a naturellement aussi la question des ressources économiques et du niveau de développement économique et général du pays; ce sont des éléments dont il faut tenir compte lorsqu'on cherche à déterminer la politique et le rythme de développement à adopter dans un pays quel qu'il soit, et non seulement dans un pays colonial.

12. A mon avis, on peut conclure de tout cela que les Nations Unies ne peuvent pas fixer pour tous les territoires un plan ou une date uniques qui soient applicables et réalistes. C'est là justement une des remarques faites par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la Nigéria dans sa déclaration devant l'Assemblée et elle témoigne, je pense, d'une conception très juste du problème. Nous sommes en présence de territoires divers, nous devons donc adopter des politiques diverses et les appliquer de façon différente, tout en respectant intégralement pour chacun d'eux les principes directeurs que sont l'autodétermination et la fidélité à la Charte.

13. Après ces considérations générales sur la politique coloniale, je parlerai maintenant du territoire australien de la Nouvelle-Guinée. Comme je l'ai dit, il s'agit là du territoire le plus important qu'administre l'Australie. Nous nous intéressons particulièrement à la Nouvelle-Guinée. Ce n'est pas pour nous un pays lointain vers lequel nous attirant des visées d'accroissement économique ou politique; au contraire, c'est une île voisine, littéralement voisine, de notre pays. L'amitié et la bonne volonté de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée comptent beaucoup pour l'Australie; la prospérité et la stabilité de la Nouvelle-Guinée comptent beaucoup pour l'Australie. Si la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée devient indépendante — et elle évolue vers l'autodétermination, conformément à notre politique et à la politique des Nations Unies —, il importe que son indépendance soit fondée sur la prospérité et sur la stabilité; il importe pour elle — et pour nous tous, je pense — que son indépendance soit fondée sur son amitié et sa bonne volonté envers tous ses voisins.

14. La Nouvelle-Guinée est un pays dont le développement, tant politique qu'économique, a présenté d'énormes difficultés, des difficultés matérielles. La Nouvelle-Guinée a été isolée du reste du monde pendant des siècles. Elle n'a pas été, comme les colonies de beaucoup d'autres parties du monde, en contact constant avec d'autres peuples, sous une forme ou sous une autre. Par exemple, les Arabes, qui ont pénétré si loin en Asie et dans le Pacifique, jusqu'en Indonésie et aux Philippines et plus au nord, et ont établi des contacts culturels et autres avec toute cette région, n'ont pas pénétré en Nouvelle-Guinée. Jusqu'à une époque très récente, la Nouvelle-Guinée n'a eu aucun contact avec le reste de l'humanité. Il ne s'y est même pas formé de vastes groupements de tribus, comme il s'en est formé chez certaines des populations dont M. Dosumu Johnson, du Libéria, nous parlait hier soir. La Nouvelle-Guinée comprenait un grand nombre de toutes petites tribus, qui n'avaient normalement de contacts entre elles que pour se faire la guerre.

15. Cette population de 1 800 000 habitants — chiffre le plus élevé qu'elle ait jamais compté, — parle 400 ou 500 dialectes; et il peut y avoir trois tribus vivant dans la même petite vallée et incapables de se comprendre. Les habitants n'ont jamais eu le sentiment d'une existence nationale; la notion même d'île leur était inconnue; ils ne savaient pas qu'ils appartenaient à une vaste population ayant plus ou moins le même fonds culturel. Une conscience nationale se fait jour peu à peu, grâce à l'Australie qui est en train de créer les conditions favorables; mais rien de tel n'existait auparavant. L'établissement d'une administration australienne en Nouvelle-Guinée n'a pas eu pour effet de faire disparaître un Etat indigène prospère ou un groupe de civilisations ou d'entités politiques sous la pression d'une autorité extérieure. C'est cette autorité extérieure qui a fait naître la notion même de nation et d'Etat, malgré cette absence de traditions, cette absence d'unité sociale et politique transcendant les liens familiaux ou tribaux.

16. J'ai déjà eu l'occasion, ici même, d'exposer certaines difficultés auxquelles se sont heurtés dans le passé ceux qui ont ouvert matériellement ce territoire à la civilisation. Nous pouvons aujourd'hui — et par "nous" je veux dire l'humanité dans son ensemble — faire des choses qui étaient impossibles il y a 30 ans, ou même 20 ans, ou même 10 ans: l'aviation, les bulldozers, tout le matériel lourd que nous avons tendance à considérer comme un élément naturel de nos programmes de développement, tout cela n'existait pas. En Nouvelle-Guinée, l'Australie a véritablement été la première dans le monde entier à utiliser la voie aérienne pour ouvrir de nouveaux territoires. Une ville entière a été construite sur les hauts plateaux en amenant par air le matériel lourd et l'équipement nécessaires à la construction d'habitations. Cela se passait il y a 30 ans, à une époque où les transports lourds par air étaient chose tout à fait nouvelle et posaient de très difficiles problèmes.

17. Ensuite, la victoire sur le paludisme a permis de mettre en valeur un territoire qui, dans le passé, était très impénétrable. Là encore l'Australie a joué un très grand rôle, l'Australie et les Australiens, en luttant contre le paludisme et en découvrant divers moyens qui ont permis de lutter efficacement contre cette maladie, soit grâce à des médicaments nouveaux, soit par des techniques originales d'assèchement des marécages et des étangs. Tout cela fait partie d'un mouvement mondial. Nous devons reconnaître le fait que beaucoup de choses que nous sommes capables de faire aujourd'hui non pas seulement en Nouvelle-Guinée, mais dans le monde entier, n'auraient pas été possibles il y a seulement quelques années; le progrès des connaissances et des techniques, l'accumulation de biens d'équipement, ont permis de réaliser ce qui était jadis impossible.

18. Nous sommes convaincus que l'Australie progresse régulièrement en Nouvelle-Guinée. Nous sommes conscients des responsabilités que nous y avons assumées, des besoins et des aspirations du peuple, et aussi de l'opinion et des avis de la communauté internationale. Notre politique, nos intentions, les voies que nous suivons, ont été exposées régulièrement devant les divers organes des Nations Unies: au Conseil de tutelle, au Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, à la Quatrième Commission et dans divers organes spéciaux. Nous avons soumis le bilan de nos activités et c'est pourquoi je n'y reviendrai pas dans le détail maintenant. Je ne vais pas vous donner lecture de chiffres concernant l'accroissement des dépenses dans divers secteurs de l'économie, en particulier pour la formation de personnel enseignant et pour le développement de tout ce qui contribuera à la création d'un Etat moderne, car nous avons déjà exposé tout cela devant d'autres organes. Par exemple, nous avons tout récemment fait progresser l'édification d'un système judiciaire dans lequel les autochtones trouvent leur place. Au cours des deux dernières années, nous avons fait de grands progrès dans le transfert des responsabilités politiques et dans l'accroissement du nombre et de la proportion des autochtones dans la fonction publique.

19. Nous savons fort bien qu'il y a encore beaucoup à faire, mais ce n'est pas faute de désirer le faire. C'est simplement parce que nous nous heurtons à une tâche immense en Nouvelle-Guinée, pays d'accès extrêmement difficile, pays où les déplacements d'un endroit à un autre étaient presque impossibles il y a quelques années et sont encore très difficiles.

20. Les dépenses du Gouvernement australien sous forme de subventions non remboursables au Territoire s'élèvent cette année à 38 millions de dollars; cela est tout à fait distinct des dépenses gouvernementales couvertes par les recettes propres du Territoire. C'est une somme importante, qui vient s'ajouter à toutes les recettes que le Territoire peut produire ou que l'Australie peut en tirer. Cela, je pense, témoignera du fait que nous ne considérons pas la Nouvelle-Guinée comme un territoire à exploiter. Comme je l'ai dit, nous la considérons essentiellement comme un pays qui est un de nos voisins et comme un pays dont la prospérité et le progrès contribueront à la paix, à l'existence de bonnes relations et à la sécurité dans la région du monde dont nous faisons partie.

21. Le choix d'un avenir politique ne peut se faire dans le vide. Il doit être lié au progrès économique, social et de l'enseignement. Comme il est dit dans la résolution [1514 (XV)] adoptée l'an dernier par l'Assemblée générale, le manque de préparation ne peut être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance. Je crois cependant qu'il y a là quelque chose qui nous impose d'envisager la situation avec prudence et réalisme. A ce sujet aussi, le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la Nigéria a fait sur la "préparation" quelques observations qui méritent une grande attention, car elles émanent d'un homme qui a consacré une grande partie de sa vie au progrès de l'indépendance chez les peuples d'Afrique et particulièrement dans son propre pays, et qui a une expérience pratique de la manière dont on peut se rapprocher du but. Les conséquences de jugements hâtifs et mal fondés peuvent être désastreuses pour le peuple intéressé et nous ne pouvons pas permettre que leur avenir soit déterminé par des attitudes qui correspondent surtout à des réactions sentimentales, des expédients politiques ou des analogies inexactes ou trompeuses.

22. J'ai exposé ce que nous avons fait dans le territoire australien de la Nouvelle-Guinée. Nous sommes fiers d'avoir choisi cette voie. Nous ne pouvons renoncer à nos responsabilités ou négliger d'en tenir compte et nous attendons des Nations Unies une critique constructive et de la compréhension; nous continuerons, comme nous l'avons toujours fait, à coopérer avec les Nations Unies dans l'exécution des tâches que nous impose la Charte.

23. J'ai parlé de la Nouvelle-Guinée australienne. Elle occupe la partie orientale de l'île. La Nouvelle-Guinée, je n'ai pas besoin de le rappeler, est une île immense. C'est la troisième île du monde après l'Australie et le Groenland. La partie australienne de l'île a 1 800 000 habitants. L'autre moitié, administrée par les Pays-Bas, en a environ 700 000.

24. Aussi la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, dont le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas a saisi l'Assemblée générale à la présente session par le projet de résolution [A/L.354] qu'il a présenté au titre du point 88 de l'ordre du jour, est-elle une question qui présente un intérêt particulier pour le Gouvernement australien depuis plusieurs années. J'ai déjà signalé que l'île de la Nouvelle-Guinée est proche de l'Australie et que nous lui portons l'intérêt qu'éprouve tout pays pour un pays voisin auquel le rattachent de nombreux liens. La Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise et la Nouvelle-Guinée australienne sont contiguës. C'est pourquoi nous ne pouvons qu'être profondément intéressés par cette question dont le Gouvernement néerlandais a saisi l'Assemblée. En outre, cette question a mis aux prises deux bons amis de l'Australie, les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Elle intéresse aussi tous les Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies parce qu'elle met en cause des principes importants de la Charte et le rôle des Nations Unies pour ce qui est de favoriser le bien-être et le progrès des populations des territoires dépendants.

25. Nous avons toujours espéré, en Australie, que les principales parties intéressées trouveraient à ce problème une solution conforme aux principes de la Charte. Il n'a cependant pas été possible d'y parvenir jusqu'ici en raison de la divergence de fond qui sépare les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie dans la conception initiale du problème. Il aurait été normal et parfaitement conforme aux dispositions et à l'esprit de la Charte qu'un différend relatif à la souveraineté sur un territoire fût porté devant la Cour internationale de Justice. En fait, les Pays-Bas ont toujours été disposés à l'accepter et cette attitude a confirmé la conviction de l'Australie que les Pays-Bas ont été et sont dans leur droit. Toutefois, comme nous le savons, l'Indonésie ne voulait pas voir saisir la Cour de ce différend, pour le motif qu'il ne s'agissait pas d'une question juridique mais d'une question politique.

26. Jusqu'à présent, les efforts déployés pour trouver la base d'une solution politique ont échoué. Il est toujours très difficile de trouver la voie d'un règlement lorsqu'il s'agit d'un conflit au sujet d'un territoire sur lequel deux Etats revendiquent un droit de souveraineté. Ce n'est pas une question qui puisse être réglée par une simple recommandation de l'Assemblée ni par des négociations bilatérales, surtout si l'une des principales parties intéressées a rompu ses relations diplomatiques avec l'autre.

27. Ce qui a manqué jusqu'ici, c'est un accord sur les principes fondamentaux qui devaient s'appliquer. Si un règlement fondé sur des principes juridiques ne pouvait être accepté, il fallait alors essayer de traiter la question comme une question politique. Cette façon d'aborder le problème doit être conforme à la Charte et, par conséquent, elle impose de reconnaître le principe de la primauté des intérêts des habitants du territoire et de reconnaître que la population a seule le droit de déterminer elle-même son avenir et que tout règlement devra tenir pleinement compte de la nécessité d'assurer sa prospérité et le développement du territoire. De l'avis du Gouvernement australien, le Gouvernement néerlandais, dans les propositions qu'il a faites, a tiré de la Charte des Nations Unies des principes qui fournissent une excellente base de règlement pour le problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Ces propositions sont également entièrement conformes aux principes de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui ne modifie ni ne remplace la Charte, mais qui énonce des objectifs auxquels nous pouvons tous applaudir, même si certains d'entre nous ont des réserves à faire sur telle ou telle recommandation.

28. Les propositions des Pays-Bas, telles que nous les voyons, offrent un terrain de rencontre praticable entre les points de vue fortement divergents des Pays-Bas et de notre amie et voisine, l'Indonésie. Cela nous semble constituer un progrès important, que nous accueillons comme une proposition constructive, pleine de promesses et pacifique.

29. Voyons ce que les Pays-Bas proposent. D'abord, ils offrent de renoncer à leur souveraineté en faveur des habitants mêmes de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. C'est là une offre généreuse de la part d'un Etat dont l'affirmation juridique de souveraineté n'a pas été soumise à une épreuve juridique.

30. Ensuite, les propositions des Pays-Bas mettent au premier plan le respect du principe d'autodétermination, tel que le reconnaît la Charte des Nations Unies. L'Australie n'a jamais cessé de déclarer qu'il était, à son avis, de la plus grande importance que les habitants autochtones du territoire, qui sont bien après tout la première principale partie intéressée, eussent la possibilité de décider eux-mêmes de leur avenir et de leur statut. A ce sujet, je puis rappeler les remarques faites ici le 7 novembre, jour de l'ouverture du présent débat, par le représentant de Ceylan. Il parlait de territoires sur lesquels des droits de souveraineté avaient été revendiqués par divers Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et il a cité la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Il a dit:

"L'Assemblée générale devrait avoir la possibilité d'examiner la légitimité des revendications de certains Membres et, si besoin est, de les confronter avec les vœux de la population." [1048ème séance, par. 124.]

Or, la proposition faite par les Pays-Bas serait conforme, croyons-nous, à cette déclaration d'ordre général du représentant de Ceylan.

31. La proposition des Pays-Bas tend à confronter les revendications nationales de souveraineté avec les vœux de la population. L'application du principe d'autodétermination, que l'Australie appuie fermement chaque fois qu'il est question du progrès des peuples coloniaux, donnerait l'occasion aux habitants de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale de choisir eux-mêmes leur avenir. Le choix leur serait offert entre l'indépendance, une certaine forme de libre association avec leurs voisins, et même l'intégration politique complète avec l'Indonésie, si tel était leur désir.

32. En outre, la proposition des Pays-Bas permettrait aux Nations Unies d'être directement associées à l'œuvre du développement du territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et à la préparation finale de la population à l'autodétermination. L'offre généreuse du Gouvernement néerlandais de continuer à fournir son aide financière aux habitants du territoire serait complétée par les ressources de la communauté mondiale. Pour sa part, le Gouvernement australien a des raisons de savoir ce que coûte le développement de la Nouvelle-Guinée, aussi bien en personnel qu'en argent. Les problèmes qui se posent pour préparer à l'autodétermination la population de ce territoire non développé, au terrain d'accès formidablement difficile et aux ressources matérielles limitées, sont au moins aussi redoutables que dans le cas du Congo. La création d'une autorité internationale de développement, si telle devait être la recommandation de la commission d'enquête, devrait nous permettre d'éviter les erreurs et les tragédies du Congo, et de fonder l'autodétermination sur les bases les plus sûres.

33. Je puis rappeler à ce sujet la résolution 1541 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale le 15 décembre 1960, c'est-à-dire le lendemain de l'adoption de la résolution [1514 (XV)] qui contient la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette résolution a déjà été citée par le représentant de Ceylan; je me suis référé plusieurs fois à son discours, car ce fut un discours important prononcé le jour de l'ouverture du débat. Il mérite, je crois, d'être lu attentivement. Nous l'avons écouté avec attention et il a mis en lumière de nombreux et importants aspects de la question, que nous partageons ou non certaines de ses conclusions.

34. Cette résolution 1541 (XV) a été adoptée l'an dernier sur rapport de la Quatrième Commission et c'est une résolution très importante pour notre examen de nombreux problèmes liés au colonialisme. Dans cette résolution, certains principes importants relatifs à l'accession à l'autonomie ou l'indépendance sont soulignés. Au principe VI de l'annexe à cette résolution, il est stipulé:

"On peut dire qu'un territoire non autonome a atteint la pleine autonomie:

"a) Quand il est devenu Etat indépendant et souverain;

"b) Quand il s'est librement associé à un Etat indépendant; ou

"c) Quand il s'est intégré à un Etat indépendant."

35. Ces points procèdent d'une notion fondamentale commune qui est soigneusement énoncée dans l'annexe à cette résolution. En ce qui concerne la libre association à un Etat indépendant, il est dit:

"La libre association doit résulter d'un choix libre et volontaire des populations du territoire en question, exprimé selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées."

Cela se trouve au principe VII de l'annexe à la résolution 1541 (XV).

36. La même notion apparaît au principe IX où il est question de l'intégration à un Etat indépendant:

"L'intégration doit résulter du désir librement exprimé des populations du territoire, pleinement conscientes du changement de leur statut, la consultation se faisant selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées, impartialement appliquées et fondées sur le suffrage universel des adultes."

Il s'agit là du principe IX de la résolution adoptée l'an dernier par l'Assemblée générale, le lendemain de l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

37. De l'avis de la délégation australienne, non seulement ces principes importants doivent être respectés dans les conditions spéciales qui sont celles de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et de sa population, mais le respect de ces principes constitue le seul fondement véritable sur lequel l'avenir de cette population peut se construire de façon durable, pacifique et juste. Une solution qui ne tiendrait pas compte de la volonté populaire et qui ne serait pas en fait approuvée nettement et ouvertement par la population elle-même ne manquerait pas de perpétuer la discorde en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et au sujet de ce territoire, et engendrerait des troubles dans le territoire et peut-être aussi dans les régions voisines.

38. L'application de ces principes offrirait les possibilités de la libre association ou l'intégration du territoire à l'Indonésie, si telle était la décision des habitants autochtones de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale eux-mêmes. Il incomberait à l'organe des Nations Unies dont la création est proposée de veiller à ce que les habitants choisissent en l'absence de toute contrainte et soient complètement et honnêtement informés de toutes les solutions qui s'offrent à eux en vertu de l'autodétermination. Nous estimons que l'application de ces principes et de ces procédures tiendrait dûment compte des intérêts de l'Indonésie.

39. Je voudrais souligner que la proposition des Pays-Bas ne tend pas à déterminer le résultat final. Elle laisse la voie ouverte à diverses possibilités, mais énonce une réserve importante: l'autodétermination de bonne foi de la population doit être assurée.

40. Les propositions énoncées dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354] et dans le mémoire explicatif [A/4915] du 9 octobre 1961 qui l'accompagne ne visent pas tous les détails qui peuvent surgir dans toutes les éventualités. Ces propositions représentent, en un sens, le mandat qui serait confié à la commission des Nations Unies dont la création est proposée. Le projet de résolution et le mémoire explicatif exposent divers points qu'il y aurait lieu d'examiner et le projet de résolution nous demande, dans son dispositif, de décider seulement pour le moment la création d'une commission qui aurait pour mission d'étudier les possibilités d'appliquer la résolution 1541

(XV); la situation politique, économique, sociale et de l'enseignement dans le territoire, l'opinion de la population quant à la situation actuelle du territoire et son avenir, la question d'un plébiscite, et enfin la question d'une autorité internationale de développement.

41. Une étude de ces questions faite par une commission des Nations Unies serait, à mon sens, tout à fait conforme aux principes de la Charte et répondrait à la tendance qui s'est manifestée dans l'opinion et les débats de l'Assemblée au cours des dernières années.

42. Je devrais peut-être dire quelques mots de plus au sujet d'une question que j'ai abordée au début de mon intervention: celle de la position particulière de l'Australie à l'égard de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise. Comme je l'ai dit, l'Australie peut prétendre à juste titre que cette question et ces propositions l'intéressent particulièrement, étant donné la responsabilité spéciale qui lui incombe en ce qui concerne toute la partie orientale de l'île, étant donné aussi qu'elle veille à la prospérité présente et future des Papous habitant les trois territoires, et étant donné enfin l'importance capitale que représente pour elle la paix, la prospérité et la stabilité de cette région. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, la Nouvelle-Guinée n'est pas pour l'Australie un pays lointain.

43. Le Gouvernement australien administre, comme je l'ai dit, le territoire non autonome du Papua et le Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée orientale. Les habitants des trois territoires appartiennent en fait à une même population. Pour sa part, le Gouvernement australien, dans l'administration des deux territoires dont il a la charge, a des objectifs identiques pour l'un et pour l'autre, à savoir amener les habitants aussi rapidement que possible à l'autodétermination, c'est-à-dire arriver au moment où ces habitants détermineront eux-mêmes leur statut et leur avenir.

44. C'est pourquoi le Gouvernement australien partage entièrement les vues du Gouvernement néerlandais quant à l'importance que celui-ci attache au principe d'autodétermination et à son application en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale d'une manière qui corresponde aux intérêts et aux vœux des habitants. Dans les circonstances particulières où se trouve la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, le Gouvernement australien accueille aussi avec faveur la proposition des Pays-Bas tendant à associer directement les Nations Unies au processus d'évolution vers l'autodétermination dans cette partie de l'île de la Nouvelle-Guinée, grâce à la création d'une autorité de développement.

45. Ce que je dis ici ne représente pas un changement d'attitude. Le 6 novembre 1957, le Gouvernement australien et le Gouvernement néerlandais ont défini publiquement les principes sur lesquels les deux gouvernements étaient tombés d'accord et qu'ils appliquaient pour les territoires de la Nouvelle-Guinée dont ils ont la charge. Ils ont notamment déclaré que le Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée, le territoire du Papua et la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise étaient géographiquement et ethniquement liés, et que, en attendant que ces territoires accèdent à l'autodétermination, les deux gouvernements continueraient à poursuivre une politique ayant pour objectif le progrès politique, économique et social ainsi que le progrès de l'éducation des populations intéressées en tenant compte de leur affinité ethnique et géographique. Telle était la déclaration faite par les deux gouvernements en novembre 1957.

46. Lorsque les habitants de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et du Papua-Nouvelle-Guinée accèderont à l'autodétermination, il leur appartiendra de déterminer quelle forme de gouvernement ils choisiront dans chacun des trois territoires et quelles seront leurs relations entre eux et avec leurs voisins.

47. C'est pourquoi l'appui que l'Australie donne à la présente proposition des Pays-Bas est fondé sur l'application générale du principe d'autodétermination dans une région qui est si manifestement homogène du point de vue géographique et ethnique. L'Assemblée générale ne doit rien faire maintenant qui puisse limiter les options qui s'offrent aux habitants. Il est possible, et il doit à notre avis demeurer possible, que les habitants de toute l'île de la Nouvelle-Guinée décident un jour qu'ils doivent avoir un avenir commun. Aucun obstacle permanent ne doit être maintenant dressé, qui puisse ôter aux habitants de l'île la possibilité de faire un tel choix.

48. Je passe maintenant à une autre question qui a été soulevée au sujet de la Nouvelle-Guinée dans une des déclarations faites à l'Assemblée la semaine dernière. Je dirai que nous regrettons beaucoup qu'au cours de ce débat on ait pu parler d'un recours éventuel à la force dans certaines circonstances. Un tel langage est absolument incompatible avec les assurances qui nous ont été données à maintes reprises dans le passé par les plus hautes autorités nationales, selon lesquelles la force ne serait pas employée pour régler cette question. Il est d'autant plus regrettable que les propositions soumises par le Gouvernement néerlandais sont constructives et pacifiques, fondées sur les dispositions et les principes de la Charte, visent des objectifs définis dans les résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée et ne vont pas plus loin que la création d'une commission chargée d'étudier la question et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée sans préjuger, pour l'instant, l'avenir du territoire.

49. Quelle que soit leur intention, des déclarations selon lesquelles la force sera ou pourra être employée sont, par leur nature, un défi à l'indépendance et à la compétence des Nations Unies. De telles déclarations ne peuvent, à mon avis, avoir aucune place légitime dans nos délibérations, nos recommandations ou nos décisions.

50. Tous les membres de l'Assemblée se sont engagés en outre à s'abstenir, dans leurs relations internationales, de recourir à la menace ou à l'emploi de la force de toute manière incompatible avec les buts des Nations Unies. Des déclarations dans lesquelles le recours à la force est envisagé selon l'hypothèse que je viens de rappeler constituent donc une violation du paragraphe 4 de l'Article 2 de la Charte.

51. La proposition des Pays-Bas, au contraire, ouvre la voie à une solution pacifique conforme aux principes des Nations Unies et aux procédures établies de l'Organisation.

52. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, l'Australie n'a pas l'intention de faire obstruction ou opposition à une union éventuelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale avec l'Indonésie, si tel devait être le vœu de la population autochtone. Nous ne voulons pas non plus préjuger l'issue des questions mises en jeu. La solution que nous appuyons est celle de la création d'une commission des Nations Unies chargée d'étudier certaines possibilités, étant bien entendu que le droit d'auto-détermination des populations de la Nouvelle-Guinée elles-mêmes sera garanti et appliqué sans réserve et impartialement.

53. La délégation de l'Australie votera donc le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas.

54. Nous sommes saisis jusqu'à présent de deux autres projets de résolution. Le premier est présenté par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355]; ma délégation ne peut en aucune façon l'accepter. L'autre est le projet de résolution qui a été présenté par la Nigéria [A/L.357]; il concerne l'Afrique et il nous a été présenté et expliqué par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la Nigéria. A certains égards, ce projet de résolution présente pour ma délégation certaines difficultés, surtout des difficultés de caractère juridique. Toutefois, il aborde la question dans un esprit qui nous paraît constructif et éclairé, et, compte tenu des explications qui nous ont été données par M. Wachuku et souhaitant également donner effet aux buts et aux intentions de la résolution 1514 (XV), l'Australie pourra voter le projet de résolution de la Nigéria.

55. En outre, je crois savoir qu'un nouveau projet de résolution pourrait être présenté par un certain nombre d'Etats africano-asiatiques. Je ne puis évidemment pas me prononcer à ce sujet avant d'en avoir vu le texte, mais l'Australie étudiera ce projet dans le même esprit que celui que nous apportons en général à l'examen de ces questions. Nous étudierons ce projet de résolution en tenant compte des intentions de ses promoteurs. Dans toute la mesure possible, nous appuierons tout ce qui va dans le sens des principes de la Charte et vise à traduire le plus rapidement possible dans la réalité le droit d'auto-détermination de tous les peuples du monde.

56. Au cours de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, nous avons déjà accueilli ici un certain nombre de nouveaux Etats Membres. Le Sierra Leone, par exemple, est devenu un Etat membre du Commonwealth, il siège ici comme Etat indépendant, et, avant que l'Assemblée ne termine sa session, le Tanganyika sera également devenu l'un des nôtres. Si les programmes établis sont respectés, nous ne tarderons pas à compter encore d'autres nouveaux Etats Membres. Je suis convaincu que le processus d'émancipation des colonies et les progrès de la communauté mondiale prendront un rythme plus rapide que certains d'entre nous ne l'avaient peut-être jamais cru possible. Dans ce développement général du monde, dans cette émancipation progressive des peuples, les Nations Unies ont pu jouer un rôle de premier plan et elles continueront, j'en suis sûr, à jouer un rôle utile en stimulant, en conseillant, en aidant les puissances administrantes dans les territoires dont ces puissances ont encore la charge.

57. Sir Muhammad ZAFRULLA KHAN (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: J'ai demandé la parole pour présenter un projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] à titre de question importante et urgente. Ce projet de résolution porte sur une question humanitaire très importante et très urgente. Elle intéresse plusieurs milliers de prisonniers algériens en France, qui font la grève de la faim. Ce projet de résolution est présenté par 34 Etats Membres, parmi lesquels le Pakistan a l'honneur de figurer. Je présente ce projet de résolution à l'Assemblée.

58. M. BERARD (France): Le représentant du Pakistan a cru devoir soulever ici une question totalement étrangère au point de l'ordre du jour actuellement en discussion. On demande, si je comprends bien, pour en traiter, l'interruption du présent débat. Une telle initiative, qui est manifestement entreprise à des fins de propagande, n'est justifiée ni par le règlement intérieur ni par la pratique de l'Assemblée générale.

59. Je me garderai d'aborder le fond de la question, encore qu'il me serait facile d'éclairer l'Assemblée en réfutant, comme l'a déjà fait d'ailleurs le Gouvernement français, certaines allégations tendancieuses qui ont pu être répandues à ce sujet. Je me bornerai à faire observer que la manœuvre à laquelle nous assistons n'est pas de nature à contribuer au règlement de la question. J'aimerais même souhaiter — et je me permets d'insister sur ces mots — j'aimerais souhaiter qu'elle n'aille pas exactement à l'encontre d'un heureux règlement de cette question particulière et de la question plus générale qui est en jeu.

60. La délégation française ne saurait, pour sa part, accepter la proposition qui vient d'être faite. Elle laisse à l'Assemblée générale l'entière responsabilité de la suite qui y sera donnée.

61. M. FEKINI (Libye): La situation extrêmement grave créée par les circonstances qui ont causé la détention de plus de 14 000 prisonniers politiques algériens est pour nous une sérieuse cause de désarroi et d'inquiétude.

62. Devant le refus des autorités françaises de faire droit à leurs aspirations légitimes, conformément aux principes humanitaires et à la pratique internationale en usage, les prisonniers politiques algériens ont eu recours au dernier moyen à leur portée en déclenchant une grève de la faim qui dure maintenant depuis plus de 15 jours. Après une aussi longue période d'abstinence, l'état de santé de ces patriotes algériens, hommes et femmes, est extrêmement alarmant. Leur vie est très sérieusement menacée. Dans ces conditions, nous pensons qu'il est du devoir impérieux des Nations Unies, au moment où nous discutons la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, d'entreprendre d'urgence une action afin de venir au secours des prisonniers algériens dont le cas se pose sur le plan strictement humanitaire.

63. De plus, cette situation a déjà donné lieu à de graves répercussions internationales qui se sont manifestées dans le monde entier et en France même, surtout après la publication du rapport parlementaire sur le traitement des prisonniers algériens; et une émotion particulière s'est emparée des peuples de la région à laquelle nous appartenons.

64. Les impératifs de la solidarité internationale, les principes humanitaires et les responsabilités des Membres de l'ONU qui se sont exprimés avec tant d'éloquence, au cours du présent débat sur le point 88 de l'ordre du jour, exigent qu'une action soit immédiatement entreprise en vue de faire appel au Gouvernement français pour qu'il fasse droit aux légitimes revendications des prisonniers algériens et reconnaisse leur statut de prisonniers politiques; cela leur permettrait d'arrêter cette grève de la faim qui menace gravement leur existence.

65. Chaque heure, chaque minute même qui s'écoule s'accompagne d'une sérieuse aggravation de l'état de santé de ces prisonniers et prisonnières politiques. Nous en appelons à la conscience humaine des membres de l'Assemblée et à leur sens des responsabilités internationales, dans le cadre général de ce généreux débat, pour que le projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] présenté aujourd'hui soit adopté dans le plus bref délai. Nous espérons très sincèrement que l'appel qu'il contient et que la valeur humaine de cet appel seront appréciés par la France. Nous espérons aussi qu'en répondant favorablement le Gouvernement français contribuera à renforcer les chances de paix et de coopération.

66. M. BENHIMA (Maroc): Je retiens du projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] soumis à l'approbation de l'Assemblée générale le paragraphe du dispositif qui est libellé comme suit:

"L'Assemblée générale ...

"Fait appel au Gouvernement de la France, conformément à la pratique internationale en usage et aux principes humanitaires, pour qu'il fasse droit aux légitimes revendications des prisonniers algériens en reconnaissant leur statut de prisonniers politiques, afin de rendre possible, sans délai, l'arrêt de la grève de la faim."

Le caractère d'urgence qui a motivé l'introduction de ce projet de résolution devant l'Assemblée générale a été exposé à cette tribune par le représentant du Pakistan et celui de la Libye. Le représentant de la France nous a exposé les considérations pour lesquelles il souhaitait fermement que ce projet de résolution n'aille pas à l'encontre d'un règlement heureux. Je crois que la délégation marocaine se trouve dans une situation particulièrement favorable pour faire écho à cette phrase du représentant de la France puisque, en cet instant même, une délégation gouvernementale, comprenant deux ministres d'Etat et le Ministre de l'intérieur, a été envoyée par S. M. le Roi du Maroc auprès du général de Gaulle.

67. En effet, l'annonce de la situation de plusieurs milliers de détenus algériens — hommes, femmes et enfants, dont un nombre important a été arrêté récemment dans des conditions qui défient la loi même qui a condamné ces prisonniers — a provoqué au Maroc une forte émotion et des manifestations, dont quelques-unes ont été regrettables. Ces réactions montrent à quel point l'examen de cette question est devenu urgent du fait du traitement réservé aux détenus algériens, en dépit de l'usage international et du droit français lui-même.

68. J'ai lu à dessein le dernier paragraphe du projet de résolution pour bien montrer que les considérations qui nous poussent à l'examiner d'urgence sont des considérations d'ordre moral et humanitaire. Celles-ci fourniront peut-être à la France l'occasion de répondre à notre appel et de faire un geste positif dans une situation qui, depuis plusieurs semaines, non seulement alimente la propagande antifrançaise, mais porte atteinte une fois de plus à la réputation de la France dans ce domaine. Nous voudrions insister pour que la future décision relative à l'examen de cette question et l'adoption du projet de résolution soient considérées comme un appel supplémentaire de l'Assemblée générale s'ajoutant à celui de plusieurs chefs d'Etat et de plusieurs organismes internationaux, ainsi qu'aux démarches qui ont été faites par le Président du Pakistan auprès du général de Gaulle et à celles entreprises par S. M. le Roi du Maroc.

69. Nous avons la conviction que le sujet du présent débat n'est pas étranger à la question qui nous préoccupe. Ce que nous demandons à la France lui a été demandé indirectement en 1960, dans une résolution qui concerne l'ensemble de ce problème. Nous n'invitons donc pas exceptionnellement l'Assemblée à déroger à son règlement, ni à prendre une décision sur un point qui ne serait pas de sa compétence. Le drame qui est actuellement vécu par des milliers de détenus algériens et l'émotion que cette situation a provoquée à travers le monde nous font le devoir de faire écho à cette émotion. L'Assemblée générale est certainement le meilleur organe, à la fois pour en être l'interprète et pour appuyer les démarches qui sont faites dans plusieurs capitales et par l'intermédiaire de plusieurs hautes personnalités auprès du chef de l'Etat français.

70. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant du Pakistan pour une motion d'ordre.

71. Sir Muhammad ZAFRULLA KHAN (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais proposer que la discussion générale sur le point 88 de l'ordre du jour soit suspendue afin que le projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] que j'ai eu l'honneur de présenter soit examiné immédiatement.

72. Je tiens à dire quelques mots pour répondre aux objections soulevées par le représentant de la France contre le dépôt de ce projet de résolution. Le représentant de la France a dit d'abord que le projet de résolution était totalement étranger au point de l'ordre du jour en discussion. Or je prétends que ce projet de résolution se rapporte directement à ce point de l'ordre du jour et qu'il entre bien dans le cadre de la question.

73. Je prierai les membres de l'Assemblée de bien vouloir se reporter au troisième alinéa du préambule du projet de résolution, qui rappelle la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée l'an dernier sur le colonialisme et qui la cite même:

"Il sera mis fin ... à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, ... pour permettre à ces peuples [les peuples dépendants] d'exercer ... librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète ..."

74. Le représentant de la France a dit ensuite que nous avions déposé ce projet de résolution à des fins de propagande. J'ai profondément regretté d'entendre dire cela. Le projet de résolution est présenté par 34 Etats. La grave situation dont il traite s'est produite en France et n'a pas été créée par aucun des Etats signataires du projet. C'est la situation existante qui a incité les auteurs à soulever la question en tant que question urgente.

75. Le représentant de la France a dit encore que la présentation du projet de résolution risquait d'aller à l'encontre de la reprise des négociations entre la France et l'Algérie sur la question de l'indépendance de l'Algérie. Là aussi, j'ai profondément regretté ses paroles, car en fait les auteurs souhaitent sincèrement que cette grave situation, qui est de nature non seulement à retarder, mais à mettre en danger la reprise des négociations, prenne fin pour que la reprise des négociations soit facilitée et même hâtée.

76. Il est impossible à quiconque d'imaginer que tant que cette situation durera — et ce sont 14 000 êtres humains qui poursuivent une grève de la faim mettant leurs vies en danger — les négociations puissent reprendre dans pareille atmosphère ou que si, par impossible, les négociations devaient reprendre, elles puissent aboutir à un résultat fructueux. L'Assemblée comprendra, j'en suis sûr, qu'il importe de résoudre cette situation dans un esprit purement humanitaire, les deux parties en cause s'abstenant d'y mettre aucune passion, de façon que l'objectif vers lequel nous avons tous les yeux fixés et que la France et l'Algérie désirent elles aussi atteindre, nous n'en doutons pas, puisse rapidement devenir une réalité.

77. Le PRESIDENT: Ainsi, la présidence et l'Assemblée générale sont saisies d'une motion précise de suspension du débat en cours afin que soit examiné d'urgence un projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1]. La présidence voudrait connaître la réaction de l'Assemblée. Y a-t-il une objection à cette proposition?

78. La présidence voudrait prendre toutes précautions utiles de façon que l'Assemblée générale ne puisse considérer qu'elle a été prise au dépourvu. Je répète la proposition précise formulée par le délégué du Pakistan: elle demande la suspension du débat en cours pour que soit examiné d'urgence ce projet de résolution.

79. Constatant qu'il n'y a aucune demande d'intervention, et par conséquent aucune objection, j'en déduis que l'Assemblée générale décide, sans objection, de suspendre le débat en cours en vue d'examiner d'urgence le projet de résolution concernant les prisonniers algériens en France.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

80. Le PRESIDENT: Cela étant, je demande à l'Assemblée de concentrer sa discussion sur le projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1], après quoi nous reviendrons au débat en cours.

81. M. SHUKAIRY (Arabie Saoudite) [traduit de l'anglais]: C'est grâce à une erreur dont je me réjouis que j'ai l'occasion de prendre la parole sur cette question: en effet, je n'avais pas vraiment demandé la parole pour maintenant.

82. Le projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] dont nous sommes saisis se recommande à l'approbation de l'Assemblée.

83. J'ai suivi avec beaucoup de respect et d'intérêt la déclaration de notre collègue, le représentant de la France. Je dois reconnaître que cette déclaration était très équilibrée, sauf en ce qui concerne l'argument selon lequel la présentation du projet de résolution était une manœuvre et était entreprise à des fins de propagande. Le représentant du Pakistan a répondu comme il convenait à cet argument.

84. Je désire donc saisir cette occasion pour donner à notre collègue le représentant de la France l'assurance que ce projet de résolution n'est pas motivé par des fins de propagande, car il s'agit de la vie de plusieurs milliers de prisonniers actuellement détenus en France. Je tiens à donner à notre collègue l'assurance que ce projet de résolution ne constitue en aucune façon une manœuvre. Nous ne parlerons pas de politique; nous ne parlerons pas de la question algérienne. Ce projet de résolution n'a d'aucune manière une incidence politique. La question algérienne sera examinée en temps voulu par la Première Commission. Mais, à notre humble avis, ce projet de résolution dissipera les nuages et ouvrira la voie, d'une part, à une discussion sereine à la Première Commission, et, d'autre part, à une rapide reprise des négociations. Le projet de résolution soumis à l'Assemblée est anodin. Il ne condamne ni n'offense personne, ni la France ni quiconque.

85. Je fais appel aux membres de l'Assemblée pour qu'ils considèrent ce projet de résolution dans l'esprit élevé qui l'a fait concevoir. Il ne contient rien qui prête à controverse. Le préambule évoque la grève de la faim entreprise par des milliers d'Algériens prisonniers en France. A mon humble avis, il y a là un fait indéniable. Les journaux de Paris en ont fait état, aussi bien que ceux de New York. Ce fait ne peut être controversé et l'Assemblée ne devrait éprouver aucune difficulté à adopter ce projet de résolution.

86. Quant aux deuxième et troisième considérants, j'ose affirmer qu'ils ne font que rappeler des résolutions antérieures adoptées par l'Assemblée générale. Il est tout à fait approprié de faire mention de ces résolutions pertinentes. Nul ne peut nier que nous les ayons adoptées à notre dernière session, et il est tout à fait approprié de faire figurer maintenant un rappel de cette idée dans le projet de résolution soumis en notre nom.

87. Le dispositif du projet tient en un seul paragraphe; on peut à peine parler de dispositif à son sujet; en fait, il s'agit à peine d'un projet de résolution. N'était la procédure régulièrement suivie par l'Assemblée, il serait à peine besoin de déposer un projet de résolution, car il s'agit simplement d'un appel rédigé dans des termes très honorables, un appel bien modeste, mais dans lequel nous demandons de la façon la plus noble, pour en citer les termes, qu'il soit fait "droit aux légitimes revendications des prisonniers algériens ... afin de rendre possible, sans délai, l'arrêt de la grève de la faim", laquelle — à Dieu ne plaise! — risque d'entraîner une catastrophe qui provoquerait une grave mésentente entre les nations et entre les deux parties principalement intéressées et empêcherait peut-être des négociations que j'espère voir reprendre très prochainement.

88. Je prie donc sincèrement les membres de l'Assemblée d'adopter ce projet de résolution, d'accepter les idées qui y sont exprimées et aussi cet appel — le seul que l'Assemblée puisse adresser dans ces circonstances — comme le minimum qu'exigent la justice et l'humanité. Ce projet de résolution n'a rien de politique. Il repose uniquement sur des considérations humanitaires et n'a pour but que de sauver la vie de milliers de prisonniers — et de nombreux représentants ici présents ont certainement été des prisonniers politiques à un moment ou à un autre et doivent donc comprendre et sentir ce que c'est que d'être prisonniers politiques et ce que c'est qu'une grève de la faim.

89. M. GUIRMA (Haute-Volta): C'est avec une profonde émotion que ma délégation intervient sur le projet de résolution qui nous est soumis [A/L.365 et Add.1]. En effet, il s'agit pour nous de rendre manifestes les mobiles qui nous ont poussés à apporter notre signature à ce projet de résolution.

90. L'usage international admet que l'on intervienne pour des prisonniers, que l'on intervienne pour des condamnés à mort, que l'on intervienne en général pour des personnes qui souffrent, quand même ces personnes seraient incriminées pour toutes sortes de faits que généralement l'on réprouve, et a fortiori quand ces personnes sont incriminées pour des faits que, par la suite, on a reconnus comme étant des actes légitimes.

91. Ainsi, pour nous, il ne s'agit pas ici de prendre position contre un pays quelconque. Il ne s'agit pas de manifester notre hostilité vis-à-vis d'aucun pays.

Il s'agit tout simplement de participer à un grand mouvement d'humanisme international en faveur de personnes et de personnalités, dont ceux-là même qui les retiennent dans la situation où elles se trouvent ont reconnu le caractère représentatif sur le plan politique.

92. Il s'agit pour nous de dire ici clairement notre position quant à la politique algérienne définie par le général de Gaulle. Ainsi, en votant en faveur de ce projet de résolution et en l'appuyant, nous n'entendons pas nous classer parmi les ennemis de la France comme les journaux pourront peut-être le dire demain. Nous entendons tout simplement nous classer parmi ceux qui supportent la politique libérale du général de Gaulle qui entend donner son indépendance à l'Algérie envers et contre la réaction de la droite française.

93. En effet, quelles pourraient être les conséquences de la grève de la faim entreprise par les détenus politiques algériens en France? Pense-t-on que si les leaders algériens, qui, depuis 15 jours, font la grève de la faim, se trouvaient devant une issue fatale, pense-t-on que cela arrangerait la solution du problème tel que nous l'entendons? Je pense qu'il est difficile de l'affirmer à cette tribune, comme il est difficile de l'affirmer partout ailleurs.

94. Il s'agit de reconnaître des faits, et les faits sont que les détenus algériens font la grève de la faim, que ces détenus algériens sont indispensables à la conclusion de la paix entre l'Algérie et la France et que dans la mesure où ces détenus algériens seront protégés dans leur vie comme dans leurs droits, le problème de la paix en Algérie sera bien plus facilement résolu. Ainsi notre position est plutôt une position de soutien inconditionnel de la politique libérale du général de Gaulle qui veut enfin en finir avec ce problème algérien, mais qui se heurte à une situation explosive intérieure qui l'empêche de le régler dans le sens de la justice.

95. Voilà pourquoi nous avons pris la décision — la Haute-Volta et un certain nombre d'amis — de signer ce projet de résolution et de l'appuyer.

96. M. SUBANDRIO (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je serai bref. L'attitude de l'Indonésie devant les luttes pour l'indépendance est claire. Nous sommes d'ailleurs au nombre des auteurs du projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1]. Nous présentons et appuyons ce projet de résolution tendant à adresser un appel au président de Gaulle pour qu'il libère ces prisonniers de guerre.

97. L'Indonésie reconnaît le gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne comme le gouvernement légitime de l'Algérie et nous reconnaissons qu'il mène actuellement une guerre coloniale contre la France. Nous reconnaissons aussi que les soldats qui luttent pour leur indépendance doivent être traités conformément aux principes internationaux d'humanité.

98. Pour ces raisons et sans préjuger en aucune manière l'issue des futures négociations entre la France et l'Algérie, nous recommandons à l'Assemblée de considérer cette question comme urgente. Pour nous, particulièrement après la déclaration claire et lucide du représentant de l'Australie qui a défendu le principe d'autodétermination, lequel a pris la valeur d'une loi pour l'Assemblée, et après la menace qui a été faite d'employer la force dans le cas de l'Irian occidental, l'Assemblée doit recommander au président de Gaulle de ne pas faire usage de la contrainte ou de la menace de la force contre des prisonniers de guerre.

99. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant du Pakistan pour une motion d'ordre.

100. Sir Muhammad Zafrulla KHAN (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je vous prie de m'excuser d'avoir demandé la parole pour la troisième fois, mais je suis certain que mes collègues reconnaîtront que mes interventions précédentes portaient sur des points de procédure. Même maintenant je n'abuserai pas du temps de l'Assemblée, étant donné l'urgence de la question que nous avons présentée.

101. Nous comprenons parfaitement les difficultés que présentent cette question, et d'autres questions, pour ce grand pays qu'est la France, dont nous admirons tous tellement la culture et la position qu'elle a prise en faveur de la cause de la liberté, de l'égalité et de la fraternité.

102. Le chef actuel de l'Etat français, à qui ce modeste appel est adressé, s'est élevé en maintes occasions jusqu'aux sommets les plus hauts, alors que les circonstances l'exigeaient, au service de son pays et de son peuple. Il incarne aujourd'hui, si je puis ainsi parler sans impertinence, ce qu'il y a de plus élevé et de plus digne dans l'esprit et la tradition de la France. Nous sommes convaincus que ce modeste appel adressé respectueusement à son gouvernement ne sera pas sans effet.

103. Je puis dire, au nom de tous les auteurs du projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1], que tel est l'esprit dans lequel ce projet a été présenté à l'Assemblée, et nous espérons que l'Assemblée et le Gouvernement de la France le recevront dans le même esprit.

104. Je proposerai la clôture du débat sur ce projet de résolution et, si l'Assemblée y consent, je demanderai que nous passions immédiatement au vote.

105. Le PRESIDENT: L'Assemblée vient d'être saisie d'une motion d'ordre tendant à clore immédiatement le débat et à nous faire passer au vote.

106. Avant de soumettre le projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] au vote, conformément à l'article 77 du règlement intérieur, je voudrais attirer l'attention du représentant du Pakistan sur le fait qu'il n'y a plus qu'un seul orateur inscrit. Ne pouvons-nous permettre à ce dernier orateur d'intervenir, puis clore la discussion de cette question et passer au vote?

107. Avec l'assentiment du représentant du Pakistan, je donne la parole au représentant de l'Italie.

108. M. THEODOLI (Italie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je remercie le Président de me donner la parole. Je suis en effet le dernier orateur inscrit, mais étant donné que certains des auteurs du projet de résolution m'ont demandé si je voulais bien prendre la parole après le vote pour expliquer mon vote, je suis prêt à le faire.

109. Le PRESIDENT: Conformément à la motion présentée par le représentant du Pakistan, nous considérons clos le débat sur le projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1]. Nous allons donc soumettre ce projet au vote, mais auparavant je vais donner la parole aux deux orateurs qui ont demandé la parole pour expliquer leur vote avant que celui-ci n'ait lieu.

110. M. PLIMPTON (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Les Etats-Unis appuient énergiquement toute mesure tendant à faciliter une solution pacifique de la question algérienne. Nous avons espéré et nous continuons d'espérer que des négociations permettront aux parties de se rapprocher d'un accord et d'un règlement durable.

111. Nous nous demandons cependant si ce projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1] ne va pas gêner ces négociations et leur porter préjudice, et s'il ne fera pas reculer les perspectives d'un règlement négocié.

112. Nous tenons naturellement au plus haut point à ce que le traitement des prisonniers algériens soit conforme aux normes humanitaires les plus élevées. Les conditions de leur emprisonnement intéressent particulièrement les Etats-Unis, ainsi que nous l'avons clairement indiqué aux parties intéressées qui s'occupent déjà de chercher une solution à ce problème. Nous craignons cependant que la décision qu'il est maintenant demandé à l'Assemblée de prendre n'ait un effet défavorable sur la situation des prisonniers et sur le cours des négociations. En outre, nous éprouvons certains doutes quant à la procédure suivie à propos de ce projet de résolution et nous ne voudrions pas qu'une telle procédure soit considérée comme établissant un précédent.

113. Les Etats-Unis s'abstiendront sur le projet de résolution.

114. M. BINDZI (Cameroun): J'ai demandé la parole pour expliquer très brièvement le sens que ma délégation entend donner au vote qu'elle va émettre tout à l'heure. Nous ne sommes pas coauteur du projet de résolution [A/L.365 et Add.1]. Nous voterons cependant pour le texte qui nous est soumis. Ma délégation, comme d'autres, ne préjuge pas la question quant au fond, bien qu'elle ait une opinion précise qu'elle fera connaître en son temps. Nous entendons seulement donner à notre vote positif le sens d'un appel à la France. Selon les termes de la résolution, nous faisons remarquer que nous ne demandons même pas la libération des prisonniers, encore que nous la souhaitons ardemment. Nous demandons seulement que la France fasse ce qui est possible pour arrêter cette grève de la faim qui risque, si elle se perpétue, de lui faire avoir 14 000 cadavres sur les bras.

115. Le PRESIDENT: Nous allons procéder au vote sur le projet de résolution soumis par le représentant du Pakistan [A/L.365 et Add.1]. Le vote par appel nominal a été demandé.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par l'Uruguay, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Yémen, Yougoslavie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Autriche, Bolivie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cambodge, Cameroun, Ceylan, Tchad, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (Léopoldville), Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, Ethiopie, Fédération de Malaisie, Finlande, Gabon, Ghana, Guinée, Hongrie, Islande, Inde, Indonésie, Iran, Irak, Jordanie, Laos, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Madagascar, Mali, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Nigéria, Norvège, Pakistan, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Somalie, Soudan, Suède, Syrie, Thaïlande, Togo, Tunisie, Turquie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, Haute-Volta.

Votent contre: Néant.

S'abstiennent: Uruguay, Venezuela, Argentine, Australie, Belgique, Brésil, Canada, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Costa Rica, Danemark, République Dominicaine, Salvador, Grèce, Guatemala, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Japon, Luxembourg, Mexique, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Panama, Féroé, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Espagne, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique.

Par 62 voix contre zéro, avec 31 abstentions, le projet de résolution est adopté.*

116. Le PRESIDENT: Je vais donner la parole à certains orateurs qui l'ont demandée pour expliquer leur vote.

117. M. BOLAND (Irlande) [traduit de l'anglais]: Prenant la parole devant l'Assemblée pour la première fois depuis l'élection de notre président aux hautes fonctions qu'il occupe avec tant de distinction, je voudrais lui exprimer mes sincères félicitations et lui dire quel plaisir et quel honneur c'est pour moi de prendre la parole à l'Assemblée sous sa présidence.

118. Ma délégation a cru devoir s'abstenir dans le vote sur la résolution que l'Assemblée vient d'adopter. Je tiens à préciser les raisons qui ont incité ma délégation à s'abstenir.

119. L'attitude de la délégation irlandaise sur la question du droit de l'Algérie à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance est bien connue. Si on pense à ce que fut notre propre histoire, on comprendra qu'aucune attitude différente de celle que nous avons toujours adoptée ici n'est possible pour nous. La délégation irlandaise ne peut manquer non plus d'éprouver de la sympathie pour les prisonniers algériens qui font la grève de la faim en France et de déplorer leur sort. Les mouvements de libération nationale exigent parfois beaucoup de courage et d'endurance chez leurs adhérents. Le sort des prisonniers algériens qui font actuellement la grève de la faim pour la défense des valeurs et de la cause en lesquelles ils croient trouve un écho particulièrement sensible en nos cœurs. Ce sort doit également émouvoir toutes les délégations à l'Assemblée dans leurs sentiments humanitaires.

120. En vérité, il est tragique qu'à un moment où, grâce à la haute sagesse politique du chef de l'Etat français et des dirigeants nationaux algériens, l'ouverture de négociations paraissait très proche, les grands espoirs que nous avions de voir la question algérienne réglée de manière pacifique soient menacés une fois de plus de s'évanouir du fait de la crise qui vient de surgir à propos des prisonniers algériens qui font la grève de la faim en France.

121. La délégation irlandaise apprécie parfaitement l'urgence de cette situation et comprend que c'est la raison pour laquelle cette résolution a été soumise à l'Assemblée avec un si bref délai, mais certaines délégations, notamment la mienne, n'ont pas eu la possibilité d'en informer leurs gouvernements et de recevoir des instructions avant que la résolution fût mise aux voix. Je tiens à préciser que c'est pour ce motif, parce que la délégation irlandaise n'a pas pu recevoir d'instructions de son gouvernement dans le bref délai dont elle disposait, qu'elle s'est abstenue, et non parce qu'elle se serait refusée à appuyer les légitimes revendications nationales de l'Algérie, ou parce qu'elle n'aurait pas éprouvé un profond sentiment d'inquiétude, sinon d'angoisse, à l'égard de ces hommes qui mettent à présent à l'épreuve leur force morale en risquant le sacrifice suprême, comme on le fait toujours lorsqu'on manie cette arme qu'est la grève de la faim.

122. Sir Hugh FOOT (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation s'est abstenue dans le vote sur la résolution. Les auteurs du projet de résolution étaient mus par des motifs humanitaires que nous ne contestons pas un seul instant. D'autre part, nous ne sommes pas prêts à exprimer nos vues sur la question pour le moment. C'est pour cette raison que nous ne nous sommes pas opposés au projet de résolution.

123. Je dois cependant préciser que ma délégation éprouve certaines appréhensions au sujet de cette proposition et qu'elle désapprouve nettement la méthode suivie pour nous la présenter. Notre première objection est que la question est certainement de la compétence de la France; si j'ai bien compris, cela n'est pas en cause et je crois même que les auteurs l'ont reconnu. En deuxième lieu, la résolution aura nécessairement des répercussions politiques. En troisième lieu, c'est seulement cet après-midi que nous avons eu connaissance de ce projet de résolution aux aspects politiques si importants et ma délégation estime fort regrettable que l'Assemblée générale eût à se prononcer par un vote immédiat et dans ces conditions sur une résolution de cette nature. Nous désirons que le procès verbal fasse mention des graves objections qu'une telle procédure soulève à nos yeux.

124. M. THEODOLI (Italie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais simplement expliquer les raisons pour lesquelles ma délégation s'est abstenue dans le vote qui vient d'avoir lieu. Nous comprenons parfaitement, et nous apprécions, les motifs qui ont inspiré les auteurs du projet de résolution, parmi lesquels nous comptons tant de bons amis. Nous nous préoccuons vivement du sort des prisonniers politiques algériens. L'Italie a une longue tradition d'humanité et de justice, et personne, je l'espère, ne pensera que nous sommes indifférents à cette question. Cependant, nous avons éprouvé des doutes en ce qui concerne la procédure suivie dans le cas présent et nous avons également craint que la résolution ne soit mal interprétée par le Gouvernement français. De l'avis de ma délégation, c'est cela qu'il faut avoir présent à l'esprit. Nous sommes certains que le général de Gaulle ne sera pas insensible au sort de ces prisonniers politiques et trouvera un moyen de remédier à la situation, étant donné surtout que trois membres importants du Gouvernement marocain se trouvent en ce moment à Paris.

125. M. DEMETROPOULOS (Grèce): La délégation hellénique déplore sincèrement la situation qui s'est créée par suite de la grève de la faim des prisonniers politiques algériens en France et les événements qui l'ont précipitée. Nous estimons qu'aucune action ne devrait être entreprise qui puisse retarder ou compromettre les négociations qui, seules, peuvent amener une solution de la question algérienne. Nous voulons espérer que le Gouvernement français, dans son désir, que nous savons sincère, d'arriver le plus tôt possible à une solution équitable de la question algérienne, fera tout ce qui est en son pouvoir pour éliminer les causes de cette grève. Nous sommes persuadés que les discours éloquents et modérés prononcés à l'appui de cette résolution ne peuvent pas rester sans écho en haut lieu, et nous avons pensé que nous servirions le mieux, sur le plan politique, le but humanitaire poursuivi par la résolution qui vient d'être adoptée, en nous abstenant pour éviter de rendre plus délicate encore une situation qui l'est déjà suffisamment.

126. M. NORIEGA (Colombie) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Indépendamment de certaines considérations qui pourraient revêtir une grande importance et qui ont trait à la procédure, à l'opportunité et au fond même de la résolution que l'Assemblée vient d'adopter, nous désirons expliquer que la Colombie a toujours été en faveur de conversations directes entre les parties intéressées pour la solution de la délicate question algérienne, s'efforçant d'éviter tout ce qui pourrait même revêtir l'apparence d'une certaine forme d'ingérence qui risquerait de troubler d'une manière ou d'une autre l'heureux aboutissement de ces négociations que nous désirons de tous nos vœux. C'est pour ce motif que nous nous sommes abstenus dans le vote.

127. M. COMAY (Israël) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation considère avec une profonde sympathie un appel adressé pour des raisons humanitaires en faveur de prisonniers quels qu'ils soient. Nous nous sommes abstenus cependant dans le cas présent, parce que l'appel est rédigé en des termes qui semblent devoir le rendre inacceptable pour le gouvernement intéressé. C'est pourquoi nous ne sommes pas convaincus qu'il aurait eu l'effet souhaité ou qu'il aurait favorisé ces négociations algériennes pour le succès desquelles nous formons des vœux si ardents.

128. M. SOSA RODRIGUEZ (Venezuela) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Je voudrais expliquer brièvement les raisons pour lesquelles la délégation du Venezuela a dû s'abstenir dans le vote qui vient d'avoir lieu sur le projet de résolution [A/L.365] que l'Assemblée vient d'adopter.

129. L'abstention du Venezuela ne modifie en rien sa position sur le fond de la question algérienne. La position du Venezuela est bien connue de l'Assemblée. Nous avons toujours appuyé le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes et le droit du peuple algérien à son indépendance. Notre position n'a pas changé. Nous comprenons aussi les raisons humanitaires qui ont incité les auteurs à déposer leur projet de résolution. De l'avis de ma délégation, il ne s'agit pas seulement d'un projet de résolution dont nous pourrions dire qu'il s'inspire exclusivement de principes humanitaires. Ce projet renferme également des considérations d'ordre politique qui nous conduisent à en interpréter les termes pour savoir s'ils sont ou ne sont pas conformes aux dispositions de la Charte et, plus particulièrement, à l'Article 2, paragraphe 7.

130. Etant donné la hâte avec laquelle ce projet a été présenté, nous n'avons même pas eu le temps de l'étudier, ni encore moins d'en référer à notre gouvernement. C'est pourquoi ma délégation n'a pu faire autrement que de s'abstenir.

131. Le PRESIDENT: Je n'ai plus d'autres orateurs inscrits pour prendre la parole au sujet de la résolution qui vient d'être adoptée ou pour des explications de vote. Nous reprenons donc le débat général sur les deux points à l'ordre du jour — les points 88 et 22, 2 — qui a été suspendu.

132. M. MOD (Hongrie): Le sujet du débat présent est "La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". Cette déclaration [résolution 1514 (XV)] a été adoptée en 1960 et son importance historique est désormais manifeste. Un des traits caractéristiques de l'époque où nous vivons est la décomposition définitive des empires coloniaux, la liquidation finale du système colonial. Amorcée par la vie même, la question de la liquidation totale du système colonial a été mise à l'ordre du jour des Nations Unies à la suite de la discussion engagée sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique^{1/} et après que la Déclaration eut été adoptée. L'adoption de la Déclaration a permis et fait obligation à l'ONU, en tant qu'Organisation, de prendre une part active à cette lutte.

133. Les événements de l'année qui s'est écoulée depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration et les polémiques sur son application permettent de tirer plusieurs conclusions claires et importantes.

134. Aujourd'hui, comme tant de fois dans l'histoire de la société humaine, la situation internationale est caractérisée, dans le fond, par la lutte entre deux forces. L'une représente le développement, le progrès, le nouveau, et l'autre l'invariabilité, la stagnation, le statu quo, toutefois non pas le statu quo de la liberté, mais celui de la servitude. L'adoption de la Déclaration par l'Assemblée générale a marqué une victoire du progrès. Jetons un coup d'œil sur les comptes rendus de la quinzième session pour savoir quels sont les Etats qui s'y sont opposés par tous les moyens et qui, quand il n'y avait rien d'autre à faire, se sont abstenus de voter. Nous trouvons qu'il s'agit des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni, de la France, du Portugal, de l'Espagne, de la Belgique, de l'Afrique du Sud, de l'Australie, par exemple.

135. Je crois que, malgré les différentes jongleries philosophiques et pratiques, tout le monde voit clairement laquelle des grandes puissances représente le progrès et laquelle l'invariabilité; cependant je me permets quand-même, à l'intention des sceptiques, de citer l'ouvrage d'un expert américain en idéologie qui occupe à présent une fonction importante. Cet ouvrage, The Necessity for choice^{2/}, a en fait été écrit avant l'adoption de la Déclaration, mais l'alternative qui s'est posée aux Etats-Unis, lors de la discussion de la Déclaration, est de la même nature que les problèmes sur lesquels l'auteur, le professeur Henry A. Kissinger, formule ses thèses. En analysant la situation internationale, l'auteur écrit:

"... quand l'équilibre des puissances est si précaire, ce n'est pas un pur hasard si les lignes de séparation existantes sont si rigide ment maintenues. Car le statu quo a du moins l'avantage de la familiarité...^{3/}"

136. Puis, comme s'il voulait lever les doutes sur l'identité du représentant du statu quo, il poursuit:

"Une puissance qui représente le statu quo, a toujours des difficultés lorsqu'il s'agit de faire face aux problèmes d'une période révolutionnaire. Puisque tout ce qu'elle considère comme "normal" se rattache à un ordre existant, elle reconnaît d'habitude trop tard qu'un autre Etat se propose de renverser le système international. C'est un problème en particulier si un Etat révolutionnaire formule chaque demande comme un objectif limité spécifique qui, en lui-même, semble peut-être tout à fait raisonnable^{4/}."

137. La Déclaration est vraiment "spécifique" pour ceux qui en ont pris l'initiative et qui l'ont appuyée à l'époque; elle l'est encore, maintenant qu'il s'agit de son application, elle est vraiment spécifique, dis-je, car elle s'élève contre le phénomène spécifique du colonialisme, et elle est vraiment "tout à fait raisonnable", car elle peut être réalisée sur la base du rapport donné des forces internationales. La vérité, en bref, est que les forces de l'impérialisme s'opposent par tous les moyens et font obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration, tandis que les pays socialistes et les forces nationales des nouveaux Etats indépendants font des efforts pour la mettre en œuvre.

M. Rossides (Chypre), vice-président, prend la présidence.

138. La Déclaration "proclame solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Toutefois, en 1962, après la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, 88 territoires, d'une superficie de 13 millions de kilomètres carrés, comprenant 71 millions d'habitants, seront encore sous la domination coloniale. La plupart d'entre eux se trouvent en Afrique, mais il y a des colonies en Asie, sur le continent américain, ainsi qu'en Océanie.

139. A quels pays sont ces colonies? Le Portugal est le principal accusé à la seizième session de l'Assemblée générale. Ses faits et gestes donnent du travail à la Quatrième Commission ainsi qu'à l'Assemblée générale elle-même. Le monde entier connaît bien les méthodes coloniales de massacres inhumains frisant le génocide que ce pays pratique en Angola, au mépris des dispositions de la Déclaration. Si l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne prend pas les mesures nécessaires en temps opportun, il peut arriver que les atrocités s'étendent au Mozambique et à la soi-disant Guinée portugaise.

140. Le nom de la Belgique est devenu notoire, en 1960, à la suite de son agression contre le peuple congolais. Dans le Territoire sous tutelle du Ruanda-Urundi, qui est limitrophe du Congo, elle excite les tribus et les nationalités les unes contre les autres pour réprimer le mouvement d'indépendance de la population.

141. Les Pays-Bas, après avoir perdu la majeure partie de leurs territoires coloniaux, suivent le principe divide et impera et ne veulent pas démordre de l'Irian occidental, partie intégrante de l'Indonésie qui a recouvré son indépendance nationale; et comme ils pressentent qu'ils ne pourront maintenir leur position, ils font maintenant appel aux Nations Unies. Ils offrent à l'ONU, comme un territoire sous tutelle, une partie — heureusement, une partie seulement — du territoire de l'Indonésie. Il est tout naturel que ma délégation ne prête pas son appui à cette proposition qui, à notre avis, n'est pas seulement inacceptable, mais représente en plus une tentative d'utiliser l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour les objectifs des colonisateurs. "

142. La France poursuit depuis de longues années sa guerre meurtrière contre le peuple algérien. Un triste aspect de cette guerre sans merci a été évoqué par la résolution que l'Assemblée vient d'adopter. Des centaines de milliers de patriotes algériens et de citoyens français ont sacrifié leurs vies à l'avidité coloniale de l'impérialisme français — en vain, du point de vue de la France, car, comme l'expérience de plusieurs anciennes colonies françaises le prouve, la France est vouée d'avance à l'échec en face de la volonté du peuple, en l'occurrence du peuple algérien. Malgré tout cela, le Président du Conseil français a formulé, en juin 1960, les principes de la politique coloniale française comme suit: "Nous voulons sauvegarder, en ce qui concerne notre pays, ses intérêts politiques, ses intérêts stratégiques, aussi son influence intellectuelle et ses possibilités économiques."

143. L'Afrique du Sud a également introduit le régime de l'esclavage médiéval, déjà établi sur son propre territoire, au Sud-Ouest africain, territoire autrefois mis sous mandat par la Société des Nations, et elle sabote la mise du territoire sous la tutelle des Nations Unies. Le Sud-Ouest africain fait également l'objet d'un point de l'ordre du jour.

144. Le Royaume-Uni, qui possède d'immenses territoires en Afrique et ailleurs, est toujours le plus grand empire colonial de notre époque. Ses méthodes ne diffèrent point de celles des autres colonisateurs. Pour ne mentionner que la situation qui règne dans un de ses territoires, à en croire la presse britannique, la militarisation de la Fédération de la Rhodesie et du Nyassaland s'accompagne d'une extension de la législation d'urgence qui, selon M. Tredgold, président de la Cour suprême de la Fédération, "outrage presque tous les droits fondamentaux de l'homme". Ce sont là ses propres paroles.

145. La question de l'Oman figure à l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée, mais je ne peux m'empêcher de mentionner la cruelle guerre coloniale que les colonisateurs britanniques y livrent à un petit peuple. Là encore, leurs méthodes ne diffèrent nullement de celles des autres colonisateurs.

146. Et enfin, nous en arrivons au principal protecteur international du colonialisme, les Etats-Unis. Malgré toutes les manœuvres de diversion, les Etats-Unis n'ont pas réussi et ne réussiront pas à nier qu'ils sont, eux aussi, une puissance colonialiste. Porto Rico n'est qu'une de leurs colonies. Les Iles du Pacifique, qui sont importantes du point de vue stratégique, sont nominalement un Territoire sous tutelle administré par les Etats-Unis. A la vingt-septième session du Conseil de tutelle, en avril 1960, un pétitionnaire des Iles Marshall a dit: "Sous l'administration des Etats-Unis, notre niveau de vie n'a cessé de décliner ... Notre île a été transformée en terrain d'expériences atomiques."

147. Et l'orateur a poursuivi en ces termes:

"Il y a bien longtemps, nous nous protégeons nous-mêmes, sans l'aide d'aucune autre nation. Par la suite, les Espagnols sont venus nous protéger et nous sommes ainsi passés au statut de possession coloniale. Puis, les Allemands, à leur tour, vinrent nous protéger et l'emprise colonialiste, avec eux, ne fit que se renforcer. Les Japonais, à leur tour, nous ont protégés au nom de la Société des Nations.

Aujourd'hui, voilà que les Etats-Unis nous protègent. Nous sommes encore partie à un plan colonial^{5/}."

148. Par suite du développement de la technique et de la civilisation, la situation internationale actuelle est devenue telle que nous ne devons plus examiner chacune des puissances colonisatrices en elles-mêmes séparément. D'une part, les puissances de moindre importance, comme la Belgique, les Pays-Bas, le Portugal et même la France, ne pourraient pas, à elles seules, concentrer des forces matérielles et militaires suffisantes pour la lutte contre les peuples coloniaux; d'autre part, nous voyons qu'une nouvelle "Sainte-Alliance" s'est constituée en vue de la continuation de la colonisation. Le nom peut être différent selon le continent. Son objectif est cependant partout le même: oppression, militarisation, maintien du statu quo colonial à tout prix. Jetons un nouveau coup d'œil sur les faits.

149. Depuis que dure la guerre sanglante en Angola, le Portugal a reçu 300 millions de dollars sous forme d'aide militaire américaine. Les bombes au napalm jetées sur les patriotes angolais portent l'inscription "Made in USA".

150. La France a reçu des Etats-Unis près de 4 milliards 500 millions de dollars d'aide militaire en vue de sa lutte contre le peuple algérien. Il est de notoriété publique que des bombardiers B-26, de fabrication américaine, ont participé à l'attaque contre Bizerte. Pour compléter le tableau, il faut faire remarquer que la République fédérale d'Allemagne, qui joue un rôle de plus en plus proéminent dans l'OTAN, est aussi entrée en scène. Elle a donné aux colonisateurs français une aide d'environ 2 milliards de dollars aux fins de la guerre coloniale en Algérie.

151. La Belgique a reçu 1 milliard 200 millions de dollars d'aide militaire américaine, et ainsi de suite. Je pourrais énumérer les autres colonisateurs, depuis la Grande-Bretagne, en passant par l'Espagne et l'Afrique du Sud.

152. Dans l'antiquité, on disait: "Tous les chemins mènent à Rome." Aujourd'hui, on pourrait dire que les chemins de tous les colonisateurs mènent à Washington. Bien sûr, l'assistance américaine n'est pas désintéressée. Les grands monopoles américains font plusieurs milliards de dollars de profit dans ce "business" colonial.

153. La domination exercée par certaines puissances colonisatrices se fait surtout au moyen de l'OTAN. A ce propos, je ne veux mentionner que deux exemples.

154. L'utilisation de l'Afrique dans une guerre de fusées nucléaires tient une place importante dans les plans de l'OTAN. Un projet concret a été esquissé dans le livre intitulé War and Peace in the Space Age^{6/}, dont l'auteur est le général Gavin, un éminent théoricien militaire des Etats-Unis.

"L'Europe et l'Afrique, dit le général Gavin, font partie du même théâtre tactique. L'Afrique est, en fait, la clef de la défense européenne^{7/}."

^{5/} Cette déclaration a été faite à la 1061ème séance du Conseil de tutelle, dont les comptes rendus ne paraissent que sous forme analytique.

^{6/} James M. Gavin, War and Peace in the Space Age, New York, Harper and Brothers, édit., 1958.

^{7/} Ibid., p. 275.

Et l'auteur poursuit:

"Des engins lancés à partir du Kenya, du Moyen-Orient et de l'Europe méridionale peuvent faire autant pour la défense que des engins lancés du territoire du Royaume-Uni, mais ils sont beaucoup moins exposés à être détruits^{8/}."

155. Gavin considère l'Afrique comme le lieu le plus approprié pour le déploiement des réserves mobiles stratégiques de l'OTAN, composées d'unités blindées et d'unités à fusées. D'Afrique du Nord et de l'Ouest, celles-ci peuvent être transportées par air dans n'importe quelle région.

156. Les idées du général Gavin semblent avoir fortement impressionné certains milieux des Etats-Unis. Le nouveau président l'a nommé ambassadeur des Etats-Unis en France, et cette nomination — selon l'hebdomadaire français Carrefour — est en rapport avec l'intention des Etats-Unis d'empêcher l'Algérie d'échapper des mains de l'Ouest et d'empêcher les négociations avec le Gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne d'exercer un effet décisivement affaiblissant sur l'OTAN.

157. Voici l'autre exemple. La colonie britannique du Kenya vient d'être intégrée dans la chaîne des bases aériennes stratégiques de l'OTAN en Afrique. C'est le résultat de la décision du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de disperser les stocks de bombes et d'obus nucléaires, le long de l'axe stratégique de l'Empire britannique, aux aérodromes de Chypre, d'Aden et d'Afrique orientale. "Les bombardiers à réaction, dit un article du Daily Express, tourneront entre l'Angleterre et les dépôts d'armes, de manière que les Russes ne seront jamais certains de l'endroit où se trouvent les bombardiers." Ce système a été mis à l'épreuve en mai 1961, quand plus de 200 bombardiers de la classe V sont partis des aérodromes de l'axe pour un simulacre d'attaque.

158. Les objectifs des colonisateurs n'ont pas changé. Même aujourd'hui, comme il y a 100 ans, ils veulent s'enrichir par l'exploitation des peuples d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'autres continents. Mais ils ont changé de méthodes, au cours des temps.

159. Il est tout à fait clair que des pays aussi petits que la Belgique ou le Portugal se seraient vus depuis longtemps obligés d'abandonner leurs colonies si, dans les domaines militaire et économique, l'OTAN et le Marché commun européen n'avaient pas créé les conditions qui leur permettent de poursuivre l'oppression coloniale.

160. Une des caractéristiques des méthodes actuelles de la colonisation est la colonisation dite collective. Grâce au Marché commun européen, les colonies françaises et belges, au lieu d'être dominées par un seul pays, ont été jetées en proie à la communauté des colonisateurs animés de la belle idée de l'exploitation collective. Les colonies britanniques subiront bientôt le même sort.

161. Les longues années de délibérations de la Quatrième Commission ont fourni suffisamment de précisions à ce sujet; je crois donc que je peux maintenant laisser de côté les exemples. Il suffit que je me réfère à deux cas flagrants: l'agression collective de l'OTAN contre le Congo et l'attitude des puissances de l'OTAN à l'égard de la question de la base militaire française de Bizerte, pendant la troisième session extraordinaire de l'Assemblée générale. Pour justifier cette attitude, on a même créé aux Etats-Unis un appui idéologique.

162. Dans un recueil intitulé The Idea of Colonialism^{9/}, on trouve une constatation franche disant que "seul l'idéaliste le plus naïf peut croire qu'en ce moment de crise mondiale les pays métropolitains pourraient se permettre de se retirer" de leurs colonies.

163. Nous nous rappelons tous que le président de Gaulle a souligné la même considération idéologique lorsqu'il a refusé d'évacuer la base de Bizerte.

164. Une autre méthode des puissances colonisatrices, qu'on appelle à juste raison le néo-colonialisme, est l'octroi d'un simulacre d'indépendance à l'un ou l'autre des territoires coloniaux ou des territoires sous tutelle, alors qu'on paralyse le pays devenu indépendant au moyen d'accords économiques et militaires secrets.

165. On ne saurait suffisamment répéter que l'obtention de l'indépendance politique ne signifie pas encore l'indépendance économique, mais seulement le premier pas vers cette dernière. Or, les colonisateurs, en maintenant les positions économiques, tiennent en mains un certain pouvoir politique qu'ils utiliseront, tôt ou tard, pour déroger à l'indépendance octroyée par contrainte.

166. Plusieurs d'entre les nouveaux Etats indépendants sont toujours sous la dépendance économique de leurs anciennes métropoles, et plus d'un parmi eux a été obligé, avant d'obtenir l'indépendance, de conclure des accords militaires secrets. Nous savons tous que, dans le cas du Cameroun français et du Samoa-Occidental par exemple, la question des accords secrets a soulevé de longs débats, des années durant, à l'Assemblée générale.

167. Le néo-colonialisme est l'un des plus grands ennemis des nouveaux Etats indépendants. Mais en tant que symptôme, il n'est pas d'origine toute récente. Je sais qu'il se trouve dans cette salle des représentants qui n'aiment pas entendre le nom de Lénine, surtout parce qu'il a été l'ennemi le plus conséquent de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme; pourtant je ne puis m'empêcher de le citer. En 1920, il a formulé ce problème comme suit:

"Il faut que, devant les plus larges masses de travailleurs de tous les pays, et surtout des pays sous-développés, nous dénoncions et démasquions la tromperie que les puissances impérialistes commettent systématiquement afin de pouvoir, sous le prétexte de la création d'Etats politiquement indépendants, créer des Etats qui leur sont totalement subordonnés dans les domaines économique, financier et militaire."

169. Aujourd'hui, à l'époque de l'effondrement définitif des empires coloniaux, les colonisateurs s'ef-forcent d'utiliser cette situation artificielle — la balkanisation de l'Afrique — pour semer la discorde parmi les nouveaux Etats indépendants d'Afrique et prolonger ainsi leur influence sur la base du principe divide et impera. Un exemple classique en est l'histoire du Cameroun où les colonisateurs britanniques et français unissaient leurs efforts pour contribuer à la balkanisation de l'Afrique.

170. On pourrait énumérer presque sans fin les exemples illustrant les moyens par lesquels les puissances coloniales s'efforcent de frustrer l'application des principes énoncés dans la résolution adoptée lors de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, mais je ne veux pas employer notre temps à en citer trop.

171. Depuis que l'Assemblée générale, à la demande de l'Union soviétique, a soulevé la question de la liquidation définitive du système colonial, suffisamment de temps s'est écoulé pour nous permettre de voir clairement les véritables intentions des différents gouvernements en ce qui concerne l'un des problèmes les plus importants de notre temps. Suffisamment de temps a passé également pour nous permettre de tirer des différentes positions les conclusions les plus importantes.

172. Ma première conclusion est que, dans la question du colonialisme, il n'y a pas de neutralité. On peut se déclarer soit pour la liquidation, soit pour le maintien du système colonial, mais on doit prendre parti. Les actes des puissances coloniales et de leurs alliés — quand même ils les embelliraient de commentaires des plus pervers — prouvent qu'ils prennent position pour le maintien du système colonial. En s'abstenant, en 1960, lors du vote sur la Déclaration, ils ont donc, en fait, voté contre, et c'est en ce sens que la majorité de l'Assemblée a jugé leur abstention. Un an s'est écoulé depuis, et il est temps de lever le masque.

173. L'autre conclusion — que personne ne doit ignorer — ressort du fait que la liquidation totale et définitive du système colonial est désormais une question unique, qui ne peut être décomposée. Nous voyons, d'une part, que les méthodes et manœuvres des puissances coloniales sont fondées sur un objectif et une politique uniques. D'autre part, nous voyons que les buts stratégiques poursuivis par les colonialistes dépassent de très loin les frontières des colonies et territoires sous tutelle en question. Les puissances coloniales entendent utiliser les colonies africaines en tant que bases militaires contre l'Europe; en outre, elles terrorisent les populations indigènes au moyen des bases militaires. Les Iles du Pacifique ne font pas partie de l'Asie, et pourtant elles figurent comme bases dans les plans militaires contre l'Asie ou l'Europe.

174. La lutte pour la liquidation du système colonial n'est donc pas l'affaire d'un seul continent ou d'un seul groupement de pays et ne devient pas une question de la guerre froide, même si la question est soulevée par une des grandes puissances et même si cela ne convient pas à une autre grande puissance.

175. Non, le problème de la liquidation du système colonial n'est pas un problème de la guerre froide; mais il fait effectivement partie du problème "guerre ou paix". Il en fait partie, car nous devons être conscients du fait que, alors que nous discutons ici les questions de la liquidation du système colonial, de véritables guerres font rage un peu partout dans les colonies. Il en fait partie, car si nous mettons fin au colonialisme, nous éliminons une des causes principales des guerres. Il en fait partie, car les bases étrangères situées sur les territoires coloniaux constituent un élément important de l'actuelle tension internationale.

176. Il découle du système social et des principes politiques des pays socialistes qu'ils sont anti-colonialistes, qu'ils sont de fermes alliés des nouveaux Etats indépendants. C'est à cause de cela que les colonialistes ont établi, en tant qu'arme à double tranchant, la base du Kenya, par exemple, dont j'ai fait mention. Un tranchant de cette arme servirait la perpétuation du colonialisme et l'autre, l'agression contre le système socialiste. Il s'ensuit donc, en bonne logique, que c'est précisément en vue de la prévention d'une "guerre chaude" — et puisqu'il n'y a pas de neutralité dans la question coloniale — qu'il faut que tous les gouvernements non seulement décident s'ils sont pour ou contre le colonialisme, mais tirent les conclusions nécessaires en ce qui concerne tous les problèmes s'y référant.

177. Je pense que ce n'est pas là une exigence d'une délégation ou d'une autre, dans une situation donnée, mais que c'est la logique même des événements. Au moment où ceux-ci se produisent, nous réagissons tous devant eux, sous forme de vote ou d'action, mais certains d'entre eux peuvent et doivent être encouragés, tout comme nous pouvons et devons prévenir consciemment les autres.

178. La troisième et dernière conclusion est la suivante: l'expérience acquise depuis l'établissement de l'ONU, mais particulièrement pendant ces dernières années, montre de plus en plus clairement que les adversaires de la liquidation du colonialisme sont les mêmes qui provoquent la tension internationale — ceux qui, dans l'ouvrage précité du professeur Kissinger, sont appelés "les puissances représentant le statu quo", ceux qui sont opposés au progrès et partisans de l'invariabilité sociale. Comme l'a dit le professeur: "Une puissance qui représente le statu quo a toujours des difficultés lorsqu'il s'agit de faire face aux problèmes d'une période révolutionnaire."

179. Or, que cela plaise à certains ou non, c'est un des traits caractéristiques de notre époque qu'elle est une période révolutionnaire. Et ce n'est pas là une question d'opinion, mais un enseignement objectif tiré des événements.

180. Le processus révolutionnaire qu'est, pour l'histoire de l'humanité, la désagrégation du système colonial ne peut être arrêté. Ceux qui veulent l'entraver rendent la solution peut-être plus difficile, plus compliquée et sans doute plus sanglante, mais ils ne peuvent pas arrêter ce processus. Le chef de la délégation hongroise à l'Assemblée générale, en sa quinzième session, János Kádár, a fait à juste raison la constatation suivante:

"Les bases du système colonial ont été tellement ébranlées que toute tentative en vue d'entraver le progrès de la libération, loin de l'arrêter, ne fera que l'accélérer." [883ème séance, par. 30.]

C'est justement pourquoi la solution ne peut et ne doit plus être renvoyée, sous aucun prétexte.

181. La Charte impose à l'ONU, en tant qu'organisation, le devoir d'encourager les processus de libération des peuples coloniaux. Si l'Organisation mondiale élabore les méthodes d'une solution pacifique, elle rendra par là un immense service non seulement aux peuples vivant sous l'oppression coloniale, mais aux puissances colonialistes également.

182. L'importante déclaration adoptée au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale au sujet de l'indépendance des peuples coloniaux a fait naître les espérances de millions de personnes opprimées. Il ne faut pas permettre qu'elles se sentent trompées sur le compte de l'ONU; il ne faut pas permettre que la Déclaration reste lettre morte. Les peuples coloniaux espèrent que la déclaration de principe sera suivie par des mesures appropriées; ils espèrent que nous répondrons sans ambages à la question: "Quand et comment l'ONU contribuera-t-elle à notre libération?"

183. La délégation hongroise appuie le projet de résolution présenté par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] précisément parce qu'il donne à ces questions une réponse claire et concrète.

184. M. LIU Chieh (Chine) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il y a un an, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [1514 (XV)], qui avait été présentée par un nombre sans précédent de délégations africaines et asiatiques. Cette déclaration était le testament laissé par une session historique qui a vu l'admission simultanée de 17 Etats Membres qui venaient d'accéder à la pleine indépendance nationale. C'était la réaffirmation solennelle des grands principes inscrits dans la Charte des Nations Unies; c'était aussi l'apogée d'une série de résolutions de l'Assemblée ayant trait à l'égalité de droits des peuples et à leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes. Avant d'aborder la question de l'application de cette résolution, je crois utile d'examiner à nouveau le rôle des Nations Unies dans cette question, l'une des plus complexes et des plus explosives des temps modernes.

185. A San Francisco, les artisans de la Charte avaient été parmi les premiers à sentir le souffle du changement et ils n'ont pas consacré moins de trois chapitres de la Charte à la question des peuples dépendants. Ces chapitres traitent explicitement de l'aide à apporter à l'évolution progressive des populations vers l'autonomie ou l'indépendance. Pour la première fois, la prospérité des populations dépendantes était considérée comme une question d'intérêt international et les puissances administrantes ont accepté de plein gré l'obligation de favoriser dans toute la mesure possible le progrès social, économique, politique et le progrès de l'instruction des habitants. Le principe de la primauté des intérêts des habitants était établi de manière incontestée et le droit des populations à décider elles-mêmes de leur destin ne pouvait plus être mis en question.

186. Depuis lors, les objectifs fondamentaux de ces dispositions de la Charte ont été rigoureusement poursuivis par les Nations Unies, agissant par l'intermédiaire du Conseil de tutelle et du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, et ont été réaffirmés à maintes reprises dans des résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée générale au cours de sessions successives. C'est ainsi que, grâce à l'élan donné par la Charte, le processus de décolonisation s'est accéléré. Dans ce processus, les vaillants efforts des peuples intéressés et la coopération des puissances administrantes ont joué un rôle essentiel, mais on ne peut nier ou méconnaître l'importance de l'action des Nations Unies qui ont donné l'encouragement et l'aide nécessaires. Il en est résulté qu'en une brève période de 15 ans plus de 30 territoires autrefois non autonomes sont devenus des nations indépendantes et que plusieurs autres sont sur le point d'accéder à la souveraineté. Le nombre d'habitants des territoires non autonomes, qui était de 215 millions, n'est plus que de 50 millions environ. Si nous comprenions dans notre comparaison des régions d'Asie qui faisaient autrefois partie de l'Empire britannique, la différence serait encore plus frappante. Il est certain que dans aucun autre secteur de leurs multiples activités les Nations Unies ne peuvent se vanter d'avoir tant accompli et que rien ne peut leur être une cause de satisfaction plus profonde.

187. En tenant compte de ce que j'ai exposé, la résolution adoptée l'an dernier, si importante soit-elle, ne fait que réaffirmer les principes et l'idéal déjà énoncés dans la Charte. Cependant, la Déclaration n'en est pas moins extrêmement importante, parce qu'elle attire notre attention sur le dur combat qui nous attend encore jusqu'à ce que la libération de l'homme soit un fait accompli. Dans le dispositif de cette résolution, l'Assemblée proclame solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Puis l'Assemblée déclare que la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales.

188. De nombreux orateurs ont parlé ici du colonialisme comme s'il consistait uniquement en la domination exercée par des puissances occidentales sur leurs territoires d'outre-mer en Asie et en Afrique. On a fort peu parlé de l'expansion continentale de l'impérialisme soviétique, qui a eu pour effet d'annexer par la force, d'exploiter, d'asservir et parfois d'annihiler des populations non russes. M. Khrouchtchev, de l'Union soviétique, décrivait en ces termes le colonialisme de la Russie tsariste dans un discours prononcé à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale:

"Le gouvernement tsariste a appliqué dans les marches de la Russie une politique essentiellement coloniale qui ne différait guère de ce que l'on peut voir à l'heure actuelle dans les pays coloniaux. Ouzbeks, Nazakhs, Tadjiks et autres nationalités non russes étaient dédaigneusement catalogués comme "étrangers". Ils n'étaient pas considérés comme des hommes et étaient impitoyablement exploités. On fomentait parmi ces peuples la discorde, la haine et les guerres intestines, et l'Empire tsariste ne se maintenait que par la force des baïonnettes et par l'oppression." [869ème séance, par. 207.]

189. Je ne me propose pas de faire retomber les fautes des tsars sur la tête des dirigeants actuels du Kremlin, et je n'ai pas non plus l'intention de détourner votre attention de la situation d'aujourd'hui en vous citant des chapitres de l'histoire. Mais le fait significatif est que, loin de libérer ces populations du colonialisme tsariste, les dirigeants de l'Union soviétique ont resserré leur domination sur les populations non russes, notamment sur les Ukrainiens, les Géorgiens, les Azerbaïdjanais, les Arméniens, même après que ces peuples eurent proclamé leur indépendance à la suite de la révolution de 1917. Pen-dant la deuxième guerre mondiale, le monde a été le témoin passif de l'annexion par la force des Etats baltes, de l'Estonie, de la Lettonie et de la Lituanie, ainsi que de certaines parties d'autres pays voisins telles que la Carélie finnoise, la Pologne orientale, la Karpato-Ruthénie tchécoslovaque, la Bessarabie roumaine, la Bucovine septentrionale et une partie de la Prusse-Orientale. L'URSS est sortie de la guerre ayant accru son territoire d'une superficie de 680 000 kilomètres carrés et sa population de 22 millions d'habitants. Plus récemment, le colonialisme soviétique a consisté à installer un certain nombre d'Etats satellites sous l'étiquette de "démocraties populaires". Il suffit de rappeler les événements de Hongrie en 1956 pour se convaincre que les prétendues "démocraties populaires" ne sont que des colonies soviétiques camouflées. La colonisation soviétique s'est maintenant étendue en Asie à la Mongolie extérieure, à la Corée du Nord et au Nord-Viet-nam, et elle cherche aujourd'hui de nouvelles pâtures en Afrique et en Amérique latine.

190. J'ai fait ce bref aperçu de l'impérialisme soviétique pour souligner un seul fait. Pendant que le colonialisme des puissances occidentales prend rapidement fin, il se trouve remplacé par une nouvelle forme de colonialisme d'une plus grande portée et d'une plus grande brutalité dans ses méthodes. Permettez-moi de citer l'opinion d'un homme d'Etat asiatique à l'appui de mes dires:

"Il y a cependant une autre forme de colonialisme qui n'apparaît peut-être pas aussi nettement à beaucoup d'entre nous et à laquelle certains ne seraient peut-être pas tentés d'appliquer le terme de colonialisme. Songez par exemple à ces Etats satellites sous domination communiste de l'Europe centrale et orientale, à la Hongrie, la Roumanie, la Bulgarie, l'Albanie, la Tchécoslovaquie, la Lettonie, la Lituanie, l'Estonie et la Pologne. Ces pays ne sont-ils pas des colonies au même titre que les territoires coloniaux d'Afrique et d'Asie? Si nous sommes unis dans notre opposition au colonialisme, n'avons-nous pas le devoir de déclarer ouvertement notre opposition au colonialisme soviétique au même titre qu'à l'impérialisme occidental?"

Ainsi parlait sir John Kotelawala, ancien premier ministre de Ceylan, à la Conférence de Bandoung en 1955. Nous avons entendu pendant ces dernières années, dans notre assemblée, de nombreuses allusions à l'esprit de Bandoung, mais je crois que ces paroles prononcées par un dirigeant d'un pays d'Asie il y a six ans rendent un son plus poignant encore aujourd'hui, devant l'urgence du problème colonial.

191. Il est permis de se demander pourquoi l'Union soviétique, tout en exigeant la libération immédiate des colonies occidentales, cherche en même temps à consolider son emprise sur les peuples captifs vivant dans l'orbite communiste. La réponse, nous la trouvons dans les enseignements de Lénine, qui écrivait ce qui suit:

"En tant que communistes, nous devons appuyer les mouvements bourgeois d'émancipation dans les pays coloniaux lorsqu'ils ont un véritable caractère révolutionnaire et lorsque les représentants de ces mouvements ne nous empêchent pas d'éduquer et d'organiser dans l'esprit révolutionnaire les paysans et les masses exploitées."

Cette ligne de conduite a été fidèlement suivie à la fois par Staline et par Khrouchtchev, parce qu'elle correspond à la stratégie communiste, qui consiste à favoriser l'agitation et le chaos dans les régions névralgiques, afin de s'y infiltrer et d'y introduire la subversion pour finalement les conquérir.

192. Plusieurs représentants ont dit du haut de cette tribune que le débat actuel ne devait pas se transformer en une propagande de guerre froide. Je partage pleinement ces sentiments, mais je manquerais à la vérité en omettant de dire que la question du colonialisme a été utilisée par les impérialistes communistes comme une arme efficace de guerre froide. A ce sujet, je voudrais, avec votre permission, citer l'éminent Président de la Tunisie. Dans un discours récemment prononcé à Chatham House sur les "Perspectives africaines" le président Bourguiba s'exprimait ainsi:

"A l'époque actuelle, la guerre froide est axée sur la décolonisation et l'indépendance. Ainsi, dans la mesure où le colonialisme crée des rancœurs et des ressentiments, la guerre froide s'établit dans ces régions et le camp communiste s'érige en champion de la liberté et de l'indépendance des peuples coloniaux. De toute évidence, les communistes qui se sont érigés en champions de l'indépendance ne se présentent pas en tant que communistes, mais ils estiment que l'indépendance constitue l'étape préliminaire nécessaire afin d'amener les populations à rejoindre un ensemble communiste ou à subir l'influence des puissances communistes avant de devenir des satellites."

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

193. Je me suis permis d'invoquer l'opinion d'un homme d'Etat africain à seule fin d'étayer mon affirmation selon laquelle, dans notre désir de ne pas introduire des questions de guerre froide dans ce débat, nous ne devons pas nous dissimuler que les communistes se servent des slogans de la libération coloniale non seulement pour intensifier la guerre froide, mais encore pour favoriser leur grand dessein de domination mondiale.

194. Je passe maintenant aux projets de résolution dont l'Assemblée est saisie et à cette occasion j'indiquerai brièvement la position de ma délégation. Sur la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise ou de l'Irian occidental, depuis que l'Organisation des Nations Unies l'examine, ma délégation affirme que le problème ne peut être tranché avant que les aspirations librement exprimées de la population ne soient connues. La proposition faite par le Gouvernement néerlandais semble conforme aux principes énoncés dans la Charte, en ce sens qu'elle donne la primauté aux intérêts des habitants et à la volonté de la population. Le Gouvernement néerlandais a annoncé qu'il se proposait de céder aux Nations Unies sa souveraineté sur le territoire. Ma délégation pense donc que les Nations Unies devraient assumer cette responsabilité internationale et s'assurer dès que possible des aspirations de la population. Ma délégation votera en faveur du projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354].

195. L'autre projet de résolution [A/L.357] dont l'Assemblée est saisie a été proposé par la délégation de la Nigéria et tend à la fixation d'une date limite pour l'accession de tous les territoires africains à l'indépendance. D'une manière générale, il est difficile d'édicter une règle uniforme pour divers terri-toires, surtout si l'on tient compte du rapport^{10/} du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, qui, après une étude approfondie faite l'an dernier sur les progrès réalisés dans les territoires non autonomes, a attiré l'attention de l'Assemblée sur la grande diversité des conditions dans ces territoires. Cependant, la date de 1970 a été proposée par le représentant d'un pays africain et semble acceptable pour les pays directement intéressés. Ma délégation est donc disposée à voter ce projet de résolution dans l'espoir que cette période de transition encouragera les efforts communs des habitants et des puissances administrantes pour hâter le progrès vers l'indépendance.

196. En terminant, je tiens à vous assurer que la Chine est hostile au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes, quelle qu'en soit l'origine, et sans distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur. D'ailleurs, l'histoire de la République de Chine depuis un demi-siècle abonde en épisodes de luttes incessantes et de résistance contre la domination étrangère, notamment dans notre long conflit contre les forces du communisme international. A l'Organisation des Nations Unies, nous avons toujours appuyé les résolutions et les mesures favorables à la liberté. Ma délégation ne le cède à aucune autre dans son désir d'assurer l'application de la Déclaration historique de l'Assemblée générale, afin que le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations disparaisse de la surface de la terre. Mais nous demandons instamment à l'Assemblée générale de reconnaître le danger que présente l'impérialisme soviétique, qui cherche à étendre ses tentacules dans toutes les régions où l'ancien colonialisme est en voie d'être extirpé. Nous sommes aussi fermement convaincus que l'application de la Déclaration ne sera complète que lorsque le droit d'autodétermination sera exercé non seulement par les peuples habitant des territoires actuellement non autonomes, mais encore par les millions de captifs habitant les territoires soumis au régime communiste, dont les aspirations à la liberté ne peuvent plus être méconnues par l'Assemblée si elle veut jouer son rôle de gardienne de la liberté.

197. M. SCHURMANN (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Lorsque le Gouvernement néerlandais a décidé de présenter les propositions contenues dans notre projet de résolution [A/L.354], il l'a fait pour deux raisons. La première raison est qu'après avoir voté pour la résolution 1514 (XV) à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée nous avons estimé de notre devoir d'en respecter les dispositions à l'égard du seul territoire non autonome qui soit encore sous administration des Pays-Bas, celui de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, et par conséquent de prendre des mesures immédiates en vue de transférer tous les pouvoirs à la population du territoire afin de faire en sorte qu'elle puisse exercer son droit à disposer d'elle-même en déterminant librement son statut politique futur; de même, nous avons estimé devoir reconnaître le rôle important qui incombe dans ce processus aux Nations Unies, comme le dit la résolution.

198. La deuxième raison était notre espoir qu'en nous conformant à ce qui était prévu par l'Assemblée générale nous contribuerions de notre mieux à assurer la transition pacifique de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale de l'état de dépendance à l'autonomie complète, ce qui mettrait en même temps un terme à notre long différend avec l'Indonésie.

199. C'est pour cette deuxième raison que le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, dans ses deux déclarations, la première au cours de la discussion générale [1016ème séance] et la seconde lors de la discussion du présent point de l'ordre du jour [1049ème séance], a évité soigneusement toute allusion au passé qui aurait pu être désagréable à l'Indonésie ou susciter une controverse avec elle; il a donc porté toute son attention sur l'avenir du territoire tel qu'il se présenterait lorsque aurait disparu la principale difficulté pour l'Indonésie, c'est-à-dire la présence des Pays-Bas en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale.

200. Nous espérons que cette prudence et cette modération trouveraient un écho dans l'attitude de l'Indonésie, chez qui nous espérons rencontrer le même esprit de coopération. A notre grand regret, cependant, le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Indonésie n'a pas voulu voir la main que nous tendions à lui-même et aussi aux Nations Unies, et, dans sa déclaration du 9 novembre [1050ème séance], au lieu de discuter nos propositions d'une façon raisonnable, il a exprimé des récriminations et même des menaces de violence.

201. Certes, le Ministre d'Indonésie a fait une fugitive allusion à la possibilité de trouver une formule permettant d'appliquer les principes de l'autodétermination et de l'autorité des Nations Unies, mais il a bien précisé que selon la formule à laquelle il songeait l'Indonésie devrait reprendre l'administration du territoire, puis, dans un avenir très éloigné, autoriserait les Papous à "confirmer" qu'ils désirent rester avec l'Indonésie. Est-il besoin de dire que le principe de cette formule n'est qu'une parodie du principe de la liberté de choix?

202. Dans sa déclaration, M. Subandrio a répété toutes ces vieilles accusations et ces expressions de rancœur que nous n'avons entendues que trop souvent, hélas, dans les assemblées des Nations Unies; il a ensuite affirmé la revendication de son pays, qui veut annexer la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale sans plébiscite; enfin, il a terminé en proférant à plusieurs reprises des menaces d'action militaire dans un proche avenir, à moins que les Pays-Bas n'acceptent de transférer immédiatement la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et sa population à l'Indonésie.

203. Bien que les Pays-Bas aient contre l'Indonésie des griefs véritables dont la liste est aussi longue que celle des griefs factices de l'Indonésie contre nous, je m'abstiendrai de les évoquer parce que nous ne voulons pas qu'un débat calme et raisonnable sur la décolonisation de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale se transforme en une querelle sur le passé, qui serait ici hors de propos. Je ne veux pas non plus reprendre le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Indonésie sur ce que nous ne pouvons considérer que comme des menaces déplacées, car tous les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies se sont engagés, en signant la Charte, à s'abstenir de recourir à la menace.

204. Le but de mon intervention est simplement d'exprimer notre avis, sine ira et studio, sur les arguments avancés par l'Indonésie à l'appui de son assertion selon laquelle la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale ne serait pas actuellement un territoire non autonome sous administration néerlandaise, mais ferait partie du territoire de la République d'Indo-nésie, et nous ne serions donc pas fondés à faire les propositions que nous avons faites.

205. Ces arguments sont les suivants:

1) Lorsque M. Sukarno et M. Hatta ont proclamé l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, le 17 août 1945, ils n'ont pas seulement agi au nom de tous les Indonésiens, mais également au nom des Papous de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, exerçant ainsi le droit d'autodétermination des Papous, pour le compte des Papous;

2) L'Indonésie, étant l'Etat successeur des Pays-Bas, doit comprendre tous les territoires qui faisaient autrefois partie des anciennes Indes orientales néerlandaises;

3) Aux termes de la Charte de transfert de souveraineté en date du 2 novembre 1949^{11/}, la souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale a été transférée par les Pays-Bas à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie.

Examinons donc calmement ces affirmations.

206. Pour ce qui est des conditions dans lesquelles l'indépendance a été proclamée le 17 août 1945 et des intentions des deux signataires, j'ai la bonne fortune d'avoir à ma disposition un document dont la délégation indonésienne ne peut guère contester l'autorité: il s'agit d'un livre écrit par le professeur Muhammad Yamin, éminent historien et homme d'Etat, membre du gouvernement et membre éminent de la délégation indonésienne. Ce livre — je l'ai sous la main; c'est le premier de deux volumes — est intitulé Naskah persiapan undang-undang dasar 1945, ce qui veut dire "Travaux préparatoires du projet de constitution de 1945".

207. Dans cet ouvrage fort intéressant, le professeur Yamin rapporte textuellement les discussions qui ont eu lieu entre les dirigeants du mouvement de l'indépendance indonésienne immédiatement avant la proclamation de l'indépendance. J'aimerais vous donner lecture de certaines déclarations qui ont été faites alors, en traduction bien entendu.

208. A la page 203 de la première partie de son livre, publié en 1959, le professeur Yamin reproduit une déclaration faite par M. Hatta le 11 juillet 1945, quelques jours seulement avant la proclamation de l'indépendance, concernant l'étendue de la future Indonésie. La voici:

"Les frontières de l'Indonésie, à mon avis — déclare M. Hatta —, doivent reposer sur nos revendications antérieures. Ces revendications ne dépassaient pas l'Indonésie ou les anciennes Indes néerlandaises et, en certaines occasions, lors de réunions indonésiennes auxquelles j'ai assisté, j'ai même exprimé le désir de réduire ce territoire. Le territoire de la Papouasie, je préfère le laisser à d'autres. Mais si le Gouvernement japonais" — car l'Indonésie était occupée à l'époque par les Japonais — "voulait abandonner au bénéfice de l'Indonésie la Papouasie qui était autrefois sous domination néerlandaise, je ne m'y opposerais pas, mais je ne le demanderais pas, et si le territoire de la Papouasie pouvait être échangé contre le Bornéo du Nord je ne m'y opposerais pas non plus, et au contraire je m'en réjouirais."

Et M. Hatta ajoutait:

"Personnellement, je déclare volontiers que je ne me soucie nullement de la Papouasie, dont l'avenir appartient à la population elle-même de ce territoire. Je reconnais — dit M. Hatta — que la population de la Papouasie a le droit, elle aussi, de devenir une nation libre."

209. A la page 212, le professeur Yamin indique comment M. Hatta résumait lui-même ses vues et il cite encore ce dernier:

"Ma position est: les Indes néerlandaises sans la Papouasie, mais je ne m'opposerai pas à ce que la population de la Malaisie s'associe à l'Indonésie si elle en exprime le désir."

M. Hatta avait dit auparavant — et on trouvera cette déclaration aux pages 201 et 202 de l'ouvrage en question:

"Ce n'est qu'au sujet de la Papouasie que j'ai entendu hier des déclarations assez troublantes, car elles risquent de créer à l'étranger l'impression que nous allons présenter des revendications qui pourraient paraître impérialistes. Hier, certains ont avancé la thèse selon laquelle on devrait demander à la Malaisie et à la Papouasie de s'associer à la partie indonésienne pour des raisons stratégiques. Je ne suis pas un stratège, mais si je retiens ce que j'ai lu à propos de politique internationale, je crois savoir que la stratégie n'est pas un facteur à considérer en lui-même, mais qu'elle est fonction de la situation politique générale dans le monde. C'est ainsi que Chamberlain déclarait que les frontières de l'Angleterre n'étaient pas sur la Manche, mais sur le Rhin. Si nous suivions cette idée, nous ne nous contenterions pas de la Papouasie seulement, mais nous devrions revendiquer aussi les îles Salomon et ainsi de suite, jusqu'à tout l'océan Pacifique. Mais serions-nous capables de conserver un territoire aussi étendu. Aurions-nous la force d'administrer un aussi grand territoire?"

Telles étaient les paroles que M. Hatta prononçait quelques jours avant la proclamation de l'indépendance.

210. Et que disait M. Sukarno sur cette question? Ses vues sont citées aux pages 204 à 207 du livre du professeur Yamin. Je cite maintenant M. Sukarno:

"Je n'ai jamais pensé que l'Indonésie ne devrait se composer que des anciennes Indes néerlandaises. Je n'ai jamais prétendu que l'Indonésie fût simplement le territoire administré par les Hollandais. Il fut même un temps où je nourrissais l'idée d'une Pan-Indonésie qui ne comprendrait pas seulement la Malaisie et la Papouasie, mais encore les Philippines. Cependant, les Philippines sont déjà une nation libre et nous devons respecter leur souveraineté."

M. Sukarno ajoutait:

"Le Japon nous a demandé quelle devrait être la superficie du territoire de l'Indonésie. Je pense pour ma part, comme M. Yamin, que nous ne sommes pas obligés, ni pour des raisons morales ni pour des raisons internationales, de devenir les héritiers des Hollandais."

211. Voici maintenant un très important passage des déclarations que faisait alors M. Sukarno:

^{11/} Voir Nations Unies, Recueil des traités, vol. 69 (1950), I, No 894, p. 206.

"Quant à la Papouasie, je ne connais pas les désirs de sa population, mais je suis disposé à admettre que la population papoue n'a pas encore la maturité politique."

Puis il ajoutait:

"Nous ne sommes pas les héritiers des Hollandais." — Je répète: "Nous ne sommes pas les héritiers des Hollandais." — "Nous ne négocierons ni avec les Hollandais ni avec les Britanniques, mais nous négocierons avec le Japon, et le Japon décidera ce que sera le territoire de l'Indonésie."

212. Je serais tenté de citer encore d'autres passages de ce livre passionnant, mais ces quelques citations suffisent à prouver que des deux dirigeants indonésiens qui ont proclamé l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, M. Sukarno et M. Hatta, ce dernier a exprimé l'avis que la Papouasie — et, au fait, tous deux employaient le mot "Papouasie" qui ne semblait pas alors passer pour injurieux, comme M. Sukarno voudrait nous faire croire qu'il l'est devenu —, M. Hatta, disais-je, a exprimé l'avis que la Papouasie devait être laissée à la population elle-même de ce territoire et qu'elle ne devrait pas être incorporée à l'Indonésie, car cela pourrait paraître impérialiste. Il préférerait avoir le Bornéo du Nord, disait-il. Quant à M. Sukarno, il a dit que l'Indonésie ne devait pas se considérer comme le successeur des Indes néerlandaises, qu'il ne connaissait pas les désirs de la population papoue, laquelle n'avait pas, de toute façon, la maturité politique, et que c'était au Japon de décider des frontières de l'Indonésie.

213. Or, je vous le demande, comment peut-on concilier ces déclarations avec les affirmations actuelles de l'Indonésie qui prétend que la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale fait partie intégrante de l'Indonésie, que ses habitants sont des Indonésiens et que M. Sukarno et M. Hatta ont proclamé l'indépendance en leur nom? Comme je l'ai déjà fait remarquer à diverses séances de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, l'Indonésie était occupée depuis trois ans par le Japon au moment de la proclamation de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, le 17 août 1945, tandis que la Nouvelle-Guinée était demeurée en grande partie sous administration néerlandaise. Il n'y avait naturellement aucune communication entre les deux et il était donc naturel et compréhensible de la part de M. Sukarno de dire qu'il ne connaissait pas les désirs des Papous.

214. Il ne reste qu'un argument, c'est que la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale aurait été transférée à l'Indonésie aux termes de la Charte de transfert de souveraineté, traité qui a été abrogé unilatéralement par l'Indonésie, ce qui semblerait en faire à tout le moins un document singulier sur lequel étayer une revendication. Il est écrit à l'article 2 de cette charte:

"Considérant qu'il n'a pas encore été possible de concilier les vues des parties relativement à la Nouvelle-Guinée, dont le sort continue donc à faire l'objet d'un différend".

Ensuite sont énumérées cinq autres raisons, dont l'une est:

"Considérant le caractère limité des recherches qui ont été entreprises et menées à bien en ce qui concerne les problèmes soulevés par la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée".

Cela concorde avec ce qu'a dit M. Sukarno, à savoir que les dirigeants indonésiens ne connaissaient pas les désirs de la population. L'article poursuit en ces termes:

"... [il est décidé que] le statu quo sera maintenu en ce qui concerne la Résidence de la Nouvelle-Guinée, étant entendu que, dans un délai d'un an à compter de la date du transfert de la souveraineté à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie, la question du statut politique de la Nouvelle-Guinée sera réglée par voie de négociations entre la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie et le Royaume des Pays-Bas."

215. Il était donc décidé en ce qui concerne la Nouvelle-Guinée, que le statu quo serait maintenu. Quel était-il? Dans un échange de lettres entre les deux parties, en date du 2 novembre 1949, il était stipulé que:

"La disposition de l'article 2 du projet de Charte de transfert de souveraineté, qui se lit: "le statu quo sera maintenu en ce qui concerne la Résidence de la Nouvelle-Guinée" signifie "celle-ci demeurant sous l'autorité du Gouvernement des Pays-Bas."

216. Dans les procès-verbaux de la Conférence de la Table ronde, nous lisons qu'il est convenu d'un commun accord que la disposition selon laquelle le statu quo serait maintenu devait signifier que le territoire demeurerait "sous la souveraineté des Pays-Bas". La souveraineté sur le territoire n'a donc pas été transférée à l'Indonésie et le fait qu'on ne considérait même pas que ce transfert dût nécessairement avoir lieu un jour ressort d'une note annexée à un des autres accords signés à la Conférence de la Table ronde et rédigée comme suit:

"Aucune des dispositions du présent accord ne s'appliquera à la nationalité des habitants de la Résidence de la Nouvelle-Guinée au cas où la souveraineté sur ce territoire ne serait pas transférée à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie^{12/}."

217. Conformément à l'accord conclu à la Conférence de la Table ronde, les Pays-Bas ont négocié avec l'Indonésie, et non pas pendant un an, mais pendant deux ans. Ils ont négocié au sujet d'une solution du problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée. Toutes nos propositions ont été rejetées et l'Indonésie a exigé que nous lui transférions la souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Ce n'est qu'à la fin de 1951, c'est-à-dire deux ans plus tard, que l'Indonésie a pris tout à coup une nouvelle position, suivant laquelle cette souveraineté lui aurait déjà été transférée. Sur cette nouvelle interprétation des accords, nous avons offert de demander à la Cour internationale de Justice de statuer et nous avons offert de nous soumettre à sa décision. L'Indonésie a refusé et s'en est depuis lors tenue à ce refus.

218. Cependant, l'Assemblée générale elle-même a tranché la question dans l'intervalle. En effet, le 29 juin 1950, le représentant permanent des Pays-Bas a fait savoir au Secrétaire général de l'Organisation des Nations Unies^{13/} que le Gouvernement néerlandais "ne soumettrait plus de renseignements sur l'Indonésie au Secrétaire général, aux termes de l'Article 73, e, étant donné que la souveraineté sur l'Indonésie avait été transférée à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie à l'exception de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise".

^{12/} Ibid.

^{13/} Voir Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, cinquième session, Annexes, point 34 de l'ordre du jour, document A/1302/Rev.1.

219. Plus tard, le 12 décembre 1950, l'Assemblée générale adoptait une résolution présentée par la délégation de l'Inde — résolution 448 (V) — dont le texte est le suivant:

"L'Assemblée générale,

"...

"Notant que le Gouvernement néerlandais a fait connaître le 29 juin 1950 que les Pays-Bas ne présenteraient plus de rapport en vertu de l'Article 73, e, de la Charte en ce qui concerne l'Indonésie, à l'exception de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale,

"...

"1. Prend acte avec satisfaction de la communication du Gouvernement néerlandais relative à la cessation de l'envoi de renseignements sur l'Indonésie;

"2. Prie le Comité spécial pour l'examen des renseignements transmis en vertu de l'Article 73, e, de la Charte d'étudier les renseignements qui pourraient être communiqués à l'avenir au Secrétaire général en application de la résolution 222 (III) de l'Assemblée générale, et de faire rapport à leur sujet à l'Assemblée générale."

220. Or, si la souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale avait déjà été transférée à l'Indonésie, ou même si l'Indonésie avait pensé que cette souveraineté lui avait été transférée, elle aurait évidemment protesté violemment contre ce texte qui reconnaissait que la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale était un territoire sous administration néerlandaise sur lequel les Pays-Bas devaient communiquer des renseignements.

221. Mais, hélas, la résolution a été adoptée par 41 voix pour, avec 8 abstentions. Et qu'a fait l'Indonésie? Elle a voté en faveur de cette résolution et le compte rendu enregistre que le représentant de l'Indonésie à la Quatrième Commission, M. Tajibnapis, "remercie la délégation de l'Inde d'avoir pris l'initiative de présenter son projet de résolution. Il remercie également la Quatrième Commission d'avoir approuvé cette proposition"^{14/}.

222. Lorsque les Pays-Bas ont présenté leur premier rapport sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et que la Quatrième Commission l'a examiné, l'Indonésie n'a toujours soulevé aucune objection.

223. Ce n'est que lorsque le rapport suivant fut présenté — alors que l'Indonésie avait, entre-temps, conçu l'idée d'interpréter différemment la Charte de transfert de souveraineté, et alors seulement — que l'Indonésie a protesté. Néanmoins, les Pays-Bas communiquent des rapports sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale depuis 12 ans, mais jamais l'Indonésie n'a présenté de projet de résolution tendant à inviter les Pays-Bas à cesser de communiquer des renseignements, et, depuis 12 ans, le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes et la Quatrième Commission acceptent les rapports néerlandais et en discutent longuement.

224. Par conséquent, comme l'Assemblée générale a décidé, dès 1950, que la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise était un territoire non autonome sous administration néerlandaise et comme elle en a tiré les conséquences en acceptant 12 rapports annuels sur ce territoire, l'Indonésie ne peut faire changer cette décision que par un jugement de la Cour internationale de Justice; mais elle a toujours refusé et refuse encore de solliciter un tel jugement.

225. Lorsque nous avons voté l'an dernier en faveur de la résolution 1514 (XV), nous avons également voté pour le paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration contenue dans cette résolution, qui stipule que:

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

C'est un principe que nous approuvons et, s'agissant de la question du Congo, nous avons toujours déclaré que la province du Katanga, qui faisait partie de la République du Congo lors de son accession à l'indépendance, ne devait pas en être séparée.

226. La Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, elle, n'a jamais fait partie ni de la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie ni de la République d'Indonésie, comme elle s'appelle maintenant. L'application du principe, en l'occurrence, signifie non pas que l'Indonésie doit pouvoir incorporer à son territoire un pays qui n'en fait pas partie — bien que la population ait naturellement toujours le droit d'opter pour l'union avec l'Indonésie —, mais, au contraire, que l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale doivent être respectées, non seulement par les Pays-Bas, mais aussi par l'Indonésie.

227. Cela étant, il en résulte sans le moindre doute possible que les Pays-Bas étaient juridiquement fondés à présenter les propositions qu'ils ont soumises en ce qui concerne le territoire non autonome de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale sous administration néerlandaise.

228. La seule question que l'Assemblée doit maintenant trancher est donc de savoir si ces propositions légitimes sont judicieuses, raisonnables et conformes aux principes énoncés au sujet des territoires non autonomes par la Charte et les diverses résolutions adoptées en la matière, principes que notre ministre des affaires étrangères a analysés dans son intervention du 8 novembre. Notre plan est simple et clair. S'il est adopté, il aura les conséquences suivantes:

1) Nous transférerons la souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale à la population de ce territoire le plus rapidement possible, dès que l'Organisation des Nations Unies déclarera que nous pouvons le faire;

2) La population papoue recevra la possibilité de faire usage de son droit de déterminer elle-même son avenir en votant soit pour l'intégration à l'Indonésie, soit pour tout autre statut politique, dès qu'un plébiscite pourra être organisé par les Nations Unies;

3) L'Organisation des Nations Unies aidera les Papous à administrer le territoire pendant la période intérimaire comprise entre notre retrait et le plébiscite;

4) Tout le personnel néerlandais, militaire aussi bien que civil, sera retiré, à moins que l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne prie expressément certaines personnes d'y demeurer à titre temporaire;

5) Les Pays-Bas continueront à contribuer aux frais de l'administration dans les mêmes conditions que maintenant, même après notre retrait;

^{14/} Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, cinquième session, Quatrième Commission, 190ème séance, par. 18.

6) La première mesure consistera à envoyer une commission d'enquête des Nations Unies en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale pour faire rapport sur la situation et sur la possibilité d'appliquer effectivement notre plan.

229. Je ne crois pas que l'on puisse imaginer un plan plus exactement conforme aux résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée. S'il s'en trouvait un, nous serions assurément disposés à l'examiner.

230. Une des particularités de notre plan est que la seule décision immédiate que l'Assemblée générale devra prendre dès maintenant consiste à nommer une commission qui se rendra en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et fera rapport à la prochaine session de l'Assemblée générale. C'est donc seulement l'an prochain que l'Assemblée sera appelée à se prononcer de façon définitive sur notre plan — et alors, étant saisie d'un rapport impartial, l'Assemblée pourra plus facilement prendre une décision en pleine connaissance de cause.

231. Nous avons fait de notre mieux avec sincérité. J'espère que mes collègues jugeront nos propositions avec la même sincérité. En particulier, nous espérons vivement que l'Indonésie comprendra enfin que la meilleure solution est d'aider les Nations Unies à mettre fin au colonialisme en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale d'une manière honorable, ordonnée et pacifique, en se fondant sur le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes.

232. Le PRESIDENT: je donne la parole au représentant de l'Indonésie qui désire faire brièvement usage de son droit de réponse.

233. M. SUBANDRIO (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: En demandant la parole, je sais qu'il est tard; je promets donc au Président d'être bref et je m'abstiendrai de répondre immédiatement aux diverses déclarations faites soit par le représentant de l'Australie, soit par le représentant des Pays-Bas.

234. Ce problème nous afflige aussi, nous autres Indonésiens. Personne chez nous ne prend plaisir à cette situation, qui affecte plus encore notre vie nationale que celle des Pays-Bas ou de l'Australie. Nous aussi, nous voulons être débarrassés de ce problème, et nous savons que si nous voulons en être débarrassés cela ne signifie pas que nous devons remporter une victoire sur les Pays-Bas, cela ne signifie certainement pas que nous tenions à affronter ou offenser notre proche voisine et amie, l'Australie.

235. Nous désirons nous aussi ce que le représentant des Pays-Bas a proposé: régler le problème d'une manière honorable. Je pense avoir indiqué nettement, de même que mon gouvernement et le Président de mon pays, que nous souhaitons régler ce problème sur la base de la normalisation de notre amitié et notre coopération futures avec les Pays-Bas. Nous sommes pleinement conscients du fait que pour y parvenir nous ne pouvons régler le problème ni en tenant compte des seuls intérêts de l'Indonésie, ni en tenant compte des seuls intérêts des Pays-Bas.

236. Qu'est-ce donc qui empoisonne ce problème? C'est essentiellement l'attitude des Pays-Bas, qui ne peuvent accepter l'idée de l'indépendance indonésienne. S'il n'y avait pas le problème de l'Irian occidental, peut-être les Pays-Bas inventeraient-ils encore autre chose, dresseraient-ils un autre obstacle rien que pour harceler l'Indonésie, pour humilier l'Indonésie, pour démembrer l'Indonésie, car avant la sécession, avant la séparation, nous avons vu proclamer la République des Moluques du Sud, création des Pays-Bas, et les chefs de ce mouvement vivent encore aujourd'hui aux Pays-Bas.

237. C'est dans ce contexte qu'il faut étudier le problème de l'Irian occidental, en tenant compte du fait que les Pays-Bas ne peuvent accepter l'idée de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie.

238. Je ferai certainement moi-même, plus tard, une déclaration dans laquelle je fournirai à l'Assemblée des renseignements détaillés sur la position géographique et la situation ethnologique de l'Irian occidental. Le représentant des Pays-Bas a cité quelques passages de l'ouvrage du professeur Yamin. Je connais l'existence de cet ouvrage, mais je voudrais lui rappeler que ce sont des entretiens privés antérieurs à la proclamation de l'indépendance qui ont été publiés par le professeur Yamin et qu'après le 17 août une délégation de l'Irian occidental s'est rendue à Djakarta pour confirmer formellement l'adhésion de ce territoire à la République d'Indonésie.

239. J'aimerais cependant que le représentant des Pays-Bas apporte quelques corrections à sa traduction, car je connais moi aussi les passages qu'il a cités. Il y a peut-être certaines phrases qui ne sont pas très exactement traduites, ce qui peut changer le sens de tout un passage. Peut-être le professeur Yamin pourrait-il aider le représentant des Pays-Bas à réviser la traduction?

240. Quelles que puissent être nos divergences de vues avec le professeur Yamin sur des questions nationales ou internationales, je crois que nous pourrions faire appel à lui et lui demander de se mettre à la disposition de la délégation des Pays-Bas pour retraduire les passages que le représentant des Pays-Bas vient de citer.

241. Je voudrais encore demander au Président de m'accorder son indulgence pendant quelques minutes. Je désire dire quelques mots sur la déclaration faite par le représentant de l'Australie. L'Australie et l'Indonésie sont proches voisines. Dans le monde d'aujourd'hui, nous n'avons pas de querelle de principe avec l'Australie. Je ne pense pas que l'Australie ait des ambitions territoriales. L'Indonésie n'a pas non plus de visées expansionnistes. Nous n'en avons pas besoin. Comme l'Australie, nous avons bien assez de territoire, exploité ou non. Nous n'avons donc rien à craindre de ce pays.

242. En ce qui concerne les systèmes sociaux, l'Australie a le sien, nous avons le nôtre. Nous ne voulons pas plus exporter notre système social en Australie que l'Australie ne veut exporter le sien. Nous n'avons donc pas de querelle de principe avec l'Australie. Ainsi, le terrain semble propice à notre coopération. Je pense aussi que l'Australie comprend certainement que la sécurité de l'Indonésie est aussi la sécurité de l'Australie. Cela est vrai dans tous les domaines. Dans le domaine politique et dans le domaine économique, nous pouvons collaborer et nous entraider. S'il existe actuellement des différences entre nous, je ne les considérerai même pas du point de vue des différences de race. Seule notre histoire est différente et c'est pourquoi nous pouvons avoir pour le moment des points de vue différents, soit sur nos affaires internes, soit sur les questions internationales.

243. En disant cela, je voudrais rappeler au représentant de l'Australie combien il chérit lui aussi la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale parce qu'elle est proche de son pays. Je voudrais lui rappeler que le territoire de la République d'Indonésie en est encore plus proche. Timor est encore plus proche. Elle est à 100 milles seulement de Darwin, plus près encore de l'Australie que ne l'est le point le plus rapproché de la Nouvelle-Guinée. Je voudrais aussi lui demander de ne pas oublier que 90 millions d'Indonésiens, déployés comme une ombrelle au nord de l'Australie, ont peut-être quelque importance pour l'Australie. Sans rien vouloir diminuer de l'affection que l'Australie porte aux Pays-Bas ou retrancher quoi que ce soit de l'histoire de ses relations avec eux, je voudrais rappeler au représentant de l'Australie que les 90 millions d'Indonésiens qui vivent juste au-dessus de l'Australie — au nord de l'Australie — croient avoir une grande importance à tous égards pour l'Australie.

244. Le représentant de l'Australie a parlé aussi de l'histoire et de la situation géographique de l'Irian oriental, sur lesquelles je n'ai pas compétence pour faire des observations. Je voudrais seulement parler de la population de l'Irian occidental, qui est en étroite association avec celle de l'Indonésie. Sur ce point, le représentant de l'Australie se trompe lorsqu'il nous dit que cette population n'a aucun contact avec le monde extérieur. Immédiatement après la proclamation de l'indépendance, une délégation de l'Irian occidental — je citerai les noms de M. Jouwe et de M. Papare — est venue apporter une lettre à notre président, afin de confirmer par écrit l'appartenance de ce territoire à l'Indonésie, et ce simple fait suffit à montrer que la population avait aussi déjà une conscience politique à l'époque. Mieux encore, elle a même demandé à ne pas être séparée de la République d'Indonésie, à ne pas être amputée de la République d'Indonésie. Mais pour quelle autre raison l'Irian occidental entre-t-il en contact avec le monde extérieur? Parce que l'Irian occidental est pour nous comme le sanctuaire, le symbole de notre liberté. Pourquoi cela? Parce qu'en Irian occidental se trouve le camp de concentration de Boeven Digoel, où des Indonésiens luttant pour leur indépendance sont incarcérés. C'était le plus célèbre des camps de concentration avant la guerre, le plus grand de la région, où étaient exilés des Indonésiens non seulement de Java, mais aussi d'autres territoires. Aujourd'hui, des Indonésiens d'Irian occidental sont encore enfermés dans ce camp de concentration, qui est toujours en activité.

245. C'est pour cette raison aussi que l'Irian occidental est un sanctuaire, un symbole de la lutte pour l'indépendance. Quel que soit donc le jugement de l'Assemblée sur le bien-fondé des revendications de l'Indonésie, nul ne peut nier que l'Irian occidental a des liens avec l'Indonésie, que l'Irian occidental est lié à la proclamation d'indépendance de l'Indonésie et que l'Irian occidental est aussi un élément du différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie.

246. Passant au principe de l'autodétermination, qui a été réaffirmé avec tant de sincérité par le représentant de l'Australie, je voudrais l'inviter à rivaliser avec l'Indonésie dans l'application de ce principe. Nous avons donné plus de 500 000 de nos vies, de nos fils, au service de cette cause — chiffre plus élevé, peut-être, que celui des soldats australiens tombés au cours des deux guerres mondiales. Nous n'avons donc pas de leçon à recevoir pour ce qui est de l'autodétermination. Nous nous sommes battus pour ce droit. C'est d'ailleurs parce que nous nous sommes battus, et d'autres peuples aussi, que la résolution 1514 (XV) a pu voir le jour. Sans cette lutte, sans le sacrifice de plus de 500 000 Indonésiens, cette résolution n'aurait jamais été proposée à l'Assemblée. Nous avons apporté notre contribution. Nous sommes donc entièrement acquis au principe de l'autodétermination. Faire usage de ce principe de l'autodétermination pour amputer le territoire d'autres nations, c'est tout simplement en abuser.

247. Je voudrais disposer d'encore une minute pour dire quelques mots sur l'emploi de la force. Il est exact, comme on l'a dit cet après-midi, que le président Sukarno et moi-même avons promis de ne pas recourir à l'emploi de la force pour résoudre le problème de l'Irian occidental.

248. Cela est exact et je crois que nous allons continuer à tenir cette promesse, en supposant, bien entendu, que le problème de l'Irian occidental continue à être l'objet d'un conflit entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Mais si les Pays-Bas ne conspiraient pas et ne faisaient pas tout ce qu'ils peuvent pour que la sécession devienne un fait accompli, alors il n'y aurait pas de conflit entre les Pays-Bas et nous. Or, comme vient de l'expliquer le représentant des Pays-Bas, nul ne peut nier que la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale est l'objet d'un différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Peut-on éliminer ce différend entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas en accordant l'indépendance à l'Irian occidental? Quel que soit le bien-fondé des diverses revendications, il y a toujours un différend.

249. Comme nous l'avons déjà promis, s'il y a toujours un différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, nous n'aurons pas recours à l'emploi de la force. Mais dès que l'indépendance sera proclamée en Irian occidental, nous n'aurons plus le choix; nous avons agi de même lors de la proclamation de la République des Moluques du Sud, proclamation faite à la suite d'une conspiration montée à l'instigation des Pays-Bas. Là nous avons eu recours à l'emploi de la force, parce qu'ils avaient proclamé l'indépendance.

250. Dans le cas du mouvement séparatiste, inspiré lui aussi par les Pays-Bas, nous n'avons pas encore eu recours à l'emploi de la force parce que nous pouvons chercher une solution politique. Ce séparatisme n'a pas encore été proclamé. Voici donc notre position: nous n'aurons pas recours à l'emploi de la force tant qu'il s'agira d'un conflit entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Nous demandons et même nous recommandons aux Nations Unies que des négociations bilatérales aient lieu. C'est là notre position et je pense que ce serait celle de tout autre pays dont le territoire aurait été totalement ou en partie occupé par la force. Nous soutenons que l'Irian occidental a été occupé par la force; si nous avions été assez forts à l'époque, nous aurions sans doute chassé alors les Pays-Bas.

251. Quoi qu'il en soit, l'équilibre des forces est tel que nous devons souffrir que les Pays-Bas occupent par la force cette partie de l'Indonésie. Ils ont essayé de le faire aussi ailleurs, à Ambon, à Célèbes, mais là nous avons pu faire usage de nos propres forces. C'est seulement en Irian occidental que nous étions beaucoup plus faibles, sinon à peu près sans défense. Voilà pourquoi nous n'avons pas réoccupé le territoire par la force, voilà pourquoi nous les prions depuis

12 ans d'entamer des négociations afin de résoudre le problème.

252. J'ai été vivement intéressé par la déclaration du représentant de l'Australie, qui nous a dit que le problème ne pouvait être résolu de façon bilatérale. Entend-il par là que le problème pourrait être résolu unilatéralement, sans l'Indonésie? Veut-il dire par là, en prenant en considération le bonheur de la population de l'Irian occidental, qu'il pourrait résoudre le problème sans la coopération de l'Indonésie? Je crois que cette population elle-même en serait très malheureuse.

253. Bien entendu, lorsque le représentant de l'Australie affirme qu'il y a là des gens qui réclament l'indépendance, l'indépendance totale, il a raison. Après 10 années d'occupation coloniale, il y a dans le territoire des gens qui disent: "Nous voulons l'indépendance; nous voulons être président; nous voulons être vice-président." C'est vrai. Mais, comme je l'ai dit auparavant, ce n'est pas spécial à l'Asie ou à l'Afrique. Nous pouvons réagir nous aussi comme les pays européens, comme ils l'ont fait pendant l'occupation allemande.

254. D'autre part, je voudrais appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée sur le fait que de nombreux dirigeants expulsés de l'Irian occidental se trouvent dans notre pays. Ils ont été emprisonnés, ils ont souffert et chacun sait que dans la lutte pour la liberté les dirigeants qui refusent de coopérer avec le peuple colonisateur ou l'administration coloniale sont certainement les véritables dirigeants et seront plus tard choisis comme tels. C'est une loi. L'Asie, l'Afrique, le reste du monde nous en ont montré de nombreuses applications. La question de l'Irian occidental appelle donc notre attention de toute urgence. Elle a un caractère explosif, car très récemment les Pays-Bas ont expulsé plus de 2 000 habitants du territoire — plus de 2 000 en deux mois —, sous prétexte qu'ils n'acceptaient pas la politique des Pays-Bas.

255. Les Pays-Bas hissent déjà un drapeau sur le territoire; ils y introduisent déjà un hymne national. Est-ce là appliquer le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes? Est-ce là, comme l'a dit le représentant des Pays-Bas, ne pas s'opposer au vœu de la population si elle désire s'associer à l'Indonésie? C'est pour cette raison qu'à notre avis ce projet de résolution [A/L.354] n'a d'autre but que de faire de la sécession, du séparatisme, un fait accompli. Si tel est le cas, vous ne pouvez supposer que l'Indonésie se bornera à attendre de nouvelles négociations avec les Pays-Bas.

La séance est levée à 19 h 25.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite*):

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite*):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

51. M. KIZYA (République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine) [traduit du russe]: Le 14 décembre de l'année passée, l'Assemblée générale adoptait la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Le monde accueillit avec émotion et joie ce manifeste qui proclamait la libération, la reconnaissance des droits de l'homme et la rénovation sociale et nationale des peuples assujettis.

52. En adoptant cette Déclaration, l'Assemblée générale prononçait l'arrêt de mort du honteux régime colonialiste. Il n'y a eu que neuf abstentions au moment du vote. Neuf délégations seulement ne participaient pas au triomphe général. Et sur ces neuf, huit représentaient des puissances colonialistes qui dominent encore 88 pays assujettis.

53. Un proverbe africain dit que le monde repose sur trois colonnes: la première colonne représente le passé, la deuxième le présent et la troisième l'avenir. Aujourd'hui, l'humanité quitte le passé pour s'engager vers l'avenir. Les hommes puisent dans le passé pour en tirer des leçons qui doivent les aider à édifier des lendemains meilleurs et préparer cet avenir rêvé où n'existeront plus ni l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme, ni la domination d'un peuple par un autre peuple. Mais le petit nombre de gens qui, pendant des dizaines d'années et des siècles, ont été habitués à fonder leur prospérité sur l'exploitation de pays et de peuples étrangers, préfèrent continuer de vivre dans le passé: ils n'aiment pas le présent et ils redoutent l'avenir.

*Reprise des débats de la 1055ème séance.

54. Il faut bien l'avouer: pendant de nombreuses années l'Organisation des Nations Unies n'est pas réellement intervenue dans la lutte pour la libération nationale des peuples d'Afrique, d'Asie, d'Océanie et d'Amérique latine.

55. La nef de notre Organisation est restée à l'ancre près des berges de l'East River, par crainte de s'engager sur les étendues vastes et agitées des mouvements de libération nationale. Ce n'est qu'au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale [869ème séance] que l'Organisation des Nations Unies ayant pris une orientation nouvelle, à la suite de la proposition du Président du Conseil des ministres de l'Union soviétique, M. N. S. Khrouchtchev, a proclamé "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations".

56. L'initiative de l'Union soviétique, qui a proposé à l'Assemblée générale d'adopter la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, était une manifestation de la politique de coopération et d'aide systématiques adoptée par les pays socialistes à l'égard des peuples qui luttent pour obtenir leur liberté. Cette coopération, cette aide fraternelle apportées à ceux qui luttent au nom de la liberté et de la justice, ont toujours été et seront toujours l'une des principales directives de la politique internationale des pays socialistes.

57. Le nouveau programme du parti communiste de l'Union soviétique, qui est aussi le programme de tout le peuple soviétique, a été approuvé par le 22ème Congrès^{2/} du parti communiste de l'URSS qui a récemment achevé ses travaux. Ce programme dit notamment:

"Le parti communiste de l'Union soviétique considère l'alliance fraternelle avec les peuples qui ont rejeté le joug colonialiste et semi-colonialiste comme l'une des pierres angulaires de sa politique internationale. Cette alliance est fondée sur la communauté des intérêts vitaux du socialisme international et du mouvement mondial pour la libération nationale. Le parti communiste de l'Union soviétique considère comme son devoir international d'aider les peuples engagés dans la voie de la reconquête et du renforcement de l'indépendance nationale, d'aider tous les peuples qui luttent pour la liquidation complète du régime colonial."

58. La carte du monde a radicalement changé et cette évolution se poursuit. A la veille de la seconde guerre mondiale, il n'y avait que 63 Etats indépendants. Après cette guerre, plus de 50 pays se sont libérés de la domination coloniale et semi-coloniale. Le mouvement pour la libération du colonialisme s'est développé plus rapidement et d'une manière plus radicale que ne s'y attendaient les théoriciens les plus experts du colonialisme, les gouverneurs et les fonctionnaires les plus expérimentés des ministères des colonies. L'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV) qui contient la Déclaration a déjà donné des résultats: le Sierra Leone est devenu indépendant, le régime de tutelle dans le Cameroun britannique a pris fin et le Samoa-Occidental ainsi que le Tanganyika sont au seuil de l'indépendance.

59. Nous félicitons les peuples de ces pays d'avoir acquis la liberté si longtemps espérée. En même temps, nous voudrions demander quand prendra fin l'oppression coloniale de 50 millions d'Africains et de nombreux millions d'hommes qui habitent des possessions coloniales situées dans d'autres parties du monde. On sait que les puissances colonialistes, écrivant avec le sang des peuples le dernier chapitre de l'histoire du colonialisme, répondent par la terreur la plus cruelle aux populations de nombreuses colonies qui réclament la liberté et l'indépendance nationale.

60. L'actualité algérienne en est l'exemple. La guerre cruelle d'extermination contre le peuple algérien dure depuis huit ans déjà. Plus de 800.000 Algériens ont donné leur vie pour arracher la reconnaissance à voix basse de leur droit à l'autodétermination. Mais combien de sacrifices ce peuple héroïque devra-t-il consentir encore pour obtenir sa liberté et son indépendance nationale?

61. Et maintenant parcourons en imagination la carte de l'Afrique au sud de l'Equateur. La guerre coloniale sévit en Angola. Au cours de l'année 1961, les colonisateurs portugais ont exterminé plus de 50 000 Angolais avec l'appui moral et matériel de ceux qui sont leurs confrères à l'OTAN — et, bien entendu, en matière de brigandage colonial.

62. Messieurs, vous n'avez que deux étages à descendre pour vous rendre à la Quatrième Commission et voir les photographies qui y sont exposées: vous en serez transis d'horreur. Vous verrez les barbares blancs du Portugal pointant les armes qui leur ont été fournies par les Etats-Unis, l'Angleterre et l'Allemagne occidentale contre la poitrine de victimes sans défense, vous verrez des Angolais torturés et scalpés et vous verrez aussi les physionomies réjouies des assassins qui posent devant l'objectif à côté des têtes tranchées et fichées sur des piques.

63. Voilà comment le Portugal a réagi à l'égard de la Déclaration de l'Assemblée générale sur la liquidation du colonialisme et l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux!

64. Les troupes britanniques mènent des opérations militaires de répression contre les tribus arabes dans l'Hadramaout, font la guerre contre les populations de l'Oman et fournissent des armes à leurs confrères colonialistes qui versent à flots le sang des peuples opprimés. Voilà la réponse de l'Angleterre à la Déclaration des Nations Unies!

65. Au Sud-Ouest africain, dans le réseau serré des prisons et des camps de concentration situés sur ce territoire, les colonisateurs exterminent la population africaine afin de la "persuader" qu'elle n'est pas prête à assumer la liberté et l'indépendance. Voilà comment l'Afrique du Sud a répondu à la Déclaration de l'Organisation des Nations Unies!

66. Les événements sanglants d'Algérie, du Congo, du Ruanda-Urundi, du Sud-Ouest africain, de l'Angola et d'autres territoires, prouvent que la lutte pour la libération du joug colonial exige des efforts encore plus grands. Ainsi, dans chaque colonie et chaque territoire sous tutelle, il y a sinon une guerre déclarée, du moins les fusillades, la terreur, les prisons et les camps de concentration. Voilà de quelle manière les colonisateurs préparent les populations de leurs colonies à l'indépendance!

67. L'obstruction de fait que les puissances colonialistes font à la Déclaration ne se limite évidemment pas aux méthodes d'agression directe contre les peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté. Le colonialisme contemporain est un colonialisme vaincu qui bat en retraite sous la pression des mouvements de libération; aussi recherche-t-il avidement des formes nouvelles et de nouveaux moyens de domination en essayant de remplacer par des positions nouvelles celles qu'il a perdues. S'efforçant de conserver par tous les moyens son influence déterminante, il recourt au gouvernement indirect avec l'aide de marionnettes du type Tshombé. Il se sert de plus en plus des méthodes du colonialisme collectif et de la coopération étroite entre les colonisateurs du type moderne et ceux de la vieille école: Américains et Belges au Congo, Portugais, Américains et Anglais en Angola, etc.

68. Les puissances colonialistes sabotent les principes de la Déclaration sur la liquidation immédiate du régime colonial, se hâtent de créer toutes sortes de fausses théories sur "le manque de préparation" des peuples colonisés à l'autonomie et prétendent que ce qui empêche les colonisateurs de partir, c'est le fait que ces peuples sont économiquement dépendants.

69. Cependant, la vérité c'est que l'on ne peut venir à bout de la pauvreté et de l'état arriéré que grâce à l'indépendance, au développement des peuples dans la souveraineté et à leur libération complète et inconditionnelle du joug du colonialisme.

70. Toute la honteuse histoire du colonialisme classique notamment dans la période récente prouve que ce sont précisément les colonisateurs qui cherchent toujours à perpétuer les mœurs surannées et arriérées: structure tribale, hostilité entre les peuples et les tribus qu'ils ont eux-mêmes suscitée. Ils freinent la formation de la conscience nationale et cherchent à préserver la structure tribale archaïque afin de prouver que les peuples dépendants ne sont pas "prêts" à accéder à l'indépendance et afin de s'assurer la possibilité de continuer à les piller impunément.

71. Les pays d'Asie et d'Afrique qui se sont libérés du colonialisme ont prouvé à la face du monde entier à quel point les "arguments" des colonisateurs sont mal fondés. L'évolution harmonieuse de l'Inde, de l'Indonésie, du Ghana, de la Guinée, du Mali et de nombreux autres pays montre à tous les peuples qui gémissent encore sous le talon des colonisateurs la voie véritable vers leur renaissance par leurs propres moyens. L'histoire contemporaine confirme la profonde vérité des paroles du Président de la Guinée, M. Sékou-Touré, qui a déclaré à la quinzième session:

"... tous les peuples, à tout moment, sont capables de se gouverner eux-mêmes... les seuls peuples incapables de s'administrer sont les peuples colonisés, tant que dure cette colonisation" [896ème séance, par. 120].

72. Sans aucun doute, les peuples qui retrouvent la liberté se trouvent en face de problèmes difficiles et compliqués: l'un des plus compliqués est le problème économique. Le colonialisme laisse aux anciennes colonies une économie faible et bornée, ce qui permet aux impérialistes de se livrer au moment de l'octroi de l'indépendance à toutes sortes de combinaisons politiques, de spolier les jeunes Etats ou de créer de nouvelles unions d'Etats.

73. Un exemple particulièrement significatif nous est fourni par cette création artificielle du gouvernement anglais qu'est la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland. En créant cette Fédération, le Royaume-

Uni a cherché à consolider en Afrique centrale la position dominante de la minorité européenne qui pourrait choisir pour devise les paroles du Premier Ministre de cette fédération artificielle, M. Roy Welensky, qui a dit avec un cynisme renversant: "L'égalité des droits des blancs et des noirs? Bien sûr, mais seulement dans deux siècles!" Quelqu'un pourrait-il donc croire sincèrement que les colonisateurs modernes soient capables de céder à des sentiments humanitaires et de satisfaire les demandes des peuples malheureux, exploités et opprimés depuis le temps de sir Cecil Rhodes, le créateur du "Grand Empire" britannique en Afrique? Les colonisateurs anglais luttent pour conserver le plus possible l'état de choses actuel, cela pour que les colons de la Rhodésie du Sud, qui ne représentent que 10 p. 100 de la population, continuent d'occuper plus de la moitié du territoire de ce pays — plus de 20 millions d'hectares — et pour pouvoir aussi à l'avenir exploiter la main-d'œuvre à bon marché des immigrants du Nyassaland et les mines de cuivre de la Rhodésie du Nord afin de développer et de renforcer l'économie de la Rhodésie du Sud où vit la majorité des Européens. Ayant créé cette fédération artificielle, qui est contraire aux intérêts de la population autochtone, les colonisateurs anglais ne pensent qu'à renforcer le pouvoir de la minorité européenne, à conserver la possibilité de piller impunément les richesses africaines et à continuer d'empêcher les Africains d'obtenir l'indépendance réelle.

74. Quant à l'histoire de la création de l'Etat congolais, n'est-ce pas là un exemple typique des menées des colonisateurs qui cherchent à servir leurs propres intérêts en démembrant cette ancienne colonie sur le plan national et économique?

75. On sait bien que les Etats membres de l'OTAN font passer les intérêts des monopoles belges et autres, qui se sont emparés des richesses du Katanga, avant la cause de la liberté, de l'intégrité et de l'indépendance de la République du Congo. Le "mouvement" dit de Tshombé pour l'indépendance du Katanga n'est pas autre chose qu'une tentative des monopoles capitalistes pour être sûrs de pouvoir exploiter cette très riche province en dépit de la volonté du peuple et du gouvernement congolais. L'attitude des colonisateurs au Katanga donne une leçon fort instructive à tous les peuples d'Afrique et cela étant nous n'avons pas le droit de ne pas inciter les Africains à la vigilance.

76. On peut citer un autre exemple pour illustrer les manœuvres des colonisateurs en ce qui concerne la politique de "katanguisation": il s'agit du fameux plan des Pays-Bas sur l'octroi de l'indépendance à l'Irian occidental. Le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas a proposé un plan et un projet de résolution [A/L.354] et il s'est appliqué personnellement à nous persuader de les adopter. Mais chacun comprend que ce projet de résolution dissimule un couteau que l'on essaye de fourrer entre les mains de l'ONU pour l'inciter à déchiqueter cruellement le corps vivant de la République d'Indonésie dans le seul intérêt du colonialisme et de l'impérialisme.

77. Dans son intervention, le Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'Indonésie, M. Subandrio [1050ème séance], a brossé un tableau éloquent des incessantes activités subversives auxquelles se livrent les colonisateurs hollandais pour porter atteinte à l'indépendance nationale et à l'intégrité de la République d'Indonésie. Ne pouvant plus résister à la force et à l'unité que le peuple indonésien a réalisée dans la lutte pour sa libération complète et pour l'unification de sa patrie, les colonisateurs hollandais appellent maintenant à l'aide l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous présumons que l'Assemblée générale doit aider le peuple indonésien et non pas les colonisateurs qui essaient de jouer avec un tel retard le rôle douteux d'un brave "tonton" envers les populations de l'Irian occidental.

78. En posant la question de la liquidation immédiate des vestiges du colonialisme, nous ne pouvons manquer de réclamer également la suppression des bases militaires étrangères qui sont établies sur le territoire de nombreux Etats d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine. Les faits prouvent que les bases militaires constituent un rempart important du colonialisme contemporain et que les impérialistes des Etats-Unis et les autres pays du bloc militaire agressif de l'OTAN s'en servent activement pour étouffer les mouvements populaires de libération et pour déclencher des opérations militaires.

79. Les Etats-Unis, qui sont le rempart de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme, dirigent en fait l'action des blocs militaires et politiques d'agression comme l'OTAN, l'OTASE, le CENTO, l'ANZUS et d'autres, partout où ils peuvent créer des bases militaires sous le couvert de "défense contre le communisme" et mettre ainsi de nombreux pays sous la domination américaine ou dans la situation de pays occupés.

80. Bien plus, les Etats-Unis continuent non seulement de considérer les anciennes colonies et les colonies actuelles comme une source de matières premières nécessaires pour mener une guerre moderne, mais ils les font rentrer dans leurs plans militaires en tant que tremplins pour la préparation et l'exécution de leurs projets d'agression. Prenez pour le moins l'exemple du continent africain. Dans un rapport sur la politique américaine en Afrique, soumis au président Kennedy par un groupe de spécialistes, on lit ce qui suit: "L'Afrique a un rôle décisif à jouer dans la défense de l'Occident — elle garantit le flanc sud de l'OTAN. L'Afrique possède presque 20 sortes de matières premières stratégiques." Dans les états-majors de l'OTAN, on se prépare non seulement à faire des expériences atomiques en Afrique, mais aussi à employer l'arme atomique sur ce continent en cas de guerre. C'est pourquoi les puissances occidentales, membres de l'OTAN, n'ont pas appuyé à la Première Commission, il y a quelques jours, l'appel de nombreux pays africains qui invitait les Etats Membres "à considérer et à respecter le continent africain comme une zone dénucléarisée" [A/4942/Add.3, par. 6 et 9]. Les Etats-Unis et la France sont même allés plus loin: ils ont voté contre la proposition simple et parfaitement raisonnable de s'abstenir d'utiliser le territoire, les eaux territoriales ou l'espace aérien de l'Afrique pour expérimenter, stocker ou transporter des armes nucléaires.

81. Toutes les activités de l'OTAN sont étroitement liées au brigandage du colonialisme international. L'OTAN aide directement la France dans sa guerre colonialiste contre le peuple algérien. C'est au su de l'OTAN et avec son appui que la France utilise en Algérie ses divisions "atlantiques". Nous pouvons rappeler ce que disait le communiqué de l'OTAN du 27 mars 1956: "Le Conseil de l'OTAN est régulièrement informé des réductions de troupes françaises placées à la disposition de l'OTAN. Le Conseil a étudié la situation créée en Europe à la suite de ces mesures. Il note que la France considère qu'elle doit augmenter, pour des raisons de sécurité de l'Etat, ses forces armées en Algérie (je souligne: en Algérie), territoire qui fait partie de la zone de l'OTAN. Le Conseil reconnaît l'importance pour l'OTAN de la sécurité dans cette région."

82. Au moment de la tradédie congolaise, les puissances atlantiques ont défendu avec un cynisme extraordinaire leurs confrères belges qui cherchaient à restaurer par n'importe quel moyen leurs positions dans la colonie qu'ils venaient de perdre. Aujourd'hui des bombes fabriquées aux Etats-Unis et dans d'autres pays de l'OTAN explosent en Angola.

83. Le 13 novembre, c'est-à-dire lundi dernier seulement, le représentant des Etats-Unis à la Commission politique spéciale ainsi que les représentants de l'Afrique du Sud, de la Belgique, du Royaume-Uni, des Pays-Bas et de la France ont voté contre l'amendement que l'Union soviétique avait présenté au projet de résolution des huit puissances. Cet amendement prévoyait l'interdiction de vendre au Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud des armes qu'il pourrait utiliser pour réprimer la population autochtone [A/4968, par. 8 et 11]. Il est évident que si les Etats-Unis ont voté contre cette mesure justifiée et raisonnable c'est qu'ils entendent continuer à fournir aux racistes de l'Afrique du Sud des armes que les partisans de l'apartheid emploient pour tirer sur les manifestants pacifiques africains et pour terroriser et massacrer cette population.

84. Cependant, tous les efforts des forces impérialistes pour éviter une nouvelle décadence du colonialisme sont voués à l'échec.

85. Les représentants des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni et d'autres puissances colonialistes ont dit ici que les pays socialistes, en dénonçant et en condamnant le colonialisme, s'inspirent des intérêts de la "guerre froide". Ces allégations relèvent d'une démagogie facile et ne sauraient guère convaincre qui que ce soit. Nous n'avons besoin ni de la "guerre froide", ni des intérêts qui s'y attachent. Chacun sait que la "guerre froide" est votre enfant, Messieurs les représentants de l'OTAN. Les pays socialistes se sont toujours dressés et continueront à se dresser contre le colonialisme parce que ce système de domination et d'exploitation est profondément étranger à notre régime social, à notre mode de vie et à notre philosophie. Les vaines spéculations des colonisateurs et de leurs défenseurs pour priver les peuples qui luttent contre le joug colonial de l'appui d'autres peuples épris de liberté et pour étouffer ainsi plus facilement les mouvements de libération nationale dans leurs possessions sont vouées à l'échec. Les pays socialistes continueront d'aller coude à coude avec tous les combattants du front anticolonial qui mènent un grand et juste combat pour extirper complètement le système colonial.

86. Le chef de la délégation ukrainienne, M. Podgorny, parlant au cours de la 885ème séance plénière de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, déclarait ce qui suit:

"... tous les hommes de bonne foi tendent une main secourable aux peuples opprimés qui luttent pour leur indépendance... Il ne fait pas de doute que cette aide s'accroîtra continuellement jusqu'à ce qu'il n'y ait plus sur notre planète un seul Etat colonial et dépendant. Les Ukrainiens ont aidé et continueront à aider les peuples dans leur lutte contre le colonialisme et pour l'indépendance complète" [885ème séance, par. 27].

87. C'est avec un sentiment de sympathie profonde que le peuple ukrainien soutient les peuples qui luttent actuellement contre le colonialisme pour conquérir la liberté et l'indépendance. Nos cœurs et notre aide leur sont acquis. Nous leur tendons une main fraternelle et nous leur disons: périssent à jamais le système diabolique du colonialisme et l'engeance diabolique du néo-colonialisme et que le soleil éblouissant de la vérité et de la liberté vienne déverser sa lumière sur les peuples opprimés et assujettis.

88. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole à l'orateur suivant, je la donne au représentant du Niger, pour une motion d'ordre.

89. M. DJERMAKOYE (Niger): Quand a été votée hier la résolution concernant le statut des Algériens prisonniers en France [résolution 1650 (XVI)], ma délégation, coauteur du projet, n'a pas pu être présente ...

90. Le PRESIDENT: Je rappelle au représentant du Niger qu'il s'agit d'une motion d'ordre. Je le prierai de bien vouloir m'expliquer en quoi elle consiste.

91. M. DJERMAKOYE (Niger): Elle consiste à rétablir une erreur commise hier soir, au moment d'un vote qui a eu lieu dans cette assemblée ...

92. Le PRESIDENT: Je me permets de signaler au représentant du Niger qu'il ne saurait s'agir, en la circonstance, d'une motion d'ordre. Il pourra faire rectifier cette erreur par la voie d'une lettre adressée à la Présidence ou au Secrétariat. Nous sommes en train de discuter les points 88 et 22, et nous avons clos le débat, le vote et les explications de vote sur la résolution concernant les prisonniers algériens [résolution 1650 (XVI)].

93. M. DJERMAKOYE (Niger): Monsieur le Président, il s'agit également de mon vote sur le projet de résolution actuellement soumis à notre assemblée et en discussion ...

94. Le PRESIDENT: Nous ne sommes pas en train de discuter des votes sur les projets de résolution actuellement soumis à l'Assemblée.

95. M. DJERMAKOYE (Niger): Dans ces conditions, je me réserve, lorsque le vote interviendra, de demander la parole pour expliquer mon vote.

96. Le PRESIDENT: Je vous en remercie infiniment.

97. M. GODBER (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Nous avons eu la chance et l'honneur, ce matin, d'entendre le discours du président de la République islamique de Mauritanie et je voudrais ici le remercier comme il convient de ce discours qui, à bien des égards, est empreint de cette sagesse qui sollicitera, j'en suis certain, notre réflexion et retiendra toute notre attention.

98. Nous avons entendu ensuite un autre discours, celui du représentant de la République soviétique socialiste d'Ukraine. Je crains de ne pouvoir faire les mêmes éloges de ce dernier discours. Au cours de mes observations, je me propose de revenir de temps à autre au discours du représentant de l'Ukraine. Je ne puis que regretter que nous devions si souvent subir ici des déclarations qui donnent une idée déformée des réalisations du Royaume-Uni et des autres pays appartenant à la sphère coloniale. J'estime devoir parcourir ce matin un domaine assez large pour réfuter non seulement les déclarations de l'orateur qui m'a précédé, mais aussi celles d'autres orateurs que nous avons entendus ces derniers jours.

99. Ce débat revêt évidemment une très grande importance pour tous les Etats Membres et j'ai étudié très attentivement beaucoup des commentaires et des discours qui ont été faits. Ces discours, dans l'ensemble, me semblent pouvoir se ranger en deux grandes catégories assez différentes l'une de l'autre. D'une part, il y a les pays qui portent un intérêt attentif, sérieux et véritable aux problèmes du colonialisme et il s'agit dans bien des cas de pays qui sont d'anciennes colonies. D'autre part, il y a un nombre beaucoup plus faible de pays ayant à leur tête l'Union soviétique qui cherchent, comme nous l'avons vu ce matin, en prétextant de leur intérêt pour les problèmes coloniaux, à se servir de ce débat comme d'un moyen pour dénigrer les puissances coloniales et à faire tout ce qu'ils peuvent pour écarter le débat du problème réel et sérieux et le faire tomber dans l'ornière de la guerre froide. Cela, je le regrette.

100. Je me propose de consacrer la plus grande partie de mes observations à ce que, j'en suis certain, l'Assemblée souhaite entendre de ma délégation, à savoir à une étude sérieuse et impartiale du problème que le Royaume-Uni doit résoudre en ce qui concerne ses derniers territoires coloniaux et ses devoirs à leur égard, tels que je les conçois.

101. Etant donné certaines des accusations monstrueuses et sans fondement que plusieurs orateurs ont portées sur ce que mon pays a fait dans ce domaine, j'estime nécessaire d'énumérer une fois encore les réalisations qui sont à l'actif de mon pays et j'estime avoir le droit, avant de terminer mes remarques, de comparer cet actif avec celui des pays qui condamnent les autres avec tant de liberté et font preuve d'un tel aveuglement devant le lamentable tableau de l'oppression qu'ils exercent eux-mêmes. J'essaierai toutefois de ne pas m'étendre trop longuement sur cet aspect de la question, car je suis certain que toutes les délégations qui s'intéressent sérieusement à ce problème vital voudront connaître le bilan bien pesé que le Royaume-Uni dresse de la situation actuelle.

102. Il n'est guère besoin que je rappelle à l'Assemblée qu'autrefois mon pays a exercé le pouvoir le plus étendu qu'aucune nation ait jamais eu outre-mer et que même aujourd'hui, malgré l'immense transformation qui fait de territoires dépendants des territoires libres et indépendants, demeurés pour la plupart dans le Commonwealth, il reste encore un certain nombre de territoires britanniques, plusieurs ont une grande importance et dans tous, qu'ils soient grands ou petits, les habitants qui vivent sous le drapeau britannique ont droit à être l'objet, et le sont effectivement, de toute la considération, toute l'attention et toutes les préoccupations de mon gouvernement.

103. Lorsque le Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni a pris la parole devant l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session [877ème séance], il a exposé à nouveau le but qui est depuis longtemps l'objectif premier de la politique de mon pays à l'égard des pays dépendants sous administration britannique, politique qui consiste à préparer ces pays à l'autonomie, à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Mon premier ministre a cité un passage du message qu'il avait envoyé à M. Krouchtchev dans le courant de l'été de 1960, message dans lequel il parlait de "la politique que les gouvernements britanniques, de quelque parti politique qu'ils fussent, ont suivie, non seulement depuis la guerre, mais depuis de nombreuses générations". Il disait ensuite ceci :

"Pendant plus d'un siècle, nous avons eu pour but de guider nos territoires dépendants vers la liberté et l'indépendance. Depuis la seconde guerre mondiale, l'Inde, le Pakistan, Ceylan, le Ghana et la Malaisie, avec plus de 510 millions d'habitants, ont atteint ce but de l'indépendance politique et économique. Nous y avons contribué par l'assistance technique et par l'aide financière. Tous ces Etats sont des membres complètement indépendants de notre libre association du Commonwealth. Et ce mouvement n'est pas terminé." [877ème séance, par. 101.]

Voilà ce que le premier ministre de mon pays disait il y a un an.

104. Depuis lors, nous avons eu des preuves frappantes des progrès accomplis dans le monde entier. Peu après le discours du premier ministre, le grand territoire de la Nigéria était admis à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Ce fut en vérité un événement historique que l'admission à l'Organisation du pays le plus peuplé d'Afrique. Puis, nous avons tous accueilli chaleureusement aux Nations Unies la nouvelle république libre de Chypre. Le Sierra Leone a accédé à l'indépendance le 27 avril 1961, et le Sierra Leone a été accueilli lui aussi chaleureusement parmi les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

105. Le 1er octobre 1961, la partie méridionale de l'ancien territoire sous tutelle du Cameroun britannique s'est unie à la République du Cameroun; la partie septentrionale s'était unie au début de l'année à la Nigéria. Je tiens à rendre un hommage particulier à la sagesse politique du président Ahidjo, ainsi qu'à tous ceux qui se sont employés avec lui à réaliser avec ordre et succès l'union du Cameroun méridional à la République. Cette union s'est faite dans un esprit de bonne volonté totale et de collaboration agissante, et elle nous a permis de mettre fin à notre tutelle sur le Cameroun conformément aux vœux librement exprimés des populations intéressées.

106. Puis, en application de la résolution 1642 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale, la date de l'indépendance du Tanganyika a été fixée au 9 décembre 1961; nous espérons que les représentants de cet Etat africain prendront place à nos côtés avant la fin de la présente session.

107. Je n'ai nullement épuisé la liste des progrès accomplis en Afrique au cours des derniers mois. Au mois d'octobre 1961, un accord a été conclu sur les dernières étapes du progrès constitutionnel de l'Ouganda et la date de l'accession de l'Ouganda à l'indépendance a été fixée au 9 octobre 1962.

108. Le Kenya et le Zanzibar ont fait l'un et l'autre un pas eux aussi dans la voie de l'indépendance à la suite des élections qui ont eu lieu au début de l'année. Ils jouissent déjà d'une large autonomie interne sous l'autorité de ministres élus.

109. En Afrique occidentale, les principaux territoires qui relevaient de l'administration britannique, la Nigéria, le Ghana et le Sierra Leone, sont des pays indépendants Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et la Gambie seule est encore administrée par le Royaume-Uni. Ce territoire a lui aussi franchi un nouveau pas lors de la conférence qui s'est tenue à Londres au mois de juillet 1961 et une nouvelle constitution lui assurant une large autonomie y entrera en vigueur dès le début de l'an prochain.

110. Au Nyassaland, les premières élections organisées conformément à la nouvelle constitution ont eu lieu au mois d'août; en Rhodésie du Nord, le projet de nouvelle constitution a fait l'objet de nouveaux échanges de vues.

111. J'espère en avoir dit assez pour montrer à quel rythme progressent tous les territoires d'Afrique sous administration du Royaume-Uni. Lorsque le Tanganyika accédera à l'indépendance le mois prochain, nous pourrions affirmer avec fierté que les peuples des territoires qui étaient autrefois administrés par le Royaume-Uni et qui ont obtenu leur indépendance représentent le quart de la population totale de l'Afrique.

112. Je dois faire observer ici que l'orateur qui m'a précédé nous a parlé du régime de terreur cruelle que les colonialistes ont opposé aux aspirations des peuples des territoires coloniaux. La liste que je viens d'énumérer montre bien l'inanité et l'absurdité de cette accusation et je la regrette formellement.

113. La rapidité et la diversité ne caractérisent pas seulement les progrès accomplis en Afrique. Des progrès non moins importants ont été accomplis également dans d'autres territoires dans le monde.

114. En Guyane britannique, les élections qui ont eu lieu au mois d'août 1961 ont abouti à l'autonomie interne sous l'autorité d'un premier ministre et de ministres élus. Au Honduras britannique, ce territoire dont la population a tant souffert récemment d'un ouragan dévastateur, des élections ont également eu lieu au début de l'année dans le cadre d'une nouvelle constitution.

115. Après un référendum organisé à la Jamaïque, nous prévoyons que ce territoire accédera à l'indépendance en 1962.

116. Des négociations constitutionnelles qui se sont déroulées cette année à Londres ont abouti à la conclusion d'un accord sur la prochaine émancipation politique de l'île Maurice, où un premier ministre élu a déjà pris ses fonctions.

117. Ces exemples donnent quelque idée de la diversité et de la complexité des progrès constitutionnels réalisés dans l'ensemble des territoires dépendants sous administration du Royaume-Uni; aussi, lorsque le représentant de l'Union soviétique nous parle, comme il l'a fait l'autre jour [1048ème séance], d'une "résistance obstinée", nous pouvons difficilement attribuer cette affirmation surprenante à l'ignorance. Comment peut-il ignorer tous les faits que j'ai cités? Comment peut-il ignorer que 10 territoires anciennement administrés par le Royaume-Uni ont déjà été admis à l'Organisation des Nations Unies? Comment peut-il ignorer le fait que le Secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni a indiqué lorsqu'il a pris la parole devant l'Assemblée générale le 27 septembre 1961 [1017ème séance], qu'à la fin de 1961 les 660 millions d'habitants du Commonwealth vivront dans des pays indépendants à l'exception de 5 p. 100 d'entre eux?

118. En fait, les accusations de l'Union soviétique sont aussi fausses qu'elles sont générales. Elles travestissent les faits d'une manière honteuse et délibérée. A mesure que nous entendions le représentant de l'Union soviétique, nous nous rendions compte de plus en plus clairement, si ce n'avait pas été clair dès le début, qu'il ne s'intéresse pas à la situation de fait. Il ne s'intéresse pas non plus au bien des populations en cause. Ce qui l'intéresse, c'est d'attaquer les puissances administrantes dans une manœuvre de guerre froide.

119. Ce qui nous intéresse, nous, c'est d'accélérer, en consultation avec les représentants des populations intéressées, la pleine application des principes en lesquels nous croyons, comme nous en avons fourni des preuves matérielles en tant de circonstances. Sur la cinquantaine de territoires dépendants qui existent encore dans le monde, il y en a une quarantaine sous administration britannique.

120. Dans chacun de ces territoires se présentent des problèmes spéciaux et des complications particulières. Sinon, ils seraient déjà indépendants. Les uns sont petits et éloignés de grandes agglomérations de population et l'on ne voit guère comment ils pourraient vivre isolément du point de vue politique ou du point de vue économique. L'île de Sainte-Hélène, par exemple, n'a qu'une population de quelques milliers d'habitants. Même des territoires plus étendus comme les Seychelles qui ont une population de 40 000 habitants, ne pourraient guère se permettre d'avoir une administration indépendante. Aux Indes occidentales aussi, plusieurs territoires reçoivent du Royaume-Uni une assistance financière ou autre et ne pourraient s'en tirer avec leurs seules ressources.

121. Il est encore d'autres territoires où la situation est compliquée par la proximité de voisins plus grands et plus puissants; tel est le cas, par exemple, des territoires qui relèvent de la Haute Commission, le Betchoualand, le Bassoutoland et le Souaziland. Nul n'oserait affirmer que les problèmes qui se posent dans ces territoires sont susceptibles d'être résolus subitement par de grandes déclarations.

122. Enfin, dans un certain nombre d'autres territoires — et ce sont ceux-là qui posent les problèmes peut-être les plus difficiles —, il subsiste des divisions et des différences politiques, raciales et économiques qui ne pourront être éliminées que par des négociations persévérantes, prudentes et délicates. C'est ainsi qu'en Ouganda nous n'avons pu parvenir que récemment à un accord complet, au terme d'une période pendant laquelle les progrès ont été retardés par des différends internes qui sont heureusement aplanis aujourd'hui. Au Kenya, en ce moment même, il y a désaccord entre les deux principaux partis politiques africains. Nous espérons qu'une conférence qui se réunira à Londres au début de l'an prochain permettra de surmonter ces difficultés.

123. Dans ces pays comme, en fait, dans tous les territoires dont nous avons la charge, nous devons veiller à ce que l'indépendance repose sur une large communauté de vues, sur un accord solide, afin que chacun des nouveaux pays indépendants puisse espérer garder son équilibre et son unité en présence des tâches et obligations nouvelles qui l'attendent.

124. C'est dans la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland que nous nous heurtons peut-être au problème le plus important. Nous nous réjouissons des progrès accomplis récemment au Nyassaland avec le plein accord de tous les intéressés et nous devons prendre acte aussi des progrès importants qui ont été faits récemment en ce qui concerne la constitution de la Rhodésie du Sud. En Rhodésie du Nord, à l'issue de négociations longues et laborieuses, il a été possible de réduire considérablement les différences de vues et nous espérons qu'il sera bientôt possible de mettre en vigueur une nouvelle constitution. Voilà ce que j'ai à répondre à l'orateur qui m'a précédé et qui a dit, lorsqu'il parlait des Rhodésies, que les colonisateurs britanniques prétendaient qu'il était préférable de laisser les choses telles qu'elles étaient. Ce n'est pas vrai; nous nous efforçons constamment de trouver les moyens de les faire progresser jusqu'au point où les territoires pourront accéder à la pleine indépendance avec toute confiance en l'avenir.

125. Je n'ai guère besoin de dire que dans aucun de ces pays, très différents les uns des autres, le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté n'a l'intention d'atermoyer. Nos réalisations témoignent des principes que nous voulons appliquer et de notre volonté de prendre des risques calculés pour la mise en œuvre de ces principes. Comme le secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni l'a dit récemment devant l'Assemblée: "Nous avons tenu notre parole à l'égard de l'immense majorité et nous tiendrons notre parole à l'égard de la petite minorité qui reste." [1017ème séance, par. 112.]

126. A ce sujet, permettez-moi de citer le témoignage généreux de M. Wachuku, représentant de la Nigéria, un de ces nombreux pays auxquels le secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères faisait allusion. Au sujet de l'attitude britannique en ce qui concerne l'octroi de l'indépendance aux territoires d'Afrique, M. Wachuku s'est exprimé ainsi lorsqu'il a participé à ce débat le 9 novembre:

"Nous le connaissons [le Royaume-Uni] et nous croyons qu'en se retirant de ces territoires il veut conserver l'amitié et la sympathie des populations qui les habitent.

"Je crois que l'intention du Royaume-Uni est de continuer à garder des liens d'amitié avec les habitants de ces territoires, de les garder longtemps et de forger de nouveaux liens d'amitié, fondés non pas sur la domination, mais sur l'association et la compréhension mutuelle. C'est ce genre d'amitié que nous désirons voir s'édifier sur tout le continent africain." [1050ème séance, par. 58 et 59.]

Je saisis cette occasion pour confirmer que tel est bien notre objectif et je suis vraiment fort heureux qu'il ait été énoncé si clairement par l'un des pays que nous avons conduits librement à l'indépendance. C'est la meilleure réponse que l'on puisse opposer aux calomnies que nous recevons du bloc soviétique. Peut-être est-il bon de rappeler à l'Assemblée que, dès 1833, Macaulay, dans un discours prononcé à la Chambre des communes, parlait prophétiquement d'un avenir où l'empire indien pourrait se libérer de la tutelle britannique et disait:

"Ce jour viendra-t-il jamais, je ne sais, mais je ne chercherai jamais à l'écarter ou à le retarder. Quand il viendra, ce sera le jour le plus glorieux de l'histoire d'Angleterre..."

Ce jour a fini par arriver non seulement pour l'Inde, mais pour bien d'autres territoires administrés par le Royaume-Uni et, comme Macaulay, nous y voyons non pas un motif de regret mais un titre de gloire.

127. J'ai évoqué brièvement les nombreux progrès qui ont été réalisés récemment ou sont en cours dans le Commonwealth. Nous, dans le Commonwealth — et quand je dis "nous" je songe au peuple de la Grande-Bretagne travaillant en étroite collaboration et en plein accord avec les peuples du Commonwealth —, nous avons affranchi au cours des 16 années qui se sont écoulées depuis la dernière guerre des populations qui représentent trois fois celle de l'Union soviétique.

128. Mais il ne s'agit pas seulement d'allonger une liste ou d'additionner des chiffres. Il ne s'agit pas non plus de célébrer l'un après l'autre les anniversaires de l'indépendance des territoires que nous avons administrés autrefois. Nous sommes fiers, non seulement du succès de ces réalisations, mais aussi des mesures pratiques qu'il a fallu prendre pour les accomplir. Nous pensons, nous aussi, que le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'autonomie ou l'indépendance. Nous avons toujours prétendu en revanche qu'il est vain, qu'il est même périlleux, de proclamer l'indépendance sans lui avoir donné au préalable l'assise indispensable. M. Wachuku, dans le discours profond dont je viens de citer un passage, a souligné à juste titre que l'indépendance, pour être durable, doit être atteinte dans l'ordre et la concorde. Nous partageons son opinion selon laquelle il est impérieux de donner aux nations nouvelles des perspectives raisonnables de stabilité économique et politique. Certes, il est impossible qu'un pays ait tous ses problèmes résolus à l'avance lorsqu'il devient indépendant; il est après tout des problèmes inhérents à chacun des territoires, qui subsisteront et dont certains ne pourront être mieux résolus que par les peuples eux-mêmes, par l'intermédiaire de leurs représentants élus, après l'accession à l'indépendance. Nous considérons cependant comme un devoir absolu de doter les peuples dépendants qui accèdent à l'indépendance des instruments qui leur permettront d'en tirer le meilleur parti possible.

129. Voilà pourquoi nous attachons la plus grande importance à la création de tribunaux impartiaux, indépendants du pouvoir exécutif, rendant leurs jugements en toute liberté et sans être influencés par des interventions officielles ou extérieures quelles qu'elles soient.

130. Voilà pourquoi nous avons voué tous nos soins et toute notre attention à la formation d'un corps de fonctionnaires de carrière qui se savent au service non pas de leur tribu ou de leur parti, mais de tout le peuple de leur pays.

131. Des forces de police conscientes de leurs responsabilités ont appris à défendre l'ordre public avec l'accord de la collectivité et, en passant, je voudrais dire combien j'admire le travail accompli par la police nigérienne au Congo. Dans des conditions difficiles et dangereuses, la police nigérienne s'est acquittée de sa tâche sans peur et avec efficacité, et, comme elle l'aurait fait normalement en Nigéria, elle l'a fait sans armes.

132. Malgré la grande diversité des conditions dans nos territoires, nous avons créé des parlements représentatifs et nous avons enseigné les principes et la pratique de la liberté électorale. Or j'ai noté que le représentant de la RSS d'Ukraine que nous venons d'entendre a dit que les colonisateurs avaient toujours cherché à maintenir dans leurs colonies tout ce qui était périmé. Si la liberté est périmée, eh bien, nous l'admettons: nous l'avons maintenue. Mais pour nous la liberté n'est pas périmée. Peut-être juge-t-il les choses d'après d'autres critères, mais en ce qui nous concerne nous avons fait progresser ces peuples dans la voie que nous avons nous-mêmes suivie en établissant notre système de gouvernement démocratique et nous en sommes fiers.

133. Il y a longtemps que nous constatons, dans toute l'Asie et toute l'Afrique, un immense désir de voir l'enseignement s'améliorer; nous sommes fiers des systèmes d'enseignement que nous y avons mis sur pied et particulièrement des nombreuses universités déjà bien assises et qui sont en train de se développer rapidement.

M. Ortiz-Martin (Costa Rica), vice-président, prend la présidence.

134. D'autre part, nous avons toujours cherché à relever le niveau de vie des populations et grâce à un vaste réseau de plans de développement divers, que le peuple britannique finance à concurrence de près de 100 millions de livres par an, nous avons consolidé l'économie des territoires que nous administrons. Nous nous sommes efforcés particulièrement de créer de nouvelles industries, d'améliorer l'agriculture, d'encourager l'esprit d'entreprise et de développer le commerce local.

135. Parmi ceux qui parlent en connaissance de cause, il n'est personne qui contestera la portée des mesures qui ont été prises en pleine coopération avec les populations intéressées en vue des objectifs que j'ai exposés. Il n'y a certainement aucun nouveau pays indépendant du Commonwealth qui ne reconnaisse la valeur de ce que nous avons fait pour le préparer à l'indépendance.

136. Les membres de l'Assemblée savent que nous avons coopéré sans réserve dans le passé en communiquant des renseignements conformément à l'Article 73, e, de la Charte. Cet article prévoit la communication de renseignements relatifs aux conditions économiques et sociales ainsi que de l'instruction. La Charte n'en exigeait pas davantage, mais, comme le Secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni l'a annoncé la mois dernier, nous ferons plus que ce que la Charte exige. Nous le ferons, en ayant confiance que les renseignements que nous aurons à donner emporteront la conviction, et je me félicite que les membres aient été si nombreux à saluer notre décision sur ce point comme un acte de coopération positive avec les Nations Unies.

137. Le Secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères de mon pays, lorsqu'il a annoncé cette décision importante, a bien indiqué en même temps que nous ne pouvons ni partager ni transférer notre responsabilité. Nous sommes convaincus que, ce faisant, en fournissant des renseignements complets y compris des renseignements sur les progrès politiques et constitutionnels, et en collaborant sans réserve, nous voulons l'espérer, avec les Nations Unies, la responsabilité qui nous incombe d'appliquer les politiques que j'ai exposées ne doit pas être partagée. Des négociations difficiles et parfois délicates sont menées de bon train avec toutes les populations intéressées. L'immixtion ou l'intervention d'un tiers dans ces négociations ne pourraient, nous en sommes certains, qu'entraver, retarder ou même compromettre les progrès rapides qui sont en cours. Nous avons donc indiqué très clairement qu'en offrant de fournir des renseignements d'ordre politique et constitutionnel nous gardons l'entière responsabilité de l'administration des territoires qui restent placés sous notre administration.

138. Dans l'exposé que j'ai fait des progrès des territoires dépendants dans la voie de l'autonomie, de l'autodétermination et de l'indépendance, j'ai brossé, j'ose le dire, l'une des fresques les plus grandioses de notre génération et de notre siècle. Les insultes des ignorants, les calomnies des malveillants ne pourront rien ôter à cette œuvre qui atteint son point culminant et son terme avec l'admission successive de nouveaux Etats Membres à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

139. Permettez-moi de m'arrêter quelques instants au problème des relations économiques. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a dit l'autre jour que les puissances impérialistes poursuivent toujours les vieux objectifs colonialistes:

"contenir les pays peu développés dans le rôle de producteurs de matières premières agricoles, exploiter leurs populations, conserver les surprofits dus au déséquilibre du taux de l'échange" [1048ème séance, par. 62].

Prétendre que le Royaume-Uni achète à ses territoires des produits à des prix artificiellement bas et oblige en même temps ces territoires à lui acheter ses produits à des prix surfaits est dénué de tout fondement réel.

140. Nos territoires sont libres d'acheter où ils l'entendent. Nombre d'entre eux donnent la préférence aux importations en provenance de pays du Commonwealth, y compris la Grande-Bretagne, mais en contrepartie la Grande-Bretagne admet l'importation en franchise des produits de ces territoires et cette préférence au sein du Commonwealth est d'une grande importance pour l'économie de ces territoires. Il n'est cependant pas question qu'aucun d'eux soit contraint de vendre quoi que ce soit à la Grande-Bretagne et chacun est libre d'exporter ses produits où il le désire.

141. Non seulement la Grande-Bretagne n'importe pas ces produits à des cours inférieurs, mais il arrive souvent que les territoires exportateurs obtiennent en Grande-Bretagne des prix plus favorables qu'ailleurs, grâce au jeu de ce système préférentiel du Commonwealth. Par exemple, avec la préférence de 15 p. 100 dont bénéficient les bananes en Grande-Bretagne, les producteurs des Indes occidentales obtiennent un prix beaucoup plus avantageux en Grande-Bretagne que sur n'importe quel autre marché. De même, les deux tiers environ du sucre produit dans les territoires du Commonwealth sont écoulés en Grande-Bretagne dans le cadre d'un accord à long terme et à un cours négocié chaque année, cours qui est actuellement supérieur de 50 p. 100 au cours du marché libre mondial. Pendant que nous en sommes au chapitre des pratiques commerciales en général et du sucre en particulier, je puis signaler que le Gouvernement soviétique a beaucoup à nous apprendre, à nous capitalistes, sur la façon de faire des bénéfices. Le sucre qu'il a acheté à Cuba en 1960 à moins de 7 cents américains le kilogramme a été revendu plus de 9 roubles, soit 2,25 dollars le kilogramme, de sorte que le rapport du prix d'achat au prix de vente est de 1 à 35, contre 1 à 2 ou 1 à 3 aux Etats-Unis et en Grande-Bretagne. Même si l'on tient compte des frais de transport, de raffinage et de distribution, le bénéfice net dépasse 1000 p. 100, ce qui n'est pas mal, on l'avouera, pour un pays qui condamne le mobile du profit.

142. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a prétendu aussi que le seul motif pour lequel les autorités administrantes font des investissements dans leurs territoires est celui de l'exploitation et il a ajouté que les motifs des pays communistes sont en revanche complètement altruistes. Cette conception économique marxiste qui exclut l'idée du profit tiré d'investissements privés n'a peut-être pas de quoi surprendre, mais elle ne correspond pas à l'attitude des territoires dépendants eux-mêmes, pas plus qu'à celle des nouveaux pays indépendants. Les pays sous-développés, dépendants ou indépendants, manquent par définition de capitaux pour leur développement. Des capitaux sont fournis pour une large part sous forme de capitaux publics, mais on reconnaît généralement qu'ils ne suffisent pas pour permettre à l'économie de croître au rythme voulu. C'est pourquoi les territoires dépendants ou indépendants font souvent savoir qu'ils ont besoin de capitaux privés et c'est pourquoi ils font tout ce qu'ils peuvent pour les attirer. Ils reconnaissent la valeur du commerce qui est le moyen non seulement le plus classique mais aussi le plus commode d'obtenir une assistance. En disant cela, je parle d'expérience, car on se rappellera que lorsque nous nous sommes nous-mêmes attelés à la tâche de relever notre économie après la guerre nous avons lancé le slogan: "Des échanges commerciaux et non pas de l'aide".

143. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique nous a beaucoup parlé du "néo-colonialisme" grâce auquel, selon lui, les puissances administrantes "stipulent des privilèges pour leurs monopoles et le "droit" pour ceux-ci de conserver les concessions qui leur avaient été précédemment accordées, et cherchent à imposer aux nouveaux Etats l'obligation d'aligner entièrement leur politique économique, monétaire et financière sur celle de l'ex-métropole" [1048ème séance, par. 87]. Cette allégation ne peut certainement pas s'appliquer aux relations de la Grande-Bretagne et du Commonwealth.

144. Aucuns des pays, appartenant au Commonwealth ou non, qui travaillent en association avec le Royaume-Uni pour poursuivre leur développement économique n'a été empêché de créer sa propre économie nationale indépendante. Aucun de ces pays n'a souffert d'une ingérence dans sa structure sociale ou agraire. Aucun de ces pays n'a vu son industrialisation entravée ou sa liberté de choix limitée en quelque façon que ce soit en ce qui concerne ses importations et ses exportations. Pour le Royaume-Uni, le "néo-colonialisme" est un mythe mystérieux propagé principalement par ceux qui en savent davantage qu'ils ne veulent bien le révéler sur le véritable néo-colonialisme tel qu'ils le pratiquent et davantage encore sur la pratique de ce système. Quant à nous, nous sommes fiers de ce que nous avons fait en matière d'aide financière et technique. Ainsi que je l'ai dit à Genève en juillet dernier au Conseil économique et social^{3/}, les capitaux de source publique et privée que la Grande-Bretagne verse aux pays sous-développés atteignent la somme de 800 millions de dollars par an. Nous sommes fiers de ne pas avoir réduit notre programme d'aide malgré nos propres difficultés économiques. En fait, cette aide a plus que doublé depuis 1958 et elle dépasse de beaucoup l'aide fournie actuellement par l'Union soviétique.

145. Je crois devoir exposer maintenant quelques réflexions sur l'intervention décourageante que le représentant de l'Union soviétique a faite la semaine dernière.

^{3/} Documents officiels du Conseil économique et social, trente-deuxième session, 1160ème séance, par. 14.

146. Tout d'abord, permettez-moi de commenter la lettre que M. Gromyko a adressée au Président de l'Assemblée générale au sujet de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, lettre dans laquelle il affirme avec éloquence:

"Aujourd'hui, il n'y a pas de peuple qui ne soit prêt pour la liberté mais il y a des peuples encore privés de liberté par la contrainte. Eux aussi doivent être libérés. Il est du devoir de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ... de les aider à réaliser leurs aspirations." [A/4889, par. 45.]

147. Comme ces opinions ont été réaffirmées en des termes presque identiques par M. Lapine, permettez-moi de rappeler ici que de tous les grands empires qui existaient au XIXème siècle il n'en est qu'un seul qui ait récemment étendu son territoire à la suite d'agressions. Depuis 1939, l'empire dont je parle s'est annexé des territoires ayant une superficie totale de 500 000 kilomètres carrés et une population de 22 500 000 habitants. De plus, soit en employant directement la force armée, soit en s'en servant comme d'une menace, cet empire a imposé le régime de son choix à sept autres pays ayant une population totale de plus de 90 millions d'habitants. L'empire dont je parle est l'empire soviétique. Je relèverai ici qu'aucun pays ou qu'aucune république fédérée au sein du bloc soviétique n'a reçu la possibilité de négocier son indépendance à l'amiable, comme ce fut le cas de tant de nos anciens territoires coloniaux. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique répliquera certainement que nul n'en a éprouvé le désir. Mais pouvons-nous le croire? Qu'en savons-nous?

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

148. Le fait que les frontières sont étroitement gardées pour protéger la population contre son envie de s'enfuir prouve manifestement que ces régimes manquent de l'appui populaire. Un pays, un seul pays, la Yougoslavie, grâce à sa situation géographique heureuse et aux sentiments nationalistes vigoureux de son peuple, a réussi à défier l'hégémonie soviétique, mais nous nous souvenons tous des mesures brutales, y compris des sanctions économiques, qui ont été prises contre ce pays pour tenter de l'obliger à se soumettre. D'autres pays ont eu moins de chance. Je n'ai pas à vous rappeler avec quelle brutalité a été réprimée la veillée d'indépendance du peuple hongrois qui a essayé de se détacher du Pacte de Varsovie et d'adopter une politique étrangère neutre, une politique d'amitié avec tous les peuples, sans adhérer à aucun bloc. Le chef de la Hongrie, M. Nagy, avait osé demander que l'Union soviétique appliquât les cinq principes de la coexistence pacifique dans ses relations avec les pays du camp communiste. Avec d'innombrables compatriotes, il est mort pour sa cause. L'Union soviétique, à ce qu'il semble, est prête à applaudir à l'indépendance, au non-alignement des pays éloignés, mais elle étouffe impitoyablement les mêmes aspirations à l'intérieur du bloc. On assure qu'en Roumanie, en vertu d'un décret de 1958, quiconque préconise une politique extérieure neutre est passible de la peine de mort. De même, le soulèvement de l'Allemagne orientale en 1953 a été écrasé par les blindés soviétiques.

149. M. Lapine a dit au sujet de la liquidation du régime de tutelle:

"La liquidation du régime de tutelle doit apporter l'indépendance totale non seulement au Ruanda-Urundi, mais aussi à la Nouvelle-Guinée, à l'île de Nauru, aux îles du Pacifique et à tous les autres territoires qui, sous divers prétextes, demeurent encore sous la dépendance des puissances impérialistes." [1048ème séance, par. 39.]

Puisque le représentant de l'Union soviétique a parlé des îles du Pacifique, peut-être est-ce le moment de lui demander quand les îles Kouriles obtiendront leur indépendance. Ce archipel, on le sait, constitue une partie du butin que l'Union soviétique a exigé pour sa participation de neuf jours à la guerre contre le Japon. Depuis que les forces soviétiques l'ont occupé en 1945, le monde extérieur ne sait guère ce qui s'y passe. On n'a pas offert de placer ces îles sous la tutelle des Nations Unies. On n'a jamais communiqué aucun renseignement à leur sujet. L'Union soviétique observe en ce qui les concerne un silence inquiétant. Les îles sont jalousement gardées et, même, les pêcheurs japonais qui peuvent franchir involontairement, sans rien faire d'illicite, la limite des eaux territoriales fixée unilatéralement par l'Union soviétique sont jetés en prison et leurs embarcations sont saisies. Il semble que, comme en Asie centrale soviétique, on y ait encouragé une immigration russe massive, de sorte que le nombre des colons blancs de nationalité russe l'emporte probablement maintenant sur celui des habitants originaires.

150. Les Russes ont aussi établi d'importantes installations militaires sur ces îles qui occupent une position stratégique. Ce ne devrait pourtant pas être un obstacle à l'indépendance, puisque M. Lapine a exprimé sans équivoque l'opinion de son gouvernement sur l'iniquité des puissances coloniales qui établissent de telles bases dans leurs territoires coloniaux. J'aimerais relever ici que les orateurs soviétiques font preuve d'une curieuse ambivalence à propos des pactes militaires et des bases militaires. Ainsi, dans son discours, M. Lapine s'en est pris sur ce point aux pays non communistes, dont le Royaume-Uni. Peut-être a-t-il oublié que l'Union soviétique a conclu des accords militaires bilatéraux avec la Chine communiste et avec la Corée du Nord et qu'elle a adhéré au Pacte de Varsovie? Et puisque c'est là l'un des thèmes des insultes des représentants de l'Union soviétique et d'autres membres du bloc communiste, je me permettrai de souligner que l'Union soviétique s'est servie du Pacte de Varsovie et de traités bilatéraux antérieurs pour établir toute une série de bases militaires sur le territoire de ses satellites. L'orateur qui m'a précédé ce matin a longuement parlé de toute cette question des bases. Il n'est que juste d'en montrer ce côté-ci également. Depuis la fin de la guerre, l'URSS a notamment créé un vaste réseau de bases aériennes avec l'aide des régimes communistes qu'elle a mis sur pied en Europe orientale. Les aérodromes des pays satellites sont ouverts aux équipages militaires soviétiques, qui les utilisent. En Hongrie, par exemple, les quatre divisions motorisées soviétiques disposent de zones spéciales, avec dépôts, magasins, etc. Du fait de l'intégration militaire réalisée dans le cadre du Pacte de Varsovie, l'URSS exerce un contrôle complet sur ces bases. Le siège de l'Organisation du Pacte de Varsovie se trouve à Moscou; son état-major est dirigé par un commandant en chef russe. Il y a de nombreuses bases soviétiques sur le territoire de pays autrefois indépendants qui ont été annexés par l'Union soviétique après la guerre, par exemple dans les Etats baltes, à Kaliningrad (l'ancienne Königsberg) et dans la Ruthénie carpatique. On se souvient que l'Union soviétique a invoqué le Pacte de Varsovie pour justifier l'intervention militaire par laquelle elle a écrasé le soulèvement hongrois en 1953.

151. Je l'ai dit, on a beaucoup parlé ce matin des pactes militaires. Mais il n'est que juste de rappeler également ce côté-ci de la question. Il ne s'agit pas du tout d'une affaire unilatérale et c'est pourquoi, naturellement, nous devons nous efforcer de parvenir au désarmement, de façon que ces bases militaires soient finalement éliminées. Je ne mentionne ces faits que parce qu'on ne cesse de nous les reprocher et que la justice veut que l'on montre également l'autre panneau du diptyque.

152. M. Lapine a aussi accusé les puissances coloniales d'essayer d'empêcher les Nations Unies d'intervenir dans les affaires coloniales en prétextant que ces affaires relèvent de leur "compétence nationale". Puis-je rappeler à M. Lapine que dans un discours qu'il a prononcé au début de cette session, il a soutenu vigoureusement ce même principe qu'il veut tourner maintenant en ridicule. J'espère ne pas le flatter exagérément en me référant constamment à ses discours, mais simplement lui montrer combien nous nous plaisons à les étudier. Le 25 septembre, s'opposant à l'inscription à l'ordre du jour de la question du Tibet, il déclarait:

"... la Chine populaire est maîtresse chez elle; ses droits souverains et ses actions ne peuvent être discutés par l'Assemblée générale ni par un autre organisme international. La Charte des Nations Unies se fonde précisément sur ce principe, qui est obligatoire pour tous les organes de l'ONU" [1014^{ème} séance, par. 162].

C'est M. Lapine qui s'exprimait en ces termes, et non pas moi; il poursuivait:

"Il est clairement stipulé dans la Charte que les Nations Unies ne doivent pas intervenir dans des affaires qui relèvent essentiellement de la compétence nationale d'un Etat. Ainsi, entraîner l'Assemblée générale, comme certaines puissances en ont l'intention, dans un débat sur la prétendue question du Tibet, revient à intervenir dans les affaires intérieures de la République populaire de Chine et à violer de façon flagrante la Charte des Nations Unies." [Ibid., par. 162 et 163.]

153. Le représentant de la Malaisie, dans une réponse émouvante, a affirmé que tous les peuples ont le droit de vivre dans la liberté et la justice. Je tiens à citer sa réponse parce que je crois qu'elle mérite de retenir l'attention de toutes les délégations. Il a déclaré:

"... ce droit appartient à tous les peuples du monde, qu'ils soient assujettis au colonialisme traditionnel ou à toute autre forme d'oppression, de la part de n'importe quelle puissance.

"Lorsque nous nous élevons contre le colonialisme et la violation des droits de l'homme en Afrique, ce n'est pas seulement parce que les victimes sont des Africains et que les oppresseurs sont des puissances coloniales occidentales, mais essentiellement parce qu'il s'agit de la domination et de l'oppression de l'homme par l'homme. Si la même oppression se produit ailleurs, il est du devoir absolu de l'Assemblée générale d'adopter une attitude identique, même si elle encourt par là le mécontentement de certains qui participent à ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler la guerre froide." [Ibid., par. 177 et 178.]

154. C'est le représentant de la Malaisie qui s'est exprimé ainsi et si j'ai cité ce passage c'est qu'il traduit mieux que je ne pourrais le faire l'attitude de ma délégation. Nous ne prétendons pas être parfaits et, encore que nous estimions pouvoir nous enorgueillir de bien des choses que nous avons accomplies récemment, nous sommes prêts à entendre ici de nombreuses critiques, les unes constructives, mais d'autres, je le crains, malveillantes et non fondées. Nous avons coopéré de nombreuses façons et, comme je le rappelais à l'Assemblée il y a un instant, nous avons décidé volontairement de communiquer des renseignements d'ordre politique sur tous nos territoires. Tout ce que nous demandons, c'est que la même vigilance apportée à scruter nos actions s'exerce aussi à l'endroit de l'empire soviétique, où le vent de la liberté n'a pas encore commencé de souffler.

155. C'est sans plaisir, sans plaisir aucun, que je fais allusion aux défauts d'autrui, mais quand les réalisations de mon propre pays sont dénigrées avec autant de constance par le bloc soviétique, quand les représentants de ce bloc s'acharnent à donner des réalisations de mon pays une image qui travestit la vérité et qui fait insulte à l'intelligence des autres représentants, force m'est de rappeler à l'Assemblée le bilan de ceux qui cherchent à salir la réputation que nous nous sommes acquise dans ce domaine. Les hommes de race blanche ont droit à l'autodétermination au même titre que les autres hommes et ce serait très mal qu'en cette Assemblée nous oubliions le sort de ceux à qui l'on refuse la liberté sur le continent européen au moins autant qu'ailleurs.

156. Je voudrais revenir maintenant pendant quelques instants en arrière, non pour rappeler les réalisations de mon pays, car elles sont bien connues et de nombreux représentants ici présents peuvent en témoigner. Ce que je veux faire, c'est renouveler les assurances que moi-même et d'autres représentants du Royaume-Uni avons déjà données. Il y a de nombreuses années, nous nous sommes fixé comme but d'enseigner notre propre système de gouvernement à nos territoires dépendants, de les encourager à croire, comme nous y croyons, en la liberté de l'individu, et de les mettre à même d'exercer cette liberté avec la conscience de leurs responsabilités et en s'administrant eux-mêmes.

157. Nous avons commencé cette tâche bien avant que l'Union soviétique ne songeât à s'intéresser à cette question. Nous l'avons menée à bien, comme je l'ai rappelé à l'Assemblée, pour un nombre élevé, impressionnant et croissant de nations libres, qui ont presque toutes choisi librement de maintenir le lien réel mais difficile à définir qui les rattache à nous dans le cadre du Commonwealth.

158. D'autres, je l'ai dit, approchent régulièrement de ce même but et nous nous réjouissons de les voir devenir des nations indépendantes, tout comme vous, les membres de l'Assemblée générale, vous vous réjouirez de les accueillir, j'en suis certain, parmi les Nations Unies, lorsque le moment sera venu.

159. Chacun de ces succès est de notoriété publique et nous pouvons nous permettre de traiter avec mépris les tentatives des envieux qui cherchent à minimiser notre œuvre. Je donne l'assurance que nous ne nous détournerons pas de cet objectif, mais qu'au contraire nous retirerons des encouragements des interventions objectives et sincères de ceux qui s'intéressent réellement à cette question et ne sont pas mus simplement par la volonté de considérer ce sujet important comme le thème d'une manœuvre de la guerre froide.

160. Il s'agit de quelque chose en quoi nous croyons profondément et peut-être ai-je donc retenu l'attention des membres de l'Assemblée pendant plus longtemps que je ne l'aurais dû aujourd'hui, mais les réalisations de notre pays ont été trop souvent dénigrées et j'étais bien en droit de rappeler aux délégations ce que nous avons accompli par le passé et ce que nous sommes résolus à faire encore dans l'avenir jusqu'à ce que tous nos territoires dépendants aient atteint la pleine maturité que recherchent tous les hommes libres du monde.

161. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Union soviétique qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

162. M. LAPINE (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Je voudrais dire quelques mots à propos de l'intervention si irritée du représentant du Royaume-Uni. On peut comprendre son irritation. En effet, humainement parlant, il n'est pas facile d'être aujourd'hui représentant du colonialisme anglais. Même si ce colonialisme garde encore sa grandeur — comme l'a déclaré ici le représentant du Royaume-Uni —, il n'est pas aisé de défendre le régime colonial.

163. Quant aux déclarations déjà nombreuses que le représentant du Royaume-Uni a faites pour se dire fier de l'histoire coloniale de son pays, nous nous réservons le droit de répondre en détail à ces fières déclarations; nous pouvons aussi apporter des citations nombreuses pour montrer ce que vaut cette "fierté" et quelle infamie représente toute l'histoire du colonialisme anglais.

164. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a fait des allusions à "l'empire colonial" de l'Union soviétique. Le représentant du colonialisme ne doit pas se sentir fort à l'aise pour avoir à recourir à de telles calomnies. Il est clair pour tous que l'Union soviétique est une union libre de républiques socialistes, une union solide, indestructible et cimentée par l'amitié profonde, la solidarité et la communauté d'intérêts de ces peuples. Certes, nous comprenons qu'il ne vous plaise pas que ces pays, ces républiques, soient solides, qu'elles aient des gouvernements stables qui jouissent de la confiance du peuple et sont réélus à l'unanimité au cours d'élections qui se déroulent, en Union soviétique, dans des conditions réellement démocratiques. Mais que faire, Messieurs? Nous n'y pouvons rien! Aussi puissant que soit votre désir de voir chanceler l'Union soviétique, cela ne se produit pas. L'Union soviétique est solide et les républiques qui la composent collaborent harmonieusement.

165. Vous n'aimez pas non plus les pays de démocratie populaire; vous n'aimez pas leurs gouvernements et vous estimez qu'ils devraient être remplacés par d'autres. Vous donnez le boire et le manger à certains gouvernements chez vous, notamment aux Etats-Unis. Mais là aussi, que pouvons-nous y faire?

166. Eh bien, continuez de donner le boire et le manger à ces gouvernements et financez-les. Il se trouve, cependant, que les peuples de ces pays ont élu d'autres gouvernements. Ils leur font confiance, ainsi qu'aux représentants de ces gouvernements près de l'Organisation des Nations Unies: ce sont les représentants plénipotentiaires de leurs Etats souverains et l'on n'y peut rien changer.

167. La pratique de l'appui à des gouvernements d'émigrés ne vous a jamais réussi. Pendant longtemps vous avez donné le boire et le manger même au gouvernement du Tsar, aux représentants de ce gouvernement ainsi qu'à ceux du gouvernement provisoire. Vous avez donné le boire et le manger à Kérénsky; vous êtes aux petits soins avec tous ces gens-là jusqu'à un âge très avancé. Mais qu'en est-il résulté? Notre pays en a-t-il été affecté d'une manière quelconque? Tous ces gens sont tombés dans l'oubli. Déjà personne ne s'en souvient.

168. Vous n'aimez pas le Traité de Varsovie. Je dois avouer qu'il ne nous plaît pas non plus. Nous serions heureux d'y renoncer. Vous savez qu'il a été conclu après la création de l'OTAN. S'il n'y avait pas eu l'OTAN, s'il n'y avait pas eu cette alliance militaire des puissances occidentales, il n'y aurait pas non plus de Traité de Varsovie. Nous vous l'avons proposé, à plusieurs reprises: Messieurs, liquidez l'OTAN ou tout au moins concluons un accord entre l'OTAN et la Traité de Varsovie et la situation changera. Mais les puissances occidentales s'y refusent. Elles ont créé le bloc militaire de l'OTAN et d'autres blocs et alliances militaires. Cependant, lorsque l'Union soviétique et les Etats socialistes ont réagi en concluant le Traité de Varsovie, cela n'a pas été du goût des puissances occidentales. Mais que voulez-vous donc? Que nous désarmions, que nous ouvrons nos frontières, et que nous vous disions: Allez-y donc, Messieurs, venez donc intervenir chez nous (comme en 1918 et 1919)? Non, ne comptez pas là-dessus. Il va de soi que l'Union soviétique répondra à toute mesure militaire par des mesures militaires. Cela renforcera la défense de notre pays et remplira de joie et de bonheur tous les travailleurs.

169. Quant aux bases militaires, vous savez parfaitement que l'Union soviétique n'a pas de bases sur territoire étranger. Elle les a entièrement liquidées. Et il serait fort bien que vous suiviez cet exemple.

170. Pour conclure, je voudrais dire que les tentatives visant à détourner l'Assemblée générale du problème colonial et d'un examen de la responsabilité qui pèse sur les puissances colonialistes en ce qui concerne les guerres coloniales, le régime de terreur, l'arbitraire policier et le fait que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] n'est pas appliquée, toutes ces tentatives sont vouées à l'échec. Ces tentatives ont également été faites l'an dernier, à la dernière session de l'Assemblée générale. Vous vous souvenez, certes, qu'un représentant était alors intervenu ici pour essayer d'attaquer le "colonialisme soviétique" et qu'à cette occasion il avait été traité de "laquais" par le chef de notre gouvernement. Or, actuellement, ce ne sont plus seulement les représentants de pays dominés, mais également les représentants de leurs maîtres qui commencent à intervenir ainsi. Cela les regarde, bien entendu, et ils sont libres de refaire pour ainsi dire, la triste expérience des laquais, mais ils n'en retireront aucun succès.

La séance est levée à 13 h 15.

Déclaration du Président

1. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole aux orateurs inscrits pour cette séance, je voudrais annoncer à l'Assemblée qu'après les six orateurs de cet après-midi il nous en restera encore 29 autres inscrits pour le débat sur les points 88 et 22, a, de notre ordre du jour. En vue de terminer nos travaux dans les meilleurs délais, il est absolument nécessaire que nous travaillions, la semaine prochaine, en séances de nuit et, si cela s'avérait nécessaire, nous tiendrions également une ou deux séances le samedi. Au cours des jours à venir, nous continuerons le débat sur les points 88 et 22, a, et entamerons la discussion et, au besoin, le vote sur les projets de résolution les concernant. J'ose espérer que nous pourrons ainsi terminer ces deux questions à la fin de la semaine prochaine, ce qui pourrait nous permettre de commencer le débat sur la question suivante au cours de la semaine d'après.

2. Au cours des séances de la semaine prochaine, qui auront trait au débat sur les deux questions en cours, les orateurs seront appelés successivement dans l'ordre dans lequel ils sont inscrits sur la liste. Je leur serais très reconnaissant de prendre toutes dispositions utiles en vue d'être prêts à prendre la parole dès qu'ils seront appelés à la tribune.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

3. M. QUAISON-SACKÉY (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: La quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale a été une session historique, et cela ne vient pas simplement de l'admission de non moins de 17 nouveaux Etats indépendants à l'Organisation ou de la présence ici, pour la première fois, d'une pléiade de chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement. Ce qui a aussi conféré à cette session un caractère historique, c'est le fait que les deux grandes puissances de la Terre, l'Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, ont présenté deux importantes questions qui touchent aux aspirations de tous les peuples d'Afrique.

4. La question présentée par l'Union soviétique a conduit, on le sait, à l'adoption de la fameuse résolution 1514 (XV) contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux qui a été élaborée par le groupe africano-asiatique et définitivement mise au point à la suite de longues discussions et consultations menées en dehors de ce groupe. De l'avis de ma délégation, cette déclaration occupe une place aussi prédominante, en ce qui concerne l'Afrique, que la Charte des Nations Unies et la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme.

5. L'examen de la question intitulée "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance", proposée par les Etats-Unis à la quinzième session, avait été renvoyé à la présente session et cette question est maintenant examinée en même temps qu'une question qui découle de la résolution 1514 (XV) et qui est intitulée "La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux".

6. On peut se réjouir de ce que les Etats-Unis aussi bien que l'Union soviétique aient pris, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, l'initiative d'un mouvement tendant à abolir définitivement le régime colonial et l'impérialisme en Afrique et dans d'autres parties du monde. Il est maintenant tacitement admis que le colonialisme est un anachronisme, qu'il est une source d'hostilité entre les nations et entre les peuples, et qu'il milite contre la paix du monde. En se posant en champions des forces anticolonialistes dans le monde, les Etats-Unis et l'Union soviétique semblent exprimer une certaine philosophie fondamentale connue dans l'Amérique révolutionnaire et dans la Russie moderne. Les principes de la révolution américaine ont souvent été invoqués, en Afrique et ailleurs, par ceux qui combattaient pour la liberté, au cours des luttes politiques qu'ils menaient pour libérer leur pays du joug colonialiste. Tous les nationalistes africains acceptent sans réserve ces paroles de Jefferson:

"Lorsqu'au cours des événements humains un peuple se voit dans la nécessité de rompre les liens politiques qui l'unissaient à un autre et de prendre parmi les puissances de la Terre le statut d'indépendance et d'égalité auquel les lois de la nature et du Dieu de la nature lui donnent droit, un juste respect de l'opinion des hommes exige qu'il déclare les causes qui l'ont porté à cette séparation."

7. D'autres Américains théoriciens de la politique, comme Thomas Paine, ont fourni de nombreuses armes politiques à l'agitation. D'autre part, le caractère révolutionnaire et les tactiques révolutionnaires du marxisme ont exercé un attrait considérable sur les nationalistes africains. Aussi, c'est vers les deux grandes puissances qui n'ont pas une tradition de colonisation en Afrique que l'on se tourne. Aux Etats-Unis, en particulier, qui entretiennent d'étroites relations avec les puissances coloniales d'Europe, nous demandons instamment de se désolidariser totalement des politiques coloniales de leurs alliés, d'autant plus qu'ils sont passés par les mêmes épreuves que l'Afrique. Dans leur grandeur, les Etats-Unis ne doivent pas oublier à cause de leurs préoccupations en Europe qu'ils sont les héritiers d'une grande tradition anticolonialiste et ils doivent aider autant que possible les Africains dans leurs efforts pour mettre fin immédiatement au colonialisme.

8. Le fait que l'Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique ont pris l'initiative de ce mouvement constitue une combinaison particulièrement heureuse et bien venue d'éléments souhaitables; ainsi, notre tâche comprend l'élaboration d'un programme: un programme des Nations Unies, un programme pour l'application de la Déclaration, tant en ce qui concerne l'Afrique qu'en ce qui concerne les pays dépendants dans les autres parties du monde. N'est-ce point ce qui pourrait le mieux convenir à la situation que l'approbation légale et morale explicitement accordée par l'Organisation aux aspirations légitimes des peuples luttant pour leur indépendance? N'est-ce point ce qui pourrait être trouvé de mieux que de confier formellement à l'Organisation la responsabilité de l'application totale et immédiate de la Déclaration historique sur le colonialisme?

9. Ma délégation note avec satisfaction que, depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration, le Sierra Leone est devenu indépendant et membre de la communauté internationale; d'ici quelques semaines, le Tanganyika sera passé de l'état de territoire sous tutelle à l'indépendance. Le Samoa-Occidental sera bientôt indépendant et l'indépendance de l'Ouganda n'est pas loin. Il faut rendre hommage aux autorités administrantes intéressées non seulement pour avoir tenu compte des réalités de la vie et avoir pris le vent de l'évolution, mais aussi pour avoir aidé ces peuples avec une sagesse clairvoyante à réaliser leurs aspirations.

10. Toutefois, après avoir rendu cet hommage, ma délégation ne peut s'empêcher de remarquer que le processus de décolonisation s'est désespérément et obstinément ralenti et qu'il existe encore quelque 70 territoires non autonomes dont la population totale est de plus de 50 millions d'habitants, ainsi que plusieurs autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à une indépendance complète. Tous les peuples de ces territoires — plus de 70 millions d'habitants — connaissent encore les horreurs et les souffrances de l'impérialisme: ils continuent d'être exclus de l'administration effective de leur patrie, ils sont souvent soumis à d'injustes pratiques de discrimination raciale et la plupart d'entre eux se voient encore refuser la liberté et les droits démocratiques les plus élémentaires fondés sur le principe du suffrage égalitaire. Nous ne pouvons pas ne pas insister aussi sur le fait qu'aux termes de la Déclaration il ne peut être établi de distinction entre un colonialisme "bon" ou "bienveillant" et un impérialisme "mauvais" ou "répressif".

11. Un certain contentement de soi semble régner dans certains milieux. Certes, le Royaume-Uni, en tant que puissance coloniale, ne peut être classé dans la même catégorie que le Portugal, qui s'obstine dans une guerre coloniale pour continuer à tenir à la gorge l'Angola et d'autres territoires portugais; mais si nous louons le Royaume-Uni pour les progrès accomplis dans la bonne direction, la triste vérité n'en est pas moins que la majorité des territoires coloniaux restant en Afrique sont sous domination britannique. C'est ce système de domination coloniale qui doit être aboli une fois pour toutes. Nous avons la ferme conviction que les territoires africains n'ont pas besoin d'être sous une domination européenne pour jouir des bienfaits de la civilisation moderne. Qu'il s'agisse d'enseignement, de développement économique, de protection sociale ou de santé publique, dans tous ces domaines des progrès peuvent être accomplis sans qu'il soit besoin d'administration coloniale grâce à un système adéquat d'assistance bilatérale ou multilatérale. Ce n'est pas sous l'impulsion de sentiments altruistes, nous le soutenons, que les Européens ont gouverné et gouvernent l'Afrique.

12. En effet, l'essence même du colonialisme ne consiste-t-elle pas, de la part de puissances étrangères, à imposer et à maintenir un système politique et économique sur le territoire national d'un autre peuple, en faisant fi, de propos délibéré, de son droit à l'autodétermination? La principale caractéristique du colonialisme est l'imposition arbitraire, sans le consentement des peuples en cause, d'un système étranger conçu au premier chef pour servir les intérêts de la puissance colonisatrice. Que ce système soit maintenu de vive force ou, d'une manière plus subtile, par une coercition déguisée en paternalisme, cela ne fait pas de différence quant au principe même de ce système. Il implique nécessairement que les intérêts et le développement des peuples coloniaux sont subordonnés à ceux de la puissance colonisatrice. Il s'agit par conséquent d'une force fondamentalement opposée aux progrès et à l'avancement du peuple assujetti, sauf dans le cas où un tel développement est essentiel pour créer des conditions de paix et de stabilité, ou plutôt de stagnation, permettant de sauvegarder et de favoriser les intérêts des puissances colonisatrices.

13. Dans son évolution récente, le colonialisme est devenu un système extrêmement compliqué et ramifié de domination politique et économique; le contrôle direct et l'emploi de la force sont judicieusement tempérés par un contrôle indirect, grâce au maintien d'une classe dirigeante sur laquelle on peut compter pour défendre les intérêts coloniaux contre le peuple assujetti. Afin de se perpétuer et de maintenir et d'accroître l'exploitation à laquelle ils se livrent, les régimes coloniaux n'ont pas hésité à avoir recours à des procédés tels que la discrimination raciale, la ségrégation et autres pratiques destinées à dépouiller les peuples asservis de leur dignité, de leur identité et de leur volonté même d'autodétermination.

14. Mais, quel que soit le raffinement des procédés que les puissances colonisatrices ont adoptés selon les territoires, le système a inévitablement eu pour effet de figer le développement politique, économique et social à un stade primitif ou quasi primitif et de fausser les forces dynamiques de l'évolution. D'où le retard des pays dépendants par rapport au niveau général du progrès atteint dans les autres pays du monde et la différence tragique qui existe, au point de vue du développement et du progrès, entre les pays assujettis et les pays industrialisés.

15. Il faut reconnaître, bien entendu, que le système lui-même comportait certains aspects secondaires profitables: ceux qui exploitaient les pays coloniaux étaient obligés, pour le succès de leurs entreprises, de créer une certaine infrastructure économique et sociale; manifestement, il leur fallait des ports, des routes, des écoles, des hôpitaux s'ils voulaient tirer de l'exploitation le maximum de profit et organiser et employer la main-d'œuvre indigène de manière efficace. Mais ces avantages, si on les considère dans le contexte historique, n'ont été que des conséquences purement secondaires et pour ainsi dire fortuites. Par une ironie du sort, cependant, ces conséquences ont à leur tour fait naître chez les peuples autochtones une prise de conscience de leurs droits et de leur dignité; ceux-là mêmes que les puissances colonisatrices avaient formés afin de les utiliser pour leur exploitation sont devenus, du fait de cette éducation, conscients de leur personnalité et de leur force, tant sur le plan humain que sur le plan national, et ont refusé de continuer à être les instruments de leur propre ruine.

16. Ainsi a commencé le grand réveil de l'Afrique et de l'Asie, qui s'est développé en une force anti-colonialiste d'une puissance et d'une portée telles que les protagonistes mêmes du mouvement en sont parfois surpris. Devant un tel état de choses, celles des puissances coloniales qui ne manquaient pas d'un certain esprit pratique et d'un certain sens des réalités ont compris qu'il serait sage d'adapter leurs points de vue aux conditions nouvelles et de parvenir à l'équilibre nécessaire pour maintenir leurs positions précaires.

17. C'est pour s'adapter à l'évolution des temps modernes que le Royaume-Uni, qui est notre ami, a entrepris son processus de décolonisation; et c'est pour se mettre dans le vent de la même évolution que la France a jugé bon d'appliquer à la plus grande partie de son empire africain les grands principes de la révolution française. Ainsi, sur près de 800 millions d'individus qui se trouvaient sous une domination étrangère en 1946, les neuf dixièmes ont maintenant accédé à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

18. La liberté de mon pays, le Ghana, a été le résultat de ce processus. Notre accession à l'indépendance a été la première d'une série d'émancipations de peuples dits coloniaux de l'Afrique au sud du Sahara, série qui se poursuit encore et que nous souhaitons sincèrement et ardemment voir se poursuivre jusqu'à ce que le dernier être humain sous le joug soit libéré. Alors seulement notre propre indépendance prendra toute sa signification, nos sacrifices trouveront leur consécration et notre histoire brillera de tout son éclat. Comment, en effet, la personnalité africaine pourrait-elle se projeter pleinement et effectivement autrement que dans le contexte plus étendu de la liberté et de l'indépendance de l'Afrique? L'Afrique, nous l'avons dit, ne peut être à moitié libre et à moitié asservie. Ce n'est qu'une façon de parler que de désigner les Africains par des termes tels que Ghanéens, Nigériens, Congolais: car lorsqu'on nous rencontre dans les rues de Londres, de New York, de Paris ou de Moscou, on nous montre du doigt en nous appelant des "Africains", avec tout ce que cela évoque pour des esprits européens — en Amérique, bien sûr, nous sommes des nègres. Ce qui importe, c'est qu'en tant qu'Africains nous ne pouvons tolérer qu'aucune partie de l'Afrique demeure encore longtemps sous une domination coloniale, de quelque forme qu'elle soit. L'indépendance du Ghana, nous le répétons, ne peut prendre toute sa signification que dans le contexte plus large d'une Afrique totalement libre et indépendante.

19. Une indépendance de pure forme ne suffit pas. Le colonialisme se tourne maintenant vers de nouvelles tactiques. Au lieu de naviguer contre le vent, il prend au contraire le vent de l'évolution, de manière à conserver sa dernière place forte — sa suprématie économique et technique. Dans ses derniers sursauts d'agonie, il est presque résigné à mourir, mais il se prépare en même temps à renaître de ses cendres, tel le phénix, à renaître avec une jeunesse et une vigueur renouvelées et à vivre sous une forme plus rusée et ainsi bien plus dangereuse de néo-colonialisme.

20. Par néo-colonialisme, cela s'entend, nous voulons désigner la pratique qui consiste à octroyer une indépendance de forme avec l'intention cachée de faire du pays libéré un Etat-client et de le contrôler, ou mieux de le téléguider, en fait, par des moyens autres que des moyens politiques. Il s'agit en réalité de maintenir une hégémonie par l'entremise d'un gouvernement interposé et au moyen d'un ensemble d'armes économiques, idéologiques et autres, y compris l'imposition d'accords militaires discutables. Il s'agit de défendre les mêmes intérêts sur le cadavre du colonialisme ancien modèle; les deux systèmes sont semblables pour ce qui est de leur nature et de leurs buts, seules les méthodes sont adaptées aux conditions modernes.

21. Dans ces conditions, la lutte contre le colonialisme doit s'étendre à toutes ses formes, tant économiques que politiques, de sorte que l'on parvienne rapidement à l'indépendance, et pas seulement d'une manière formelle, mais d'une manière réelle et complète. Le colonialisme doit être définitivement liquidé dans le plus bref délai; l'indépendance est une nécessité urgente, mais elle ne doit pas être purement nominale; elle ne doit pas être un rideau à l'abri duquel les mêmes influences étrangères, connues pour être ouvertement colonialistes, pourront continuer à s'exercer en secret.

22. Ce sont ces considérations qui forment la charpente, pour ainsi dire, de notre position devant le problème de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, notamment en Afrique.

23. On se souviendra que la Déclaration proclame que la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales. La Déclaration affirme en outre que tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique et poursuivent librement leur développement économique, social et culturel.

24. Néanmoins, que constatons-nous un an après l'adoption de cette déclaration? Il reste encore 88 territoires qui ne sont toujours pas complètement indépendants et parmi eux, comme je viens de le dire, environ 70 territoires habituellement désignés comme "territoires non autonomes" et ayant une population totale d'environ 70 millions d'habitants. Rien qu'en Afrique il existe 27 de ces territoires, avec environ 50 millions d'habitants. Comme je l'ai mentionné il y a un instant, seul le Sierra Leone, au cours de l'année dernière, a en fait accédé à l'indépendance, encore que quelques autres territoires doivent en faire autant dans un avenir immédiat.

25. Manifestement, les progrès dans ce sens ne s'accomplissent pas au rythme qui était prévu lorsque l'Assemblée a proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Ce n'est pas ce que l'on escomptait lorsque l'Assemblée demandait que des mesures immédiates fussent prises pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples des territoires qui n'avaient pas encore accédé à l'indépendance.

26. Je voudrais définir clairement la position du Ghana. L'Assemblée elle-même a déclaré que le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne devait jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance. Cela signifie que tout ce qui reste à faire, c'est de régler les modalités et les procédures du transfert des pouvoirs aux peuples dépendants, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés et sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur.

27. Nous ne croyons pas, comme on l'a suggéré, que cette formule entraîne nécessairement la remise du pouvoir entre les mains de gouvernements ou de groupes minoritaires existants. Elle signifie que les pouvoirs doivent être transférés conformément à la volonté et aux vœux librement exprimés des peuples intéressés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur. Elle ne signifie pas que le peuple doit être empêché d'accéder à l'indépendance sous prétexte qu'il manque de formation ou qu'il n'a pas de possibilités économiques. L'indépendance, dans notre esprit, est une valeur spirituelle, un droit; il n'est guère en accord avec la dignité humaine de dire qu'un peuple ne peut pas accéder à l'indépendance parce qu'il manque de ressources matérielles lui permettant de subvenir à ses besoins, ou parce qu'il n'a pas assez de fonctionnaires qualifiés pour constituer une administration, ou encore parce qu'il n'a pas assez de techniciens pour monter des industries. Ma délégation ne pense pas que l'indépendance soit en quoi que ce soit une question de "maturité". Nous croyons que les problèmes qui se posent actuellement au Congo, par exemple, sont dus à la subversion impérialiste et non au manque de capacité des Congolais à se gouverner eux-mêmes.

28. Nous ne prétendons pas que les problèmes disparaissent dès que les pays accèdent à l'indépendance et que les nouveaux pays indépendants n'aient pas à faire face à des problèmes encore plus importants et encore plus difficiles à résoudre; au contraire, leur incapacité à subvenir à leurs besoins, le fossé qui se creuse entre leurs aspirations légitimes et les ressources insuffisantes dont ils disposent, tant sur le plan matériel que sur le plan humain, tant en qualité qu'en quantité, cela constitue nécessairement un problème. Certes, on peut apporter une solution à ce problème en établissant des liens avec des puissances plus riches, plus fortes et plus développées; il peut alors se faire, et c'est là le danger de cette solution, que ces puissances se paient de cette protection et de cette assistance en incorporant les pays qui en bénéficient dans leur zone d'influence; une telle solution constitue, il n'est pas besoin de le dire, l'élément de base du néo-colonialisme, dont j'ai déjà parlé, et n'a évidemment absolument rien qui puisse inciter à la recommander.

29. La seule solution valable, la seule qui tienne compte des idéaux exprimés dans la Déclaration, est celle d'une assistance collective fournie à ces Etats nouveaux par l'intermédiaire des Nations Unies ou d'institutions régionales créées à cette fin. Nous, Ghanéens, nous ne condamnons pas une coopération amicale et loyale entre l'ancienne puissance administrante et le nouveau pays indépendant, pas plus que nous ne dénisons à chaque Etat le droit de conclure comme bon lui semble des accords ou arrangements bilatéraux d'assistance. Mais s'il est vrai, comme le recommande la Déclaration, que le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance, alors la coopération et l'assistance sous des auspices internationaux constituent la seule manière d'éviter que les bénéficiaires ne deviennent des Etats-clients ou qu'ils ne soient incorporés à l'un des camps qui se livrent à la guerre froide.

30. C'est là où la question "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance" devient particulièrement importante. Ma délégation n'est pas opposée à ce que l'on parvienne à l'indépendance d'une manière ordonnée et pacifique. Mais cela ne doit pas être pris comme prétexte d'un retard. Si, comme je l'ai dit, il existe certaines insuffisances, matérielles ou humaines, qui risquent de soulever un problème ou une difficulté pour l'accession à l'indépendance, on peut et l'on doit y remédier en élaborant maintenant un énergique et audacieux programme d'assistance. L'existence de ce programme n'est pas et ne peut pas être une condition préalable à l'indépendance; elle doit accompagner l'accession à l'indépendance et se poursuivre après elle.

31. La Déclaration proclame aussi qu'il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression dirigées contre les peuples dépendants pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète. Rapprochez cela de la situation en Angola et vous aurez un tableau d'horreur. Depuis deux ans, on ne cesse de s'y livrer à des représailles massives pour étouffer le mouvement de libération nationale, on y prend encore des mesures impitoyables d'extermination qui équivalent à un génocide et des dizaines de milliers d'Angolais ont été tués. La situation dans les autres territoires portugais d'Afrique n'est pas plus brillante: on y pratique toujours un travail forcé quitte de l'esclavage, ainsi qu'un racisme de la pire espèce, contraire au comportement traditionnel des Portugais, et le sort de l'homme ordinaire y est même pire qu'en Afrique du Sud.

32. On n'insistera jamais assez sur le fait que c'est là une violation flagrante de la Déclaration et les amis et alliés du Portugal portent une lourde responsabilité dans cette affaire. Ma délégation traitera ce sujet plus en détail lors de la discussion des questions relatives à l'Angola et au refus du Portugal de se plier aux exigences de la Charte. Je ne ferai maintenant que citer les paroles du Président du Ghana s'adressant à l'Assemblée à la quinzième session:

"... le vent qui souffle en Afrique n'est pas un vent quelconque. C'est un ouragan furieux, et ni le Portugal ni aucune autre puissance coloniale d'ailleurs n'est en mesure d'empêcher l'ouragan furieux du nationalisme africain de souffler dans les colonies opprimées et tyrannisées." [869ème séance plénière, par. 48.]

33. Aussi la délégation du Ghana fait-elle appel au Portugal pour qu'il ne s'obstine pas dans sa décision aveugle de s'opposer aux revendications légitimes des peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise, qui aspirent à l'indépendance. Que le Portugal cesse de se dresser contre l'Afrique tout entière au sujet de l'indépendance de l'Angola et des autres territoires coloniaux portugais et qu'il mette en œuvre en Angola, au Mozambique et dans les autres colonies portugaises une politique conforme à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et au Chapitre XI de la Charte.

34. Plus au sud, au Sud-Ouest africain, le caractère effroyable de l'administration sud-africaine a récemment été mis en lumière et décrit dans un rapport spécial du Comité du Sud-Ouest africain [A/4926]. Les sévices intolérables infligés à la population africaine et la politique d'apartheid largement pratiquée ont été exposés de manière détaillée. Comment peut-on s'attendre à ce que nous nous contentions de faire des déclarations, alors que dans un territoire comme celui-là les populations autochtones sont totalement privées de tous droits politiques et civiques, ne sont considérées que comme une source de main-d'œuvre à bon marché, ne reçoivent aucune part des profits tirés du commerce, de l'industrie et de l'agriculture, et sont traitées sur leur propre terre comme des parias auxquels on refuse jusqu'à la consolation que pourrait leur procurer l'instruction?

35. Dans un rapport ultérieur [A/4957], le même Comité énonce cette conclusion: "La politique, les méthodes et les mesures appliquées pour l'administration du territoire ont été en contradiction avec les buts et les principes du Mandat, comme avec la Charte des Nations Unies et les idées éclairées de l'humanité." Aucun des appels lancés en faveur d'une évolution et d'une réforme n'a été entendu, et l'Afrique du Sud continue de manière flagrante à ne tenir aucun compte de l'opinion mondiale et à refuser aux Nations Unies le droit de connaître son administration. Que l'Afrique du Sud ne soit absolument pas digne d'administrer le Territoire du Sud-Ouest africain n'a certainement pas à être plus amplement prouvé; la seule solution possible consiste à transférer effectivement les pouvoirs aux habitants du Territoire et à fournir par l'intermédiaire des Nations Unies une assistance suffisante pour les aider à maintenir leur indépendance. La délégation du Ghana continuera à faire pression sur l'Afrique du Sud, tant dans le domaine juridique que sur le plan politique, jusqu'à ce que les aspirations légitimes du peuple du Sud-Ouest africain soient pleinement réalisées.

36. L'Algérie est aussi un territoire où s'exerce une action répressive pour étouffer le combat juste et nécessaire que mène le peuple algérien pour la liberté, l'autodétermination et l'indépendance, ainsi que l'intégrité du territoire national. Cette guerre sans signification que la France poursuit depuis huit ans en Algérie est une menace pour la paix et la sécurité du monde et a été condamnée à juste titre par l'ensemble du monde civilisé. Mon gouvernement ne peut que considérer comme un acte d'hostilité contre l'Afrique toute assistance fournie à la France directement ou indirectement par l'intermédiaire de l'Organisation du Traité de l'Atlantique nord. A maintes reprises, les Nations Unies ont demandé qu'il soit mis fin à cette guerre tragique et à sa quinzième session l'Assemblée, dans une résolution [1573 (XV)], a non seulement reconnu le droit du peuple algérien à l'indépendance et à la libre détermination sur la base de l'unité et de l'intégrité territoriale de l'Algérie, mais a aussi reconnu que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a la responsabilité de contribuer à ce que ce droit sacré soit mis en œuvre.

37. Cependant, la situation se détériore rapidement, entraînant des souffrances terribles et des pertes de vies humaines. Presque chaque jour, des dépêches de presse nous informent que des actes de violence et de barbarie sont perpétrés contre des Algériens sans armes. Il est donc plus urgent que jamais de n'épargner aucun effort pour chercher à ce problème une solution rapide et pacifique. Heureusement, la France admet elle-même maintenant que l'Algérie doit nécessairement être indépendante; heureusement aussi, certains signes montrent que la France ne considère plus l'autodétermination de l'Algérie comme une solution de désespoir excluant la coopération, mais comme une solution raisonnable qui pourra servir de base à de nouvelles et fructueuses relations. La France reconnaît aussi que pas un Algérien ne cessera de revendiquer la souveraineté algérienne sur le Sahara et que les habitants du Sahara sont décidés à être Algériens. Dans ce contexte, le moins que puisse faire l'Assemblée, en tenant compte de ses responsabilités permanentes telles qu'elles ont été définies à la quinzième session, est de recommander la reprise de négociations loyales et positives avec pour but la conclusion d'un accord sur le principe, les modalités et le calendrier de l'indépendance, ainsi que la conclusion d'un cessez-le-feu. Par la suite, des négociations pourront aussi être menées pour définir les relations entre la France et l'Algérie, pour accorder des garanties à la population française d'Algérie.

38. Les nouvelles concernant la situation en Algérie sont mauvaises. Ma délégation est fermement convaincue que M. Ben Bella, vice-président du Gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne, et d'autres détenus devraient être libérés afin de détendre l'atmosphère en vue de négociations adéquates et efficaces menant à une solution définitive et sans équivoque pour l'indépendance du peuple algérien. Il faut que l'on cesse d'immoler la jeunesse de France et d'Algérie. Le Ghana fait appel à la France pour qu'elle respecte la Déclaration de la résolution 1514 (XV) et qu'elle s'y conforme.

39. La situation dans ce qu'on appelle les territoires de la Haute Commission en Afrique australe continue aussi à être une cause de grand mécontentement. Le principe du suffrage universel n'a été appliqué dans aucun de ces territoires. Au Soudan, la moitié environ des membres de la nouvelle législature doivent être élus par les colons blancs, qui sont seulement au nombre de 10 000 sur une population totale de 250 000 habitants. Au Bassoutoland, les membres élus sont encore en minorité et au Betchoualand les 380 000 Africains ont 10 représentants au Conseil législatif alors que les 3 000 Européens ont aussi 10 représentants, et le reste des sièges est réparti entre un groupe de fonctionnaires européens et des membres nommés par le gouvernement. Si c'est là tout ce que le Royaume-Uni peut montrer en fait de progrès constitutionnels accomplis au cours de ses 70 années de présence, alors il est manifeste que l'Organisation doit y prêter attention et en prendre note. Ma délégation pense que des mesures positives devraient être prises immédiatement pour appliquer, en ce qui concerne ces territoires de la Haute Commission, la déclaration de la résolution 1514 (XV) et notamment le paragraphe 5 qui stipule:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

40. Je n'ai pas l'intention d'entreprendre l'examen de tous les territoires d'Afrique qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance complète. Si je me suis quelque peu appesanti sur cette question des territoires africains, c'est parce que c'est en Afrique que subsiste encore le principal bastion de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme. Aussi, avec votre permission, je ferai quelques observations sur la situation en Afrique centrale.

41. Il semble, à considérer la récente évolution constitutionnelle dans les Rhodésies, que l'on s'efforce résolument de faire de cette région une autre Afrique du Sud. Les leaders africains du Nyassaland et des Rhodésies ont exprimé leur opposition au maintien de la Fédération sous sa forme actuelle, mais il n'en sera pas tenu compte tant que les changements constitutionnels proposés dans chacun des territoires n'auront pas été arrêtés. Or, ils ne sont pas près de l'être. En Rhodésie du Nord, aucun signe ne montre que sera tenue la promesse que contenait le rapport établi en 1960 par la Commission Monckton^{1/}, qui recommandait le transfert des pouvoirs à la majorité africaine dès que possible; pourtant, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni s'était engagé à donner suite aux grandes recommandations de ladite commission. Au lieu de cela, on a essayé d'élaborer des plans de compromis, par exemple le plan McLeod et les recommandations de Hone, qui ont été rejetées par les dirigeants africains. De plus, en ce qui concerne le droit de vote, des complications sans fin ont surgi, qui semblent faites plus pour tourner que pour respecter les principes démocratiques, ce qui est au détriment de la majorité africaine.

42. En Rhodésie du Sud également, les leaders africains ont rejeté les nouvelles propositions constitutionnelles qu'ils jugeaient complètement inacceptables, "mises au point par des blancs pour des blancs" et "un déni choquant des droits fondamentaux de l'homme et une insulte aux principes de la démocratie". La validité du référendum qui a eu lieu sur ces propositions est douteuse, non seulement parce qu'à la base le vote a été faussé en faveur des colons, mais aussi parce qu'à en croire les rapports et les plaintes émanant des dirigeants africains, s'il n'y avait pas eu ce que le Times de Londres a appelé "une campagne honteuse", les résultats auraient probablement été différents. Ainsi, ces nouvelles mesures ont été qualifiées de farce permettant à une minorité de continuer à exercer des prérogatives qui appartiennent à la majorité ou à l'ensemble de la population.

43. Au Nyassaland, le tableau est moins décourageant, mais il faut espérer que l'on établira bientôt une constitution révisée conformément aux vœux du parti africain majoritaire. Nous sommes également heureux d'apprendre qu'au Kenya l'on prévoit pour le début de l'année prochaine, ou plus tôt, comme le suggèrent les nationalistes africains, une conférence constitutionnelle en vue de l'autonomie complète et de l'indépendance; nous voulons naturellement espérer qu'une fois ces dispositions arrêtées, les élections se feront sur la base du suffrage universel. En outre, nous demandons instamment à la puissance administrante de tout faire pour encourager un rapprochement et un accord entre les grands partis au sujet des principes fondamentaux de la constitution. Nous intercédons de la sorte car nombreux sont ceux — nous ne sommes pas forcément de leur avis — qui soupçonnent la puissance administrante de se servir de l'un de ces partis pour retarder l'accord et ainsi l'indépendance. Nous ne partageons pas ces soupçons, mais ils sont fort répandus. Nous insistons aussi sur le fait que le maintien de la base militaire du Royaume-Uni dans le Territoire ne doit pas faire l'objet d'un marchandage dans les négociations pour l'indépendance; nous préférierions certes voir cette question liquidée tout de suite, mais nous reconnaissons également que le Territoire aura le droit de prendre lui-même les décisions qui s'imposeront lorsqu'il accèdera à l'indépendance; ce qui est sûr, c'est que cela ne doit pas constituer un élément de l'accord global concernant l'indépendance.

44. Comme je l'ai déjà dit au cours de la déclaration que j'ai faite l'an dernier devant la Première Commission:

"Il importe — en ce qui concerne l'Afrique centrale et orientale — de souligner ce point des droits de la majorité. On nous accuse souvent de nationalisme noir, de racisme à rebours, voire de communisme. C'est se méprendre entièrement. Nous autres, Africains, nous nous préoccupons davantage des droits fondamentaux de l'homme que de pigmentation de l'épiderme ou d'idéologie. Nous nous considérons comme faisant partie de la grande communauté humaine dans laquelle l'homme en tant que tel, sans égard à la couleur de son épiderme ou à l'idéologie qu'il professe, est le facteur décisif^{2/}."

45. Cependant, nous ne sommes pas sans nous rendre compte des difficultés. Il y a bien entendu ce problème d'ordre général: des minorités de race, de langue, de couleur ou de religion différentes ont tendance à redouter la domination de la majorité. Mais ces craintes peuvent être apaisées grâce à des garanties constitutionnelles et juridiques acceptables pour les représentants dûment élus au suffrage universel. Un problème plus important, mais non insoluble, réside dans le fait que puisque ce sont les Européens qui détiennent le monopole de l'éducation, des connaissances professionnelles et des capitaux, c'est l'activité européenne qui soutient en fait la vie économique de régions comme le Kenya et ce qu'on appelle la Fédération d'Afrique centrale. On peut résoudre ce problème en offrant à toutes les races les mêmes possibilités en matière d'éducation et d'acquisition de connaissances professionnelles et autres moyens leur permettant d'être armées pour l'existence.

46. Pour notre part, nous avons insisté aux diverses conférences africaines pour que le transfert des pouvoirs politiques se fasse par étapes, c'est-à-dire pour que l'on fixe une date précise pour une proche accession à l'indépendance, et nous avons fait appel aux puissances administrantes pour qu'elles prennent rapidement des mesures permettant de mettre en œuvre les dispositions de la Charte et de réaliser les aspirations politiques des peuples, à savoir l'autodétermination et l'indépendance.

47. A notre avis, ces mesures devraient comprendre un programme considérablement accéléré et étendu d'éducation et de formation technique, de nouvelles possibilités offertes systématiquement aux Africains dans le domaine de l'agriculture et de l'industrie, ainsi qu'une participation rapidement accrue des Africains à la vie politique de leur pays. En prenant de telles mesures, on rétablirait ce qui, à notre avis, manque le plus dans les sociétés pluralistes d'Afrique: la confiance et l'espoir de la majorité africaine.

48. Puis-je me permettre maintenant de faire quelques observations au sujet du paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, dans lequel il est dit que:

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

49. Le problème du Katanga constitue un cas de ce genre. Des tentatives déplorables et malintentionnées continuent à être faites par ceux qui possèdent des intérêts dans le pays pour soutenir le régime fantoche de M. Tshombé, de qui on se sert pour diviser la République du Congo (Léopoldville) au moyen d'activités sécessionnistes. La République du Congo est, aux yeux de ma délégation, une et indivisible et les Nations Unies doivent faire de leur mieux pour que ces intrigues inspirées par l'impérialisme cessent de lui faire tort. Ma délégation aura l'occasion d'exprimer son opinion en détail lors de la discussion de la question, mais nous insistons sur ce point: les Nations Unies doivent aider autant qu'elles le peuvent le Gouvernement central de la République du Congo dans ses efforts pour maintenir l'intégrité territoriale du Congo tout entier.

50. Cette assistance sera conforme à la résolution du Conseil de sécurité en date du 14 juillet 1960^{3/} adoptée lorsque le Premier Ministre de la République du Congo (Léopoldville) le regretté Patrice Lumumba, qui fut assassiné de sang-froid, avait lancé un appel aux Nations Unies pour qu'elles l'aident à sauvegarder la paix, l'ordre et la souveraineté de la République du Congo. La délégation du Ghana insiste sur un deuxième point: les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité relatives à la situation dans la République du Congo doivent être pleinement mises en œuvre et tous les mercenaires étrangers doivent être expulsés du Katanga. En troisième lieu, nous lançons un appel à tous les Etats pour qu'ils renoncent à maintenir avec le Katanga des relations commerciales, financières et consulaires, parce que ces relations nuisent à l'intégrité territoriale de la République du Congo et sapent cette intégrité si on les entretient sans avoir consulté le Gouvernement central ou le Président de la République.

51. Le différend qui s'est élevé au sujet de l'Irian occidental ou "Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise" peut aussi être considéré comme un exemple des problèmes envisagés au paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration. Ma délégation déplore que les négociations antérieurement menées entre le Gouvernement de la République d'Indonésie et le Gouvernement néerlandais n'aient pas réussi à régler le différend.

52. La Charte de transfert de la souveraineté, comprise dans l'Accord de la Conférence de la table ronde intervenu entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie^{4/} et transférant à la République d'Indonésie la souveraineté sur ce que l'on appelait les Indes orientales néerlandaises, stipulait expressément en son article premier:

"Le Royaume des Pays-Bas transfère à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie et par là même reconnaît ladite République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie comme Etat indépendant et souverain."

53. Ainsi, c'était à la République indépendante des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie qu'était transférée la souveraineté sur l'Indonésie; mais qu'était-elle, cette Indonésie? Nul n'ignore que les Pays-Bas administraient ce qui est maintenant la République d'Indonésie et l'Irian occidental comme une seule et même colonie appelée les Indes orientales néerlandaises. On a même dit qu'après la seconde guerre mondiale le Gouvernement néerlandais désignait officiellement l'ensemble des Indes orientales néerlandaises sous le nom d'Indonésie. Cela est confirmé par le fait que, dans leur dernier rapport annuel sur l'Indonésie adressé à l'ONU en 1949, les Pays-Bas décrivaient l'Indonésie comme suit:

"... une série de groupes d'îles dans la région équatoriale s'étendant depuis le littoral asiatique jusqu'à l'Australie. Les principaux groupes d'îles sont: les grandes îles de la Sonde ... les petites îles de la Sonde ... les Moluques et la Nouvelle-Guinée située à l'ouest du 141ème degré de longitude est^{5/}."

54. Cette description géographique faite par le Gouvernement néerlandais ne laisse aucun doute: l'Irian occidental, ou Nouvelle-Guinée, fait partie d'une certaine entité géographique appelée alors les Indes orientales néerlandaises et devenue maintenant l'Indonésie.

55. Malgré les déclarations faites par des porte-parole des Pays-Bas comme le Dr Royen selon lesquelles toutes les parties étaient d'accord pour que ce qui était jusqu'alors les Indes orientales néerlandaises devînt dès que possible un Etat indépendant, les Pays-Bas maintiennent leur présence en Irian occidental en raison d'une clause échappatoire de l'article 2 de la Charte de transfert de la souveraineté. C'est là le nœud du problème. Cet article, qui a trait à la "résidence de la Nouvelle-Guinée" stipule notamment:

"Considérant qu'il n'a pas encore été possible de concilier les vues des parties relativement à la Nouvelle-Guinée, dont le sort continue donc à faire l'objet d'un différend,..." "Considérant que les parties se sont donné pour principe de résoudre par des moyens pacifiques et raisonnables tous les différends qui pourraient exister ou s'élever par la suite entre eux, ...il est décidé que le statu quo sera maintenu en ce qui concerne la Résidence de Nouvelle-Guinée, étant entendu que, dans un délai d'un an à compter de la date du transfert de la souveraineté à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie, la question du statut politique de la Nouvelle-Guinée sera réglée par voie de négociations entre la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie et le Royaume des Pays-Bas."

56. Le point de départ, donc, est l'accord auquel sont parvenus ensemble l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas, selon lequel il devait y avoir, à un certain moment, des négociations au sujet du statut de l'Irian occidental ou Nouvelle-Guinée. Toutefois, en dehors de ces considérations d'ordre juridique, mon gouvernement pense que ce différend comporte un certain nombre d'éléments politiques au sujet desquels l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit endosser franchement ses responsabilités, de sorte que l'on puisse parvenir à un règlement pacifique.

57. Mon gouvernement a étudié soigneusement les propositions contenues dans le projet de résolution [A/L.354] présenté par la délégation des Pays-Bas. En d'autres circonstances, on trouverait que ce projet de résolution est audacieux, qu'il montre une certaine imagination et qu'il va assez loin pour constituer un premier pas nécessaire vers l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale dans certains territoires non autonomes. Mais les circonstances étant ce qu'elles sont et tout en appuyant l'intervention de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans ce différend, ma délégation considère que la solution proposée par les Pays-Bas repose entièrement sur une base qui préjuge la principale question en litige, compte tenu de l'article 2 de la Charte de transfert de souveraineté, acceptée aussi bien par l'Indonésie que par les Pays-Bas. Le Territoire peut-il, en raison de considérations juridiques ou politiques, faire l'objet d'un accord de la manière qui a été proposée? S'il ne le peut pas, la solution proposée, malgré la façon admirable dont elle a été liée au principe de l'autodétermination, n'a rien à voir avec la question.

58. Ma délégation souhaite que cette question n'entraîne pas une guerre et que l'on puisse trouver une solution pacifique grâce à des négociations pacifiques; nous espérons également que l'on trouvera une base acceptable pour les deux parties, sur laquelle on puisse fonder ces négociations, qu'elles soient menées dans le cadre de l'Assemblée ou en dehors d'elle. La délégation du Ghana propose qu'un comité des bons offices, composé de cinq membres, soit nommé par le Président de l'Assemblée, avec l'accord des deux parties intéressées, afin d'entamer des négociations entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas pour régler le différend au sujet du Territoire de l'Irian occidental. Ce comité, s'il était nommé, élaborerait ses propres procédures en vue de parvenir à une solution satisfaisante pour tous les intéressés. Le Comité des bons offices ferait rapport à l'Assemblée générale soit l'an prochain, soit aussitôt que possible avant la dix-septième session, sur les progrès accomplis dans le règlement du différend.

59. Nous espérons vivement que l'on n'insistera pas pour que le projet de résolution fasse l'objet d'un vote, afin d'éviter que chacun ne se raidisse davantage sur ses positions. En fait, ma délégation demande à la délégation des Pays-Bas de retirer son projet de résolution de manière qu'un projet de résolution acceptable pour chacune des deux parties puisse être préparé et présenté. Toutefois, si le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas est mis aux voix, ma délégation se verra dans l'obligation de voter contre.

60. Il y a, certes, quelques territoires où l'on éprouve de la méfiance quant aux bienfaits de l'indépendance et à leur aptitude à se maintenir dans cette condition. Certains d'entre eux, comme les territoires de la Haute Commission en Afrique australe, dont j'ai déjà parlé, ont une superficie vraiment peu étendue, une population assez faible et une économie qui n'est pas viable. Mais, de l'avis de ma délégation, cela ne signifie pas que la Déclaration ne s'applique pas à eux. La Déclaration, pour ce qui est de ces territoires, doit, à ce qu'il nous semble, être interprétée en tenant compte de la résolution 1541 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, où il est stipulé au principe VI de l'annexe à cette résolution, que la pleine autonomie peut être atteinte non seulement quand un territoire est devenu Etat indépendant et souverain, mais aussi quand il s'est librement associé ou intégré à un Etat indépendant. Aussi, tant que l'on parvient à une telle association ou à une telle intégration à la suite d'un choix exprimé librement, de plein gré et démocratiquement, et sur la base d'une égalité totale, de préférence sous les auspices des Nations Unies, alors l'application de la Déclaration ne doit pas nécessairement préjuger ni exclure ces possibilités autres que la condition d'Etat indépendant et souverain.

61. Ce sont ces considérations qui ont guidé ma délégation lorsque nous avons examiné les questions que discute actuellement l'Assemblée. Il résulte de ces considérations que, quelle que soit la façon dont l'Assemblée décide de considérer le problème de l'application de la Déclaration, il est manifestement nécessaire de créer un comité spécial pour examiner les progrès de cette application dans tous les territoires non autonomes et sous tutelle et autres territoires qui ne sont pas encore complètement indépendants; ce comité serait également chargé de faire rapport sur ces progrès et de soumettre des recommandations à ce sujet. En ce qui concerne l'Afrique, nous estimons, tout bien pesé, que le comité devrait, avec la coopération des puissances administrantes, des chefs nationalistes et des représentants élus, mettre au point les détails précis de la mise en application immédiate de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, en tenant pleinement compte des aspirations librement exprimées des habitants. Le processus de remise des pouvoirs ne peut prendre guère plus d'un an, si les puissances administrantes sont de bonne foi et si les dirigeants africains le veulent.

62. La délégation du Ghana pense que tous les territoires africains non indépendants doivent le devenir sans retard et nous faisons appel à toutes les puissances pour qu'elles considèrent sans rancœur partisane la question de l'application de la Déclaration que l'Assemblée a adoptée l'an dernier, qui est péremptoire, à laquelle on ne peut déroger et qui ne souffre aucun retard. Elle affirme la confiance en la capacité de tous les peuples, en Afrique comme ailleurs, à diriger eux-mêmes leurs affaires. Elle répare une injustice qui a été infligée à l'Afrique dans le passé. En vérité, si l'Afrique était un continent oublié en 1946, au moment où a été promulguée la Charte des Nations Unies, la Déclaration, en demandant qu'il soit mis fin immédiatement au régime colonial dans tous les territoires qui ne sont pas encore indépendants, a rétabli l'équilibre. C'est pour cela que la Déclaration doit être appliquée sans réserve ni retard. C'est pour cela que les territoires non indépendants d'Afrique ne peuvent attendre longtemps avant d'accéder à l'indépendance et c'est pour cela qu'on ne doit pas tenter d'embrouiller la question d'un programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance de l'Afrique avec des querelles hors de propos et des attitudes condescendantes.

63. Nous demandons à l'Assemblée d'adopter des résolutions mettant sur pied, un dispositif approprié pour l'application immédiate de la Déclaration de la résolution 1514 (XV). Ma délégation n'appuiera aucun projet de résolution traitant de l'indépendance de l'Afrique qui ne serait pas conforme à cette déclaration de l'an dernier. Les objectifs sont bien définis. Attelons-nous donc à la tâche pour liquider immédiatement le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

M. Nosek (Tchécoslovaquie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

64. M. FLORES AVENDAÑO (Guatemala) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Je tiens en premier lieu à rendre hommage au distingué représentant qui vient de quitter la tribune pour le magnifique discours qu'il a prononcé, car il a fait du problème du colonialisme un examen complet qui peut guider parfaitement le jugement de l'Assemblée. Je voudrais seulement faire une synthèse, exprimer une opinion et réaffirmer un espoir.

65. Nous discutons en ce moment les points 22 et 88 de l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée, qui sont d'une importance primordiale pour le maintien de la paix et découlent de la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée à sa quinzième session. Essentiellement, il ne s'agit de rien de moins que de la libération de millions d'êtres humains. Le représentant du Ghana, qui vient de quitter cette tribune, a affirmé avec raison que la question présentait pour le continent africain une importance égale à celle que présente la Charte pour les Nations Unies. Tout récemment [1052ème séance], le représentant de la Birmanie a dit à ce propos qu'un coup de clairon sonnait et qu'il fallait espérer que toutes les nations seraient touchées par le sentiment de l'urgence de cet appel et y répondraient. C'est pourquoi la délégation du Guatemala, fidèle à la position anticolonialiste qui a toujours été la sienne, désire faire entendre sa voix à cette tribune.

66. Dans un discours prononcé devant l'Assemblée le 28 septembre dernier [1019ème séance], le Ministre des relations extérieures de mon pays a fait savoir d'une manière claire et catégorique que le Guatemala condamne avec la plus grande énergie le colonialisme et la discrimination raciale. Je dois aussi rappeler que le général Miguel Ydigoras Fuentes, président de la République du Guatemala, dans une déclaration qui a été portée à la connaissance des représentants permanents auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, a condamné la politique dite de l'apartheid en ces termes: "La discrimination raciale n'est rien de moins qu'un esclavage déguisé."

67. En vérité, parler de colonialisme et de discrimination raciale, c'est parler d'esclavage. Les groupements d'hommes qui ne peuvent exprimer librement leurs opinions, qui n'ont pas le droit de s'associer en partis politiques pour examiner les problèmes qui ont trait à l'administration des affaires publiques, qui ne peuvent porter un jugement sur la conduite de leurs dirigeants, qui ne peuvent faire usage du droit de vote pour élire des autorités et un gouvernement selon leurs aspirations et leurs coutumes, qui ne peuvent enfin exploiter librement et à leur profit les ressources de leur territoire et qui sont en outre soumis à un cruel régime de travail à salaires dérisoires, ces hommes, dis-je, sont des esclaves.

68. Il est incroyable qu'à notre époque de nombreux pays et des millions d'êtres humains soient privés de leurs libertés fondamentales. Il ne fait aucun doute que la crise actuelle qui menace de détruire notre civilisation est une crise des valeurs humaines. Elle est peut-être la conséquence logique de la prédominance du pouvoir politique et des progrès terribles de la science, appliqués à subjuguier les peuples au mépris du destin spirituel de l'homme. En un mot, c'est la négation de la liberté et l'absence de la justice.

69. Le processus historique du colonialisme n'est autre chose que l'évolution historique des peuples. Le phénomène sociologique de la croissance et de l'accumulation des éléments du pouvoir a permis, dans l'Antiquité, à certains peuples d'en soumettre d'autres, ce qui a donné lieu à ce qu'on a appelé "les guerres de conquête", dont la suite naturelle a été la colonisation.

70. Il serait lassant d'exposer dans le détail ce processus historique, d'autant plus que d'éminents orateurs l'ont déjà fait à cette tribune d'une manière admirable. Ils nous ont dit ce qui s'est passé au cours des millénaires. Il nous suffit donc de dire que si, dans l'Antiquité, le système colonial pouvait trouver sa justification dans le fait qu'il était appliqué à des milieux dont l'organisation sociale primitive et l'absence de valeurs spirituelles assuraient la domination de ceux qui cultivaient ces valeurs, amélioreraient cette organisation et accumulaient des éléments de travail et de puissance, en ces temps-ci, au niveau auquel nous vivons à notre époque, à la lumière du droit et des exigences d'une science et d'une technique qui progressent à pas de géant, le système colonial ne peut plus se concevoir. Je puis affirmer du haut de cette tribune que ce système est répudié universellement et que le désir est vif de parvenir à sa prompte liquidation.

71. Le continent américain, lui aussi, a souffert des guerres de conquête et est passé par le processus cruel de la colonisation. Mais le bilan a été dressé et le solde est favorable. Il est favorable parce que la puissance colonisatrice, l'immortelle Espagne, a répandu sur les terres d'Amérique la semence de sa race et y a mêlé les richesses de son sang ardent.

72. Grâce à des capitaines audacieux, des marins intrépides, de savants géographes, des chroniqueurs remarquables, des écrivains habiles et de saints prédicateurs, la colonisation a eu pour conséquence primordiale de donner naissance à une souche nouvelle, la race indo-espagnole, qui, à travers le long processus de domination coloniale et de luttes pour l'indépendance, a toujours maintenu haut l'étendard de la dignité humaine et de la liberté de l'homme. Cette race indo-espagnole est représentée aujourd'hui par 20 nations, compte 200 millions d'êtres humains et, par sa culture, par son progrès, par son organisation, est maintenant d'un grand poids dans les destinées du monde.

73. Comment pourrions-nous ne pas être heureux d'accueillir à l'Assemblée de nouveaux Etats indépendants? Comment pourrions-nous ne pas souhaiter pour le continent africain un destin tel que celui que connaît notre Amérique?

74. Cependant, nous devons dire que le colonialisme n'a pas été liquidé sur notre continent. Des puissances extra-continentales occupent encore des territoires américains, occupation qui a été réalisée et maintenue par l'usage de la force, l'abus du pouvoir et au mépris du droit. L'Amérique a le ferme espoir que, si la Charte des Nations Unies reste en vigueur, le colonialisme sera bientôt totalement liquidé sur son territoire aussi. Lors de la neuvième Conférence internationale américaine tenue à Bogota en 1948, l'Organisation des Etats américains a déclaré que le processus de l'indépendance américaine ne serait pas considéré comme terminé tant que ne seraient pas chassés de son territoire les régimes coloniaux qui s'y maintiennent. Afin d'arriver à des solutions rapides et d'accélérer ce processus de liquidation, cette conférence a créé la Commission américaine de territoires non autonomes et l'a chargée de rechercher les moyens appropriés pour restituer à leurs propriétaires légitimes les territoires occupés et libérer notre continent du système anachronique et humiliant du colonialisme.

75. Les puissances coloniales actuelles, grâce à leurs ressources économiques et même à leurs moyens militaires, imposent un régime qui maintient une distinction insultante entre les ressortissants de la métropole et les habitants des colonies, refusant à ces derniers les droits et possibilités qui sont réservés aux premiers. Devant la censure universelle que suscite cette conduite répréhensible, ces puissances se targuent d'être en train d'éduquer les colonies pour l'exercice de la liberté et de la démocratie et font beaucoup de propagande autour des sommes investies et des résultats atteints pour élever le niveau de vie et de culture des peuples colonisés.

76. Cependant, la délégation du Guatemala prétend qu'il n'est pas possible d'enseigner l'exercice de la liberté dans le cadre de systèmes de répression qui offensent gravement la dignité de l'homme et qui restreignent la jouissance des dons essentiels de la vie. Il est impossible que l'arbre fécond de la liberté puisse prospérer dans un tel climat.

77. C'est pourquoi ma délégation a écouté avec la plus grande sympathie les idées intéressantes exprimées par tous les orateurs qui ont traité la question à cette tribune, en particulier celles qui ont trait à la recherche des modalités d'une liquidation rapide du colonialisme, sans ingérences, sans dangers et sans attermolements préjudiciables.

78. Le chemin parcouru est riche en enseignements. Notre assemblée universelle a déjà une grande expérience en ce qui concerne la forme la plus appropriée que doit revêtir une action propre à obtenir des résultats satisfaisants. Nous devons espérer avec confiance que la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée aura les conséquences les plus rapides et les plus favorables, et, grâce à cette expérience, une année peut succéder à l'autre en préparant des fruits magnifiques pour l'année suivante, jusqu'à l'année de la liquidation définitive du colonialisme. Cette année-là, les Nations Unies auront écrit une page ineffaçable de leur histoire car alors le soleil brillera également pour tout le genre humain. Si l'espoir est le temps en marche, nous sommes fondés à croire que les Nations Unies auront bientôt écrit cette page magnifique de leur histoire.

79. On a aussi parlé ici du néo-colonialisme. Le représentant du Ghana qui vient de quitter la tribune a voulu prendre comme exemple, si j'ai bien compris, les événements du Katanga pour montrer les caractéristiques de ce que l'on appelle le néo-colonialisme. Peut-être ne pourrait-on donner une définition concrète exacte de ce néo-colonialisme, mais il y a là un exemple qui pourrait éclairer le jugement de qui chercherait à se renseigner sur un problème aussi intéressant.

80. Cependant, il est un autre genre de colonialisme dont le représentant du Royaume-Uni a longuement parlé dans son discours d'hier. Il a dit qu'il y avait des peuples subjugués, il a cité des cas précis, il a expliqué le processus qui a été suivi, il a donné le nombre de millions d'êtres humains assujettis et le nombre de millions de kilomètres carrés occupés, et il a aussi expressément mentionné un empire qui a eu un penchant pour le colonialisme depuis l'époque des tsars: il a parlé de l'Union soviétique. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a poursuivi en disant que là où il y a des soldats qui gardent les habitants pour les empêcher de s'en aller et non pour défendre leurs frontières, là il n'y a pas de liberté, là se trouve l'assujettissement. Là aussi il peut y avoir un néo-colonialisme.

81. Si un représentant est tenu de dire la vérité, alors ces choses-là doivent être dites aussi. Je ne le fais pas afin d'adresser d'amères critiques à l'Union soviétique. Cependant, je puis dire que lorsque, le matin, je m'achemine vers ce lieu de travail et que je vois sur la place des Nations Unies la ligne des drapeaux qui ornent l'entrée, il m'arrive parfois de penser, quand ils sont agités par le vent, qu'en eux palpite le cœur du monde; mais à peine ai-je tourné le coin à gauche pour gagner l'entrée de la salle de l'Assemblée que je vois d'autres drapeaux, en berne ceux-là, mélancoliques, tristes, sans agitation et sans vie. Que sont ces drapeaux? Ce sont ceux de peuples qui sont asservis eux aussi. Il faut souhaiter que cela disparaisse et que l'on cherche une solution honorable à ces problèmes, car si on ne le fait pas, on aura libéré l'Afrique, mais il y aura d'autres peuples qui gémiront sous le joug du néo-colonialisme.

82. Je désire également faire miennes les opinions exprimées par le représentant de Ceylan qui, dans son discours brillant et constructif [1048ème séance], a adressé un appel aux peuples pour que le problème du colonialisme ne soit pas situé au point de choc entre les grandes puissances, car il deviendrait alors un élément de plus de la guerre froide. C'est pourquoi j'estime que l'Union soviétique n'a pas le droit de fustiger le colonialisme tant qu'elle n'a pas apporté de solution au problème dont je viens de parler.

83. C'est pour suivre la voie de la liberté tracée par nos ancêtres que le Guatemala vous parle de cette tribune. En Amérique centrale, le souci de la liberté de l'homme constitue une tradition. Il suffirait pour le prouver — et pour vous faire comprendre pourquoi je me suis exprimé sur cette question avec tant de sincérité et d'émotion — que je vous cite un fait rigoureusement authentique.

84. Cela se passait dans la capitale de mon pays. L'Assemblée constituante de 1824 devait examiner la question de la libération des esclaves. L'éminent José Siméon Cañas, originaire du Salvador mais délégué ou député du district de Chimaltenango, dans la République du Guatemala — c'était aux beaux jours de la Fédération d'Amérique centrale — était gravement malade. Cependant, il rassembla toutes ses forces physiques et spirituelles et alla prendre sa place à l'Assemblée. Se dressant, il a prononcé ces paroles immortelles: "Je suis venu en me traînant et si j'avais été agonisant je serais venu agonisant pour demander la liberté des esclaves."

85. Inutile de vous dire que l'Assemblée s'est levée et a chaleureusement acclamé ce geste; alors Cañas, assisté du député guatémalien Pedro Molina, a rédigé le document qui décrétait la libération des esclaves en Amérique centrale, faisant ainsi de la Fédération d'Amérique centrale l'un des premiers pays à proclamer la libération des esclaves.

86. C'est avec ces mots que, suivant la route glorieuse tracée par nos ancêtres, je viens soutenir les motions présentées afin que la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée soit appliquée et que soient libérés tant de millions d'hommes qui gémissent dans l'esclavage. Le Guatemala le fait parce que l'Amérique centrale a toujours été le cœur de la justice et le poumon de la liberté.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

87. M. BOURGUIBA (Tunisie): Il y a bientôt un an, nous adoptions à l'unanimité une résolution [1515 (XV)] dont le texte était proclamé solennellement comme la "Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux".

88. Lorsque je parle d'unanimité, j'espère ne pas trop forcer les règles de calcul de notre assemblée, car il y a eu quelques abstentions. Mais je veux croire qu'il n'y a pas eu, de la part des délégations qui se sont abstenues, autre chose que des réserves de forme — et non pas un refus tellement honteux qu'elles auraient été forcées de camoufler leurs vrais sentiments sous ces formes, ou encore une réédition de la grande lâcheté de Ponce Pilate!

89. L'Assemblée à sa quinzième session a couronné ainsi l'admission de nombreux pays sortant de l'ère coloniale en proclamant la nécessité de mettre rapidement fin au colonialisme où qu'il sévit.

90. Cette déclaration — fruit de l'initiative de la délégation de l'Union soviétique^{6/} — devait trouver immédiatement l'occasion de se concrétiser dans une certaine mesure grâce à la proposition d'étude d'un programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance et le développement de l'Afrique présentée par la délégation des Etats-Unis^{7/}. Ces initiatives devaient donner encore plus d'emphasis à l'Année de l'Afrique, et nous avons été heureux à l'époque de rendre hommage à leurs promoteurs. Malheureusement, les débats de la quinzième session ne devaient pas permettre, du fait de leur longueur, de mener à son terme la discussion sur le second projet, et seule la Première Commission eut à en connaître.

91. La présente session devait donc s'inquiéter du sort de ces deux initiatives, à savoir, d'une part, étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et, d'autre part, continuer l'étude du programme relatif à l'Afrique.

92. A ce propos, ma délégation se félicite de voir que la partie politique de ce dernier point a été jugée de la compétence de l'Assemblée réunie en séance plénière et nous nous félicitons aussi de la jonction des deux débats, car le second point est le meilleur exemple, la meilleure illustration que l'on puisse trouver pour discuter utilement du premier point.

93. En effet, l'Afrique offre malheureusement un grand nombre de sujets d'inquiétude, et, sous toutes ses latitudes, le sang coule du fait d'une incompréhensible cécité politique et morale qui pousse encore certains pays à refuser de reconnaître la réalité pourtant chaque jour plus tangible, à refuser non point de précéder le courant de l'histoire — ce serait trop leur demander peut-être — mais tout au moins de s'y résigner et de le suivre.

94. Notre débat est trop clair pour qu'il nécessite de ma part de longs développements qui ne seraient qu'une redite — moins éloquente — des interventions des distingués collègues qui m'ont précédé à cette tribune.

95. Je m'efforcerai donc d'exposer brièvement les vues de mon gouvernement. Pour ce faire, je passerai rapidement en revue la situation telle qu'elle se présente en cette fin d'année 1961, un an après la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960. Je me permettrai d'en tirer les conclusions qui m'amèneront à formuler quelques suggestions. Ainsi, je crois pouvoir joindre utilement les deux points de l'ordre du jour qui nous occupent présentement.

96. Il y a quelques jours, le peuple algérien entrait dans la huitième année de sa guerre de libération. Deux semaines plus tôt, on assistait à Paris, à l'occasion d'une manifestation pacifique protestant contre un traitement discriminatoire, à une "ratonnade", cette hideuse chasse à la peau brune qui a fait honte — et ceci pour son honneur — à l'opinion française. Depuis le 1er novembre, plusieurs milliers d'Algériens détenus en France ont amorcé une grève de la faim dans le but d'obtenir le seul traitement qui convienne à leur qualité de patriotes, celui du régime politique, et pour protester contre les abus d'une administration pénitentiaire que des parlementaires français mêmes n'ont pu que condamner.

97. L'Assemblée générale a fort heureusement pris une initiative [résolution 1650 (XVI)] sur ce point particulier. Mais en même temps, on a entendu le Président de la République française parler de l'imminence de négociations entre le Gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne; est-ce là l'atmosphère propice à des entretiens fructueux? Dans ses déclarations répétées, le Gouvernement français semble adopter une ligne voisine de celle indiquée par notre Déclaration sur l'indépendance. Malheureusement, rien n'est encore venu corroborer dans les faits ces intentions déclarées.

98. Plus au sud, toujours en Afrique, le Congo continue de nous préoccuper, de nous endeuiller, du fait de l'obstination criminelle des tenants de certains intérêts qui ont réussi à trouver et à garder, Dieu sait à quel prix, une équipe de fantoches dont ils se servent comme paravent pour ériger un Katanga prétendu indépendant. La logique de leur politique ne pouvait que les amener à créer cette armée qui compte dans ses rangs des mercenaires recrutés, un peu partout où l'on trouve cette faune, particulièrement parmi les ex-coloniaux, bien entendu, tels que les anciens combattants d'Indochine, les transfuges de la guerre d'Algérie, et d'autres encore.

99. Comme on peut le constater, une solidarité de fait s'est établie entre les tenants d'une même politique, qu'elle soit pratiquée au nord ou au sud du Sahara, et que les aventuriers qui la poursuivent, soient

Français, Belges, Portugais ou Sud-Africains. L'apparition de ces maraudeurs volants, qui ont fait tant de mal au Congo, fait peser une responsabilité plus lourde encore sur les approvisionneurs. Il ne s'agit plus de conjonction d'intérêts privés ou de rêves insensés: pour que des avions à réaction puissent être vendus et passés en contrebande, il faut au moins, de la part des autorités constituées, une certaine bienveillance.

100. Depuis notre Déclaration sur l'indépendance, un nouvel incendie s'est déclaré, qui couvait et qui avait été annoncé depuis longtemps: c'est le bain de sang dans lequel les responsables portugais essaient de noyer les aspirations angolaises à la dignité. Comme cela s'est vu dans d'autres cas, on s'indigne à Lisbonne de l'immixtion dans les affaires intérieures de l'Angola, du Mozambique et d'autres territoires parce qu'ils ont été décrétés, en vertu d'un mythe prétendu juridique, "partie intégrante de la métropole". Je crois qu'il me suffira de rappeler les avatars d'une formule inspirée par le même esprit: on avait parlé, il y a quelques années, de "la France une, de Dunkerque à Tamanrasset".

101. L'Afrique du Sud, de son côté, non contente d'avoir été pratiquement expulsée du Commonwealth, persévère dans son aberration et continue d'ignorer la réalité. Sa politique d'apartheid, qui renie même certaines hypocrisies admises, lui vaudrait au moins un brevet de franchise et de cynisme si elle ne creusait la tombe de la société même qu'elle tente d'édifier. L'Afrique du Sud persiste par ailleurs à refuser d'appliquer les résolutions des Nations Unies concernant le Sud-Ouest africain. Il n'est pas nécessaire d'être une Cassandra pour annoncer à ces insensés des larmes et du sang.

102. Au Moyen-Orient, une entreprise coloniale d'un autre genre continue de bafouer la conscience humaine. L'expulsion de la plus grande partie de la population autochtone de la Palestine a été la condition qui a rendu possible la création et la survie d'un Etat artificiel dont la philosophie même est un affront aux règles de la morale internationale. Cette condition d'existence demeure puisque, il y a à peine quelques jours, le Parlement israélien votait une loi interdisant d'envisager même l'éventualité d'un retour de tout ou d'une partie des 1 200 000 réfugiés arabes — ceci au mépris des principes que les Membres de l'Organisation se sont engagés à respecter lors de leur admission.

103. L'archipel indonésien, lui aussi, souffre des séquelles de l'ère coloniale. Le Gouvernement néerlandais a décidé, à la faveur d'une réoccupation militaire partielle postérieure à la déclaration de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, que l'Irian occidental, habité par 1 p. 100 à peine de la population des anciennes Indes orientales néerlandaises, ne faisait plus partie de l'Indonésie. Nous avons entendu, il y a quelques jours [1049^{ème} séance], le représentant des Pays-Bas nous exposer les grandes lignes d'un projet que son gouvernement a proposé de suivre pour mettre en pratique la résolution [1514 (XV)] adoptée au cours de la quinzième session. Ce projet aurait droit à l'approbation chaleureuse de notre assemblée s'il ne péchait par une faiblesse qui se trouve être, de l'avis de ma délégation, assez grande pour ne plus faire de ce plan généreux qu'une simple manœuvre tendant à retenir et à garder une partie de l'ancien empire. En effet, sous prétexte de mettre en jeu le principe de l'autodétermination, le Gouvernement néerlandais essaie tout simplement d'amputer l'Indonésie d'une province. Et si nous pensons que l'autodétermination est le meilleur critère d'évolution vers le statut d'Etat émancipé, encore faut-il en tempérer l'exercice par un garde-fou, ou plutôt un "garde-manœuvre", à savoir le principe selon lequel le territoire d'un nouvel Etat indépendant doit être le même que celui qui dépendait de l'ancienne administration coloniale. C'est en vertu de l'application de ce principe même que ne se pose plus aujourd'hui, en Afrique du Nord, la question d'un Sahara autre qu'algérien. Que l'on imagine ce que donnerait l'application systématique et aveugle de l'autodétermination. Combien de nations éclateraient, qui ont des mouvements séparatistes, partout dans le monde!

104. Enfin, je voudrais faire un bref rappel des dangers que présentent les séquelles du colonialisme, non pas seulement pour l'évolution harmonieuse des pays encore dépendants, mais aussi pour les pays indépendants et même des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est à l'été dernier que je pense, et à la façon dont le Gouvernement français a fait fi de tout ce que la morale et le droit international lui imposaient comme obligation de respecter l'intégrité de mon pays, de respecter sa volonté explicite de voir son territoire évacué complètement. Je ne reviendrai pas sur l'horrible massacre qui a placé Bizerte au nombre des villes martyres de la barbarie humaine. Je dirai simplement qu'aujourd'hui, bien que les forces d'agression se soient retirées sur leurs anciennes positions, le Gouvernement français n'a pas encore fait l'ombre d'un geste pour répondre à nos manifestations de bonne volonté. Il continue à ignorer la réalité et, cependant, il ne peut pas ne pas se rendre compte que pareille attitude d'aterrissement ne peut qu'engendrer de nouvelles épreuves.

105. Le tableau est bien sombre. Malheureusement, l'abus que font les puissances coloniales de la solidarité atlantique n'est pas fait pour aider le monde occidental à rétablir une réputation ternie du fait que les mouvements de libération se font surtout contre les membres de cette alliance, auxquels l'histoire a accordé le privilège d'avoir des colonies.

106. Mon but n'est pas de faire un réquisitoire; aussi n'insisterai-je pas sur d'autres cas où malheureusement la Déclaration sur l'indépendance est restée lettre morte.

107. En sommes-nous réduits à dresser un procès-verbal de carence?

108. La Tunisie s'y refuse, bien qu'au cours de l'année 1961 elle ait eu à endurer des épreuves suffisantes pour l'aigrir et diminuer sa confiance. Cependant, elle veut trouver dans certains faits des raisons de ne pas désespérer; il y a quelques semaines, notre assemblée s'est enrichie de l'apport d'un nouveau membre: le Sierra Leone. Dans quelques jours, c'est le Tanganyika qui accédera à l'indépendance; dans quelques mois, ce sera le Samoa-Occidental. Sur un autre plan, notre organisation a su, lorsque des problèmes de principes se sont posés, prendre des décisions importantes: je rappellerai seulement le vote unanime qui a clos le débat de l'Assemblée générale à sa troisième session extraordinaire, réunie à la suite de l'agression dont mon pays a souffert l'été dernier. Et il y a quelques semaines, un coup de semonce a été adressé par notre assemblée à la délégation de l'Afrique du Sud.

109. Il y a ainsi, aux moments cruciaux, des sur-sauts qui viennent heureusement contrarier cette espèce d'équilibre qui a tendance à s'instaurer entre deux mouvements antagonistes: d'une part, le grand élan du monde vers la liberté, et plus particulièrement l'impatience toujours plus pressante des peuples dominés à se dégager des liens de sujétion; d'autre part, les réticences des pays colonisateurs, leur mauvaise foi ou tout simplement leur incapacité à s'adapter au mouvement général. Pareil déphasage a régulièrement engendré des heurts, trop souvent sanglants, dont le seul résultat a été non pas seulement de freiner la roue de l'histoire, mais de réduire les chances de coopération et d'amitié entre les peuples dans l'avenir. C'est pour faire face à cette situation qu'en 1960 notre assemblée générale avait proclamé solennellement certains principes; c'est pour donner plus de consistance à sa Déclaration qu'il nous appartient, en conclusion de nos débats, d'apporter de la chair et du sang à cette proclamation, de sorte qu'elle devienne une réalité vivante. Ce résultat ne peut être obtenu que par l'énoncé de mesures pratiques qui doivent, dans leur conception, tenir compte des expériences passées, heureuses ou malheureuses.

110. Un destin injuste, mais dont le déroulement a prouvé l'utilité, a fait que le pays que j'ai l'insigne honneur de représenter a connu toutes les phases de la lutte pour l'indépendance. Bien qu'orienté par vocation vers les méthodes de la modération et de la négociation, il a su accepter les épreuves de force lorsqu'on l'y a acculé. C'est le témoignage de trois quarts de siècle de lutte sacrée, modeste du fait des dimensions de la Tunisie, que nous offrons à nos frères d'Afrique qui souffrent encore leur calvaire; c'est le fruit d'une expérience plus brève, mais honnête, que nous offrons à nos frères qui accèdent à l'indépendance; c'est un appel solennel que nous adressons aux pays colonisateurs pour qu'ils ouvrent leurs yeux non pas seulement aux réalités de notre monde tourmenté, mais aussi à leurs intérêts bien compris, car ces nations, elles aussi, malgré leurs erreurs, malgré leurs crimes, sortent en définitive une partie de cette humanité qui se débat sur les bords d'un gouffre digne de l'apocalypse.

111. Ce danger mortel qui menace la race humaine, illustré par l'instabilité et la précarité des relations dans notre monde, est né de l'antagonisme des deux blocs, le bloc occidental et le bloc oriental, antagonisme dont l'un des résultats les plus malheureux a été de faire du tiers monde — Afrique, Asie, Amérique du Sud — l'objet d'une compétition dont il se refuse à être le trophée.

112. D'autre part, la roue de l'histoire tourne inexorablement dans le sens de la libération des peuples. Le colonialisme est condamné, non pas seulement par notre Déclaration, mais par l'histoire; c'est une constatation d'ordre presque médical. A quoi bon s'obstiner à essayer d'insuffler la vie dans un corps déjà en décomposition? Combien stériles sont les tentatives en vue de retarder les échéances de l'histoire!

113. C'est dans cet esprit, et cela paraît peut-être paradoxal, à la fois d'idéalisme et de réalisme, que le Président de la République tunisienne a proposé le 2 mars 1959 l'idée d'une "table ronde" de la décolonisation. Je cite:

"Il s'agira de faire sortir l'humanité de l'ère coloniale pour l'engager dans celle de la coopération. C'est à froid que l'opération doit se réaliser. On pourra fixer des étapes raisonnables, sauvegarder les chances d'une coopération fructueuse, d'une amitié durable. On doit pouvoir le faire. Il ne faut pas que des pays colonisés arrachent leur indépendance dans l'effusion de sang au risque de sombrer peut-être dans l'anarchie que pourra exploiter le camp adverse pour déchaîner les rancunes, propager son idéologie et préparer sa domination."

114. Le président Bourguiba a continué:

"J'imagine aisément une grande conférence qui réunirait tous les pays qui ont encore des colonies ou des pays semi-coloniaux.

"Réunis d'abord entre eux, ces pays pourraient parvenir à un accord. Ils inviteraient ensuite les représentants des peuples intéressés autour d'une table ronde, ou bien encore ils constitueraient des comités chargés d'étudier séparément le cas de chaque pays et d'examiner ses possibilités et ses conditions particulières."

115. Un peu plus loin encore, le président Bourguiba a dit:

"Ils pourront établir le contact avec les mouvements nationalistes, organiser avec eux des élections libres qui révéleront les éléments les plus valables et les plus lucides avec lesquels se fera le dialogue.

"L'évolution des peuples colonisés échappera de la sorte aux aléas du terrorisme, de la violence et de l'anarchie.

"La négociation entre colonisateurs et colonisés, en même temps qu'elle définira les étapes et les méthodes de l'émancipation, devra s'étendre à l'examen d'un plan d'assistance et de relèvement économiques. Il faut arracher les peuples au sous-développement, qui est une forme de la servitude.

.....

"Ce faisant, les pays occidentaux ne feraient qu'appliquer les principes dont ils se réclament, à savoir: aider les peuples à se libérer politiquement et économiquement. Acquis dans les conditions que je propose, une telle libération interviendrait dans le cadre d'un plan raisonnable qui restitue le pouvoir aux nationaux, prévoit l'organisation des élections et la mise en place des cadres.

"On s'inquiétera ensuite de mettre au point des formules d'aide et des modalités d'investissement pour accélérer les programmes d'industrialisation.

"On aura ainsi ouvert aux peuples libérés la voie du progrès économique et technique."

116. Cet appel, lancé il y a bientôt trois ans par le président Bourguiba, n'a malheureusement pas eu, de la part des puissances coloniales, l'écho réaliste que nous attendions. Il était sans doute trop prophétique si l'on considère les événements qui, depuis, ont ensanglanté le continent africain et qui ont été en fait malheureusement la seule réaction que nous ayons enregistrée.

117. Il y a bien eu des réalisations — j'en prends pour témoins celles des délégations africaines qui ont accru notre grande famille depuis lors — mais il n'y a pas eu de solution du problème dans son ensemble. Plus que jamais, et ce n'est pas seulement l'affection du rejeton pour son géniteur qui nous anime, nous pensons que pareille idée mérite l'attention de notre assemblée. C'est à notre sens le seul moyen d'aborder un problème dans son essence, avec des chances de solutions pratiques qui auront pour première vertu celle de ne pas être partielles et disjointes. Ainsi l'on éviterait, du fait d'une participation volontaire et honnête des puissances coloniales et de l'appui des Nations Unies, que des réactions épidermiques n'engendrent ces soubresauts de fauve blessé et acculé que nous constatons chez ceux qui n'ont rien oublié et qui n'ont rien appris. Notre organisation se doit de s'engager dans cette voie.

118. Mais pouvons-nous honnêtement élaborer une formule unique et rigide pour mettre nos intentions en pratique? Notre but est clairement défini: c'est la libération totale. Mais il est difficile d'affirmer qu'une seule recette sera valable partout. Les moyens, les voies, les modalités peuvent différer, doivent différer en fait en fonction des données particulières à chaque pays. Mais ma délégation est d'avis que nous devons éviter, par la fixation d'une date même ultime, de donner l'impression que l'on se résigne à moraliser ou à admettre, ne serait-ce qu'un instant, le maintien d'un régime colonial où que ce soit.

119. Telles sont les réflexions qu'au nom de ma délégation, je pensais utile de confier à l'attention de mes collègues, à l'occasion du débat qui nous occupe. Je désirerais, en reprenant quelques phrases prononcées par le président Bourguiba à Belgrade, à la veille de la seizième session de l'Assemblée, vous indiquer le sens, le but et les perspectives que ma délégation s'assigne dans la présente discussion.

"Dans son essence, la lutte nationaliste a été pour nous, anciens colonisés, un combat pour la dignité de l'homme sous toutes les latitudes; un combat contre le colonialisme parce qu'il a foulé aux pieds cet attribut fondamental de la personne humaine. Ce racisme tantôt hypocrite et cauteleux, tantôt insolent et cynique, nous l'avons combattu, nous le combattons, nous le combattrons toujours. Nous ne ménagerons pas nos efforts pour venir en aide à ceux qui en souffrent. Mais le combat pour la dignité de l'homme ne prend pas fin avec la domination coloniale. Il doit continuer en vue de libérer les hommes de la faim, de l'ignorance, de la maladie. Il doit se prolonger par la lutte contre le sous-développement, contre l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme, dans la même cité.

"C'est là le défi que nous lance l'histoire. Si nous savons le relever, nous arriverons non seulement à sauver nos peuples de l'emprise du colonialisme et à les mettre à l'abri des entreprises d'un néo-colonialisme, mais encore et surtout, nous aurons contribué à préserver la paix et la sécurité dans le monde."

120. M. PAVICEVIC (Yougoslavie): En adoptant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], l'Assemblée générale a stigmatisé d'une manière non équivoque le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes. Il s'agit donc non seulement de la condamnation du colonialisme en tant que système qui est déjà historiquement dépassé, contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et en désharmonie absolue du point de vue moral et politique avec les besoins de notre époque, mais bien du système dont l'existence représente une menace permanente à la paix et un obstacle à la consolidation de cette dernière. Cet acte historique a été en même temps une expression évidente de l'opinion générale selon laquelle la liquidation du système colonial, c'est-à-dire du rapport d'inégalité et d'exploitation économique, est non seulement indispensable mais constitue l'une des préconditions de la réalisation des rapports d'égalité et de collaboration si nécessaires à la sauvegarde de la paix et à la promotion du bien-être dans le monde entier. Finalement, en adoptant la Déclaration, l'Assemblée générale a assumé des obligations déterminées envers les peuples qui se trouvent toujours sous la domination étrangère et, en même temps, elle a endossé une responsabilité particulière quant aux efforts déployés en vue d'éliminer les foyers dangereux et les causes possibles de conflits dont l'existence, dans la plupart des cas, était et demeure le résultat de la politique colonialiste ou néo-colonialiste.

121. Depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration, la lutte de certains peuples coloniaux pour la liberté et l'indépendance a été couronnée de succès. Le Sierra Leone — dont nous avons salué avec satisfaction l'admission à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, il y a quelques jours [1018ème séance] — s'est activement associé aux efforts de la communauté internationale des Etats souverains en vue de la sauvegarde de la paix et du progrès mondial.

122. Le 9 décembre 1961, le peuple du Tanganyika accédera à l'indépendance, ce qui représentera l'ouverture d'une brèche en Afrique orientale à travers laquelle — nous l'espérons — le vent du changement contribuera rapidement à terminer avec succès la longue lutte des peuples de cette région.

123. L'Ouganda accédera à l'indépendance en 1962. De son côté, le célèbre chef africain Jomo Kenyatta demande que son pays martyre occupe, le 1er février 1962, la place qui lui revient depuis longtemps. Le peuple du Samoa-Occidental deviendra libre le 1er janvier 1962.

124. Ce sont là des événements d'une importance exceptionnelle, que nous saluons de tout cœur. Nous sommes profondément convaincus que l'apparition de nouveaux Etats indépendants sur la scène internationale et au sein de l'Organisation des Nations Unies contribuera sensiblement à renforcer notre organisation et la position de ceux dont l'intérêt essentiel est de sauvegarder la paix et de développer la collaboration entre les peuples égaux en droits, collaboration fondée sur le principe de la coexistence active et pacifique.

125. Si importants que soient les résultats obtenus dans l'élimination des rapports coloniaux, le processus d'émancipation des peuples colonisés n'a pas encore pris fin. Ce processus ne s'est pas déroulé dans le passé et, malheureusement, ne se déroule pas encore aujourd'hui sans grands heurts ni sans une forte résistance de la part de certaines puissances coloniales aux aspirations justifiées des peuples dépendants dont la lutte est, sans aucun doute, facilitée par la libération d'un grand nombre d'anciennes colonies, mais dont les souffrances ne sont pas atténuées de ce fait.

126. On souligne très souvent ici que les pays qui sont encore des colonies ne représentent que 2 p. 100 de l'ensemble de la population qui, à la fin de la seconde guerre mondiale, se trouvait sous la domination coloniale. Derrière ce faible pourcentage se cache le fait que 70 millions d'hommes environ vivent toujours sous le régime colonial, et c'est pourquoi cet argument a une valeur contraire à celle qu'on voudrait lui attribuer. A notre avis, il renforce la thèse selon laquelle il faut accélérer la liquidation du colonialisme, et non pas la ralentir.

127. Bien entendu, nous sommes loin de nier les différences dans le degré de développement des divers territoires non autonomes, mais nous ne pouvons pas accepter les théories qui, en partant de cet argument, cherchent à justifier le ralentissement du processus de décolonisation. Par ailleurs, ces différences ne sont-elles pas encore plus grandes dans le degré de développement des Etats indépendants, et la résistance des puissances coloniales n'est-elle pas plus forte précisément dans les colonies relativement plus développées? Le fait est que les colonies existantes sont toujours des colonies, non pas parce qu'elles sont moins développées que celles qui ont conquis leur indépendance, mais bien parce qu'il s'agit, dans la plupart des cas, de forteresses du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme auxquelles, sans égard pour les aspirations de leurs habitants et contrairement à leurs intérêts, on donne une place particulière et importante dans les divers plans économiques, militaires ou stratégiques. C'est pourquoi les forces coloniales et les forces néo-colonialistes ne manquent pas de recourir à toutes sortes de moyens — depuis la déformation cynique du contenu du droit à l'autodétermination, jusqu'à l'emploi de la force brutale — dans le seul but de prolonger leur règne et leur exploitation des peuples et des pays encore dépendants.

128. Bien que voué à l'échec, le colonialisme n'est malheureusement pas mort. Non seulement les dizaines de millions d'hommes qui vivent sous le régime colonial, mais également les guerres coloniales et les interventions colonialistes dans diverses régions du monde, en premier lieu sur le continent africain, en sont les meilleures preuves.

129. L'oppression brutale dans les territoires sous administration portugaise qui s'est transformée, en Angola, en une véritable guerre coloniale, la guerre d'Algérie qui dure depuis sept ans, l'aventure colonialiste à Bizerte, en été 1961, la politique d'apartheid haïe et condamnée par le monde entier que pratique le Gouvernement sud-africain, l'application de la discrimination raciale dans nombre de colonies, ne sont que quelques-unes des manifestations de l'obstination des milieux colonialistes et de certaines puissances coloniales à maintenir leurs privilèges ou à ralentir le processus de libération des colonies.

130. Si, à ces exemples que je viens de mentionner, on ajoute les tentatives faites pour influencer, au moyen de pressions économiques et autres, la politique intérieure et extérieure des pays nouvellement libérés et de ceux qui sont en voie d'acquiescer leur indépendance, une seule conclusion s'impose: les milieux colonialistes cherchent de toutes leurs forces, justement dans cette dernière phase de décomposition du colonialisme, à s'opposer au développement inévitable du processus d'émancipation des peuples dépendants, sans reculer devant l'emploi de la force et devant le recours à des aventures irresponsables, sans tenir compte des répercussions que cela peut avoir sur la situation internationale actuellement si tendue.

131. A notre avis, la tragédie de la République du Congo représente toujours, malheureusement, un exemple vivant de l'obstination, de la résistance et des tentatives opiniâtres des forces néo-colonialistes pour regagner et maintenir par tous les moyens, même après l'accession des colonies à l'indépendance, leurs privilèges économiques et politiques.

132. Il ne faut point oublier que la cause fondamentale de la crise congolaise et de toutes les souffrances qu'endure le peuple de ce jeune Etat africain est l'intervention étrangère organisée, encouragée, financée et armée par les puissances coloniales et les milieux financiers étrangers.

133. La sécession n'est ici que l'une des formes sous lesquelles se manifeste l'intervention colonialiste, la désintégration du Congo étant la méthode employée pour maintenir les privilèges coloniaux, pour prolonger l'exploitation des richesses naturelles de ce pays.

134. Aucune rhétorique parlementaire, si brillante soit-elle, ne pourrait camoufler cet état de choses et encore moins déformer la vérité sur le drame qui se déroule depuis 17 mois au Congo. Ce drame humain et national représente un avertissement sérieux pour toutes les forces anticolonialistes, ainsi que pour notre organisation: le colonialisme, bien que voué à l'échec, n'est pas mort, mais constitue un danger réel pour l'indépendance des pays nouvellement libérés.

135. Ces tendances profondément antihistoriques, dangereuses tant par les troubles qu'elles suscitent que par le fait qu'elles se mêlent aux contradictions des blocs militaires — ce qui complique encore davantage la situation sur les deux plans — demandent, à notre avis, des actions déterminées et énergiques de la part de la communauté internationale. De telles actions sont d'autant plus nécessaires que la situation internationale est devenue dangereusement tendue et que l'humanité, plus que jamais depuis la seconde guerre mondiale, doit faire face au problème de la guerre ou de la paix.

136. La véritable menace pour la paix et les foyers de conflits réels et en puissance, ce sont l'oppression coloniale et les interventions colonialistes, non pas la résistance des peuples colonisés à cette violence et leur lutte pour l'affranchissement du règne colonial.

137. C'est dans ce sens que les efforts pour la liquidation du colonialisme non seulement ne sont pas en opposition mais se trouvent en entière harmonie avec les efforts déployés en vue de consolider la paix mondiale. La décolonisation définitive, la liquidation définitive du règne et du système coloniaux représenteront une contribution importante à la consolidation de la paix, du fait qu'elle éliminera de nombreux foyers dangereux de conflits et réduira la sphère des conflits entre les blocs existants.

138. Ainsi que je l'ai dit, le problème colonial occupe, en raison de ses conséquences, une place très importante parmi les questions qui rendent la situation actuelle telle que nous la voyons. Ce problème, et la nécessité de le liquider définitivement, se sont vu accorder l'attention qu'ils méritent par la Conférence des pays non alignés^{8/}. Dans la déclaration de cette conférence, il est dit entre autres:

"Les participants à la conférence sont convaincus que l'apparition de pays nouvellement libérés aidera aussi à réduire l'aire des antagonismes de blocs et à encourager toute tendance visant à affermir la paix et à promouvoir une coopération pacifique entre nations indépendantes et égales.

"Les participants à la conférence réaffirment solennellement leur appui à la Déclaration relative à l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, adoptée à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, et recom-mandent l'abolition immédiate, inconditionnelle, totale et définitive du colonialisme et ils ont décidé de faire un effort concerté pour mettre fin à toutes les formes et manifestations du néo-colonialisme et de la domination impérialiste."

139. La délégation yougoslave considère que notre organisation se doit de procéder sans tarder à la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux en vue de la libération définitive des peuples encore dépendants. En tenant compte de l'expérience du passé où le rôle actif et l'intervention de notre organisation ont rendu la liquidation des rapports coloniaux plus facile, en tenant compte aussi des besoins de l'évolution contemporaine, ma délégation estime que l'Assemblée générale ou l'organe qu'elle aura créé doit adopter une procédure lui assurant de larges possibilités d'action et sa participation active et indispensable dans le processus de décolonisation. Le droit de pétition, l'audition des pétitionnaires, l'examen de la situation sur les lieux, etc., doivent devenir les moyens normaux permettant de réunir les données nécessaires à la fixation, le plus tôt possible, de délais courts et réalistes pour l'accession à l'indépendance de chaque territoire, délais dans les limites desquels on procéderait, avec la collaboration et sous le contrôle de l'ONU, au transfert du pouvoir aux populations autochtones.

140. Ma délégation appuiera toute proposition ayant pour but d'appliquer effectivement la Déclaration et de mettre fin à un système qui, dans le passé, a conduit très souvent à des conflits très graves et qui, aujourd'hui encore, du fait même de son existence, représente une menace permanente pour les intérêts de notre organisation, pour les intérêts de la paix et pour ceux de l'humanité tout entière.

141. Ma délégation se prononcera en temps voulu sur les projets de résolution qui sont ou pourraient être présentés à l'examen de cette assemblée.

142. Je voudrais toutefois m'arrêter à un problème qui se trouve de nouveau soumis à l'Assemblée générale. Il s'agit de celui de l'Irian occidental, territoire que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas considérait, dans tous les rapports présentés par lui à l'ONU avant 1949 et dans toutes les discussions ayant précédé le transfert de la souveraineté à l'Indonésie indépendante, comme faisant partie de ce qu'on appelait, à cette époque, les Indes orientales néerlandaises. Le fait que la souveraineté sur ce territoire, pour une raison ou pour une autre, n'a pas été transférée à l'Indonésie, comme elle aurait dû l'être, n'a aucunement modifié la situation en ce qui concerne son statut.

143. L'attitude de mon gouvernement au sujet de cette question est connue et elle a été exposée à plusieurs reprises: l'Irian occidental est une partie intégrante du territoire indonésien. C'est pourquoi la délégation yougoslave estime qu'aucune proposition méconnaissant ce fait à notre avis indéniable ne pourrait présenter une base pour une solution équitable et constructive.

144. Par ailleurs, la délégation yougoslave est convaincue que la solution durable et constructive de ce problème ne pourrait être cherchée et réalisée qu'en respectant les droits légitimes de l'Indonésie. La volonté passée et présente de ce pays de collaborer à la recherche d'une solution négociée nous indique la voie qui permettrait d'aboutir à une solution pacifique de ce problème — le transfert à l'Indonésie de la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental — et d'éliminer ainsi ce différend qui représente une menace sérieuse à la paix dans cette région du monde.

145. M. COLLIER (Sierra Leone) [traduit de l'anglais]: Une fois de plus, l'Assemblée est appelée à examiner l'éternelle question du colonialisme, notamment pour ce qui est de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

146. Lorsque l'Assemblée générale a adopté à sa quinzième session la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), l'ONU a réaffirmé certains principes importants posés dans les Chapitres XI, XII et XIII de la Charte des Nations Unies. Ces principes montrent quels sont les nobles idéaux qui ont inspiré les Etats fondateurs de l'Organisation et tous ceux qui, depuis, en sont devenus Membres.

147. Depuis l'adoption de cette résolution, de nombreux faits sont venus démontrer la bonne volonté et la sincérité de certaines puissances administrantes dont les représentants ont appuyé cette résolution. En effet, c'est avec un orgueil légitime que nous rappelons que notre pays, le Sierra Leone, a accédé à l'indépendance le 27 avril 1961 pour prendre place parmi les nations libres du monde. Il n'est que juste d'ajouter que cette accession s'est faite dans une atmosphère qui reflétait les meilleures relations et la plus cordiale amitié possibles entre mon pays et le Gouvernement britannique — nos anciens administrateurs coloniaux — dans une atmosphère d'où étaient exclues toute rancœur et toute amertume. En fait, c'est en raison de ces bonnes relations et de cette cordiale amitié que mon pays, après avoir accédé à l'indépendance, a été fier d'entrer dans la famille du Commonwealth britannique de nations.

148. Sans aucun doute, nombreux sont les pays autrefois dépendants et maintenant libres qui peuvent se réjouir d'avoir entretenu des relations tout aussi agréables avec leurs anciennes puissances administrantes. Pourtant, malgré des cas de ce genre, il ne faut malheureusement pas perdre de vue qu'environ 50 millions d'âmes sont encore sous la domination de puissances étrangères dans environ 70 territoires, en dépit de l'adoption de cette très importante résolution, la résolution 1514 (XV).

149. Nous avons donc le devoir de chercher à la présente session par quels moyens assurer l'application de cette remarquable résolution. Il ne serait guère utile d'exposer longuement tous les maux et toutes les humiliations que l'on doit au colonialisme. Il n'est certes pas besoin de se complaire dans une guerre verbale de récriminations. Ma délégation, qui représente un pays qui vient à peine de se libérer du statut colonial, préfère se tourner vers l'avenir. Nous vivons la plus exaltante des aventures: l'édification d'une nouvelle nation. Mais malgré l'atmosphère optimiste dans laquelle nous vivons et bien que nous soyons grandement soulagés de nous voir sortis d'une situation de dépendance et de respirer maintenant l'air léger d'une indépendance récemment acquise, nous ne pouvons demeurer insensibles au sort et au destin de ceux qui nous entourent. Nous ne pouvons cesser de sympathiser avec tous ceux qui sont encore en train de lutter pour la liberté et tous ceux qui sont encore en train de combattre pour obtenir le droit de décider de leur propre destinée.

150. C'est là un droit inaliénable. Dans l'univers entier, les hommes doivent être libres de diriger eux-mêmes leurs affaires nationales et libres de choisir s'ils veulent se gouverner eux-mêmes ou s'associer à un autre groupe. Du fait que ma délégation reconnaît ce principe fondamental, nous applaudissons de tout cœur aux sentiments exprimés dans la résolution 1514 (XV). Nous voyons dans cette résolution une importante évolution dans la façon de penser de l'homme civilisé; cette résolution exprime une répugnance universelle à l'égard du maintien de la domination d'un groupe d'individus sur un autre groupe. Pourtant, en dépit de cette résolution, il y a encore quelques pays, représentés à l'Assemblée, qui s'obstinent malheureusement dans cette antique doctrine de la supériorité raciale et de l'inégalité des hommes.

151. Si je dis que certains pays s'obstinent à soutenir la doctrine de l'inégalité des hommes, c'est parce que je ne puis guère interpréter autrement leur conduite lorsqu'ils prétendent que certains peuples ne sont pas mûrs et ne sont pas aptes à l'indépendance. Si un groupe d'individus peut s'arroger le droit de déterminer l'étalon ou la norme permettant de dire dans quelle mesure une nation est mûre et prête pour l'indépendance, alors on doit admettre l'hypothèse que cela sous-entend: la nation qui s'arroge un tel droit est en état de savoir et de déterminer quelle est la véritable mesure de l'indépendance et quelles en sont les conditions préalables.

152. De l'avis de ma délégation, on ne peut déterminer si un peuple est prêt pour l'indépendance au moyen de normes arbitraires établies par un autre peuple. Toute nation a le droit de décider de son propre destin et nous estimons moralement indéfendable qu'un peuple doive continuer à vivre sous la domination d'une puissance étrangère lorsque ce peuple a déclaré son intention de se gouverner lui-même. C'est pour cela que ma délégation appuiera tout projet de résolution condamnant le colonialisme et conçue pour y mettre fin le plus vite possible.

153. Toutefois, nous reconnaissons pleinement qu'il est difficile de fixer des dates limites pour l'indépendance. Nous ne croyons pas que l'indépendance d'un peuple puisse être établie de cette façon. Nous pensons qu'il serait plus utile d'expulser les instruments de la répression; cela est d'ailleurs conforme aux termes du paragraphe 4 de la Déclaration de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui stipule:

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée ou à toutes mesures de répression... dirigées contre les peuples dépendants... et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée."

154. Dans ce contexte, nous aimerions rappeler que nous éprouvons une vive inquiétude devant les événements de l'Angola, où les Portugais ont employé toutes sortes de violences pour maintenir sous le joug un peuple qui souffre et qui lutte pour ses droits.

155. D'autre part, nous espérons que les négociations actuellement en cours entre les Français et les Algériens aboutiront bientôt et mettront fin à cette longue, à cette interminable lutte que mène un peuple valeureux pour obtenir l'autodétermination.

156. C'est à l'Organisation des Nations Unies qu'incombe la responsabilité de prendre position sur cette question. S'il est vrai que l'Organisation a été conçue et créée pour faire disparaître les conditions de tension et les causes de guerre et pour créer un climat propice à la paix, alors il est certainement de notre devoir de faire de notre mieux pour exercer toute la pression morale dont nous disposons et d'élargir au maximum les fonctions de l'Organisation afin d'éliminer maintenant le colonialisme.

157. Nous avons tous entendu prononcer à cette tribune d'hypocrites déclarations contre le colonialisme faites par certains représentants de pays qui n'ont guère de motif d'être satisfaits d'eux-mêmes, car on pourrait bien parler de colonialisme lorsque les habitants d'un pays sont obligés de se soumettre à un gouvernement d'inspiration étrangère contre la volonté de la masse de la population. On pourrait bien parler de colonialisme dans le cas de ces peuples auxquels on n'a jamais accordé le droit de diriger leurs propres affaires. C'est là un mal qu'il faudrait également bannir sans retard. Il est hypocrite d'utiliser certaines normes contre un groupe de nations et d'en utiliser d'autres lorsqu'on envisage sa propre situation.

158. Comme on l'a déjà dit à la présente session, aucune résolution relative au sort des territoires dépendants n'a beaucoup de chances d'être appliquée sans le concours des puissances administrantes intéressées. Nous avons déjà constaté, au cours des dernières années, la bonne volonté de certaines nations — notamment le Royaume-Uni — qui se sont montrées disposées à renoncer à leurs possessions lorsque le peuple avait manifesté son désir de se gouverner lui-même. C'est un exemple que d'autres nations devraient suivre. Je tiens à déclarer que ma délégation approuve l'utile suggestion du représentant de Ceylan, qui a dit récemment [1049ème séance] que l'Assemblée générale devait s'efforcer d'obtenir le concours des Etats membres administrants et les inviter à faciliter sa tâche en admettant dans certains territoires actuellement sous leur administration des groupes des Nations Unies ou des missions de bons offices et en mettant à leur disposition les moyens nécessaires pour les aider à s'assurer des tendances de l'opinion publique dans le territoire considéré. Le représentant de Ceylan a ajouté que les Nations Unies pourraient par la suite, si le besoin s'en faisait sentir et si les parties intéressées le désiraient, apporter leur aide à ces parties au cours des négociations. C'est là une suggestion hardie qu'aucune puissance administrante s'intéressant sincèrement à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) ne devrait juger inacceptable.

159. Ma délégation souhaite apporter son appui à cette proposition ou à toute autre proposition qui aurait pour effet l'octroi de l'indépendance à des pays et peuples coloniaux, et nous proclamons une fois de plus notre foi dans les nobles idéaux de l'universalité des droits fondamentaux de l'homme qui sont inscrits dans la Charte des Nations Unies.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole au premier orateur inscrit sur ma liste, je voudrais attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée sur un projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1] qui a trait au point 66 de l'ordre du jour, c'est-à-dire à la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

2. M. PADILLA NERVO (Mexique) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Que le Président veuille bien me permettre d'abord, tout en réaffirmant le plaisir que nous éprouvons à voir les débats de l'Assemblée présidés par un homme d'Etat aussi éminent, de dire que ma délégation a un autre motif particulier de satisfaction. Je veux parler de la décision que nos gouvernements respectifs viennent de rendre publique et aux termes de laquelle le Mexique et la République tunisienne, désireux de resserrer les liens qui existent entre ces deux pays et de renforcer l'amitié qui unit leurs deux peuples, sont convenus d'établir entre eux des relations diplomatiques. Nous venons une fois de plus à cette tribune pour joindre notre voix — la voix du Mexique — à celles de tous les peuples de la terre qui proclament leur droit à la liberté, à l'indépendance, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national.

3. J'ai déjà dit précédemment que les hommes d'aujourd'hui ont un rôle à jouer dans l'avènement d'une ère nouvelle caractérisée par deux forces également impétueuses et prometteuses. L'une est l'impulsion irrésistible qui porte les peuples à la liberté et à la liquidation du colonialisme; l'autre est la puissance de la science et de la technique qui ouvre à l'homme la voie de l'espace extra-atmosphérique.

4. La première de ces forces est une force révolutionnaire et unificatrice, indépendante de toutes considérations politiques et idéologiques; elle s'impose avec une urgence qui l'emporte sur les conflits internationaux et tous les Etats, les plus grands comme les plus petits, s'en réclament.

5. A maintes reprises au cours des 16 années qui se sont écoulées depuis la création de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, nous avons lutté pour favoriser la prospérité des habitants des territoires non autonomes, leur progrès politique et économique, et pour leur évolution vers l'autonomie et l'indépendance. Le peuple mexicain, depuis qu'il a conquis son indépendance il y a 150 ans, a toujours soutenu avec persévérance le principe de la libre détermination, consacré par la Charte, et le principe de la non-intervention qui en est le corollaire. Notre conviction et les efforts que nous avons déployés en faveur des légitimes aspirations qui portaient les peuples dépendants vers leur libération se sont manifestés dans tous les actes de la délégation du Mexique, tant au Conseil de tutelle qu'à la Quatrième Commission et à l'Assemblée générale.

6. A cette même tribune, le Président du Mexique, M. Adolfo López Mateos, a déclaré il y a deux ans [828^e séance]: "Pour nous, la liberté de l'individu et la liberté des nations sont inséparables et complémentaires. Les nations ne peuvent être libres que si les hommes qui les composent sont eux-mêmes libres, et les individus ne peuvent être libres que s'ils vivent dans un pays libre. La révolution mexicaine, la première qui ait triomphé dans ce siècle, a ajouté à ce concept traditionnel un principe nouveau: la liberté individuelle s'épanouit pleinement dans la justice sociale. C'est ainsi que mon pays a lutté pour l'indépendance des nations, la liberté des individus et la justice sociale pour les collectivités."

7. Nous avons exposé ces principes et d'autres principes semblables chaque fois que nous avons jugé opportun de réaffirmer les idéaux de liberté qu'ils contiennent. Le 24 octobre dernier, lors de la célébration du dix-septième anniversaire de la création de notre organisation mondiale, le Ministre des relations extérieures de mon pays, M. Manuel Tello, a déclaré à Mexico: "Un autre problème auquel les Nations Unies doivent faire face est celui des colonies. Le Mexique a toujours été et reste partisan convaincu de la liquidation définitive du système colonial. Cependant, la liquidation d'une colonie doit répondre à une fin nette et précise: la prospérité de ses habitants par l'exercice de leurs droits souverains."

8. L'an dernier, dans sa résolution 1514 (XV), l'Assemblée générale a proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. L'an dernier, nous nous sommes fixé un but; cette année, nous cherchons la voie à suivre pour l'atteindre.

9. L'histoire nous enseigne que les cris d'indépendance ne marquent pas la fin mais le début de la lutte. C'est dans l'exercice de la liberté qu'on défend la liberté. Accéder à l'indépendance, c'est parvenir à un point de départ, au début d'une lutte sans fin pour la défense de la souveraineté, de l'intégrité territoriale, de la justice sociale, des droits et des libertés fondamentales de l'homme. Pour gagner cette bataille, il faut l'avoir préparée et avoir les moyens de la mener.

10. Les Nations Unies doivent aider, avec conviction et clairvoyance, à gagner cette bataille. Les groupements humains qui peuplent les nombreux territoires encore dépendants ne sont pas tous parvenus au même niveau de développement politique, culturel et social. Ils n'ont pas tous au même degré, ou à un degré sensiblement le même, la capacité et les moyens de résister aux forces hostiles de l'intérieur ou de l'extérieur. Des situations différentes et des circonstances différentes nécessitent une aide appropriée à chaque cas particulier. L'Assemblée générale a réaffirmé qu'elle était convaincue que tous les peuples ont un droit inaliénable à la pleine liberté, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national, et elle a reconnu le désir passionné de liberté de tous les peuples dépendants.

11. Il y a déjà de nombreuses années, le Mexique a soutenu, à cette même tribune, que l'existence de vastes groupements humains privés du droit fondamental des peuples à la libre détermination politique ne pouvait que peser lourdement et dangereusement sur les destinées, toujours plus étroitement mêlées, de tous les Etats, et particulièrement sur la responsabilité morale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Aucune considération juridique, aucune explication de nécessité politique du moment ne peuvent persuader les peuples qui se sentent aptes à exercer leur droit à la souveraineté de renoncer à leurs aspirations ou d'en remettre à plus tard la réalisation.

12. Nous restons, comme nous l'avons toujours été, partisans convaincus de la liquidation du système colonial. Nous pensons cependant que dans ce processus d'importance capitale, qui met en jeu le bonheur de millions d'êtres humains, l'Assemblée doit agir sans perdre de vue que l'indépendance, tout en constituant une fin en soi, doit aussi permettre aux populations de réaliser leur progrès politique, économique et social, dans l'exercice de leur souveraineté.

13. La coopération sincère et désintéressée des Nations Unies est indispensable pour mener à bien cette œuvre gigantesque de manière ordonnée et féconde. Dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel sur l'activité de l'Organisation [A/4800/Add.1], le Secrétaire général, M. Hammarskjöld, parlant des principes démocratiques fondamentaux énoncés dans la Charte, s'est exprimé en ces termes:

"La résolution sur le colonialisme adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session peut être considérée comme proclamant de nouveau dans son ensemble, et de façon plus détaillée, le principe énoncé dans la Charte. Jusqu'à présent, cette évolution s'est traduite par la création d'un grand nombre de nouveaux Etats nationaux et par une augmentation révolutionnaire du nombre des Membres de l'Organisation."

14. L'Assemblée doit maintenant s'attaquer à la tâche qui consiste à donner effet à la résolution sur le colonialisme, résolution que le Secrétaire général a considérée comme un nouvel énoncé d'un principe fondamental contenu dans la Charte. Dans les circonstances présentes, je crois qu'il est opportun et peut-être même indispensable de rappeler l'analyse profonde et objective que le Secrétaire général a placée dans l'introduction précitée à son rapport annuel, car cette analyse fait état d'une expérience amère dont nous avons tous été les témoins et contient une mise en garde solennelle à laquelle nous devons tous prêter attention:

"C'est à propos de conflits concernant l'évolution vers la pleine autonomie et l'indépendance que l'Organisation a eu à faire face à ses tâches d'ordre exécutif les plus complexes. C'est aussi à propos de l'action exécutive dans ce domaine que les diverses conceptions de l'Organisation, ainsi que de ses décisions et de sa structure, s'affirment de la façon la plus nette. Pour ce qui est de cet aspect particulier des travaux de l'Organisation, ce n'est pas, comme à l'habitude, entre les intérêts des différents blocs que le front a été tracé, mais plutôt entre, d'une part, un grand nombre de nations ayant des objectifs bien naturels, surtout pour celles qui récemment encore se trouvaient sous la domination coloniale ou sous quelque autre forme de domination étrangère, et, d'autre part, un petit nombre de puissances ayant d'autres objectifs et d'autres intérêts dominants. Cela peut se comprendre si l'on considère qu'une majorité de nations souhaitent se tenir à l'écart des conflits de grandes puissances, tandis que les blocs ou les grandes puissances cherchent à assurer leurs positions et leur sécurité en faisant des efforts pour maintenir ou étendre leur influence dans les régions nouvellement apparues sur la carte politique.

"On pourrait donner de nombreux exemples de la façon dont cette confrontation influe sur les prises de position à l'égard du problème des fonctions exécutives de l'Organisation. Peut-être serait-il indiqué, à ce sujet, de dire un mot en passant du problème du Congo et des activités des Nations Unies dans ce pays. Diverses puissances et divers intérêts non africains ont vu dans la situation au Congo la source possible d'une évolution capable d'avoir des répercussions sensibles sur leur position internationale. Ils ont donc eu tout naturellement des idées très arrêtées sur l'orientation qu'ils souhaitaient voir donner à cette évolution au Congo et -- l'absence de traditions politiques dans le pays aidant, comme aussi l'absence de cette stabilité que les institutions politiques ne peuvent acquérir qu'avec le temps et l'expérience -- la voie était libre pour quiconque voulait influencer sur les événements en soutenant telle ou telle faction ou telle ou telle personnalité. Fidèle à ses principes, l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne pouvait se laisser guider dans son opération que par l'intérêt des Congolais et par leur droit de décider librement de leur avenir, en pleine connaissance de cause et sans ingérence de l'extérieur."

15. Nous estimons que l'Assemblée doit tenir compte des observations du Secrétaire général que je viens de citer lorsqu'elle examine les méthodes et les moyens à appliquer pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux populations des territoires non autonomes, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes, comme cela est prévu dans la résolution 1514 (XV), par. 5, de manière à réaliser la liquidation du système colonial de façon ordonnée en tenant compte des conditions particulières de chaque territoire à l'effet d'éviter que ne se reproduisent des situations chaotiques.

16. Ma délégation est d'avis que l'Assemblée devrait être en possession de renseignements spéciaux relatifs aux différents territoires non autonomes et, à cette fin, il conviendrait peut-être de constituer une commission chargée d'étudier les conditions particulières de chacun de ces territoires et de faire rapport sur ce sujet, ainsi que sur les mesures, les normes ou les méthodes appropriées pour l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) dans chaque cas.

17. Je crois opportun de rappeler que, dans cet hémisphère, la neuvième Conférence internationale américaine qui s'est tenue à Bogota en 1948 a créé une commission ayant des attributions de ce genre. C'est la Commission américaine des territoires non autonomes, instituée à la suite d'une déclaration qui, en ce qui concerne notre hémisphère, a énoncé 12 ans plus tôt les objectifs et les principes que les Nations Unies devaient proclamer par la suite pour l'ensemble du monde dans la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session.

18. Nous espérons que les décisions que l'Assemblée générale prendra à l'issue du présent débat ne seront pas l'expression de positions politiques extrêmes, dont la mise en œuvre serait impossible ou douteuse, mais au contraire la manifestation d'un effort réel ayant pour objet — conformément à la volonté librement exprimée des peuples dépendants et avec le concours sincère des puissances administrantes — de conduire à bref délai les colonies et les territoires sous tutelle à une vie indépendante, en tant qu'Etats souverains capables de forger en toute liberté leur propre destinée.

19. Le Mexique souhaite pour tous une heureuse destinée; étant un pays américain, il réaffirme dans les termes mêmes employés par la neuvième Conférence internationale américaine^{1/} que "l'idéal qui inspira les gestes de l'indépendance de l'Amérique animera toujours nos peuples et nos gouvernements unis par l'obligation morale de lutter, par tous les moyens pacifiques en leur pouvoir, pour supprimer du continent toute situation de dépendance, quelle qu'en soit la forme, politique, économique ou juridique". Nous affirmons aussi dès maintenant que le processus historique de l'émancipation de l'Amérique ne sera pas terminé tant qu'il subsistera dans notre continent des populations ou des régions soumises au régime colonial ou des territoires occupés par des pays non américains.

20. Le peuple mexicain a toujours donné la preuve de son dévouement profond et inébranlable à la cause de la liberté; il proclame et défend le droit à l'autodétermination et le droit de tout peuple libre de se donner les règles qui lui conviennent le mieux. Il rejette toute injustice et toute forme d'hégémonie extérieure. En cette assemblée mondiale ou ailleurs, il a fait entendre sa voix en faveur des faibles et des opprimés et il a défendu toutes les causes justes. Nous appartenons à une Amérique libre que nous aimons et que nous saurons conserver toujours libre. Nos populations se caractérisent par l'absence absolue de préjugés raciaux. Depuis que nous avons accédé à une vie indépendante, la notion d'égalité entre les

Etats est toujours allée de pair avec la notion non moins généreuse d'égalité entre les hommes. Nous luttons contre les préjugés et contre les concepts funestes du régime colonial, non en tant que tels, mais parce qu'ils sont contraires à nos idéaux. Nous condamnons la pratique injuste et répugnante de la ségrégation et de la discrimination raciale parce qu'elle est contraire à notre foi en la dignité de la personne humaine, à notre nature et à notre histoire. Il y a quelques jours, notre représentant à la Commission politique spéciale a déclaré au nom de notre délégation:

"Le Mexique est en fait l'exemple le plus parfait de métissage racial et spirituel, non seulement depuis sa constitution en un Etat souverain, mais à vrai dire depuis les premiers temps de la domination coloniale. Parmi les crimes du conquérant n'a pas figuré la discrimination raciale... Le sang étranger est venu se mêler au sang indigène dès le début et sans le moindre heurt... Le fait le plus patent dans l'histoire du Mexique, c'est la participation à notre vie publique, sur un pied d'égalité totale, des trois groupes raciaux: les indigènes, les métis et les créoles. Si un pur créole, Hidalgo, est à l'origine de l'indépendance, c'est un Indien tout aussi pur, Juárez, qui a rétabli la République et qui a fondé parmi nous un Etat moderne, à jamais débarrassé d'habitudes coloniales caduques^{2/}."

21. Le présent débat, au cours duquel on affirme le droit de tous les peuples à la liberté et où l'on élabore des plans pour la liquidation du colonialisme dans le monde, est le témoignage le plus éloquent de notre espérance et de notre foi en notre destin. En fait, nous admettons la continuité de l'histoire et un avenir illimité qui perpétuent dans le temps et dans l'espace les valeurs permanentes et éternelles de la conscience humaine. Il s'agit donc d'un acte de foi universel en la possibilité nécessaire d'assurer la paix et de mettre fin à jamais au danger d'un conflit nucléaire qui menace d'effacer notre civilisation et d'éteindre notre espèce.

22. Le Mexique s'associe à cet acte de foi. Je suis monté aujourd'hui à cette tribune du monde — et c'est intentionnellement que j'y suis monté aujourd'hui 20 novembre — en tant que porte-parole humble et fidèle du peuple et du gouvernement que je représente, pour proclamer une fois de plus notre vocation de liberté.

23. Un siècle et demi s'est écoulé depuis la proclamation de notre indépendance et aujourd'hui même ma patrie commémore le 51ème anniversaire du début de la révolution mexicaine qui fut la première grande révolution sociale du XXème siècle, une révolution des Mexicains et, selon les paroles de notre président López Mateos, du Mexique et pour le Mexique.

24. Notre révolution a été un mouvement de rédemption, une offensive irrésistible contre l'injustice et la sujétion, une éruption qui a lancé dans le vent de l'histoire l'aspiration enflammée à être libre et l'invincible volonté de triompher du peuple mexicain. Il s'est imposé et il a triomphé. Les peuples qui n'ont pas peur de vivre et qui, pour vivre comme ils le veulent, n'ont pas peur de mourir triomphent toujours.

^{1/} Acte final (chap. XXXIII) de la neuvième Conférence internationale américaine, tenue à Bogota du 30 mars au 2 mai 1948.

^{2/} Cette déclaration a été faite à la 271ème séance de la Commission politique spéciale, dont les comptes rendus officiels ne sont publiés que sous forme de comptes rendus analytiques.

25. Ma présence ici, en ce 20 novembre, est un hommage à tous ceux qui combattent pour émanciper leurs peuples et pour assurer le respect de la dignité humaine. Elle est en même temps un modeste tribut aux héros de ma patrie, au peuple que je représente et qui incarne le héros suprême des luttes pour l'indépendance, le soldat vaincu des guerres de réforme, le défenseur généreux de la patrie lors des attaques et des interventions étrangères, et le créateur, dans l'épopée rédemptrice de la révolution, du Mexique moderne, d'un Mexique grand et bien nôtre, mais qui appartient à une Amérique unie et libre et qui est aussi au service de la concorde universelle.

26. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole aux orateurs suivants, je voudrais faire savoir à l'Assemblée générale que nous avons encore une longue liste d'orateurs pour le débat en cours et que nous avons encore au moins deux ou trois questions très importantes à discuter en séances plénières. Je me permets donc d'adresser un appel aux orateurs — surtout à ceux qui ont déjà eu l'occasion de prendre la parole au cours de ce débat — pour qu'ils écourtent leurs discours dans la mesure du possible. Cela facilitera considérablement nos travaux et pourra nous amener à une heureuse conclusion de nos débats.

27. M. WAHAB (République arabe unie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Les débats qui se sont déroulés sur la question en discussion à l'Assemblée générale tant à la quinzième session que pendant les deux dernières semaines ont fait ressortir à juste titre l'importance capitale que l'on attache à cette question. Ils ont également mis en relief le vif intérêt et les préoccupations profondes que suscite le problème du colonialisme dans les cœurs et les esprits de millions d'êtres humains.

28. La résolution 1514 (XV), où figure la Déclaration adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa dernière session, a été considérée à juste titre comme l'une des principales résolutions adoptées par l'Organisation mondiale. Elle a rassuré les millions d'êtres humains qui n'ont pas encore recouvré leurs droits imprescriptibles à l'autodétermination et à la souveraineté nationale, sur l'intérêt que l'Organisation prend à leurs aspirations et sur sa volonté de mettre fin au problème colonial qui a causé et cause encore tant de souffrances humaines et qui fait obstacle à toute compréhension vraiment internationale et à l'établissement de relations amicales entre les nations.

29. Fait significatif, la Déclaration a été adoptée sans opposition, ce qui prouve que l'ensemble de la communauté internationale se préoccupe de mettre fin au colonialisme et est résolue à y parvenir. Fait plus significatif encore, deux grandes puissances, l'Union soviétique et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, ont proposé à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale d'inscrire à l'ordre du jour deux questions importantes ayant trait au colonialisme.

30. La question proposée par l'Union soviétique a conduit à l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV) qui avait été rédigée par le groupe africano-asiatique. La question proposée par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique était intitulée: "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance".

31. Nous espérons sincèrement que ce problème du colonialisme ne deviendra pas un objet de "guerre froide" mais qu'il constituera au contraire un terrain d'entente. Il convient de citer à ce sujet la déclaration faite par le président Gamal Abdel Nasser à l'Assemblée nationale lorsqu'il a parlé des résultats de la Conférence de Casablanca^{3/}:

"Nous disons qu'on ne peut favoriser une heureuse issue de la lutte que mène l'Afrique en poussant ce continent dans la guerre froide qui divise les blocs de puissances. Pour que les buts visés dans cette lutte soient atteints, il faut faire de l'Afrique un terrain de rencontre où règne un esprit constructif, non un champ de bataille où s'abat la destruction et où s'opposent les blocs de puissances."

32. Dans la Déclaration que contient la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, l'Assemblée a proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre fin au colonialisme car, pour reprendre ses propres termes:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales."

33. L'Assemblée générale réaffirme ainsi dans la Déclaration les principes proclamés à San Francisco en 1945 en ce qui concerne l'accession des peuples dépendants à l'indépendance nationale. Contrairement aux tentatives qui avaient été faites précédemment au cours de l'histoire des organisations internationales, les auteurs de la Charte des Nations Unies ont envisagé avec raison le problème de la paix et de la sécurité internationales d'une façon positive et constructive. Ils n'ont pas compris la paix de façon négative; ils ont compris qu'il fallait créer de façon positive les conditions de stabilité qui conduisent à la paix et à la sécurité. L'une de ces conditions principales est la jouissance de droits égaux par tous les peuples et toutes les nations, grandes et petites, l'émancipation des peuples dépendants et leur accession dans la dignité à la place qui leur revient dans la communauté des nations. Lorsqu'on a prévu le régime de tutelle et le principe de la responsabilité internationale envers les territoires non autonomes, on envisageait la liquidation du problème colonial et le passage rapide des populations de l'état de dépendance à l'état d'indépendance nationale. Le rapport entre ces deux régimes et le problème de la paix est exposé clairement au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 76 de la Charte qui stipule que l'une des fins essentielles du régime de tutelle est d'"affermir la paix et la sécurité internationales".

34. Plus de 15 ans se sont écoulés depuis que la Charte des Nations Unies a solennellement proclamé parmi ses buts, ses principes, ses objectifs et ses idéaux l'accession des peuples dépendants à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance nationale. Lorsque l'Assemblée générale a examiné le problème du colonialisme à sa quinzième session, on a reconnu de façon générale que, si l'Organisation des Nations Unies, pendant ces 15 années, avait beaucoup aidé certains peuples dépendants à acquérir leur indépendance, il restait cependant encore des millions d'êtres humains auxquels on refusait de reconnaître ces droits inhérents à la personne humaine et qui étaient toujours asservis à la domination et à l'oppression étrangères.

35. Parfaitement consciente de ce fait douloureux et déplorable, l'Assemblée générale a jugé de son devoir

^{3/} Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique, tenue du 3 au 7 janvier 1961.

d'adopter la résolution 1514 (XV). Dans cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale déclarait solennellement qu'elle était

"... persuadée que le processus de libération est irrésistible et irréversible et que, pour éviter de graves crises, il faut mettre fin au colonialisme et à toutes les pratiques de ségrégation et de discrimination dont il s'accompagne".

Afin de donner effet à cette affirmation, l'Assemblée générale déclarait donc:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises dans ... tous ... [les] territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

36. Bien que la communauté des nations ait exprimé par cette déclaration son désir et sa volonté de mettre fin au colonialisme dans toutes ses manifestations, on continue à observer dans l'histoire du colonialisme des symptômes qui ne laissent pas d'être inquiétants et profondément regrettables.

37. Si certaines puissances coloniales ont compris qu'elles ne pouvaient pas s'opposer au déferlement de la vague de liberté et s'inclinent lentement devant le désir de la communauté internationale, d'autres cherchent obstinément à maintenir leur domination par la force des armes et l'oppression.

38. Depuis que la Déclaration a été adoptée, bien des événements se sont produits. Parmi les événements heureux il faut citer: l'admission du Sierra Leone à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, le fait que le Tanganyika accédera à l'indépendance le 9 décembre, que l'Ouganda accédera bientôt à l'indépendance, que le Samoa-Occidental deviendra libre le 1er janvier prochain. Dans d'autres territoires, en revanche, la situation s'aggrave rapidement, entraînant des souffrances et des pertes de vies humaines.

39. En Algérie, la guerre de libération est entrée dans sa huitième année. Presque chaque jour, nous recevons d'Algérie des nouvelles tragiques et inquiétantes sur la violence brutale et la répression exercées par la France contre le peuple algérien. Toutes les conférences internationales ont condamné la politique française en Algérie. Les chefs d'Etat qui se sont réunis à Belgrade^{4/} en septembre 1961 ont déclaré:

"Les pays participants estiment que la lutte du peuple algérien pour la liberté, l'autodétermination et l'indépendance, et pour l'intégrité de son territoire national, y compris le Sahara, est juste et nécessaire, et sont en conséquence décidés à accorder au peuple algérien tout l'appui et l'aide possibles^{5/}."

40. En Angola, le Gouvernement portugais mène une guerre coloniale contre le mouvement de libération des Angolais et continue à intensifier son action militaire dans les territoires qu'il administre.

41. La Conférence de Belgrade a déclaré à ce propos:

"Les pays participants ont avec beaucoup d'inquiétude appelé l'attention de la Conférence sur les événements d'Angola et les intolérables mesures de répression prises par les autorités coloniales portugaises contre le peuple angolais, et ils exigent qu'il soit mis fin immédiatement à toute effusion de sang en Angola; tous les pays pacifiques, particulièrement les Etats Membres des Nations Unies, devraient aider le peuple angolais à se constituer sans retard en Etat libre et indépendant^{6/}."

42. Au Sud-Ouest africain, la politique d'apartheid reste toujours la loi fondamentale qui régit la population. Dans les Rhodésies, les Africains ne sont toujours pas représentés convenablement aux organes législatifs et exécutifs; les intérêts des Africains sont encore subordonnés à ceux de la minorité.

43. Au Congo, les puissances coloniales essaient de saboter l'indépendance qu'elles ont été forcées d'accorder en raison de l'éveil national et elles cherchent à diviser le Congo afin de recouvrer leur domination par d'autres moyens.

44. L'Oman est toujours occupé par le Royaume-Uni. Dans notre région du monde, une autre forme de colonialisme existe: un Etat artificiel a en effet été créé avec l'aide et l'appui des puissances coloniales. Il convient de citer à ce propos la déclaration faite par le président Gamal Abdel Nasser lorsqu'il a pris la parole devant l'Assemblée à la quinzième session:

"L'impérialisme suit sa propre logique ... révélée dans le crime commis contre le peuple de Palestine, [logique qui] a consisté d'une part à rompre l'unité géographique du monde arabe et d'autre part à établir, au cœur même du monde arabe, une base d'où l'impérialisme pourrait menacer les peuples arabes. Je ne crois pas qu'il en existe de preuve plus évidente que la conspiration qui a abouti à l'agression tripartite menée contre nous en 1956."
[873ème séance, par. 131.]

45. Les exemples auxquels je viens de faire allusion sont en contradiction flagrante avec les idéaux et les objectifs élevés en vue desquels l'Organisation des Nations Unies a été créée. Ils révèlent un mépris regrettable de la Déclaration que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée l'an dernier et dans laquelle elle a affirmé que "la sujétion des peuples à une ... domination et à une exploitation étrangères ... compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales".

46. Comment les peuples africains, par exemple, peuvent-ils se sentir en harmonie avec la France, le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud, alors que leurs frères d'Algérie, d'Angola et du Sud-Ouest africain sont actuellement soumis à des mesures de répression parce qu'ils luttent pour la liberté?

47. N'oublions pas non plus que l'Assemblée générale a stipulé dans la Déclaration précitée que des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes.

48. Il faut aussi remarquer que l'Assemblée générale a condamné à juste titre toute tentative inspirée par le colonialisme et visant à porter atteinte à l'unité naionale d'un pays, tout en prétendant lui accorder une indépendance qui n'est que nominale. Nous ne savons que trop bien dans notre région du monde, instruits que nous sommes par une amère expérience, quels dommages sont causés, quelles injustices et quelles souffrances sont provoquées par un partage illégal et injuste des pays.

^{4/} Conférence des Etats non alignés, tenue du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

49. Les tentatives visant à détruire l'unité nationale ne sont pas seulement un phénomène du passé; on y a malheureusement encore recours, comme dans le cas de l'Irian occidental qui, tout en étant une partie intégrante de l'Indonésie, est actuellement détaché du reste du territoire de l'Indonésie sous le prétexte fallacieux de la libre détermination. On s'est efforcé de présenter cette séparation en la masquant sous diverses formes, dont la plus récente est la nouvelle proposition des Pays-Bas. On ne peut qu'être frappé par la tactique habile qui consiste à essayer de faire examiner la question de l'Irian occidental dans le cadre du point 88 de l'ordre du jour, relatif à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Toutefois, cette tactique ne peut changer les faits: l'Irian occidental fait partie de l'Indonésie. Si nous devons discuter la question de l'Irian occidental à propos de ce point de l'ordre du jour, nous devons le faire en tenant compte du paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), qui est ainsi conçu:

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

50. Etant donné la situation qui règne dans le monde aujourd'hui en ce qui concerne le problème colonial, l'Assemblée générale doit examiner sérieusement les mesures à adopter et les dispositions à prendre pour appliquer et mettre effectivement en vigueur la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

51. Les puissances coloniales n'ont cessé de répéter que, pour pouvoir atteindre cet objectif, il fallait de nombreuses années de travail pour préparer les populations aux responsabilités et aux charges qu'implique l'indépendance. De tels arguments ont été réfutés par l'histoire qui a montré très clairement que ces arguments ne sont avancés que pour justifier une prolongation indéfinie de la domination et de l'exploitation étrangères.

52. En conclusion, ma délégation est d'avis d'accorder immédiatement l'indépendance à tous les territoires dépendants qui n'ont pas encore obtenu la pleine souveraineté et l'entière liberté, et d'instituer des dispositifs appropriés et satisfaisants pour l'application effective de la Déclaration. Ma délégation s'est donc jointe à un certain nombre de délégations africaino-asiatiques pour présenter un projet de résolution en ce sens [A/L.366 et Add.1].

M. Quaison-Sackey (Ghana), vice-président, prend la présidence.

53. M. TARABANOV (Bulgarie): En 1960, l'Assemblée générale, sur la proposition de l'Union soviétique^{7/}, a discuté la question de l'abolition du colonialisme et adopté la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514

(XV)], préparée en collaboration étroite par les pays d'Asie et d'Afrique.

54. Ce document est un des plus grands et des plus nobles actes que les Nations Unies aient adoptés jusqu'à présent. Il est l'expression de la volonté des peuples du monde entier d'en finir une fois pour toutes avec ce fléau de l'humanité — la domination coloniale.

55. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a été conçue par ses auteurs en des termes particulièrement modérés afin que l'on pût arriver à un vote unanime. Ses dispositions étaient fondées sur les principes mêmes de la Charte des Nations Unies et en dérivait directement. Elle a trouvé un accueil enthousiaste auprès de l'opinion publique mondiale et plus particulièrement auprès des peuples des pays nouvellement libérés. C'est d'ailleurs la raison pour laquelle il ne s'est pas trouvé un seul Etat qui ait pu s'opposer ouvertement aux dispositions de ce document historique. Cette absence d'opposition ouverte, lors du vote, a été une grande victoire morale de l'opinion publique mondiale et des peuples du monde entier sur le colonialisme.

56. Il y a eu, certes, des délégations qui se sont abstenues de voter en faveur de cette résolution et c'étaient précisément les représentants des pays qui possédaient dans le passé et qui possèdent actuellement des colonies. Le fait même que ces pays se sont abstenus et n'ont pas voté contre la Déclaration a suscité l'espoir parmi certaines délégations que l'on ne se heurterait peut-être pas à une très forte opposition à la réalisation de cette idée noble — la libération des peuples coloniaux de l'esclavage.

57. Cependant, c'était mal connaître la nature et le caractère des colonisateurs et des impérialistes. Non seulement ils ne se sont pas conformés à l'esprit et à la lettre de la Déclaration, mais, durant l'année qui s'est écoulée depuis son adoption, ils ont entrepris de nouvelles actions, de nouvelles guerres contre les peuples qui se trouvent encore sous le joug colonial, ainsi que contre leurs aspirations et leur volonté d'accéder à l'indépendance.

58. La Déclaration a suscité l'enthousiasme et a raffermi la volonté des peuples coloniaux d'accéder le plus tôt possible à l'indépendance nationale; elle en a encouragé plusieurs à manifester cette volonté. C'est justement la manifestation du désir du peuple angolais de voir appliquer à cette colonie portugaise les idées et les principes contenues dans la Déclaration, de la voir libre après cinq siècles de joug colonial, qui a provoqué la répression féroce des colonialistes portugais contre la population autochtone, qui les a incités à se lancer contre elle dans une guerre sans merci. Les colonisateurs portugais ont exterminé plus de 50 000 Angolais — des hommes, des femmes et des enfants — rien qu'au cours d'une seule année. Près de 150 000 personnes ont été forcées de fuir leur pays natal en raison de la terreur. Des milliers d'Angolais ont été arrêtés, torturés, assassinés. Au lieu donc de se conformer à la Déclaration et d'accorder au peuple angolais le droit d'exprimer librement sa volonté d'accéder à l'indépendance, les colonisateurs portugais ont eu recours au génocide à l'égard de la population autochtone.

59. En Rhodésie du Nord et du Sud, les colons ont entrepris, avec la complicité bienveillante de la puissance coloniale, des mesures draconiennes pour l'affirmation et la consolidation du pouvoir d'une poignée d'esclavagistes. La terreur coloniale y a sévi pendant des mois et des mois. Il n'y a pas le moindre doute que ces actions ont été entreprises et poursuivies avec l'appui des autorités coloniales britanniques. Le dirigeant bien connu du mouvement de libération nationale en Rhodésie du Nord, Kenneth Kaunda, l'a exprimé d'une manière éloquente en déclarant: "Macleod nous a vendus à Welensky."

^{7/} Voir Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quinzième session, Annexes, point 87 de l'ordre du jour, document A/4501.

60. Il est à peine nécessaire de s'attarder sur la continuation et l'intensification de la terreur et de l'oppression en Afrique du Sud — dont les détails sont connus de cette assemblée — par lesquelles les racistes poursuivent leur politique inhumaine et abjecte de ségrégation raciale.

61. Les colonisateurs belges, d'un autre côté, continuent, eux aussi, leur répression sanglante contre la population du Ruanda-Urundi. Ils ont incité et stimulé les animosités et les luttes tribales afin de pouvoir prolonger leur domination sur ce pays; le résultat le plus récent en est l'assassinat du prince Rwagasore, premier ministre du Gouvernement du Burundi élu par le peuple.

62. La guerre coloniale menée depuis sept ans par les colons et les colonisateurs français contre l'héroïque peuple algérien a été intensifiée, ces derniers temps, et a occasionné au peuple algérien de nouvelles victimes et des souffrances considérables.

63. Si nous ne nous arrêtons pas sur tous les exemples d'oppression et de guerre ouverte que les puissances coloniales ont fournis en vue d'empêcher l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, c'est parce que la liste en serait trop longue. Voilà donc pourquoi certains pays se sont abstenus de voter en sa faveur. Voilà comment les colonisateurs et les impérialistes entendent l'appliquer. Et pourtant, dans cette même déclaration, il a été souligné, au paragraphe 4 du dispositif, qu'"il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète".

64. Allons-nous être les témoins muets de cette extermination des meilleurs patriotes des pays qui se trouvent encore sous le joug colonial? Et ceci, pour la seule raison qu'ils demandent le droit pour leurs peuples d'exprimer librement leur volonté de voir leur pays indépendant, leur désir de déterminer eux-mêmes leur statut politique? Cette organisation va-t-elle permettre que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux soit bafouée, que son désir de la voir appliquée serve de prétexte au déclenchement de nouvelles répressions contre les peuples coloniaux?

65. Dans l'atmosphère de sympathie ardente des peuples du monde entier pour les peuples se trouvant encore sous le joug colonial, sympathie qui a trouvé une expression palpable dans la Déclaration, comment était-il possible aux colonisateurs d'entreprendre des guerres coloniales contre les peuples opprimés et des répressions en masse contre les patriotes décidés à lutter pour libérer leur pays du joug colonial? Cette question est d'autant plus pertinente que, dans certains cas, des excès ont été commis par des pays tels que le Portugal qui, évidemment, n'ont pas la possibilité de mener, avec leurs propres forces, une action prolongée et de grande envergure — et ceci, sur des champs de bataille très éloignés.

66. Si les colonisateurs portugais ont été en état de le faire, c'est parce que, dans ce cas particulier, a joué la "Sainte-Alliance" des intérêts coloniaux. Les colonialistes ont serré leurs rangs, et les colonisateurs portugais ont puisé des forces dans leurs alliances militaires et les ont utilisées contre les peuples des colonies qui luttent pour l'indépendance de leurs pays. Les armes avec lesquelles les forces armées portugaises ont essayé de mater la révolte des patriotes angolais, rasant des villages entiers et exterminant leurs populations, ont été fournies par l'alliance militaire de l'Atlantique nord dont les buts agressifs sont bien connus. En effet, a-t-on jamais contesté que les avions qui ont servi à incendier au napalm les villages angolais ont été fabriqués et fournis par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique à leurs alliés portugais? Est-il possible au Portugal, un pays arriéré et pauvre, d'entreprendre des actions militaires dans des régions lointaines sans l'aide financière et militaire des Etats-Unis et de ses autres alliés de l'OTAN?

67. Par conséquent, il est désormais impossible aux impérialistes, membres de l'alliance de l'OTAN, de nier leur participation dans les guerres coloniales de leurs alliés, ainsi que dans l'oppression coloniale. Les manœuvres navales et aériennes combinées du Royaume-Uni et du Portugal à proximité des côtes de l'Afrique, en juin 1961, n'ont-elles pas été entreprises dans le but d'aider les opérations militaires portugaises et d'intimider le peuple d'Angola? La fourniture d'armes, d'aide matérielle, et l'appui moral dont jouit le Portugal dans son œuvre sanglante contre le peuple angolais et les peuples des autres colonies portugaises ne sauraient être niés. Dans sa réponse écrite à une question posée par un membre du Parlement britannique, le Premier Ministre de Grande-Bretagne a fait entendre, en effet, qu'en décidant que l'on pouvait envoyer des armes au Portugal on devait tenir compte de ses exigences militaires raisonnables en tant qu'allié de l'OTAN. Cependant les exigences militaires du Portugal, à l'heure actuelle, apparaissent clairement à tous: ce ne sont que les exigences d'une guerre coloniale contre les peuples qui luttent pour leur indépendance.

68. Les explications confuses des représentants qualifiés des Etats-Unis, selon lesquelles ils auraient fait savoir au Portugal que les armes fournies ne devaient pas être utilisées en Angola, démontrent que les Etats-Unis savent parfaitement où ces armes sont utilisées. Néanmoins, ils continuent à en procurer aux colonialistes portugais.

69. Il est un autre pays qui, ces dernières années, entre en lice pour s'assurer une participation plus large dans la compétition coloniale: l'Allemagne de l'Ouest, dépositaire des aspirations coloniales de l'Allemagne du Kaiser et de Hitler. Non seulement elle fournit des crédits pour l'exploitation des colonies, mais elle commence aussi à participer à l'organisation de cette exploitation, à fournir du matériel militaire pour écraser les luttes des peuples coloniaux.

70. En 1960, un éminent représentant a déclaré ici que "la guerre d'Algérie constitue la seule réalisation à l'actif de l'OTAN". En 1961, la liste des "réalisations" à l'actif de l'OTAN a été allongée par la guerre coloniale en Angola, la participation à l'agression contre le peuple tunisien à Bizerte, la continuation de la division du Congo, etc. Il devient donc de plus en plus évident qu'en plus des buts agressifs qui leur ont été assignés les alliances militaires des pays impérialistes — des Etats-Unis avant tout —, organisées dans les différentes parties du globe, servent également à réprimer la lutte des peuples coloniaux et semi-coloniaux qui cherchent à rejeter la domination coloniale et étrangère.

71. Cependant, la lutte des peuples des colonies pour leur libération nationale est de plus en plus active et pressante. L'opinion publique mondiale et les décisions de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies prouvent de plus en plus que, même pour les colonisateurs les plus acharnés, il est dorénavant impossible de conserver et même de prétendre détenir encore longtemps le pouvoir politique dans les colonies, du moins sous sa forme présente.

72. Pour les colonisateurs, le pouvoir politique dans les pays coloniaux n'était et n'est pas un but en soi, mais un moyen d'accaparer les richesses nationales des colonies, les sources immenses de matières premières et d'exploiter la main-d'œuvre coloniale. Cédant à la pression croissante des peuples, les colonialistes font cependant tout leur possible afin de conserver le pouvoir politique dans les colonies le plus longtemps possible; ils le font non seulement parce que c'est pour eux le moyen le plus efficace de s'assurer l'exploitation économique des peuples coloniaux, mais parce que cela leur permet, au cas où ils seraient obligés de lâcher prise, de disposer d'un délai supplémentaire pour organiser des positions de repli, pour organiser la continuation de cette exploitation sous d'autres formes de domination. D'ores et déjà, avant d'être forcées de quitter leurs colonies, les puissances coloniales cherchent par tous les moyens à s'assurer — soit par le truchement de traités secrets et inégaux, soit sous la forme d'une prétendue coopération — des avantages économiques et politiques dans leurs anciennes colonies. Ces traités, signés au moment ou avant même la remise définitive du pouvoir politique aux nouveaux Etats, représentent un danger réel pour la paix et l'indépendance de ces pays.

73. D'autre part, dans certains cas, les puissances coloniales se sont arrogé le droit, par des accords militaires inégaux, de garder des bases militaires dans des pays accédant à l'indépendance. Celles-ci sont destinées non seulement à défendre les intérêts de ces puissances et à continuer l'exploitation économique des pays dans lesquels elles sont installées, mais en même temps elles servent de places d'armes pour l'agression contre les pays voisins. En outre, elles représentent, dans le cas d'une guerre mondiale, un danger réel pour les populations des régions où elles se trouvent.

74. Les Nations Unies doivent prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour couper court à cette activité des puissances coloniales et de leurs alliés qui cherchent à engager d'avance l'avenir des peuples et des pays qui ont accédé ou sont en train d'accéder à l'indépendance. Elles doivent veiller, comme le stipule le paragraphe 5 du dispositif de la Déclaration, à ce que "des mesures immédiates [soient] prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés". Malgré les stipulations claires et explicites de cette déclaration — la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux — qui, au paragraphe 6 de son dispositif, rejette d'une manière catégorique "toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays" comme étant incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies, des tentatives sont faites pour détacher des régions entières de certains pays afin d'assurer la continuation de l'exploitation coloniale.

75. La manœuvre entreprise par les Pays-Bas dans le but de détacher l'Irian occidental de l'Indonésie, sous le prétexte fallacieux d'organiser un plébiscite soi-disant pour connaître les vœux de la population au sujet de son avenir, n'est qu'une nouvelle tentative des colonialistes et une nouvelle forme de la continuation déguisée de la domination coloniale. Depuis quand le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas — qui, lors des discussions de la Table ronde^{8/} avec les représentants du peuple indonésien aussi bien qu'au Conseil de sécurité, avait déclaré à maintes reprises que l'Irian occidental faisait partie intégrante des territoires connus sous la dénomination générale des Indes orientales néerlandaises —, s'est-il aperçu que l'Irian occidental ne représentait plus une partie de l'Indonésie? Ayant eu la possibilité d'étudier, pendant plus d'un siècle de domination coloniale sur ce pays, tous les détails de la composition ethnique de la population des Indes orientales néerlandaises, les représentants du Gouvernement des Pays-Bas auraient dû, au moment des Conférences de la Table ronde, être sûrs des déclarations qu'ils faisaient. Comment se fait-il, alors, qu'un peu plus tard ils se soient aperçus que cette population ne faisait plus partie de la population des îles indonésiennes? A n'en pas douter, c'est uniquement le désir de continuer leur domination sous une autre forme qui est à la base du projet de résolution [A/L.354] soumis par les Pays-Bas à cette assemblée.

76. Nous croyons que les délégations sont persuadées que ces contre-vérités, avancées uniquement dans le but d'aider les Pays-Bas à prolonger leur domination sur cette partie du territoire national indonésien, devraient être rejetées. Nous sommes certains que l'Assemblée générale ne permettra pas de manœuvres visant au démembrement du territoire d'un pays, sous couleur d'appliquer la déclaration sur l'abolition du système colonial. Au contraire, les Nations Unies devront prendre les mesures nécessaires afin que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas envisage des négociations tendant à trouver les modalités les plus appropriées pour restituer ce territoire à la République indonésienne.

77. Il existe des cas analogues et particulièrement frappants dans d'autres pays où des parties vives du territoire national sont détachées et continuent à servir de bases à une activité coloniale représentant un danger réel pour les pays dont le territoire et la souveraineté nationale ont été restreints de cette manière. C'est le cas par exemple des enclaves espagnoles d'Ifni, Sidi, Ceuta et Melilla, sur le territoire national du Maroc. Il est grand temps que cet état de choses disparaisse de ces contrées arrachées par la force du territoire national du Maroc. De pareilles survivances du passé, qui sont des empiétements physiques sur la souveraineté nationale des peuples, ne peuvent que servir à semer des conflits parmi les peuples et présentent un danger réel pour la paix.

78. Dans son intervention [1056ème séance] le représentant du Royaume-Uni est venu nous faire l'éloge de la politique coloniale de son pays aussi bien dans le passé que dans le présent. Il a insisté sur la prétendue nécessité de prolonger le joug colonial dans les nombreuses colonies britanniques qui existent à l'heure actuelle, pour que le Royaume-Uni puisse, d'après lui, les préparer convenablement à l'indépendance.

79. Nous ne nous serions certes pas attardés sur ces déclarations si elles ne constituaient pas une nouvelle démonstration frappante de l'opposition farouche que certains milieux manifestent à l'égard de la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes. Il est à remarquer néanmoins que tous les ans, alors que les peuples coloniaux, sous la poussée puissante de notre époque, se libèrent du joug colonial, les représentants du Royaume-Uni, au lieu de venir ici faire amende honorable pour toutes les souffrances que les colonisateurs britanniques ont fait endurer à ces peuples, deviennent de plus en plus oublieux des faits de l'histoire.

80. En 1960, en réponse à de tels arguments, qui montrent peu de respect pour les capacités intellectuelles des membres de cette assemblée, nous leur avons opposé les déclarations faites par un des inspirateurs les plus éminents de la politique coloniale britannique, au moment même de l'accession de l'Inde à l'indépendance. En 1961, le représentant du Royaume-Uni a cité le discours fait par le Premier Ministre britannique au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée [877ème séance]; il a mentionné une lettre envoyée, selon lui, au cours de l'été 1960, par le Premier Ministre à Nikita Khrouchtchev et a déclaré que cette lettre définissait toute la politique coloniale de son pays. Qu'a-t-il cité de cette lettre? Ceci: "Pendant plus d'un siècle, nous avons eu pour but de guider vers la liberté et l'indépendance les territoires dépendant de nous." Mais cette déclaration, ainsi que autres qu'il a faites, sont directement démenties par celles que nous avons eu l'occasion de citer [929ème séance], au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée, lors de notre intervention sur la question coloniale. En effet, nous avons cité la déclaration faite le 5 mars 1947 par sir Stafford Cripps, au nom du gouvernement travailliste quand il défendait la politique de ce gouvernement contre les critiques de l'opposition. Il disait:

"... En premier lieu, il [le gouvernement travailliste] pouvait essayer de renforcer le contrôle britannique en Inde en augmentant le personnel des services du secrétariat d'Etat et en renforçant considérablement les troupes britanniques, afin d'être en état de maintenir notre responsabilité administrative aussi longtemps que nécessaire, en attendant un accord entre les communautés hindoues. Une telle politique aurait eu pour résultat une décision bien déterminée de rester en Inde pendant au moins 15 ou 20 ans... La seconde solution était d'admettre que la première solution n'était pas possible... Une chose était évidemment impossible, c'était de décider d'y maintenir notre responsabilité pour une période indéfinie, lorsque nous n'avions pas la force pour le faire."

Donc, il devient absolument clair que le Royaume-Uni n'a pas quitté les Indes parce qu'il suivait une politique de libération de ses colonies, mais justement parce qu'il n'avait pas la force nécessaire d'y rester, parce qu'il n'avait pas la force militaire et économique de tenir sous sa férule le peuple indien, le mouvement de libération nationale indien. D'un autre côté, une autorité du Royaume-Uni sur la politique coloniale, sir Winston Churchill, a déclaré, en s'opposant bien entendu à la politique suivie à ce moment-là par le parti travailliste à l'égard de l'Inde: "Nous nous dissocions de la politique indienne du gouvernement et rejetons toute responsabilité quant aux conséquences qui vont assombrir et ensanglanter les prochaines années." Plus loin, s'opposant à la décision du gouvernement travailliste d'engager des pourparlers avec le mouvement national et avec l'Inde, sir Winston Churchill a souligné que si le Royaume-Uni ne possédait pas "la force militaire et la volonté nécessaires pour régler ses affaires en Inde d'une manière judicieuse" — une manière judicieuse signifie certainement, pour le représentant de l'opposition du moment, de perpétuer le joug colonial en Inde et d'instaurer un gouvernement qui suivrait les injonctions de la politique britannique — il ne devrait pas finir "par un sabotage prématuré et précipité", augmentant ainsi les maux et les malheurs, comme M. Churchill appelle la libération de l'Inde du joug colonial.

81. Voilà la politique du Royaume-Uni. Est-il possible maintenant de faire admettre que cette politique a été, depuis un siècle, une politique de libération des peuples coloniaux? Non. Cette politique a été un effort constant en vue de tenir les peuples coloniaux sous la férule des colonialistes; mais cette politique ne pouvait pas être maintenue plus longtemps parce que les différents gouvernements, devant la pression constante du mouvement de libération nationale dans les pays coloniaux et surtout devant la pression constante des peuples du monde entier ainsi que de cette organisation, n'ont pas pu maintenir leur politique. Voilà pourquoi ils ont décidé de partir.

82. Ces déclarations, venant d'hommes d'Etat britanniques, sont certainement édifiantes. Tels sont les faits, et personne ne pourra rien y changer.

83. Nous sommes certains que toutes les délégations — exception faite, bien entendu, de celles des puissances coloniales et de leurs alliés les plus proches — seront d'accord pour insister afin que des mesures soient prises pour l'application immédiate de la Déclaration sur l'abolition du colonialisme, des mesures urgentes et concrètes qui nous permettront de nous féliciter l'année prochaine d'un travail positif dans le sens de la libération de tous les peuples coloniaux.

84. Or, nous sommes tous témoins ici — comme nous venons de le voir — des efforts des puissances coloniales en vue de différer l'indépendance des colonies pour des années et des années, sous prétexte que certains des peuples coloniaux ne seraient pas encore mûrs pour l'indépendance, que l'on devrait donner aux colonisateurs le temps de les y préparer. Mais ils les préparent depuis des siècles!

85. Nous rejetons résolument cette thèse fallacieuse. Qui oserait affirmer maintenant que les peuples d'Algérie, du Kenya, d'Angola ou d'Oman — pour ne citer que quelques exemples —, des peuples qui ont sacrifié des dizaines et des centaines de milliers de vies dans leur lutte contre le joug colonial, ne sont pas mûrs pour l'indépendance?

86. Quant à la période de préparation — thème favori des colonisateurs — je viens de rappeler à cette assemblée qu'en 1947, lorsque les colonialistes britanniques se sont vus forcés d'accorder l'indépendance au peuple de l'Inde, ils ne parlaient que d'un seul manque de préparation; ils s'excusaient de ne pas avoir fait les préparatifs nécessaires pour retenir cette colonie par la force des armes pour une période de plusieurs décennies encore. Voilà les préparatifs qui n'ont pas été faits. L'envergure du mouvement de libération nationale ces derniers temps a pris, il est vrai, certains colonisateurs au dépourvu, et il se peut que, dans plusieurs territoires, ils n'aient pas encore achevé leurs préparatifs dans le but d'y sauvegarder leur position économique, sinon politique.

87. Voilà ce qui inquiète le plus les colonisateurs. Voilà pourquoi ils nous demandent d'attendre jusqu'à ce qu'ils se préparent pour le néo-colonialisme. Ce ne sont pas les peuples coloniaux qui ne sont pas prêts pour l'indépendance; ce sont les colonisateurs qui ont besoin de temps pour mieux préparer leur politique de néo-colonialisme.

88. L'Assemblée générale ne peut pas devenir complice des colonisateurs dans leurs desseins dissimulés. Nous avons assez d'exemples instructifs devant nous. On n'a accordé qu'un an de sursis aux colonisateurs au Katanga pour consolider leur position, et voilà qu'aujourd'hui le problème de liquider la domination économique aussi bien que politique du colonialisme sur la province la plus riche du Congo est plus complexe et plus difficile que jamais.

89. Chaque année, chaque mois qui passe est utilisé par les colonisateurs en Rhodésie pour consolider leurs positions; maintenant, ils menacent de transformer ce pays en une seconde Afrique du Sud. Chaque mois qui passe permet aux colonisateurs d'inventer de nouvelles théories au sujet de la "maturité des peuples coloniaux", la prétendue "impossibilité de décoloniser les petits territoires", et je ne sais quoi encore.

90. Voilà pourquoi il est plus que jamais urgent et nécessaire de prendre des mesures pour l'octroi immédiat de l'indépendance aux peuples coloniaux. C'est la raison pour laquelle notre délégation a salué l'initiative de la délégation de l'Union soviétique [A/4859] qui a soulevé la question de l'adoption, à la session actuelle, de mesures additionnelles et concrètes afin de mettre en œuvre sans délai la Déclaration sur l'abolition du colonialisme.

91. Les mesures envisagées dans le projet de résolution présenté par la délégation de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] ont pour but de couper court aux manœuvres des colonisateurs qui cherchent à différer l'heure de la libération complète des peuples coloniaux.

92. En premier lieu, nous appuyons la proposition qui fait l'objet du paragraphe 2 du dispositif et selon laquelle la fin de 1962 doit marquer la fin du colonialisme. Cette proposition est parfaitement réaliste, surtout si l'on applique les mesures envisagées au paragraphe 3 du dispositif, notamment la démocratisation de la vie aux colonies, l'organisation d'élections libres et l'établissement d'institutions nationales véritablement démocratiques qui assureraient le pouvoir, le retrait des troupes des puissances coloniales et la liquidation des bases militaires, l'abrogation de toutes les restrictions à la liberté, l'indépendance et la souveraineté de ces peuples. Si tous les peuples épris de paix unissaient leurs efforts pour surmonter l'hostilité et la résistance des colonisateurs, la mise en œuvre de toutes ces mesures serait parfaitement réalisable.

93. Notre délégation voudrait souligner l'importance particulière de la mesure envisagée dans le paragraphe 4 du dispositif: la création d'une commission spéciale "chargée d'examiner à fond et en détail la situation concernant l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et les mesures propres à mettre cette déclaration en œuvre".

94. La délégation bulgare voudrait soumettre à cette assemblée certaines considérations qui, à son avis, pourraient contribuer à la solution rapide de la question de l'octroi de l'indépendance aux peuples coloniaux.

95. Afin d'assurer l'absence complète de parti pris et de garantir la manifestation réelle de la volonté populaire dans les pays coloniaux, les Nations Unies devraient prendre une part très active à toutes les mesures préparatoires portant sur la proclamation d'une amnistie pleine et inconditionnelle en faveur de tous les détenus politiques, le retour de tous les émigrés politiques, l'organisation du suffrage universel, l'établissement des institutions nationales auxquelles serait transféré le pouvoir, l'organisation d'élections ou de référendums conformément aux conditions régnant dans chaque colonie, etc. Cette participation des Nations Unies devrait s'exercer non seulement lorsque ces mesures seraient prises, mais jusqu'à l'accession de chaque pays à l'indépendance. Un des moyens d'assurer un rôle actif à notre organisation, c'est d'envoyer sur place des missions spéciales des Nations Unies. Notre organisation a déjà acquis une expérience suffisante dans ce domaine, surtout en ce qui concerne les territoires sous tutelle. Nous sommes d'avis que cette expérience devrait être appliquée à toutes les colonies: face à l'octroi de droits et de pouvoirs plus larges aux missions qui y seraient envoyées.

96. En second lieu, il faudrait que la commission chargée de l'application de la Déclaration ait la possibilité de demander la discussion et l'adoption de ses recommandations quant à l'accession à l'indépendance de tel ou tel pays sans attendre l'ouverture de la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale. Cette commission traiterait de nombreuses questions urgentes et parfois complexes. Pour faciliter son travail, il faudrait qu'elle puisse faire un rapport à l'Assemblée générale sans aucun délai. Voilà pourquoi, à notre avis, la seizième session de l'Assemblée générale devrait rester ouverte — du moins en ce qui concerne les questions coloniales — pour que l'on puisse la convoquer durant la période allant jusqu'à l'ouverture de la dix-septième session ordinaire.

97. Voilà les suggestions que ma délégation avait l'intention de faire.

98. Guidés par l'idée de la libération de l'homme de toute exploitation, nous soutenons de tout cœur la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour leur libération de l'exploitation et du joug colonial, pour leur indépendance nationale. Nous sommes certains que cette lutte sera victorieuse. Cependant, nous pensons que, par ses décisions, l'Assemblée générale peut contribuer au succès de cette lutte héroïque et juste et empêcher beaucoup de souffrances et une effusion de sang provoquée par les colonisateurs dans leur obstination à s'accrocher à leur domination coloniale. De notre côté, nous voudrions réaffirmer que nous sommes prêts à accorder aux peuples coloniaux tout notre appui dans leur lutte sacrée pour la liberté et l'indépendance.

99. Le peuple bulgare est convaincu que, grâce aux efforts communs de tous les peuples épris de paix, notre assemblée sera en mesure d'élaborer les décisions et de prendre les mesures les plus appropriées pour que soient réalisées les aspirations des peuples coloniaux à l'octroi immédiat de la liberté et de l'indépendance.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

100. M. MAKAL (Guinée): Depuis son admission au sein de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la République de Guinée a toujours affirmé, par la voix de ses différentes délégations, que la colonisation, loin d'être une œuvre de bienfaisance et de charité ou une mission civilisatrice, est en réalité une agression caractérisée et une spoliation systématique perpétrée contre les peuples qui les subissent.

101. On pouvait s'attendre qu'à San Francisco^{2/} les nations souveraines, réunies pour élaborer la Charte des Nations Unies, condamnent sans équivoque ce phénomène et préconisent les moyens radicaux susceptibles d'y mettre une fin rapide et définitive. Malheureusement, on est bien obligé de constater que, malgré les dispositions du Chapitre XI de la Charte, celle-ci a été conçue comme un compromis de circonstances — qui ont d'ailleurs cessé d'exister.

102. Dès lors, il apparaît clairement que les puissances coloniales, par leur ruse, ont réussi à entraîner l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans leurs aventures coloniales sous des formes multiples dont la moindre n'est pas la tutelle. C'est pourquoi pour nous, peuples anciennement colonisés, résolument engagés dans la lutte pour la libération complète de nos frères encore ployés sous l'oppression étrangère, l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] n'a été qu'une juste réparation des graves lacunes de San Francisco. On se souvient encore qu'au cours des débats qui avaient précédé l'adoption à l'unanimité de cette résolution, le 14 décembre 1960, toutes les délégations d'Afrique et d'Asie avaient démontré brillamment le caractère essentiellement négatif et arbitraire de la colonisation et avaient demandé avec force son élimination immédiate et inconditionnelle sur tous les continents. Les convictions exprimées alors ont été formulées avec justesse dans la Déclaration qui proclamait solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Ces mêmes convictions ont été récemment proclamées avec force par les représentants de 25 pays non alignés, réunis à Belgrade^{10/} pour discuter des grands problèmes de l'heure.

103. La signification et la portée de la Déclaration n'échapperont à personne: elle constitue la volonté clairement manifestée par notre organisation de libérer des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains dont le processus de développement normal a été brusquement interrompu. Elle constitue également la condamnation sans appel du système de domination et d'exploitation d'un peuple par un autre. Pour toutes ces raisons, la délégation de la République de Guinée s'attendait à voir toutes les puissances coloniales signataires de notre charte — le Royaume-Uni, la France, l'Espagne, la Belgique, les Pays-Bas, l'Australie et la prétendue République sud-africaine — appliquer dans sa lettre et dans son esprit les mesures préconisées par la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Or, que constatons-nous un an après l'adoption de cette déclaration historique?

104. En ce qui concerne les territoires sous tutelle, tout en enregistrant avec satisfaction les décisions relatives à l'accession à l'indépendance du Tanganyika, le 9 décembre 1961, et du Samoa-Occidental, le 1er janvier 1962, force nous est de noter que ce fait ne résulte pas de l'application de la Déclaration, mais d'un processus engagé antérieurement à l'adoption de ladite Déclaration, processus essentiellement lié à la volonté exprimée avec force par les populations de ces deux territoires.

105. Au sujet du Ruanda-Urundi, nous ne pouvons qu'exprimer le ferme espoir que l'Assemblée générale, conformément aux aspirations et à la volonté des populations intéressées, décidera, au cours de la seizième session, la levée de la tutelle et l'accession immédiate à l'indépendance de ce territoire sous administration belge.

106. Quant aux territoires du Pacifique, l'on ne peut que déplorer leur lente évolution et affirmer à nouveau que tous les principes de la Déclaration leur sont applicables intégralement.

107. Parlant du Sud-Ouest africain, il suffit de rappeler que la prétendue République sud-africaine n'a jamais cessé de violer systématiquement toutes les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale, tout en accélérant le processus d'intégration illégale de ce territoire autrefois mis sous mandat par la Société des Nations dont notre organisation est la seule et unique héritière. Pour éviter à ce territoire la catastrophe que le gouvernement de Pretoria lui prépare, il est urgent que le Conseil de sécurité prenne en main son avenir et y applique résolument toutes les dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Telles sont les mesures que préconise le Gouvernement de la République de Guinée pour mettre fin sans délai aux aventures coloniales de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

108. La situation dans les territoires non autonomes, depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration, est restée statique. En effet, aucun des pays colonisés n'a accédé à l'indépendance en vertu de cette résolution. Le seul pays que nous ayons eu le plaisir d'accueillir parmi nous depuis le 14 décembre 1960, à savoir le Sierra Leone, a pu se libérer uniquement grâce à un accord intervenu antérieurement à l'adoption de la résolution, sous la pression des peuples africains. On nous signale par ailleurs l'accession prochaine de l'Ouganda à l'indépendance. Nous souhaitons à ce pays une indépendance réelle dans son intégrité territoriale.

109. Les quelques renseignements que les puissances administrantes se flattent de nous communiquer ne peuvent constituer en tout état de cause une application loyale de la Déclaration. Ils ne sauront être considérés favorablement par notre délégation que dans la mesure où ils nous indiqueront sans équivoque les méthodes et mesures concrètes prises en vue de l'accession des pays intéressés à leur souveraineté. En effet, la Déclaration dispose aux paragraphes 4, 5 et 6 — et je cite:

^{2/} Conférence des Nations Unies sur l'organisation internationale, réunie du 25 avril au 26 juin 1945.

^{10/} Conférence des pays non alignés, réunie du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète, et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée.

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes.

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

110. Qui oserait affirmer que ces dispositions essentielles ont été observées par les puissances coloniales, alors même que:

111. En Algérie, la France continue sa guerre d'extermination:

112. En Angola, le Portugal, désormais considéré comme un criminel de guerre par les peuples africains, persiste dans sa politique de génocide, a eu glé par sa propre fiction qui consiste à faire des Africains noirs des Portugais blancs.

113. L'Espagne, tout en acceptant de nous communiquer des renseignements sur ses colonies, s'accroche, elle aussi, à la fiction juridique des provinces d'outre-mer.

114. Quant au Royaume-Uni qui se vante de poursuivre une politique de dégageant colonial, il continue à asservir une quarantaine de territoires, y compris les Rhodésies, où le méprisable système de discrimination raciale est érigé en dogme d'Etat. La politique de néo-colonialisme de cette puissance s'est révélée au grand jour dans la triste affaire katangaise, avec toutes les graves conséquences qu'elle peut entraîner pour l'Afrique.

115. Que dire de la Belgique? Ce pays s'est définitivement disqualifié aux yeux des peuples africains par ses agissements au Congo et au Ruanda-Urundi.

116. Les Pays-Bas, quant à eux, après s'être opposés d'une façon persistante à toutes les décisions des Nations Unies en faveur des peuples coloniaux, ont déposé un projet de résolution [A/L.354] dans lequel ils prétendent "respecter le principe de l'autodétermination conformément aux principes de la Charte des Nations Unies" et proclament leur intention de mettre l'Irian occidental sous la tutelle des Nations Unies. Ils se présentent devant l'Assemblée sous le manteau du parfait décolonisateur décidé à appliquer la Déclaration. Mais en réalité, par leur refus d'appliquer cette déclaration à leurs possessions d'Amérique du Sud, ils violent le paragraphe 6 de son dispositif. Le projet de résolution que les Pays-Bas proposent, loin d'être l'application loyale du principe de l'autodétermination, n'a pour but que d'entraîner l'ONU dans les manœuvres d'autodestruction des Etats Membres. Ma délégation rejette en bloc toutes ces manœuvres d'inspiration et d'essence néo-colonialistes.

117. Tous ces faits prouvent que la résolution, dont l'adoption a soulevé tant d'espoirs chez les peuples coloniaux et qui constitue aujourd'hui l'élément déterminant de toutes les actions menées par les délégations opposées à la domination d'un peuple par un autre, n'a en fait connu aucune tentative d'application de la part des puissances coloniales. Il est par conséquent urgent de prendre les mesures nécessaires tendant à traduire dans les faits les diverses dispositions de la Déclaration. A cet égard, ma délégation a étudié avec attention et intérêt les mesures préconisées pour la mise en œuvre de la résolution. Elle salue toutes les délégations qui ont apporté et qui continuent d'apporter leur contribution positive à la liquidation du colonialisme. Cependant, elle n'est pas d'avis que la meilleure méthode d'accession à l'indépendance des pays coloniaux consiste à fixer des dates limites. En effet, nous savons par expérience que, sans ingérence étrangère, tout peuple, à tout moment, est capable de prendre en main ses destinées. L'exemple de mon pays prouve éloquemment le bien-fondé de cette affirmation puisque, aussi bien, la Guinée a accédé du jour au lendemain à l'indépendance et a pu surmonter, grâce à l'unité de son peuple et à la clairvoyance de ses leaders, les multiples obstacles créés sur son chemin. En plus, nous devons affirmer qu'aucun peuple consulté sur son sort n'accepterait que l'échéance de sa libération soit retardée d'un jour. Ma délégation met au défi tous les orateurs qui, du haut de cette tribune, soutiennent la thèse contraire en accordant un sursis au colonialisme. Il serait impensable de demander aux peuples d'Algérie ou d'Angola, qui journellement versent leur sang pour la reconquête immédiate de leur liberté, d'attendre encore plus longtemps. Cette considération est, bien entendu, valable pour tous les autres peuples victimes de la domination coloniale.

118. C'est pour toutes ces raisons que ma délégation ne saurait souscrire à la fixation d'une date, encore moins d'une date aussi extravagante que 1970, dont le moins qu'on puisse dire est que sa détermination relève de la plus haute fantaisie, à moins qu'elle ne soit inspirée par de mystérieux et malveillants oracles.

119. Au demeurant, ma délégation ne comprend pas les raisons qui ont présidé à l'inscription à l'ordre du jour du deuxième point que nous discutons sous sa forme actuelle. Elle estime que cette question, qui a fait l'objet de discussions à la Première Commission, au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée, a été dénaturée par une procédure insidieuse. On sait que ses aspects social et économique ont été transférés aux commissions compétentes. Quant à son aspect politique, il s'intègre intimement dans l'application de la Déclaration qui s'applique à toutes les colonies, quel que soit le continent où elles existent.

120. C'est forte de ces considérations que ma délégation propose ce qui suit.

121. Premièrement, nous demandons que l'Assemblée réaffirme les objectifs et les principes incorporés dans la Déclaration sur la fin du colonialisme. Deuxièmement, nous exigeons que les puissances coloniales libèrent immédiatement tous les territoires soumis à leur contrôle. Troisièmement, nous demandons la création d'un comité spécial qui aurait pour rôle de veiller à l'application de la Déclaration, de faire des suggestions et des recommandations, notamment dans les domaines de l'instauration du suffrage universel dans les territoires coloniaux; auparavant, une amnistie inconditionnelle serait accordée à tous les détenus politiques, en vue de l'établissement d'organes législatifs et exécutifs démocratiques auxquels tous les pouvoirs devront être transférés sans limitation aucune. Le comité pourrait se réunir partout où il le jugerait utile pour s'acquitter de sa tâche. Ce programme constitue un minimum sur lequel on ne pourrait transiger.

122. Ma délégation a toujours affirmé que la décolonisation est une condition nécessaire à la réalisation de la paix, car elle est une étape essentielle de tout programme réaliste de désarmement général et complet. Il est clair que la décolonisation, impératif de notre temps, se fera avec ou sans la collaboration des puissances coloniales. Il appartient à celles-ci de choisir, dans l'intérêt de tous les peuples, la voie la plus raisonnable. La Déclaration trace cette voie. Il reste aux puissances coloniales à s'y engager loyalement et résolument dans l'intérêt de la paix et de la sécurité internationales.

123. Quant à nous, Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, notre rôle est aussi clair que précis. Nous devons parachever la grande œuvre commencée en 1960, par la fixation des meilleures conditions et modalités de mise en application immédiate de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux peuples et pays coloniaux. C'est le moins que les peuples opprimés de tous les continents, et en particulier les peuples africains, attendent de la seizième session de l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

M. Rossides (Chypre), vice-président, prend la présidence.

124. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Inde pour la présentation d'un projet de résolution.

125. M. Krishna MENON (Inde) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation avait d'abord demandé la parole pour présenter un projet de résolution [A/L.367] concernant l'Irian occidental. Depuis que nous avons été autorisés à prendre la parole, nous avons pu nous entendre avec la délégation de l'Indonésie pour prendre sa place à la présente séance et, afin de faire gagner du temps à l'Assemblée, nous avons cru bon de traiter de la question, sur laquelle nous aurions parlé de toute façon à l'occasion de ce projet de résolution.

126. Je voudrais, si l'on veut bien me le permettre, exprimer nos vues sur cette discussion générale de la question du colonialisme. Nous sommes déjà parvenus à un point si avancé dans ce débat que certaines déclarations peuvent peut-être paraître se répéter.

127. La décision de mettre fin au régime colonial a été prise par l'Assemblée pendant la première partie de sa quinzième session et de nombreuses déclarations ont aussi été prononcées à ce sujet pendant la reprise de cette quinzième session. De nombreux orateurs ont parlé de la situation dans les pays coloniaux et des dangers qu'il y aurait à ne pas mettre fin à cet état de choses. Maintenant encore, en cette enceinte, ce problème est évoqué à tout moment, soit à la Quatrième Commission, soit à l'Assemblée, soit en l'une ou l'autre des diverses commissions. Comme dans le cas du désarmement — mais peut-être dans une moindre mesure — où, tout en parlant depuis des années de désarmer, nous continuons à accumuler des armes, de même dans le cas des colonies, bien qu'aucune colonie nouvelle n'ait été créée, une bataille d'arrière-garde se poursuit et malheureusement, dans le cas de certaines puissances, les empires semblent avoir la vie dure.

128. Mais permettez-moi d'exposer la position de mon gouvernement. Nous ne considérons plus la liquidation du colonialisme comme un sujet de troubles ou de revendications de la part des pays anciennement ou encore actuellement sous le régime colonial. C'est maintenant aux Nations Unies qu'il appartient de s'en occuper, car elles ont adopté la résolution 1514 (XV) pratiquement à l'unanimité et, qui plus est, elles ont invité les pays qui administrent des territoires dépendants à mettre fin à leur domination. Donc, il n'est plus question de faire de l'agitation d'un certain côté ou même de chercher à établir le bien-fondé de la question. Nous avons déjà statué. Tout ce qu'il faut maintenant, c'est que les puissances qui exercent encore leur pouvoir dans certains pays — quelles que soient les dispositions juridiques ou les modalités auxquelles réponde cette situation — renoncent à leur domination. Nous pourrions alors faire gagner du temps à l'Assemblée et, qui mieux est, nous pourrions empêcher que ne se reproduisent des événements semblables à ceux du Congo, ou de l'Angola, ou de l'Algérie, et nous pourrions même, mieux encore, mettre fin à la crise qui sévit encore au Congo, ou en Angola, ou en Algérie.

129. La question dont nous sommes saisis maintenant est celle de l'application de cette résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Etant donné l'importance de la question, on peut dire que la résolution est concise, à l'exception du préambule, et elle fait ressortir que la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation ou une domination étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme. Toutefois, il n'y a rien dans cette résolution qui ne figure déjà dans la Charte. Dans les dissensions qui séparent les hommes à travers le monde, les difficultés ne proviennent pas du fait qu'il n'y a pas assez de lois, de codes d'éthique ou autres, mais du fait que les hommes ne s'y soumettent pas.

130. En revanche, il serait faux de penser qu'on n'a pas réalisé de gros progrès. Ainsi, à cette séance, les représentants d'anciens pays colonisés semblent monopoliser la présidence, que ce soit le Président ou le Vice-Président qui occupe en ce moment le fauteuil présidentiel. Il y a quelques années seulement, cinq, six ou sept ans, nous entendions réclamer du haut de cette tribune l'indépendance de ces pays et aujourd'hui non seulement ces pays sont devenus des Etats indépendants, mais leurs représentants président aux destinées de l'Organisation. Ce sont là des choses que nous oublions parfois, mais si tous les Etats Membres s'en souvenaient ils se rendraient compte de l'énormité de la faute qu'ils commettent en prolongeant leur domination coloniale; en effet, dès que le démon des empires est exorcisé, non seulement des populations se trouvent libérées dans le monde, mais aussi leurs vastes énergies; leurs frustrations disparaissent et le domaine de la liberté s'agrandit en ce monde.

131. En ce qui concerne la résolution 1514 (XV), nous sommes maintenant passés du stade des revendications, des justifications ou même des plaintes au stade de la mise en application de ce texte. C'est-à-dire que notre but doit être d'appliquer les décisions prises par l'Assemblée — et, quand je dis "notre but", j'entends non seulement les pays coloniaux et les anciens pays coloniaux, mais toute l'Assemblée qui doit désormais passer à la tâche concrète du démantèlement des empires, afin que les territoires soient rendus à leurs peuples respectifs dans des conditions qui permettent l'accroissement effectif de leur liberté. Ainsi se trouveront corrigés certains des déséquilibres qui existent, étant donné que le monde ne peut pas être moitié libre et moitié esclave, non plus que les pays.

132. Je reviens maintenant au projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1] dont l'Assemblée est maintenant saisie. Je n'ai pas l'intention de l'examiner paragraphe par paragraphe, mais je veux parler de certaines clauses de son dispositif.

133. Nous regrettons qu'il soit nécessaire de présenter ce projet de résolution. Mon pays, que ce soit à l'Assemblée ou au Conseil de tutelle, depuis quatre ou cinq ans, s'est toujours opposé en principe à la fixation d'une date. Ce n'est pas que nous craignons que les colonies ne soient libérées trop vite, mais nous pensons que la fixation d'une date risque de donner aux puissances administrantes l'impression qu'elles n'ont plus le devoir de s'efforcer de réaliser des progrès en tenant compte du calendrier des événements. D'autre part, je me souviens parfaitement qu'il y a quelques années, lorsqu'on examinait la question du Tanganyika, certains membres du Conseil de tutelle voulaient que ce territoire accédât à l'indépendance dans un délai de 10 ans; à cette époque, la puissance administrante estimait qu'il faudrait 50 ans. Cependant, dans quelques jours le Tanganyika deviendra indépendant et, sans aucun doute, sera bientôt admis comme Membre de l'Organisation.

134. Quant au propre pays du Président de l'Assemblée, il fut un temps où l'on prétendait, pour ne pas avoir à le libérer, que ce n'était pas une colonie — je reviendrai sur ce point dans un instant lorsque je parlerai de nos amis du Portugal, non que nous ayons contre eux une aversion toute particulière, mais parce que leur cas nous pose un problème et que nous devons l'examiner.

135. Maintenant, selon les termes du projet de résolution, nous sommes invités à réitérer et à réaffirmer solennellement certains objectifs et principes. Point n'est besoin que quiconque parle en faveur de cette cause. J'irai même plus loin et je dirai que ce projet de résolution représente dans une certaine mesure un compromis pour beaucoup de délégations aussi ne devrait-il y en avoir aucune à l'Assemblée qui vote contre son adoption.

136. L'an dernier, lorsque la résolution 1514 (XV) a été adoptée, nous avons invité les puissances coloniales à prendre des mesures immédiates pour l'appliquer. Cela signifiait que certaines mesures devaient être prises, sans tenir compte de dates, afin qu'aucune colonie ne se trouve aujourd'hui dans la même situation qu'à l'époque de l'adoption de cette résolution. Lorsqu'une puissance métropolitaine n'en a rien fait, lorsqu'un pays colonial n'a pas au moins bénéficié d'une liberté un peu plus grande qu'auparavant, on peut dire que la résolution n'a pas été respectée par l'Etat Membre intéressé et cela doit être considéré comme une faute dans sa conduite envers l'Assemblée.

137. C'est pourquoi nous en sommes venus cette année à nous préoccuper de l'application des décisions de l'Assemblée. En effet, l'Assemblée est maîtresse de sa propre procédure et, puisqu'elle a pris cette décision pratiquement à l'unanimité, il est normal que, dans le cadre de sa compétence et des dispositions de la Charte, elle institue un dispositif pour lui donner effet. Le paragraphe 3 du dispositif de ce projet de résolution prévoit donc la création d'un comité spécial de 17 membres qui seront désignés par le Président de l'Assemblée générale au cours de la présente session.

138. Ma délégation est particulièrement heureuse que ce soit le Président de l'Assemblée qui doive procéder à cette désignation car la question sera ainsi maintenue en dehors de la guerre froide et de toutes les discussions de géographie, c'est-à-dire qu'il ne sera pas question de savoir si, sur la carte, tel pays appartient à l'Asie ou tel autre à l'Afrique. C'est le Président qui, avec sa sagesse et dans l'exercice normal de ses fonctions, en consultation avec les diverses parties intéressées, exercera son jugement et nommera un comité de 17 membres, chargé non pas d'étudier si telle ou telle colonie est prête ou non pour sa libération, mais de réaliser cette libération, c'est-à-dire le processus de démembrement des empires.

139. Ce comité étudiera l'application de la Déclaration et suggérera les moyens de donner rapidement effet à ce texte. Il n'est nullement question que ce comité soit un nouveau conseil de tutelle ou un nouveau super-Etat, ou encore qu'il soit investi d'une sorte de pouvoir de condominium sur les territoires; ce comité aura simplement pour objectif de mettre en œuvre les dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV).

140. Nous devons malheureusement tenir compte du fait qu'en dépit du caractère unanime de ces décisions de l'Assemblée il existe des pays — heureusement très peu nombreux — qui refusent de coopérer avec l'Assemblée pour mettre ses résolutions en application. Depuis des années, l'Assemblée n'a pu obtenir la coopération de la partie directement intéressée en ce qui concerne les résolutions qu'elle a adoptées sur la discrimination raciale et il a donc fallu, dès 1954 ou 1955, créer des comités pour entreprendre des enquêtes dans certaines régions du monde.

141. Tous les Membres de l'Assemblée savent qu'à la Quatrième Commission, depuis deux ans, nous avons dû lutter avec acharnement pour persuader le Gouvernement portugais de remplir les obligations prévues par la Charte; et, depuis longtemps, même ceux qui nous paraissaient plus éclairés avaient l'impression qu'en communiquant des renseignements sur les territoires coloniaux ils nous faisaient une faveur. Il n'en est rien; c'est là une obligation imposée par la Charte aux puissances coloniales qui doivent communiquer, avec certaines limitations, des renseignements sur les territoires dépendants qu'elles administrent. Ce principe est maintenant admis et je suis heureux de constater que la Quatrième Commission a adopté, il y a seulement quelques heures, un autre projet de résolution concernant les territoires non autonomes, qui a également pour objet de favoriser la décolonisation et qui invite les puissances métropolitaines à prendre des mesures pour aider à former des fonctionnaires et techniciens autochtones compétents dans les territoires dépendants afin de donner une application effective aux résolutions de l'Assemblée.

142. Cet aspect particulier de la question, dont l'Assemblée n'a cependant pas encore été saisie, est très important et l'on s'en rend compte si l'on considère ce qui se passe au Congo. Rien ne condamne plus catégoriquement le colonialisme que ce qui se passe au Congo — et je ne veux pas tant parler du retour des Belges, ou des mercenaires, ou de Tshombé, ou de détails de ce genre, que du fait même qu'après des années de domination un pays métropolitain laisse un territoire dans une situation d'anarchie telle qu'à son départ la guerre civile et l'intervention étrangère ne puissent être évitées. Voilà en effet le tableau le plus déplorable de la domination coloniale qu'il ait été donné à l'Assemblée de contempler.

143. Un autre paragraphe de ce projet de résolution donne à ce comité spécial l'autorisation de se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Cela ne veut pas dire que nous donnions à ce comité l'autorisation de négocier avec les gouvernements d'Etats souverains au sujet de leurs territoires coloniaux. Cependant, dans bien des cas, il n'est pas possible d'obtenir les renseignements voulus ici et, dans le cas d'un ou de deux pays avec lesquels nous avons déjà tenté de négocier, nous avons constaté que ces pays ne permettaient pas aux délégations des Nations Unies de pénétrer sur les territoires considérés; nous devons donc donner à ce comité l'autorisation de se réunir là où il l'estimera bon afin d'obtenir les renseignements recherchés et de s'acquitter de sa mission.

144. Les autres paragraphes traitent d'aspects plus constructifs de la question et il y est demandé au Conseil de tutelle, au Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, aux institutions spécialisées, etc., de travailler à cette fin dans leurs domaines d'activité respectifs. Il n'est pas nécessaire que je m'étende sur ce point, si ce n'est pour rappeler qu'il y a certaines régions des empires coloniaux où cette résolution n'a pas été respectée et où l'on semble encore vivre dans des conditions inchangées depuis bien des dizaines d'années.

145. A ce propos, je n'ai cessé de répéter que nous reconnaissons toujours les progrès qui sont réalisés et que nous en rendons hommage à qui de droit lorsqu'il y a lieu. S'il est vrai que l'Empire britannique compte encore une trentaine ou une quarantaine de territoires coloniaux et environ 30 à 40 millions d'êtres humains sous sa domination — ce vaste empire sur lequel, disait-on, le soleil ne se couchait jamais et qui s'étendait sur toutes les mers et tous les continents — là du moins le processus de liquidation a commencé. Nous éprouvons nous-mêmes quelque fierté à penser que nous avons encouragé ce processus. Cependant, il reste toujours ces territoires dont je viens de parler — encore que certains d'entre eux, comme le Tanganyika, soient sur le point d'accéder à l'indépendance et que, je l'espère, les territoires de l'Afrique orientale britannique doivent venir bientôt se joindre à nous en tant qu'Etats indépendants. Je tiens à exprimer l'espoir que l'on ne cherchera pas à reprendre d'une main ce qu'on donne de l'autre, car toute tentative pour porter atteinte à l'indépendance nationale qui est accordée aurait de très graves répercussions; la responsabilité, c'est-à-dire l'exercice du pouvoir, ne serait plus en effet du ressort de la puissance métropolitaine et, en même temps, ne serait pas encore solidement établie chez les populations coloniales elles-mêmes.

146. Donc, il reste encore ce vaste territoire de l'ancien Empire britannique et, dans certains cas comme celui de la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland — sur ce point je ne fais aucune réserve —, nous attendons fiévreusement de voir ce qui adviendra, car au début de ce siècle, sous l'influence du libéralisme qui avait caractérisé le XIX^{ème} siècle, l'Empire britannique a accordé ce qu'on a appelé l'indépendance à une minorité d'habitants de cette terre de l'Union sud-africaine, qui a environ deux siècles de retard sur la civilisation moderne pour toutes ces questions, ce qui a eu pour conséquence qu'une petite minorité n'a acquis l'"indépendance" que pour opprimer les autres.

147. La Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland est géographiquement, politiquement, sentimentalement et "morale" proche de l'Union. Dans les trois territoires du Souaziland, du Betchouanaland et du Bassoutoland qui connaissent certaines difficultés sur le plan géographique et dans le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain qui devrait être un territoire sous tutelle, des problèmes particuliers se posent. Si ces pays reçoivent simplement une indépendance creuse mais non son contenu, nous condamnerons encore des millions et des millions d'êtres humains à la domination et au racisme d'une petite minorité. C'est pourquoi mon pays reste vigilant sur ce point. Nous ne souhaitons nullement retarder le progrès de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland réunis. Nous ne voulons nullement nous prononcer sur les avantages ou les inconvénients d'une fédération ou d'un système non fédéraliste. Ce qui nous intéresse c'est que la population africaine, la population asiatique ou toute autre population qui n'appartiennent pas à la race des dirigeants ne deviennent pas les esclaves d'un empire et ne connaissent pas le même genre de démocratie que celle des Grecs d'il y a 2 000 ans, alors que les destinées et la liberté de 300 personnes exigeaient l'oppression de 30 000 personnes. C'est pourquoi, tout en restant vigilants sur ce point, nous ne souscrivons pas à la perpétuation de l'empire. En cette matière, le Royaume-Uni a le devoir envers lui-même, envers ses associés du Commonwealth, envers le bon exemple qu'il a donné au cours des quelques dernières années en hâtant le processus de libération, de faire en sorte qu'un plus grand nombre d'êtres humains ne se trouvent pas condamnés à l'esclavage racial sous prétexte de libération.

148. Je passe maintenant à l'exemple classique de l'empire du XX^{ème} siècle, l'empire du Portugal. Ce pays d'Europe relativement petit a sous sa domination — si mes chiffres sont exacts, comme je le crois — environ 3 300 000 km² de territoires en Afrique et en Asie, et ces territoires comptent à eux tous plus d'habitants que le Portugal même.

149. Or on s'efforce non seulement de perpétuer le colonialisme dans ces territoires, mais encore on cherche à tromper l'Assemblée en prétendant qu'ils font partie du Portugal. Je voudrais que vous examiniez cette affirmation non pas simplement du point de vue de la terminologie. Lorsqu'un pays déclare que le territoire d'un autre lui appartient, il adopte une attitude différente de celle des autres pays métropolitains — la Grande-Bretagne, par exemple, qui déclare toujours "nous possédons tel territoire, mais nous espérons qu'un jour il sera libre" — même si, dans ce cas, "un jour" veut dire dans 500 ans — alors que dans le cas du Portugal cette affirmation signifie que, non seulement aujourd'hui mais à jamais, ce pays refusera d'accorder l'indépendance à des populations coloniales sous prétexte que ce ne sont pas des populations coloniales. C'est ainsi que les Portugais procèdent. Ils leur disent: "Vous n'êtes pas des populations coloniales, vous faites partie du Portugal." Cependant, si elles font partie du Portugal, elles devraient jouir des droits civiques et de toutes les égalités qui accompagnent ces droits.

150. Voilà donc un Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui, non seulement aujourd'hui, non seulement demain, mais toujours, refusera de donner à un peuple la patrie qui est en fait la sienne. Et alors que le puissant Empire britannique a jugé bon, par habileté politique, par clairvoyance, par bon sens et par décence, de renoncer à tous pouvoirs dans son grand empire de l'Inde, peut-on croire que le petit territoire enclavé dans l'Inde et que le Portugal considère comme faisant partie du Portugal va rester dans la sujétion? Peut-on imaginer que notre désir de ne pas provoquer d'actions guerrières en quelque endroit que ce soit, notre répugnance à agir directement et à créer dans le monde encore plus de difficultés qu'il n'y en a déjà, vont durer indéfiniment? On ne peut certes pas opprimer indéfiniment des populations.

151. L'autre jour, parlant devant la Quatrième Commission [1207ème séance] parce que le représentant du Portugal avait contesté certaines déclarations de notre premier ministre, j'ai eu l'occasion de répéter qu'en tant qu'Etat nous n'avions pas abjuré l'emploi de la force. Il y a en Inde beaucoup de pacifistes qui ne veulent pas de l'emploi de la force. Les enseignements de Gandhi étaient opposés à l'emploi de la force. Toutefois, en tant qu'Etat nous disposons d'une armée, d'une marine et d'une aviation, qui je l'espère ont de la valeur. Nous n'avons donc pas abjuré l'emploi de la force. Nous avons signé la Charte et nous sommes disposés à mettre les forces armées de notre pays à la disposition des Nations Unies. Par conséquent si l'agression se poursuit indéfiniment, si nos populations risquent à tout moment d'être abattues de sang-froid, s'il n'y a pas de liberté civile et si la paix et la sécurité de notre pays d'une part et celles du monde entier d'autre part sont mises en danger par les conflits incessants qui se déroulent sur notre territoire, nul n'a le droit, ni même en vertu de la Charte des Nations Unies, ni en vertu d'aucune loi de morale, d'aucune règle d'éthique politique, d'aucun principe régissant le comportement des Etats sur le plan international, d'empêcher un Etat souverain comme le nôtre de chercher à parachever la libération de l'ensemble du pays.

152. Comme on l'entend souvent dire en Inde, pour nous Goa est comme une œuvre inachevée. J'entends par là qu'il y avait sur notre territoire trois puissances coloniales, dont l'une était la Grande-Bretagne, la plus importante de toutes. Nous avons négocié avec cette puissance et c'est vraiment ce qui importe le plus. Il y avait ensuite la France qui possédait sept enclaves dans notre pays et, par de patientes négociations, nous sommes parvenus à une solution en vertu de laquelle nous avons au moins obtenu que ces territoires, aussi petits soient-ils, nous soient transférés en fait, et je ne pense pas que le transfert de droit se fasse longtemps attendre.

153. Nous avons longtemps essayé de négocier, nous avons maintenu des missions à Lisbonne, nous avons négocié avec les Portugais. Nous avons agi ainsi même lorsqu'ils se sont adressés à la Cour internationale de Justice en invoquant des motifs indéfendables, lorsqu'ils ont revendiqué le droit de passage sur notre territoire souverain afin d'opprimer les habitants de leur colonie. Nous nous sommes toujours conformés à la Charte et au droit des gens.

154. Ce que j'ai déclaré l'autre jour devant la Quatrième Commission reste la politique de mon gouvernement. Nous n'aurons pas recours à l'emploi de la force si nous pouvons l'éviter. Toutefois, le moment venu, si l'agression se poursuit de telle sorte que des milliers et des milliers d'êtres humains soient obligés d'endurer cette situation, si l'opinion publique de notre pays ne peut plus supporter de voir que des frères de race soient assassinés et si le territoire devient également une arène où s'affrontent les intrigues internationales, alors, en qualité d'Etat souverain, nous nous réservons le droit de prendre les mesures qui nous plairont, sous réserve de respecter le droit des gens. C'est tout ce que nous avons déclaré et notre position reste inchangée.

155. Mais, cela dit pour éclairer la situation, nous ne nous précipitons pas en cette affaire, sachant pertinemment que le recours à l'emploi de la force, quelle qu'en soit la justification, a toujours d'autres conséquences. Néanmoins il n'est pas possible qu'un Etat souverain, disposant de ressources suffisantes pour sa défense et pour sauvegarder sa dignité et sa souveraineté, reste longtemps impassible. Ce n'est pas là tenir des propos violents. Il n'est pas question d'adresser un ultimatum au Portugal ou de prendre une mesure quelconque de ce genre. Cependant, notre peuple s'impatiente et notre gouvernement s'est efforcé depuis tant d'années déjà de modérer cette impatience que nous ne pourrions longtemps contenir ce sentiment inspiré par des motifs légitimes et par le désir d'être libre.

156. Telles sont les déclarations que je voulais faire à propos de certains territoires d'Asie.

157. En Afrique, je dois parler de l'Angola et du Mozambique et d'autres territoires où sévit aujourd'hui une cruauté telle qu'elle surpasse encore ce que l'on avait connu au temps de l'impérialisme, pendant des centaines d'années. Des gens ont été victimes d'assassinats, un grand nombre de personnes ont été chassées de chez elles avec leur famille. Il y a de nombreux réfugiés. Les mesures de répression qui sont prises sont incompatibles non seulement avec la Charte mais encore avec l'attitude que l'on doit pouvoir attendre d'un Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. A aucune tribune nous n'avons jusqu'ici soulevé cette question, si ce n'est pour appeler sur elle l'attention des autres Etats Membres et pour alerter l'opinion publique; j'espère que l'opinion publique saura en prendre note, car l'opinion publique est souvent le remède le plus efficace contre les maux qui affligent le monde, et l'on est parvenu aujourd'hui au point où le pays intéressé n'a plus d'amis qui soient favorables au maintien de son empire. Nous sommes l'un des peuples qui désirent rester amis avec ce pays; notre peuple s'est trouvé associé à la civilisation portugaise, encore que ce fût par le moyen de la conquête, pendant trois ou quatre cents ans. Certaines personnes parlent la langue; il n'est pas dans notre intention, pas plus que dans le cas de Pondichéry, d'effacer ce qui a laissé une empreinte historique, en apportant l'indépendance et la libération à ces régions.

158. Cependant, d'un autre côté, l'impérialisme du Portugal est l'une de ces choses qui tournent en dérision la résolution 1514 (XV). Il s'agit d'un pays relativement petit mais qui a, il est vrai, des alliés puissants. Et une fois de plus, sans vouloir offenser personne, aucune grande puissance, nous tenons à dire que l'alliance armée de pays coloniaux avec d'autres pays nous cause quelque inquiétude car ce déploiement de forces ne peut durer longtemps — c'est le cas en Algérie où, nous dit-on, près de la moitié de l'aviation française et une partie importante de la flotte française s'emploient à réprimer le soulèvement du peuple algérien. De nombreux pays ont maintenant reconnu le Gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne. De nombreux autres ne l'ont pas encore fait. Ce n'est qu'une question de discrétion et de patience. Le moment ne tardera plus où la France devra reconnaître qu'il n'y a pas à l'heure actuelle, en 1961, deux manières de régler la question des territoires coloniaux. Ou bien on s'y maintient et l'on en subit les conséquences, ou bien on s'en retire et l'on se conforme aux principes de la Charte. Que l'on songe donc à l'Empire français en Afrique où, pour ajouter à toutes les autres difficultés, on a notamment utilisé ces territoires et cette région pour y faire des essais d'armes nucléaires, contre le gré et sans l'assentiment des populations africaines.

159. Telles sont donc les tâches encore inachevées dans le domaine colonial; telles sont les raisons pour lesquelles 28 orateurs ont parlé devant l'Assemblée au cours des cinq ou six dernières séances et, en un sens, notre temps a été bien employé. Nous avons pris des décisions et nous devons continuer notre tâche. Au paragraphe 3 du dispositif du projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1], on lit qu'un comité spécial sera créé. Je ne doute nullement que le Président ne prenne les mesures nécessaires dès que l'Assemblée aura adopté ledit projet de résolution.

160. Nous sommes aussi saisis de deux autres projets de résolution, l'un présenté par la Nigéria [A/L.357] et l'autre par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355]. Ma délégation aura sans doute quelque chose à dire en temps opportun sur ce second texte mais, pendant que je suis à cette tribune, je tiens à dire, sans aucune réserve, que le Gouvernement indien n'accepte pas le paragraphe 1 du dispositif du projet de résolution de la Nigéria, quelle que soit son attitude par ailleurs, car dans ce paragraphe on a fixé la date limite de 1970. Or nous n'avons pas fixé de date limite pour la Nigéria, et la Nigéria ne s'est pas fixé elle-même une date limite. Pour une partie de l'Afrique, rester sous la domination coloniale jusqu'en 1970, c'est bien long et, je le répète, cette date de 1970 ne concerne que l'Afrique. Il y a des territoires coloniaux dans la région des Caraïbes, il y a des territoires coloniaux en Asie, Timor dans le Pacifique, Macao au large de la côte chinoise et Goa sur notre propre péninsule — tous ces autres territoires existent — et le projet de résolution ne prévoit cette date limite de 1970 que pour l'Afrique. Aussi est-il impensable que le Gouvernement indien accepte cette date. Pour la même raison, nous ne voulons accepter aucune date. Pour certaines populations, il peut être trop long à attendre jusqu'à la fin de 1962. De toute façon, cela crée un problème. Si à la fin de 1962 rien ne s'est produit, alors on pourra encore considérer que la résolution 1514 (XV) est tournée en dérision. Nous sommes donc d'avis que l'indépendance doit être immédiate; nous ne voulons pas nous occuper du calendrier. Et le seul moyen de la rendre immédiate est de prendre des mesures qui mettront fin aux empires et non pas graduellement; nous partageons l'opinion des orateurs qui ont exprimé le désir de voir raccourcir les délais.

161. Les nations non engagées qui se sont réunies à Belgrade^{11/} ont discuté cette question longuement et sont toutes parvenues à la conclusion qu'il n'était pas de l'intérêt des colonies de fixer à l'avance une date pour leur libération, mais que leur libération devait être imposée par le rythme des événements. Il n'y a aucune raison de fixer 1962 comme date limite car nous avons déclaré que les peuples dépendants n'avaient pas à posséder certaines qualités requises ni à passer des examens pour qu'il soit possible de liquider les empires. Les puissances qui les dirigeaient jusqu'à maintenant n'ont pas le droit de se trouver là et les populations ont, elles, le droit d'être libres. C'est tout.

162. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, il y a aujourd'hui à l'Assemblée de nombreux représentants de pays qui étaient encore des colonies il y a seulement deux, cinq, huit ou 10 ans et qui remplissent aujourd'hui d'importantes tâches au service de l'humanité.

163. Cela me conduit à la partie suivante de mon exposé, qui concerne l'Irian occidental^{12/}. La question de l'Irian occidental est une question sur laquelle l'Assemblée est bien renseignée car nous la discutons en détail depuis des années à la Première Commission. J'espère ne pas être mal compris en disant que le projet de résolution [A/L.354] présenté par les Pays-Bas — que nous ne pouvons cependant pas accepter et que l'Indonésie n'a pas accepté car il va en grande partie à l'encontre de l'histoire — représente au moins un changement. Il implique en effet que les Pays-Bas nous font savoir ici qu'ils honoreront leur engagement de mettre fin à leur empire. Naturellement je ne suppose pas que cela s'applique à leurs possessions de la région des Caraïbes mais enfin ils se proposent de mettre fin à leur empire. Toutefois, cela dit, j'apprends que dans son dernier discours sur ce sujet le représentant des Pays-Bas a bien précisé qu'il n'y aurait rien de changé avant un an. Aussi, sans vouloir discuter des mérites du projet de résolution [A/L.367] que nous avons présenté, je dois dire qu'il est de nature différente; dans ce texte, nous demandons que la question fasse l'objet de négociations directes. Nous proposons aussi que, compte tenu de l'historique de cette question et du fait que l'Assemblée doit être désireuse de voir autant que possible, si toutefois cela est possible, les changements s'opérer d'une façon pacifique, de nouvelles tentatives soient faites pour que les deux parties intéressées entament des négociations bilatérales, des discussions bilatérales.

164. Maintenant, on se demande peut-être quelle est notre propre position devant cette question. Je voudrais donc, sans vouloir discuter du bien-fondé de cette position et sans demander à l'Assemblée de prendre parti, essayer d'exposer nos raisons à l'Assemblée. Donc, ce qui est à la base de la situation actuelle en Irian occidental, c'est la charte de transfert de la souveraineté incorporée à l'Accord de la Conférence de la Table ronde de 1949^{12/}. L'article premier de cette charte stipule que "le Royaume des Pays-Bas transfère ... de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable" — si toutefois ces mots veulent dire quelque chose et j'espère que l'Assemblée le remarquera — donc, "le Royaume des Pays-Bas — c'est-à-dire le Gouvernement néerlandais — transfère à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie, de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable, l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie, et par là même reconnaît ladite République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie comme Etat indépendant et souverain".

^{11/} Conférence des pays non alignés, tenue du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

^{12/} Organisation des Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 69 (1950), I, No 894.

165. A la Conférence de la Table ronde, les représentants de l'Indonésie ont soutenu la thèse selon laquelle l'Irian occidental avait toujours fait partie de l'Indonésie. Or on me dit que la délégation des Pays-Bas a rappelé ici que nous avons appuyé une proposition présentée à la Quatrième Commission [190ème séance], proposition qui, par la suite, a été adoptée par l'Assemblée à sa cinquième session et qui avait trait à la communication des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes — et, si j'ose m'exprimer ainsi — il s'agit là soit d'un malentendu soit plutôt d'une déformation des faits. Je ne dis pas que cette déformation des faits soit l'œuvre des Néerlandais, mais le résultat est le même. En fait, quand la Quatrième Commission a été saisie de la question de la communication des renseignements concernant l'Irian occidental, le Gouvernement indien a réservé sa position.

166. Il a déclaré que la communication des renseignements concerne les territoires qui sont réellement dépendants, quoi qu'il en soit de la question de souveraineté. Si ces territoires sont dépendants, si leur administration est, à tort ou à raison, entre les mains de quelqu'un — comme c'était le cas pour la Tunisie et le Maroc, au sujet desquels nous avons soutenu que ces pays n'étaient pas des colonies mais des pays qui avaient formé une alliance avec la France il y avait de nombreuses années et qui, en vertu du Traité d'Algésiras^{13/}, devaient garder leur souveraineté —, dans ce cas nous avons demandé que l'indépendance leur fût rendue. Nous avons simplement demandé la restitution de l'indépendance à des territoires qui étaient en fait dépendants; à cette époque, nous avons fait des réserves, et le fait que nous avons admis que les dispositions du paragraphe e de l'Article 73 leur étaient applicables ne peut être invoqué à l'appui de la thèse selon laquelle l'Irian occidental serait un territoire distinct, une colonie néerlandaise. L'Irian occidental, du point de vue du Gouvernement indien, fait partie intégrante de l'Indonésie.

167. Cependant, dans toutes ces questions, lorsque surviennent d'importants changements, nous pensons qu'il y a matière à pourparlers et à entente. Aussi, puisque les Pays-Bas ont décidé, selon leur projet de résolution [A/L.354], de se retirer de l'Irian occidental, la question du sort de ce territoire doit faire l'objet de pourparlers et d'un accord. Je tiens aussi à ajouter que nous ne pouvons accepter ce qui est prévu dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, à savoir que l'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait créer une commission pour la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise, car cela implique, au mieux comme au pire, que la question de souveraineté est contestée. Ce paragraphe particulier préjuge la question. Nous sommes tout disposés à laisser ceci en suspens et à permettre à l'Indonésie et aux Pays-Bas de se réunir sous l'égide du Président de l'Assemblée afin de rechercher les moyens d'organiser ce processus de liquidation.

168. Nous tenons à exprimer notre satisfaction du fait que le Gouvernement néerlandais a offert de dépenser d'importantes sommes d'argent pour le développement économique de ce territoire. Toutefois, aucune aide économique, si importante soit-elle, ne peut remplacer la liberté d'un peuple. On peut soutenir que les habitants de l'Irian occidental ont droit à l'autodétermination; s'il en était ainsi, ce serait à l'Assemblée de le décider et, quels que soient les résultats des travaux accomplis sous l'égide du Président, en ce qui concerne la question de la souveraineté, ceux-ci présenteraient un certain intérêt pour l'Assemblée. Toutefois, si l'on estimait que tout pays devrait venir ici déclarer qu'il accepte la doctrine de l'autodétermination, alors il nous semble que chaque village, chaque Etat et chaque municipalité devrait devenir territoire indépendant.

169. La position du Gouvernement indien est la suivante: l'Irian occidental est un territoire colonial qui était administré par les Pays-Bas et dont la souveraineté a été transférée en vertu des dispositions de la charte de transfert de la souveraineté. Quoi qu'il en soit, je n'ai pas l'intention de discuter ici, maintenant, de la valeur de cette opinion car nous souhaitons éviter de créer des difficultés à ce sujet. Nous sommes fermement persuadés qu'étant donné ce qui s'est passé depuis cinq ou six ans et le fait qu'un grand nombre de Néerlandais et d'Indonésiens ont reconnu quels étaient leurs intérêts, une nouvelle période de négociation directe, avec l'aide des bons offices du Président de l'Assemblée, permettrait d'aboutir à une solution qu'il n'était pas possible de trouver jusqu'à présent.

170. Certains demanderont peut-être si ce n'est pas là une échappatoire. Nous répondrons qu'il y a un an, deux ans ou cinq ans, personne n'aurait pensé que la puissance impériale des Pays-Bas viendrait ici se déclarer prête à se retirer de ce territoire. Cependant, à l'heure actuelle, pour se retirer, les Pays-Bas veulent prescrire quelque chose au sujet de l'avenir du territoire. D'après ce que je crois comprendre, les Indonésiens répondent que les Pays-Bas n'ont pas le droit de donner ce territoire, parce qu'il ne leur appartient pas.

171. Pour ce qui est de ce que nous pouvons faire à la présente session, nous pensons que notre projet de résolution [A/L.367] permettrait peut-être de mettre fin à la domination impériale des Pays-Bas en Irian occidental, ce qui donnerait aux habitants de l'Irian occidental la possibilité de se joindre aux Indonésiens; en fait, la situation de l'Irian occidental ressemble beaucoup à celle de Goa, à cela près toutefois que pour Goa il n'existe pas de charte de transfert de la souveraineté. L'Irian occidental fait partie du territoire indonésien et, comme nous l'avons dit, si l'on considère la question de l'Irian occidental en tenant compte de la résolution 1514 (XV) et de l'histoire de la question, l'Irian occidental n'a jamais existé, seule existait l'Indonésie. Il n'y avait pas d'Irian occidental avant la charte de transfert de la souveraineté, il n'y avait que l'Indonésie. Je sais qu'on invoquera l'argument selon lequel il s'agissait d'une région où une Résidence avait été maintenue, etc. Il est bien certain que les Pays-Bas voient la question sous un autre angle. Tenant compte de l'histoire de ce conflit, il existe un différend qui n'a pas été réglé entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas, c'est incontestable, mais pour nous c'est un différend qui ne porte pas sur la souveraineté mais sur la manière dont la question doit être résolue.

^{13/} Signé le 7 avril 1906.

172. Le quatrième alinéa du préambule du projet de résolution [A/L.367] est ainsi conçu: "Ayant entendu les déclarations du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas et du Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'Indonésie" — si le Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'Indonésie, au nom de son gouvernement et du peuple indonésien, avait pu accepter la proposition faite par les Pays-Bas, nous n'en serions pas ici à discuter d'arguties de constitutionnalité; toutefois, le Gouvernement indonésien ne peut accepter cette proposition parce que la population indonésienne n'ignore pas quelle est sa situation dans cette affaire. Les deux alinéas suivants sont ainsi libellés: "Préoccupée par le fait que la prolongation de ce différend pourrait entraîner une nouvelle aggravation des relations entre les deux pays" — relations qui ne cessent de s'aggraver depuis longtemps — et "Désireuse de voir rétablies des relations normales et amicales entre les Pays-Bas et la République d'Indonésie", ce qui est très nécessaire à nos yeux pour la stabilité de la région du monde où nous nous trouvons — plus particulièrement pour le vaste archipel indonésien qui s'étend dans l'océan Pacifique et au sujet duquel certaines positions ont été prises lors de la deuxième Conférence des Nations Unies sur le droit de la mer, qui s'est tenue à Genève en 1960, positions qui pour nous étaient assez décevantes — nous estimons donc, selon les termes du septième alinéa du préambule du projet de résolution, "qu'il est nécessaire d'apporter à ce problème une solution pacifique par voie d'accord".

173. Le dispositif du projet de résolution de l'Inde est ainsi conçu:

"1. Invite instamment les Gouvernements de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas à entreprendre de nouvelles négociations, sous l'égide du Président de l'Assemblée générale, en vue de résoudre cette question conformément aux principes de la Charte des Nations Unies;

"2. Prie le Président de faciliter les négociations bilatérales envisagées sous ses auspices, au paragraphe 1 ci-dessus;

"3. Prie les Gouvernements de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas de coopérer ..."

174. Je prétends que c'est là un projet de résolution qui ouvre les voies de la paix et non les voies du conflit. Aucune des parties ne risque de perdre beaucoup, car le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas n'avait pas, de toute façon, l'intention de faire quoi que ce soit avant un an. Il avait demandé qu'une commission d'enquête fût créée par les Nations Unies, ce qui revenait à préjuger l'ensemble de la question de la souveraineté et je ne vois pas sur quelle autorité on pourrait se fonder si ce n'est dans le cadre des buts généraux de la Charte, car il n'existe pas en l'occurrence d'accord de tutelle. En outre, l'administration du territoire est actuellement aux mains de l'une des parties et toute enquête qui pourrait être faite serait influencée par cet état de choses.

175. C'est pour toutes ces raisons que nous avons présenté en toute bonne foi ce très simple projet de résolution qui se borne à souhaiter que les négociations bilatérales, qui se poursuivent d'ailleurs depuis longtemps, engendrent, avec l'aide du Président, une situation différente puisque les circonstances actuelles ne sont plus ce qu'elles étaient il y a deux ou trois ans.

176. Le fait que le Gouvernement néerlandais a accepté la résolution sur la liquidation du colonialisme et que l'opinion publique de ce pays est disposée à admettre que l'autorité des Pays-Bas cesse de s'exercer dans cette région écarte l'une des difficultés principales. En ce qui concerne l'autre difficulté, c'est-à-dire le fait que l'opinion publique aux Pays-Bas a encore ses propres vues sur la question de savoir qui détient la souveraineté, il s'agit là d'une difficulté pour laquelle nous pourrions peut-être trouver une solution dans le cadre de l'Accord de Linggadjati et grâce à l'aide que le Président apportera aux parties pour les amener à comprendre leurs positions respectives.

177. N'oublions pas qu'en 1946 il semblait que la position de l'Indonésie pût donner lieu à quelque chose comme la guerre; le Conseil de sécurité est intervenu et l'Indonésie indépendante a surgi presque du jour au lendemain. Aujourd'hui, elle est l'un des pays qui, au sein de l'Organisation, apporte une contribution effective à la mise en œuvre des objectifs de la Charte. Nous proposons donc à l'Assemblée d'adopter ce projet de résolution qui est conforme au principe du règlement pacifique des différends. Nous avons présenté notre propre interprétation qui est l'interprétation du Gouvernement indien et notre position en ce qui concerne la souveraineté de l'Indonésie sur la totalité des îles indonésiennes, au nombre de 3 000 environ, constituant l'archipel. Si nous avons parlé de la question de l'interprétation du traité de 1949 qui, selon nous, engendre certaines conséquences, nous n'avons pas demandé aujourd'hui qu'une décision soit prise sur cette question. On peut consulter tous les documents suivants: l'Accord de la Conférence de la Table ronde, la résolution 1514 (XV) et tous les comptes rendus des débats qui ont eu lieu depuis. Je suis absolument certain, considérant que les négociations bilatérales ont donné des résultats dans le passé, qu'elles peuvent en donner dans le cas qui nous occupe et nous avons eu récemment l'exemple des Etats-Unis et de l'Union soviétique qui ont présenté à l'Assemblée une déclaration commune sur les principes convenus pour les négociations relatives au désarmement [A/4879].

178. Notre pays a toujours préconisé à cette tribune que les pays entre lesquels existent des divergences de vues doivent se rencontrer et non s'éviter. Nous pensons qu'il est préférable de ne pas faire intervenir d'autres éléments dans les circonstances actuelles et que toute influence qui pourrait se révéler nécessaire, selon l'évolution des pourparlers, pour rendre possible une médiation ou une conciliation ou encore pour provoquer un apaisement, pourrait venir du Président de l'Assemblée générale.

179. Pour toutes ces raisons, nous estimons donc d'une part que l'on est maintenant parvenu au stade où il convient d'assurer l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et d'autre part que le Comité que le Président devra désigner doit être créé avec l'approbation unanime de l'Assemblée.

180. En ce qui concerne la question particulière de l'Irian occidental, nous venons de présenter ce projet de résolution, qui constitue une offre de paix. Il s'agit là d'une situation qui suscite notre intérêt parce que nous ne voudrions pas que des divergences de vues ou un différend plus grave se fassent jour dans cette région du monde. L'Asie du Sud-Est, pour un grand nombre de raisons, est une région névralgique. C'est un vaste archipel et nous avons tout lieu de penser que, lorsque ce problème sera résolu, les Pays-Bas pourront apporter une contribution bien plus importante au développement de cette région et à la mise en œuvre générale des buts des Nations Unies. J'ai donc l'honneur de présenter ce projet de résolution.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

181. M. SUBANDRIO (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: J'ai demandé à prendre de nouveau la parole dans ce débat après avoir entendu la déclaration faite le 15 novembre [1055ème séance] par le représentant des Pays-Bas, afin de donner aux représentants de l'Assemblée un complément d'informations plus précises qui leur permettent de parvenir à une conclusion correcte sur cette question de l'Irian occidental.

182. Me conformant à la demande du Président, j'ai considérablement abrégé la déclaration que je me propose de faire. J'ai cependant cru de mon devoir de prendre la parole en raison de la gravité de la question. Cette question de l'Irian occidental se rattache au problème colonial de l'Indonésie. La majeure partie de l'Indonésie a déjà accédé à l'indépendance. Cette indépendance a été chèrement acquise après une guerre coloniale et au prix de nombreuses vies humaines.

183. En outre, la question de l'Irian occidental est l'une des sources du différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, parmi tant d'autres qui ont toujours été exploitées par les Pays-Bas afin de rendre la situation de l'Indonésie toujours plus difficile tant sur le plan intérieur que sur le plan international. Comme je l'ai déclaré, même après avoir reconnu l'indépendance de la République d'Indonésie les Pays-Bas n'ont jamais pu admettre l'idée de transformer les anciens liens coloniaux en des liens plus profitables de coopération et d'amitié durable dans l'intérêt des deux pays.

184. Je ne serais pas revenu sur cet aspect de la question de l'Irian occidental si le représentant des Pays-Bas n'avait pas adopté la position inverse en parlant de l'Irian occidental comme si cette question ne se rattachait pas au problème colonial de l'Indonésie. A l'appui de son argumentation, le représentant des Pays-Bas a cité certains paragraphes de mémoires sur l'histoire de la Constitution indonésienne de 1945, texte qui a été adopté immédiatement après la proclamation de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie le 17 août 1945.

185. En bref, le représentant des Pays-Bas a cherché à donner l'impression que M. Hatta avait été partisan d'exclure l'Irian occidental du futur territoire de l'Indonésie, tout en prêtant au président Sukarno des mobiles que l'on pourrait qualifier de visées expansionnistes.

186. Tout d'abord, je regrette vivement qu'une question d'une telle gravité — une question qui risque même de donner lieu à un conflit réel dans cette région du monde si on ne l'aborde pas avec sincérité, honnêteté et diplomatie — ait été traitée aussi à la légère par le représentant des Pays-Bas, comme si la question de l'Irian occidental n'était qu'un jeu de mots, comme si cette grave question ne fournissait qu'une occasion de faire de l'esprit.

187. Peut-être le représentant des Pays-Bas a-t-il déjà épuisé les arguments sincères et valables qu'il pouvait présenter à l'appui de la thèse de son pays; aussi a-t-il cru bon de citer des mémoires sur les délibérations privées des dirigeants indonésiens au cours des journées incertaines et tumultueuses qui précédèrent la fin de la seconde guerre mondiale. Toutefois, il est certain qu'il faut analyser et interpréter ces délibérations comme faites des opinions personnelles de certains dirigeants sur un problème particulier. A mon humble avis, il semble plutôt déplacé de se servir d'extraits de ces délibérations privées comme d'arguments contre la politique qui a été officiellement tracée, instaurée et par la suite mise en œuvre par l'Indonésie depuis le début de la République, et cela n'est certainement pas une preuve de bonne foi.

188. Je ne nierai pas les divergences d'opinions et d'idées personnelles qui se sont manifestées parmi les dirigeants indonésiens avant la proclamation de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, mais il est clair qu'en définitive il a été décidé finalement que le territoire indonésien devait comprendre l'ensemble des Indes néerlandaises, rien de plus, rien de moins. J'ajouterai qu'avant la proclamation — et même avant la guerre — des divergences d'opinions se faisaient également jour parmi les dirigeants indonésiens quant à la structure de l'Etat indonésien, ces opinions se fondant soit sur des principes unitaires, soit sur des principes fédéralistes. En définitive, la nation a décidé que l'Indonésie serait un Etat unitaire faisant place à une large autonomie régionale. La devise de l'Indonésie, "Bhinneka tunggal ika", signifie "l'unité dans la diversité".

189. Le 17 août 1945, le président Sukarno a proclamé l'indépendance de l'Indonésie. Le lendemain de la proclamation, les dirigeants nationaux ont confirmé que le territoire de l'Indonésie comprenait la totalité du territoire des Indes néerlandaises et, par la suite, nous avons reçu l'appui des populations de toutes les régions de l'Indonésie, y compris de l'Irian occidental. Le Président a bien précisé dans un discours prononcé à la radio que l'Indonésie était exactement ce qu'elle était auparavant, c'est-à-dire qu'elle comprenait les Indes néerlandaises qui, pour parler communément, s'étendent d'Atjeh, pointe septentrionale de Sumatra, jusqu'à Merauke, pointe orientale de l'Irian occidental.

190. Permettez-moi aussi de prouver indéniablement que nous ne sommes pas des expansionnistes ou des néo-colonialistes, comme la délégation des Pays-Bas et d'autres puissances l'ont insinué soit à l'Assemblée, soit au dehors. Il serait plutôt comique, si les événements n'étaient pas si tragiques, d'entendre les puissances coloniales faire la leçon sur la signification de l'autodétermination.

191. Comme je l'ai déclaré devant l'Assemblée, c'est au prix d'amères expériences et de lourds sacrifices que nous avons appris ce que signifie la liberté, ce que signifie l'autodétermination. Pour nous, ces mots ne sont pas de simples notions abstraites. Ces mots ne sont pas de simples slogans ou des mots imagés au moyen desquels on réunit des suffrages. Non, ces mots représentent l'âme indonésienne. Ces mots engendrent l'espoir d'une vie meilleure, ils suscitent la détermination, le courage et même, s'il le faut, les sacrifices personnels.

192. Il ne peut en être autrement chez un peuple fier et civilisé qui était encore il y a quatre siècles l'un des peuples les plus prospères et les plus importants de cette région du monde, puis qui a dû subir la dégradation de l'asservissement colonial et n'a pas encore pu, même en cette année 1961, se libérer entièrement de l'esprit de vengeance et de subversion des Pays-Bas.

193. Nous n'avons aucune prétention sur les territoires qui ne faisaient pas partie des anciennes Indes néerlandaises, encore qu'ils soient situés sur la même île, et qui plus est, lorsque la Malaisie nous a fait part de ses intentions de se joindre en une fédération avec le Sarawak, le Brunéi et le Bornéo du Nord, qui sont trois colonies de la couronne britannique, nous avons déclaré que nous ne nous y opposons pas et que nous leur souhaitons plein succès dans leur union afin que chacun puisse vivre en paix et en liberté.

194. Pour plus de clarté, je me permets de rappeler à l'Assemblée que les trois quarts de l'île de Bornéo sont territoire indonésien, tandis que le reste constitue les trois colonies de la couronne britannique dont je viens de parler. Par leur nature et d'un point de vue ethnologique et géographique, ces territoires britanniques sont plus proches de l'Indonésie que de la Malaisie, par exemple. Toutefois, nous avons quand même fait savoir à la Malaisie que nous ne nous opposons pas à l'union de ces territoires, fondée sur la volonté de liberté des populations intéressées. En ce qui concerne l'Indonésie, et en vertu de la décision prise par la nation, nous nous en tenons à l'accord relatif à l'étendue du territoire de la République d'Indonésie, accord que le représentant des Pays-Bas a confirmé publiquement et officiellement au Conseil de sécurité des Nations Unies en 1948. Le représentant des Pays-Bas a, je le répète, publiquement et officiellement confirmé que:

"Toutes les parties s'accordent pour dire que ce qui constituait jadis les Indes orientales néerlandaises doit devenir un Etat indépendant aussitôt que possible¹⁴."

195. En conséquence, les opinions personnelles de M. Sukarno avant la proclamation de notre indépendance, qui ont été citées par M. Schürmann, au sujet de l'éventuelle création d'un Etat pan-malais, c'est-à-dire d'une fédération ou confédération qui aurait résulté de la volonté générale des populations, ne correspondaient nullement à un désir expansionniste. Après tout, au moment de ces délibérations, pendant la seconde guerre mondiale, alors que l'Indonésie n'entrevoyait pas encore la fin de la guerre, les frontières de l'ancien territoire des Indes néerlandaises avaient été remplacées par des limites de zones d'occupation japonaises qui ne coïncidaient pas avec ces anciennes frontières. Dans ces conditions, il est bien naturel que des opinions personnelles divergentes aient pu être exprimées en ce qui concerne les frontières éventuelles du futur Etat indonésien.

196. Même aujourd'hui les populations de race malaise souhaitent vivement en fait se rapprocher et réunir toutes leurs forces nationales pour un but commun, sur le plan politique, sur le plan économique et sur le plan culturel. Le Premier Ministre de Malaisie, Tunku Abdul Rahman, est particulièrement très partisan de cette conception.

197. Je crois qu'il est vraiment très difficile aux Pays-Bas de nier que la question de l'Irian occidental se rattache à l'ensemble du problème colonial de l'Indonésie. J'examinerais maintenant les arguments juridiques par lesquels les Pays-Bas s'efforcent de dissimuler le fond réel du problème.

198. Le représentant des Pays-Bas a très habilement commencé par se référer à l'article 2 de la charte de transfert de la souveraineté qui est incorporée à l'Accord de la Conférence de la Table ronde. Afin de compéter sa présentation des textes, je me permettrai de citer aussi le paragraphe 1 de l'article premier de cette même charte, dont le représentant du Ghana a déjà parlé. Il est ainsi conçu:

"Le Royaume des Pays-Bas transfère à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie et par là même reconnaît ladite République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie comme Etat indépendant et souverain."

199. Telle est l'essence même de l'Accord: l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie a été transférée de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable à la nouvelle République d'Indonésie en sa qualité d'Etat indépendant et souverain.

200. Il est exact, je ne le nie pas, qu'il existe d'autres articles qui contiennent certaines autres dispositions, mais ces dispositions ont trait à la mise en application du transfert de la souveraineté sur l'ensemble de l'Indonésie. Ainsi, l'article 2 de la charte, que M. Schürmann a mentionné et qui vise le différend existant alors sur le statut politique de l'Irian occidental, ne fait nullement mention de la souveraineté qui, à l'article premier, est déjà transférée entièrement et de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable.

201. Comme je l'ai déjà expliqué à l'Assemblée, ces clauses étaient indispensables aux Pays-Bas pour qu'au Parlement néerlandais on pût réunir la majorité des deux tiers requise pour l'approbation de l'Accord de la Conférence de la Table ronde et procéder à la revision nécessaire de la Constitution des Pays-Bas.

202. A cette époque, tout cela était bien compris, tant aux Pays-Bas qu'en Indonésie. De nombreuses personnalités éminentes des Pays-Bas qui n'ont pas de préjugés à l'égard de l'Indonésie ont confirmé et précisé ce point dans des déclarations publiques. C'est ainsi que récemment encore, le 13 novembre 1961, le quotidien néerlandais Haagse Courant rapportait que M. Suurhoff, président du parti travailliste néerlandais — le parti travailliste est par ordre d'importance le deuxième parti politique des Pays-Bas — avait fait la déclaration suivante. Je cite:

"M. Suurhoff n'aurait éprouvé aucun regret et n'aurait pas fait d'opposition si la Nouvelle-Guinée [occidentale] avait été visée par les dispositions du transfert de la souveraineté en 1949. Toutefois, c'était impossible; même sans qu'il fût question de la Nouvelle-Guinée [occidentale], le transfert de la souveraineté à l'Indonésie a tout juste obtenu, à cette époque, la majorité requise des deux tiers. Par la suite, le parti travailliste dut admettre que le problème avait été mis en veilleuse."

203. Ce qui est important dans cette citation, c'est qu'en dépit du fait que le président du parti travailliste néerlandais a donné de la situation une interprétation différente de la nôtre, il ne s'agit pas d'une question de principe mais bien d'un expédient permettant de réunir la majorité requise des deux tiers.

¹⁴/ Voir Documents officiels du Conseil de sécurité, troisième année, No 132, 388ème séance, p. 11.

204. En outre, le professeur Duinstee, membre du parti même de M. Luns, a également confirmé ce souci d'un expédient dans son livre intitulé La Nouvelle-Guinée, pont entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, qui vient d'être publié il y a seulement deux semaines. Voici, en traduction, un extrait (p. 183) de ce livre intéressant:

"Rétrospectivement, la séparation de la Nouvelle-Guinée de l'Indonésie a été une erreur. Elle était en fait nécessaire pour obtenir la majorité des deux tiers requise pour la loi sur le transfert de la souveraineté. La Nouvelle-Guinée a été le prix qu'il a fallu payer pour que le parti chrétien historique et le parti pour la liberté et la démocratie fussent disposés à donner leurs voix, et que ces partis ont jugé nécessaire pour se décharger de leurs responsabilités envers leurs membres et leurs électeurs. Cela était prévu depuis longtemps. Le problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée n'était d'importance vitale ni pour le parti catholique populaire, ni pour le parti travailliste, ni pour le Cabinet, mais simplement pour obtenir la majorité des deux tiers."

205. A la lumière de ces explications venant de personnes autorisées, il est clair que l'essence du contrat politique que renfermait la charte de transfert de la souveraineté entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas consistait en ce que les Pays-Bas devaient abandonner leur souveraineté sur l'ancien territoire des Indes néerlandaises et transférer leur entière autorité de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable à une Indonésie souveraine. En même temps, certaines dispositions étaient prévues, aussi pour des raisons de commodité, afin qu'il fût possible de mettre en application le transfert formel de la souveraineté à l'Indonésie.

206. On nous a demandé pourquoi nous ne réglions pas cette question de l'Irian occidental par l'intermédiaire de la Cour internationale de Justice. D'abord, comme il doit être évident maintenant, cette question se rattache à un problème colonial plus vaste qui n'a pas encore été complètement réglé. Cette question de l'Irian occidental n'est pas un simple litige entre deux Etats souverains. Le différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie a des racines plus profondes et c'est délibérément que l'on a fait de l'Irian occidental un sujet de litige. Je reviendrai plus tard sur ce point.

207. Le contrat établi entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas, tel qu'il ressort de la charte de transfert de la souveraineté, n'était pas à cette époque un contrat entre des parties égales, comme, par exemple, entre les Etats-Unis et le Royaume-Uni aujourd'hui. Il s'agissait d'un contrat relatif à l'abandon par les Pays-Bas, puissance coloniale, à l'Indonésie, nouvel Etat souverain et indépendant, de la souveraineté sur tout le territoire des Indes néerlandaises. Cela était énoncé clairement au paragraphe 1 de l'article premier de la charte. Tel était l'esprit de l'ensemble de ce contrat. Dans ce contrat, il n'était nullement question du droit à l'autodétermination de la population de l'Irian occidental, il n'y était pas même fait allusion, pas plus qu'à l'instauration artificielle de ce territoire en un Etat indépendant distinct.

208. En toute franchise, à cette époque, ce contrat entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas nous donnait satisfaction parce que les bases du transfert de la souveraineté étaient posées de façon nette et ferme. A vrai dire, nous n'avons pas attaché trop d'importance à l'énoncé des autres dispositions de la charte après avoir reçu des assurances explicites selon lesquelles tous ces détails n'étaient prévus qu'à titre d'expédients politiques. Après avoir entendu les assurances répétées et les confirmations d'hommes d'Etat néerlandais tels que M. J. van Mook et M. van Royen, selon lesquelles les Indes néerlandaises — par la suite appelées Indonésie — deviendraient libres et indépendantes en tant qu'entité territoriale et nationale unique, nous nous sommes déclarés satisfaits du contrat. A cette époque, il n'existait en Irian occidental aucun mouvement en faveur d'une séparation de l'Indonésie. Au contraire — je le répète: au contraire — les chefs de la population locale ont fait des déclarations publiques et présenté des pétitions officielles aux forces d'occupation néerlandaises et au Gouvernement néerlandais afin que l'Irian occidental ne fût pas séparé de l'Indonésie.

209. Ces faits n'ont jamais été démentis par aucun porte-parole néerlandais. Des hommes d'Etat et des politiciens néerlandais les ont au contraire confirmés directement et indirectement. La population de l'Irian occidental n'a pas demandé la séparation, et même de nombreuses personnalités politiques des Pays-Bas estiment absurde de soutenir que l'on doit reconnaître à la population de l'Irian occidental un droit particulier et distinct à l'autodétermination. Par exemple, M. Gerretson, qui n'est d'ailleurs pas un ami de l'Indonésie mais qui s'est au contraire opposé avec véhémence au transfert de la souveraineté à l'Indonésie, a fait la remarque suivante dans un débat public au Parlement néerlandais:

"Considéré indépendamment de la querelle avec l'Indonésie, ceci" — c'est-à-dire le fait de conférer un prétendu droit à l'autodétermination — "est quelque chose d'étonnant en ce que l'on veut conférer aux Papous de l'âge de pierre ce que l'on refusait aux habitants du Surinam en 1953, bien que les Papous — je dis bien les Papous — n'aient rien demandé tandis que les habitants du Surinam revendiquaient vigoureusement ce droit."

Cette citation est tirée des procès-verbaux de la Première Chambre du Parlement néerlandais, 1954/1955, page 504.

210. Je ne crois pas que la Cour internationale de Justice soit le lieu où l'on puisse résoudre les problèmes coloniaux. Si les Algériens, par exemple, pouvaient s'adresser à la Cour internationale de Justice, le jugement qui serait prononcé serait peut-être que le colonialisme français est légal — légal selon le "droit international" — en vertu de tel ou tel traité.

211. En fait, le colonialisme est un contrat politique qui a une validité légale, mais allons-nous maintenir le colonialisme parce qu'on peut dire qu'il a une justification légale?

212. La charte de transfert de la souveraineté est un contrat politique concernant le transfert de l'entière souveraineté des Pays-Bas de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable à la nouvelle République d'Indonésie en sa qualité d'Etat souverain. Cela est clair et explicite. A côté de cela, il existe des dispositions d'application destinées à ajuster la chose à la situation politique de l'époque aux Pays-Bas. Tant que les Pays-Bas n'auront pas appliqué complètement le contrat politique de transfert de la souveraineté à la nouvelle République d'Indonésie de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable, il existera encore un problème colonial de l'Indonésie et le colonialisme néerlandais s'exercera activement en Indonésie. Comme je l'ai déclaré, ce n'est pas par l'intermédiaire de la Cour internationale de Justice qu'on peut remédier au colonialisme qui peut se comparer à une maladie immorale et inhumaine des relations internationales. Tout traité entre nations, même fondé sur la loi du plus fort, peut être reconnu valable par la Cour internationale de Justice.

213. C'est pourquoi les Pays-Bas ont pu s'opposer à l'adoption d'un projet de résolution présenté par l'Indonésie à l'Assemblée générale de 1954 à 1957, recommandant aux deux parties d'entreprendre des pourparlers au sujet de la question de l'Irian occidental pour trouver une solution pacifique, parce que cette question de l'Irian occidental était considérée comme relevant de la compétence nationale. Nous avons pour principe général de nier la compétence de la Cour internationale de Justice en matière de problèmes coloniaux. Notre attitude n'est certainement pas due à la crainte de voir la Cour rendre un jugement favorable aux Pays-Bas au sujet de la charte de transfert de la souveraineté.

214. En résumé: a) la question de l'Irian occidental se rattache au problème colonial de l'Indonésie; b) l'Irian occidental fait partie de la lutte pour l'indépendance. Les raisons sont les suivantes: premièrement, l'Irian occidental faisait partie du territoire des Indes néerlandaises et, même avant l'ère du colonialisme néerlandais en Indonésie, il a fait partie des anciens empires Sriwidjaja et Modjopahit.

215. Ce dernier fait ressort clairement du livre intitulé The Ageless Indies^{15/} de l'anthropologue américain Raymond Kennedy. Je cite un extrait traduit de la page 34 de ce livre:

"... le grand Empire de Modjopahit, dont la capitale était située dans la partie orientale de Java, exerçait son autorité suprême sur la plus grande partie de l'Inde, des Philippines et du sud-est de l'Asie au XIVème siècle et pendant la majeure partie du XVème siècle. C'est à cette époque que la civilisation indo-javanaise s'est répandue très largement dans toute la région; même encore aujourd'hui, on trouve des traces de cette influence, sous la forme d'alphabets indiens anciens, d'objets en or et autres métaux, de monuments de pierre et d'innombrables traits de culture et de langue, vers le nord jusqu'à Luzon aux Philippines et vers l'est jusqu'à la Nouvelle-Guinée, limite extrême des Indes."

216. Deuxièmement, la proclamation de l'indépendance de la République d'Indonésie le 17 août 1945 a reçu l'appui de la population partout en Indonésie, y compris l'Irian occidental lui-même, comme le prouvent les déclarations faites à l'époque par les dirigeants de l'Irian occidental. D'ailleurs, les sacrifices consentis par la population de l'Irian occidental elle-même lorsque les forces néerlandaises ont réoccupé la région l'ont encore confirmé. Si la proclamation d'indépendance de l'Indonésie n'est pas encore claire pour le représentant des Pays-Bas en ce qui concerne l'intégrité territoriale de l'Indonésie, j'appellerai une fois encore son attention sur les nombreux discours prononcés à la radio par le président Sukarno immédiatement après le 17 août 1945.

217. Troisièmement, la question de l'Irian occidental fait partie intégrante de la lutte de l'Indonésie pour l'indépendance, et cela fut confirmé par les déclarations officielles d'hommes d'Etat et de personnalités politiques des Pays-Bas eux-mêmes, par exemple M. van Royen et M. van Mook, avant la reconnaissance officielle de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie en 1949.

218. Quatrièmement, cela résulte du fait que, selon l'esprit de la charte de transfert de la souveraineté, conformément aux dispositions du paragraphe 1 de l'article premier, l'entière souveraineté était transférée à l'Indonésie de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable.

219. Il est exact que cette charte a été annulée parce que le Gouvernement néerlandais en avait violé l'esprit et les principes. Néanmoins, en vertu de ce contrat, les Pays-Bas ont officiellement renoncé à leur souveraineté sur l'Indonésie et transféré leurs pouvoirs à la République d'Indonésie. C'est là un fait historique et politique que les Pays-Bas ne pourraient renverser qu'en réoccupant par la force toute l'Indonésie.

220. La question de l'Irian occidental, objet du différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, est ainsi exploitée par les Pays-Bas pour entretenir leur soif de revanche envers l'Indonésie. En effet dès le début, en 1945, les Pays-Bas n'ont eu qu'un but, écraser l'indépendance indonésienne, et, quand cela s'est révélé impossible, ils n'ont plus cherché qu'à harceler l'Indonésie et à y répandre la subversion. De 1945 à la fin de 1949, nous avons mené une guerre coloniale cruelle et du côté indonésien plus d'un demi-million de vies humaines ont été sacrifiées. Cependant, après 1949 et jusqu'à la fin de 1957, nous avons accordé aux Pays-Bas une position économique privilégiée en Indonésie, favorisant les Pays-Bas par rapport aux autres nations. Nous sommes même allés si loin dans nos concessions économiques qu'un économiste allemand, Helbig, a conclu dans son livre Indonesia que les recettes annuelles nettes des Pays-Bas en Indonésie après 1950 étaient supérieures au revenu annuel net de ce pays à l'époque où il était administrateur colonial.

221. Cependant, cet arrangement n'était pas encore suffisant pour apaiser la rancœur des Pays-Bas contre l'Indonésie. A partir du moment où la charte de transfert de la souveraineté a été signée, à la fin de 1949, les Pays-Bas ont poursuivi leurs activités subversives, qui se sont manifestées par des mouvements séparatistes et des soulèvements et ont trouvé leur apogée dans la proclamation d'indépendance de la prétendue "République des Moluques du Sud", dans la partie orientale de l'Indonésie, près de l'Irian occidental. Heureusement, nous avons pu vaincre la subversion des Pays-Bas et nous avons écrasé par la force cette prétendue "République des Moluques du Sud" instaurée à l'instigation des forces armées néerlandaises. Etant donné cet esprit d'hostilité des Pays-Bas contre l'Indonésie, nous sommes certains que s'il n'existait pas de différend au sujet de l'Irian occidental les Pays-Bas chercheraient encore d'autres possibilités de harceler l'Indonésie dans l'intention de miner la force de l'Indonésie tant sur le plan national que sur le plan international. C'est cet esprit d'hostilité et de rancœur qu'il faut faire disparaître si l'on veut qu'il soit possible de régler soit la question de l'Irian occidental, soit le problème général des différends entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Tant que cet esprit sera le principe directeur de la politique étrangère des Pays-Bas envers l'Indonésie, toute concession grande ou petite de la part de l'Indonésie sera tout au plus interprétée comme un signe de faiblesse et risquera simplement d'exciter la soif d'agression des Pays-Bas envers l'Indonésie.

222. Je passe maintenant aux raisons pour lesquelles nous repoussons le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. D'abord, je suis certain que chacun est maintenant convaincu que la question de l'Irian occidental se rattache au problème colonial de l'Indonésie et, dans cet ensemble, l'Irian occidental est la source du conflit qui oppose les Pays-Bas à l'Indonésie. Cela implique évidemment que le règlement de la question de l'Irian occidental doit faire partie du règlement du différend plus vaste qui oppose les Pays-Bas à l'Indonésie. J'irai même plus loin. J'espère sincèrement que le règlement de cette question ouvrira peut-être un nouveau chapitre dans l'histoire des relations entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, un chapitre dans lequel les Pays-Bas accepteront de bon cœur l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, ne garderont aucune rancune ou hostilité envers l'Indonésie, oublieront leur glorieux passé de colonisateurs des Indes néerlandaises et ne s'opposeront pas à une coopération honorable avec l'Indonésie dans l'intérêt commun des deux pays.

223. Permettez-moi aussi d'insister sur un point. Comme les Pays-Bas, nous attachons assurément la plus grande importance à la prospérité et au progrès des populations de l'Irian occidental. Nous considérons qu'il est de la plus haute importance de servir les intérêts de l'ensemble de la population indonésienne. Quoi qu'on puisse dire sur le fait que nous sommes insuffisamment équipés pour les besoins d'une administration moderne, ou sur notre manque de personnel qualifié et de connaissances scientifiques dans la gestion des entreprises économiques et industrielles, on ne peut nier que l'Indonésie a fait d'énormes progrès dans les domaines social et culturel. Dans le domaine de l'enseignement, l'UNESCO a même reconnu que les réalisations de l'Indonésie sont parmi les meilleures du monde par rapport aux autres pays qui viennent d'accéder à l'indépendance en se libérant de la domination coloniale ou semi-coloniale.

224. Les délégations de l'Australie et des Pays-Bas font toujours allusion aux Papous qui vont demi-nus ou à peine vêtus, fait probablement exact pour plus de 90 p. 100 de la population qui vit là sous la domination coloniale des Pays-Bas. Toutefois, dans le reste de l'Indonésie et en particulier dans l'intérieur de Bornéo et des Célèbes, nous avons commencé en 1950 dans des conditions à peu près semblables, mais aujourd'hui nous sommes du moins parvenus au stade où nous pouvons fournir des vêtements convenables à toute la population, même si ces vêtements ne sont pas toujours de la meilleure qualité. Je me permettrai de tirer humblement une conclusion: après cette courte période d'indépendance nationale, nous avons peut-être encore beaucoup à apprendre en ce qui concerne les connaissances techniques et scientifiques des puissances coloniales, mais, pour ce qui est de l'aspect social et des efforts faits pour élever le niveau social et culturel de nos populations, je crois que les puissances coloniales comme les Pays-Bas doivent reconnaître leur infériorité. Pour nous, les populations de l'Irian occidental, comme les autres citoyens de l'Indonésie, ne sont pas de simples sujets d'études anthropologiques. Nous les considérons comme nos égaux et ce non seulement pour des considérations d'éthique; ils sont nos égaux en tant qu'êtres humains sur le plan social.

226. Les Pays-Bas se vantent maintenant de leur contribution annuelle de 30 millions de dollars. Je vous dirai qu'une petite fraction seulement de cette somme est consacrée au bien-être des 700 000 habitants de l'Irian occidental. Les dépenses pour la défense de l'Irian occidental ont été évaluées à 10 millions de dollars en 1959. En 1960, ces dépenses ont été évaluées au double en raison du développement des armements nécessaires pour poursuivre dans cette région la politique d'agression des Pays-Bas envers l'Indonésie. Une autre part importante de ces 30 millions de dollars est consacrée au paiement du personnel néerlandais coûteux qui se trouve en Irian occidental et des importations en grosses quantités de produits de luxe en provenance des Pays-Bas. On peut donc tirer les conclusions qui s'imposent quant aux maigres sommes qui restent pour améliorer les conditions de vie des populations de la région. Ces faits démontrent une fois pour toutes que la mission sacrée des Pays-Bas envers les populations de l'Irian occidental est un mythe. Les quelques progrès réalisés dans ce pays en matière de protection sociale ne sont pas dus à l'administration coloniale des Pays-Bas mais plutôt aux activités des missionnaires.

227. Cela dit, ce qui nous paraît essentiel maintenant c'est qu'il va de l'intérêt des populations de l'Irian occidental, de leur prospérité et de leur liberté, que le litige entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie soit réglé. C'est pour cette raison que nous ne parvenons pas à comprendre pourquoi le Gouvernement néerlandais ne s'est pas donné la peine de nous consulter directement ou indirectement sur le règlement de cette question de l'Irian occidental, particulièrement étant donné que cette question présente une telle importance pour les populations mêmes de l'Irian occidental. M. Luns, ministre des affaires étrangères, a dit le 8 octobre 1961 qu'il n'avait pas pu consulter l'Indonésie d'avance parce que l'Indonésie avait rompu les relations diplomatiques et parce que l'Indonésie ne voulait admettre qu'une seule solution, celle de la remise de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise à l'Indonésie sans consultation préalable de la population papoue. Or M. Luns, ministre des affaires étrangères, n'a pas cherché à savoir, après que l'opinion publique néerlandaise eut autorisé le Gouvernement néerlandais à abandonner son autorité sur l'Irian occidental, si l'Indonésie ne pourrait avoir d'autres vues sur la question de l'Irian occidental. Cette investigation pouvait se faire par l'intermédiaire de n'importe quel autre pays, même après la rupture complète des relations diplomatiques entre les deux pays.

228. D'un autre point de vue, du point de vue du conflit qui a opposé presque de tout temps les Pays-Bas à l'Indonésie, nous pouvons, nous, les Indonésiens, nous attendre à tout de la part des Néerlandais. Aucune insulte, aucune humiliation n'est trop basse pour eux si elle peut faire du tort à l'Indonésie. Cette question d'une prétendue autodétermination de la population de l'Irian occidental est maintenant exploitée comme un instrument de la politique étrangère des Pays-Bas plutôt pour frapper l'Indonésie que pour apporter la liberté et le bonheur à la population de l'Irian occidental.

229. Quelles sont mes raisons pour parler de la sorte? Si je parle ainsi, c'est parce que l'opinion publique aux Pays-Bas et le climat politique de ce pays en général ont été récemment plutôt favorables à l'abandon de leur prétendue souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental. Une partie de cette opinion a compris qu'il vaut mieux transférer directement l'autorité des Pays-Bas à la République d'Indonésie. Le territoire de l'Irian occidental compte 700 000 habitants qui expriment de plus en plus ouvertement leurs sentiments anticolonialistes. L'Irian occidental n'offre aux milieux commerçants et industriels des Pays-Bas aucune perspective d'avenir; même l'industrie pétrolière, dont les Pays-Bas se vantent toujours, s'est soldée par un échec et ses activités ont pratiquement pris fin récemment. L'affermissement de l'Etat indonésien et de ses forces défensives, le climat international qui pousse à la décolonisation, tous ces facteurs ont fait de l'Irian occidental une véritable charge pour les Pays-Bas, sans aucune perspective de profit ni sur le plan politique, ni sur le plan économique.

230. En conséquence, les obstacles que les Pays-Bas opposaient depuis 1950 à la réalisation complète de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie n'existent plus. C'est un fait que l'opinion publique aux Pays-Bas a fortement tendance, et même plus encore actuellement, à faire de cette question de l'Irian occidental un pont qui conduise à la normalisation des relations entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie.

231. Dans cette même déclaration à laquelle j'ai déjà fait allusion et qui a été publiée le 13 novembre 1961 dans le Haagse Courant, M. Suurhoff, président du parti travailliste néerlandais, a dit:

"Le mémorandum des Pays-Bas [sur l'Irian occidental] qui a été diffusé récemment à New York révèle une amélioration de la politique du Gouvernement néerlandais. C'est un fait que le parti travailliste apprécie. La participation de l'Indonésie à la mise en œuvre du plan Luns semble possible. Cette participation a toujours été l'un des objectifs du parti travailliste dans ses efforts d'internationalisation."

232. Tel est l'essentiel de la déclaration de M. Suurhoff en ce qui concerne le plan Luns. Cela témoigne d'un état d'esprit différent. Quels que puissent être le bien-fondé ou les torts des revendications respectives des deux parties en présence, M. Suurhoff et l'opinion publique néerlandaise en général considèrent qu'il est indispensable de régler le différend opposant les Pays-Bas à l'Indonésie, dans l'intérêt des deux pays et aussi dans l'intérêt même de la population de l'Irian occidental. Dans cet esprit et sur la base des concessions mutuelles qu'il est possible de faire, les deux parties sont, ce me semble, en mesure de trouver une solution honorable. Leur devise doit donc être: l'Irian occidental, pont jeté entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas.

233. Cependant, le plan Luns s'inspire-t-il de cet esprit? Instinctivement et aussi après avoir soigneusement examiné ce plan, l'Indonésie est nettement convaincue que ledit plan n'est pas empreint de cet esprit de conciliation et même qu'il abonde en intrigues coloniales et révèle des sentiments anti-indonésiens.

234. Lorsque M. Luns a prononcé son premier discours devant l'Assemblée le 26 septembre 1961 [1016ème séance], il a simplement feint d'ignorer l'existence de l'Indonésie en cherchant à faire aboutir une solution de la question de l'Irian occidental qui soit une solution internationale. Lorsque M. Luns a présenté son projet de résolution concernant une prétendue décolonisation, il s'est comporté comme si l'Indonésie n'existait pas. Ce n'est qu'après notre réaction violente et devant une opinion publique toujours plus pressante aux Pays-Bas que la délégation néerlandaise a fait distribuer son mémorandum [A/4915] dans lequel il était vraiment fait mention de l'Indonésie.

235. Ayant pris la décision de renoncer à sa prétendue souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental, le Gouvernement néerlandais a maintenant le choix entre différentes manières de donner suite à cette intention.

236. Premièrement, il peut mettre à profit cet abandon de la souveraineté pour régler honorablement le différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, en se fixant pour objectif la prospérité de la population de l'Irian occidental et en créant en même temps un esprit de coopération entre nos deux pays.

237. Deuxièmement, il peut également se servir de cette politique d'abandon de la souveraineté comme d'une arme aussi efficace que possible contre l'Indonésie, en particulier devant cette assemblée internationale, sans même — je le répète, sans même — transférer ses pouvoirs à la population de l'Irian occidental.

238. Malheureusement, c'est cette dernière solution que le Gouvernement néerlandais a choisie jusqu'à maintenant en se faisant surtout passer pour un bienfaiteur ayant eu l'initiative d'une prétendue décolonisation. L'essentiel pour le représentant des Pays-Bas, c'est de faire de l'Indonésie une accusée devant cette assemblée internationale. Ce qu'ils cherchent, c'est à mettre l'Indonésie au banc des accusés. Cette prétendue autodétermination de la population de l'Irian occidental n'est que d'importance secondaire pour le Gouvernement néerlandais. Il semble que ce soit une grande victoire pour la politique étrangère des Pays-Bas que d'humilier l'Indonésie maintenant, d'humilier l'Indonésie pour les 10 ou 15 prochaines années, de refuser à l'Indonésie la possibilité de libérer dans la paix cette partie de son territoire qui lui a été arrachée.

239. Je dois dire que ladite proposition des Pays-Bas peut paraître à première vue très intéressante. Cependant, connaissant les faits et le manque de sincérité de la politique étrangère des Pays-Bas à l'égard de l'Indonésie en particulier et l'attitude obstinée de ce pays à l'égard de ses autres colonies, comme le Surinam et Curaçao, il est immédiatement tout à fait évident que le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas manque d'honnêteté et de sincérité. Par opposition à ce projet de résolution dont l'objet est d'obtenir un appui international, la politique suivie par les Pays-Bas en Irian occidental est d'une tout autre nature. Elle demeure coloniale et anti-indonésienne avec toutes les graves conséquences que cela implique.

240. D'abord en Irian occidental, tous les dirigeants et tous les hommes qui n'approuvent pas la politique étrangère des Pays-Bas et l'interprétation donnée par ce pays à l'autodétermination, qui signifie séparatisme et sécession de l'Indonésie, sont expulsés du territoire à la cadence de 1 000 par mois. D'autres sont mis en prison, notamment dans le camp de concentration de Boven Digul, de triste réputation.

241. Ensuite, les Pays-Bas ont donné tout récemment à la population un prétendu "drapeau national" et un prétendu "hymne national", composé d'ailleurs, ce qui n'est pas surprenant, par un Hollandais. Ces faits ont donné lieu le 27 octobre 1961 à une réaction si violente de la part de la population à Sorong et à Hollandia que la police néerlandaise a dû payer de ses morts et de ses blessés les conséquences de ces manifestations. La population était surtout armée d'arcs et de flèches. Au sujet de cet incident on pouvait lire le 15 novembre 1961 dans le journal hollandais Algemene Handelsblad ce qui suit:

"L'affaire du drapeau" — c'est-à-dire l'incident provoqué par la présentation du drapeau national — "crée l'impression fâcheuse que le gouvernement Plateel n'a pas pu endiguer ces forces à temps et est maintenant entraîné irrésistiblement par le courant. Il est à souhaiter que les chefs papous responsables puissent allier à beaucoup de souplesse et de sens des réalités suffisamment de bon sens et de nationalisme compréhensif, sinon la bataille de la Nouvelle-Guinée est irrémédiablement perdue, non pas à La Haye, non pas à New York, mais à Hollandia" — c'est-à-dire en Irian occidental.

242. D'une part, les autorités coloniales s'efforcent de faire connaître les symboles de l'indépendance de l'Irian occidental, elles essaient de lancer leur prétendu "hymne national" et leur prétendu "drapeau national". D'autre part, elles limitent et refusent de reconnaître à la population de l'Irian occidental des pouvoirs réels, comme le montre une lettre ouverte adressée au Premier Ministre des Pays-Bas par E. J. Bonay, membre du Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée autour duquel on a fait une telle publicité. Voici la traduction d'un passage de cette lettre ouverte, datée de Hollandia, le 12 novembre 1961:

"... conformément à l'attente de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise, le Gouvernement néerlandais et l'administration néerlandaise de la Nouvelle-Guinée ont institué un Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée, ce qui est considéré comme le pas le plus important dans la voie de la démocratisation de l'organisation constitutionnelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise. Les grandes espérances auxquelles ce conseil avait au début donné lieu et qui s'étaient manifestées par l'intérêt que cette institution avait suscité ont été peu à peu déçues avec le temps parce que quelques membres néerlandais, loyalement suivis par certains membres papous, se sont servis du Conseil pour imposer leur point de vue aux autres.

"On avait pensé que le Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée serait un organe qui servirait les intérêts de la population et permettrait aux représentants de la population de faire librement entendre leur voix par les autorités.

"On avait également pensé que le Président de ce conseil romprait complètement ses anciennes relations avec les autorités. En fait, il y a maintenant deux membres néerlandais, dont l'un est le Président, et quelques satellites papous qui ont pris une attitude dictatoriale et imposent leur opinion au Conseil, si bien que la majorité des membres papous qui n'ont ni les connaissances ni l'expérience nécessaires n'ont pas le temps de se faire une opinion indépendante. On les pousse à aller à la dérive dans le jeu joué par un petit groupe qui use de moyens malhonnêtes ..."

Plus loin, on peut lire:

"Tout ce que le Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée propose maintenant en fait de motions, de résolutions, etc., ne résulte jamais d'une initiative des membres papous ..."

Cela est vraiment très révélateur. Permettez-moi de répéter ce passage:

"Tout ce que le Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée propose maintenant en fait de motions, de résolutions, etc., ne résulte jamais d'une initiative des membres papous ..."

243. Voilà ce que le Gouvernement néerlandais appelle ici, devant l'Assemblée, préparer les Papous à la démocratie et à l'autonomie. La majorité des représentants à l'Assemblée sont déjà bien au courant, j'en suis certain, de la propagande coloniale et des réalités telles qu'elles se présentent dans les territoires coloniaux.

244. En outre, j'ai encore ici une autre lettre également adressée par un membre du Conseil de la Nouvelle-Guinée au Premier Ministre des Pays-Bas sous forme de lettre ouverte, où il est demandé que l'Indonésie participe aux décisions qui seront prises pour régler la question de l'Irian occidental. Il est dit dans cette lettre que la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée est dans l'impossibilité de résoudre elle-même ses problèmes sans la participation de l'Indonésie.

245. Qui plus est, la situation en Irian occidental s'aggrave vraiment. On en est même venu au point où, dans un lieu appelé Gag, l'élection au conseil local, qui a eu lieu le 3 novembre 1961, a dû se dérouler à bord du destroyer néerlandais Overijssel et sous la surveillance de bateaux patrouilleurs de la police. Toute la population a été contrainte de monter à bord du destroyer et de participer à l'élection. Chacun pourra tirer ses propres conclusions quant à la nature d'une telle élection, surtout si l'on pense à l'autodétermination telle qu'on l'envisage dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas.

246. Il est bien évident que le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas n'offre rien de constructif mais n'a que pour but de jouer le jeu des Pays-Bas contre l'Indonésie. On nous demande même maintenant de reconnaître le principe de l'autodétermination pour l'Irian occidental, comme si l'Irian occidental était un territoire colonial distinct situé quelque part en Afrique, en Amérique ou en Europe et n'ayant rien à voir avec l'Indonésie, rien à voir avec la lutte de l'Indonésie pour l'indépendance, rien à voir avec le différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Cela, je pense, nul ne peut attendre de nous que nous l'acceptions. Quoi qu'il arrive, il est clair que la population de l'Irian occidental est étroitement liée aux autres populations de l'Indonésie. Les habitants de l'Irian occidental ont lutté pour l'indépendance nationale qui a été proclamée par les dirigeants indonésiens le 17 août 1945. Les habitants de l'Irian occidental ont aussi consenti des sacrifices de vies humaines pour cette lutte. Dès le début, ils ont participé au mouvement général de l'Indonésie pour l'indépendance, qui par la suite a été réprimé en Irian occidental par les forces d'occupation néerlandaises. En outre, le plus important camp de concentration de l'Asie du Sud-Est, Boven Digul, se trouve en Irian occidental et constitue en quelque sorte le sanctuaire national de la lutte de l'Indonésie pour son indépendance. Là, dans ce lieu de bannissement impitoyable, la plupart de nos dirigeants — quelle que soit la région d'Indonésie d'où ils viennent, y compris l'Irian occidental — ont fait leur apprentissage de chefs de la nation dans des conditions d'indicibles souffrances et de tortures.

247. Si les Pays-Bas appliquaient le prétendu plan de décolonisation dont il est question dans leur projet de résolution à Curaçao et au Surinam qui sont encore des colonies de la couronne néerlandaise et qui luttent pour leur indépendance, si les Pays-Bas défendaient le principe de l'autodétermination dans les cas de l'Algérie, de l'Angola et d'autres territoires d'Afrique, alors il n'y aurait pas de divergence d'opinions entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Mais si, en cherchant une solution à la question de l'Irian occidental, les Pays-Bas ne tiennent aucun compte de l'Indonésie, comme si l'Indonésie n'était pas une entité politique, comme si l'Indonésie n'était pas une entité économique, comme si l'Indonésie n'était pas une entité militaire, alors il sera bien naturel qu'une réaction violente et lourde de conséquences se déclenche en Indonésie.

248. Certains diront peut-être que nous nous passionnons trop pour cette question. Comment pourrait-il en être autrement? La lutte pour la liberté est une lutte sincère et idéaliste. La lutte pour la liberté engendre l'espoir pour l'avenir, l'espoir d'une vie meilleure, libre de toute répression et de toute humiliation. Je sais que pour les Pays-Bas cette lutte n'est jamais que le champ de bataille offert aux intrigues coloniales, qu'un simple jeu qui consiste à s'efforcer de tenir en échec par l'emploi de la force les populations colonisées ou anciennement colonisées en alliant à cette force l'influence certaine dont les Pays-Bas jouissent sur le plan international, qu'une occasion enfin de rivaliser d'esprit et d'habileté dans l'art de présenter des arguments juridiques. Les expériences amères du passé nous ont heureusement servi d'enseignement tant en ce qui concerne les détours de l'esprit que l'emploi de la force. Nous ne sommes plus aussi naïfs qu'en 1950.

249. Désormais nous affrontons avec confiance l'intrigue coloniale néerlandaise sous tous ses aspects. Nous pouvons mesurer le degré de sincérité des Pays-Bas dans ce processus de décolonisation en considérant l'attitude adoptée par ce pays à l'égard de l'Indonésie indépendante. Tant qu'ils n'auront pas admis l'idée de l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, les Pays-Bas garderont leurs caractéristiques fondamentales de puissance coloniale. Je suppose que c'est seulement par suite d'un lapsus que le représentant des Pays-Bas a déclaré que son pays renoncerait à la souveraineté sur la seule colonie qui lui reste, l'Irian occidental. Je puis lui rappeler que le Surinam et Curaçao ont un statut de colonies. J'aimerais qu'il se reporte à l'article publié récemment par le quotidien Nieuw Suriname du Surinam, article qui a d'ailleurs été reproduit par le journal néerlandais Algemene Handelsblad dans son numéro du 10 novembre 1961. M. Pengel, président du parti national du Surinam, le plus grand parti du pays, y a exposé ses revendications dans les termes suivants: "Le Surinam doit accéder immédiatement à l'indépendance complète. Un nouveau retard risquerait d'avoir des conséquences regrettables."

250. Ces observations ne font que confirmer notre conviction du manque de sincérité des Pays-Bas dans leur manière de considérer les problèmes coloniaux.

251. Au sujet des observations faites par le représentant de l'Australie, j'ai déjà fait usage de mon droit de réponse le jour même [1055ème séance] pour lui répondre. Nous connaissons la position de l'Australie sur cette question. Ce qui nous a surpris dans les observations du représentant de l'Australie, c'est qu'il fait maintenant passer cette question de l'Irian occidental du second plan où elle se trouvait au tout premier plan. Nous espérons simplement que cela ne signifie pas qu'il attache une moindre importance à l'Indonésie en tant qu'élément du problème de sécurité pour l'Australie et qu'il ne substitue pas l'Irian occidental à l'Indonésie comme meilleure garantie de sécurité pour l'Australie.

252. Ce que je ne comprends pas non plus, c'est que le représentant de l'Australie affirme qu'il est contre les négociations bilatérales. Pour autant que je sache, cela est contraire aux assurances données par le Premier Ministre, M. Menzies, au président Sukarno, au général Nasution et à moi-même.

253. Avant de quitter cette tribune, je tiens à présenter quelques propositions constructives en vue d'un règlement honorable de ce différend qui oppose depuis longtemps les Pays-Bas à l'Indonésie.

254. Premièrement, il doit régner un climat de bonne volonté sincère entre les deux parties qui doivent être résolues à créer un esprit nouveau de coopération. A défaut de quoi, toute concession de la part de l'Indonésie, petite ou grande, sera mal interprétée et considérée comme un signe de faiblesse.

255. Deuxièmement, si les deux parties acceptent d'aborder ainsi le problème, si les deux parties acceptent cette psychologie du rapprochement et de l'entente, alors le fait que les Pays-Bas sont prêts à renoncer à leur souveraineté et à leurs pouvoirs sur l'Irian occidental pourra être mis à profit au maximum, en premier lieu pour le bien de la population de l'Irian occidental, en deuxième lieu pour le règlement du différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, en troisième lieu pour la reprise d'une coopération amicale entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie.

256. Troisièmement, nous prenons acte des engagements pris par le Gouvernement néerlandais depuis 1950 envers la population de l'Irian occidental dans la mesure où ils sont dans l'intérêt de la population de l'Irian occidental et propres à favoriser des relations d'amitié entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas.

257. Quatrièmement, une fois supprimé tout obstacle à l'abandon complet de l'autorité en Indonésie, les Pays-Bas seront en mesure de faire honneur à leurs engagements officiels et officieux, aux termes desquels l'ancien territoire des Indes néerlandaises constitue une entité nationale unique. Ce sont ces engagements pris après 1950 et ceux qui datent d'avant 1950, notamment quant à la signification réelle de l'expression "transfert de l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie", que les deux parties pourront avoir la sagesse de concilier et de formuler, à condition que les deux parties soient fermement résolues à chercher un arrangement dans des conditions raisonnables.

258. Cinquièmement, aux fins ci-dessus mentionnées, nous ne sommes pas opposés, en principe, à entamer des négociations bilatérales, comme certains membres de l'Assemblée l'ont suggéré et comme M. Krishna Menon, représentant de l'Inde, l'a proposé à l'Assemblée dans un projet de résolution [A/L.367].

259. Sixièmement, s'il faut prévoir, en vue d'une solution honorable de ce genre, une période de transition au cours de laquelle l'Organisation des Nations Unies devra jouer un rôle, l'Indonésie lui donnera toute sa coopération et tout son appui.

260. Septièmement, aucune des deux parties ne devra prendre d'initiative qui pourrait être interprétée comme une tentative unilatérale risquant d'être préjudiciable à la solution du problème dans le contexte approprié.

261. Je remercie le Président d'avoir bien voulu m'accorder la parole encore une fois.

262. M. HAILEMARIAM (Ethiopie) [traduit de l'anglais]: C'est pour moi un grand honneur et un privilège que de prendre la parole à cette tribune devant l'Assemblée générale pour y faire connaître une fois de plus les sentiments authentiques du peuple éthiopien sur la question de la suppression du colonialisme et en même temps pour préciser la position de ma délégation au sujet du point 88 (La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux) et du point 22 (Assistance à l'Afrique: a) programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance).

263. Pour nous, le colonialisme a de tout temps été chose maudite. Il est bien certain que les pays et les peuples qui l'ont pratiqué ont ainsi renoncé à tous les principes de la morale. L'essence du colonialisme est la subjugation et l'exploitation égoïste de l'homme par l'homme. Aussi le considérons-nous comme une forme moderne de l'esclavage.

264. Je voudrais pouvoir trouver quelques mots aimables à dire à l'égard de ce système d'immoralité organisée, mais je ne le puis. A maintes reprises, les colonialistes et leurs partisans nous ont conseillé de mettre un frein à nos critiques de ce système. Ici, je me permettrai de citer M. Alemayehou, qui était président de la délégation éthiopienne à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale et qui a déclaré le 30 novembre 1960:

"... Nous savons ce que des observateurs neutres qui vivent dans la liberté peuvent éprouver à l'égard du colonialisme en général, car nous avons nous-mêmes connu l'oppression, puis la liberté. Mais ils" — les observateurs neutres — "ne peuvent pas comprendre nos sentiments à l'égard du colonialisme, car ils ont toujours vécu dans la liberté. Il est facile pour les observateurs neutres de formuler des critiques, car ils n'ont jamais subi la plus abjecte et la plus dégradante des humiliations, ils n'ont jamais été des étrangers dans leur propre pays, ils n'ont jamais combattu et donné leur vie pour des causes qui n'étaient pas les leurs et ne faisaient qu'apporter une gloire nouvelle à leurs déjà glorieux oppresseurs, et ils n'ont jamais peiné pour accroître encore la richesse déjà fabuleuse de leurs maîtres et pour augmenter la force des mains qui les broient. Il faut avoir vécu sous l'empire colonialiste et être passé soi-même par ces épreuves pour comprendre la pleine signification du colonialisme." [928^e séance, par. 22.]

265. Chacun sait qu'un heureux concours de circonstances diverses, y compris la lutte qu'a menée sa population pour la liberté, a permis à mon pays de rester longtemps un flot indépendant dans une mer de pays colonisés. Toutefois, on n'a pas oublié que la liberté séculaire de notre patrie a été violée en cette date fatale du jeudi 3 octobre 1935 par le colonialisme sous la forme la plus brutale qu'ait connue l'histoire, à savoir le fascisme. Les représentants ici présents se souviennent certainement que cet événement a été suivi par cinq longues années d'occupation de l'Ethiopie, années qui nous ont paru des siècles, avec tout ce que cela comporte de misères et de privations indicibles et au prix de plus de 760 000 vies humaines innocentes. Je puis vous assurer que pendant encore bien des années les Ethiopiens auront de la difficulté à l'oublier, surtout lorsqu'en discute la question du colonialisme. A vrai dire, il serait humainement impossible au milieu d'Ethiopiens qui ont perdu leur père ou d'autres êtres chers de prétendre oublier les maux qui accompagnent l'apparition du colonialisme. Je sais que dans bien des pays représentés ici le colonialisme a laissé derrière lui des traces inoubliables de dévastation et des marques durables de bouleversement.

266. Si j'évoque le passé, ce n'est pas pour entretenir la rancune, mais pour expliquer les raisons pour lesquelles les Ethiopiens éprouvent de tels sentiments à l'égard du colonialisme et parce que, selon un proverbe éthiopien: "Celui qui frappe peut oublier, mais la victime jamais". Toutes excuses mises à part, le colonialisme n'a pour but que l'exploitation économique de terres étrangères et de peuples étrangers. La principale raison d'être de l'aventure coloniale a toujours été l'accumulation de profits énormes provenant de marchés en expansion, une main-d'œuvre à bon marché, une abondance de ressources minérales et de produits de base. Pour ne donner que quelques exemples, le salaire mensuel qui était payé à un travailleur africain au Kenya en 1924 était inférieur à ce que touche actuellement par heure un ouvrier manuel de New York. Telle était la condition réservée au travailleur africain qui peinait pour enrichir ses maîtres blancs. Tout récemment, en 1947, en Rhodésie du Nord, une loi consacrait ce même principe: elle accordait au mineur africain un salaire exactement 28,6 fois moindre que celui du mineur blanc accomplissant exactement le même travail. C'est donc un fait indéniable que la conséquence du colonialisme est l'exploitation, principalement l'exploitation économique.

267. Il doit être encourageant de vivre à la présente époque, et, j'en suis certain, il doit être immensément agréable, ne serait-ce que d'assister à la faillite inévitable et irrésistible du système du colonialisme. Le cours de l'histoire a enfin dépassé le colonialisme et en fait un épisode du passé sur lequel il n'est plus possible de revenir. Toutefois, nous ne devons pas nous leurrer, la disparition du colonialisme risquerait d'être inutilement retardée si nous nous laissions aller à l'apathie. Ce sont des obstinés qui détiennent maintenant les vestiges du colonialisme. Tel est le cas, par exemple, de l'Angola, de l'Algérie et du Katanga, pour n'en mentionner que quelques-uns. Nous ferons donc bien de redoubler d'efforts et de coordonner nos actions pour mettre rapidement fin au colonialisme et à l'impérialisme dans toutes leurs manifestations.

268. Les réalisations actuelles en ce qui concerne la libération des pays de la domination coloniale sont les fruits des efforts communs d'Etats africains et asiatiques et d'autres Etats amis des peuples opprimés et des pays persécutés.

269. Permettez-moi de retracer les principales étapes de cette lutte dans laquelle nous avons joint nos efforts. On n'a pas oublié que la Conférence de Bogor, qui réunissait les Premiers Ministres de la

Birmanie, de Ceylan, de l'Inde, de l'Indonésie et du Pakistan, a pris l'initiative et la décision de réunir la Conférence des Etats africano-asiatiques, qui s'est tenue à Bandoung du 18 au 24 avril 1955. Cette conférence a adopté d'un commun accord, comme l'énonce le communiqué final, la résolution suivante:

"La Conférence

"a) Déclare que le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes est un mal auquel il convient de mettre fin rapidement;

"b) Affirme que la sujétion des peuples à la domination et l'exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, qu'elle est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et qu'elle fait obstacle à la paix et à la coopération internationales;

"c) Déclare donner son appui à la cause de la liberté et de l'indépendance de tous les peuples soumis à la domination et à l'exploitation étrangères;

"d) Invite les puissances intéressées à accorder à ces peuples la liberté et l'indépendance.

"En raison de la situation troublée qui règne actuellement en Afrique du Nord et du refus persistant opposé aux peuples de l'Afrique du Nord de reconnaître leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes, la Conférence africano-asiatique déclare donner son appui aux droits des peuples de l'Algérie, du Maroc et de la Tunisie à disposer d'eux-mêmes et à accéder à l'indépendance et elle invite instamment le Gouvernement français à régler cette question sans délai par des moyens pacifiques 16/."

270. Le Président me permettra certainement de dire que son vaillant pays, la Tunisie, a pu, à la suite de la Conférence de Bandoung, bénéficier d'un appui pour accéder à l'indépendance.

271. La première Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique qui s'est réunie à Accra le 1er avril 1958 a réaffirmé les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies, de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et de la Déclaration de Bandoung dans sa résolution II relative à l'avenir des territoires africains dépendants et elle a invité les puissances administrantes à prendre rapidement des mesures pour mettre en œuvre les dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies et pour répondre aux aspirations politiques des peuples des territoires dépendants qui souhaitent l'indépendance. Elle a invité en outre les puissances administrantes à s'abstenir de prendre des mesures de répression, de refuser arbitrairement de reconnaître les droits de l'homme et de pratiquer la discrimination raciale.

272. La Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique qui s'est réunie à Monrovia, au Libéria, du 4 au 8 août 1959, a adopté sa résolution V relative aux territoires non indépendants. Cette résolution étant très courte, je me permets de la citer intégralement:

"La Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique,

"Après avoir entendu les pétitionnaires de l'Ouganda, de l'Angola et de la Rhodésie du Sud,

"Réitère la résolution II prise à Accra par les Etats indépendants d'Afrique relative à l'avenir des territoires africains dépendants;

"Reconnaît aux territoires non encore indépendants de l'Afrique le droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance;

"1. Invite les puissances administrantes à respecter la Charte des Nations Unies dans ce domaine, à prendre des mesures rapides pour appliquer les dispositions de la Charte et à tenir compte des aspirations politiques des peuples et de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes et à l'indépendance;

"2. Lance un appel à la conscience mondiale et aux Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour qu'ils aident ces territoires à réaliser leurs aspirations légitimes et à atteindre leur indépendance conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies."

L'appel que cette conférence adressait aux Nations Unies est toujours valable.

273. Du 14 au 26 juin 1960, mon pays, l'Ethiopie, a eu l'honneur et le privilège d'accueillir la deuxième Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique qui s'est réunie à Addis-Abéba. Par la résolution XII, nous avons instamment demandé au Gouvernement britannique de prendre immédiatement des mesures pour dissoudre la Fédération de l'Afrique centrale qui avait été imposée aux peuples africains contre leur gré le 23 octobre 1953. Au sujet de l'élimination de nouvelles formes de colonialisme en Afrique, la Conférence a adopté la résolution X invitant toutes les puissances coloniales à s'abstenir de toute action qui risquerait de compromettre la souveraineté et l'indépendance des Etats naissants. Le but en était de prévenir les difficultés pouvant résulter de ce que l'on appelle maintenant le "néo-colonialisme".

274. En outre, la Conférence d'Addis-Abéba a adopté la résolution IX 17/ sur la liquidation de la domination coloniale en Afrique. J'aimerais citer les paragraphes 1, 2, 5 et 11 de cette résolution, qui sont pertinents. Le paragraphe 1 est ainsi conçu:

"Invite instamment les puissances coloniales à fixer des dates conformément à la volonté des populations, pour l'accession immédiate à l'indépendance de tous les pays non indépendants, et à communiquer ces dates aux populations intéressées."

Le paragraphe 2 est ainsi conçu:

"Décide que les Etats indépendants d'Afrique continueront à exercer une action concertée pour obtenir par tous les moyens pacifiques possibles l'élimination complète de la domination coloniale en Afrique."

Le paragraphe 5 est ainsi conçu:

"Adresse un nouvel appel aux dirigeants, aux partis politiques et aux autres organisations des pays non indépendants pour qu'à ce stade historique de leur lutte ils s'unissent en un front national afin de hâter la libération de leurs pays."

Enfin le paragraphe 11 est ainsi conçu:

"Adresse un appel aux puissances coloniales pour qu'elles s'abstiennent de réprimer les mouvements de libération nationale et qu'elles libèrent immédiatement les prisonniers politiques, les détenus et les personnes en liberté surveillée."

275. A la quinzième session ordinaire de l'Assemblée générale, le 23 septembre 1960, M. Khrouchtchev, au nom du Gouvernement de l'URSS, a eu le mérite de donner lecture d'un projet de déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, à la 862^e séance plénière de l'Assemblée générale. A l'issue des débats qui ont suivi, l'Assemblée générale a adopté par 89 voix contre zéro, avec 9 abstentions, la résolution 1514 (XV) en date du 14 décembre 1960, qui a maintenant une grande importance historique. Qu'il me soit permis de nommer les pays qui se sont abstenus: Portugal, Espagne, Afrique du Sud, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Australie, Belgique, République Dominicaine et France. Il suffira de dire qu'un ou deux de ces pays ne sont pas en bonne compagnie lorsque nous parlons de colonialisme.

276. Cette résolution n'est pas une résolution ordinaire, c'est une résolution qui fait époque, un texte dont on a une haute opinion et que l'on pourrait presque considérer comme une charte pour le progrès humain et la libération coloniale. Puisque les questions en discussion, c'est-à-dire les points 88 et 22, a, de l'ordre du jour, se rapportent à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV), je me permettrai de citer la Déclaration qui figure dans cette résolution.

[Le représentant de l'Ethiopie donne lecture de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV).]

277. Du 5 au 13 juin 1961, la réunion préliminaire des représentants de certains Etats non alignés, qui s'est tenue au Caire, a préparé l'ordre du jour de la Conférence des pays non alignés, en insistant particulièrement sur la nécessité de liquider d'urgence le colonialisme.

278. Du 1^{er} au 6 septembre 1961, la Conférence de Belgrade, à laquelle prenaient part 25 chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement de pays non alignés, a discuté et finalement publié une déclaration soulignant que le colonialisme est en voie de disparition. Dans cette déclaration, il est dit notamment:

"Les participants à la Conférence réaffirment solennellement leur appui à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux adoptée à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, et recommandent l'abolition immédiate, inconditionnelle, totale et définitive du colonialisme et ils ont décidé de faire un effort concerté pour mettre fin à toutes les formes et manifestations du néo-colonialisme et de la domination impérialiste ^{18/}."

De plus, la Conférence a donné son appui au principe de l'autodétermination pour l'Algérie, elle a exprimé sa grande inquiétude des mesures de répression toujours plus graves prises en Angola, elle a demandé instamment qu'aucune intervention étrangère ne soit tolérée au Congo et elle a condamné résolument la politique d'apartheid pratiquée dans la République sud-africaine.

279. La Déclaration de l'Assemblée générale sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'est pas restée lettre morte au cours des 11 derniers mois, je me plais à le constater. C'est ainsi que:

1) Le Sierra Leone a accédé à l'indépendance le 27 avril 1961 et est heureusement venu se joindre

^{18/} Conférence de Belgrade, 1961 (publié par la Revue de politique internationale, Belgrade), No 5, p. 21.

à nous à l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour lutter contre les vestiges du colonialisme. J'ai été particulièrement heureux d'entendre le représentant du Sierra Leone parler contre le colonialisme lorsqu'il a pris la parole;

2) Le régime de tutelle sur le Territoire sous tutelle du Cameroun sous administration du Royaume-Uni a pris fin pendant cette période;

3) Le Tanganyika accédera à l'indépendance le 9 décembre 1961 et viendra très probablement prendre sa place au sein de cette communauté de nations avant la clôture de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale;

4) Le Samoa-Occidental doit accéder à l'indépendance le 1^{er} janvier 1962;

5) Le Ruanda-Urundi sera indépendant avant le mois d'avril 1962;

6) L'Ouganda obtiendra son indépendance le 9 octobre 1962 au plus tard; et, à vrai dire, je ne serais pas surpris de voir certains des jeunes combattants de la liberté de l'Ouganda, comme Godfrey Benaïsa, à leur sortie de prison, venir assister à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale en qualité de représentants de leur pays;

7) En Amérique latine, les progrès réalisés sur le plan constitutionnel en Guyane britannique sont des plus encourageants;

8) Nous avons toute confiance dans la compétence de M. Banda pour libérer le Nyassaland du colonialisme dans un avenir relativement proche;

9) La Fédération des Indes occidentales, qui comprend 10 îles, et dont la population totale est de près de 3 millions d'habitants, pourrait fort bien accéder bientôt à l'indépendance, à condition que les dirigeants de la Jamaïque fassent preuve d'un esprit résolu et clairvoyant;

10) Enfin, le Kenya, pays voisin et ami, sera indépendant au plus tard au cours du début de l'année 1962. Ces nouvelles sont une source de joie et de satisfaction pour l'Ethiopie qui est restée longtemps, en fait pendant des siècles, entourée de puissances coloniales. Maintenant, pour la première fois depuis des siècles, elle sera entourée d'Etats africains frères devenus indépendants, et il faut être Ethiopien pour comprendre l'immense plaisir que nous procure cette situation.

280. A ce stade, permettez-moi de rappeler les paroles de la deuxième Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique réunie à Addis-Abéba en 1960, qui a adressé un appel "aux dirigeants, aux partis politiques et aux autres organisations des pays non indépendants pour qu'à ce stade historique de leur lutte ils s'unissent en un front national afin de hâter la libération de leurs pays". Compte tenu de cet appel, ma délégation voudrait inviter les dirigeants politiques du Kenya à ne pas faire le jeu des intrigues colonialistes et risquer ainsi de retarder leur indépendance. Actuellement, M. Jomo Kenyatta, ce vaillant dirigeant du Kenya qui était en prison depuis 1952 jusqu'à cette année, se trouve en ce moment dans mon pays, l'Ethiopie, pour resserrer encore et renforcer les liens de l'amitié traditionnelle entre les peuples du Kenya et de l'Ethiopie. J'ose également exprimer l'espoir que ses visites à Londres et à Addis-Abéba contribueront largement à hâter l'accession du Kenya à l'indépendance.

281. Nous espérons fermement que, conformément au paragraphe 3 de la Déclaration figurant dans la résolution 1514 (XV), le manque de préparation dans le domaine politique ne sera pas pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance du Kenya.

282. Tout ce que je viens de rappeler montre que pendant les 11 derniers mois nous avons progressé dans la voie de l'émancipation coloniale. Il faut se souvenir qu'en 1939 environ 60 p. 100 de la population mondiale était sous la domination coloniale, alors qu'aujourd'hui ce rapport a été ramené à 2 p. 100. Néanmoins, il est encore à déplorer que l'homme exploite son semblable en vertu de l'ignoble système colonialiste.

283. En Afrique, le colonialisme est encore une réalité — et qui plus est, une dure réalité. Sur notre continent, 22 p. 100 de nos populations continuent à languir sous la domination européenne. Il faut rappeler que les colonialistes, à l'origine de leur aventure égoïste en Afrique, comme ailleurs, prétextaient toujours que le but de leur visite était inoffensif et consistait à apporter "le christianisme aux païens" et "la civilisation aux pays arriérés".

284. A l'heure actuelle, en Afrique seulement, 20 territoires n'ont pas encore obtenu leur indépendance, sans compter Ifni, Ceuta, São Tomé, Fernando Poo, l'archipel des Comores, la Réunion, l'île Maurice, ainsi que la République sud-africaine, pays qu'on ne peut considérer comme un territoire indépendant, si ce n'est d'une manière purement formelle et théorique. Ces 20 pays couvrent une superficie de 9 410 000 km² environ et comptent une population totale de 50 900 000 habitants. En outre, si l'on ajoute les 13 millions d'habitants non blancs de la République sud-africaine, on est effrayé de voir qu'en Afrique 63 900 000 habitants, répartis sur une superficie de 10 660 000 km² environ, se trouvent en servitude sous une domination étrangère. De plus, en dehors de l'Afrique, plus de 30 autres territoires avec une population totale de près de 20 millions d'habitants se trouvent sous la domination coloniale.

285. Je fais appel à l'Assemblée pour qu'elle exerce toute l'autorité morale dont elle jouit, dans l'intérêt de la dignité de l'homme et en faveur de l'émancipation coloniale. Nous qui jouissons à l'heure actuelle des bienfaits de la liberté et ne sommes pas soumis à une domination étrangère, nous ne devons pas oublier, je vous en conjure, les millions d'êtres humains qui, dans le monde entier, aspirent passionnément à l'indépendance. Je ne doute pas que l'heure soit venue d'entreprendre une croisade victorieuse contre le colonialisme. Les vestiges du colonialisme et de l'impérialisme sous toutes leurs formes et dans toutes leurs manifestations livrent une bataille perdue d'avance. Toutefois, comme je l'ai déjà dit, les colonialistes, dans leur dernière retraite, ont laissé quelques éléments particulièrement obstinés et intraitables, comme Salan en Algérie, Verwoerd en Afrique du Sud, Welensky en Rhodésie du Sud; mais, de notre côté, nous devons également nous montrer inflexibles en notre qualité de champions de la liberté, de l'égalité, de la justice et de la fraternité humaine.

286. Nous devons raviver notre foi dans la destinée suprême de l'homme pour refréner ses tendances égoïstes, de même qu'il a su maîtriser l'atome invisible. A notre époque, l'heure de la liberté sonne vibrante et claire, la marche vers la liberté se poursuit à un rythme régulier et constant, et aucune puissance ne sera en mesure de l'interrompre jusqu'à ce que le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations ait disparu. Telle est la conviction de l'Ethiopie, dont j'ai l'honneur, au nom de ma délégation et en toute humilité, de faire part à l'Assemblée, sachant pertinemment que ces faits auront leur place dans les annales de l'histoire.

287. Je voudrais maintenant présenter quelques observations sur certains des problèmes d'actualité qui subsistent pour la bonne application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

288. Il est regrettable que le Gouvernement portugais persiste à se refuser à toute coopération avec les Nations Unies en ne communiquant aucun renseignement sur les territoires qu'il a encore sous sa dépendance et en invoquant le prétexte fictif d'un "Etat unitaire".

289. On se souviendra que la France aussi considérait l'Algérie comme une partie de son territoire. Aujourd'hui, pareille thèse est insoutenable.

290. En vertu des dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, il y a obligation de communiquer des renseignements au titre de l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte des Nations Unies, notamment à l'égard d'un territoire géographiquement séparé ou qui de toute autre manière est distinct du pays qui l'administre.

291. L'Angola, qui s'étend sur une superficie de 1 250 000 km² environ et dont la population est de 4 500 000 habitants est un territoire africain tombé aux mains cruelles du colonialisme. Depuis longtemps, mon pays entretient des liens d'amitié avec le Portugal. Nous aimerions que cette amitié puisse durer.

292. Toutefois, l'élimination du colonialisme est pour nous un acte de foi. Contrairement aux paragraphes 4 et 5 de la Déclaration, le Portugal a pris des mesures impitoyables de répression contre les Africains qui aspirent à l'indépendance. Des milliers d'hommes, de femmes et d'enfants africains ont été massacrés par les Portugais. En outre, un véritable esclavage déguisé est pratiqué en Angola.

293. Parlant du travail forcé en Angola, Henrique Galvão, un Portugais qui vaut son pesant d'or, disait au sujet de l'employeur portugais en général:

"Ce qui l'intéressait, c'était de le maintenir (il s'agit du travailleur africain) en bonne santé, de lui conserver sa force et son agilité, tout comme il l'aurait fait pour son cheval ou son taureau. Aujourd'hui, l'autochtone ne s'achète pas, on le loue simplement au gouvernement."

294. L'Assemblée n'ignore pas, j'en suis certain, que le Portugal livre une bataille perdue d'avance. Des puissances plus grandes que le Portugal qui est un petit pays se sont efforcées en vain d'aller contre le cours de l'histoire. Ma délégation reprendra cette question portugaise lorsque l'Assemblée en sera de nouveau saisie en séance plénière. Toutefois, à ce stade, il suffit de dire que la politique suivie par le Portugal en Angola est l'une des pierres d'achoppement qui font obstacle à la mise en application de la Déclaration.

295. Nous remarquons maintenant que les grandes puissances déploient tous leurs efforts pour mettre fin aux problèmes qui découlent encore de la seconde guerre mondiale. Cependant, en Afrique, nous n'avons malheureusement pas encore pu régler un problème qui découlait de la première guerre mondiale. Je veux parler de la question du Territoire sous mandat du Sud-Ouest africain.

296. L'Article 22 du Pacte de la Société des Nations prévoyait que la puissance administrante devait appliquer le principe selon lequel le bien-être et le développement de ces peuples forment une mission sacrée de civilisation. Le deuxième paragraphe de l'article 2 du Mandat stipulait que la Puissance mandataire accroîtrait "par tous les moyens en son pouvoir, le bien-être matériel et moral ainsi que le progrès social des habitants du Territoire" soumis à ce mandat. L'Afrique du Sud n'avait aucune excuse pour ne pas remplir ses obligations. Cependant, le Gouvernement de l'Union a agi exactement à l'opposé des dispositions précitées dans son administration du Territoire sous mandat du Sud-Ouest africain. Il est triste de constater que le travail forcé est ouvertement pratiqué au Sud-Ouest africain et que le honteux système de l'apartheid a été institué par la Puissance mandataire dans le Territoire. Les salaires des Africains sont exagérément bas et les conditions de travail sont extrêmement pénibles. Le déplacement arbitraire des autochtones d'un lieu à un autre et d'une réserve à l'autre a montré à quel point la République sud-africaine méprise souverainement la Charte des Nations Unies et la Déclaration des droits de l'homme.

297. Conformément aux dispositions de l'article 4 du Mandat, l'instruction militaire des autochtones était interdite, sauf pour assurer la police locale. En outre, on ne devait établir aucune base militaire ou navale ni aucune fortification. Cependant, la Puissance mandataire a également violé cette stipulation en établissant des bases militaires, navales et aériennes dans le Territoire sous mandat du Sud-Ouest africain. On l'a fait sans aucun doute pour terroriser et intimider la population africaine. Qui plus est, cette année l'armée a en outre été chargée de garder toutes les frontières du Territoire pour en interdire l'entrée au Comité du Sud-Ouest africain, créé par l'Assemblée générale.

298. Selon les termes de la Déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV), le processus de libération est irrésistible et irréversible et, pour éviter de graves crises, il faut mettre fin au colonialisme et à toutes les pratiques de ségrégation et de discrimination.

299. En ce qui concerne la situation en Algérie, il serait utile de noter que ceux qui ont rédigé la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale n'ont pas cessé de penser à l'Algérie. Nous le savons parce que, du début jusqu'à la fin, nous avons suivi de très près l'élaboration de cette résolution. Ma délégation regrette par conséquent que les paragraphes 2, 4 et 6 de la Déclaration n'aient pas été respectés dans ce cas. Nous avons toujours été des amis de la France et nous le resterons, mais nous croyons aussi que les pays doivent accéder à l'indépendance et telle est notre ferme conviction. La guerre d'Algérie qui se poursuit depuis huit ans doit prendre fin rapidement. Le peuple algérien doit avoir la possibilité de déterminer lui-même quel sera son avenir, selon les principes démocratiques de libre détermination et d'égalité. Il faut sortir de l'impasse où se trouvent les pourparlers entre le Gouvernement provisoire de la République algérienne et la France, et les négociations doivent être reprises immédiatement. En outre, c'est avec un grand soulagement et un immense plaisir que nous avons appris ce matin qu'environ

4 000 combattants algériens de la liberté qui avaient héroïquement fait la grève de la faim avaient bénéficié du statut de prisonniers politiques. Ce fait est réellement un présage de bon augure particulièrement important pour l'indépendance future de l'Algérie.

300. Nous sommes heureux de noter que le président de Gaulle a déclaré il y a quelques jours à Toulon que la fin de la guerre d'Algérie était proche. Nous espérons que la France ne se laissera pas intimider par les éléments d'extrême droite, comme Salan, et qu'elle accordera l'indépendance au peuple algérien.

301. Il ne faut pas oublier que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux proclamait "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations".

302. Néanmoins, le néo-colonialisme s'efforce de démembrer la République du Congo (Léopoldville) en manœuvrant pour aider le mouvement sécessionniste de Tshombé qui n'est qu'un fantoche au service des hommes d'affaires belges. Nous croyons qu'en expulsant par la force les mercenaires du Katanga, les Nations Unies prépareront le retour de la paix dans ce malheureux pays.

303. Ma délégation a soigneusement examiné la proposition des Pays-Bas tendant à internationaliser l'Irian occidental. Il faut reconnaître, à en juger d'après l'attitude de coopération des colonialistes, que les Pays-Bas semblent ici faire preuve d'une certaine bonne volonté. Toutefois, si l'on étudie de près ladite proposition en la replaçant dans son contexte, c'est-à-dire compte tenu du différend opposant l'Indonésie aux Pays-Bas, on s'aperçoit que la proposition n'est en fait qu'une formule subtile visant à permettre aux néo-colonialistes de parvenir à leurs fins, qui sont de fragmenter les pays d'Afrique et d'Asie. Si nous levons le voile flatteur dont on a entouré cette proposition, nous constatons que l'objectif essentiel des Pays-Bas est d'empêcher définitivement le retour de l'Irian occidental à l'Indonésie. Nous sommes convaincus quant à nous que l'Irian occidental est plus proche de l'Indonésie que des Pays-Bas — cela est d'ailleurs évident pour toute personne capable de se faire un jugement.

304. L'Indonésie, l'un des plus farouches ennemis du colonialisme, ne peut être soupçonnée de chercher à coloniser un autre pays. Il y aurait en effet une contradiction dans les termes si l'on imputait des visées colonialistes à un pays anticolonialiste. Le seul motif que nous puissions prêter à l'Indonésie lorsqu'elle réclame l'Irian occidental, c'est qu'elle veut libérer ce territoire du colonialisme. C'est pourquoi ma délégation se range du côté de l'Indonésie sur cette question. Même en admettant qu'il existe un différend entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas au sujet de la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental, il serait déplacé de la part des Pays-Bas de remettre ce territoire à un autre pays ou, si vous préférez, à une organisation internationale, sans l'assentiment de l'Indonésie.

305. Nous aimerions naturellement voir s'établir une plus grande coopération entre l'Organisation des Nations Unies et les Pays-Bas, mais cela doit se traduire par l'application correcte de la Déclaration figurant dans la résolution 1514 (XV) aux colonies néerlandaises du Surinam, de Curaçao et d'Aruba. Pourquoi les Pays-Bas ne libèrent-ils pas ces territoires? Suppose-t-on que la Déclaration ne s'applique pas à ces territoires coloniaux? Quoi qu'il en soit, nous estimons que l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit faire appel tant aux Pays-Bas qu'à l'Indonésie pour qu'ils entament immédiatement des négociations en vue de régler leur différend relatif à l'Irian occidental. Nous sommes persuadés qu'une telle décision résoudra toutes les difficultés et permettra en définitive d'aboutir à une solution à l'amiable. Ma délégation juge intolérable et inacceptable que l'Indonésie soit harcelée pour avoir réussi à accéder à l'indépendance au prix de plus d'un demi-million de vies humaines sacrifiées pour la liberté.

306. La résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale a une importance historique car elle pose les principes de la décolonisation universelle. Cependant, cette résolution ne prévoit pas de dispositif pour l'application de ces principes à des cas précis. C'est pourquoi ma délégation a activement participé, depuis son élaboration jusqu'à sa présentation, à la préparation du projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1] que nous avons rédigé pour en saisir l'Assemblée aujourd'hui.

307. Ce projet de résolution recommande dans son dispositif la création d'un comité spécial de 17 membres qui seront désignés par le Président au cours de la présente session. Le paragraphe 4 du dispositif renferme un projet de mandat. On prévoit que le comité sera chargé du dispositif d'application de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme. En outre, le comité est autorisé à formuler des recommandations et des suggestions dans des cas particuliers. Le comité aura besoin de la collaboration de tous les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, notamment des puissances coloniales qui administrent actuellement des territoires encore dépendants. En vertu du paragraphe 6 du dispositif, le comité est autorisé à se réunir, si besoin est, en tout autre lieu que le Siège des Nations Unies, en consultation avec les autorités compétentes, afin de pouvoir s'acquitter efficacement de ses fonctions.

308. Pour en revenir au paragraphe 2 du dispositif, le projet de résolution invite toutes les puissances coloniales à agir sans plus tarder afin de mettre la Déclaration en application. Il stipule que les puissances coloniales doivent appliquer ce texte scrupuleusement. Je tiens à souligner ce terme "scrupuleusement", car il importe avant toute chose que la Déclaration soit appliquée scrupuleusement. A ce propos, ma délégation croit que ce nouveau comité spécial dont la création est prévue dans ledit projet de résolution que nous avons l'honneur de présenter à l'Assemblée aujourd'hui permettra d'atteindre les buts visés au point 22 de l'ordre du jour, c'est-à-dire "Assistance à l'Afrique: a) programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance". Il est bien entendu que le comité spécial ne sera pas exclusivement au service de l'Afrique, mais qu'il aidera les mouvements de libération dans le monde entier.

309. En terminant, je tiens à exprimer sincèrement l'espoir que les efforts déployés pour liquider le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations seront bientôt couronnés de succès.

La séance est levée à 19 h 35.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

3. M. SULAIMAN (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: Par la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée à la quinzième session, l'Assemblée générale a pris la décision la plus importante de notre temps. Cette déclaration nette et sans équivoque, qui vise à mettre fin à une sombre période d'exploitation massive, est non seulement un des documents les plus remarquables de l'histoire, mais aussi l'expression des forces irrésistibles qui parviendront à libérer définitivement l'homme et la société de la subjugation. Le droit fondamental et universellement admis de tous les peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance complète a maintenant été sanctionné par l'Organisation mondiale.

4. L'application réelle et effective de cette décision historique qui "proclame solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations" est attendue avec impatience par des millions de personnes qui subissent l'oppression coloniale. La Déclaration elle-même souligne le caractère urgent du problème et demande que des "mesures immédiates" soient prises pour accorder l'indépendance "sans aucune condition ni réserve". La liquidation définitive du colonialisme constituera une contribution importante à la paix mondiale et éliminera une des causes principales de guerre, la guerre et le colonialisme ayant toujours été étroitement associés dans notre histoire.

5. La lutte entre les puissances coloniales pour la possession des colonies et le combat héroïque des peuples coloniaux pour leur libération ont un rapport étroit avec toutes les grandes guerres des temps modernes. De très nombreux états souverains nés durant l'ère coloniale ont accédé à l'indépendance par la guerre. L'histoire de l'hémisphère occidental, tant au nord qu'au sud, l'histoire de l'Europe orientale et des Balkans, celle de l'Asie et de l'Afrique en offrent des exemples évidents. C'est un paradoxe que les deux grandes guerres de notre siècle, malgré leur origine coloniale et leur caractère colonial, ont ébranlé les fondements mêmes du système colonial et ont fait s'écrouler l'un après l'autre les grands empires du XIXème siècle.

6. L'éveil des masses coloniales opprimées, la révolte contre l'humiliation et l'esclavage auxquels ces peuples étaient soumis et l'appui de l'opinion publique progressiste et libérale du monde entier ont démontré que les jours du colonialisme étaient comptés. La Déclaration sur l'abolition du colonialisme le confirme. Il y est également reconnu que le colonialisme persiste dans de nombreuses parties du monde.

7. Nous croyons que les territoires coloniaux constituent de dangereux éléments de trouble dans l'ordre mondial actuel; il en sera ainsi jusqu'à ce qu'on parvienne à la libération générale et complète et à la création d'une communauté universelle de nations libres. Les conflits armés et les guerres de libération qui sont aujourd'hui en cours dans certaines parties du monde exigent que des mesures soient prises immédiatement pour l'application de la Déclaration non seulement dans l'intérêt des peuples colonisés qui luttent, mais aussi dans l'intérêt de la paix mondiale et dans la véritable intérêt des peuples des puissances coloniales elles-mêmes.

*Reprise des débats de la 1042ème séance.

8. Dans le cadre du mouvement inévitable et irrésistible vers l'indépendance, nous avons vu avec grand plaisir le Sierra Leone devenir cette année un Etat indépendant et souverain et obtenir son admission à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous attendons le moment où nous pourrions souhaiter la bienvenue au Tanganyika en tant qu'Etat indépendant. Il n'en reste pas moins que le système du colonialisme existe encore. Il est vrai que 800 millions d'êtres humains ont obtenu leur souveraineté en tant que nations indépendantes au cours des 15 dernières années. Il est vrai aussi cependant qu'il y a aujourd'hui encore à peu près 80 territoires non autonomes, comptant plus de 70 millions d'habitants, qui restent sous la domination coloniale.

9. La libération de plus de 90 p. 100 des êtres humains qui étaient encore sous le joug colonial après la seconde guerre mondiale constitue en soi un argument de poids contre ceux qui défendent le maintien du colonialisme dans les parties relativement restreintes du monde où il subsiste. Le prétexte souvent invoqué par les colonialistes a été écarté par l'Assemblée générale dans sa déclaration: "Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance".

10. Malgré toutes les leçons de l'histoire, le colonialisme mène désespérément un combat d'arrière-garde contre les peuples qui luttent pour réaliser leurs aspirations à la liberté et à l'indépendance. Dans ses derniers jours d'agonie, il semble ne pas vouloir quitter la scène de l'histoire sans terreur ni crimes. La répression militaire se poursuit, au mépris de la Déclaration qui stipule: "Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression... dirigées contre les peuples dépendants".

11. En tête de liste figure la guerre coloniale d'Algérie, avec toute son horreur et toutes ses tragédies. Depuis plus de sept ans, le Gouvernement français mène une guerre totale contre le peuple algérien. Le 1er novembre de cette année, l'héroïque peuple algérien est entré dans la huitième année de sa guerre de libération nationale. Les atrocités commises par les Français tant en France qu'en Algérie, les arrestations et déportations en masse d'Algériens, accompagnées de terreur et de meurtres, ont été largement relatées dans la presse mondiale. Il ne se passe guère de jour sans qu'on nous parle de répressions inhumaines et de persécution des patriotes algériens. Les dernières nouvelles concernant les cinq chefs algériens captifs en France, qui font la grève de la faim depuis le début du mois de concert avec des milliers d'autres prisonniers algériens, ont troublé la conscience internationale. La préoccupation profonde que suscitent le sort de milliers d'Algériens prisonniers en France et le sérieux danger qu'il présente pour les perspectives d'un règlement pacifique et négocié a été exprimée récemment par l'Assemblée générale dans l'appel qu'elle a lancé à la France pour qu'elle fasse droit aux légitimes revendications des prisonniers et leur reconnaisse le statut de prisonniers politiques [résolution 1650 (XVI)]. Nous sommes heureux d'apprendre que 20 jours après un accord a pu être réalisé, qui met un terme à cette grève de la faim. Nous espérons que cet accord ouvrira la voie à de nouvelles négociations en vue de règlement de la question algérienne.

12. Cette guerre désespérée et moralement indéfendable se déchaine sans merci contre un peuple qui aspire à la liberté. On en prévoit clairement l'issue inéluctable. L'Algérie sera bientôt une nation indépendante et la cause de la liberté triomphera ici comme elle a triomphé ailleurs dans le monde. L'Assemblée a déjà adressé plusieurs appels à la France en la priant de mettre fin à cette guerre criminelle; ils ont tous été accueillis avec dédain. La Déclaration adoptée l'an dernier est également restée lettre morte; la guerre et les mesures de répression se poursuivent à un rythme croissant.

13. Afin de brosser un tableau fidèle de la guerre coloniale d'Algérie, il convient toujours de rappeler que les forces armées françaises comprennent plus de 600 000 hommes, que plus d'un million et demi d'hommes ont servi dans l'armée française en Algérie depuis le début de la guerre, que les deux tiers de l'aviation militaire française et la moitié de la flotte française y prennent part, qu'un million d'Algériens ont été tués dans cette guerre, que plus d'un million et demi de civils sont devenus des personnes déplacées, que plus de 200 000 Algériens sont internés dans des camps et des prisons militaires et que plus de 300 000 Algériens se sont réfugiés en Tunisie et au Maroc.

14. Bien que le Gouvernement français ait finalement accepté l'inévitable conclusion et ait reconnu le droit du peuple algérien à l'autodétermination, la France poursuit cette guerre insensée. Parmi les causes principales de la continuation de cette tragédie humaine figurent les intérêts établis des colonialistes français et d'autres puissances occidentales dans le pétrole saharien. C'est là un exemple frappant de la tentative permanente d'exploitation coloniale et de sa nature. D'autre part, la menace qu'agite la France de partager l'Algérie reste un obstacle majeur sur la voie d'un règlement pacifique. Dans sa lutte, le peuple algérien a l'appui total de ses frères du monde arabe et des peuples épris de liberté du monde entier. Mon pays a donné et donnera toute l'assistance possible au peuple algérien dans son combat pour sa libération nationale.

15. L'agression militaire de la France ne s'est pas limitée à l'Algérie. Les forces armées françaises qui maintiennent une base militaire à Bizerte sur le territoire de la Tunisie indépendante, au lieu de se retirer, ont lancé une attaque impitoyable contre le peuple tunisien et les forces armées de la Tunisie. Cet acte d'agression qui a soulevé l'indignation du monde entier est une manifestation évidente de la mentalité coloniale sous sa forme la plus brutale. Aucun prétexte de défense de l'Occident ne peut justifier le maintien de ces troupes étrangères sur le sol tunisien. Nous appuyons sans réserve notre sœur la République de Tunisie. Nous condamnons l'action de la France et nous exigeons qu'elle retire sans condition ses troupes de Bizerte.

16. Au Congo, on se rend une fois de plus clairement compte du rôle important qu'ont joué les intérêts des monopoles et les intérêts coloniaux pour porter atteinte à l'unité et à l'intégrité territoriale de cette jeune république. Afin d'assurer leur contrôle sur les riches ressources minières de la province du Katanga, ces milieux, l'Union minière en tête, n'ont pas hésité à plonger le Congo et l'ensemble du monde dans une crise aiguë. Les colonialistes belges, appuyés par d'autres milieux intéressés, n'ont pas hésité à entrer en guerre non seulement contre l'unité et l'indépendance du Congo, mais aussi contre les Nations Unies. Ils ont eu recours à tous les moyens pour semer le trouble, fournissant des armes ou des mercenaires, finançant le mouvement séparatiste et les agents coloniaux, commettant des actes criminels, en particulier le meurtre du chef national du Congo, feu Patrice Lumumba. Les horribles constatations de la Commission d'enquête des Nations Unies sur la mort de M. Lumumba ont révélé le rôle abominable joué dans cet acte criminel par Tshombé et son prétendu ministre de l'intérieur, avec le concours de mercenaires belges et autres. Les coupables de ce crime atroce devraient être promptement déférés en justice.

17. Une nouvelle vague d'atrocités des colonialistes belges a déferlé une fois de plus sur l'Afrique au cours de l'année écoulée. Le peuple du territoire sous tutelle du Ruanda-Urundi sous administration de la Belgique a été soumis à une répression et une terreur impitoyables. Le massacre et l'emprisonnement des patriotes, y compris le meurtre du Premier Ministre de l'Urundi, ont servi à étouffer dans l'œuf les aspirations nationalistes. Des villages entiers ont été placés sous le contrôle des forces armées. C'est ainsi que les colonialistes belges ont appliqué la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance. Aucun prétexte ne devrait pouvoir être invoqué pour empêcher la liquidation du colonialisme, sous forme de tutelle ou sous toute autre forme.

18. La guerre menée au cours des deux dernières années par les colonisateurs portugais contre le peuple d'Angola offre un autre tableau tragique en Afrique. Ici, des bandes armées portugaises sans pitié ont détruit des villages entiers, ont tué des dizaines de milliers d'enfants, de femmes et de vieillards sans défense et ont chassé des milliers de personnes de leur terre. Nous exigeons qu'il soit mis fin à cette terreur et que le Gouvernement portugais soit condamné pour les crimes qu'il a commis.

19. Dans une autre partie du grand continent africain, malgré l'indignation et les protestations mondiales maintes fois exprimées, la discrimination raciale est pratiquée en tant que politique d'Etat, en violation de tous les droits de l'homme et contrairement à la Charte des Nations Unies et à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance. La force et la répression brutales, sous leurs formes les plus cruelles, sont employées pour appliquer cette politique. Même des déclarations officielles admettent en tentent de justifier cette politique, en particulier la déclaration prononcée à cette tribune par le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Afrique du Sud. Le monde ne peut garder le silence devant les atrocités commises par la République sud-africaine contre la population du Sud-Ouest africain et devant les actes cruels qui sont relatés dans le rapport du Comité du Sud-Ouest africain [A/4926]. Nous croyons que les Nations Unies ont le devoir de prendre des mesures efficaces afin d'arrêter la politique raciale de l'Afrique du Sud. Ma délégation a eu l'honneur de se joindre à nos amis d'Afrique pour présenter le projet de résolution [A/SPC/L.71 et Add.1 à 6] que la Commission politique spéciale a adopté ultérieurement sur la question.

20. La Déclaration proclame solennellement que le colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, doit prendre fin. Cependant, les puissances coloniales, se rendant compte de la situation nouvelle qui règne dans le monde et sentant venir la fin inévitable de leur domination, ont eu recours à des tentatives et à des manœuvres qui ne peuvent tromper personne. Parmi ces tentatives figure en premier lieu celle qui vise à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays et qui est mentionnée au paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la Déclaration.

21. J'ai déjà évoqué les tentatives de partage en Algérie et au Congo. Maintenant, sous couvert du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas essaie de maintenir, par le truchement de l'Organisation, son influence sur l'Irian occidental, partie intégrante et inséparable de la République d'Indonésie. Les colonisateurs hollandais, séparés par les mers et des milliers de kilomètres du territoire indonésien et n'ayant aucune affinité avec le peuple de l'Indonésie, devraient laisser le peuple de l'Irian occidental obtenir sa liberté en se joignant à sa patrie, la République indépendante d'Indonésie.

22. Hier, le président de la délégation de l'Inde a présenté au sujet de l'Irian occidental un projet de résolution [A/L.367] dans lequel l'Assemblée générale invite instamment les Gouvernements de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas "à entreprendre de nouvelles négociations ... en vue de résoudre cette question". Ma délégation appuie la proposition de l'Inde, qui est rédigée en termes fort conciliants. La question de l'Irian occidental est une question indonésienne et aucune solution ne peut être envisagée sans le consentement et l'accord total de l'Indonésie.

23. Un autre exemple évident est celui du Koweït. Le Royaume-Uni, avec toute l'expérience de l'Empire britannique, s'efforce de perpétuer sa domination sur le Koweït, sous-district administratif de Bassora, auquel il a eu accès vers la fin du XIXème siècle. La Grande-Bretagne y a établi son influence à la faveur d'un accord secret et illégal conclu en 1899 entre le résident politique britannique dans le Golfe et le Cheik, employé du Gouvernement ottoman, et contre paiement au Cheik d'une somme annuelle de 15 000 roupies — environ 3 000 dollars. Lorsque le Sultan de l'Empire ottoman protesta contre ces contacts britanniques étrangers avec un de ses fonctionnaires, le Gouvernement britannique et le Cheik s'excusèrent et réaffirmèrent qu'ils reconnaissaient la suzeraineté ottomane.

24. Pendant et après la première guerre mondiale, le district du Koweït et l'Irak lui-même se sont trouvés sous occupation britannique. Cela est semblable à ce qui s'est passé dans de nombreuses parties du monde qui étaient sous domination coloniale et où l'impérialisme maintenait de force un pays dans la division. Il était impossible, pendant que les deux parties du pays étaient sous influence étrangère, de réaliser l'unité. Cependant, même les gouvernements du régime prérévolutionnaire de l'Irak les plus dévoués à la Grande-Bretagne ont constamment demandé le retour du Koweït à la patrie. Après la révolution irakienne du 14 juillet 1958 et l'élimination de tous les vestiges de l'influence britannique, la politique du Royaume-Uni s'est efforcée de maintenir une domination de fait sur le Koweït et de barrer complètement la route à l'unité en donnant à la séparation un caractère permanent.

25. Une solution conforme aux intérêts coloniaux britanniques n'était pas difficile à trouver. Pourquoi ne pas déclarer la petite ville de Koweït Etat indépendant? C'est ce qui a été fait par une note adressée au Cheik le 19 juin 1961. Le paragraphe 4 de cette lettre dit: "Rien dans ces conclusions n'empêchera le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté d'aider le Gouvernement du Koweït si ce dernier le demande." Il n'a pas fallu beaucoup de temps pour découvrir la supercherie, montrer au monde la véritable nature de cette indépendance et révéler la présence et la domination des intérêts britanniques dans la région.

26. En raison de la situation nouvelle créée par la tactique britannique, l'Irak n'avait d'autre solution que de proclamer ses droits légitimes sur le Koweït. Malgré l'affirmation clairement soulignée à maintes reprises que l'Irak n'aurait recours qu'à des moyens pacifiques pour rétablir ces droits, des forces militaires britanniques ont été envoyées d'urgence au Koweït en nombre tel qu'elles menaçaient la sécurité de l'Irak et la paix dans la région.

27. A cet égard, il importe de noter que des troupes britanniques avaient été envoyées au Koweït quelque temps avant l'annonce de l'échange de lettres entre le résident britannique au Koweït et le Cheik. Cet accord commode qui permet au Koweït d'appeler des troupes britanniques fait du Koweït une base militaire d'où la Grande-Bretagne peut menacer l'Irak et d'autres pays arabes, en fait tout le Moyen-Orient. Le Royaume-Uni ne sera pas à court d'arguments pour suggérer au Cheik de demander une aide militaire. On ne peut non plus s'attendre que le Cheik, qui est tributaire de la protection de la Grande-Bretagne et sous son contrôle, s'oppose aux vœux ou aux ordres britanniques.

28. Pourquoi cet intérêt soudain du Royaume-Uni pour une ville de Koweït indépendante, petite ville de structure tribale et de régime féodal que le Royaume-Uni maintient par la diplomatie et l'aventure militaire, district dont la population ne dépasse pas 250 000 habitants, composés pour moitié de personnes considérées par le Cheik comme des étrangers? Est-ce parce que la Grande-Bretagne est maintenant devenue le champion de la libération nationale et de la cause de l'indépendance? Qu'advient-il alors des millions de personnes qui vivent dans 41 territoires sous domination coloniale britannique?

29. Quand la Grande-Bretagne s'est établie dans le golfe Arabique, de vives rivalités coloniales sévissaient dans cette région stratégique. La Russie tsariste essayait d'accéder aux eaux chaudes du golfe et de fonder un centre charbonnier à Koweït. La France a réussi à conclure un accord secret avec le Sultan de Mascate. L'Allemagne est intervenue avec son fameux projet de chemin de fer de Bagdad à Koweït, qui menaçait les routes britanniques des Indes. Mais ces raisons n'existent plus. La raison, maintenant, c'est le pétrole.

30. Le Moyen-Orient possède 69 p. 100 des réserves de pétrole connues, soit plus des deux tiers des réserves mondiales, à l'exclusion de celles de l'Union soviétique.

31. Le Koweït lui-même possède les plus grandes réserves de pétrole du Moyen-Orient, environ 62 milliards de barils, alors que les réserves connues des Etats-Unis sont évaluées à 33,5 milliards de barils. A lui seul, le Koweït détient 21 p. 100 des réserves connues de pétrole du monde, soit plus que le total des réserves des Etats-Unis et de l'Union soviétique, qui représente 17 p. 100. Au cours actuel, ces réserves sont estimées à plus de 100 milliards de dollars. Ces chiffres ne tiennent pas compte de la zone neutre entre le Koweït et l'Arabie Saoudite, qui a des réserves de 6,5 milliards de barils.

32. Selon les spécialistes du pétrole, le champ pétrolifère le plus riche du monde est situé au Koweït, lequel est maintenant le premier producteur de pétrole brut du Moyen-Orient. Sa production se situe en moyenne à environ 1,9 million de barils par jour. Le prix de revient de la production pétrolière du Koweït est le plus bas du monde. Cette immense entreprise appartient à la Kuwait Oil Company, société fondée en commun par la British Petroleum Co et la Gulf Oil Corporation des Etats-Unis. D'après les redevances versées au Cheik de 1948 à 1960, les bénéfices de la Kuwait Oil Company ont atteint au total 2,8 milliards de dollars. La déclaration suivante, faite par la baronne Summerskill à la Chambre des lords le 19 juillet 1961, montre clairement la nature et l'ampleur des intérêts britanniques. En ce qui concerne l'acquisition de pétrole, voici ce qu'elle a dit:

"Je dois dire que, fondamentalement, il n'y a pas plus de raison pour nous de posséder et encore moins d'occuper militairement des champs pétrolifères arabes que des fermes danoises, alors que les produits des uns et des autres nous sont tout aussi essentiels. Je demanderai au Secrétaire aux affaires étrangères d'examiner très sérieusement la question des bénéfices énormes des sociétés pétrolières du Moyen-Orient. Ces bénéfices ont été réinvestis en majeure partie au Royaume-Uni. Le Cheik reçoit de la Kuwait Oil Company environ 100 millions de livres par an" (le chiffre exact est 150 millions). "Sur cette somme, 30 à 40 millions de livres sont investis à la Bourse de Londres. On estime maintenant les avoirs du Cheik à 300 millions de livres au moins" (le chiffre exact est 1 milliard) "et ses investissements représentent entre 8 et 10 p. 100 de tous les capitaux nouveaux disponibles chaque année au Royaume-Uni pour investissement. Cette aide économique arabe à la Grande-Bretagne dépasse largement toute assistance dont bénéficie un pays sous-développé."

Cette déclaration expliquera la raison véritable qui pousse le Royaume-Uni à maintenir séparé le Koweït et à y prolonger sa domination, sous couvert d'une fausse indépendance. Cet accord commode doit permettre à la Grande-Bretagne de s'assurer non seulement sa part des bénéfices sur le pétrole, mais aussi les sommes colossales qui reviennent au Royaume-Uni sous forme d'investissement, comme l'a fait observer la baronne Summerskill. Cet aspect de la question est très important. L'autre aspect est qu'en conservant le Koweït comme base britannique commode, ainsi qu'il résulte de l'échange de notes en date du 19 juin 1961, la Grande-Bretagne se propose de maintenir sa puissance et sa domination dans la région, surtout maintenant qu'elle a perdu ses bases militaires en Irak à la suite de la révolution de 1958. Les récentes opérations militaires britanniques au Koweït l'ont clairement prouvé.

33. Nos droits reposent sur le principe de l'unité nationale et de l'intégrité territoriale, énoncé dans la Charte et dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance. Ce principe était connu bien avant que le Koweït devînt l'un des principaux producteurs de pétrole.

34. Dans d'autres parties de la péninsule Arabique, la Grande-Bretagne maintient un réseau de bases militaires destinées à protéger ses intérêts acquis, qui s'étendent du Koweït à Aden. Ces mêmes bases sont conservées et ont été en fait utilisées pour menacer l'Irak et pour réprimer tous les mouvements de libération dans la région.

35. Le transfert apparent de forces militaires d'un territoire à un autre ne doit tromper personne. A vrai dire, toute la région forme un ensemble militaire destiné au maintien de l'influence britannique et à la protection des intérêts pétroliers.

36. Dans une des régions de la patrie arabe, en Oman, la lutte pour se libérer du joug colonial britannique dure depuis des années. Ici encore, les sociétés pétrolières sont derrière toutes les mesures de répression. Un aspect significatif du conflit, dont a parlé le Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'Irak dans le discours qu'il a prononcé dans la discussion générale à la présente session [1028ème séance], réside dans le fait que la Petroleum Development Company possède et finance sa propre armée, la Force opérationnelle Mascate-Oman, levée par le Gouvernement britannique et commandée par des officiers mercenaires britanniques.

37. Le colonialisme s'est manifesté sous sa pire forme au cœur de la patrie arabe. Ce qui s'est passé en Palestine était sans précédent dans l'histoire du monde. Un peuple entier a été chassé de sa patrie par l'occupation militaire et remplacé par des éléments complètement étrangers. Le colonialisme a constitué une période tragique de l'histoire du monde dans les derniers siècles. Comme bien d'autres mouvements, il a joué son rôle, puis s'est mis à décliner pour se désintégrer rapidement. La résolution adoptée l'année dernière sur la liquidation définitive du colonialisme doit en supprimer les derniers vestiges. Mais on trouve encore dans l'Assemblée mondiale le symbole et les représentants de l'ère coloniale, ce qui est un défi aux principes sur lesquels l'Organisation des Nations Unies a été fondée.

38. Face à la marée montante des mouvements de libération nationale dans le monde arabe et ayant pris conscience du caractère éphémère de la domination coloniale étrangère, les puissances coloniales occidentales, notamment la Grande-Bretagne, ont préparé le terrain, grâce à des accords à leur convenance conclus au long des années, pour imposer un nouveau genre d'impérialisme que le monde n'avait jamais connu auparavant, à savoir une transformation matérielle de la structure de la société et de l'Etat, destinée à devenir permanente. Certaines puissances occidentales, les Etats-Unis en tête, y ont contribué avec leurs énormes ressources et leur influence politique. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a partagé cette lourde responsabilité et elle a laissé les forces d'occupation s'installer et se considérer comme un Etat en pays occupé.

39. Sous le prétexte de l'immigration d'un peuple persécuté, l'impérialisme, en stratège, a constitué une force qu'il puisse utiliser pour protéger ses intérêts dans la région. En fait, les soi-disant immigrants étaient des renforts pour les troupes d'occupation. Ils ne sont pas venus avec le consentement des habitants légitimes du pays.

40. Je voudrais appeler ici l'attention de l'Assemblée sur certains faits révélés par l'ancien directeur de l'Administration des Nations Unies pour le secours et la reconstruction (UNRRA) en Europe, le général anglais sir Frederick Morgan. Dans son livre Peace and War; a Soldier's Life, publié récemment, sir Frederick écrit que l'UNRRA a été "habilement" utilisée pour favoriser une "campagne sioniste d'agression en Palestine". Il y déclare également que la majorité des personnes qui ont immigré en Palestine après la seconde guerre mondiale l'ont fait sous la contrainte des sionistes. Il souligne en outre que l'entraînement militaire pour la guerre de libération (ou prétendue telle) contre le mandat britannique en Palestine a eu lieu dans des camps de l'UNRRA pour personnes déplacées. Les instructeurs étaient des sous-officiers en uniforme des armées britannique et américaine. J'espère que ces déclarations jetteront quelque lumière sur le caractère militaire du mouvement d'immigration sioniste.

41. Etant donné la nature agressive du sionisme et le mythe, toujours vivant dans l'esprit des chefs sionistes, des "frontières historiques d'Israël", l'établissement, au cœur de la nation arabe, d'Israël, tête de pont destinée à protéger les intérêts économiques et stratégiques occidentaux, a instauré au Moyen-Orient un climat de crainte et d'instabilité qui menace la paix.

42. Au cours des années écoulées depuis la création d'Israël, le monde s'est rendu compte que ce pays représente une menace non seulement pour le Moyen-Orient, mais pour la paix mondiale. L'existence de cet élément colonial et étranger au sein de la patrie arabe est un danger constant et très grave pour la stabilité et pour la paix. Si le colonialisme doit être liquidé, sa pire manifestation, telle qu'elle apparaît en Palestine, doit alors disparaître elle aussi.

43. En conclusion, l'an passé, sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique, l'Assemblée a été saisie de la question de l'abolition du colonialisme. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, présentée par le groupe africano-asiatique, a été adoptée sans opposition. Cette déclaration "proclame solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Elle demande qu'il soit mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression dirigées contre les peuples coloniaux et que des mesures immédiates soient prises pour permettre à ces peuples d'accéder à l'indépendance. Elle souligne que l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale des pays doivent être respectées. Cependant, le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations non seulement subsiste, mais multiplie les mesures prises pour résister aux forces croissantes de libération.

44. La Déclaration énonce certains principes et appelle certaines mesures. Sa vraie valeur dépend de son application. Selon nous, il est essentiel que l'Assemblée prenne maintenant des mesures pour que la Déclaration soit appliquée réellement, efficacement et rapidement. C'est à cette fin que nous nous sommes inscrits parmi les auteurs du projet de résolution présenté par un certain nombre de pays d'Afrique et d'Asie [A/L.366].

45. Nous sommes convaincus que le régime colonial ne durera plus longtemps. Certaines parties du monde, à un moment donné de leur histoire, ont profité de la pauvreté et de la faiblesse des autres pour édifier leur propre prospérité. Peut-être ne s'agit-il pas tant maintenant de savoir que cette exploitation doit prendre fin, que de déterminer comment les anciens territoires coloniaux doivent être indemnisés des pertes qu'ils ont subies, en contrepartie des richesses et ressources qui en ont été tirées pendant toute la période du colonialisme occidental. Quant à un dédommagement pour les humiliations, les mesures répressives, les souffrances et l'injustice, je crains fort qu'il soit impossible de l'évaluer d'un point de vue matériel.

46. M. FEKINI (Libye): L'aspect dominant de l'histoire et de l'évolution de ce siècle trouve, sans aucun doute, son illustration la plus significative dans la lutte des pays et des peuples soumis à la domination et à l'exploitation étrangères en vue de se libérer du joug colonial, de réaliser leurs aspirations profondes à la liberté et d'assumer pleinement la gestion de leurs propres affaires dans l'indépendance nationale et l'intégrité territoriale.

47. Comme les hommes, à travers l'histoire, ont âprement défendu la cause de leurs libertés individuelles et de leur dignité personnelle, les peuples soumis à la domination coloniale ont opposé à l'occupation de leurs pays et à l'usurpation de leurs richesses naturelles toutes les formes de la résistance, dans la pleine conviction du caractère illégal et immoral de la subjugation des pays par d'autres pays et des peuples par d'autres peuples.

48. L'avènement de l'ère des Nations Unies et les nobles principes de dignité et de liberté proclamés par la Charte ont été pour les peuples opprimés une précieuse source d'inspiration, d'encouragement et d'espoir dans la reconnaissance du bien-fondé de leurs aspirations légitimes. Il est d'ailleurs réconfortant de constater qu'au cours de ses 16 années d'existence, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a déployé des efforts admirables en vue d'aider à l'émancipation des peuples dépendants et à leur promotion au rang de nations indépendantes et souveraines. Les résultats encourageants obtenus montrent que le nombre des Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a maintenant atteint le double de celui des Membres originaires de l'Organisation et que, au cours de la seule quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, qualifiée à juste titre de "session de l'Afrique", un grand nombre de territoires africains sont entrés dans la famille des nations libres et souveraines.

49. Bien qu'il y ait encore beaucoup à faire dans un continent jadis considéré en quelque sorte comme la chasse gardée du colonialisme, les résultats acquis au bénéfice de la cause de la libération des peuples en Afrique ont été, à leur tour, une source d'inspiration et d'encouragement pour l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans son inlassable labeur en vue de réaliser les objectifs de la Charte relatifs à l'instauration "de meilleures conditions de vie dans une liberté plus grande" et à l'affermissement du principe de l'égalité de droits des nations grandes et petites.

50. Procédant d'une vision universaliste du monde, ces efforts de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en vue de faciliter l'accès à l'émancipation et à la dignité des peuples dans le cadre de leurs aspirations nationales à la liberté et à l'indépendance, ces efforts des Nations Unies, dis-je, ont été poursuivis inlassablement dans les diverses régions du monde assujetties à la domination coloniale. Cette action de l'Organisation a été poursuivie avec patience et persévérance au sein des organes intéressés et de l'Assemblée générale, conformément aux principes généraux de la Charte en la matière, et plus particulièrement en application des dispositions pertinentes énoncées aux Chapitres XI, XII et XIII de la Charte, relatifs aux territoires non autonomes et au régime international de tutelle.

51. Ces efforts des Nations Unies n'ont cependant pas manqué de se heurter à des difficultés considérables et des obstacles de toute sorte ont été dressés sur leur voie. En effet, les forces du colonialisme, de l'oppression et de l'exploitation ont parfois atteint des limites inimaginables dans leurs agissements en vue de retarder cette évolution historique des peuples pour recouvrer leurs droits naturels à la dignité et à la libre détermination de leurs destinées.

52. Des tragédies sans précédent dans l'histoire de l'humanité en ont résulté, qui menacent sérieusement la paix et la sécurité internationales tout en constituant des défis flagrants à la conscience humaine telle qu'elle s'exprime dans les buts, les idéaux et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies.

53. Pour ne mentionner que quelques-unes de ces tragédies, qui figurent à l'ordre du jour des commissions compétentes de l'Assemblée au cours de la présente session, je me contenterai de mentionner le supplice des populations autochtones en Afrique du Sud et dans le Sud-Ouest africain, le drame des réfugiés palestiniens chassés de leur patrie ancestrale par les bandes du colonialisme sioniste, la guerre colonialiste atroce qui se déroule depuis plus de sept années contre le peuple algérien, la répression sanglante qui s'opère contre le peuple d'Angola et bien d'autres tragédies encore qui ont été et continuent d'être la cause de malheurs et de souffrances indicibles.

54. Les injustices commises à l'égard des populations opprimées et les excès criminels commis contre elles ont engendré de par le monde entier, et au sein des puissances coloniales elles-mêmes, un vaste mouvement de sympathie et de solidarité agissante qui, au moment où il fournissait aux populations victimes de l'occupation et de l'exploitation étrangères des raisons d'espoir et des moyens d'encouragement dans leur lutte, a réussi, grâce à son généreux humanisme et à l'élévation de ses idéaux et principes, à mobiliser les énergies des hommes et des nations de bonne volonté en vue d'une suppression radicale et définitive de ces fléaux maléfiques que sont la domination et l'exploitation des peuples par les peuples.

55. Ce mouvement, qui a trouvé ses champions parmi les pays nouvellement indépendants d'Asie et d'Afrique et parmi leurs prédécesseurs dans l'émancipation nationale en Amérique latine, a été une telle force d'attraction que les deux principales puissances du monde actuel, l'Union soviétique et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, ordinairement empêtrées dans une compétition sans merci, trouvant son expression la plus dramatique dans la guerre froide, se sont engagées dans une course — combien heureuse et bénéfique cette fois — en rivalisant d'initiative pour soumettre respectivement à l'examen de l'Assemblée la question de la liquidation définitive du colonialisme par l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et la question intitulée "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance et le développement".

56. Le problème de l'abolition du colonialisme et l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a donné lieu, au cours de la quinzième session, aux historiques et intéressants débats que l'on sait. Les délibérations de l'Assemblée générale ont été couronnées de succès à la grande satisfaction de l'humanité tout entière en général, et des peuples soumis à la domination étrangère, en particulier, par l'adoption quasi unanime, au cours de la fameuse séance du 14 décembre dernier, de la Déclaration — désormais historique — sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale].

57. Cette déclaration qui, comme son homologue sur les droits de l'homme, devrait être désignée sous le nom de Déclaration universelle d'indépendance des peuples, a sans doute marqué une étape extrêmement importante dans l'histoire des Nations Unies. En mettant, en quelque sorte, le colonialisme hors la loi des Nations Unies, elle a certainement contribué dans une large mesure à la mise en œuvre des buts et des principes de la Charte. Aussi, c'est un devoir pour nous tous d'en rappeler sans cesse les nobles principes et de veiller scrupuleusement à la mise en œuvre systématique des règles d'action qu'elle a posées.

58. Qu'il me soit permis, à cette occasion, d'exprimer à la délégation soviétique combien nous apprécions l'initiative qu'elle a prise en demandant l'inscription à l'ordre du jour de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale du point intitulé "La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux" [A/4859]. Et comme nous sommes entrain de débattre cette question conjointement avec le point intitulé "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance", qu'il me soit également permis d'exprimer à la délégation américaine combien nous apprécions qu'elle ait pris l'initiative de l'inscription de ce point à l'ordre du jour de la dernière session [A/4515 et Add.1] et qu'elle ait gracieusement consenti à son élaboration par les délégations des pays indépendants d'Afrique intéressées.

59. Dans cette véritable charte de la libération de tous les peuples qu'est la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, l'Assemblée générale a solennellement proclamé le principe selon lequel l'assujettissement des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et exploitation étrangères, constitue un refus des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiale. Un autre principe, qui fait suite au précédent et le consacre en quelque sorte, est que tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique et poursuivent librement leur développement économique, social et culturel.

60. Ces deux principes fondamentaux de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux doivent constituer une partie intégrante de l'éthique internationale; ils doivent être enseignés à toutes les générations — présentes et futures — dans le monde entier, de même qu'ils doivent être commentés dans leur contexte historique dans le cadre du rôle des Nations Unies et des horizons nouveaux qu'ils font entrevoir pour la paix du monde et pour l'amitié et la coopération entre tous les peuples de la terre.

61. D'autre part, la délégation libyenne suggère qu'une procédure — extraordinaire s'il le faut — soit entamée pour que ces deux principes trouvent leur place légitime et nécessaire parmi les résolutions solennelles exprimées par les peuples des Nations Unies et les buts et principes énoncés au Préambule et au Chapitre premier de la Charte des Nations Unies.

Nous pensons que de cette manière ils seront rehaussés au rang des obligations solennelles contractées par les peuples dans l'édification du monde nouveau des Nations Unies.

62. Dans le cadre du présent débat sur la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, tout instrument relatif à la conclusion de nos présentes délibérations, devra rappeler — en les soulignant avec un accent particulier — ces deux principes fondamentaux, qui constituent en quelque sorte la pierre angulaire de tout l'édifice de la charte universelle de l'indépendance des peuples.

63. Dans cette charte, nous avons proclamé solennellement qu'il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, quelles qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète de telle sorte que l'intégrité de leur territoire national soit respectée.

64. Mais, malheureusement, nous avons le profond regret de faire l'amère constatation que, au mépris flagrant de cette claire disposition, des guerres coloniales atroces, avec le cortège honteux de répressions et d'exactions inhumaines dont elles s'accompagnent, font toujours rage en Algérie, en Angola et ailleurs, plus impitoyables et plus meurtrières que jamais, privant les peuples de ces pays d'exercer leurs droits naturels à réaliser, dans la paix et la liberté, leur indépendance complète et l'intégrité de leur territoire.

65. En application de cette disposition claire — et combien juste et humaine —, les Nations Unies se doivent de prendre les mesures les plus énergiques en vue de mettre fin rapidement à ces guerres et à ces mesures de répression qui caractérisent le colonialisme et l'oppression dans leurs manifestations les plus barbares. D'autre part, des sanctions sévères devront être prises contre les puissances coloniales qui sont en train de perpétrer ces crimes inhumains. Cela devra se faire sans ménagement et sans distinction d'alliance ou d'idéologie.

66. Il est en effet absolument inadmissible qu'il soit permis que ces puissances coloniales, aveuglées par la passion et par une mentalité qui a fait époque, continuent d'imposer un défi aussi insultant à la conscience universelle. Il est en effet très regrettable qu'au moment où la communauté internationale s'est exprimée, dans une déclaration quasi unanime, pour l'indépendance des peuples et contre toutes les mesures de répression dont ils peuvent être l'objet, il est regrettable, dis-je, que des guerres coloniales soient déclenchées, avec les moyens de destruction les plus modernes et les plus massifs contre les peuples qui ne demandent qu'à jouir pacifiquement de leurs droits naturels à vivre dans la liberté et dans la dignité. C'est là une situation intolérable qui met en jeu l'honneur des Nations Unies, dont le devoir est de mettre rapidement et définitivement fin à ce triste état de choses.

67. Il a été proclamé dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux que "le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance [résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, par. 3]. Or nous constatons à notre grand regret que ce faux argument sert toujours de prétexte pour faire durer le martyre de plusieurs peuples soumis à la domination étrangère et à repousser indéfiniment à des échéances lointaines leur accession à l'indépendance, sans pour autant les pourvoir — j'entends d'une façon sérieuse et effective — des moyens adéquats pour remédier à leurs prétendues insuffisances. J'affirme cela avec d'autant plus de conviction que l'on a eu précisément recours à ces mêmes faux arguments pour mettre en doute, au moment où notre problème était discuté dans cette enceinte, notre préparation à assumer les charges de l'indépendance. Et pour l'information et le profit des délégations ici présentes j'affirme que rien n'a été plus faux. Les progrès que nous avons faits dans tous les domaines, la gestion de nos affaires, l'instruction, le développement économique et social sont allés à pas de géant, si j'ose m'exprimer ainsi, en comparaison avec notre situation à l'apogée de l'occupation étrangère. Pour ne citer qu'un exemple, dans le domaine de l'éducation, alors que seulement 5 000 garçons et filles fréquentaient l'école en 1942, nous en avons maintenant plus de 200 000. L'instruction est gratuite et obligatoire à l'échelon élémentaire, est gratuite à l'échelon secondaire et à l'université.

68. Nous sommes d'autre part particulièrement préoccupés de ce que, contrairement aux recommandations de la Déclaration concernant la sauvegarde de l'unité nationale et de l'intégrité territoriale des pays intéressés, des actes visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement cette unité et cette intégrité sont toujours commis dans le processus de décolonisation, à des fins douteuses et par le truchement de moyens spéciaux. C'est dans cet esprit que nous nous opposerons à toute tentative d'opérer un partage en Algérie. Nous estimons que dans le cadre de leurs responsabilités pour l'application honnête de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, les Nations Unies doivent prêter l'attention qui convient à cet aspect de la question.

69. Dans cet ordre d'idées, qu'il me soit permis de dire que, dans l'examen du projet de résolution relatif à la question de l'Irian occidental [A/L.354] présenté par la délégation des Pays-Bas, nous devons nous comporter avec la circonspection que recommandent les circonstances et l'historique de cette affaire sur laquelle l'attention des Nations Unies a été attirée à plusieurs reprises, dans le cadre du contentieux entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas. Nous espérons que les Nations Unies, au lieu d'exacerber ce conflit entre deux pays que nous comptons tous les deux parmi les nations amies, par une décision hâtive et peut-être prise sous le coup de l'émotion, useront de leur sagesse en recommandant aux deux parties en cause de régler pacifiquement ce différend en tenant compte de l'unité et de l'intégrité des pays et de l'option naturelle des populations intéressées. Nous pensons que l'adoption du projet de résolution présenté par l'Inde [A/L.367] servirait bien mieux tous les intérêts en cause et principalement l'intérêt de la paix.

70. J'en viens maintenant à la règle d'action précise posée par la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale pour permettre de réaliser dans les meilleures conditions l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette règle a été énoncée au paragraphe 5 de ladite déclaration dans les termes suivants:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non auto-

nomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

71. Nous demeurons fermement convaincus que tout délai et tout atermoiement dans la mise en œuvre de cette disposition opérative fondamentale de la Déclaration ne peuvent être que des sources permanentes de conflits, de heurts et de frictions et qu'ils compromettront de la manière la plus sérieuse l'entente internationale, comme le prouvent dans plusieurs régions du monde les situations de plus en plus dangereuses qui constituent des menaces à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Aussi sera-t-il important de lancer aux Etats intéressés un appel urgent pour qu'ils agissent sans retard ni délai en vue d'assurer, dans les meilleures conditions, pour toutes les parties en cause, le transfert des pouvoirs aux peuples de tous les territoires non encore indépendants, compte tenu des recommandations énoncées dans le paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration, que je viens de citer. Pour permettre à ce processus de transfert des pouvoirs de s'opérer avec célérité et loyauté, les Nations Unies se doivent de créer un organe restreint où les puissances administrantes seront dûment représentées, aux fins d'examiner dans quelle mesure les dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux ont été appliquées dans tous les territoires soumis encore à l'administration étrangère, de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale sur les progrès accomplis dans la mise en exécution de la Déclaration et d'inclure dans ce rapport les suggestions et recommandations relatives à ces territoires, y compris, s'il le faut, les délais nécessaires à l'achèvement de l'indépendance.

72. C'est dans cet esprit, et compte tenu des considérations exposées au cours de cette intervention, que nous avons parrainé, avec un certain nombre d'autres délégations, le projet de résolution A/L.366. Nous espérons que l'Assemblée générale lui donnera le large appui qu'il mérite.

73. En conclusion, la délégation libyenne est convaincue que la plus sincère coopération entre les Nations Unies en vue de l'application loyale et intégrale de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux est un élément fondamental pour l'instauration d'un monde meilleur où les nations grandes et petites travailleront dans l'égalité souveraine en vue du triomphe des idéaux de la paix, de la coopération et de la prospérité de cette planète, à jamais débarrassée de la servitude, de la domination et de l'exploitation des peuples par les peuples et de l'homme par l'homme.

74. M. KISSELEV (République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie) [traduit du russe]: Au seuil de l'année 1961, la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies a adopté, sur l'initiative du chef du Gouvernement de l'Union soviétique, N. S. Khrouchtchev, la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Dans les annales de l'histoire seront inscrits en lettres d'or les termes de cette déclaration qui proclamait solennellement: "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations".

75. Les peuples de tous les pays ont appuyé chaleureusement la Déclaration selon laquelle des mesures immédiates seront prises pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples coloniaux et mettre fin à toute terreur et à toute guerre coloniale.

76. Cette déclaration est un manifeste des Nations Unies sur la liquidation définitive du colonialisme, le plus honteux phénomène de notre époque. Le programme du parti communiste de l'Union Soviétique l'a déjà déclaré on ne peut plus clairement: "Le flot puissant des révolutions de libération nationale balaie le système colonial et ruine les bases de l'impérialisme. De jeunes Etats souverains se sont créés et se créent là où se trouvaient d'anciennes colonies et des possessions semi-coloniales. Leurs peuples sont entrés dans une nouvelle période de développement, ils se sont haussés au rang de créateurs d'une vie nouvelle, de collaborateurs actifs à la politique internationale, de force révolutionnaire pour la destruction de l'impérialisme."

77. Alors qu'avant la seconde guerre mondiale, on ne comptait que 63 Etats indépendants, maintenant, et rien qu'à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, on compte 103 Etats Membres. Chaque année, le nombre des Etats souverains ira s'augmentant. Au cours de la période d'après-guerre, 42 pays se sont constitués sur les débris des empires coloniaux, ce qui représente plus de 1 milliard 600 millions d'individus libérés de l'esclavage colonial; et ce processus se poursuit, étant donné que des millions d'êtres humains se trouvent encore sous le joug du colonialisme.

78. Dans la déclaration qu'il a prononcée le 7 novembre dernier, le représentant de l'Union soviétique a déjà dit que 35 territoires avec une population de 34 millions d'habitants demeurent encore des colonies anglaises; 11 territoires, comprenant une population de 12 millions d'habitants sont des colonies françaises; 8 territoires, avec une population de 13 millions d'habitants sont des colonies portugaises, et, en Amérique, on compte 17 colonies avec une population de 7 millions d'habitants. Ces chiffres font voir que la liquidation du régime colonial n'est pas encore achevée. Les colonisateurs s'efforcent par tous les moyens possibles de faire tourner en arrière la roue de l'histoire et ne reculent devant aucun procédé, devant aucune méthode pour maintenir leur domination.

79. Les puissances coloniales ont répondu à la Déclaration des Nations Unies par des actes sanglants au Congo, en Oman, en Algérie et dans d'autres régions du monde où des peuples assujettis s'efforcent avec ténacité d'obtenir la réalisation des exigences formulées dans cette déclaration. Au cours de l'année écoulée depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration, un seul pays a obtenu son indépendance, tandis que dans 88 territoires, des millions d'êtres humains réclament leur liberté et leur indépendance.

80. Le Premier Ministre de l'Inde, M. Nehru, parlant ici même le 3 octobre 1960, déclarait avec raison: "Le colonialisme tient encore fermement des bastions dans certaines parties du monde, et le racisme et la domination raciale existent encore, surtout en Afrique." [882ème séance, par. 109.]

81. Nous sommes entièrement d'accord avec cette affirmation. L'Union soviétique a posé, à ce propos, la question de savoir comment la Déclaration a été appliquée, quels sont les obstacles et difficultés que doivent surmonter les peuples coloniaux, auxquels, comme on peut en juger d'après les événements de l'année écoulée, les puissances coloniales ne sont nullement disposées à octroyer l'indépendance.

82. Les représentants des puissances coloniales qui ont pris la parole au cours de ce débat, notamment ceux des Pays-Bas et du Royaume-Uni, ont parlé longuement de leur compréhension à l'égard des aspirations des peuples à l'indépendance, de leur sympathie devant leurs efforts en vue d'assurer cette indépendance et de la contribution soi-disant importante qu'ils auraient apportée au développement de la civilisation chez les peuples coloniaux. Il a été dit à ce sujet beaucoup d'autres belles phrases.

83. Dans son intervention du 16 novembre dernier [1056ème séance] le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni, M. Godber, pour justifier et défendre le colonialisme anglais, a déclaré ici que le but principal de la politique coloniale de la Grande-Bretagne était de conduire les territoires dépendants vers la liberté et l'indépendance, d'aider les peuples encore dépendants à créer plus vite des Etats libres dans lesquels toutes les populations, sans distinction de race, de tribu et de religion pourraient vivre et travailler dans la concorde. Cette déclaration est pure hypocrisie et vise à tromper l'opinion publique mondiale. Un grand nombre de représentants des pays d'Asie et d'Afrique ont eux-mêmes participé à la lutte contre les colonisateurs anglais et ont maintes fois connu la prison. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a sciemment passé sous silence que l'indépendance acquise par les peuples d'anciennes colonies britanniques, Inde, Birmanie, Ghana, etc. n'est nullement le fruit de la noble politique du Royaume-Uni, mais bien le fruit de la lutte de ces peuples. Cette lutte a revêtu diverses formes: soulèvements armés, résistance passive, guérilla de partisans contre les colonisateurs, etc.

84. Prenons l'exemple du Kenya. Selon les données fournies par le Royaume-Uni lui-même, ce pays, placé sous la domination britannique, compte 6 millions d'Africains et 63 000 Anglais. Depuis neuf ans déjà, le Kenya mène une lutte héroïque pour sa libération. Le soulèvement du peuple du Kenya, déclenché en 1952, sous la conduite du remarquable chef du mouvement de libération nationale, Jomo Kenyatta, a été féroce-ment réprimé par les colonisateurs, après une guerre de quatre ans qui coûta au peuple 10 000 tués et 150 000 personnes jetées en prison. Mais la lutte du Kenya continue et les colonisateurs britanniques y répondent par de nouvelles arrestations et mesures répressives.

85. Depuis des années, les habitants du Nyassaland, de la Rhodésie du Nord et de la Rhodésie du Sud, unis artificiellement dans la soi-disant Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland, luttent pour leur indépendance. Au printemps 1959, sur le territoire de cette fédération, selon les informations d'un journal américain, éclatait un soulèvement populaire contre les colonisateurs, particulièrement au Nyassaland. Des troupes, des tanks, des avions à réaction furent lancés contre des Africains presque désarmés. A la suite de cette lutte inégale, des dizaines d'Africains furent tués, des centaines blessés et des milliers jetés en prison. Mais la lutte du peuple ne s'est pas arrêtée. Des démonstrations anticoloniales importantes ont eu lieu en 1960 en Rhodésie du Nord. Actuellement elles ne ces-sont toujours pas. Au cours de ces événements, les Anglais ont tué plus de 100 Africains.

86. La lutte pour l'indépendance nationale continue et s'accroît dans d'autres colonies britanniques: en Oman, l'écho du tonnerre des canons se faisant entendre dans tout ce pays martyr; en Ouganda, au Tanganyika, en Gambie, au Zanzibar, en Guinée britannique.

87. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni, M. Godber, a calomnié ici l'Union soviétique en répandant le mythe d'un prétendu "colonialisme soviétique". Apparemment, ces hommes d'Etat ont une telle habitude de penser en restant cantonnés dans les idées de domination et soumission, de persécution du faible par le fort, qu'ils ne peuvent imaginer entre Etats de relations fondées sur l'égalité, l'amitié et l'assistance mutuelle telles qu'elles se manifestent entre Etats socialistes.

88. Je crois qu'un grand nombre de représentants ici présents conviendront avec moi que le colonialisme est synonyme de conquête militaire de colonies, d'exploitation on ne peut plus cruelle de leurs habitants, de transformation de ces colonies en sources de matières premières et agricoles au bénéfice des métropoles, de monoculture, de développement unilatéral et anormal des territoires colonisés, de sous-développement, de pauvreté, d'analphabétisme, de la plus basse espérance de vie dans le monde, etc. Voilà ce qu'est le colonialisme.

89. Dans tous les pays socialistes, l'économie se développe avec succès, la culture nationale s'épanouit, le bien-être des populations s'accroît continuellement. Tout le monde sait ce qu'était la situation de la Russie tsariste avant la Révolution d'octobre et ce qu'elle est aujourd'hui devenue: les républiques florissantes de l'Union soviétique, où le niveau industriel et agricole est élevé, l'instruction est obligatoire, les cadres nationaux sont abondants, les cultures nationales en plein épanouissement.

90. Tous les gens de bonne foi qui viennent dans ces républiques peuvent aisément s'en convaincre. Les peuples de ces républiques ont obtenu des succès remarquables, grâce à leur travail plein d'abnégation et à l'assistance fraternelle du peuple russe et des autres peuples de l'Union soviétique. La RSS de Biélorussie, que je représente ici, peut servir d'exemple. Contrairement au capitalisme et au colonialisme qui divisent les peuples, fractionnent les nations, pratiquent l'apartheid et la discrimination raciale, le socialisme rapproche les peuples et élève ceux qui sont en retard au niveau des plus avancés.

91. La Russie tsariste comprenait plus de 100 peuples et nationalités différents, divisés par des barrières capitalistes et féodales. Et c'est précisément sur la base du pouvoir soviétique et de l'union librement consentie que cette masse de gens, issus de peuplades diverses et parlant des langues différentes, est allée fraternellement de l'avant, au coude à coude sur la voie de l'épanouissement et du progrès dans tous les domaines.

92. Permettez-moi de donner les renseignements suivants. De nos jours, la proportion des élèves sur 10 000 personnes, en RSS de Biélorussie, dépasse celle de pays tels que l'Angleterre, la France et l'Italie. En 1960, la production industrielle était 34 fois plus forte qu'en 1913. A l'heure actuelle, en RSS de Biélorussie, comme partout ailleurs en Union soviétique, se développent dans des proportions gigantesques la construction de logements, l'électrification, etc. Les produits industriels de la Biélorussie sont exportés dans plus de 50 pays.

93. Le peuple biélorussien tire une fierté légitime du succès obtenu grâce au socialisme; il est également fier des perspectives encore plus grandioses de son développement économique. Au cours d'une génération, cette région aux confins de la Russie tsariste, attardée et faiblement développée, a pu se transformer en un Etat à l'industrie considérablement développée et qui non seulement a pu mettre fin à l'analphabétisme et à la pauvreté des masses, mais s'élève au niveau des nations les plus avancées du monde; et pourtant, cette génération a vu, de la part de l'impérialisme international, deux tentatives cruelles et perfides de détruire et d'anéantir l'Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques.

94. Les habitants des pays socialistes ont librement choisi la voie du socialisme et du communisme et rien ne saurait les en faire dévier.

95. Ce n'est pas de gaieté de cœur que ce mythe du "colonialisme soviétique" a été inventé par messieurs les colonisateurs et impérialistes; cela signifie qu'ils n'ont pas et ne peuvent pas avoir d'arguments pour défendre leur système colonialiste pourri et qu'ils ne leur reste rien d'autre que de proférer des niaiseries incommensurables du genre de celles de feu le Ministre de la défense des Etats-Unis, M. Forrestal, qui se jeta par la fenêtre rien que parce qu'il lui avait semblé déjà voir arriver les tanks soviétiques à Washington.

96. Les habitants des pays socialistes édifient un meilleur avenir et personne ne les en empêchera.

97. Les représentants de l'Arabie Saoudite, de Ceylan, de la Pologne, de l'Indonésie, de la Roumanie et d'autres pays qui ont pris la parole avant moi ont cité des exemples de la méconnaissance que les puissances coloniales manifestent à l'égard des dispositions de la Déclaration de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en date du 14 décembre 1960.

98. Je voudrais également vous citer quelques exemples. Actuellement, les colonisateurs s'efforcent à tout prix de maintenir leur domination dans les pays asservis par eux, en employant à cet effet les méthodes les plus diverses. Les puissances coloniales maintiennent un système d'assujettissement économique des pays sous-développés en tablant sur la pénétration dans ces pays des monopoles capitalistes sous une forme ou une autre et, tout en y maintenant l'économie dans un état de stagnation et de marasme, se voient contraintes dans bien des cas, à faire des concessions.

99. Elles déclarent octroyer à leurs colonies l'indépendance politique mais, à côté de cela, elles conservent toutes les positions clefs en matière d'économie, de finances et de forces armées. Le résultat en est que l'indépendance devient fictive, elle n'existe que sur le papier. En réalité, l'exploitation coloniale des peuples continue non par voie de conquêtes militaires, mais au moyen d'un asservissement économique et politique.

100. Les impérialistes imposent aux pays coloniaux des traités et accords léonins; ils accaparent les sources de matières premières, installent des bases militaires, remplacent l'exploitation coloniale individuelle par l'exploitation collective et, souvent, utilisent à ces fins l'Organisation des Nations Unies et ses multiples organes.

101. Pour mettre en œuvre les idées du néo-colonialisme, les Etats-Unis ont créé ce qu'on appelle le Peace Corps. La prétendue "assistance" accordée par les pays de l'Ouest poursuit des buts intéressés, c'est-à-dire la recherche de profits. Ce n'est pas par hasard que la plus grande partie de la prétendue assistance américaine est dirigée sur les pays alliés des Etats-Unis, dans les blocs militaires d'agression.

102. Les puissances coloniales se réservent des profits considérables tirés par les monopoles du Royaume-Uni, de la France, des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, de la Belgique, du Portugal et d'autres pays, de l'exploitation des richesses naturelles et de la main-d'œuvre à bon marché de leurs possessions coloniales. Ces Etats sont étroitement liés entre eux par des blocs militaires tels que l'OTAN, l'OTASE, la CENTO, etc.

103. Ils s'appuient pour agir sur des bases militaires créées par eux. Je vais les énumérer: Bizerte (Tunisie), Tahala (Kenya), Mukula (Aden) ainsi que sur les bases de Mauritanie, de Nigéria, du Tchad et autres point d'appui militaires. Les colonisateurs ne veulent pas quitter ces bases, car ils ne veulent pas céder volontairement leurs positions et abandonner les profits fabuleux tirés de leurs colonies. Les avions militaires qui s'envolent de ces bases pour attaquer les populations pacifiques de l'Angola, de l'Algérie, du Congo, de l'Oman et d'Aden sont les avions de l'OTAN et leurs bombes portent l'estampille "OTAN".

106. Déjà en 1954, l'Allemagne occidentale a importé des pays africains 59 p. 100 du minerai de nickel, 40 p. 100 du minerai de manganèse, 36 p. 100 du minerai de cuivre, 33 p. 100 du minerai de chrome, 28 p. 100 du minerai de plomb et 63,9 p. 100 des phosphates.

107. A mesure que grandissent en Allemagne de l'Ouest les industries de guerre et que se constituent des armées d'agression, les besoins de ce pays en matières stratégiques augmentent sans cesse. Aussi le continent africain prend-il une importance toujours grandissante pour l'Allemagne de l'Ouest. A côté de l'infiltration du commerce extérieur et de l'exportation des capitaux, le gouvernement d'Adenauer tend à utiliser, à des fins expansionnistes, le système de l'assistance économique et technique aux pays sous-développés. Mais cette prétendue "assistance" de la République fédérale d'Allemagne ne se distingue en rien de celle des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, du Royaume-Uni et de la France, étant donné qu'elle est accordée à relativement court terme et au taux élevé de 6,8 p. 100 par an; cette assistance non seulement ne favorise pas, mais elle entrave l'industrialisation des pays sous-développés, car ces pays exportent d'énormes ressources qui sont indispensables au développement de leur industrie nationale.

108. Il convient cependant de remarquer que la politique néo-colonialiste de la République fédérale d'Allemagne revêt un aspect quelque peu différent de celui des Etats-Unis d'Amérique et d'autres pays.

109. Etant donné que l'Allemagne occidentale n'a pas maintenant de colonies en propre, les néo-colonialistes de Bonn ont décidé d'utiliser à leurs fins égoïstes le slogan artificiel d'anticolonialisme de l'Allemagne occidentale. Ce vaste battage d'anticolonialisme est utilisé par les impérialistes de l'Allemagne occidentale afin de tromper les peuples des pays sous-développés, et, sous l'apparence de négociations sur pied d'égalité, tend à s'infiltrer dans la vie économique de ces pays, préluant ainsi à une pénétration progressive non seulement économique mais politique.

110. En 1956, Schacht, industriel bien connu d'Allemagne occidentale, écrivait dans le journal Deutsche Aussenpolitik (No. 3) — je cite:

"L'empire colonial allemand doit être rétabli sous une forme nouvelle et, pour cela, l'expansion économique sera complétée par l'infiltration culturelle et politique."

111. Voilà pourquoi le gouvernement d'Adenauer fait hypocritement des avances aux gouvernements des nouveaux Etats africains. L'énergie dépensée pour attirer l'Afrique dans les plans stratégiques de l'OTAN se reflète dans la théorie dite de l'Eurafrrique, laquelle prévoit l'intégration de l'Afrique dans le système des Etats de l'Europe occidentale, où dominent les militaristes de l'Allemagne occidentale et leurs monopoles. Ainsi, les militaristes de l'Allemagne occidentale poursuivent, eux aussi, des objectifs coloniaux manifestes: à l'aide des méthodes du néo-colonialisme, maintenir les pays d'Afrique dans le rôle de fournisseurs de matières premières pour l'Allemagne occidentale.

112. Le néo-colonialisme de l'Allemagne occidentale représente un danger pour les peuples africains étant donné que les militaristes allemands se prétendent anticolonialistes. Cette perfide manœuvre est une séquelle directe de l'idéologie impérialiste et hitlérienne.

113. Aujourd'hui, le gouvernement d'Adenauer tend à consolider ses positions dans toutes les colonies et pays sous-développés. A ce propos, la déclaration parue dans le journal bourgeois ouest-allemand Die Welt, du 7 février 1960, est caractéristique. Je cite:

"De tous les pays occidentaux, la République fédérale d'Allemagne occupe la position la plus avantageuse en Afrique. L'Angleterre s'est compromise dans la crise de Suez, la France en Algérie, les Américains, dans leurs activités, subissent des échecs. L'Allemagne, elle, n'a pas de colonies. C'est en même temps une bonne occasion pour nous, un problème que nous avons à résoudre."

114. Par ces procédés démagogiques les néo-colonialistes de Bonn espèrent tromper les peuples africains. Chacun sait que la République fédérale d'Allemagne apporte une assistance militaire et économique aux colonialistes français dans leur lutte contre le peuple algérien. L'Allemagne occidentale envoie en Algérie, non seulement de l'argent — nous avons déjà parlé de cela —, mais du matériel militaire: des armes et des munitions. Dans la Légion étrangère on recrute comme fantassins mercenaires (lansquenets) d'anciens SS et des criminels. Le correspondant ouest-allemand Entelman, dans le journal Welt der Arbeit, du 17 octobre 1958, édité en Allemagne occidentale, écrivait (je cite):

"Il y a, en fait, en Algérie 35 000 à 40 000 soldats d'origine allemande. On en rencontre à chaque pas. La moitié d'entre eux sont d'anciens lansquenets parmi lesquels de nombreux SS qui appartiennent aux troupes de choc et que l'on recrute partout où doit s'engager une action particulièrement sanglante et cruelle."

115. On peut citer de nombreux exemples de l'attitude hostile du Gouvernement de Bonn à l'égard des peuples d'Afrique. Il suffit de rappeler que le Gouvernement de Bonn a approuvé et appuyé l'agression anglo-franco-israélienne contre l'Egypte en 1956. En 1958, les aérodromes de l'Allemagne occidentale ont été transformés en lieux de transbordement pour le transfert de troupes américaines au Liban et en Jordanie. Les monopoles allemands sont complices du crime perpétré contre le Congo. Le héros de l'Afrique, feu le Premier Ministre du Congo, Patrice Lumumba, au cours d'une conférence de presse faite à Léopoldville, le 8 septembre 1960, parlait de l'existence d'un accord secret entre Bonn et Bruxelles concernant la participation de capitaux de l'Allemagne occidentale dans l'exploitation des richesses naturelles du Katanga.

116. Quelques semaines après, le Ministre de la guerre du Katanga, M. Yav, se rendait en Allemagne occidentale et y avait des conversations secrètes avec le gouvernement d'Adenauer. Par la suite, dans la République fédérale d'Allemagne, le recrutement de volontaires pour le Katanga se trouvait sanctionné.

117. La République fédérale d'Allemagne tente de pénétrer aussi dans les pays qui, récemment encore, se trouvaient dans la zone d'influence de l'Angleterre, de la France et d'autres puissances occidentales. On doit dire qu'elle n'a pas mal réussi dans cette tentative. Le représentant permanent des Etats-Unis à l'ONU, M. Stevenson, l'a reconnu lui-même lorsqu'il déclarait, après un voyage effectué en Afrique, en été 1957 (je cite):

"J'ai rencontré partout des spécialistes travaillant pour le compte de très importantes entreprises de l'Allemagne occidentale."

118. Voilà le véritable visage des néo-colonisateurs allemands. Mais que les néo-colonisateurs fassent les agneaux ne réussira pas à tromper les peuples africains et à leur dissimuler la nature colonisatrice de la politique de la République fédérale d'Allemagne.

119. Après la création, en août 1961, du Gouvernement central de la République du Congo avec, à sa tête, M. Adoula, il semblait que tout était prêt pour la liquidation définitive de la crise qui secouait le Congo depuis plus d'un an. Mais les événements qui se sont déroulés tout récemment au Katanga ont démontré que les colonisateurs n'ont nullement l'intention d'abandonner de plein gré leurs positions. Depuis bien longtemps, le Commandement des Nations Unies se démène avec Tshombé, au Katanga, mais, jusqu'à ce jour, sans résultat. Et pourtant, la résolution du Conseil de sécurité du 21 février 1961¹/accorde à la Force des Nations Unies le droit légitime de lutter pour assurer l'intégrité territoriale et l'indépendance du Congo. Malgré cela, aucune mesure décisive n'a été prise par les forces armées et, de ce fait, la Force des Nations Unies n'a même pas pu s'acquitter des petites tâches qui, à ce stade, lui incombaient.

120. On le sait, le 20 septembre 1961, dans la ville de Ndola, des représentants de l'ONU ont signé avec Tshombé, sans la sanction (je souligne, sans la sanction) du Conseil de sécurité, un accord d'armistice et d'échange de prisonniers. Ainsi, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, sous la pression des colonisateurs, s'est trouvée dans l'impossibilité de mettre fin à la sécession du Katanga. On peut naturellement se demander qui donc est protégé par l'appareil des Nations Unies au Congo, quels intérêts et quelles aspirations il défend. Les activités de l'Organisation des Nations Unies favorisent, en pratique, les intérêts des monopoles et des sociétés des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni, de France, de République fédérale d'Allemagne, de Belgique, qui ne veulent pas abandonner volontairement leurs positions au Congo. Ce n'est pas fortuitement que le roi des Belges, Léopold II, avait dit du Congo que c'était un "splendide gâteau africain". En effet, le Congo est une des régions les plus riches d'Afrique. Au sud, en particulier au Katanga, se trouvent les plus grands gisements de cuivre du monde. Le Congo fournit 73 p. 100 de la production mondiale de cobalt, 80 p. 100 de la production mondiale des diamants industriels et il approvisionne les pays occidentaux en uranium. On y extrait encore le zinc, le radium, le germanium, le cadmium et autres métaux et minéraux précieux. Le Katanga fournissait, par le passé, 45 p. 100 du revenu national et 60 p. 100 des recettes d'exportation de l'ensemble du pays.

121. Outre les sociétés belges, des sociétés anglaises, françaises, allemandes occidentales, nord-américaines y ont leurs intérêts. Les capitaux étrangers investis et l'intérêt que portent des monopoles étrangers au Katanga atteignent de telles proportions que les sociétés étrangères ne veulent, à aucun prix, abandonner leurs positions; ils craignent que le Gouvernement central du Congo n'établisse son contrôle sur leurs entreprises et leurs bénéfices. C'est pourquoi, après l'échec des opérations de l'ONU au Katanga, les monopoles étrangers ont fait tout ce qui dépendait d'eux pour protéger leur homme de paille Tshombé contre une défaite, en l'aidant militairement, financièrement et politiquement. Ce sont précisément eux, les capitalistes étrangers, qui, dans la tragédie congolaise, sont les principaux coupables.

122. La délégation biélorussienne considère qu'il est grand temps d'abandonner cette politique d'aterrissements et d'inertie; il est temps de mettre fin aux intrigues des ennemis de la liberté et du peuple congolais. Il est clair que plus tôt les Etats occidentaux abandonneront leur politique corrompue au Congo, plus la solution de la crise congolaise, laquelle a trop traîné en longueur, sera facile et rapide.

123. Le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, M. Luns, parlant dans cette salle le 8 novembre

1961 [1048ème séance], a tenté de déformer le sens de la Déclaration des Nations Unies, pour l'utiliser à satisfaire les intérêts des colonialistes hollandais qui s'efforcent d'arracher à l'Indonésie une partie de son territoire. Le représentant des Pays-Bas considère qu'il n'est pas nécessaire de rendre au peuple indonésien son territoire traditionnel, l'Irian occidental.

124. Le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354] dont nous avons été saisis propose que l'Irian occidental soit placé sous la tutelle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Ce n'est là qu'une manœuvre tactique des colonisateurs hollandais qui utilisent tous les moyens pour maintenir leur domination coloniale. Le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas n'est qu'un procédé tactique auquel les colonisateurs ont recours, pour porter un coup à l'Indonésie, sous le couvert de l'ONU, et pour étouffer le mouvement de libération nationale en Irian occidental.

125. Cet exemple illustre la manière dont les colonisateurs hollandais utilisent, dans leur propre intérêt, le principe de l'autodétermination, uniquement pour en finir avec le mouvement de libération nationale et diviser un peuple qui lutte pour sa liberté.

126. Mais tous ces efforts des colonisateurs sont vains. Aucun subterfuge ne réussira à tromper le peuple de l'Irian occidental et l'opinion publique mondiale. Ce procédé n'est pas nouveau, il n'est que le prolongement d'une vieille politique colonisatrice: diviser pour régner.

127. La délégation de la RSS de Biélorussie appuie entièrement les thèses principales exprimées ici le 9 novembre 1961 par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la République d'Indonésie, M. Subandrio, ainsi que ses interventions ultérieures. Le représentant de l'Indonésie nous a fourni des faits très convaincants qui démasquent les stratagèmes des colonisateurs hollandais en Irian occidental. Il a démontré que, pour arriver à une sécession entre l'Irian occidental et l'Indonésie, le Gouvernement néerlandais a recours à la force brutale. De nombreux habitants sont jetés en prison; des milliers d'autres, qui s'opposent à la politique hollandaise, sont expulsés du pays. A l'heure actuelle, 2 000 personnes expulsées d'Irian vivent à Singapour dans des conditions très pénibles et attendent une possibilité quelconque de rentrer en Indonésie.

128. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit, dans l'intérêt du peuple indonésien, entreprendre de résoudre cette question et aider la réunification de l'Irian occidental avec la République d'Indonésie. Il ne faut pas perdre de temps et attendre que le Gouvernement de la République d'Indonésie, en réponse à l'attaque armée des Pays-Bas, ait recours à la force pour libérer ses frères de l'Irian occidental.

129. Monsieur le Président, permettez-moi de m'arrêter sur le projet de résolution de la Nigéria (A/L.357) qui propose que tous les territoires et peuples coloniaux, dépendants ou non autonomes d'Afrique accèdent à l'indépendance en 1970.

130. Certains orateurs qui ont pris la parole avant moi ont déclaré que la discussion de la question de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relevait de la guerre froide. On ne peut être d'accord avec cette assertion. Ceux qui proposent de retarder de 10 ans la solution du problème de la liquidation du colonialisme ne connaissent-ils donc pas les faits? Ne savent-ils pas comment les colonisateurs français et portugais "préparent" à l'indépendance les peuples d'Algérie et d'Angola? Ces faits ont été exposés ici par de nombreux orateurs.

131. Le peuple algérien a déjà créé un gouvernement provisoire, et on nous propose ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, un délai de 10 ans. Il est clair que, si l'on accorde un répit de 10 ans aux colonisateurs français, ceux-ci trouveront, pendant ce temps, les moyens de faire justice du mouvement de libération nationale en Algérie. Donner aux colonisateurs portugais un délai de 10 ans, c'est leur donner la possibilité, dans ce laps de temps, d'exterminer et de jeter en prison les meilleurs fils et filles d'Angola, qui luttent pour leur libération; c'est faire traîner encore pendant de longues années la solution de ce problème.

132. Des millions d'êtres humains, victimes du colonialisme, demandent à l'Organisation des Nations Unies d'agir logiquement et d'aider les peuples coloniaux à obtenir leur indépendance dès 1962.

133. Je suis entièrement d'accord avec le représentant de la Nigéria qui, lors de la discussion générale du 10 octobre 1961 [1031ème séance] dans cette salle, disait qu'il y a encore dans le monde beaucoup de gens qui pensent davantage au cobalt, à l'uranium et à d'autres minerais qu'à l'heureux avenir de la population du Congo. Certes, ce n'est là qu'une infime minorité, mais comme c'est elle qui tient dans ses mains des capitaux énormes, la puissance et les richesses, on sait où elle se trouve. Les magnats financiers de Wall Street, les grands monopoles du Royaume-Uni, de France, de Belgique, du Portugal, de Hollande et d'autres pays utilisent tous les moyens à leur disposition pour faire avorter la Déclaration de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, ou en retarder le plus longtemps possible l'exécution.

134. De plus, tout le cours de l'histoire démontre que les colonisateurs n'auraient jamais accordé l'indépendance aux peuples asservis par eux, si la lutte pour la libération nationale des peuples coloniaux n'avait atteint l'ampleur et la forme actuelles.

135. C'est pour cette raison, de l'avis de la délégation de la RSS de Biélorussie, que le projet de résolution de la Nigéria est absolument inacceptable. Ma délégation estime que ce projet ne peut pas être adopté et elle invite tous les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à aider les peuples coloniaux à obtenir la réalisation de leur indépendance nationale dès 1962.

136. Le temps est venu de mettre la camisole de force aux colonisateurs et d'appliquer des sanctions aux puissances coloniales. D'après le cours de l'histoire, le colonialisme est voué à sa perte et, comme le disait M. Khrouchtchev au vingt-deuxième congrès du parti communiste de l'Union soviétique, on le clouera avec un pieu dans son tombeau. Telle est la volonté des peuples qui luttent toujours et de plus en plus résolument pour leur liberté et leur indépendance.

137. A notre avis, l'Assemblée générale agira justement si, dès maintenant, elle adopte une résolution tendant à l'application de sanctions contre le Portugal qui refuse d'appliquer les décisions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur la cessation de la guerre — guerre d'extermination — contre le peuple angolais.

138. La délégation biélorussienne approuve résolument la proposition tendant à l'application de sanctions économiques et politiques contre la République sudafricaine dont nous exigeons l'expulsion de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

139. Nous appuyons chaleureusement le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] concernant le processus de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et qui propose que l'Assemblée générale déclare l'an 1962, l'année de la liquidation définitive du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations et cela sur toute la surface de notre planète.

140. C'est en l'année 1962 qu'il faut sceller le tombeau du colonialisme. Si cette résolution est adoptée et mise en œuvre, alors, sur notre terre, se lèvera une aube nouvelle, une vie meilleure s'offrira à des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains qui pâtiennent encore sous le joug des colonisateurs. Une liquidation totale et universelle du colonialisme contribuerait considérablement à la cause de la paix et de la sécurité des peuples du monde entier et ce serait une des mesures les plus importantes pour réduire la tension internationale.

141. La liquidation du colonialisme faisant suite à la liquidation de l'oppression de certaines nations par d'autres permettra d'établir des relations amicales et sur pied d'égalité entre les peuples de la terre entière. Mais pour atteindre ce but, l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit apporter sa contribution à la liquidation du système colonial; elle doit faire en sorte que soient mises en œuvre les mesures urgentes pour l'application de sa propre déclaration.

142. Prenant la parole le 23 septembre 1960 [869^{ème} séance, par. 176] ici-même et exprimant la volonté du peuple soviétique, le chef du Gouvernement de l'Union soviétique a dit:

"Fidèle à sa politique de paix et de soutien de la lutte que les peuples asservis mènent pour leur indépendance nationale — politique proclamée par Vladimir Ilyitch Lénine, fondateur de l'Etat soviétique —, l'URSS fait appel à l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour qu'elle défende la juste cause de la libération des colonies et prenne sans tarder des mesures en vue de l'abolition complète du régime colonial."

143. L'application immédiate de la Déclaration des Nations Unies sur la liquidation du colonialisme contribuera à résoudre très rapidement le plus important problème de notre temps — prévenir une guerre thermonucléaire, assurer la paix universelle. C'est la tâche la plus grande, la plus noble de notre temps et l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit faire tout le possible pour assurer son accomplissement.

M. Bitsios (Grèce), vice-président, prend la présidence.

144. M. CHEHLAOUI (Syrie): La résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa dernière session restera, dans les annales de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, une date mémorable et glorieuse, parce qu'elle consacre l'égalité entre les hommes en octroyant l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. En effet, par cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale a voulu mettre fin à une grande injustice: la domination de l'homme par l'homme. Alors que parfois la supériorité de certains peuples sur d'autres était souvent apparente, peut-être même parfois réelle, dans beaucoup d'autres cas, rien ne pouvait justifier cette domination, sauf peut-être une ambition politique, stratégique et souvent économique.

145. Ce colonialisme — puisqu'il faut l'appeler par son nom — n'a jamais eu pour objectif des idées humanitaires; il n'a jamais eu pour idéal l'éducation et l'évolution des peuples relativement sous-développés, et il y a très peu de cas dans l'histoire où un pays a tendu la main à un autre pays moins développé uniquement pour le relever. Je n'ai d'ailleurs pas besoin de recourir à l'histoire tout au long des temps pour rappeler les faits et les méfaits du colonialisme. Mon pays, qui lui aussi a souffert de ce fléau pendant longtemps, garde encore le souvenir amer des années terribles de son annexion sous divers noms et sous la domination de diverses puissances. Nous compatissons sincèrement aux maux de ceux qui n'ont pas encore pu secouer le joug des envahisseurs et voudrions voir cette résolution de l'Assemblée générale leur éviter un supplément de malheur et de sacrifices.

146. Je dois peut-être dire, pour être sincère, que de nos jours les choses ne se passent plus complètement de la même façon que par le passé. Elles ne se passent plus complètement de la même façon, du moins pour certains pays coloniaux. Il est incontestable que l'existence d'institutions internationales a réduit considérablement l'indifférence de certains colonisateurs vis-à-vis de l'opinion mondiale. Mais je ne puis malheureusement pas dire que tous les pays colonisateurs ont changé de méthode dans leur conception du colonialisme et l'application de ses règles. Ni ces institutions internationales, au premier rang desquelles vient l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ni l'évolution des temps n'ont désarmé certains chevaliers du lucre et de la destruction.

147. Ils ne veulent pas comprendre, comme d'autres l'ont compris, qu'une ère de liberté s'est ouverte et que le temps de l'esclavage est enfin révolu. Car la libération des peuples asiatiques, et plus tard de ceux du continent africain, n'est pas l'œuvre de sentiments humanitaires, comme semblent vouloir le dire aujourd'hui les grands colonisateurs de l'histoire. C'est une lutte qui s'est engagée entre le présent et le passé, une lutte qui n'est pas simplement idéologique, et nous savons comment et à quel prix certains pays asiatiques ont conquis leur indépendance au début de ce siècle. Je dis bien "conquis", car je ne suis pas de ceux qui disent que cette indépendance a été concédée généreusement par les colonisateurs. Si nous avons assisté, au cours de ces dernières années, à des gestes spectaculaires de la part de certains colonisateurs, octroyant l'indépendance à certaines de leurs colonies, nous ne pouvons perdre de vue que ces gestes ont été soit arrachés par une lutte lente et héroïque, soit déterminés par l'évolution sûre du colonialisme vers une étape de libération inévitable.

148. Je ne voudrais pas m'étendre plus longuement sur cette étape du passé, et je ne puis qu'applaudir à certains résultats. En remerciant ceux qui ont été les promoteurs de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, ceux qui s'y sont associés et ceux qui s'y sont conformés, je suis heureux, avec l'ensemble de notre organisation, de voir aujourd'hui de nouveaux pays nous rejoindre ici. Le Sierra Leone est le premier de ces Etats à faire partie de l'Organisation depuis l'adoption par l'Assemblée générale de cette belle et historique résolution 1514 (XV). Nous verrons bientôt le Tanganyika, le Samoa-Occidental et bien d'autres encore nous rejoindre.

149. Les pays sous le régime de tutelle n'auront aucune difficulté à s'émanciper bientôt, grâce certainement aux pays qui les administrent et à la surveillance bienveillante des organismes des Nations Unies. Certes, certaines difficultés demeurent toujours en ce qui les concerne, mais ces difficultés ne sont pas insurmontables.

150. L'autre jour, le représentant de Ceylan, M. Malalasekera, nous a fait un magistral exposé en ce qui les concerne [1048ème séance]. Je suis sûr que ses remarques et ses conseils retiendront toute l'attention qu'ils méritent.

151. Mais il y a, malheureusement, des situations qui ne sont pas encore nettes et claires, et d'autres qui ne semblent pas devoir l'être. En effet, le colonialisme a des dénominations et des aspects divers. Il intervient même dans des pays indépendants. Nous avons vu — et nous voyons encore — ses méfaits au Congo. Dois-je vous parler de la succession des faits qui se sont déroulés depuis l'époque relativement récente où ce pays a accédé à l'indépendance? Qui peut, aujourd'hui, contester que la situation tragique dans laquelle se débat le Congo est l'œuvre de certains pays colonisateurs convoitant ses richesses et essayant par tous les moyens de le diviser et d'isoler une de ses provinces les plus riches pour mieux accaparer ces richesses? Tous ces maux, qui en est responsable, sinon les colonisateurs? Qui soutient les séparatistes et les encourage? Qui donc, en définitive, est responsable de la mort de ceux qui tombent chaque jour en défendant, là-bas, les principes des Nations Unies pour la liberté et l'émancipation des peuples? Evidemment, tout le monde s'en défend; et pourtant, nous connaissons ceux qui ont besoin de toutes les richesses minières de ce pays.

152. Pouvons-nous donc, devons-nous nous montrer moins durs quand nous parlons de colonialisme? Et tous ces peuples d'Afrique, exagèrent-ils donc quand ils se solidarisent avec leurs frères d'Angola sous domination portugaise? Et l'humanité entière ne doit-elle pas se montrer indignée de cette extermination radicale de femmes, de vieillards et d'enfants sans appui et sans défense?

153. Le tableau de ces horreurs n'est pas moins tragique en Afrique du Sud. Les gouvernements de ces deux pays ne trouvent, pour se défendre, que des dénégations gratuites. La ségrégation raciale, avec toutes les horreurs qui l'accompagnent, devient presque une institution officielle et l'on ne cherche plus à s'en justifier. C'est là une insulte non seulement à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, mais à l'humanité tout entière. Si nous nous élevons aujourd'hui avec véhémence contre la situation dans les colonies portugaises et en Afrique du Sud, nous ne pouvons passer sous silence toutes les autres formes du colonialisme, quel que soit le pays qui le pratique. Même quand il n'est pas accompagné d'autant d'horreurs, le colonialisme doit disparaître complètement.

154. Le problème de l'Irian occidental doit être résolu à la satisfaction de l'Indonésie, dont il a été séparé, car il est inconcevable de prétendre qu'une partie détachée d'un Etat puisse librement déterminer son sort; il n'y aurait plus, dans ces conditions, d'unité et d'intégrité territoriales — surtout pour les anciennes colonies, divisées par l'envahisseur et qui n'ont pu se libérer que de façon fragmentaire, pour des raisons qu'il serait superflu d'expliquer en détail. Les Pays-Bas occupent encore une partie du territoire indonésien, et cette partie doit rejoindre la mère patrie dans son indépendance — indépendance qu'elle a acquise au prix de lourds sacrifices. Ma délégation espère que la liquidation de ce problème ne rencontrera pas de grandes difficultés et que les Pays-Bas feront encore un pas, le pas définitif, pour établir de bons rapports avec l'Indonésie.

155. Bien d'autres pays demeurent encore asservis. Je ne puis malheureusement trouver un autre terme pour qualifier leur situation. Je ne voudrais pas les citer par leur nom, pour ménager certaines susceptibilités, espérant que, bientôt, les pays administrants sauront les diriger sur la voie de la libération, selon le vœu des Nations Unies. Nous voudrions que cette libération soit sincère et totale, que plus rien ne subsiste qui puisse faire penser à l'idée même de l'occupation étrangère. Nous ne voudrions pas que des litiges et des querelles puissent apparaître un jour, résultant de cette ancienne occupation. Le cas de Bizerte est une illustration éloquente des situations confuses et contradictoires qui empêchent l'établissement de liens normaux entre les peuples. Si cette situation anormale a fait des victimes, hélas, la compréhension du Gouvernement tunisien et sa volonté de paix ont évité le pire et nous espérons que la France ne tardera pas à évacuer la base de Bizerte, faisant ainsi droit aux justes revendications du peuple tunisien.

156. Mais il y a là, dans cette partie de l'Afrique, un pays qui souffre et qui lutte: l'Algérie, depuis plus de sept ans, offre sur l'autel de l'indépendance des victimes innombrables et est décidée à continuer sa lutte jusqu'à la dernière goutte de sang du dernier de ses fils. Cette situation a ému le monde entier et c'est en vain que l'on prétendra que la question algérienne est une question d'ordre intérieur français. Il vous appartiendra de juger en définitive si l'Algérie doit ou non devenir indépendante. Bientôt, vous aurez à en décider. Mais je souhaite cependant que nous n'ayons pas l'occasion d'ouvrir ce grand dossier et qu'une issue favorable puisse enfin consacrer cette lutte de huit ans qui met le peuple algérien au premier rang des peuples martyrs. Nous sommes solidaires, nous les Arabes, de tous nos frères qui luttent pour leur libération et ce n'est pas seulement en Algérie que nous sommes de leur côté. En d'autres régions aussi, les Arabes luttent et lutteront éternellement s'il le faut.

157. En bordure de la péninsule Arabique, des régions entières sont encore maintenues sous l'emprise britannique. Le pétrole est leur malheur. Sous des dénominations diverses, ces régions sont souvent gouvernées par des fantoches à la solde de l'étranger et contre la volonté de leur peuple. Des bases militaires sont dispersées tout au long de ces territoires depuis Aden jusqu'aux confins du Yémen et à la côte de l'Oman. Là, des chefs sont emprisonnés et remplacés par d'autres chefs plus obéissants. En vertu de quelle loi un pays étranger a-t-il le droit d'exercer ces pressions et d'établir des bases militaires en maintenant dans ces pays un régime de terreur? Nous verrons bientôt — lorsque cette affaire viendra devant l'Assemblée — quelles explications pourront donner les autorités britanniques pour justifier leurs agissements. C'est là une nouvelle forme du colonialisme, peut-être la plus dangereuse, et qu'il faut à tout prix éliminer.

158. J'aurais voulu terminer là non intervention, mais il est une question que je ne saurais oublier car elle est la manifestation la plus déplorable du colonialisme déguisé, de la domination flagrante et de la plus grande injustice de tous les temps: c'est l'occupation de la Palestine. Des étrangers venus des quatre coins du monde, de races et de langues différentes, se sont installés en Palestine, chassant ses occupants, s'emparant de leurs biens et détruisant leurs propriétés. Les massacres qui ont accompagné les expulsions sont au-delà de toute description. La Grande-Bretagne est la première responsable de ces crimes. Et pourtant, le monde a affecté d'ignorer toutes ces horreurs et une espèce de légalité a été octroyée à cet assemblage hétéroclite, à qui on n'avait promis cependant qu'un foyer au sein de la Palestine arabe. Depuis lors, dans cette partie du monde, aucune tranquillité n'est plus possible et, depuis plus de 13 ans, les couloirs des Nations Unies retentissent des réclamations de ceux qui ne peuvent oublier leur patrie. Une voix qualifiée, celle de M. le ministre Shukairy, s'est élevée pour relater les diverses phases par lesquelles a passé cette colonisation sioniste; il vous en a retracé les origines et vous a expliqué comment les tractations des chefs sionistes ont abouti à faire de cette terre de paix une terre de haine et de discorde. C'est sur cette terre, pourtant, que le Christ fut crucifié pour amener la paix dans le monde. Mais cette crucifixion se poursuit encore puisque les Arabes de Palestine y trouvent leur calvaire. Eux aussi devront ressusciter un jour, car il est impossible que la plus grande injustice de tous les temps puisse durer éternellement. Un jour, le monde ouvrira enfin les yeux et comprendra.

159. Que ceux qui ne partagent pas complètement mon point de vue sur le colonialisme croient au moins à la sincérité de mes paroles. Je suis sûr que tous ici présents nous travaillons à sa liquidation sous toutes ses formes et n'importe où qu'il se trouve. Je suis sûr aussi que l'on sera sincère dans la définition des principes contenus dans le texte de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, que l'on sera sincère dans leur application à tous les peuples du monde qui revendiquent le droit de décider eux-mêmes de leurs institutions politiques et sociales. Je souhaite à tous de voir le jour où cette question du colonialisme sera uniquement du ressort des historiens.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

160. M. SOSA RODRIGUEZ (Venezuela) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Le 14 décembre 1960 a été sans aucun doute une date mémorable dans les annales de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Elle a été en outre mémorable pour des millions d'êtres humains qui, ce jour-là, ont entrevu l'aube de leur indépendance.

161. Il est certain que, bien avant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, le processus de décolonisation était déjà amorcé sous l'impulsion des idées de liberté et d'égalité qui ont pris forme à la fin de la seconde guerre mondiale. Il est indubitable cependant que la Déclaration a unifié ce processus et l'a étendu à tous les peuples encore placés sous le régime colonial.

162. Le principe est maintenant admis par tous. Il ne s'agit plus que de le mettre en pratique et de veiller à ce qu'il ne reste pas lettre morte, mais qu'il se traduise par l'indépendance de tous les peuples qui ne jouissent pas encore de ce bienfait.

163. Sans aucun doute, le processus de décolonisation doit s'accélérer, mais, en même temps, il doit se dérouler sous une forme telle que l'indépendance signifie progrès et bien-être, non régression et chaos. Ce processus doit donc être appliqué dans l'intérêt exclusif des peuples encore soumis au colonialisme et non pour les faire simplement changer de maîtres ou les abandonner à une vie précaire, sans moyens d'existence suffisants. En effet, une indépendance politique théorique ne sert de rien si l'on tombe en fait sous la dépendance politique ou économique d'une autre puissance. Une liberté théorique ne sert de rien si les chaînes de l'ignorance et de la barbarie subsistent.

164. Le processus de décolonisation doit être accéléré, mais son rythme ne peut être égal pour tous. Le but est le même, mais la distance à parcourir varie suivant le point de départ. C'est donc pure démagogie que de prétendre que, subitement et sans distinction, tous les peuples encore placés sous le régime colonial peuvent se transformer du jour au lendemain, et tous en même temps, en nations capables de vivre en complète indépendance du point de vue politique et économique.

165. Cela ne signifie pas que le processus de l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux doive être différé; bien au contraire, ce processus doit être déjà engagé et là où il ne l'est pas l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit le déclencher et l'accélérer. Cependant, il est certain que les phases de ce processus ne peuvent être les mêmes pour tous.

166. La vocation à l'indépendance est égale pour tous les peuples, mais la jouissance de cette indépendance doit être préparée soigneusement afin qu'il en découle bien-être et progrès. En conséquence, l'obligation qui incombe aux puissances coloniales ou administrantes ne consiste pas à donner immédiatement une indépendance nominale, mais à amorcer sans tarder le processus tendant à fournir aux pays et aux peuples soumis à leur domination les éléments indispensables à une vie indépendante. C'est là que l'Organisation des Nations Unies est appelée à jouer un rôle prépondérant pour ce qui est tant de l'orientation et de la surveillance de ce processus que de la mise en œuvre de ses différentes phases.

167. Il a déjà été proclamé et reconnu qu'aucun pays ni peuple n'a le droit de maintenir un autre peuple sous le régime colonial. Ce principe ne doit pas se traduire dans la pratique par l'indépendance nominale immédiate de tous les peuples colonisés, ce qui impliquerait qu'ils se transformeraient du jour au lendemain en Etats abandonnés à leur propre sort, mais il doit signifier, au contraire, que les puissances coloniales ou administrantes doivent commencer immédiatement à investir les richesses de ces territoires coloniaux au profit de leurs habitants et à préparer promptement ces peuples colonisés à l'exercice de leur indépendance, afin que celle-ci puisse être accordée le plus rapidement possible dans des conditions qui assurent le bien-être à ces peuples. C'est de cette seule façon que les puissances coloniales pourront payer leur dette envers les peuples colonisés.

168. Bien entendu, ce processus de préparation indispensable ne doit pas servir de prétexte pour retarder ou refuser l'indépendance. Si un tel cas se présentait, les Nations Unies devraient alors intervenir pour assurer la stricte application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Aux yeux de ma délégation, pour mettre en œuvre correctement ladite résolution, il faut non seulement développer immédiatement l'éducation des populations autochtones dans tous les domaines, mais aussi appliquer les principes suivants:

a) Adoption de mesures appropriées en vue de la formation technique et politique immédiate du personnel autochtone nécessaire pour prendre en charge l'administration de l'Etat;

b) Transfert progressif des fonctions administratives au personnel autochtone formé à cette fin;

c) Réorganisation progressive de l'économie du pays ou du territoire, de telle sorte que la mise en valeur des ressources naturelles de ce pays ou territoire puisse servir de base à sa stabilité économique;

d) Education politique de la population afin de l'habituer à la vie dans l'indépendance et aux obligations qui incombent à une société moderne, tant dans le domaine intérieur que dans le domaine international.

169. Tel est, d'une façon générale, le processus qui devrait déjà être amorcé conformément aux termes de la résolution 1514 (XV) et qui, précisément, constitue, à propos de l'application de ladite déclaration, l'objectif soumis cette année à l'Assemblée. Nous devons reconnaître que, à quelques méritoires exceptions près, la situation générale qui s'offre à nous quant à l'application sincère des principes inscrits dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux laisse beaucoup à désirer.

170. Dans de nombreux cas, nous n'assistons pas précisément à un effort visant à préparer des colonies ou territoires non autonomes ou sous tutelle à l'indépendance, mais, bien au contraire, à la répression, dans le sang, de la juste aspiration des peuples à obtenir une indépendance à laquelle ils ont droit et à laquelle ils se sentent déjà préparés.

171. Nous constatons également qu'il subsiste des obstacles qui, dans de nombreux cas, empêchent ces peuples de jouir de leurs ressources naturelles. De puissants intérêts sont encore à l'œuvre pour que l'exploitation de ces richesses continue de grossir le patrimoine des investisseurs étrangers, ne laissant rien ou presque aux populations autochtones. C'est là le péché capital du colonialisme et c'est ce qu'il faut éliminer si l'on veut vraiment assurer la création de nouveaux Etats indépendants capables de vivre par eux-mêmes et de s'acquitter de leurs engagements envers la société internationale.

172. L'effort des Nations Unies visant à abolir le colonialisme ne doit pas, par conséquent, consister en une déclaration démagogique selon laquelle tous les pays et les peuples coloniaux sont dès aujourd'hui proclamés totalement indépendants ou doivent le devenir dans un délai d'un an, uniquement en vertu d'une résolution des Nations Unies; il faut que, dès à présent, l'Organisation des Nations Unies multiplie ses pressions et son contrôle sur les puissances coloniales afin de veiller à ce que le processus de décolonisation sous tous ses aspects soit appliqué sans tromperies ni oppositions et que l'indépendance totale soit accordée dans les plus brefs délais aux pays et aux peuples qui y sont déjà prêts, pour que cette indépendance ne soit pas un vain mot, mais une réalité concrète et positive. Le colonialisme est un fléau qu'il faut éliminer de telle manière que les maux qu'il engendre disparaissent au lieu de s'aggraver. Une indépendance théorique ne sert de rien si le territoire reste en fait dépendant sur le plan économique ou politique. Une indépendance de façade ne sert de rien si l'on ne dispose pas des moyens nécessaires pour la faire devenir réalité. La tâche des Nations Unies consiste donc à coopérer à la création de nouveaux Etats indépendants capables de vivre en tant que tels, et non de participer à l'instauration d'une indépendance artificielle qui laisserait subsister le colonialisme sous un nom différent.

173. Le peuple du Venezuela aspire sincèrement à la disparition définitive de la domination coloniale dans le monde. La Chambre des députés de mon pays a récemment adopté sur cette question, à l'unanimité, la motion dont je vais me permettre de donner lecture:

"La Chambre des députés de la République du Venezuela,

"Convaincue que le colonialisme est un vestige anachronique qui retarde le progrès humain et est la négation absolue du droit des peuples,

"Convaincue également que la disparition du régime colonial est un devoir impératif pour tous les Vénézuéliens fidèles à l'idéal de Bolívar,

"Rappelant qu'en décembre 1960 l'Organisation des Nations Unies a adopté la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, mais que, bien que par la suite de nombreux pays aient accédé à l'indépendance, il existe encore des territoires soumis à une domination coloniale, des peuples soumis à une domination et à une exploitation étrangère, choses expressément condamnées dans ladite déclaration,

"Affirme:

"Que le désir unanime de la Chambre et son aspiration profonde sont de voir cesser définitivement la domination colonialiste et l'oppression de certains peuples par d'autres; et, à cet effet, déclare que tous les pays privés de leur souveraineté ou soumis au statut colonial, en Asie, en Afrique ou en Amérique, doivent acquérir le plein statut de nations souveraines."

174. C'est inspirée par les postulats que je viens d'indiquer que la délégation du Venezuela se prononcera sur les divers projets de résolution qui sont soumis à l'examen de l'Assemblée sur cette question.

La séance est levée à 13 h 35.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. M. EL-FARRA (Jordanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ce qui caractérise la présente session de l'Assemblée — est-il utile de le dire? — c'est le grand nombre des problèmes, des situations difficiles et des sujets d'anxiété. La communauté mondiale aurait peine à retrouver des difficultés aussi graves dans la longue histoire des relations internationales. On ne peut qu'exprimer son désarroi et sa déception, son alarme et son appréhension devant les problèmes en suspens qui sont l'héritage du colonialisme partout où il a existé.

2. Les tensions qui se manifestent entre les deux camps de la guerre froide, leurs alliances respectives et leur rivalité cristallisent dans une certaine mesure d'importants problèmes coloniaux dans diverses régions, y suscitant un grand malaise. Les petits Etats aimeraient voir cesser cette guerre froide: la poursuivre ne sert à rien, ne contribue en rien au bien-être de l'humanité. L'actuelle tension mondiale est la source de bien des pressions; or, sous la pression des circonstances, il peut se produire une erreur de calcul ou une faute qui entraîneraient de graves conséquences.

3. Le monde a rapetissé, pour deux raisons: d'une part, l'amélioration des moyens de communication et de transport; d'autre part, la diffusion des lumières de l'esprit, des idéaux et des principes du progrès. L'esprit qui a percé les secrets de l'énergie atomique et de l'espace extra-atmosphérique devrait s'abandonner exclusivement et avec confiance à ses facultés créatrices, à ses responsabilités et à son ingéniosité. Dans un monde interdépendant, l'ONU peut, grâce à la coopération internationale, agir efficacement et faire des merveilles; elle peut se consolider et devenir capable de mettre un terme au colonialisme et à l'exploitation.

4. Animés de cet esprit nouveau, nous pourrions appliquer correctement, convenablement et complètement la résolution adoptée à la dernière session au sujet du colonialisme [1514 (XV)] et voir ainsi les héros algériens célébrer l'admission de leur Etat indépendant parmi les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Grâce à cet esprit, nous assisterons à l'entrée de l'Oman et d'autres pays dans la famille des nations. Voilà des problèmes qui, de même que d'autres, intéressent chacun de nous.

5. Nous autres, petites puissances, avons nos responsabilités dans ce monde rétréci. Il ne nous est pas permis de demeurer indifférents. Il est de notre devoir de faire le nécessaire pour empêcher une nouvelle aggravation de la situation mondiale, car la persistance du colonialisme et de l'oppression dans de nombreuses régions contribue à l'empirer et alourdit le fardeau de ceux qui voudraient faire de ce monde un lieu où il ferait meilleur vivre.

6. Dans bien des régions, la politique "diviser pour régner" est toujours en honneur, au mépris flagrant du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes. La Jordanie a toujours fermement cru à ce droit et elle n'a jamais manqué d'en soutenir le principe. Nous avons agi avec nombre d'amis pour défendre ce droit qui nous vient de Dieu. Aujourd'hui, bien des peuples qui ont lutté pour l'indépendance font maintenant partie de notre grande organisation au même titre que nous. Nous avons récemment célébré l'admission de nouveaux Membres et avons adressé à leurs gouvernements et à leurs peuples nos félicitations les plus chaleureuses. Au moment de la rédaction de la Charte et de la création de l'ONU, l'Organisation ne comptait que 51 Membres. Aujourd'hui, grâce aux mouvements de libération et grâce aux efforts déployés par les Nations Unies en faveur des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, ce chiffre dépasse la centaine. Il est regrettable, cependant, que nombre d'autres peuples ne soient pas encore parmi nous, bien qu'ils le méritent depuis longtemps. Il faut citer, parmi eux, le peuple de Palestine et celui de l'Algérie.

7. Depuis longtemps, le peuple palestinien lutte pour occuper sa place dans la famille des nations. Mais certains expédients et une politique de force ont contraint notre organisation elle-même à trahir — et j'insiste sur ce mot — un principe fondamental inscrit dans sa Charte: le principe de l'autodétermination. Elle a morcelé la Palestine contre la volonté de la majorité de son peuple. C'était en 1947, alors que les grandes puissances pouvaient, en usant de certaines pressions, obtenir la majorité. Les nouveaux Membres actuels n'étaient pas avec nous pour voir comment, à l'époque, les blocs de puissances, tant occidentales qu'orientales, ont fait preuve d'adresse pour frustrer les Arabes de Palestine de leur droit divin de vivre sur leur sol sous la protection des principes mêmes que consacre la Charte.

Les grandes puissances ne parlent jamais de cette forme de colonialisme, pour la simple raison qu'elle sert leurs desseins agressifs. Leur attitude à cet égard et leur silence singulier sont fort éloquentes. Ce serait pour chaque grande puissance un exercice salutaire que de s'interroger sur l'attitude et le silence absolu des autres puissances à l'égard d'un problème grave.

8. Heureusement, l'ONU d'aujourd'hui n'est plus le club exclusif des grandes puissances. Le tableau a maintenant changé. Grâce aux Etats d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine, aucune des grandes puissances ne peut empêcher l'adoption d'aucune décision qui réclame l'application du droit d'autodétermination, tout simplement parce qu'aujourd'hui les petites puissances ont leur mot à dire.

9. On n'aboutira à régler le problème palestinien qu'en s'attaquant à sa racine coloniale. Les solutions fragmentaires sont absolument inacceptables. Nous les rejeterons, comme notre peuple les rejettera et comme nos enfants les rejetteront. L'injustice n'a jamais eu place dans notre échelle des valeurs, et nous n'accepterons jamais d'y être soumis. Tant que cette invasion coloniale ne sera pas liquidée et que les droits intégraux des Arabes de Palestine ne seront pas entièrement rétablis, l'Orient continuera d'être un foyer d'instabilité et de conflits.

10. Notre problème n'est pas un problème de réfugiés; c'est un problème politique. C'est une question coloniale, une question de foyer et de patrie. C'est de là que devraient partir tous ceux qui ont pour tâche de le résoudre. Telles sont la volonté et la détermination du peuple palestinien; et aux côtés de ce peuple se tient toute la famille des nations arabes. Les gouvernements arabes ne peuvent que se faire l'écho des vœux légitimes de ce peuple, sinon c'est leur propre existence qui est en péril.

11. Dans le New York Times du 8 novembre 1961, nous lisons:

"La Knesset (Parlement) a approuvé, à une majorité écrasante... la thèse du gouvernement, qui est que les réfugiés arabes qui ont fui ne doivent pas être rapatriés sur le territoire qui, depuis cette époque, est devenu l'Etat d'Israël."

Elle a approuvé

"la thèse du Premier Ministre, pour qui la seule solution du problème des réfugiés est de les réinstaller dans les pays arabes..."

12. Nous lisons aussi que, dans la même décision, la Knesset a approuvé la déclaration par laquelle M. Ben Gourion rejetait la proposition, soumise aux Nations Unies, de donner aux réfugiés le choix entre le rapatriement ou la réinstallation.

13. Ce n'est que récemment que la Commission de conciliation de Palestine a chargé M. Johnson d'étudier les moyens de mettre en œuvre la résolution [194 (III)] par laquelle les Nations Unies demandaient le rapatriement des réfugiés ou une compensation. L'attitude actuelle des sionistes montre clairement qu'il est impossible d'envisager une solution pacifique. Pour nous, cette attitude se comprend, car la paix ne sert pas les intérêts de l'Etat sioniste. Ce n'est qu'à la faveur des tensions mondiales et de la guerre que le sionisme a atteint ses buts. L'histoire le montre: à la suite de la première guerre mondiale, la déclaration Balfour a promis de donner une "patrie" au sionisme; à la suite de la seconde guerre mondiale, on a promis un "Etat juif" au sionisme; et, très récemment, à la suite de la guerre franco-algérienne, du conflit soviéto-hongrois et du conflit anglo-égyptien, le sionisme a essayé de trouver un nouvel appui pour pousser encore plus loin son expansion dans la région de Gaza et dans la péninsule du Sinaï. Ainsi, tous les gains du sionisme sont dus à de grandes guerres et à des actes d'agression. C'est ce mouvement colonial-sioniste qui lance aujourd'hui un défi à la patrie arabe.

14. Il est de fait que l'héroïque lutte du peuple algérien a inspiré beaucoup de mouvements de libération. La guerre d'Algérie est entrée dans sa huitième année. Le monde entier a reconnu le droit de l'Algérie à l'indépendance. Nous espérons que la France comprendra que l'esprit colonialiste du XIX^e siècle, c'est-à-dire la domination et l'exploitation, a disparu. Les Français doivent accepter les réalités de la situation avant que l'incendie n'embrase le cœur même de la France. Nous reparlerons plus longuement de cette question quand l'Assemblée l'abordera.

15. La question de l'Oman est aussi d'ordre colonial. Elle découle des mêmes aspirations qui ont présidé au réveil du monde arabe. Les Arabes continueront d'agir pour une solution naturelle et adéquate de cette question coloniale. Tant qu'elle ne sera pas réglée, la lutte se poursuivra.

16. La souveraineté du Maroc sur tout son territoire est un droit légitime. Certaines parties de ce pays sont encore soumises à différentes formes de domination et d'exploitation étrangères. Nous sommes persuadés que le Maroc réalisera l'unité complète de son territoire.

17. Cela vaut également pour la Tunisie. Le maintien de l'occupation de Bizerte par la force est une violation de la souveraineté de la Tunisie. L'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité ont reconnu le droit de la Tunisie d'obtenir l'évacuation de tout son territoire par les forces françaises, mais la France continue à braver la résolution des Nations Unies [1622 (S-III)]. Notre organisation devrait être saisie de la question et prendre de nouvelles mesures.

18. J'en viens maintenant à la question de l'Irian occidental. Après un examen attentif, il nous semble, selon les éléments historiques et les documents pertinents, que l'Irian occidental est une des 23 provinces de l'Indonésie et qu'il est, par conséquent, partie intégrante de ce pays. Le mouvement national dont le but était d'obtenir des Pays-Bas l'indépendance de l'Indonésie visait, nous n'avons aucune raison d'en douter, la souveraineté de toute la région appelée jusque-là les Indes orientales néerlandaises. Les Pays-Bas l'ont admis dans de nombreux documents, dont le dernier en date est le rapport L/ adressé aux Nations Unies, rapport que le Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'Indonésie a dernièrement cité [1057^e séance]. Je n'ai donc pas besoin d'y revenir.

19. Il n'est rien de plus précis, de plus catégorique et de plus clair que ceci: l'Irian occidental a toujours été considéré comme faisant partie du territoire national qui est devenu l'Etat indépendant d'Indonésie. Nul ne conteste que l'exercice de la souveraineté sur l'Indonésie lui ait été transféré complètement et inconditionnellement en 1949. Nul ne conteste non plus qu'il ait été convenu que le statut politique de l'Irian occidental au sein de l'Indonésie ferait l'objet de négociations dans un délai d'un an après l'accord d'indépendance de 1949. A l'époque, les Néerlandais considéraient indéniablement cette province comme une partie de l'Indonésie.

20. Après sa domination coloniale bien connue sur l'Irian occidental, après avoir accordé à Indonésie une souveraineté péniblement acquise, après avoir essayé en vain d'annexer officiellement la province indonésienne de l'Irian occidental, les Pays-Bas, dans leur projet de résolution [A/L.354], ont soumis aux Nations Unies cette question, des plus embarrassantes pour eux, en employant toutes les formules courantes telles que "répression", "souveraineté du groupe ethnique", "autodétermination" et autres, pour dissimuler leur véritable désir: c'est-à-dire que, faute de pouvoir annexer ouvertement l'Irian occidental, ils voudraient qu'il soit indépendant de l'Indonésie pour qu'ils puissent "éduquer" le peuple, le former à leur manière de penser et, en fin de compte, y avoir un régime à leur dévotion.

21. Ni de tels arguments ni des phrases sentimentales ne peuvent changer ce fait que l'Irian occidental est partie intégrante de l'Indonésie. Nous reviendrons sur ce point lorsque nous parlerons des projets de résolution.

22. En conclusion, ma délégation déclare qu'elle figure parmi les auteurs d'un autre projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] qui prévoit des mesures adéquates pour la réalisation rapide des objectifs et principes énoncés dans la déclaration adoptée par l'Assemblée générale l'an dernier [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Nous sommes pour la libération et l'indépendance complètes de tous les peuples, et nous sommes persuadés que ceux qui luttent maintenant pour leur indépendance seront bientôt parmi nous, Membres, au même titre que nous, de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

23. M. BUDO (Albanie): L'examen, sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique^{2/}, de la question de la liquidation du colonialisme, et la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, et la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] adoptée à l'issue des débats, le 14 décembre 1960, constituent un succès important pour les forces anticolonialistes et feront date dans l'histoire de l'activité des Nations Unies. En effet, le colonialisme, cette survivance honteuse pour notre société humaine, est l'un des problèmes les plus angoissants de notre époque. Il n'est pas seulement le déni le plus brutal et le plus éhonté des droits élémentaires de l'être humain, en contradiction avec les normes généralement reconnues du droit international et les principes élevés formulés dans la Charte des Nations Unies, il ne représente pas seulement une forme féroce de l'exploitation de l'homme par son prochain, de l'asservissement le plus barbare d'une nation par une autre, du plus faible par le plus fort, il constitue en même temps une entrave intolérable à l'épanouissement politique, économique et culturel des peuples et, partant, un crime contre l'humanité et la civilisation.

24. L'expérience séculaire a montré que le colonialisme a été et reste une source de guerres atroces contre les peuples luttant pour la reconnaissance de leurs droits inaliénables, pour la liberté et l'indépendance; il est aussi une source de menaces continues pour la paix et pour la sécurité internationales.

25. Tout le monde, à l'exception des colonialistes, a apprécié la valeur et la portée historique de la Déclaration. Tous les peuples épris de liberté et de paix ont chaleureusement accueilli cette décision de l'Assemblée générale. En particulier, une lueur d'espoir légitime a effleuré les cœurs des peuples subjugués luttant pour se délivrer des chaînes du colonialisme; en effet, ils ont estimé que les colonialistes — malgré leur nature et leur politique fondée uniquement sur la domination et l'exploitation des peuples, sous la pression de la position adoptée d'une part par notre organisation et d'autre part par les Etats et les peuples pacifiques, et par-dessus tout sous les coups directs portés par la lutte de libération nationale dans les diverses colonies — se verraient obligés de respecter la Déclaration et de prendre les mesures propres à la mettre en œuvre.

26. Les espoirs et les vœux ardents des peuples ont-ils été réalisés? Les puissances coloniales ont-elles tenu compte des obligations qui leur incombent, en tant que Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, de mettre en œuvre les dispositions de la Déclaration, dispositions conformes aux buts et aux principes énoncés dans la Charte? Il n'en est malheureusement rien.

27. Le fait est que les puissances coloniales se sont efforcées, comme dans le passé et même davantage, de maintenir et de consolider — fût-ce sous des formes nouvelles et par tous les moyens à leur disposition, y compris l'emploi de la force armée — le régime colonial dans les territoires qu'elles ont sous leur administration.

28. Ainsi que l'ont souligné d'autres représentants dans ce débat, bien qu'il se soit déjà écoulé une année environ depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration par l'Assemblée générale, jusqu'à présent un seul pays, le Sierra Leone, ancienne colonie britannique, a accédé à l'indépendance en avril 1961 et vient d'être admis comme Membre de notre organisation, ce qui nous a grandement réjouis. Il y a encore le Tanganyika et le Samoa-Occidental qui doivent prochainement devenir indépendants. Sans doute un tel état de choses n'est pas du tout satisfaisant et ne correspond point aux exigences expresses de la Déclaration selon laquelle il faudrait immédiatement prendre des mesures pour permettre aux territoires sous tutelle et aux autres territoires non autonomes de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes. A la fin de l'année 1961, il y aura 88 territoires, comprenant au total plus de 70 millions d'habitants, qui se trouveront encore soumis à la servitude coloniale.

29. Devant une telle situation, les Nations Unies se doivent d'adopter des mesures appropriées en vue de mettre en œuvre sans délai la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960. La valeur de cette déclaration réside dans l'objectif qu'elle se propose, à savoir la libération et l'accession à l'indépendance des pays et des peuples coloniaux, et son importance historique sera affirmée dans la mesure où elle contribuera à atteindre cet objectif.

30. Un coup d'œil sur les prescriptions et les mesures que préconise la Déclaration nous permet de nous rendre compte où nous en sommes de son application. Examinons en particulier les paragraphes 4,

^{2/} Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quinzième session, Annexes, point 87 de l'ordre du jour, document A/4501.

5 et 6 du dispositif de cette résolution. Selon eux, les puissances coloniales devaient prendre "des mesures immédiates" dans les territoires sous tutelle et autres territoires non autonomes, "pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve ... afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes". Il était précisé:

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toute mesure de répression ... contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète, et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée."

31. Il est en outre prescrit que "toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies".

32. Pour couper court aux prétextes traditionnels et aux manœuvres dilatoires bien connues des impérialistes et colonialistes, qui ne lâchent jamais leur proie de leur propre gré, il est expressément prévu au paragraphe 3 du dispositif:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance".

33. Quelle a été en réalité l'attitude adoptée par les puissances coloniales à l'égard de ces prescriptions objectives et non équivoques de la résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée générale?

34. Plusieurs représentants qui m'ont précédé à cette tribune ont mis en évidence, en citant des faits incontestables, que ces puissances ont foulé aux pieds la Déclaration. Non seulement elles n'ont pas tenu compte de ses dispositions, mais elles ont redoublé d'efforts en vue de s'accrocher par tous les moyens possibles aux territoires sous leur domination.

35. Le monde entier est au courant de la guerre cruelle du Portugal contre l'héroïque peuple d'Angola qui lutte pour la liberté. Des chiffres ont été cités ici. Selon les évaluations les plus modestes, on compte plus de 50 000 tués angolais, rien que pour les quatre premiers mois de la guerre sanglante. Environ 20 000 soldats portugais, équipés de l'armement du bloc agressif de l'OTAN, continuent la guerre d'extermination dans ce pays d'Afrique. L'aviation est la principale arme utilisée, et les agresseurs portugais n'hésitent pas à faire usage de bombes au napalm, même contre les populations civiles. Les atrocités et les massacres en masse ont atteint un tel degré qu'on a, à juste titre, qualifié cette tuerie de génocide, et, ainsi que nous l'a dit ici le représentant de la Guinée [1058^{ème} séance], les peuples d'Afrique appellent les colonialistes portugais des criminels de guerre.

36. Le régime de terreur et de répression élevé en système par le gouvernement de Salazar sévit également dans les autres colonies portugaises telles que le Mozambique, la Guinée dite portugaise et Goa.

37. Pour se faire une idée de la façon dont le gouvernement de Salazar prend en considération la résolution de l'Assemblée générale et de la conception qu'il a des peuples sous sa domination, il suffit de citer ici les paroles que son ministre de la défense a adressées cet été aux soldats portugais au moment de leur départ pour l'Angola: "Vous n'allez pas combattre contre des êtres humains, leurs a-t-il dit, mais contre des sauvages et des animaux féroces". Naturellement, cela se passe de commentaires. Mais l'on ne saurait s'empêcher de poser la question de savoir comment il serait possible de concilier ces paroles du Ministre portugais de la défense, qui considère que les Africains ne sont pas des êtres humains, avec la prétention du Gouvernement portugais de traiter les populations africaines comme des Portugais à droits égaux.

38. Le cas de l'Algérie est un autre exemple qui illustre les séquelles de malheurs, de massacres et de dévastations qu'apporte aux peuples cette institution honteuse pour notre siècle qu'est le régime colonial; il montre aussi à quel point les puissances coloniales tiennent compte de la résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée générale. Les colonialistes français se cramponnent à leur politique de domination coloniale. Ils mènent une guerre criminelle contre le peuple algérien martyr qui lutte depuis sept années déjà, ne reculant devant aucun sacrifice pour réaliser ses aspirations légitimes à recouvrer l'indépendance perdue il y a plus d'un siècle, lorsque les impérialistes français occupèrent le pays par la force des armes. Chaque jour qui passe ajoute aux pertes en vies humaines et aux ruines. Nous aurons l'occasion d'examiner en détail la question algérienne lorsque nous discuterons ce point qui figure à l'ordre du jour de la seizième session de l'Assemblée, mais nous tenons à souligner dès à présent que le problème algérien ne pourra jamais être réglé par la force des armes, car il n'y a pas de force qui puisse venir à bout de la volonté inébranlable du peuple algérien de lutter jusqu'à la mort pour sa liberté et son indépendance. L'unique solution, c'est la stricte application par le Gouvernement français de la Déclaration, la reconnaissance au peuple algérien de son droit à l'indépendance et le renoncement à tous les plans visant à démembrer l'Algérie et à lui arracher certaines des parties de son territoire les plus riches en ressources naturelles, y compris le Sahara algérien.

39. Le Royaume-Uni, qui est la principale puissance coloniale dans le monde, ignore totalement la Déclaration et continue, comme par le passé, à se servir de tous les moyens possibles pour maintenir sous le joug colonial des dizaines de millions d'hommes. Les colonialistes britanniques continuent à réprimer le mouvement de libération des peuples subjugués. Ils foulent aux pieds les droits légitimes des peuples de la Rhodésie. Ils massacrent ceux qui combattent pour la liberté au Nyassaland, au Kenya, dans la péninsule Arabique et dans d'autres territoires. Dans la région qui s'étend d'Aden à l'Oman, ils mènent une guerre de ravages et de dévastations, dans laquelle le bombardement aérien tient une place de premier rang et transforme en ruines des villes ouvertes et des villages sans défense. Voilà déjà cinq années que le Royaume-Uni continue cette guerre criminelle contre l'héroïque peuple de l'Oman.

40. La situation actuelle au Congo et les événements tragiques dont ce pays a été le théâtre nous offrent un exemple frappant des conséquences du colonialisme, des manœuvres de toutes sortes et des actes, y compris l'emploi de la force armée, auxquels recourent les puissances colonialistes en vue de garder leur mainmise sur les pays accédant à l'indépendance. Les éléments de la situation au Congo sont, d'une part, la lutte du peuple congolais pour la sauvegarde de l'indépendance et de l'intégrité territoriale du pays et, d'autre part, les intérêts entrelacés des colonialistes belges, américains, britanniques et autres. Les impérialistes, s'appuyant sur des fantoches du genre de Tshombé et consorts, cherchent par tous les moyens à ne pas lâcher ce pays, et, surtout, à lui arracher la province du Katanga, qui est connue dans le monde entier pour ses immenses richesses.

41. De même, le gouvernement belge, poursuivant sa politique colonialiste au Ruanda-Urundi, s'emploie de son mieux, recourant aux mesures les plus criminelles, à empêcher le peuple de ce territoire d'accéder à l'indépendance, conformément à la résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée générale.

42. Pour ce qui est de l'Afrique du Sud, il est universellement connu que le gouvernement de ce pays, non seulement a violé systématiquement la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960, mais a toujours rejeté les nombreux appels et résolutions de l'ONU lui demandant de mettre fin à sa politique d'apartheid et de discrimination raciale et de reconnaître au peuple du Sud-Ouest africain le droit à la liberté et à l'indépendance. La situation en Afrique du Sud est terrible et intolérable; les persécutions et la terreur sévissent dans le Sud-Ouest africain.

43. En ce qui concerne l'Irian occidental, nous nous trouvons devant une nouvelle tactique de la part des Pays-Bas. En effet, cette puissance colonialiste a saisi l'Assemblée générale d'un projet de résolution [A/L.354] par lequel elle espère masquer ses visées bien connues. La proposition qu'il contient montre bien que le Gouvernement néerlandais n'a pas renoncé à sa politique colonialiste envers l'Irian occidental et que tout ce qu'il vise, c'est d'y perpétuer le régime colonial, fût-ce sous une forme nouvelle. D'un certain point de vue, cette manœuvre est intéressante, car elle nous fait voir jusqu'à quel point les puissances coloniales sont capables de tourner les résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies; elle nous montre comment, dans un cas donné, le Gouvernement néerlandais utilise la déclaration de l'Assemblée générale sur la suppression du colonialisme en faveur du maintien de ce système d'asservissement.

44. Naturellement, personne ne se fait d'illusion sur les motifs de telles manœuvres. L'Irian occidental fait partie intégrante de l'Indonésie comme par exemple le Katanga fait partie du Congo. Dans l'un comme dans l'autre cas, il s'agit d'une tentative caractérisée des impérialistes pour démembrer les pays devenus indépendants et pour leur arracher les provinces les plus riches afin d'y perpétuer le système d'exploitation coloniale. Le projet de résolution soumis par les Pays-Bas se trouve en opposition flagrante avec la Déclaration au nom de laquelle il est présenté. Il tend en particulier à violer le paragraphe 6 de son dispositif. L'unique solution valable à la question de l'Irian occidental, c'est son union avec la mère patrie, et le règlement de cette question devra être le résultat de négociations entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas.

45. Lorsque les Nations Unies examinent le problème angossant de l'élimination du colonialisme et lorsqu'elles s'efforcent d'exposer objectivement la position des puissances coloniales envers ce problème, pour savoir exactement à quoi s'en tenir et pour envisager les mesures qu'il convient de prendre en vue de remédier à la situation existante et de mettre fin une fois pour toutes au régime de domination coloniale, elles devraient reconnaître qu'il est extrêmement important de réserver aux Etats-Unis d'Amérique la première place parmi les puissances impérialistes responsables du maintien du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

46. Malgré les efforts de leurs représentants pour nous faire croire le contraire, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique ne sont-ils pas, en effet, le principal rempart du colonialisme contemporain et, par conséquent, l'adversaire le plus résolu et le plus dangereux du mouvement de libération nationale qui se dresse contre le colonialisme? Ce n'est un secret pour personne que, s'il n'y avait pas les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, les autres puissances colonialistes n'auraient pu résister devant le mouvement puissant des peuples vers l'indépendance et que la domination coloniale aurait disparu de la scène mondiale depuis longtemps.

47. Qui ne sait que les colonialistes portugais, belges, britanniques, français, espagnols et autres maintiennent leurs colonies et mènent des guerres coloniales grâce à l'assistance américaine qui leur est donnée soit directement, soit sous forme d'assistance militaire, soit dans le cadre du bloc agressif de l'OTAN qui est dirigé par les Etats-Unis? Il paraît même superflu de rappeler ici, car cela est de notoriété publique, que c'est l'armement américain qui sert à équiper les armées des puissances colonialistes qui mènent des guerres sanglantes en Angola, en Algérie, à Aden, en Oman et partout ailleurs où coule le sang des peuples luttant pour leur libération du joug colonial. Ne sait-on pas que les bombes lancées en Angola, en Algérie, à Bizerte et ailleurs sont de production américaine aussi bien que les avions servant à ces bombardements?

48. Les Etats-Unis sont donc complices de la tragédie actuelle des guerres coloniales menées par les autres puissances coloniales et du maintien de ce système abhorré d'exploitation des peuples, système à l'application duquel les monopoles américains participent et dont ils tirent des bénéfices énormes. Les Etats-Unis sont eux-mêmes une puissance colonialiste, malgré les efforts qu'ils déploient pour induire en erreur l'opinion publique; en tant que telle, non seulement ils n'ont rien fait pour mettre en œuvre la Déclaration en ce qui concerne leurs propres colonies, comme Porto Rico et de nombreuses îles de l'océan Pacifique, mais ils s'efforcent au contraire d'étendre leur domination coloniale à d'autres territoires, tout en adoptant des formes nouvelles d'oppression.

49. Il est caractéristique qu'à l'heure actuelle les impérialistes, obligés, par le présent rapport des forces dans le monde et sous la pression directe de la lutte des peuples subjugués, de renoncer à cette forme périmée et démasquée que l'on s'est plu à dénommer le colonialisme classique, s'emploient à circonscrire, par des accords de toutes sortes, les territoires qu'ils doivent évacuer; autrement dit, ils cherchent à remplacer le colonialisme par le néo-colonialisme qui, tout en leur assurant le maintien de l'exploitation coloniale, a des chances, selon eux, de berner les peuples exploités. Il convient de souligner que les impérialistes américains et ceux de l'Allemagne de l'Ouest sont particulièrement actifs à cet égard. Le néo-colonialisme, cette nouvelle forme dangereuse d'exploitation, doit être condamné et frappé de la même façon que le colonialisme.

50. L'un des moyens qu'utilisent les puissances impérialistes, dans le but de s'assurer la domination des peuples et pour servir leurs plans de guerre, c'est la conclusion d'accords d'aide militaire avec les pays récemment devenus indépendants et la création, sur le territoire de ces pays, de bases militaires. Les événements de ces derniers temps ont suffisamment témoigné du danger que créent les bases militaires en territoires étrangers. Elles constituent une menace constante à la sécurité et à l'indépendance du pays sur le territoire duquel elles sont installées, elles sont utilisées contre le mouvement de libération des peuples et constituent en même temps une menace grave pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

51. Le puissant mouvement des peuples pour se libérer de la servitude coloniale et pour consolider l'indépendance nationale a pris, ces dernières années, un élan sans précédent. La composition actuelle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et la part active et positive que prennent à nos débats les représentants des pays nouvellement indépendants sont un témoignage des succès remportés jusqu'à présent par les peuples, ainsi que de l'importance et de la portée que revêtent les transformations actuelles de la société humaine.

52. En Afrique, en Asie, en Amérique latine, les peuples luttent résolument contre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme, contre le régime colonialiste ancien et nouveau. Tous les peuples du monde sympathisent profondément avec eux et appuient fermement ceux qui combattent pour la liberté en Angola, en Algérie, au Congo, à Cuba, en Indonésie, en Tunisie, à Oman, en Somalie française et dans tout autre territoire dépendant. La liquidation du colonialisme, son élimination totale de la société humaine est inéluctable, malgré les efforts désespérés de l'impérialisme pour maintenir ce régime esclavagiste. C'est là le processus irréversible de l'histoire de la société humaine.

53. Mais une des plus hautes tâches des Nations Unies est d'apporter, conformément aux principes élevés proclamés dans la Charte, une contribution efficace à ce mouvement général des peuples pour la liberté, pour la délivrance définitive et sans délai du joug colonialiste. Elle ne peut être réalisée que par l'adoption et la mise en œuvre de mesures concrètes. La déclaration de l'Assemblée générale du 14 décembre 1960, pour ne pas perdre de sa valeur, doit être portée plus en avant dans la voie des mesures pratiques et doit être traduite dans les faits.

54. La délégation de la République populaire d'Albanie estime que le projet de résolution présenté par la délégation de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] répond pleinement à ce but. Il est, en particulier, nécessaire de couper court à toutes les tentatives dilatoires des puissances colonialistes et de fixer une date limite pour une liquidation totale du régime colonial, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Nous estimons utile de souligner que la fixation d'un délai d'une année ne signifie point que les puissances colonialistes doivent attendre l'expiration de ce délai pour libérer les peuples et les pays qui sont encore sous leur dépendance. Nous sommes contre tout sur-sis au régime colonialiste qui ne ferait que prolonger les souffrances des peuples subjugués. Les puissances coloniales doivent permettre immédiatement à tous les peuples asservis de devenir indépendants, et la limite d'un an n'est qu'un délai maximum, ainsi que l'indiquent clairement les termes "au plus tard" du paragraphe 2 du dispositif du projet de résolution soviétique. Nous estimons donc que le délai d'un an est en faveur des peuples dépendants et devient un obstacle aux manœuvres dilatoires des puissances colonialistes.

55. En outre, la création d'une commission spéciale, proposée dans le même document est une mesure indispensable. Elle constituera l'organe responsable qui donnera corps à la déclaration sur la liquidation du colonialisme.

56. Le Gouvernement albanais a, de tous temps, appuyé la lutte des peuples pour la libération nationale. Cette position correspond aux aspirations profondes de notre peuple et aux principes qui sont à la base de notre Etat socialiste. Ma délégation a été heureuse de la nouvelle initiative prise par l'Union soviétique d'examiner à la présente session de l'Assemblée la question de l'application de la déclaration sur l'élimination du colonialisme.

57. Nous appuyons entièrement le projet de résolution déposé par l'Union soviétique, et nous sommes persuadés que l'Assemblée générale adoptera les mesures décisives qui s'imposent afin de réaliser la déclaration historique du 14 décembre 1960 et de mettre ainsi, sans plus tarder et une fois pour toutes, un terme au régime abhorré du colonialisme et à ses conséquences funestes.

M. Schürmann (Pays-Bas), vice-président, prend la présidence.

58. M. Dato' KAMIL (Fédération de Malaisie) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'an dernier, à sa quinzième session, l'Assemblée générale a adopté à une majorité écrasante le projet de résolution, déposé par des pays d'Afrique et d'Asie, qui est devenu la résolution 1514 (XV) sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. La délégation malaisienne a eu l'honneur d'être au nombre des auteurs de cette résolution et elle a eu, au cours du débat, l'occasion de faire connaître clairement ses idées sur le problème de la décolonisation.

59. Ma délégation reste inébranlablement convaincue de la nécessité d'abolir vite et avec ordre le colonialisme et toutes les formes de domination et de tutelle. En intervenant dans les débats de la présente session, elle voudrait dès l'abord renouveler l'engagement qu'elle a pris de contribuer à la prompt réalisation de cet objectif.

60. Le colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et sous tous ses déguisements, est contraire à la loi fondamentale de la justice humaine, celle que proclame la Charte des Nations Unies: le respect des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, de la dignité et de la valeur de la personne humaine; de l'égalité des droits de l'homme et de la femme, ainsi que des nations grandes et petites. Cette seule considération suffit à condamner le colonialisme comme une institution immorale, qu'il faut éliminer rapidement et complètement.

61. Il y a plus. Le colonialisme empêche la réalisation d'un des objectifs fondamentaux de la Charte: l'instauration entre les nations de relations amicales fondées sur le respect du principe de l'égalité des droits et de la libre détermination des peuples. C'est également une source constante de friction entre les peuples et les Etats; à ce titre, le refus obstiné qu'il oppose au désir passionné que les peuples soumis ont d'accéder à la liberté et à l'indépendance constitue une menace éventuelle à l'harmonie des relations internationales et à la paix du monde. Ainsi, de l'avis de ma délégation, la reconnaissance par la Charte du droit inaliénable des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes n'est pas simplement l'expression d'un idéal noble et lointain. C'est plutôt la reconnaissance de cette réalité fondamentale, qu'une paix durable ne saurait s'instaurer dans le monde que dans la liberté et l'égalité de tous les peuples et de toutes les nations. Le colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et sous tous ses déguisements, est donc aujourd'hui un anachronisme qu'il est urgent de faire disparaître.

62. Ma délégation estime donc que le problème de la décolonisation rentre dans l'objectif d'ensemble des Nations Unies, qui est d'instaurer un ordre mondial durable, fondé sur la loi fondamentale de la justice humaine, en vertu de laquelle tous les peuples et toutes les nations ont droit à la liberté et à l'égalité et ont la faculté de choisir leur propre destin et leur mode de vie.

63. De l'avis de ma délégation, la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux représente, plus que n'importe quelle autre résolution, un jalon important dans la progression des Nations Unies vers la réalisation d'un ordre mondial pacifique fondé sur le respect de la liberté et de l'égalité de tous les peuples. L'adoption même de cette déclaration reflète l'évolution de la vie internationale. L'Assemblée générale n'aurait pu ni concevoir ni adopter la Déclaration s'il n'y avait pas eu depuis 20 ans un immense progrès dans la voie de la décolonisation, comme en témoigne la présence, parmi les Nations Unies, de tant de pays qui, il n'y a que peu d'années, vivaient encore sous la tutelle coloniale de l'Occident.

64. L'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV) par l'Assemblée générale est en grande partie le fruit des laborieux efforts de ces pays — dont le mien — récemment parvenus à l'indépendance et qui étaient poussés par le désir sincère de mettre fin, vite et sans désordre, aux institutions et aux pratiques colonialistes dont eux seuls connaissent les méfaits et peuvent parler avec autorité et conviction.

65. L'admission même de tant de nouveaux Membres au cours des deux dernières années prouve manifestement que l'histoire marche irréversiblement vers la liberté et vers l'émancipation de la domination étrangère. Sans doute le processus historique qui devait inaugurer ce nouvel ordre mondial d'Etats indépendants et égaux a-t-il pris forme dans la première moitié du siècle ou plus tôt même; il faut pourtant dire que les dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies qui concernent l'égalité des droits de l'homme et de la femme et la dignité de la personne humaine ont dû constituer une source d'inspiration et de confiance pour des millions d'êtres humains asservis dans le monde entier, et les ont encouragés à accélérer leur lutte de libération. En outre, la Charte a également permis de faire du bien-être des peuples soumis un problème international. A cet égard, elle a fait aux Etats Membres qui ont des colonies l'obligation précise de préparer les peuples qui sont sous leur domination à assumer la responsabilité de leur propre gouvernement.

66. Il n'en demeure pas moins que ni la Charte ni la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV) ne sont à l'origine de ce processus historique. Leur but est plutôt de favoriser et d'accélérer, de façon ordonnée et sans perdre de vue l'importance d'une transformation pacifique, le processus historique que les peuples colonisés avaient déjà déclenché par leur volonté irrésistible de s'émanciper et de devenir libres et indépendants. Ce processus de décolonisation étant ainsi établi sur une base bien organisée et sous le contrôle constant des Nations Unies et de l'opinion mondiale, on peut espérer que la transformation complète de l'ordre ancien en une nouvelle communauté d'Etats souverains libres et égaux pourra s'obtenir avec un minimum de conflits et de violences et dans des conditions qui permettront aux nouveaux Etats indépendants d'être assez préparés pour assumer la pleine responsabilité du maintien de leur souveraineté et de leur intégrité nationale et territoriale.

67. C'est à la lumière de ces considérations que ma délégation voudrait examiner la question de la mise en œuvre de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui fait l'objet de notre débat d'aujourd'hui. Nous nous félicitons que les termes de cette résolution s'accordent parfaitement avec l'opinion générale de la délégation malaise sur le problème de la décolonisation. Cette résolution ne cherche pas à condamner les puissances coloniales, car la condamnation, si justifiée qu'elle puisse être dans certains cas, ne sert pas les intérêts des peuples colonisés, non plus que la cause d'une transformation pacifique et ordonnée. Mais elle appelle, à juste titre, l'attention sur les maux et les dangers inhérents à l'instauration du colonialisme et à sa pratique. Elle met en lumière l'anachronisme du colonialisme dans notre monde d'aujourd'hui où les idéaux de liberté et d'égalité en sont venus à gouverner le cours de l'histoire avec une force irrésistible et toujours plus puissante. Elle souligne en outre que le maintien de la domination coloniale non seulement est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies, mais empêche la paix et la coopération mondiales de s'instaurer.

68. Quant aux aspects pratiques du problème, le projet de résolution demande qu'il soit mis fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations; il enjoint aux autorités intéressées de prendre des mesures immédiates, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous les autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, en vue de transférer tous les pouvoirs aux peuples intéressés. Cependant, consciente de la nécessité d'une transition méthodique et d'un transfert de pouvoirs effectué dans les meilleures conditions possibles, ma délégation est d'avis que cette déclaration ne prescrit pas que tous les pouvoirs soient transférés immédiatement et sans délai; ce qui y est demandé, c'est que des mesures soient prises promptement en vue du transfert définitif des pouvoirs. Les puissances coloniales ont trop souvent retardé l'indépendance sous le fallacieux prétexte que les peuples colonisés n'étaient pas préparés; on ne faisait d'ailleurs rien pour les préparer, à supposer qu'ils aient eu besoin de préparation. Ainsi, l'insuffisance de préparation politique, économique, sociale et scolaire n'a que trop souvent servi de prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance. C'est une attitude déplorable de la part des puissances coloniales, attitude directement contraire à l'obligation qu'elles ont, aux termes de la Charte, de préparer les peuples qui dépendent d'elles à assumer l'entière responsabilité de leur indépendance dans le plus bref délai. Ma délégation considère qu'il est de la plus haute importance que toutes les autorités qui administrent des territoires dépendants s'acquittent fidèlement des obligations que leur font la Charte et la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, pour ne pas être, en négligeant leurs responsabilités, la cause lamentable de retards sans fin dans la réalisation de l'indépendance à laquelle aspirent les peuples placés sous leur autorité. Les conséquences déplorables d'une telle négligence nous sont devenues si familières au cours des dernières années qu'il n'est vraiment pas nécessaire que je prenne sur le temps précieux de l'Assemblée pour en parler maintenant en détail.

69. En ce qui concerne la préparation des peuples, point qui, à notre avis, est au cœur même du problème de la décolonisation, ma délégation prend acte avec une certaine satisfaction des assurances que certaines puissances coloniales ont données en s'engageant à préparer sans délai leurs peuples et leurs territoires coloniaux à l'exercice de leur pleine souveraineté. Ce n'est qu'en traitant le problème de la décolonisation de façon sensée et avec bienveillance que le transfert des pouvoirs pourra s'opérer dans la cordialité et l'harmonie, ce qui, au lieu de rompre brutalement dans la haine et la vengeance les liens entre les puissances coloniales et les peuples dépendants, ouvrira une nouvelle ère de relations heureuses et de coopération entre partenaires égaux au sein d'une communauté mondiale de nations souveraines. Le bien-fondé de cette conception a été prouvé maintes fois au cours des dernières 20 années. Le Commonwealth des nations, né de l'Empire britannique, en est un bon exemple.

70. Le Commonwealth est une communauté vivante qui grandit à mesure que l'Empire britannique rétrécit. Depuis l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV), le Sierra Leone a accédé à l'indépendance et est maintenant membre du Commonwealth. Un autre territoire africain sous administration britannique, le Tanganyika, doit arriver à l'indépendance le 9 décembre 1961, dans quelques jours. Il est permis d'espérer que les Nations Unies pourront encore accueillir un nouveau Membre au cours de la présente session. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a mis l'Assemblée générale au courant de l'accord réalisé touchant les étapes finales de l'évolution constitutionnelle de l'Ouganda, et a annoncé que ce territoire recevrait son indépendance en octobre de l'année prochaine. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a également parlé de l'évolution qui s'est produite au Kenya, à Zanzibar, en Gambie, au Nyassaland, ainsi qu'en Guyane britannique, aux Antilles et dans d'autres territoires. Nous nous félicitons que le Royaume-Uni ait donné l'assurance de pousser la préparation de ces territoires dépendants, pour leur permettre d'assumer promptement leur pleine souveraineté.

71. Dans d'autres régions cependant, certaines puissances coloniales continuent à contrecarrer ou à réprimer les aspirations à la liberté des peuples placés sous leur tutelle. Elles emploient divers moyens, dont la force, pour dénier à ces peuples le droit à la libre détermination et à l'indépendance. C'est un grave sujet de préoccupation pour ma délégation. Une telle obstination de la part des puissances coloniales conduira inévitablement à de nouvelles violences, à des conflits internationaux; elle est une menace pour l'harmonie et la paix du monde. Ma délégation exhorte instamment ces puissances, dans l'intérêt de la communauté mondiale et dans leur propre intérêt, à tenir pleinement compte des aspirations à l'indépendance des peuples qu'elles dominent et à faire en conséquence le nécessaire pour faciliter la réalisation prochaine de ces aspirations. Ce n'est qu'ainsi que l'on écartera le danger de haine et de violence et que l'indépendance pourra naître dans l'amitié et dans l'harmonie.

72. Ma délégation n'a pas hésité à souligner la nécessité d'une préparation appropriée. Je tiens cependant à souligner que notre désir n'est pas de voir l'indépendance retardée. Il n'est pas non plus dans nos intentions, comme je l'ai déjà dit, de tolérer que l'on retarde l'indépendance sous prétexte de préparation insuffisante. J'insiste sur la nécessité de cette préparation, car, apparemment, c'est devenu un sujet de controverse. Il y a ici certaines délégations qui ont exigé la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme. La délégation soviétique, par exemple, a déposé un projet de résolution [A/L.355], où l'Assemblée générale

"Déclare que la liquidation définitive et inconditionnelle du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations devra être achevée à la fin de 1962 au plus tard".

73. Ma délégation représente un pays qui, pendant près d'un siècle, a été sous le joug étranger, et qui n'a recouvré son indépendance que depuis quatre ans; elle peut dire en toute honnêteté que nul plus qu'elle ne souhaite l'abolition rapide du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Cependant, nous tenons à aborder ce problème avec plus de sérieux et plus de réalisme. Nous ne sommes pas contre les dates limites; mais fixer des dates limites beaucoup trop proches, sans tenir compte des réalités, comme celles que le projet soviétique propose d'appliquer à tous — je dis bien à tous — les territoires dépendants, quel que soit leur degré d'évolution et de préparation, c'est un acte qui est lourd de dangers. Certes, quelques territoires seront déjà prêts à l'indépendance même avant la fin de 1962; mais bien d'autres auront peut-être besoin de plus de temps. Si l'indépendance est accordée à tous les territoires avant la fin de 1962, de 1963 ou de 1964, sans un examen préalable et approfondi de la situation particulière à chacun d'eux, ma délégation craint que bon nombre d'entre eux ne soient exposés à des difficultés et à des dangers divers, capables même de compromettre leur indépendance et leur souveraineté nouvellement acquises.

74. Les dates limites ne sont acceptables que si elles ne concernent qu'un territoire particulier ou un groupe particulier de territoires dont la situation et les difficultés sont analogues, et à la suite de l'étude approfondie des circonstances, compte dûment tenu de la nécessité d'une préparation, et compte tenu aussi des aspirations de leur peuple. La nécessité de cette préparation n'est nulle part mieux soulignée que dans le projet nigérien de résolution [A/L.357] qui, tout en proclamant que tous les territoires et peuples coloniaux, dépendants et non autonomes d'Afrique doivent accéder à l'indépendance d'ici au 1^{er} décembre 1970 au plus tard, proclame également qu'il faut d'urgence prendre des mesures dans ces territoires pour préparer — j'insiste, pour préparer — leur peuple à assumer l'entière gestion de leurs affaires d'ici à 1970.

75. Si la préparation à l'indépendance est un facteur d'une extrême importance dans l'harmonieux déroulement du processus de décolonisation, il n'importe pas moins d'étudier à fond la situation de chaque territoire et les points particuliers sur lesquels la préparation doit porter; on peut ainsi préconiser au sujet de chacun une ligne de conduite et un calendrier précis pour les diverses étapes de l'évolution constitutionnelle, y compris l'indépendance elle-même.

76. L'idée d'un comité spécial, que l'on trouve dans le projet des 37 puissances [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] paraît intéressante à ma délégation. C'est exactement l'instrument qu'il faut pour entreprendre l'examen dont je viens de parler et pour faire des recommandations. Ma délégation est donc très heureuse de souscrire sans réserve à cette résolution, dont elle est coauteur, avec 36 autres délégations d'Afrique et d'Asie. La proposition que représente ce projet est un pas dans la bonne direction, et je suis persuadé que l'Assemblée l'adoptera.

77. Je voudrais, pour conclure, dire quelques mots du projet de résolution [A/L.354] que la délégation néerlandaise a déposé au sujet de la question de l'Irian occidental ou Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Ma délégation a écouté attentivement les déclarations des représentants des Pays-Bas et de l'Indonésie, et elle y a réfléchi à la lumière des données qu'elle possède sur ce problème. Il est profondément regrettable et inquiétant que le problème persiste et qu'il oppose les deux pays intéressés, avec lesquels la Fédération de Malaisie entretient des relations amicales. En tant que voisins immédiats de l'Indonésie et ses amis, nous attendons avec anxiété un prompt règlement de ce problème. Je dis bien avec anxiété, car la permanence de ce différend empêche non seulement la reprise des relations entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, mais encore, ce qui est plus grave, constitue une menace persistante de conflit armé dans la région, conflit qui mettrait sérieusement en péril la paix en Asie sud-orientale et dans le monde entier. Ma délégation estime donc que la question de l'Irian occidental est un problème urgent qui exige une solution rapide.

78. Après avoir examiné tous les faits qui ont trait à cette question et étudié les déclarations faites ici, ma délégation a la conviction que les tentatives que l'on fera pour résoudre ce problème ne seront réalistes ou fructueuses que si l'on n'oublie jamais que la question de l'Irian occidental est une source de différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, et que sa solution implique par conséquent l'accord des deux pays intéressés. Notre assemblée ne peut pas imposer une solution que l'une des parties accepterait pendant que l'autre la repousserait catégoriquement. Dans les déclarations qu'il a faites à l'Assemblée générale, le Ministre des affaires étrangères de l'Indonésie s'est opposé énergiquement à la proposition faite par le gouvernement néerlandais dans le projet de résolution dont j'ai parlé. Cela étant, ma délégation ne voit pas comment ce texte, même si l'Assemblée l'adopterait, pourrait résoudre le problème. Il ne pourrait qu'aggraver la situation et rendre encore plus difficile d'atteindre une solution qui aurait vraiment l'agrément des deux parties. Il est urgent de régler ce problème; à notre avis, on n'y parviendra que par des négociations que les parties intéressées auront conduites sérieusement et avec le désir d'aboutir. L'attitude de ma délégation à l'égard du projet néerlandais sera dictée par les considérations que je viens d'exposer.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

79. M. GARCIA INCHAUSTEGUI (Cuba) [traduit de l'espagnol]: La République de Cuba, avec ses 114 500 kilomètres carrés et ses 6 600 000 habitants, a une grande expérience de la question que nous débattons aujourd'hui. C'est Cuba qui a vu, il y a 63 ans à peine, la liquidation du dernier réduit, dans l'hémisphère occidental, de l'empire colonial de l'Espagne, jadis si puissant. C'est à Cuba que, le 1er janvier 1959, grâce au triomphe de notre révo-lution, le colosse de l'impérialisme américain a subi un grave échec.

80. En d'autres termes, c'est à Cuba qu'a fini de s'effondrer un puissant empire et qu'a commencé la décadence d'un empire non moins puissant. C'est dans notre patrie qu'a été vaincu le colonialisme des vieilles puissances européennes, ainsi que le néo-colonialisme américain qui lui avait succédé. Tout cela en 63 ans, au cours desquels l'héroïque bravoure de notre peuple a infligé des défaites cuisantes à deux puissants empires.

81. Quatre siècles de domination coloniale espagnole et 80 ans de lutte pour s'en débarrasser, 61 ans de domination néo-coloniale yankee et 61 ans de lutte contre cette domination ont donné à notre peuple des raisons et des forces pour couronner ses victoires du 1er janvier 1959 et du 19 avril 1961, et pour renouveler victorieusement ses actes glorieux chaque fois que les tentacules de l'impérialisme colonialiste des Etats-Unis se dresseront contre l'indépendance de notre patrie.

82. La lutte des peuples pour l'indépendance a toujours été une lutte héroïque; où qu'elle ait lieu, elle bénéficiera de la sympathie et de la solidarité de notre peuple. Au septième alinéa de la Déclaration de La Havane, l'Assemblée nationale du peuple cubain a proclamé:

"Le devoir que les nations exploitées et opprimées ont de combattre pour leur libération; le devoir que chaque peuple a de se solidariser avec tous les peuples opprimés, colonisés, exploités ou attaqués, en quelque endroit du monde qu'ils se trouvent et quelle que soit la distance géographique qui les sépare. Tous les peuples du monde sont frères!"

Et le sixième alinéa de la même Déclaration proclame:

"L'Assemblée nationale du peuple cubain condamne enfin l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme et l'exploitation des pays sous-développés par la finance impérialiste."

83. Comme tous les autres peuples d'Amérique latine, notre peuple a connu la liberté conditionnelle: il avait hymne et drapeau, mais son gouvernement était un gouvernement fantoche, toutes ses ressources naturelles et tout son commerce étaient aux mains des monopoles impérialistes étrangers. Nous avons connu l'assistance technique entre guillemets, les prêts entre guillemets, destinés non pas à mettre en valeur nos richesses conformément aux intérêts de notre peuple, mais bien à aider l'exploitation financière étrangère et à mieux river nos fers. Quand les impérialistes investissaient des capitaux dans une route, un chemin de fer ou une ligne électrique, ce n'était que pour exploiter plus facilement à leur profit nos ressources naturelles. Ce n'est pas en vain qu'ils ont fait de la majorité de nos nations des sources de main-d'œuvre à bon marché, et les importatrices de tous les biens de consommation produits par leur empire. D'un peuple qui n'est maître ni de son économie ni de ses ressources naturelles, on ne peut pas dire qu'il est pleinement indépendant. Bien que l'indépendance politique soit une étape importante, elle est chimérique si le nouvel Etat n'a pas en main ses ressources naturelles et son économie.

84. Il convient de dire ici que les colonialistes ont eu recours, pour l'exploitation de nos pays, à des moyens subtils qui n'en étaient que plus dangereux. Ainsi, au colonialisme archaïque et traditionnel a succédé le néo-colonialisme. Nouvelle Sainte-Alliance, les grands intérêts financiers internationaux déchaînent la guerre en Algérie, en Angola et au Congo. Ils assassinent et emprisonnent les dirigeants les plus qualifiés. Ils lancent des campagnes de diffamation contre les gouvernements indépendants d'Afrique, d'Asie ou d'Amérique latine par l'intermédiaire de leurs prétendues agences internationales de presse, qui pourraient s'appeler agences internationales du mensonge. Quelles qu'elles soient, les compagnies financières, quand elles voient menacés leurs louches intérêts, provoquent coups d'Etat et guerres civiles; et, quand elles voient que les mercenaires dont elles disposent dans le monde ne leur suffisent pas, elles utilisent alors les forces régulières de leur gouvernement. Elles remplacent les fonctionnaires, envoient leurs unités navales au large des côtes d'autres pays et y imposent sous une étrange forme l'autodétermination ou l'idée qu'elles se font de l'autodétermination.

85. Ce n'est pas sans raison qu'un des hommes d'Etat d'une de ces puissances coloniales a un jour affirmé: "Ce qui est bon pour la General Motors est bon pour les Etats-Unis". Mais, ce qui est bon pour la General Motors, la United Fruit et l'Union minière n'est pas tellement bon pour les peuples que ces compagnies enchaînent et dépouillent. Et que peut le gouvernement de ces puissances coloniales pour empêcher les agressions que commettent ces intérêts? Il est lamentable de devoir dire que ce pouvoir est nul, car ces gouvernements sont en place par la grâce de ces mêmes intérêts financiers, de ces compagnies, et prennent grand soin de ne pas heurter les intérêts auxquels ils doivent leur existence. C'est pourquoi certains conflits deviennent insolubles; c'est pourquoi on assassine, pourquoi on se livre au génocide contre les peuples qui, en Amérique, en Afrique et en Asie, luttent pour leur indépendance; c'est pourquoi les meurtres ne rencontrent que l'indifférence; c'est pourquoi tous les pays qui possèdent des colonies appartiennent à la même alliance militaire.

86. Nous condamnerons donc toujours le colonialisme sous tous ses aspects. C'est une forme archaïque de l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme, qui ne se compare pas au développement économique, technique et social qui s'est produit et se produit aujourd'hui dans certains pays où le peuple s'est rendu maître du pouvoir et, avec lui, de ses sources de richesse et de son propre destin.

87. Néanmoins, les peuples ont marqué une sérieuse avance contre le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme. Mais il reste encore bien des territoires et des millions d'êtres humains qui sont victimes de ces maux.

88. La lutte dramatique du peuple algérien, sa volonté d'être libre ou de mourir sont un défi à la civilisation. Jusqu'à quand resterons-nous les bras croisés en face du génocide commis contre un peuple qui, au prix du sang de ses fils, lutte pour la libre détermination? Serait-ce par hasard un honneur pour un gouvernement que de mener une guerre si injuste? Est-il nécessaire d'invoquer de meilleures raisons pour l'indépendance que celles que nous donne le peuple algérien par son courage, son héroïsme et sa ferme volonté d'être libre?

89. En Angola, une guerre d'extermination se déchaîne contre un peuple qui ne commet d'autre crime que celui d'aimer l'indépendance au prix même de sa vie.

90. Au Congo, un empire minier dont l'influence internationale est grande entretient une armée de mercenaires bien équipés et fait la guerre pour réserver au néo-colonialisme qu'il représente une grande zone des ressources naturelles qui appartiennent au nouvel Etat. Le néo-colonialisme essaie à tout prix, et même au prix de la paix et de l'unité des nouveaux Etats, de se réserver les tentantes ressources naturelles de ces régions. La guerre que provoque la présence d'une grosse armée de mercenaires, aux moyens puissants, ne peut pas s'appeler une guerre civile au vrai sens du terme; c'est une agression coloniale caractérisée. Ainsi donc les hauts intérêts financiers internationaux, moralement responsables de l'assassinat de Patrice Lumumba, sont ceux qui déchaînent de nouveau la violence au Congo.

91. Nous reconnaissons la souveraineté de la République indonésienne sur l'Irian occidental. Ce n'est qu'un stratagème que de prétendre protéger l'intégrité territoriale des nouveaux Etats indépendants en conservant à la domination coloniale ou néo-coloniale de vastes portions de ces territoires. On vient nous demander l'autodétermination pour une partie intégrante de l'Indonésie. Nous répondons: le peuple de l'Indonésie tout entière, y compris l'Irian occidental, n'avait-il pas déjà exercé son droit d'autodétermination en conquérant son indépendance? Il faut garantir aussi l'indépendance du Kenya, de la Rhodésie du Nord et de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Nyassaland et d'autres territoires africains, et mettre un terme à l'agression contre le peuple de l'Oman en lui permettant d'accéder à l'indépendance.

92. Il est indispensable de faire cesser la mauvaise administration qu'un gouvernement raciste exerce sur le Sud-Ouest africain, de préparer l'indépendance de ce pays et de mettre un terme à l'intolérable politique d'apartheid qui se pratique là-bas tout comme dans la nation administrante.

93. Il faut que cessent l'agression impérialiste contre le peuple de la République populaire de Chine et l'intervention militaire américaine à Formose et dans le Viet-Nam du Sud.

94. En Amérique latine, il faut mettre fin au colonialisme des vieilles puissances européennes et au néo-colonialisme des Etats-Unis. Nous espérons qu'à très brève échéance les rêves des fondateurs deviendront réalité et que, de la Terre de Feu au rio Bravo, seuls se dresseront les drapeaux d'Etats indépendants. Il faut accorder l'indépendance aux colonies qui subsistent dans cet hémisphère et évacuer les territoires arrachés illégalement à la souveraineté des républiques latino-américaines.

95. La menace de débarquement des forces régulières américaines sur le territoire de la République Dominicaine constitue une agression contre le peuple dominicain; les Etats-Unis s'efforcent ainsi de maintenir intacte la dictature de Trujillo. C'est grâce à l'occupation militaire américaine que Trujillo est arrivé au pouvoir; étant lui-même un démocrate de style américain, il a été un collaborateur efficace de la démocratie entre guillemets. Balaguer a été imposé par Trujillo. Les Etats-Unis prétendaient ne pas entretenir de relations amicales avec son régime; cependant, prétextant qu'il fallait défendre Balaguer contre ceux qui l'avaient amené au pouvoir, les Etats-Unis ont envoyé leurs avions, leurs bateaux et leurs porte-avions. Balaguer a alors menacé son peuple de l'intervention étrangère. Ainsi, par l'intermédiaire de l'infanterie de marine des Etats-Unis, on essaie de sauver une autre démocratie entre guillemets au profit de la civilisation occidentale.

96. On est ému au souvenir des milliers de Latino-Américains assassinés par les marines en 50 ans d'interventions continuelles, et au spectacle des navires des Etats-Unis qui, juste au moment où l'Assemblée générale étudie les moyens d'éliminer le colonialisme, sillonnent la mer des Antilles et menacent des peuples. Le peuple dominicain et tous les autres peuples latino-américains condamnent cette nouvelle agression.

97. Fidèle au souvenir de Simón Bolívar, de José Martí et de Benito Juárez, le Gouvernement révolutionnaire de Cuba a demandé que le Conseil de sécurité se réunisse d'urgence pour connaître de l'intervention yankee à Saint-Domingue. Le Conseil de sécurité doit condamner et faire cesser cette intervention, dont le but, au surplus, est de défendre la tyrannie de Trujillo contre le mouvement national de libération de Saint-Domingue. De la fermeté avec laquelle le Conseil de sécurité agira dépendra que cette intervention, que nous dénonçons comme une étape préalable à celle qui se prépare contre Cuba, ne dégénère en un grave conflit international.

98. Porto Rico constitue une position avancée du colonialisme yankee en Amérique latine. La lutte du peuple portoricain pour son indépendance a un parallèle historique dans celle de Cuba. C'est en 1868 que les guerres d'indépendance ont commencé à Porto Rico et à Cuba. Le Parti révolutionnaire cubain, qu'avait fondé José Martí, revendiquait l'indépendance de Cuba et de Porto Rico.

99. Les Etats-Unis ont fait de Porto Rico ce qu'ils appellent un Etat libre associé, dans le dessein de perpétuer son statut de territoire non autonome et de n'être pas obligés de fournir des renseignements en tant qu'Etat administrant, et encore moins de préparer le pays à l'indépendance. Il n'est pas besoin d'être expert en droit international pour comprendre que sous ce titre pompeux se dissimule le colonialisme le plus cynique. La souveraineté totale est la condition sine qua non d'un Etat indépendant. Il n'y a pas la moindre trace de souveraineté à Porto Rico. Non seulement on y trouve une armée étrangère d'occupation — l'armée des Etats-Unis —, mais plus de 10 bases sont disséminées sur ce petit territoire, dont une base atomique. On y constate aussi que l'impérialisme colonialiste des Etats-Unis va plus loin, et qu'avec les puissants moyens dont il dispose, il soumet le pays à un processus inhumain de dénationalisation. Porto Rico, comme Cuba et d'autres pays d'Amérique latine, s'est enrichi de l'apport de deux cultures: la culture espagnole et la culture noire. Nos peuples s'enorgueillissent de ce métissage.

100. On ne fait pas de différence, chez nous, entre hommes de races distinctes. Il n'y existe que l'être humain, quelle que soit la couleur de sa peau; "l'homme est plus que noir ou blanc", avait dit José Martí. Cependant, avec quelle justice un empire qui pratique l'apartheid à l'intérieur même de ses frontières peut-il gouverner un peuple comme celui de Porto Rico? La réponse est fort simple: ici même, à New York, les représentants peuvent se rendre compte, là où vivent les Portoricains, des conditions dans lesquelles ils travaillent et des possibilités qui leur sont offertes. Dans l'île, conformément à ce processus de dénationalisation, on leur a même imposé une langue autre que l'espagnol. Seule le patriotisme et les traditions nationales ont sauvé ce peuple frère qui résiste à ce traitement et le répudie.

101. Quant à l'autodétermination, qu'est-ce, à Porto Rico, sinon une farce des colonialistes américains? Comment, dans un pays occupé militairement par des forces étrangères, des élections peuvent-elles avoir pour but de déterminer si ces forces y séjournent légalement? Pourquoi don Pedro Albizu Campos, patriote, nationaliste, avocat sorti de Harvard, reste-t-il au secret en prison, bien qu'il soit âgé de 70 ans? Pourquoi ne permet-on pas à sa femme et à son avocat de communiquer avec lui? Don Pedro Albizu Campos, ce vieillard, est — les Américains le savent bien — un symbole de l'Amérique latine, et son existence même crie aux Latino-Américains et au monde: "Yankees, lâchez Porto Rico!"

102. Non seulement l'impérialisme américain fait de Porto Rico une colonie, mais il s'en sert pour exporter le colonialisme en Amérique latine. Tout récemment, c'est M. Moscoso, trafiqueur au pays qui l'a vu naître, que l'on a nommé directeur de l'Alliance pour le progrès. Rien ne pouvait blesser davantage la sensibilité latino-américaine que de faire passer l'aide économique par le canal d'un colonialiste. Il est prouvé que les Américains essaient d'appliquer à d'autres pays d'Amérique latine leur expérience portoricaine. M. Muñoz, gouverneur de son pays grâce à l'intervention étrangère, incarne l'esprit de collaboration des politiciens véreux du continent. La délégation cubaine demande l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) à Porto Rico, pays qui n'a pas encore atteint l'indépendance.

103. Nous ne craignons pas, pour notre part, de voir la question coloniale se convertir en un sujet de guerre froide, car c'est précisément ce prétexte que les colonialistes invoqueront pour retarder l'indépendance des territoires placés sous leur domination.

104. En face du colonialisme, on ne peut adopter que deux attitudes: être pour l'indépendance et la souveraineté des peuples, ou être contre. La guerre froide n'a rien à voir dans la lutte qui oppose des peuples à ceux qui les réduisent en esclavage. Et si les puissances coloniales estiment un seul instant que ces peuples deviennent des sources de guerre froide, qu'elles renoncent sans tarder à leur pouvoir colonial et cessent d'offrir des arguments à cette transformation.

105. Nous ne souscrivons pas non plus au critère de l'apprentissage de l'indépendance. Le prétexte constamment invoqué par les puissances coloniales pour maintenir leurs colonies en esclavage consiste à dire qu'elles ne sont pas préparées à l'indépendance. L'indépendance totale est la condition première du développement de toute société, et l'on ne saurait admettre qu'il y ait des sociétés indépendantes et d'autres qui ne le sont pas. Nous ne croyons pas à l'existence de sociétés semi-indépendantes, malgré certaines formules pompeuses qui tendent à le faire accroire. L'indépendance n'admet pas de moyen terme: elle est ou elle n'est pas. Quant à l'indépendance après un long délai, elle ne nous plaît pas non plus. L'existence du colonialisme est incompatible avec la Charte des Nations Unies, et elle constitue pour la paix une grave menace.

106. Enfin, nous estimons qu'il faut faire rentrer dans le cadre de l'abolition du colonialisme la liquidation des bases militaires en territoire étranger.

Ce sont les colonialistes ou les néo-colonialistes qui ont imposé la majorité de ces bases, spécialement celles que les grandes puissances ont installées sur le territoire des petits Etats. La présence de forces militaires des grandes puissances dans les petits Etats compromet et menace leur indépendance. Ce ne sont pas des bases destinées à la défense du territoire métropolitain; ce sont des bases destinées à l'agression contre les petits Etats où elles se trouvent et contre les petits Etats voisins. Notre patrie souffre de la présence des troupes américaines dans la base navale de Guantánamo et s'y oppose. La présence de bases militaires étrangères est une manifestation du pouvoir colonial. Notre patrie souffre de la présence des troupes américaines dans la base navale de Guantánamo et s'y opposera par tous les moyens légaux et en toutes occasions. C'est ce qu'elle fait aujourd'hui encore.

107. Nous nous félicitons que les pays réunis à Belgrade^{3/} aient reconnu le bon droit de notre peuple:

"Ils reconnaissent aussi que la présence à Guantánamo (Cuba) d'une base militaire des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, au maintien de laquelle le gouvernement et le peuple de Cuba ont manifesté leur opposition, affecte la souveraineté et l'intégrité territoriale de ce pays."

108. La base de Guantánamo est une menace pour l'indépendance de Cuba et pour celle des pays d'Amérique latine. Là se concentrent et s'instruisent les forces mercenaires que les Américains et leurs agents entretiennent en permanence dans la zone caraïbe. C'est de là que partent les avions, les porte-avions et les navires quand il s'agit d'exercer une pression sur un des pays de l'hémisphère. C'est là que l'on forme les saboteurs et les assassins qui se sont mis au service de l'impérialisme. C'est là que l'on torture, que l'on tue. La résolution que nous sommes appelés à adopter à ce sujet doit mentionner explicitement la suppression de toutes les bases militaires à l'étranger.

109. Avant de conclure, nous voulons dénoncer devant l'Assemblée les projets agressifs que le colonialisme américain nourrit contre notre patrie et qui s'exécutent actuellement à partir des différentes bases américaines de la zone caraïbe et des bases situées dans les territoires que le néo-colonialisme américain occupe dans la région.

110. Petit pays à la longue tradition de lutte contre le colonialisme, pays qui se tient en garde contre les graves menaces de l'impérialisme américain, pays non compromis par des pactes militaires et qui désire la paix et le progrès des peuples, nous souhaitons que la résolution 1514 (XV) et celles que l'Assemblée adoptera pour lui donner effet réalisent leurs objectifs et que le colonialisme soit dans un très bref délai un mal des temps révolus, dont l'histoire ne parlera qu'en hommage à ceux qui ont lutté et qui sont morts pour sa disparition. A elle seule, la réalisation de cet objectif justifierait aux yeux des générations futures la raison d'être de notre organisation.

111. M. COMAY (Israël) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'événement le plus passionnant de notre époque est la liquidation, en 20 ou 30 ans, de grands empires coloniaux bâtis en l'espace de cinq siècles. Ce processus n'est pas encore achevé, il est vrai, d'ardentes luttes pour la liberté requièrent l'attention de notre organisation, en particulier en Afrique. Mais un fait demeure: depuis la seconde guerre mondiale, des centaines de millions de sujets ont accédé à l'indépendance politique; nos drapeaux flottent maintenant devant cet immeuble, parmi ceux d'autres Etats Membres souverains, et nos porte-parole siègent ici sur un pied d'égalité avec ceux d'autres pays plus anciens.

112. Il n'est pas besoin de rappeler ici la longue histoire des souffrances causées par le système colonial. Ces pages d'histoire sont souillées d'oppression et d'exploitation. Mais notre génération a assisté à une révolution dans la pensée humaine, et beaucoup de ce qui était autrefois considéré comme naturel est devenu aujourd'hui intolérable. De ce fait, la domination étrangère s'est dans bien des cas terminée sans effusion de sang et sans heurts, et le transfert de pouvoirs s'est effectué de façon ordonnée et concertée, comme nous espérons que ce sera bientôt le cas pour tous les territoires encore non autonomes. Il n'est que juste de noter que la politique actuelle des deux principales puissances coloniales, le Royaume-Uni et la France, repose sur leur désir de conduire à l'autonomie les territoires qui sont encore sous leur dépendance. C'est en fait autant les colonisateurs que les colonies qui trouvent leur liberté dans l'abolition du colonialisme, système non seulement immoral, mais encore périmé. En se retirant de leur propre gré, les puissances coloniales se débarrassent de leur fardeau et se soustraient aux vexations et aux haines qui accompagnent aujourd'hui la domination d'un peuple sur un autre. Selon la façon dont ils se retireront, ils pourront espérer conserver l'amitié de leurs sujets. Il appartient aux nouveaux Etats, une fois l'indépendance acquise, de décider ou non de maintenir volontairement avec l'ancien pays métropolitain une association fondée sur l'égalité, le respect et des avantages mutuels.

113. A cet égard, ma délégation estime que la proposition néerlandaise qui concerne la Nouvelle-Guinée est en tout point conforme à l'esprit et à la lettre de la Charte et de la résolution 1514 (XV), adoptée à la dernière session de l'Assemblée. Comment ne pas se féliciter d'un plan qui vise à transférer la souveraineté aux habitants d'un territoire avec l'aide directe de l'ONU, en laissant au peuple intéressé le soin de décider de son propre avenir après l'indépendance?

114. Dans le mémoire [A/4954] distribué par la délégation néerlandaise le 4 novembre 1961, nous avons été frappés de lire: "Les Pays-Bas désirent irrévocablement mettre un terme à leur passé de puissance coloniale". Il y a plusieurs siècles, leurs navigateurs et leurs marchands ont étendu l'influence hollandaise à de lointains pays d'outre-mer, et leur petit pays du nord-ouest de l'Europe est devenu un centre de richesse, de puissance et de culture. En mettant un point final à ce chapitre impérial, les Pays-Bas ne feront que rehausser la vraie grandeur d'un peuple dont le génie créateur, l'énergie, l'habileté, l'amour de la liberté et la tolérance lui a acquis l'admiration générale.

115. Le principe de l'indépendance nationale est un de ceux qui éveillent les sentiments les plus profonds et les souvenirs les plus vénérés du peuple israélien. Il y a des milliers d'années, nous luttons pour notre indépendance contre les grands empires de l'Antiquité. Encore et encore, leurs armées ont foulé aux pieds notre liberté; encore et encore, l'étendard de la révolte s'est redressé, car un peuple ne peut jamais être définitivement vaincu tant que l'amour de la liberté vit en son cœur. Les événements décrits dans l'Ancien Testament forment la toile de fond historique de l'indépendance qu'Israël a retrouvée en 1948, après une lutte acharnée et douloureuse contre la puissance mandataire et l'invasion des armées arabes.

^{3/} Conférence de Belgrade, 1961 (publié par la Revue politique internationale, Belgrade, No 5, p. 22).

116. A notre grand regret, certains porte-parole arabes ont tenté d'exploiter le présent débat à des fins de propagande anti-israélienne. Pour ne pas faire perdre son temps à l'Assemblée, ma délégation s'est abstenue d'exercer son droit de réponse dans chacun de ces cas, et je me bornerai ici à quelques observations générales. Le thème principal de cette attaque est qu'Israël est de quelque manière associé au colonialisme. C'est une affirmation aussi rebattue que gratuite, à laquelle on a recours dans le fallacieux espoir d'influencer les amis qu'Israël compte en Asie et en Afrique. Voici comment a réagi le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Israël quand certains ont porté les mêmes accusations pendant la quinzième session de l'Assemblée, lors de la discussion générale:

"Nous savons que cette accusation est absurde. Les Arabes le savent aussi et, ce qui est plus important, les Africains le savent. Les dirigeants des pays d'Afrique ne vont pas se laisser épouvanter par des slogans stupides. On peut être sûr qu'ils jugeront leurs relations avec les autres pays d'après l'attitude adoptée par ces pays à l'égard d'eux, et non d'après des discours de propagande prononcés à New York." [907ème séance, par. 87.]

117. Un des discours que nous avons entendus ce soir a été celui du représentant de la Jordanie, lequel, au cours d'une dissertation historique des plus singulières, a découvert que la formation de l'Etat d'Israël est liée à deux guerres mondiales. Je n'ai pas souvenir de l'existence d'Etats arabes sur la carte avant l'écrasement de l'Empire ottoman par les Alliés dans la première guerre mondiale; d'autres Etats arabes sont nés à la suite de la seconde guerre mondiale. Personne que je sache n'en a pris prétexte pour contester la légitimité d'aucun d'entre eux. Je suis même surpris d'entendre de tels arguments de la part du représentant d'un royaume créé par le Royaume-Uni dans le cadre d'un règlement d'après guerre. Israël, lui, est né sur le champ de bataille; c'était en 1948, alors que les armées des pays environnants tentaient d'écraser notre pays par les armes.

118. Le sionisme est apparu dans les temps modernes comme le mouvement de libération nationale d'un petit peuple qui a retrouvé son indépendance dans son ancienne patrie, où ses ancêtres vivaient en hommes libres avant la première invasion arabe du pays. Nous sommes prêts à vivre avec nos voisins dans un esprit de coopération pacifique et à développer avec eux notre région pour le bien de tous ceux qui l'habitent. C'est absolument tout ce que nous demandons aux autres pays, qu'ils soient proches ou lointains.

119. La résolution 1514 (XV) adjure tous les pays de mettre fin "à toutes les pratiques de ségrégation et de discrimination"; ma délégation éprouve devant cet appel une profonde émotion. Au cours des siècles, notre peuple a été la victime traditionnelle de telles pratiques. Nous avons survécu à de nombreux épisodes sombres et sanglants dont nous avons nous-mêmes connu l'apogée quand les nazis ont formé le projet d'apporter au problème juif ce qu'ils nommaient la "solution finale" par le génocide et l'extermination d'un peuple entier. Nous rejetons avec passion toutes les notions de race inférieure ou de race supérieure, et l'idée que l'on puisse déterminer le statut d'un homme dans la société en fonction de ses traits ou de la couleur de sa peau. Nous constatons avec satisfaction que le Conseil économique et social a soumis sur ce point un projet de résolution [A/4886] à l'Assemblée générale et que la Quatrième Commission est saisie d'un autre projet de résolution [A/C.4/L.707], qui condamne catégoriquement la discrimination raciale dans les territoires non autonomes.

120. Aucune nation, c'est vrai, ne pourrait aisément oublier les tragédies du passé; l'important est pourtant de construire l'avenir. Comme tous les autres pays nouveaux, Israël s'est aperçu que la proclamation de l'indépendance n'est qu'un commencement et non une fin. Nous espérons que, dans l'esprit du projet nigérien de résolution [A/L.357], la période 1960-1970 verra la fin de tout ce qui subsiste de domination étrangère en Afrique. Au fur et à mesure que les chefs africains assument la responsabilité de guider les destinées de leur pays, ils se posent la question que nous autres, les pays nouvellement libérés qui siégeons déjà ici, nous sommes posés: "Et après le colonialisme?" C'est en effet dans un monde troublant que nous sommes nés, un monde dans lequel le génie humain peut atteindre la lune ou les étoiles, mais menace de détruire la vie sur notre planète, un monde où certains peuples jouissent d'une abondance inimaginable jusqu'à nos jours, alors que d'autres sont encore arriérés et pauvres. Tout en étant en butte à des pressions de l'extérieur, les chefs nationaux de nos nouveaux pays doivent s'attaquer aux énormes problèmes qui se posent à l'intérieur de leurs frontières. Nous sommes en même temps tenus de donner à nos peuples la stabilité politique, les libertés civiles, une administration efficace, une armée, une réforme agraire, le développement industriel, une formation technique, des services sanitaires, l'enseignement, des logements, des moyens de transport et même de l'eau potable. Aucun Etat nouveau ne dispose des ressources financières ou des compétences qu'exige un tel programme. Cela vaut d'ailleurs pour bien d'autres pays anciens, comme en témoigne la prévoyante "Alliance pour le progrès" que les Etats-Unis et les républiques d'Amérique latine ont récemment conclue.

121. Il faut de toute nécessité et de toute urgence que les possédants et les déshérités partagent leurs ressources, dans un esprit d'intérêt bien compris et la conviction que notre monde est devenu un et indivisible.

122. Bien que l'assistance doive incomber surtout aux nations industrielles avancées, les pays plus petits et plus pauvres peuvent faire beaucoup pour s'entraider. Au cours de ses 13 années d'indépendance, Israël a appris avec orgueil et satisfaction qu'il pouvait partager avec d'autres son expérience de bâtisseur de nation, les techniciens qu'il a formés et les méthodes de coopération qu'il a mises au point. Nous collaborons maintenant avec beaucoup d'autres pays tant économiquement que techniquement. Cette collaboration se manifeste de bien des façons: entreprises communes en matière de construction, d'aménagement hydraulique et de navigation, constitution de villages en coopératives agricoles, mouvements de jeunesse, circulation des travailleurs et autres domaines dans lesquels les méthodes audacieuses et nouvelles d'Israël appellent l'attention des pays qui sont aux prises avec des problèmes analogues. Nous avons des centaines d'experts qui travaillent dans ces pays et environ un millier de boursiers viennent chez nous chaque année. Nous sommes persuadés qu'une coopération pacifique et constructive de cet ordre est la base la plus solide de l'amitié entre nos peuples. Les dirigeants africains et asiatiques savent parfaitement que, pour édifier une nation, une assistance pratique dispensée sur place importe plus aux pays qui se libèrent du colonialisme que des protestations de fraternité qui ne seraient que des mots vides.

123. Le gouvernement et le peuple d'Israël appuient de tout cœur la liquidation du colonialisme, partout et sous toutes ses formes. Nous avons déjà exposé clairement devant l'Assemblée nos idées sur certaines situations déterminées: il n'est pas besoin de les répéter. Partout où l'indépendance n'est pas encore acquise, elle doit l'être rapidement. Mais l'indépendance politique ne suffit pas à elle seule. Elle risque de rester sans signification si elle ne s'accompagne pas du progrès économique et social et d'une vie meilleure pour les citoyens du nouvel Etat. On ne peut pas remédier par la seule indépendance à la faim, la maladie et l'ignorance que connaît encore la plus grande partie de l'humanité, à ces maux historiques que ne peut guérir qu'une aide généreuse et massive, accordée non pas comme une charité, mais parce que nous sommes tous membres de la même famille humaine.

124. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant du Portugal, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

125. M. DE MIRANDA (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je remercie le Président de m'avoir autorisé à prendre la parole ce soir; je promets d'être très bref. Une fois de plus, je dois prendre la parole à l'Assemblée pour rectifier ce que le représentant de l'Inde a dit au sujet de mon pays. Dans son discours d'hier, il a mis en cause la politique d'outre-mer du Portugal et a conclu en ces termes:

"Cependant, si elles font partie du Portugal, elles devraient jouir des droits civiques et de toutes les égalités qui accompagnent ces droits." [1058ème séance, par. 149.]

126. Le représentant de l'Inde travestit la vérité. S'il est si peu au courant des affaires portugaises, il doit chercher à en savoir davantage. Entre-temps, je puis lui dire que moi-même, Goan, et mes ancêtres depuis de nombreuses générations avons été citoyens portugais et avons joui d'un statut de pleine égalité avec les autres citoyens portugais nés en Europe. Pour la même raison, nous autres Goans jouissons de la même indépendance que les citoyens portugais d'Europe.

127. Toutefois, d'après la propagande indienne, pour donner l'indépendance aux Goans, il faut les annexer à l'Union indienne, bien que le Premier Ministre de l'Inde ait lui-même admis que nous avons, nous Goans, une culture différente. A noter que cette annexion ne doit pas être fonction de la volonté du peuple goan, car, ainsi que nous l'avons déclaré devant l'Assemblée [1025ème séance] et en avons apporté la preuve irréfutable à la Quatrième Commission, le Premier Ministre de l'Inde lui-même a déclaré le 6 septembre 1955 que les Portugais devront abandonner Goa, même si les Goans veulent qu'ils y restent. Même si les Goans veulent qu'ils y restent — c'est ce qu'a dit le Premier Ministre de l'Inde; je ne fais que répéter.

128. Le représentant indien a dit, dans son exposé d'hier que "le représentant du Portugal avait contesté certaines déclarations de notre premier ministre" [1058ème séance, par. 151]. Nouveau travesti de la vérité. Nous n'avons mis en doute aucune déclaration du Premier Ministre de l'Inde. Nous n'avons cité ces déclarations que pour les déplorer. Qui nous a mis au défi de démontrer l'authenticité de ces déclarations? C'est le représentant de l'Inde à la Quatrième Commission. Nous avons relevé le défi et avons prouvé cette authenticité d'une façon qui ne devrait laisser de doute chez aucun homme de bonne foi.

129. Mais aujourd'hui, nous en resterons au discours que le représentant de l'Inde a prononcé hier pour corroborer les intentions machiavéliques de l'Union indienne. Le représentant de l'Inde a dit: "Par conséquent, si l'agression se poursuit indéfiniment, si nos populations risquent à tout moment d'être abattues de sang-froid, s'il n'y a pas de liberté civile et si la paix et la sécurité de notre pays d'une part et celles du monde entier sont mises en danger par les conflits incessants qui se déroulent sur notre territoire, nul n'a le droit, ni même en vertu de la Charte des Nations Unies, ni en vertu d'aucune loi morale, d'aucune règle d'éthique politique, d'aucun principe régissant le comportement des Etats sur le plan international, d'empêcher un Etat souverain comme le nôtre de parachever la libération de l'ensemble du pays." [Ibid.]

130. Dans ce bref paragraphe, il y a presque autant d'inexactitudes que de mots. Que cherche à insinuer le représentant de l'Inde? Que les Goans sont Indiens? Ethniquement peut-être, mais juridiquement, politiquement et culturellement, non. Ou bien le représentant de l'Inde veut-il insinuer que le tout petit territoire de Goa commet une agression contre la grande Union indienne et met en danger la sécurité de l'Union indienne et du monde? Seule une imagination délirante ou un individu d'une incroyable légèreté peut s'aventurer à émettre une telle idée. Quel intérêt et quel avantage peut avoir le petit territoire de Goa à attirer sur lui la colère de la puissante Union indienne? N'est-il pas vrai que le Portugal a offert de négocier et est toujours prêt à négocier avec l'Union indienne sur les problèmes que pose la proximité géographique? Mais l'Union indienne ne veut pas négocier, parce qu'elle veut annexer Goa au nom de l'unité politique de l'Inde géographique, unité politique qui n'a jamais existé que dans la légende, non dans l'histoire et qui, aujourd'hui, est irréalisable, étant donné l'existence, dans l'Inde géographique, d'autres territoires qui sont aussi souverains et indépendants que l'Union indienne elle-même.

131. Le représentant indien a poursuivi: "Nous avons longtemps essayé de négocier, nous avons maintenu des missions à Lisbonne, nous avons négocié avec les Portugais." [Ibid., par. 153.] Le représentant de l'Inde travestit la vérité une fois de plus. Qu'est-ce que l'Union indienne a essayé de négocier? L'Union indienne a seulement réclamé que Goa lui soit livré. Cette mise en demeure s'appelle-t-elle négociation dans le dictionnaire indien? Quand le Portugal a refusé de s'y soumettre, le gouvernement indien a fermé sa légation de Lisbonne et a demandé au Portugal de fermer la légation de New Delhi. Dans un esprit de bon voisinage, le Portugal a cherché à négocier, mais l'Union indienne n'a voulu entendre parler de rien d'autre que de l'annexion de Goa.

132. Après avoir rappelé l'affaire dont est saisie la Cour internationale de Justice, le représentant indien a déclaré: "Nous nous sommes toujours conformés à la Charte et au droit des gens." [Ibid.] L'Union indienne l'a prouvé par son agression sanglante et par l'usurpation des enclaves portugaises de Dadra et de Nagar Avelli, comme par sa déclaration unilatérale d'annexion de ces enclaves, en dépit de l'arrêt de la Cour internationale de Justice qui reconnaît la souveraineté du Portugal sur les territoires en question et son droit d'accès à ces territoires^{4/}.

133. Revenant à la question du recours à la force contre Goa, le représentant de l'Inde a déclaré:

"Toutefois, le moment venu, si l'agression se poursuit de telle sorte ..."

Quelle agression? De quelle sorte? Jusqu'ici, l'agression est toujours venue de l'Inde.

"Que des milliers et des milliers d'êtres humains soient obligés d'endurer cette situation ..."

Quelle situation? Goa vit en paix.

"Si l'opinion publique de notre pays ne peut plus supporter de voir que des frères de race sont assassinés."

Manifestement par les terroristes qui, venant de l'Union indienne, s'infiltrèrent dans le territoire de Goa et qui ont déjà tué plusieurs Goans, que maintenant le représentant indien appelle cyniquement ses frères.

"Et si le territoire devient également une arène où s'affrontent des intrigues internationales."

Supposition aussi vague que malintentionnée.

"Alors, en qualité d'Etat souverain, nous nous réservons le droit de prendre les mesures qui nous plaisent, sous réserve de respecter le droit des Goans." [Ibid., par. 154.]

134. Le représentant de l'Inde a dit lui-même que Goa est une des besognes inachevées de l'Union indienne, et que le peuple indien s'impatiente. Je n'ai rien besoin d'ajouter sur la nature réelle du prétendu "cas de Goa". C'est un cas de l'impérialisme de l'Inde, qui a déjà plusieurs victimes à son actif et jette depuis quelques années des regards de convoitise sur l'Inde portugaise, laquelle, depuis 450 ans, est partie intégrante du Portugal.

135. Le représentant de l'Inde a beau jeu d'employer la force contre Goa: Goa est petit et faible; mais il n'ose pas parler d'employer la force pour recouvrer les territoires indiens que New Delhi revendique et qu'un voisin plus puissant occupe actuellement. Les journaux d'aujourd'hui le savent bien.

136. Je voulais parler surtout de Goa, mais, avec votre permission, Monsieur le Président, je désirerais ajouter quelques mots au sujet de l'Angola. Je n'ai pas besoin d'en parler longuement, puisque la question est à l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée.

137. Le représentant de l'Inde a parlé de cruauté et de meurtres en Angola. Si je comprends bien, il veut parler de la cruauté et des meurtres imputables aux terroristes; sinon, je lui demanderai de bien vouloir réviser son code de moralité.

138. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant des Etats-Unis, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

139. M. BINGHAM (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais répondre très brièvement à certaines observations du représentant de Cuba. Je regrette de devoir le faire à cette heure tardive et d'abuser de la patience des délégations, mais la plupart des propos du représentant de Cuba n'ont absolument rien à voir avec la question en discussion. Ses déclarations appellent cependant une brève réponse.

140. Il est intéressant de voir que le représentant de Cuba a fait allusion à la révolution de Cuba contre l'Empire espagnol en 1898, sans rappeler le grand rôle que les Etats-Unis ont joué dans cette révolution. Il a fait état d'extravagantes accusations d'intervention des Etats-Unis en République Dominicaine. Ses accusations feront demain l'objet d'un débat au Conseil de sécurité. Pour l'instant, je ne veux poser qu'une question. Qui parle au nom de la République Dominicaine? Est-ce le gouvernement de ce pays, ou bien le gouvernement cubain?

141. Le représentant de Cuba a traité assez longuement de la situation de Porto Rico, ce qui n'entre pas davantage dans le cadre de la question discutée actuellement par l'Assemblée. En 1953, l'Assemblée générale a précisé, dans sa résolution 748 (VIII), que le peuple portoricain avait choisi librement un statut de Commonwealth en libre association avec les Etats-Unis, et que Porto Rico était donc entièrement autonome. Aujourd'hui comme hier, si 10 p. 100 du corps électoral de Porto Rico désiraient demander un changement de ce statut, ils seraient libres de le faire, et un plébiscite serait organisé.

142. On pourrait souligner qu'il y a à Porto Rico un parti de l'indépendance — qui n'est pas celui au nom duquel le représentant de Cuba a parlé, mais un parti qui s'attache à exprimer ses revendications dans le cadre du régime démocratique d'élections libres qui est celui de Porto Rico. Il est intéressant de noter que, lors des trois dernières élections, les voix recueillies à Porto Rico par le parti de l'indépendance n'ont pas cessé de diminuer. En 1952, il a obtenu 126 000 voix sur les 600 000 suffrages exprimés; quatre ans plus tard, 86 000 voix sur un total de 700 000; en 1960, il n'avait plus que 21 000 voix sur les 700 000 suffrages exprimés et n'a pas pu élire un seul représentant au Parlement.

143. Le groupe dont a parlé le représentant de Cuba est un groupe marginal, qui ne s'intéresse ni aux institutions démocratiques ni aux désirs de la population, mais ne cherche qu'à imposer au peuple de Porto Rico, par des méthodes violentes, sa volonté fanatique. Ce groupe ne participe pas aux élections, car ses membres savent fort bien que, les élections étant libres, le résultat ne pourrait que les couvrir de confusion.

144. S'il est ici un représentant qui doute de la liberté totale des élections à Porto Rico, je lui conseille d'aller là-bas la prochaine fois que des élections s'y dérouleront, pour se rendre compte par lui-même. Il sera le bienvenu. Bien entendu, le représentant de Cuba ne sait rien des élections libres, car, dans son pays, toutes les élections sont supprimées.

145. Nous sommes fiers des progrès de Porto Rico, progrès réalisés dans la liberté. Je voudrais simple-ment rapporter quelques exemples de ces progrès dont nous sommes fiers. Au cours des 20 dernières années, la production brute de Porto Rico a augmenté de 150 p. 100, le nombre des automobiles de 600 p. 100, les exportations de 500 p. 100, et les importations de 800 p. 100. L'espérance de vie des habitants est passée de 46 à 68 ans: tout ceci en 20 ans seulement.

146. Nous sommes fiers aussi de Teodoro Moscoso, qui est aujourd'hui à la tête de l'Alianza para el Progreso. Loin d'être une insulte à nos amis d'Amérique latine, cette nomination est bienvenue d'eux. Que cette Alianza para el Progreso, programme audacieux tourné vers l'avenir, ait à sa tête un homme qui partage avec les pays d'Amérique latine le grand héritage de la culture hispano-américaine — et qui se trouve être en même temps citoyen des Etats-Unis et fier de l'être —, c'est pour eux une source de fierté.

147. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la Jordanie, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

148. M. EL-FARRA (Jordanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je regrette d'intervenir à une heure aussi tardive, mais la déclaration que nous venons d'entendre appelle vraiment une réponse.

149. Peu importe comment le représentant d'Israël a essayé de dépeindre la situation; une chose est claire et fort difficile à nier: l'idéal du sionisme est d'amener de plus en plus d'immigrants juifs dans notre pays, d'acquérir une plus grande part de notre terre et de continuer à déplacer nos populations. Voilà ce qu'est le sionisme. Et ceux qui veulent connaître la vérité à ce sujet s'apercevront qu'il n'y a aucune différence entre le nazisme, mentionné par le représentant d'Israël, et le sionisme; l'un et l'autre sont fondés sur la notion de race; l'un repose sur le concept de la suprématie nazie, l'autre sur celle du peuple élu: le peuple sioniste. L'un et l'autre reposent sur le concept du "Lebensraum". Le sionisme veut se constituer un territoire pour réunir en Palestine tous les exilés du monde, et son désir d'expansion répond à cet objectif.

150. L'un et l'autre disposent d'une cinquième colonne. Les nazis en avaient une; les sionistes possèdent dans le monde entier leurs groupes de pression et leurs organisations, qui constituent partout un Etat dans l'Etat, une ville dans la ville. Ces groupes sionistes ont pour mission d'exercer des pressions et de modifier en faveur des sionistes la politique des pays intéressés, même si ce changement va à l'encontre des intérêts de ces pays mêmes. Ce sont ces pressions qui ont amené la promesse d'une patrie et celle d'un Etat, ces promesses que j'ai évoquées dans ma déclaration, promesses faites par de grandes puissances étrangères qui n'avaient jamais possédé cette terre et qui n'avaient aucun droit ou titre à transmettre. Ce sont ces pressions qui ont entraîné la création, sur notre sol, du petit Etat étranger que nous y voyons actuellement.

151. Aucun travesti de vérité ne peut changer ce tableau. Les faits sont les faits; ils sont tenaces et bien difficiles à nier.

152. Le PRESIDENT: La parole est au représentant de l'Inde, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

153. M. NATWAR SINGH (Inde) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il n'est pas dans la politique de ma délégation de se livrer à des polémiques avec la délégation portugaise. Le dossier des méfaits du Portugal est bien connu de l'Assemblée. Tout ce que je peux dire, c'est que nous répudions en bloc les informations — dirai-je les déformations? — que le représentant du Portugal a soumises à l'Assemblée il y a quelques instants.

La séance est levée à 23 h 25.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole aux orateurs inscrits sur ma liste, je voudrais attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée sur le fait qu'elle est saisie de quatre projets de résolution [A/L.354, A/L.355, A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 et A/L.367 et Add.1] concernant le point 88 de l'ordre du jour, et d'un seul projet de résolution [A/L.357 et Add.1] concernant le point 22, a. J'espère que vendredi prochain nous aurons terminé la discussion générale sur ces deux points et que nous pourrons alors aborder l'examen des projets de résolution et passer au vote le lundi 27 novembre 1961. Je voudrais à cette occasion faire appel à toutes les délégations pour qu'elles prennent toutes dispositions utiles en vue d'une discussion fructueuse et rapide des projets de résolution concernant ces deux points de notre ordre du jour.

2. M. IQBAL (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le Pakistan a eu l'honneur de figurer au nombre des auteurs de la résolution 1514 (XV), adoptée par l'Assemblée générale le 14 décembre 1960. Cette résolution avait été présentée par le groupe des délégations africano-asiatiques et adoptée au titre de la question intitulée: "Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux", dont l'inscription avait été proposée par l'Union soviétique pour discussion à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale. A la même session, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique avaient proposé l'inscription de la question intitulée: "Assistance à l'Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance"; à la précédente session [995^{ème} séance], l'examen de cette question a été ajourné, mais nous l'examinons maintenant en même temps que la question intitulée: "La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux".

3. Dans la résolution 1514 (XV), l'Assemblée générale "Proclame solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Elle déclare que:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

4. Ma délégation constate avec plaisir que l'impérialisme est sur le point de disparaître et que le monde s'engage heureusement sur la voie qui doit le conduire à la solution du problème du colonialisme. L'an dernier, nous nous sommes réjouis de voir s'ouvrir cette ère spectaculaire de l'indépendance africaine et nous avons été particulièrement heureux d'accueillir à l'Organisation 16 nouveaux Etats africains. Cette année, nous avons eu le plaisir aussi de recevoir le Sierra Leone dans cette communauté internationale d'Etats souverains. Nous espérons y accueillir le Tanganyika vers le milieu de décembre. Il y a lieu de penser que l'Ouganda, le Ruanda-Urundi et le Samoa-Occidental accèderont aussi à l'indépendance dans un proche avenir. La reprise des négociations pour la reconnaissance et la réalisation de l'indépendance de l'Algérie est imminente.

5. Nous espérons sincèrement que ces négociations aboutiront très rapidement à la réalisation de cet objectif qui nous est cher, l'indépendance de l'Algérie, et que nous pourrons assister à l'admission de l'Algérie à l'Organisation des Nations Unies avant la fin de la présente session de l'Assemblée.

6. Il est indéniable que le bilan de ce qu'ont fait certaines puissances coloniales est bien meilleur que celui d'autres puissances et, sur ce point, ma délégation n'hésite pas à rendre hommage à ceux qui le méritent. Nous pensons en particulier au Royaume-Uni, qui a contribué plus que toute autre puissance coloniale à la cause de l'indépendance. La politique britannique qui consiste à orienter les colonies vers l'autonomie est diamétralement opposée à celle de certaines autres puissances coloniales qui prétendent, en vertu d'une fiction, ne pas considérer leurs territoires d'outre-mer comme des colonies et, en conséquence, ne sont pas disposées à prendre pour politique de préparer ces territoires à l'autonomie ou l'indépendance.

7. Cependant, nous n'avons pas l'intention de procéder à une étude comparative du bilan des diverses puissances coloniales. Nous avons toujours estimé que le système du colonialisme était insoutenable, que ce soit sous sa forme classique ou sous d'autres formes. Il y a de nombreuses formes d'exploitation, de subjugation et de domination des peuples, pour lesquelles on n'a pas encore trouvé un terme général. Il est incontestable cependant que le maintien du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, quelque justification rationnelle ou imaginaire que l'on veuille en donner, entrave la libération et l'émancipation de l'homme qui veut se libérer de sa subjugation par autrui, et constitue un anachronisme auquel il faut mettre fin dès que possible.

8. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée en 1960 par l'Assemblée générale, a énoncé certains principes. Ces principes sont conformes à la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et aux dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies. La question dont nous sommes maintenant saisis est de savoir comment mettre ces principes en application. Peut-on fixer une date limite unique à laquelle le colonialisme serait supprimé? Ma délégation estime que l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit trouver les moyens propres à l'application effective de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance dans un délai aussi court que possible, mais les circonstances sont très diverses et nous ne tenons pas à voir se reproduire ailleurs les événements du Congo.

9. Deux aspects du colonialisme appellent un examen attentif. Premièrement, c'est essentiellement la puissance administrante qui est directement responsable en ce qui concerne l'octroi de l'indépendance à un territoire colonial. En conséquence, sans la coopération et le concours de la puissance administrante, il est oiseux de fixer une date limite ou d'examiner à quelle époque tel ou tel territoire devrait accéder à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

10. Deuxièmement, la résolution 1514 (XV) stipule expressément que:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance";

mais l'expérience du Congo nous a montré cependant qu'il est nécessaire de former rapidement les populations des territoires dépendants, particulièrement à l'exercice du pouvoir politique, afin qu'elles puissent s'acquitter des responsabilités qui sont celles d'un Etat souverain. Ce n'est qu'ainsi que l'on assurera le transfert pacifique et ordonné des pouvoirs, en épargnant au pays la confusion et le désordre.

11. Partant de ces considérations, ma délégation estime que la fixation d'une date limite générale, absolue et immédiate, uniformément applicable à tous les territoires dépendants du monde entier, est dénuée de réalisme et arbitraire. Il faut considérer le cas de chaque territoire dépendant en tenant compte des conditions et circonstances qui lui sont particulières. Une date limite unique serait trop rapprochée pour un territoire et trop éloignée pour un autre.

12. La seule méthode pratique permettant de résoudre la difficulté d'une date limite unique à terme ou d'une date limite générale, absolue et immédiate consiste à envisager une série de dates limites, fixées pour différents territoires selon les différentes conditions et circonstances.

13. Mais avant de fixer cette série de dates limites pour différents territoires, il serait nécessaire que l'Assemblée générale examine l'état d'évolution politique de chaque territoire en consultation avec la puissance administrante intéressée, ainsi qu'avec les représentants de l'opinion politique, afin d'être à même de déterminer si la population d'un territoire est prête à assumer les responsabilités inhérentes à l'indépendance dans le plus court délai et de fixer alors une date limite appropriée à chaque territoire pour son accession à l'indépendance.

14. Donc, à notre avis, l'application effective de la Déclaration exige la création par les Nations Unies d'un dispositif conçu pour surveiller et hâter le processus de décolonisation. A ce sujet, je désire parler du projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] que le Pakistan a l'honneur de présenter avec d'autres pays d'Asie et d'Afrique. Ce projet de résolution prévoit la création d'un comité spécial de 17 membres qui seront désignés par le Président de l'Assemblée générale au cours de la présente session. Ce comité, en consultation avec les autorités compétentes et avec l'aide d'organes des Nations Unies comme le Conseil de tutelle, le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes et les institutions spécialisées intéressées, étudiera l'application de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), formulera des suggestions et des recommandations quant aux progrès réalisés et à la mesure dans laquelle la Déclaration est mise en œuvre, et fera rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-septième session.

15. Etant donné que ce comité sera chargé de surveiller et hâter le processus de décolonisation en consultation et en collaboration avec les autorités administrantes sans s'ingérer en aucune façon dans l'administration des territoires dépendants, nous espérons sincèrement que le projet de résolution pourra être accepté par tous et adopté à une très forte majorité.

16. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354] relatif à la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, nous avons exposé brièvement notre position dans la déclaration faite à l'Assemblée au nom du Pakistan dans la discussion générale le 3 octobre [1025^e séance]. Nous avons déclaré alors et nous répétons aujourd'hui que si la proposition des Pays-Bas avait porté sur un territoire colonial ou sur un territoire sous tutelle, elle pourrait servir de modèle pour les autres puissances coloniales qui pourraient s'inspirer utilement de la proposition contenue dans ce projet de résolution afin de préparer leurs propres colonies ou territoires sous tutelle à l'autonomie ou à l'indépendance. Mais la proposition contenue dans ce projet de résolution ne peut permettre de régler le différend sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, différend qui oppose depuis tant d'années les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie et qui a troublé leurs relations amicales. Il est évident qu'un différend de cette nature ne peut être réglé que par voie d'accord et non par une déclaration unilatérale, ou par le recours à un artifice ou à une proposition conçue et avancée par l'une des parties au différend et inacceptable pour l'autre partie.

17. Certes, à première vue, la proposition des Pays-Bas semble tendre à réaliser l'un des principaux objectifs des Nations Unies, celui qui consiste à favoriser l'autodétermination. Mais un instant de réflexion permet de constater que si l'Assemblée générale adoptait cette proposition malgré l'opposition de l'Indonésie, non seulement elle ne favoriserait pas l'autodétermination, mais elle se prononcerait de façon unilatérale sur un délicat différend qui dure depuis des années. Nous ne voyons aucun motif de supposer que l'Indonésie ne souhaiterait pas favoriser l'autodétermination de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, si celle-ci la désirait. Mais avant d'engager un tel processus, les revendications de l'Indonésie visant la reconnaissance de sa souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et le transfert de l'administration de ce territoire doivent être tranchées de façon juste et équitable. L'adoption de toute autre méthode ne servirait qu'à exacerber la tension qui existe déjà entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas et à introduire dans ce différend un nouvel élément qui en rendrait le règlement amiable plus difficile encore.

18. Ma délégation se permet de faire observer au Gouvernement des Pays-Bas qu'il aurait avantage à retirer ce projet de résolution et à rechercher un règlement à l'amiable de son différend avec l'Indonésie au sujet de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Nous avons des motifs d'espérer qu'en se déclarant prêts à transférer la souveraineté et l'administration du territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale aux Nations Unies, les Pays-Bas apportent à la situation un élément sur la base duquel un règlement du différend à l'amiable pourrait devenir possible. Toutefois, cela demanderait du temps et, à cette fin, il est nécessaire que le projet de résolution proposé par les Pays-Bas soit retiré. Nous espérons sincèrement que cette demande sera dûment examinée par le Gouvernement néerlandais. Cependant, s'il jugeait devoir insister pour que son projet de résolution soit mis aux voix, nous devrions nous y opposer pour les raisons qui viennent d'être indiquées.

19. M. TSEVEGMID (République populaire mongole) [traduit du russe]: La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], adoptée le 14 décembre 1960 par une très forte majorité des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a eu un retentissement considérable parmi les peuples du monde entier et a recueilli leur chaleureuse approbation.

20. C'est avec une profonde satisfaction que la République populaire mongole a reçu la nouvelle de l'adoption de cette déclaration historique, alors qu'à l'époque elle n'était pas encore, chacun le sait, Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et n'a pas eu le plaisir de voter pour la Déclaration directement dans cette salle. Cependant, le Gouvernement de la République populaire mongole exprimant la volonté de son peuple et s'inspirant du caractère pacifique de sa politique étrangère a immédiatement déclaré sa solidarité avec les idées élevées de cette déclaration.

21. Le peuple mongol, qui pendant plus de 200 ans a souffert de toutes les horreurs et de toutes les humiliations d'une autorité étrangère, a accédé à l'indépendance il y a 40 ans et a connu toute la beauté et toutes les joies d'une vie libre et indépendante; il a pu se convaincre par lui-même des magnifiques perspectives de développement économique et culturel ouvertes à des peuples libérés de la domination coloniale. Voilà pourquoi le peuple mongol a toujours soutenu et soutiendra toujours à l'avenir les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux, pour leur liberté et leur indépendance. C'est pour cette raison que la République populaire mongole, depuis les premiers jours de son existence, mène une politique de pleine reconnaissance des droits des peuples à l'autodétermination des Etats nationaux et s'élève sans cesse contre le colonialisme, sous quelque forme qu'il se manifeste.

22. Sous la poussée puissante du mouvement de libération nationale des peuples, soutenu par tous les peuples du monde épris de liberté, beaucoup de pays se sont libérés ces derniers temps de l'oppression du joug colonial. La lutte des peuples coloniaux pour la libération continue à prendre une ampleur toujours plus grande et maintenant il est peu probable que quelqu'un doute que le système colonial soit condamné à périr.

23. Cependant, le système colonial n'est pas encore définitivement détruit. Sous l'oppression coloniale se trouvent encore 88 territoires avec plus de 70 millions d'habitants. La délégation de la République populaire mongole remarque avec beaucoup de tristesse que les puissances coloniales font des tentatives pour freiner le processus historique inévitable de libération des peuples coloniaux et s'opposent par tous les moyens à l'application des dispositions de la Déclaration concernant la mise en pratique de mesures immédiates en vue de la liquidation du colonialisme.

24. Une des violations les plus criantes des dispositions de la Déclaration est constituée par les guerres coloniales qui se déroulent actuellement en Algérie, en Angola et en Oman. Ces guerres coûtent la vie à des dizaines et des centaines de milliers de personnes, laissent des masses de gens sans abri et sans moyens d'existence. Les colonisateurs ont accentué encore la terreur et la répression contre la population d'autres colonies: Ruanda-Urundi, Sud-Ouest africain et Rhodésie. Dans toutes les colonies, qu'elles soient sous l'autorité de l'Angleterre ou du Portugal, de la France ou des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, de la Belgique ou de l'Union sud-africaine, le sang coule; un arbitraire barbare, l'illégalité, une effrayante discrimination raciale y règnent et la population est acculée aux limites du désespoir.

25. Permettez-moi de vous rappeler à ce propos une déclaration faite par un habitant du Sud-Ouest africain, M. Zedekia Ngavirue, devant le Comité du Sud-Ouest africain de l'Assemblée générale.

26. M. Ngavirue a quitté le Sud-Ouest africain le 24 mai 1961 en étant délégué par la SWANU (Union nationale du Sud-Ouest africain) pour donner au Comité des renseignements de première main sur la situation dans le territoire. M. Ngavirue parlant de la situation dans le Sud-Ouest africain déclare avec colère:

"Aujourd'hui, dans le Sud-Ouest africain, vous constaterez que l'Africain moyen a faim, qu'il est sans abri, qu'il est à peine vêtu ou en haillons, et il s'agit pourtant là de besoins fondamentaux; son espérance de vie est de 35 ans ... Dans le Sud-Ouest africain, vous constaterez aujourd'hui que l'homme blanc, lui, est gras, soigné, qu'il vit dans une habitation moderne, bien meublée, ou même parfois dans un château; il possède une belle automobile, et d'une façon générale, mène une existence opulente. Il a une espérance de vie d'environ 65 ans ..."

27. Ceci est un exemple de la situation à laquelle la prétendue "mission civilisatrice" des colonisateurs a amené la population du Sud-Ouest africain dans la République sud-africaine.

28. Aussi étrange que cela puisse paraître, aujourd'hui encore, les colonisateurs affirment avec force que leur "mission civilisatrice" n'est pas encore terminée, que les peuples des colonies ne sont pas encore "préparés" à une existence libre et indépendante. Les représentants des Etats coloniaux essaient de réhabiliter le colonialisme qui s'est complètement discrédité lui-même. Ils disent que si le colonialisme a été mauvais, ce fut dans le passé, mais que maintenant le colonialisme se serait "amélioré", et veulent imposer encore pour des dizaines d'années ce colonialisme soi-disant "amélioré".

29. Les événements des dernières années ont montré que le colonialisme continue comme par le passé à jouer un rôle de parasite, que ses buts n'ont pas changé; il est destiné à assurer les bénéfices des monopoles aux dépens de l'exploitation des colonies; et seule la liquidation des régimes coloniaux donnera aux peuples coloniaux la possibilité de bénéficier enfin de la science, de la technique et de la culture modernes.

30. L'expérience historique nous montre le manque de fondement de la théorie colonialiste sur l'impréparation des peuples des colonies à l'indépendance. Les pays libérés du joug colonial se développent à un rythme rapide et se débarrassent de l'héritage colonial passé. Dans cette salle, il y a beaucoup de représentants de pays qui étaient récemment encore des colonies, et qui maintenant jouent un grand rôle dans les affaires internationales et résolvent avec succès les problèmes de développement économique et de progrès culturel de leurs pays.

31. Tout ce que nous venons de dire est confirmé par le développement de la République populaire mongole depuis sa libération de la domination étrangère. Durant ces 40 ans de vie libre et indépendante, la République populaire mongole non seulement a éliminé les restes d'une domination étrangère, mais a même obtenu de grands succès dans la vie politique, économique, culturelle et sociale du pays.

32. Jusqu'à la renaissance de l'indépendance nationale, la Mongolie était un des pays les plus arriérés de l'Asie; son peuple subissait le joug cruel de l'étranger et de ses valets. L'économie du pays était de caractère pastoral. Il n'y avait ni système d'instruction publique, ni services de santé publique.

33. Ce n'est que grâce à la victoire du mouvement de libération nationale et à l'expulsion des exploiters étrangers que le peuple mongol est devenu effectivement maître dans son pays.

34. Le peuple mongol, devenu maître chez lui, a choisi la voie d'un développement non capitaliste. Ces 40 ans de l'histoire de notre pays ont montré toute la justesse, toute la vitalité d'un tel développement.

35. Les difficultés, dues à un extrême retard économique et technique, qui se dressaient devant le peuple mongol sur la route de son développement, ont été heureusement surmontées grâce au labeur héroïque de notre peuple et à l'aide désintéressée du premier pays socialiste du monde, l'Union soviétique.

36. Pendant les années de pouvoir populaire, notre pays a créé à neuf une industrie nationale. Des branches de l'industrie lourde et légère, telles que l'énergie, les industries minières, pétrolière, métallurgique, l'industrie du cuir, le textile, l'industrie alimentaire, etc., se développent rapidement. Grâce à l'industrialisation du pays, la production industrielle a quadruplé dans ces dernières décennies.

37. Notre agriculture se développe aussi avec succès. La caractéristique de ce développement de notre agriculture est qu'à côté de l'élevage, branche essentielle de notre économie agricole, qui était jadis la seule forme de l'économie nationale, est apparu un nouveau secteur, l'agriculture proprement dite. La création de cette nouvelle branche de l'économie agricole nous a permis de nous suffire à nous-mêmes avec notre propre production de céréales.

38. Grâce au succès obtenu dans les domaines de l'agriculture et de l'industrie, la République populaire mongole, de pays d'élevage, s'est transformée en pays à la fois agricole et industriel.

39. Aujourd'hui, le peuple mongol entreprend avec enthousiasme la réalisation du troisième plan quinquennal de développement de l'économie nationale (1961-1965); ce plan prévoit que la production industrielle doublera, alors que les surfaces cultivées seront presque triplées.

40. De grands succès ont été aussi obtenus dans les domaines de la culture, de la science et de la santé publique. L'une des plus importantes réalisations est la liquidation de l'analphabétisme de la population et la réussite de l'introduction de l'enseignement primaire général dans les localités rurales, et de l'école de sept classes pour les enfants des villes.

41. Actuellement, chez nous, un individu sur six étudie dans quelque établissement scolaire, environ huit personnes sur 1 000 fréquentent un établissement d'enseignement supérieur.

42. Une des plus importantes réalisations de notre culture nationale est le développement de la recherche scientifique, des arts, de la littérature et l'accroissement des milieux intellectuels nationaux. L'Académie des sciences de la République populaire mongole comprend de nombreux instituts de recherche.

43. Depuis les premiers jours de l'organisation des services de santé publique dans le pays, la population reçoit les soins médicaux gratuits. Actuellement il y a un médecin pour 1 000 personnes.

44. Ainsi, toute l'histoire de la renaissance nationale de la Mongolie montre que même les pays les plus en retard du point de vue économique ont toute possibilité de conquérir et de consolider leur indépendance nationale et politique et de marcher d'un pas assuré dans la voie d'un développement autonome, indépendant et libre.

45. J'ai cité ces quelques faits sur le développement de notre pays uniquement pour que l'Assemblée générale puisse encore une fois se convaincre combien la liberté et l'indépendance sont prisées et chéries par les grandes et les petites nations en général, par les peuples coloniaux et dépendants en particulier.

46. On le sait, la Déclaration de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a condamné la thèse de la prétendue "impréparation" des peuples des colonies à l'indépendance. Il est dit dans la Déclaration:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

47. Si l'ONU en a ainsi décidé, il ne doit pas y avoir en pratique d'atermoiements dans la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration: il ne doit pas y avoir d'obstacle à la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme, ceci par l'adoption de mesures urgentes et concrètes, aboutissant au transfert des pouvoirs dans les colonies aux organes des gouvernements choisis par la population même de ces pays.

48. L'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre fin au colonialisme et cela sans retard ni réserve. On ne peut donc admettre que, pendant des dizaines d'années encore, certains peuples doivent subir l'esclavage colonial comme le voudraient les colonialistes. D'après l'opinion de la délégation de la République populaire mongole, la proposition tendant à ce que l'année 1962 devienne celle de la liquidation définitive et générale des régimes coloniaux apparaît comme tout à fait conforme à la réalité. Une telle proposition a été formulée à la Conférence des pays non alignés à Belgrade^{1/} et nous la soutenons pleinement.

49. La délégation de la République populaire mongole appuiera également les autres propositions prévoyant la prise de mesures effectives pour la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration.

50. Ce serait une erreur de supposer qu'avec l'adoption de la Déclaration nous allons en terminer avec le colonialisme. Nous, représentants d'Etats libres et indépendants, et notre délégation en est convaincue, n'avons pas le droit d'admettre les attermoissements que l'on voit se produire dans l'application de cette déclaration.

51. Notre délégation croit et espère que l'écrasante majorité de ceux qui sont ici reconnaîtra que la méconnaissance des droits de nations, de pays entiers, que le mépris de la dignité humaine, que la discrimination raciale sont un crime de la plus haute gravité contre l'humanité et en contradiction avec l'esprit de la Charte des Nations Unies.

52. Le peuple mongol et le Gouvernement de la République populaire mongole partagent entièrement et soutiennent les justes revendications des peuples luttant pour leur liberté et leur indépendance.

53. On sait que, pendant des centaines d'années, les colonisateurs ont soutiré les richesses des pays coloniaux, ont pompé la sueur des peuples de ces pays. Maintenant ces colonialistes répriment cruellement les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples qui luttent pour la liberté et l'indépendance de leur pays. Les événements d'Algérie, d'Angola, du Congo et de beaucoup d'autres territoires sous domination coloniale le montrent clairement.

54. Le monde entier sait que les peuples des pays coloniaux d'Afrique et d'Asie ne menacent pas la sécurité des autres pays; ainsi, par exemple, les Angolais ne menacent pas le territoire du Portugal; les habitants de Goa et de l'Irian occidental n'essaient pas de s'emparer du territoire de la Hollande ou du Portugal, alors qu'au contraire le Portugal et la Hollande font la guerre sur les territoires desdits pays; par là même ils — les colonisateurs — menacent la paix et la sécurité des peuples.

55. La délégation de la République populaire mongole estime que la politique du Gouvernement des Pays-Bas tendant à amputer la République d'Indonésie de l'Irian occidental est non seulement une atteinte à l'intégrité territoriale et à la souveraineté politique de l'Indonésie, pays qui est de nos amis, mais aussi une violation flagrante de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux adoptée à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

56. Les tentatives des Pays-Bas d'intégrer au Royaume des Pays-Bas l'Irian occidental, représentant 22 p. 100 de l'ensemble du territoire de la République d'Indonésie, avec son million d'habitants, ne sauraient être considérées autrement que comme une manifestation de la politique colonialiste agressive de la Hollande, comme un essai pour conserver sa domination sur cette partie inaliénable du territoire indonésien.

57. La délégation de la République populaire mongole partage entièrement l'opinion de la délégation de l'Indonésie à ce sujet et appuie et continuera à appuyer les justes revendications du peuple indonésien et du Gouvernement de la République d'Indonésie pour l'intégration totale de son territoire lequel comprend plus de 3 000 îles.

58. Notre délégation estime que tous les efforts du Gouvernement de la République d'Indonésie pour liquider l'administration coloniale de la Hollande dans l'Irian occidental, et pour y établir la pleine juridiction de la République d'Indonésie, constituent un grand apport du peuple et du Gouvernement de l'Indonésie à la cause de la liquidation du colonialisme, à la cause du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité dans l'Asie du Sud-Est et le monde entier.

59. L'Organisation des Nations Unies ne doit ni prier ni supplier les colonialistes de renoncer à leur politique coloniale dans les pays d'Asie et d'Afrique, mais doit les obliger à se soumettre aux résolutions de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies qui expriment la volonté de tous les peuples.

60. Il va de soi que la condition première pour l'octroi de l'indépendance aux colonies est l'arrêt des sanglantes guerres coloniales, la fin de la répression contre les participants au mouvement de libération nationale et le retrait de toutes les troupes étrangères des colonies. Il est indispensable de créer dans ces pays les conditions qui donneraient la possibilité à leurs peuples d'établir des organes du pouvoir nationaux et de bâtir leur vie sans ingérence étrangère.

61. L'application d'une série de mesures concrètes de ce genre est proposée dans le projet de résolution [A/L.355] soumis à l'examen de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale par la délégation de l'Union soviétique. La délégation de la République populaire mongole votera pour ce projet.

62. Tout retard dans l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux est incompatible avec les buts et les principes élevés de notre organisation et il est gros de conséquences dangereuses pour la cause de la paix.

63. La liquidation complète du honteux système colonialiste ferait disparaître une des dangereuses sources de guerre, favoriserait une détente dans les relations internationales et assurerait la paix et la sécurité internationales.

64. S'inspirant du principe inviolable du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, la délégation de la République populaire mongole exprime le sentiment de particulière sympathie de son peuple pour la lutte héroïque que mènent les peuples coloniaux pour la liberté et l'indépendance, les assure de sa solidarité, exige résolument l'application sans réserve de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, adoptée à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

M. Bitsios (Grèce), vice-président, prend la présidence.

65. M. FARAH ALI OMAR (Somalie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Dans son intervention au cours de la discussion générale, le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la République somalienne, M. Abdullahi Issa, a déclaré au sujet de la question du colonialisme qui est l'objet de notre discussion:

"Le colonialisme n'est pas seulement une inquiétante et persistante source de conflits locaux. C'est également une menace directe à la paix et à la sécurité du monde. L'examen des problèmes du colonialisme a fait apparaître une certaine communauté de vues, puisque l'on a reconnu qu'il faut avant tout et surtout considérer le colonialisme du point de vue de la dignité de l'homme et de la paix et de la sécurité dans le monde." [1027ème séance, par. 127.]

M. Issa a ajouté:

"Je crois qu'indépendamment de la menace qu'il représente pour la paix internationale, le colonialisme est un des fléaux que l'humanité non seulement abhorre, mais encore est déterminée à éliminer définitivement." [Ibid., par. 128.]

66. C'est dans ce même esprit que ma délégation a appuyé sans réserve, l'an dernier, la résolution de l'Assemblée générale qui condamne le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. C'est dans ce même esprit que nous sommes fiers d'être parmi ceux qui ont présenté le projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] actuellement en discussion.

67. Mais avant d'aborder le fond de la discussion, nous tenons à dire que nous avons écouté avec un grand intérêt les déclarations des orateurs qui nous ont précédés. D'après toutes les déclarations entendues, il ressort qu'à de très rares exceptions, regrettables — je répète, de très rares exceptions regrettables —, l'Assemblée est presque unanime dans son désir sincère de mettre rapidement fin à cette situation historique qui appartiendra bientôt au passé. Le plus tôt sera le mieux, car, de nos jours, il n'est guère concevable qu'un gouvernement ou une nation ayant du bon sens conteste sérieusement le droit fondamental de tout peuple d'exercer pleinement son droit à l'autodétermination. Il est presque inadmissible, à un moment où tant de peuples d'Afrique, dont la Somalie, ont accédé à la pleine indépendance, que d'autres peuples puissent encore être empêchés de se joindre à la communauté des nations libres et de jouer tout leur rôle non seulement dans l'édification de leur propre avenir, mais aussi dans celle d'un monde meilleur.

68. Comme d'autres nations qui ont connu le colonialisme, nous pensons qu'aujourd'hui le stade des récriminations est passé. Notre seule tâche consiste à trouver les moyens de mettre fin au colonialisme où qu'il puisse encore exister. La seule façon d'y parvenir est d'élaborer une procédure assurant aux peuples intéressés le droit d'exprimer librement leurs vœux quant à leur avenir.

69. Dans cet esprit, ma délégation est disposée à accueillir favorablement toutes propositions présen-tées à cette fin, à savoir l'indépendance complète et la liberté de tous les peuples encore soumis à la domination coloniale.

70. A ce sujet, ma délégation désire adresser un appel aux Gouvernements de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal en leur demandant de voir la réalité en face et de tenir compte du fait certain que, s'il est possible d'opprimer ou d'enchaîner l'homme dans son corps, il est impossible de réprimer ses aspirations et de contrôler son esprit. On peut détruire l'homme, mais ses idéaux demeurent. Ces deux pays croient-ils vraiment qu'une politique de répression brutale et de domination constitue la seule réponse à la revendication des peuples qui réclament l'autodétermination et l'indépendance? Nous pensons sincèrement que non. Nous espérons que cet appel sera accueilli dans l'esprit dans lequel il est formulé.

71. A la Conférence des pays non alignés tenue à Belgrade^{2/}, le Président de la Somalie, M. Adan Abdullah Osman, condamnant le colonialisme, a déclaré:

"Je voudrais appeler votre attention sur le fait que nous avons tendance à considérer le colonialisme comme la domination d'une nation européenne sur une nation asiatique ou africaine et à lancer des invectives à l'adresse des puissances coloniales blanches, tout en gardant un complet silence sur la domination d'une race par une autre race de la même couleur. Cela se passe de nos jours en Europe, en Asie et en Afrique."

Il a poursuivi:

"Il serait donc souhaitable dans l'intérêt de la paix mondiale d'étudier de près tous les différends de ce genre et de prier des Etats amis d'user de leurs bons offices auprès des parties au différend pour les amener à un règlement à l'amiable."

72. La population de la province frontalière septentrionale du Kenya, qui est en majeure partie d'origine somalienne, a demandé au Gouvernement britannique la possibilité d'exprimer librement ses vœux qui sont de se séparer du Kenya et de se joindre à la République somalienne avant que le Kenya accède à l'indépendance. Sans vouloir, en faisant cette demande, retarder d'un seul jour l'accession de nos frères du Kenya à l'indépendance — telle est la politique officielle de mon gouvernement —, nous devons faire observer que la Somalie se souvient avec angoisse et émoi que c'est aussi le Gouvernement britannique qui a fait cadeau à trois reprises de parties importantes de notre chère patrie à nos frères les Ethiopiens. Outre cette pénible séparation forcée, cet acte ignominieux de colonialisme a assombri l'atmosphère de sérénité et de fraternité qui, autrement, aurait pu régner dans les relations entre la Somalie et l'Ethiopie. Notre délégation croit devoir déclarer publiquement que nous demandons au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de s'abstenir, à l'avenir, de mesures aussi injustes et arbitraires que celles qu'il a prises dans le passé contre le peuple et l'intégrité territoriale de la Somalie, sans pour autant retarder l'octroi prochain de l'indépendance à nos frères du Kenya.

73. Le Gouvernement britannique a accordé l'indépendance à plusieurs millions d'êtres humains et s'est ainsi acquis un immense fonds de bonne volonté. Ne serait-il pas préférable, pour le maintien de bonnes relations dans l'avenir entre les nations d'Afrique orientale et centrale et la Grande-Bretagne, que le Gouvernement britannique mène une politique tendant à accorder la liberté aux peuples d'Afrique centrale comme il le fait actuellement pour le Tanganyika, l'Ouganda et le Kenya?

^{2/} Tenue du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

74. L'Algérie et la Somalie française sont les seuls territoires coloniaux encore détenus en Afrique par le Gouvernement français. Le fait que le Gouvernement français continue à garder ces deux territoires contre la volonté de leurs habitants affecte sensiblement la compréhension mutuelle, la coopération et l'amitié entre la France et les peuples du continent africain. J'ai l'espoir que l'esprit qui a incité le Gouvernement français à accorder l'indépendance à 15 Etats africains frères représentés ici aujourd'hui ne se démentira pas et que l'Algérie et la Somalie française pourront très prochainement exprimer librement leurs vœux sur leur avenir grâce à une autodétermination impartialement appliquée, en évitant ainsi de nouvelles effusions de sang.

75. Pour terminer, nous voulons exhorter l'Assemblée à voter à l'unanimité le projet de résolution en discussion [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Ce projet de résolution qui mettra en application la décolonisation marquera l'aube d'une ère où la concorde, la coopération et l'amitié régneront entre tous les peuples de notre planète. Toute tentative pour s'opposer à ce courant d'indépendance et de liberté fondé sur la libre expression de la volonté des peuples intéressés ne fera qu'aviver les haines et ajouter aux conflits mondiaux.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

76. M. VAKIL (Iran): La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], dont l'Assemblée examine actuellement les mesures et les moyens de mise en application, a incontestablement marqué un tournant dans l'évolution de la communauté internationale. Mon pays, sans avoir jamais été directement soumis au joug colonial, a toujours été en contact avec les différentes manifestations de ce phénomène historique et ainsi peut prétendre avoir une conception objective et juste du colonialisme.

77. L'Iran est fier d'avoir toujours soutenu, sans condition ni réserve, la cause des peuples colonisés. Au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée, ma délégation a eu l'occasion d'exprimer largement ses vœux sur le problème colonial dans son ensemble et, par sa participation active à la préparation de la Déclaration, elle a donné de nouvelles preuves de l'importance qu'elle attache et de l'appui sans réserve qu'elle apporte au mouvement de libération des peuples colonisés. Aussi me contenterai-je, en 1961, de faire quelques observations sur les conséquences d'ordre politique et juridique qui découlent de la résolution 1514 (XV).

78. On ne saurait bien saisir le sens et la portée de cet acte, et la place de choix qu'il occupe dans l'histoire des relations internationales, sans avoir présent à l'esprit le chemin difficile et souvent tortueux qu'a suivi, depuis la création de l'ONU, le mouvement de libération des peuples coloniaux, à l'intérieur et à l'extérieur de cette organisation.

79. L'un des buts essentiels de l'ONU est, selon le paragraphe 2 de l'Article premier de la Charte, d'aider les peuples colonisés à disposer d'eux-mêmes, et les Chapitres XI, XII et XIII de la Charte précisent les responsabilités importantes qui incombent à notre organisation dans ce domaine.

80. Les dispositions de ces chapitres constituaient incontestablement, en 1945, un progrès en ce qui concerne les territoires sous tutelle et les territoires non autonomes.

81. Selon ces dispositions, l'ONU a la responsabilité de se préoccuper de l'avenir des territoires non autonomes et de surveiller l'évolution des populations qui ne sont pas encore libres d'administrer leurs propres affaires, afin de les conduire vers la pleine autonomie et l'indépendance.

82. Sans être à l'abri de tout reproche, il faut reconnaître que l'application des dispositions des Chapitres XII et XIII de la Charte a abouti, dans l'ensemble, à des résultats satisfaisants et que l'ONU a pu jouer un rôle déterminant dans l'accession d'un grand nombre de pays colonisés à l'indépendance. La présence dans cette salle de représentants de nombreux Etats anciennement sous tutelle ou non autonomes et la contribution précieuse qu'ils apportent à la collaboration internationale sont autant de preuves indubitables de l'importance du rôle joué par l'Organisation dans ce domaine. Avec la collaboration des autorités administrantes, l'œuvre de notre organisation dans l'exercice du régime international de tutelle a été, dans la plupart des cas, couronnée de succès.

83. Après l'accession imminente à l'indépendance du Tanganyika et du Samoa-Occidental, il ne restera plus que trois des 13 territoires placés à l'origine sous le régime international de tutelle. Les résultats obtenus ont ainsi justifié, dans une large mesure, les espoirs qu'on avait placés dans le régime de tutelle. Nous attendons avec impatience le jour, qui n'est pas très éloigné, où le Conseil de tutelle pourra déclarer qu'il s'est entièrement acquitté des tâches qui lui avaient été confiées aux termes de la Charte.

84. Si l'œuvre de l'ONU a été en général satisfaisante dans les territoires sous tutelle, tel n'a pas toujours été le cas en ce qui concerne les territoires non autonomes. Les dispositions du Chapitre XI de la Charte, par suite du refus catégorique et obstiné de certaines puissances coloniales de remplir leurs obligations internationales, sont restées, dans certaines régions du monde, lettre morte. Je ne veux pas parler ici des cas particuliers qui seront discutés dans d'autres circonstances. Qu'il me soit néanmoins permis de rappeler avec une profonde tristesse que, en ce moment même où nous discutons de l'abolition du système colonial, des milliers d'êtres humains continuent encore d'être les victimes des pratiques et des sévices coloniaux.

85. En dehors de ces cas exceptionnels, on peut dire, ainsi que les documents préparés par le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes le laissent entendre, que certains progrès d'ordre économique, social et autre ont été réalisés dans ces territoires. Mais il faut ajouter que ces progrès sont loin de satisfaire les exigences de notre temps. On peut dire qu'en principe le rythme des progrès, dans les territoires où ils ont été réalisés, était souvent sinon toujours dépassé par le rythme du mouvement d'émancipation des peuples colonisés.

86. La période 1946-1960 a montré que le mouvement de libération des peuples opprimés est entré dans une nouvelle phase. Ce qui était considéré par la Charte comme un idéal est maintenant un fait accompli et ce mouvement historique a cessé d'être une affaire interne des puissances coloniales pour devenir un important problème international. En face de cette évolution historique, l'ONU devait se prononcer. Elle l'a fait en donnant, au moyen de la Déclaration, une interprétation des principes énoncés dans la Charte, interprétation qui était à la fois juste et conforme aux exigences de l'heure.

87. Le succès ou l'échec de notre organisation dépend de la façon dont elle s'adapte aux besoins du temps. L'ONU ne peut s'en tenir à une conception statique du monde telle qu'elle a été formulée il y a 15 ans; elle doit être en contact constant avec la réalité vivante et la refléter. La Déclaration n'est en effet que l'adaptation aux conditions actuelles du monde du principe de l'autodétermination des peuples établi par la Charte en 1945. Je me rallie, à ce sujet, à l'opinion d'un homme dont le nom restera gravé dans l'histoire comme le plus grand artisan de l'œuvre de la collaboration internationale. Je veux parler du regretté Secrétaire général, Dag Hammarskjöld, lorsqu'il dit à la page 2 de l'Introduction au rapport annuel du Secrétaire général sur l'activité de l'Organisation [A/4800/Add.1]:

"La résolution sur le colonialisme adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session peut être considérée comme proclamant de nouveau dans son ensemble, et de façon plus détaillée, le principe énoncé dans la Charte. Jusqu'à présent, cette évolution s'est traduite par la création d'un grand nombre de nouveaux Etats nationaux et par une augmentation révolutionnaire du nombre des Membres de l'Organisation."

88. Ailleurs dans le même document, à propos de l'importance du problème de l'autodétermination des peuples, il est dit — et je cite:

"C'est, là encore, une question dont l'Assemblée générale est saisie depuis des années et qui restera vraisemblablement au premier plan de ses préoccupations jusqu'à ce que l'on parvienne à un résultat définitif qui consacre la pleine application de ces principes fondamentaux dans le sens indiqué par la résolution de l'an dernier."

89. De l'avis de ma délégation, la Déclaration représente le point culminant de l'évolution progressive de l'opinion publique internationale, et la mise en œuvre de ses dispositions constitue un facteur important de la préservation de la paix et de la sécurité dans le monde.

90. Du point de vue juridique, on peut dire que cette résolution a apporté des éléments nouveaux au droit international. Les déclarations étatiques ont toujours été considérées comme l'une des sources des règles du droit international. Ce qui différencie la Déclaration des déclarations étatiques des siècles précédents, c'est que, au lieu d'être l'émanation de la volonté de quelques puissances appartenant à une région géographique limitée, elle exprime la volonté de la quasi-unanimité des membres de la communauté internationale actuelle. De plus, ce qui lui donne une force et une valeur particulières, c'est que la volonté des Etats y coïncide entièrement avec les aspirations des peuples. Le rôle de plus en plus important de la volonté des peuples dans la création des normes juridiques interétatiques est le résultat des changements radicaux qui se sont produits depuis 15 ans dans la structure et l'organisation politico-sociale du monde.

91. Au moment où le système colonial est condamné par tous ceux qui veulent que l'intérêt du monde prime l'intérêt particulier d'une puissance quelconque; au moment où nous envisageons des mesures concrètes pour faire disparaître les derniers vestiges du colonialisme, la question qui se pose est de savoir si la réalisation de ce but sera le fruit de luttes sanglantes, au cours desquelles périront encore des milliers d'êtres humains, ou si l'on trouvera le moyen, comme ce fut déjà le cas dans plusieurs pays qui ont récemment accédé à l'indépendance, de permettre à cette évolution historique inévitable de continuer son cours dans la paix et le calme.

92. Notre époque est celle d'une évolution rapide et on peut dire révolutionnaire de la communauté internationale. La vitesse est devenue la condition indispensable du succès de toute entreprise humaine. Cette observation est particulièrement valable pour ce qui est de l'évolution ou plutôt de la disparition du système colonial. Les méthodes classiques qui pouvaient aboutir dans le passé à des résultats satisfaisants ne répondent plus aux exigences de notre époque — époque du dynamisme révolutionnaire.

93. En examinant l'application de la Déclaration, nous devons poursuivre inlassablement notre idéal, désormais incontesté, d'un monde où aucun peuple ne serait dominé par un autre, mais nous devons aussi tenir compte des moyens pratiques pour le réaliser. Pour que le transfert des pouvoirs aux peuples coloniaux soit effectué dans les meilleures conditions, l'ONU doit prendre en considération les conditions propres de chaque territoire. Certains principes énoncés dans la résolution 1541 (XV) du 15 décembre 1960 constituent, à nos yeux, des critères valables pour apprécier les mesures concrètes qui aideraient les territoires encore dépendants à accéder à l'indépendance.

94. L'élément primordial dans le transfert des pouvoirs, ses modalités et ses conditions est, sans aucun doute, la volonté de la population de chaque territoire. Or, il est de la plus grande importance que les autorités administrantes permettent à ces populations de s'exprimer sur leur avenir en toute liberté et par des moyens démocratiques.

95. L'une des idées les plus illogiques consiste, à notre avis, à vouloir appliquer sans discernement les mêmes méthodes à des populations ayant des antécédents psychologiques et politiques différents. Tout en étant convaincus que les mesures destinées à effacer les derniers vestiges du colonialisme présentent un caractère d'urgence, nous estimons que, compte tenu des situations très variées et foncièrement différentes des territoires non autonomes, la fixation d'une date pour la fin du colonialisme s'avère forcément illogique et par conséquent impraticable.

96. Le projet de résolution [A/L.366] dont ma délégation a l'honneur d'être l'un des auteurs et dans la préparation duquel elle a eu une part active, contient des éléments nécessaires pour permettre à notre organisation de s'acquitter de sa lourde responsabilité à l'égard des peuples colonisés.

97. Il est indéniable que dans les circonstances présentes la collaboration des autorités administrantes, directement responsables de la situation des territoires dépendants et possédant de plus larges renseignements à leur sujet, constitue l'élément indispensable pour le succès des travaux du Comité spécial prévu par ce projet de résolution. Nous voulons espérer que les autorités administrantes, conscientes de la grande responsabilité qu'elles assument à l'égard de l'histoire, ne manqueront pas de prêter leur concours à l'organisation pour faire disparaître à jamais les derniers vestiges d'un système qui admettait sans ambages l'asservissement de l'homme par l'homme. La réussite de notre organisation dans l'accomplissement de cette tâche s'inscrira dans l'histoire comme une grande victoire, une victoire qui fera droit aux aspirations les plus nobles de l'humanité.

98. Avant de descendre de cette tribune, je voudrais adresser une dernière requête aux membres de l'Assemblée. Je voudrais particulièrement leur recommander le projet de résolution dont nous sommes coauteurs. Il est signé à l'heure actuelle par 38 puissances; j'espère qu'il recueillera l'assentiment unanime de l'Assemblée.

99. M. BINGHAM (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le 14 décembre de l'an dernier, l'Assemblée générale a adopté une résolution [1514 (XV)] dans laquelle elle a proclamé solennellement "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". A cette fin, l'Assemblée a déclaré:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

100. Comme tous les représentants le savent, je crois, les Etats-Unis se sont associés aux principes de cette déclaration historique. Nous serons heureux si, grâce à notre participation à ce débat et aux débats futurs, ainsi que par nos actes, tant dans le cadre des Nations Unies qu'en dehors, nous pouvons aider à la réalisation de ces nobles buts.

101. Quand on considère le problème du "colonialisme", terme qui a reçu bien des interprétations différentes au cours de nos débats, il importe au premier chef que nous nous comprenions et que nos idées soient claires en la matière. C'est le premier but de ce débat: libérer tous les esprits, le nôtre et ceux des autres, des préjugés, des soupçons et des demi-vérités qui compliquent et entravent notre quête commune du progrès.

102. Ensuite, il importe que nous examinions le problème du colonialisme dans son entier. Comme nous considérons tous ce problème et les autres problèmes à la lumière de notre propre expérience, certains d'entre nous ont eu tendance dans le passé à voir le colonialisme d'un point de vue limité ou partiel. Nos efforts ont ressemblé à ceux des aveugles de la fable dont chacun cherche à se représenter un éléphant en touchant chacun une partie différente de l'animal.

103. Aux Etats-Unis, par exemple, on se demande souvent pourquoi les puissances occidentales qui ont renoncé depuis 1945 à la domination qu'elles exerçaient sur près d'un milliard d'hommes et de femmes, continuent d'être critiquées et accusées d'impérialisme forcené, notamment par quelques-unes des nouvelles nations elles-mêmes, alors que l'Union soviétique qui, pendant la même période, a absorbé tant de pays indépendants d'Europe orientale, ou la Chine communiste qui, depuis 10 ans, écrase toute tentative d'autonomie du Tibet, sont traitées avec beaucoup plus de douceur par ces mêmes critiques.

104. Pour les Etats-Unis, l'esprit anticolonialiste n'est pas une nouveauté. Nous avons été la première nation des temps modernes à passer de la domination coloniale à l'indépendance. La Déclaration d'indépendance adoptée le 4 juillet 1776, document qui a fondé notre pays, contient ces vérités évidentes:

"... que tous les hommes naissent égaux, qu'ils sont dotés par leur Créateur de certains droits inaliénables, parmi lesquels la vie, la liberté et la recherche du bonheur; que pour assurer ces droits des gouvernements sont institués parmi les hommes, tirant leurs justes pouvoirs du consentement des gouvernés."

105. Les fondateurs des Etats-Unis ont déclaré — et c'est toujours la conviction de leurs descendants — que ces vérités ne sont pas l'apanage d'une race ou d'une nation particulière, mais appartiennent à toute l'humanité. Ce n'est pas le peuple de mon pays ou les seuls peuples représentés ici dont les hommes naissent égaux, ce sont "tous les hommes" et, en fait, l'influence de cette déclaration s'est fait sentir dans le monde entier et continue de se faire sentir de nos jours.

106. Mais nous nous souvenons, d'après notre propre expérience, que les Etats-Unis n'ont pas cessé de rechercher le sens profond du colonialisme même après avoir accédé à la liberté en tant que première grande nation anticoloniale. Longtemps après avoir conquis notre indépendance de la Grande-Bretagne et longtemps après avoir vu se cicatriser les plaies de notre révolution grâce à une amitié avec la mère patrie fondée sur les assises solides de la coégalité, nous avons continué — et nous continuons encore — à sonder les faits de l'histoire coloniale que nous avons vécue. Nous avons continué — et nous continuons encore — à rappeler aux générations successives d'Américains les circonstances de leur naissance à l'indépendance. Nous avons continué — et nous continuons encore — à redéfinir et à élargir le sens de l'autodétermination, dans une conception toujours plus large de la liberté, qui s'étend de la politique à la structure sociale, à la structure de l'enseignement, à la structure économique, à nos droits et devoirs dans la famille des nations.

107. Aux premiers temps de notre indépendance, nous avons toujours la tentation d'imputer toutes nos difficultés à notre ancien suzerain colonial, mais, à mesure que le temps passait, nous avons pu de mieux en mieux résister à cette tentation et regarder vers l'avenir plutôt que vers le passé. Nous avons été contraints de regarder en face les vérités concernant notre pays: où nous en étions, où nous voulions aller et comment y arriver. Et en regardant ces vérités en face, nous avons appris à travailler à des œuvres concrètes au profit de notre peuple.

108. Pour toutes ces raisons fondées sur notre propre expérience, la délégation des Etats-Unis applaudit les hommes d'Etat des nouvelles nations indépendantes qui forment de nouvelles associations dont tous les membres tireront avantage, sur une base d'égalité, avec diverses nations, y compris celles qui les dominaient autrefois. Nous applaudissons spécialement les hommes d'Etat toujours plus nombreux qui se refusent à employer des méthodes d'aventuriers de théâtre, qui apportent une contribution réaliste de très grande valeur à la solution des problèmes pratiques qui se posent aux Nations Unies et qui donnent ici, à leurs propres peuples, le meilleur exemple possible de la façon dont on travaille à construire une nouvelle nation.

109. Ainsi, nous qui sommes réunis dans cette salle de l'Assemblée, bien des choses nous rapprochent. Les sentiments de nos amis des nouvelles nations sur cette question du colonialisme ne choquent et n'offensent nullement le peuple américain. Au contraire, nous partageons ces sentiments et nous y applaudissons, nous nous considérons comme privilégiés de vivre à une époque où ces sentiments de liberté transforment la carte politique et inspirent les actes des hommes et des femmes dans le tiers du monde, à un rythme sans précédent dans l'histoire de l'humanité.

110. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a favorisé ce mouvement de libération depuis sa fondation. La Charte des Nations Unies exige des puissances administrantes qu'elles traitent les territoires coloniaux et les territoires dépendants non comme des sources de profit pour la puissance qui gouverne, mais comme l'objet d'une "mission sacrée" et un moyen de progrès pour les peuples dépendants. Cela est bien précisé à l'Article 73 du Chapitre XI de la Charte, intitulé "Déclaration relative aux territoires non autonomes". Cet article déclare que les puissances administrantes ont une responsabilité envers la communauté des nations, que les intérêts des populations autochtones ont la primauté et que parmi ces intérêts figurent le progrès vers l'autonomie, le développement de libres institutions et la réalisation des "aspirations politiques", ce qui a signifié l'indépendance dans la plupart des cas. Le même Article précise également que le rythme et les méthodes de ce progrès doivent tenir compte des "conditions particulières de chaque territoire et de ses populations et de leurs degrés variables de développement".

111. Depuis 15 ans que l'Organisation des Nations Unies existe, l'Article 73 a été appliqué avec une grande rapidité et une ampleur extraordinaire. Une quarantaine de pays, peuplés de plus de 800 millions d'habitants, ont accédé à l'indépendance depuis 1946. Presque tous sont Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et leurs représentants siègent dans cette salle. Dans l'Afrique seule, non moins de 22 Etats ont fait cette transition, si bien qu'aujourd'hui les deux tiers de l'Afrique sont libres et indépendants. D'autres Etats suivront dans les années prochaines.

112. Cette réussite a donné un élan puissant à la poussée vers l'indépendance et la pleine autonomie dans d'autres pays qui sont encore dépendants aujourd'hui et qui sentent qu'ils sont entraînés par le même grand courant de l'histoire. Il est sain et naturel qu'il en soit ainsi. La présence même parmi nous d'un nombre fortement accru de nations nouvelles, toutes libres d'exprimer les opinions qui leur semblent justes, a conféré à cette question une urgence nouvelle qui a été exprimée de façon frappante dans la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée l'an dernier par l'Assemblée générale et contenant la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, dont j'ai parlé au début de mon intervention.

113. Sur cette toile de fond, j'examinerai maintenant la situation actuelle telle qu'elle apparaît à mon gouvernement et plus précisément la situation des vastes territoires coloniaux qui demeurent sur le continent africain.

114. Il y a d'abord la question des territoires africains du Portugal, question dont l'Assemblée générale s'occupe depuis plusieurs années et qui, pendant l'année écoulée, a porté avant tout sur la situation en Angola. Il n'est pas douteux que les peuples de l'Angola et des autres territoires portugais ont droit à tout ce que leur garantit la Charte, le droit de développer pleinement et sans entraves tout leur potentiel économique, politique et culturel. Je suis certain que l'Assemblée connaît parfaitement la position des Etats-Unis à ce sujet.

115. Au printemps dernier, au Conseil de sécurité [946ème séance], M. Stevenson a exprimé la conviction de mon gouvernement, conviction qui demeure ferme et inchangée, que des réformes graduelles effectuées dans les territoires portugais — et même l'accélération de ces réformes — s'imposent si l'on veut que les populations sous administration portugaise progressent aux points de vue politique, économique et social vers la pleine autodétermination à laquelle ils ont droit. Mais ma délégation aura d'avantage à dire sur cette question lors de l'examen de la situation en Angola.

116. Puis vient le problème du Sud-Ouest africain, problème compliqué par des facteurs historiques et juridiques. Mais la question fondamentale est claire: la population du Sud-Ouest africain doit recevoir la possibilité d'aspirer à l'autodétermination et à la réaliser.

117. Dans ce contexte, il est inévitable à mon avis de parler de la politique d'apartheid en Union sud-africaine, encore que ce problème soit discuté ailleurs. Nous continuons à croire, comme le faisaient nos aïeux lors de la fondation des Etats-Unis, que les gouvernements "tirent leurs justes pouvoirs du consentement des gouvernés". En Afrique du Sud, le consentement de la grande majorité ne compte guère. Nous pensons qu'il est inadmissible qu'un groupe qui ne compte pas plus du cinquième de la population d'un pays détienne en fait tous les pouvoirs et relègue la majorité en une sujétion éternelle du fait de sa race. En vertu de la Charte, nous sommes tous engagés à effacer cette injustice, cette grossière atteinte aux droits de l'homme.

118. En Afrique, pour la plupart des pays, le transfert des pouvoirs aux Africains s'est effectué dans des régions où les minorités européennes sont très petites. Dans ces régions, le Royaume-Uni et la France ont très vite senti le vent du changement et ont transféré les pouvoirs aux dirigeants africains.

119. Cette œuvre constructive est, j'en suis certain, le gage de la sincérité de ces deux puissances métropolitaines qui s'attaquent maintenant au problème beaucoup plus difficile de l'autodétermination qu'il s'agit de donner à des communautés mixtes telles que celles de l'Algérie ou des Rhodésies. Si le progrès dans ce domaine demande plus de temps, c'est en partie parce que le problème est infiniment plus complexe. Dans ce cas-là, une minorité depuis longtemps dominante et une majorité qui ne jouit pas de tous ses droits et de toutes ses garanties légitimes doivent trouver une base nouvelle de coexistence. La majorité doit apprendre à porter sa part des responsabilités du pouvoir. La minorité privilégiée doit donner son aide dans ce processus d'éducation et doit en retour se voir assurer la sauvegarde de ses droits de minorité, car une société libre n'est pas possible si le pouvoir de la majorité et les droits de la minorité ne sont pas équilibrés et conciliés.

120. La métamorphose historique des colonies en sociétés autonomes multiraciales et démocratiques impose à tous les intéressés une tâche très délicate et difficile. Nous exprimons l'espoir que les gouvernements et les peuples intéressés continueront de poursuivre cette tâche avec toute la rapidité possible.

121. J'ai parlé de certaines des questions coloniales les plus urgentes et les plus brûlantes qui se présentent en Afrique. Nous promettons à nouveau que les Etats-Unis consacreront sans relâche leur dévouement, leur énergie et leurs capacités à la recherche de solutions pacifiques et constructives, conformes aux idéaux de la Charte, pour les problèmes que posent ces questions.

122. J'indiquerai maintenant un principe général dont les Etats-Unis s'inspirent dans tous les aspects de la question. Nous préférons voir les dirigeants et les peuples d'Afrique conquérir l'indépendance réelle, faire tous les durs efforts que cela exige, créer toutes les institutions que cela exige, plutôt que les voir se contenter de l'image creuse et stérile d'une indépendance sans réalité.

123. Ici, nous devons rechercher un équilibre délicat. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux énonce expressément: "Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance". Mais le mot clef ici est "prétexte", une raison prétendue qui dissimule quelque autre motif. Nul ne doit crier à l'obstruction s'il faut du temps pour édifier ces institutions en toute bonne foi. Refuser de prendre le temps nécessaire serait nous tromper cruellement et tromper cruellement toutes les populations intéressées. L'expérience tragique du Congo nous a enseigné cette leçon d'une façon si éclatante qu'il est à espérer que nous ne l'oublions pas.

124. C'était là un pays qui, après une préparation trop limitée, s'est vu soudain accorder, presque imposer, la pleine indépendance politique et qui a vu du jour au lendemain cette indépendance tourner en chaos. Tout Etat Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit assurément prendre à cœur tout ce que cette tragédie signifie et le devoir de donner aux peuples dépendants les connaissances et les institutions qui sont indispensables à une liberté viable. Un legs de libres institutions, de fonctionnaires honnêtes, compétents et loyaux, d'un commerce et d'une industrie suffisamment développés, d'un système d'enseignement efficace et étendu, représente l'une des ressources les plus précieuses qu'une nation jeune ou naissante puisse posséder. Malgré une impatience compréhensible, les dirigeants de ces nations doivent être prêts à insister pour que ces conditions soient réalisées dans toute la mesure possible avant de se lancer sur les eaux agitées et dangereuses d'un monde tourmenté.

125. Il est facile de crier "Uhuru" ou "liberté" en toute langue. Mais pour qu'un pays soit vraiment libre, il faut que ses habitants et ses dirigeants disposent des institutions et des connaissances nécessaires pour pouvoir prendre des décisions avec sagesse d'année en année, au long de toutes les années à venir, prendre les grandes décisions souveraines qui détermineront leurs destinées nationales.

126. Et des décisions aussi lourdes de conséquences ne doivent pas être prises seulement au début de l'ère d'indépendance d'une nation, mais au cours de toutes les années à venir dans sa carrière de nation. Le pouvoir de prendre ces décisions est le patrimoine le plus précieux de toutes les nations. Une nation qui n'est pas libre de prendre des décisions par elle-même n'est en fait pas libre du tout.

127. Pour qu'une nation jouisse de cette liberté, il faut deux choses. Il faut que le droit de décider soit entre ses mains et non entre des mains étrangères. Elément non moins essentiel, il faut aussi qu'elle dispose, dans son peuple et parmi ses dirigeants, des connaissances et de l'expérience qui peuvent seules donner l'aptitude à décider.

128. Il n'y a pas là une recette infaillible. Toute nation libre court le risque de prendre une décision dans le mauvais sens, mais toute nation doit avoir les connaissances et l'expérience qui, tout au moins, lui donnent une chance de prendre une décision heureuse et sage.

129. Ce n'est qu'ainsi que les nouvelles nations auront la force de préserver leur indépendance. L'importance de ce principe a été soulignée ici à juste titre et avec sagesse par plusieurs représentants, notamment par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de Nigéria [1050ème séance] lorsqu'il a présenté son projet de résolution si éclairé [A/L.357].

130. Il reste maintenant la question qui nous intéresse ici à l'Assemblée, le plus directement: que peuvent faire les Nations Unies actuellement pour accélérer et guider le processus de décolonisation?

131. La nature de cette action des Nations Unies doit nécessairement être variable selon les situations qui se présenteront et qui, nous l'avons vu, seront radicalement différentes pour des territoires différents. La grande résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée au mois de décembre dernier par l'Assemblée demandait que des mesures immédiates soient prises par les puissances administrantes pour mettre fin au régime colonial.

132. Pour bien des territoires, cela n'a posé que peu ou pas de problèmes. Le Tanganyika, pour ne prendre qu'un seul exemple, était déjà fort avancé sur la route de l'indépendance à laquelle il accédera en fait le mois prochain. Dans les territoires portugais d'Afrique, en revanche, le droit de la population à disposer d'elle-même n'a pas encore été reconnu par le Gouvernement portugais.

133. Il y a d'autres cas, dont celui du Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée est un exemple, où l'Autorité administrante, en l'occurrence l'Australie, a pleinement accepté, en droit comme en pratique, les responsabilités qui lui incombent en vertu de la Charte, mais où des dizaines de milliers d'habitants n'ont pas encore de contacts avec le monde extérieur. Une longue période de développement les attend avant qu'on puisse espérer voir en eux une nation indépendante et viable.

134. Les Etats-Unis estiment que les Nations Unies ont deux tâches très différentes à accomplir dans ce domaine. A l'égard des gouvernements qui, malheureusement, ne se conforment que lentement et avec réticence aux responsabilités qui leur incombent en vertu de la Charte, nous estimons que la bonne méthode consiste à créer des comités spéciaux chargés d'enquêter sur la situation dans leurs territoires, de procéder à des consultations avec les puissances administrantes et d'essayer de les convaincre, de tenir l'Assemblée générale au courant, de faire des recommandations précises et d'attirer l'attention d'une opinion mondiale éclairée sur chacune de ces situations. Nous avons confiance que cette méthode donnera des résultats avec le temps, mais pas aussi vite que beaucoup d'entre nous le voudraient.

135. Il est clair que cette méthode ne convient pas pour les autres cas dans lesquels la puissance administrante a accepté les responsabilités qui lui incombent en vertu de la Charte et travaille de bonne foi avec la population autochtone à les remplir. Lorsque, par exemple, un gouvernement qui administre un territoire non autonome fait fidèlement rapport à l'Assemblée générale, par l'intermédiaire du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, sur l'administration de ce territoire et sur la situation économique et sociale et même politique qui y règne, nous estimons qu'il ne convient guère que les Nations Unies traitent le cas comme s'il s'agissait d'un cas d'oppression coloniale.

136. Les Etats-Unis sont associés avec trois territoires qui ne sont pas pleinement autonomes: les îles Vierges américaines, Guam et les Samoa américaines dont la population autochtone est de moins de 100 000 habitants au total.

137. Dans la mesure où le mot "colonialisme" désigne des rapports injustes entretenus contre les vœux de la population des territoires en question, des rapports de sujétion, d'oppression et d'exploitation, le terme "colonialisme" ne peut absolument pas s'appliquer à la situation qui règne dans ces territoires.

138. Nous reconnaissons toutefois que ces territoires, bien qu'ils jouissent d'une large mesure d'autonomie, en ce sens qu'ils ont leurs propres organes législatifs librement élus au suffrage universel des adultes, ne sont pas pleinement autonomes au sens où ce terme est généralement employé aux Nations Unies. Mon gouvernement a communiqué en conséquence des rapports, en vertu de l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte sur ces trois territoires en tant que territoires non autonomes — bien que, puis-je préciser, ce terme déplaît un peu aux dirigeants élus de ces territoires, qui les considèrent comme autonomes. Il en résulte que ces territoires qui, du moins techniquement, ne sont pas autonomes relèvent de la résolution 1514 (XV).

139. Conformément à l'attachement que nous portons au principe de l'autodétermination et conformément aussi à la résolution 1514 (XV), ma délégation est heureuse d'annoncer à l'Assemblée que les Etats-Unis entament des consultations avec les conseils élus compétents de Guam, des Samoa américaines et des îles Vierges américaines, quant aux mesures qui pourraient être prises dans chacun de ces territoires, compte tenu des conditions qui lui sont particulières, pour déterminer les vœux de sa population en ce qui concerne son avenir politique. Nous agissons de même dans le Territoire sous tutelle des Îles du Pacifique, mais ce dernier relève de la compétence du Conseil de sécurité.

140. Dans bien des territoires dépendants, comme dans les territoires des Etats-Unis dont il vient d'être question, des rapports de consultation et d'association d'une importance capitale se multiplient entre la puissance administrante et les dirigeants autochtones.

Les Nations Unies ne doivent rien faire qui risque de nuire à ces rapports ou s'y ingérer, car ils constituent la voie la plus directe et la plus courte vers une véritable autodétermination. En fait, l'efficacité de cette méthode est prouvée par les centaines de millions de personnes qui ont accédé à l'indépendance au cours des 15 dernières années. Cette méthode qui a subi l'épreuve de l'histoire mérite qu'on la respecte et qu'on la laisse continuer de s'appliquer sans complications nouvelles.

141. Cependant, il est certain que les Nations Unies peuvent jouer un rôle très constructif. Un projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] propose la création d'un comité de l'Assemblée qui s'occuperait des progrès réalisés sur la voie de l'élimination de la domination coloniale dans les territoires qui sont encore dépendants. Nous estimons que sa fonction principale devrait être d'étudier la situation et de présenter à l'examen de l'Assemblée et de tous les Etats Membres intéressés, des principes directeurs d'action dans ce domaine d'importance capitale. Ce comité s'occuperait par exemple de certains problèmes particulièrement difficiles qui subsistent, tels que ceux des petites îles, des enclaves et des territoires où il y a des minorités importantes. Ce comité, calqué sur le Comité spécial des Six, chargé de la question de la communication de renseignements en vertu de l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte, qui s'est occupé de certains problèmes de définition dans ce domaine, pourrait avoir une utilité véritable.

142. Heureusement, les cas où la puissance administrante travaille de bonne foi avec la population locale à atteindre les buts du Chapitre XI de la Charte sont les plus nombreux aujourd'hui. Le régime colonial, dans les cas les meilleurs, est appelé à se liquider de lui-même et c'est ce qui ne peut manquer de se passer. Il l'a fait au cours des 15 années historiques qui viennent de s'écouler et de nombreuses délégations présentes dans cette salle en sont la preuve vivante.

143. Que ne puis-je terminer sur ce sujet avec cette heureuse constatation! Mais j'estime qu'il est de mon devoir de parler d'une autre forme de sujétion de peuples étrangers qui afflige l'humanité dans l'histoire contemporaine.

144. L'Union soviétique ne se prive jamais de réclamer l'indépendance immédiate de tous les territoires coloniaux sous contrôle de l'Occident. En fait, elle va même plus loin: elle exige que tout contact entre les nations naissantes et l'Occident soit rompu, isolant ainsi les nations nouvelles de l'appui technique et économique que les nations industrielles de l'Occident peuvent leur offrir et leur offrent. Cette intéressante méthode affaiblirait tellement les nations nouvelles qu'elles ne pourraient guère échapper au sort que l'Union soviétique peut leur réserver.

145. Entre-temps, nombreux sont ceux, non seulement aux Etats-Unis, mais aussi dans beaucoup de parties du monde, qui demandent à juste titre: Qu'advient-il des 200 millions d'étrangers que l'Union soviétique asservit depuis 1945? N'ont-ils pas aussi le droit, en vertu de la Déclaration historique contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de "déterminer librement leur statut politique" et de "jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes"? Cet asservissement n'est-il pas aussi une forme virulente du colonialisme ou, si l'on préfère, de l'impérialisme?

146. Ces gens veulent savoir pourquoi les Nations Unies concentrent leur attention sur des formes de domination coloniale occidentale dont la fin approche rapidement, et accordent peu ou pas d'attention à ces formes beaucoup plus opiniâtres et subtiles de domination que l'Union soviétique pratique surtout en Europe orientale et que la Chine communiste pratique au Tibet et ailleurs. Le même principe d'autodétermination n'est-il pas en cause dans tous ces cas? Pourquoi ne pas être plus autoritaire et insistant à l'égard de ceux qui persistent opiniâtement dans l'injustice?

147. Nous nous sentons tout à fait en sympathie avec ceux qui posent ces questions. Les sentiments des Etats-Unis et de la majorité des Etats Membres à l'égard des tragiques questions de Hongrie et du Tibet sont bien connus de l'Assemblée générale et ils seront réaffirmés prochainement lorsque ces deux questions viendront en discussion. Le moment viendra sûrement où justice pourra être rendue dans la paix à ces peuples et à d'autres qui sont maintenus aujourd'hui, contre leur gré, sous la domination étrangère de Moscou ou de Pékin. Avec le temps, leur jour viendra et les Nations Unies auront leur rôle à jouer. L'histoire a son propre cours et sa propre logique.

148. A ce sujet, on a pris note avec intérêt des déclarations extrêmes que le très compétent représentant de l'Union soviétique s'est cru obligé de faire pour répondre à certaines observations que le représentant du Royaume-Uni a formulées récemment à propos du colonialisme soviétique, dans la très franche déclaration qu'il a faite au cours de ce débat. Il semble que M. Godber ait touché un point sensible. La réponse de M. Lapine, bien que brève, contenait des affirmations aussi remarquables que celle-ci:

"... l'Union soviétique est une union libre de républiques socialistes... cimentée par l'amitié profonde, la solidarité et la communauté d'intérêts de ces peuples" [1056ème séance, par. 164].

149. Pour ne citer qu'un exemple parmitant d'autres, je me demande si les 900 000 — il s'agit bien de 900 000 — Kazaks musulmans qui ont disparu mystérieusement de leur république nationale entre 1920 et 1939 seraient d'accord avec M. Lapine. Ou bien si les 400 000 Allemands de la Volga, les 259 000 Tartares de Crimée, les 130 000 Kalmouks — tous déportés vers l'Est — seraient d'accord avec M. Lapine. M. Lapine a dit également:

"Quant aux bases militaires, vous savez parfaitement que l'Union soviétique n'a pas de bases sur territoire étranger." [Ibid., par. 169.]

150. Pour ne prendre qu'un exemple, il y a actuellement en Hongrie, c'est un fait, plus de 50 000 soldats soviétiques. Or, la déclaration de M. Lapine que je viens de citer peut nous conduire à l'une des deux conclusions suivantes: ou bien ces 50 000 soldats soviétiques opèrent à partir d'hôtels, de pensions de famille et d'auberges de campagne, ou bien l'Union soviétique ne considère pas la Hongrie comme un territoire étranger. Que chacun choisisse sa conclusion.

151. Dans un document [A/4889] déjà distribué sur cette question, l'Union soviétique a jugé bon de diriger surtout ses attaques contre les Etats-Unis dont les territoires dépendants — y compris leur territoire sous tutelle — ont une population de moins de 200 000 habitants, contre les Etats-Unis qui font de leur mieux pour appliquer la Charte en toutes ces matières. Je ne veux pas importuner les représentants en répon-dant ici à ces accusations extravagantes. Néanmoins, nous ferons prochainement distribuer un document où seront exposées certaines observations sur le memorandum de l'Union soviétique.

152. Je passerai maintenant à une autre question. Le différend concernant le territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale est pour l'Assemblée une grande épreuve et lui offre une occasion sans précédent. Je n'essaierai pas de passer en revue l'histoire embrouillée de ce différend et je n'ai pas la prétention de porter un jugement sur les revendications contradictoires des gouvernements de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas.

153. Cependant il semble, par bonheur, que la confrontation stérile d'affirmations et de contre-affirmations tire à sa fin. Si l'Assemblée agit de façon judicieuse et réaliste, ce territoire peut cesser bientôt d'être l'objet d'un litige international. Il pourrait même servir d'exemple de décolonisation intelligente.

154. Mon gouvernement juge constructive et fort heureuse l'initiative que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas a prise en proposant de renoncer à son contrôle sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, l'administration étant placée sous l'autorité des Nations Unies pendant une période intérimaire. La condition fondamentale que pose le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas est que les habitants du territoire aient le droit d'exercer un libre choix au sujet du sort qui sera réservé au territoire. La position des Etats-Unis sur le principe de l'autodétermination est bien connue et nous ne voyons pas de raison valable de refuser aux habitants de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale la possibilité d'exprimer leur volonté.

155. D'autre part, encore que nous accueillions avec faveur le principe général de la proposition des Pays-Bas, à notre avis le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354] reflète complètement le point de vue de ce pays et ne fait pas une part suffisante à l'intérêt intense que l'Indonésie porte au territoire.

156. Nous estimons qu'il n'y a rien à gagner à chercher à méconnaître, comme le fait le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, la revendication de l'Indonésie touchant la souveraineté sur le territoire que ce pays appelle l'Irian Barat. A notre avis, il ne faut pas demander à l'Assemblée d'accepter soit la thèse de la souveraineté néerlandaise, soit la thèse indonésienne. Quoi qu'elle fasse, elle devrait le faire sans préjugé pour l'une ou l'autre partie. Etant donné le différend qui existe, la bonne méthode, conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies, semblerait être d'assurer à la population du territoire la possibilité de se prononcer en temps utile sur son avenir politique, sous l'égide des Nations Unies.

157. Pour obtenir ce résultat, il nous semble que toute résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée devra préciser clairement que les Hollandais transféreront à une certaine date l'administration du territoire aux Nations Unies. Les conditions de ce transfert seraient établies à sa dix-septième session par l'Assemblée générale après avoir reçu les recommandations d'une petite commission composée d'Etats Membres désintéressés.

158. Nous pensons qu'une telle administration des Nations Unies, qui permettrait à la population du territoire d'exprimer son choix, devrait donner à l'Indonésie une possibilité raisonnable de poursuivre son objectif qui consiste à réaliser l'intégration de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale à l'Indonésie. Pendant la période intérimaire, il serait mis fin au contrôle des Pays-Bas et une administration impartiale des Nations Unies exercerait une complète autorité. Nous supposons que sous le régime de cette administration l'Indonésie aurait accès au territoire.

159. Nous ne croyons pas que la proposition de la délégation de l'Inde [A/L.367 et Add.1] offre une solution définitive de ce problème. Encore que nous souhaitons vivement voir concilier les vues des Pays-Bas et de l'Indonésie à ce sujet, encore que nous serions heureux de voir entamer des pourparlers amicaux entre les parties au différend, nous ferons remarquer que de semblables propositions de simples négociations bilatérales ont déjà été présentées ici et ont été rejetées. Nous estimons que tout projet de résolution sur la question doit maintenant tenir compte du fait nouveau que les Pays-Bas se sont déclarés prêts à transférer, aux Nations Unies leurs pouvoirs sur le territoire.

160. De plus, à notre avis, l'adoption d'un simple appel aux parties pour qu'elles négocient équivaldrait à rejeter — ou tout au moins à méconnaître — l'idée que la population du territoire doit se voir accorder le droit à l'autodétermination. En fait, nous notons avec regret que le projet de résolution présenté par la délégation de l'Inde ne fait aucune allusion à la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et semble accepter l'idée que son avenir politique peut et même devrait être réglé par d'autres sans tenir compte de l'avis de la population.

161. Le droit à l'autodétermination est un droit fondamental selon la Charte et selon la résolution 1514 (XV). Le représentant de l'Inde, M. Krishna Menon, a déclaré ici l'autre jour [1058ème séance] qu'il ne pouvait accepter l'idée d'une commission des Nations Unies, car ce serait reconnaître tacitement que la souveraineté sur le territoire prêtait à différend. Mais tel est précisément le cas: l'Indonésie revendique la souveraineté et sa thèse est appuyée par un certain nombre de délégations, dont celle de l'Inde, mais les Pays-Bas revendiquent la souveraineté eux aussi et leur thèse est également appuyée par un certain nombre de délégations.

162. Il semble donc qu'il y ait là un cas où l'application du principe de l'autodétermination est tout à fait opportune et constitue même la seule façon pratique et juste de sortir de l'impasse dans laquelle on se trouve depuis plus de 10 ans.

163. Une observation encore: il y a tout lieu d'espérer et de croire que le Gouvernement indonésien pourra accepter et accepter l'idée de l'autodétermination de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, à condition que cette consultation soit organisée de façon impartiale et à condition que l'Indonésie ait libre accès à la région. Ma délégation estime que l'Indonésie aurait évidemment intérêt à accepter le futur retrait des Pays-Bas de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, puis à poursuivre ses objectifs par des moyens pacifiques. C'est une question complexe, qui demandera du temps, de la patience et les efforts concertés de tous les intéressés.

164. Les membres de l'Assemblée générale ont le privilège de jouer un rôle dans l'une des évolutions historiques les plus créatrices de l'humanité: la naissance de nations nouvelles qui passent du statut de colonies à la pleine égalité dans la communauté mondiale. Cette évolution est déjà très avancée. Il nous appartient de l'aider, de la faciliter, de la guider dans des voies pacifiques. Lorsque les parties responsables faiblissent ou manquent à leurs obligations, nous avons le devoir d'exiger des actes. Lorsque les problèmes sont résolus de bonne foi, nous devons respecter l'œuvre qui s'accomplit. Lorsque tous nos appels se heurtent à l'entêtement et au défi, dressons-nous et travaillons pour ce qui est juste, jusqu'à ce que ce qui est juste triomphe dans la paix.

M. Ortiz Martin (Costa Rica), vice-président, prend la présidence.

165. M. CORNER (Nouvelle-Zélande) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'an dernier, la Nouvelle-Zélande a voté pour la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Nous en avons été fiers. Tout en faisant des réserves sur certaines parties du texte de cette déclaration, nous avons pleinement souscrit à son objet principal. Le peuple de la Nouvelle-Zélande estime qu'au sein de l'Organisation, comme au dehors, nous devons travailler ensemble à édifier un monde de nations indépendantes, dévouées au bien commun de l'humanité et exemptes, tant à l'intérieur qu'à l'extérieur, de toutes formes de domination, de discrimination et d'oppression. Ce n'est que dans un tel monde que la valeur individuelle et la dignité essentielle de la personne humaine, quelle que soit sa race ou sa couleur, pourront être pleinement assurées. Ce n'est qu'ainsi que ses talents et ses possibilités pourront avoir libre cours dans l'intérêt de tous.

166. L'une des faiblesses fondamentales du système colonial, si éclairé soit-il, est que ce système ne peut permettre la pleine réalisation du potentiel individuel et national. Les puissances administrantes et les puissances non administrantes le reconnaissent aujourd'hui généralement. Ce fait a été reconnu en 1945. Les auteurs des chapitres de la Charte concernant les territoires dépendants ont mis l'accent sur le caractère transitoire des relations coloniales et sur la nécessité de favoriser l'évolution de tous les territoires sur les plans politique, social et économique, afin qu'ils puissent parvenir à l'autonomie ou à l'indépendance, selon les conditions particulières du territoire.

167. Cela a d'ailleurs été reconnu avant 1945. Par exemple, le 21 janvier 1944 la Nouvelle-Zélande et l'Australie ont déclaré conjointement^{3/} que la doctrine de la tutelle, déjà applicable dans le cas des territoires sous mandat dont les deux gouvernements étaient puissances mandataires, devait s'appliquer, d'une manière générale, à tous les territoires coloniaux du Pacifique et des autres régions, et que l'objet principal de cette tutelle était la prospérité des populations autochtones et leur développement social, économique et politique. Cette déclaration peut sembler assez anodine aujourd'hui, mais elle était presque révolutionnaire en 1944. La Nouvelle-Zélande s'est conformée à l'esprit de cette déclaration et, sous l'impulsion de son premier ministre, M. Peter Fraser, qui a présidé le Comité chargé de rédiger les chapitres de la Charte relatifs aux territoires sous tutelle et aux territoires non autonomes, la délégation de la Nouvelle-Zélande a joué un grand rôle dans les débuts du mouvement tendant à la décolonisation. Il est vrai que ce mouvement a acquis actuellement une force dont on ne rêvait même pas à San Francisco, au point que la Nouvelle-Zélande, qui était alors à l'avant-garde, semble maintenant faire partie des "modérés". Mais s'il existe des divergences de vues entre nous et ceux qui sont maintenant les chefs du mouvement de décolonisation, ces divergences portent sur les délais et les méthodes pratiques, certainement pas sur l'objectif visé.

168. Les principes fondamentaux et les dispositions de la Charte demeurent valables, mais, avec la récente accession à l'indépendance de nombreux pays et l'éveil politique des populations encore dépendantes, le problème a pris un tour plus urgent. La plupart des puissances administrantes ont réagi avec ingéniosité et énergie, comme le montre la présence ici de représentants de si nombreux Etats africains. Une ou deux des puissances coloniales d'autrefois ont malheureusement éprouvé quelque difficulté à adapter leur politique au changement de situation. La plus grande puissance impérialiste de toutes, l'Union soviétique, prétend se faire une fois de plus, cette année, le champion des peuples opprimés, et elle a même présenté un projet de résolution [A/L.355] qui souligne notamment la nécessité d'assurer dans les territoires dépendants l'organisation d'élections libres et l'exercice de la liberté de parole et de presse. L'audace de l'auteur de ce projet de résolution coupe le souffle et provoque un étonnement légèrement amusé en même temps qu'écoeuré. Mais je n'insisterai pas sur la nature de cette manœuvre soviétique qui relève de la guerre froide. Nous connaissons bien le désir des populations d'Asie et d'Afrique de rester en paix et de pouvoir s'occuper elles-mêmes et à leur façon de leurs problèmes urgents, sans qu'on y fasse intervenir des questions qui relèvent de la guerre froide.

169. Nous ne pouvons pas prendre au sérieux l'initiative soviétique avec ses arrière-pensées évidentes. Nous prenons en revanche très au sérieux l'opinion de nos collègues d'Asie et d'Afrique. Nombre d'entre eux, en tant que représentants de pays qui viennent de se libérer du statut colonial, sont particulièrement bien placés pour parler en connaissance de cause et avec autorité sur la question examinée en ce moment. Que leurs vues diffèrent sensiblement à certains égards, cela est naturel. Ils sont cependant unanimes sur un point, à savoir que l'Assemblée générale doit prendre cette année des mesures pour l'application rapide des principes de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme.

170. Ma délégation comprend ce désir. Nous croyons en outre que l'Assemblée doit pouvoir agir en cette direction sans porter atteinte aux droits et aux responsabilités, que la Déclaration sur le colonialisme ne modifie pas, qui appartiennent aux Etats Membres administrants, en vertu de la Charte, en ce qui concerne les territoires sous tutelle ou territoires non autonomes dont ils ont la charge. Tant que ces Etats Membres chercheront honnêtement à s'acquitter de leurs obligations en vertu de la Charte, leur position doit être respectée. Même si l'on pouvait ne pas tenir compte des considérations juridiques, l'Assemblée agirait certainement sagement, sur le plan pratique, en ne cherchant pas à légiférer de manière détaillée pour les nombreux territoires encore dépendants, qui sont extrêmement différenciés des points de vue de leur situation générale et de leurs possibilités. Certains Etats Membres administrants se sont toujours acquittés de leurs obligations en vertu de la Charte et généralement en obtenant des résultats admirables. L'expérience et le bon sens montrent qu'il faut laisser à ces Etats Membres administrants, dont la bonne foi n'est pas contestée, le soin de travailler au progrès politique rapide de leurs territoires et à l'application de toute recommandation générale que l'Assemblée pourra faire.

171. Le désir général se manifeste aussi à l'Assemblée de voir les peuples qui prennent possession du patrimoine qui leur revient, de leur Etat indépendant, avoir en main quelque chose de solide et de viable qui puisse satisfaire leurs aspirations sans cesse grandissantes. Il nous semble parfois que certains Etats représentés à l'Organisation ont un intérêt constant à susciter ou à entretenir le désordre, mais ce n'est certainement pas vrai de la majorité des Etats.

172. Nous ne contestons pas qu'il soit utile que les Nations Unies maintiennent une pression sur les Etats Membres administrants. La Nouvelle-Zélande, bien qu'elle se fût acquittée avec enthousiasme et bonne volonté de sa tâche au Samoa-Occidental, a tiré grand profit de l'attention rigoureuse et constante et de la pression impitoyable du Conseil de tutelle. Son action nous a aidés à accomplir notre tâche avec vigilance; elle était utile et nécessaire même quand, sur le moment, elle paraissait importune. Ce qui est très important, c'est l'esprit dans lequel cette attention et cette pression sont exercées. Nous avons toujours envisagé notre tâche au Samoa Occidental dans un esprit de coopération étroite entre les Nations Unies, l'Autorité administrante et la population du Territoire. Les Nations Unies ont fait preuve du même esprit. C'est cette atmosphère de coopération, cet esprit de collaboration, au service d'une des plus nobles entreprises humaines, qui a permis les résultats fructueux qui aboutissent à l'indépendance des Samoans dans l'ordre. Les critiques ne nous ont pas été épargnées lorsque des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies les jugeaient justifiées, mais nous avons entendu aussi quelques éloges et quelques encouragements. Nous avons de bonnes raisons de savoir que la générosité d'esprit se rencontre chez les Membres de l'Organisation.

173. Je demande aux représentants de m'excuser d'avoir cité le Samoa-Occidental en exemple, mais c'est le seul cas qui me soit très familier; encore que les problèmes de ce pays soient simples comparés à ceux que connaissent beaucoup de nouveaux Etats, ce sont essentiellement les mêmes problèmes quant à leur nature et leur nombre, et souvent, parce que l'échelle est réduite, on peut les voir avec plus de netteté.

174. Si les Samoans, qui seront indépendants dans cinq semaines, s'étaient contentés de rester en une société tribale vivant en économie de subsistance, ils n'auraient pu se gouverner sans aucune aide extérieure à aucun moment; en fait, leurs superbes aptitudes en matière de politique et de gouvernement donnent souvent aux politiciens de pays dits développés une allure d'amateurs. En ce sens, nous approuvons l'argument soutenu par plusieurs représentants qui affirment que tous les peuples coloniaux sont prêts à prendre en main leurs propres affaires immédiatement. Mais le Samoa ne pouvait pas conserver son économie traditionnelle et son régime de gouvernement. Avec la création de services médicaux, la population du Samoa s'accroissait à un rythme plus rapide qu'aucune autre population au monde. Le développement agricole et économique était nécessaire, ne fût-ce que pour maintenir le niveau de vie existant; pour améliorer ce niveau — et tel était le désir croissant de cette population croissante —, il fallait des méthodes et des connaissances nouvelles dans les domaines de l'administration, de l'agriculture, de la santé, de l'enseignement et des travaux publics.

175. Ce n'est pas critiquer une société traditionnelle que de dire qu'elle ne peut répondre immédiatement aux besoins accrus et aux désirs accrus d'une population accrue dans un monde moderne. Il faut jeter un pont entre une société traditionnelle et une société nouvelle, une société nouvelle dont on ne peut prédire la forme qu'elle prendra, car cette forme variera d'un peuple à l'autre. La tâche de ceux qui administrent des colonies ou des territoires sous tutelle est d'aider la population à construire ce pont le plus vite possible. Cependant, même avec la meilleure volonté du monde, il faut du temps pour construire ce pont. Il faut du temps pour que garçons et filles achèvent le cycle de l'enseignement primaire et celui de l'enseignement secondaire, pour que certains sortent de l'université, pour que d'autres acquièrent au prix d'une expérience difficile une formation de médecin, d'ingénieur ou d'administrateur. Quelquefois, rien ne semble se produire, pendant que les années passent. Mais alors les investissements dans l'enseignement commencent enfin à rapporter: garçons et filles reviennent des écoles et des universités, les diplômés rentrent, les apprentis achèvent leur formation, les administrateurs commencent à avoir confiance en leur compétence. Puis le progrès vient d'un coup, en même temps que la maîtrise et l'enthousiasme. La patience est récompensée. Qu'on ne se méprenne pas: je n'ai pas eu l'intention de faire une plaidoirie en faveur du retard ou de la passivité.

176. Chacun de nous a eu une expérience qui détermine sa façon de penser. Celle de la Nouvelle-Zélande a été déterminée par la position qu'elle occupe dans le Pacifique et la connaissance qu'elle a de cette région, avec ses îles minuscules, qui ne sont souvent que des atolls de corail, habitées par une poignée d'hommes et dispersées sur les vastes étendues solitaires de l'océan Pacifique. Il n'est pas étrange que la remarquable diversité des territoires encore dépendants dans le monde entier puisse quelquefois passer inaperçue aux yeux de ceux qui, c'est naturel, pensent surtout à l'Afrique. Cependant, les différences d'ordre physique et politique qui existent entre un vaste territoire continental et une petite île isolée du Pacifique sont bien plus marquées que des similitudes fortuites dans le statut international.

177. Si l'Assemblée générale décidait de créer une commission spéciale chargée d'examiner l'application de la Déclaration, il ne fait pas de doute que cette commission serait frappée de la complexité et de la variété des tâches auxquelles ont à faire face certains Etats Membres administrants. Il est improbable qu'une formule unique puisse s'appliquer à tous les cas. Tout principe général, si valable soit-il en théorie, devra dans la pratique être appliqué très prudemment et intelligemment. C'est parce que nous reconnaissons ces réalités que nous appuyons le projet de résolution [A/L.357] proposé par la Fédération de Nigéria, sur la question intitulée: "Assistance à l'Afrique: a) programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance".

178. Etant donné la sensibilité politique de l'Afrique et les difficultés aiguës qui ont surgi au sujet de certains territoires africains, comme l'Angola et le Sud-Ouest africain, il nous semble raisonnable d'accorder une attention particulière aux problèmes de la décolonisation sur ce continent. Il semble réaliste de réclamer que des mesures immédiates soient prises pour préparer les peuples des territoires dépendants de ce continent à assumer complètement la gestion de leurs affaires. Bien que très éloignés de cette région, la Nouvelle-Zélande partage la profonde inquiétude d'autres Etats Membres qui souhaitent que les entités politiques qui naissent en Afrique soient stables et réellement indépendantes, ne risquant ni de sombrer dans le chaos intérieur ni de dépendre de façon exagérée, et par conséquent malsaine, de puissances étrangères ou de pays voisins plus grands et plus forts.

179. Nous ne pensons pas qu'il soit sage de vouloir fixer une date limite définitive pour l'indépendance des territoires d'Afrique, et encore moins pour celle de tous les territoires dépendants. Notre propre expérience au Samoa-Occidental, bien que limitée, nous a démontré qu'il est pratiquement difficile et politiquement imprudent de vouloir fixer une date définitive avant d'avoir atteint l'une des dernières étapes du processus de développement par lequel ce territoire est sorti de tutelle. Lorsque cette étape a été atteinte, il est devenu à peu près inévitable et en fait très utile de fixer une date pour l'indépendance, d'accord avec les dirigeants samoans. Mais nous sommes prêts à voter en faveur du projet de résolution de la Nigéria, avec sa date limite de 1970 au plus tard pour l'indépendance des territoires d'Afrique, car il nous semble que cette date ne devrait pas gêner beaucoup les Etats Membres administrants qui respectent les obligations imposées par la Charte et qu'elle pourrait aiguillonner utilement ceux qui ne les respectent pas.

180. Si ces problèmes coloniaux ne sont pas résolus et si des nations stables ne sont pas établies avec des gouvernements à base populaire, la lutte pour l'Afrique au XXème siècle pourrait bien avoir de plus mauvaises conséquences, et pendant plus longtemps, que la lutte pour l'Afrique à la fin du siècle dernier. L'atmosphère internationale d'aujourd'hui est chargée de telles tensions qu'il faut réduire absolument au minimum tout risque de conflit entre les grandes puissances. Certes, nous accueillons favorablement la façon dont de nombreux pays étrangers aident les nouvelles nations indépendantes d'Afrique, mais les événements qui se sont déroulés au cours des 18 derniers mois dans la partie centrale de ce continent ont amplement montré les dangers qu'entraînent les rivalités internationales et les pressions qui peuvent être engendrées lorsque les faiblesses intérieures d'un Etat fournissent à des pays étrangers la possibilité de poursuivre leurs propres desseins.

181. Dans le Pacifique, heureusement, les problèmes de la décolonisation sont habituellement d'un ordre différent et, en général, ne comportent pas de menace pour la paix ou la sécurité internationales. Toutefois, en tant que pays du Pacifique, la Nouvelle-Zélande ne peut manquer de s'intéresser spécialement à la prospérité de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Nous avons été particulièrement impressionnés par la générosité et l'imagination dont les Pays-Bas ont fait preuve dans leurs propositions [A/L.354] relatives à l'application à ce territoire de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme. Prises dans leur ensemble, ces propositions nous paraissent constituer non seulement un effort constructif en vue de trouver dans le cadre des Nations Unies une solution à un problème épineux et difficile, mais également un défi lancé à l'Assemblée d'appuyer l'application ordonnée de sa propre déclaration. Il est proposé qu'en tant que première mesure une commission des Nations Unies se rende en Nouvelle-Guinée et fasse un rapport impartial sur la situation du territoire et les opinions actuelles de la population autochtone. L'établissement de ce rapport impartial sur la situation du territoire et les opinions actuelles de la population autochtone constitue clairement une condition préalable au transfert aux Nations Unies des responsabilités qui, selon ces propositions, devraient être confiées à une autorité internationale de développement. Encore que nous ne soyons pas très sûrs que la commission puisse, en fait, donner dès maintenant un avis sur la date d'un plébiscite, nous sommes sensibles aux arguments qui militent en faveur d'un mandat aussi large que possible.

182. La Nouvelle-Zélande a la chance d'entretenir les relations les plus amicales avec l'Indonésie aussi bien qu'avec les Pays-Bas. Ce fut un problème pénible pour ceux d'entre nous qui, depuis des années, ont dû envisager la possibilité d'avoir à prendre parti dans un différend entre deux amis — l'un d'eux est l'Indonésie, proche voisin de la Nouvelle-Zélande, avec qui nous entretenons des liens étroits et amicaux, particulièrement dans le cadre du Plan de Colombo. Heureusement, les propositions des Pays-Bas n'excluent nullement la possibilité que les habitants de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale se décident en faveur du rattachement à l'Indonésie. Le fait que les Pays-Bas sont prêts à transférer leur administration à une autorité internationale impartiale est une garantie que tout choix sera fait librement et en connaissance de cause. Nous estimons que les propositions dont l'Assemblée est saisie peuvent ouvrir une ère nouvelle en fournissant la possibilité de régler de façon objective un problème de longue date. La puissance extérieure a offert de quitter le territoire et de laisser complètement la décision à la population intéressée, dans le cadre de l'Organisation. Elle est allée plus loin encore et a offert de mettre une somme considérable à la disposition des Nations Unies et de fournir des administrateurs et des experts si les Nations Unies le désirent, mais seulement si elles le désirent.

183. Ce pourrait être là une de ces propositions historiques comme il en a surgi de temps en temps dans l'histoire des Nations Unies. Si elle était tout simplement écartée, il serait possible que d'autres puissances hésitent désormais à faire des propositions semblables aux Nations Unies. Ne serait-ce que pour cette raison, ne serait-ce que parce que les propositions des Pays-Bas offrent de très vastes possibilités aux Nations Unies, nous supposons qu'elles seront étudiées avec le plus grand soin. En même temps, nous avons noté la très vive réaction négative de nos amis d'Indonésie. Ce fut pour nous une surprise et une déception. Nous sommes persuadés que la menace de la force n'est pas le dernier mot de l'Indonésie, mais sa réaction est cependant un fait politique de grande importance qu'on ne peut pas plus écarter qu'on ne peut écarter la volonté de la population autochtone. Nous souhaitons que la réaction de l'Indonésie ne reste pas négative. En fait, la possibilité d'une évolution est apparue dans la déclaration faite lundi [1058ème séance] par M. Subandrio. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, nous n'estimons pas que la proposition des Pays-Bas exclue la réalisation des objectifs que vise l'Indonésie. Nous sommes néanmoins disposés à examiner avec sympathie des propositions qui donneraient à l'Indonésie de plus grandes assurances sur ce point. La tranquillité future de toute la région et, en particulier, le bonheur et la prospérité de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée exigent que l'on fasse tout pour obtenir un accord aussi large que possible, toujours sur la base des principes de la Charte.

184. Nous comptons qu'il s'établira un accord plus large avant le vote sur une question dans laquelle entrent en jeu des éléments passionnels aussi bien que des principes fondamentaux. Trois parties principales sont directement en cause: la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas. J'ai nommé la population du territoire en premier non seulement pour des raisons de principe, mais aussi parce qu'elle constitue un fait politique et que sa réaction à toute solution ne peut être méconnue de ceux qui souhaitent une décolonisation pacifique. Je suppose en outre que les Nations Unies doivent également être considérées maintenant comme une quatrième partie, puisque deux des parties intéressées ont souvent porté la question devant les Nations Unies et que les Nations Unies elles-mêmes sont considérées comme devant se préoccuper particulièrement des intérêts des populations qui ne sont pas encore en mesure de parler en leur propre nom.

185. La Charte, qui met l'accent sur le "principe de l'égalité de droits des peuples et de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes", est loin d'être mise en œuvre dans toutes les parties du monde. C'est à juste titre que nous pouvons saluer les grands progrès accomplis depuis 1945 pour ce qui est du bonheur et de la prospérité de ceux qui vivent sous une domination étrangère et pour ce qui est de les aider à progresser vers l'indépendance. Mais il est assez naturel que certains d'entre nous ressentent quelque impatience lorsqu'ils pensent à ce qu'il reste à faire avant de pouvoir voir la fin du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, nouvelles aussi bien qu'anciennes. Cette impatience doit nous pousser à faire des efforts accrus et non tendre à nous faire méconnaître l'immensité de la tâche qui nous attend. Les membres de l'Assemblée veulent que les peuples dépendants réalisent leurs aspirations politiques rapidement, mais dans les conditions d'ordre et de paix qui non seulement assureront le mieux leur propre prospérité et leur intégrité, mais aussi contribueront au développement harmonieux de la communauté des nations.

186. Notre expérience en tant qu'autorité administrante, bien qu'à petite échelle, nous a convaincus de la valeur des dispositions actuelles en ce qui concerne le contrôle de l'administration des territoires sous tutelle et l'examen des renseignements communiqués au sujet des territoires non autonomes. Nous félicitons le Royaume-Uni d'avoir récemment décidé de communiquer des renseignements politiques sur ces territoires. Nous espérons que les résolutions qui seront adoptées au sujet des questions actuellement en discussion ne modifieront pas les attributions du Conseil de tutelle et du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, organes auxquels la coopération des Etats Membres administrants a été librement et utilement donnée par le passé et leur est assurée à l'avenir. Sans cette coopération, l'Assemblée ne peut guère exercer d'influence agissante dans le monde des territoires dépendants. La Charte des Nations Unies a été rédigée après mûres réflexions et il n'est pas question de la réviser en faisant bon marché de méthodes et de dispositifs qui ont donné de bons résultats.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

187. J'ai cité des exemples tirés de l'expérience de la Nouvelle-Zélande, d'une façon qui pourrait être interprétée comme un appel à la patience ou même à la prudence. Il convient donc de souligner également l'une des grandes leçons qui nous ont été enseignées par l'expérience: c'est seulement lorsqu'on peut donner des responsabilités politiques plus grandes aux peuples dépendants pour l'administration de leurs propres affaires qu'un progrès réel peut être accompli dans l'accélération de leur développement économique et social. Il vient un moment où la puissance administrante, aussi pleine de bonne volonté qu'elle soit, ne peut faire davantage qu'elle ne fait. Une coopération entière, même dans des entreprises que chacun reconnaît comme essentielles, ne peut exister tant que la population n'est pas convaincue qu'elle a le ferme contrôle de sa propre destinée et que c'est sa volonté qui prime. Ce n'est qu'alors que cette population est consciente de porter tout le poids de ses responsabilités et consacre toute son attention à ses problèmes.

188. Comme les Samoans ne cessaient de nous le rappeler: "Un bon gouvernement ne remplace pas un gouvernement autonome". Nous savons grâce à une expérience incontestable que l'exercice des responsabilités politiques peut libérer des énergies et révéler des possibilités humaines en puissance qui, dans d'autres conditions, ne se manifestent que rarement ou pas du tout. La joie de voir un peuple s'épanouir, de le voir libérer toute son énergie, est la plus grande récompense que puisse recevoir une puissance administrante; c'est une récompense qui efface le souvenir d'années d'efforts dépensés et de critiques subies. C'est l'une des raisons pour lesquelles les puissances coloniales éclairées sont en train de se retirer rapidement elles-mêmes. C'est notre vœu sincère que leur exemple serve d'inspiration aux autres, moins éclairées, qui cherchent à justifier leur politique en se prévalant d'anciens préjugés de races, d'attitudes historiques désuètes ou d'idéologies nouvelles mais non moins fausses qui visent à étendre et à perpétuer la domination d'une minorité sur une majorité.

189. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Ethiopie, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

190. M. HAILE MARIAM (Ethiopie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Mon pays, l'Ethiopie, a travaillé en vue de l'accession à l'indépendance de ses frères somalis et a eu le plaisir d'exprimer sa joie lorsqu'ils y furent parvenus. Le Premier Ministre actuel de l'Ethiopie a eu lui-même l'honneur de féliciter nos frères somalis lors de leur admission à l'Assemblée [865^{ème} séance].

191. C'est pourquoi il est désagréable à la délégation éthiopienne d'être contrainte de répondre à nos frères somalis. Nous le regrettons profondément. Les Ethiopiens aiment leurs frères de Somalie parce qu'il n'y a pas de différence entre l'Ethiopie et la Somalie; en fait, avant le colonialisme, l'Ethiopie et la Somalie ne constituaient qu'un seul pays. Dès le départ, le colonialisme a eu recours aux techniques du néo-colonialisme pour nous séparer. C'était une mesure rétrograde sur le plan de l'unité africaine. Quoi qu'il en soit, nous gardons encore l'espoir d'être réunis un jour à nos frères somalis, lorsqu'ils seront revenus à la raison.

192. Il y a deux jours, j'ai lancé un appel pour la libération de l'Etat frère du Kenya aussitôt que possible. C'était à la 1058^{ème} séance de l'Assemblée. Nous regrettons profondément que le représentant de la Somalie, M. Farah Ali Omar, ait proposé tout à l'heure que l'on sépare le Kenya septentrional du reste du Kenya avant l'accession de ce pays à l'indépendance. C'est bien regrettable surtout venant du représentant d'un pays africain frère, la Somalie.

193. Etant une colonie, le Kenya n'est pas représenté ici; il ne peut donc répondre à la Somalie. Mais nous espérons sincèrement qu'à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale, le Kenya sera indépendant et sera admis à l'Assemblée.

194. Je me demande si le représentant ami de la Somalie osera encore demander alors le démembrement du Kenya. Il est regrettable que la proposition faite à la présente séance par le représentant d'un pays africain frère, la Somalie, risque de retarder l'accession prochaine de nos frères du Kenya à l'indépendance. Je suis certain que ces querelles entre Africains, cette manœuvre dilatoire employée par un pays africain pour retarder l'indépendance d'un autre pays africain, font le plus grand plaisir aux puissances coloniales. C'est déplorable.

195. Quant aux aspirations de la Somalie à démembrer l'Ethiopie, chacun sait que ce n'est là qu'un vain mirage, un rêve irréalisable. La Somalie n'existait pas en tant qu'Etat avant le 30 juin 1960; par conséquent, les ambitions territoriales exprimées par notre frère de la Somalie montrent son manque de connaissance de l'histoire de son propre pays et de l'Ethiopie. Tout le monde sait que l'Etat actuel de Somalie était depuis des temps immémoriaux une province de l'Ethiopie. Le concert des nations, dans sa sagesse, a maintenant créé un nouvel Etat, la Somalie. Nous avons accepté ce fait et nous avons félicité nos amis. Tout allait pour le mieux, nous lui avons souhaité sincèrement le succès.

196. Cependant, des idéologies sinistres, celles du fascisme et du nazisme qui préconisaient l'expansionnisme territorial et l'irréductibilisme racial, ne peuvent pas servir à démembrer l'Ethiopie ou quelque autre pays d'Afrique. Cette façon d'agir ne peut que réduire énormément le prestige de nos frères de Somalie et nous le regrettons profondément. Je souhaite sincèrement que M. Farah Ali Omar renonce à ses petites chicanes et s'engage à créer une atmosphère plus favorable à la concorde entre l'Ethiopie et la Somalie. Nous ne craignons pas d'être recolonisés par quelque pays que ce soit parce que nous avons réussi à conserver notre unité nationale et notre intégrité territoriale contre d'autres Etats expansionnistes qui possédaient de grands armements perfectionnés. L'Ethiopie n'a pas été colonisée, elle a été occupée pendant cinq ans seulement et encore partiellement seulement.

197. Le paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration figurant dans la résolution 1514 (XV) stipule:

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

Cela est applicable au Kenya, puisque c'est tiré de la Déclaration de l'Assemblée sur le colonialisme.

Nous espérons que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni ne se laissera pas influencer et ne retardera pas l'indépendance du Kenya à cause de ce qu'a dit le représentant de la Somalie.

198. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

199. M. LAPINE (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Je voudrais répondre d'une façon très courte au raisonnement très naïf de M. Bingham représentant les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et mon collègue à la Quatrième Commission. Il a essayé ici d'enseigner aux pays d'Afrique comment il faut comprendre l'indépendance, l'autonomie, quelles connaissances, quelle expérience il faut avoir pour avoir le droit d'être indépendants. Il est évident que ces conseils ne sont pas très à leur place. Mais ne nous y arrêtons pas. Il est évident que les représentants de l'Afrique y répondront eux-mêmes. A part cela, nous allons encore avoir la possibilité de revenir au problème du colonialisme en examinant les projets de résolution.

200. Je voudrais dire quelques mots sur le raisonnement de M. Bingham au sujet de l'Union soviétique.

201. Il a déclaré que l'on pose souvent la question aux Etats-Unis, à ce qu'il semble, de savoir pourquoi, les Etats occidentaux ayant libéré de nombreux pays coloniaux, l'Union soviétique ne suit pas cet exemple. M. Bingham fait mine que de telles questions le mettent dans une situation embarrassante. Nous sommes prêts à l'aider. Expliquez donc à vos concitoyens que la presse américaine, ainsi que les milieux officiels des Etats-Unis depuis longtemps déforment la vérité à propos de l'Union soviétique.

202. Aux Etats-Unis, depuis de longues années, on publie et diffuse des idées fausses et calomnieuses sur l'Union soviétique. Et il est compréhensible que les simples citoyens des Etats-Unis puissent se poser des questions absurdes du genre de celles citées par M. Bingham. Il n'y a rien d'étonnant à cela. Si vous écriviez dans vos journaux et dans vos revues, si vous transmettiez par votre radio la vérité au sujet de l'Union soviétique, la vérité sur notre constitution, la vérité sur les rapports des républiques socialistes avec l'Union soviétique, la vérité sur notre économie, notre culture, notre politique, la vérité sur nos rapports avec les pays de démocratie populaire etc., évidemment on ne se ferait pas aux Etats-Unis de ces idées fausses.

203. Malheureusement, beaucoup de conceptions défendues parfois par les représentants des Etats-Unis, et par ceux qui veulent faire plaisir aux Etats-Unis, sont basées sur la contre-information, sur une déformation absolument grossière des faits. Il est possible que parfois les représentants des Etats-Unis commencent eux-mêmes à croire à ces contre-informations. Il est visible que ceci est une particularité de la "guerre froide" que continuent à mener contre l'Union soviétique la presse et la radio des Etats-Unis, et nous en avons les échos ici même à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

204. M. Bingham pose une question: "Pourquoi la Déclaration [résolution 1514 (XV)] ne s'applique-t-elle pas aux 200 millions d'hommes habitant les pays socialistes?" Mais voyez parfaitement vous-mêmes l'absurdité de cette question. Et bien! C'est parce que ces peuples sont libres, vivent dans des Etats indépendants et souverains et se dirigent comme ils le croient nécessaire, sans s'adresser aux Etats-Unis d'Amérique.

205. On discute ici la question du colonialisme et non pas ce qui vous plaît en Union soviétique et ce qui vous y déplaît. C'est un grand plaisir, que le représentant des Etats-Unis ait enfin parlé des colonies américaines. Ceci est bon signe. Il serait excellent que les Etats-Unis appliquent la Déclaration en ce qui concerne ces possessions coloniales, le monde entier considérant cela comme un phénomène positif.

206. Mais M. Bingham déclare qu'il faudrait demander aux populations des îles Vierges américaines, de Guam et des Samoa américaines, comment elles désirent se développer. Mais vous reconnaissez vous-mêmes qu'elles sont prêtes à l'indépendance. Dans ces conditions, sur quoi les consulter? Est-ce qu'un pays quelconque, est-ce qu'un peuple quel qu'il soit vous dira qu'il refuse la liberté, l'indépendance, mais préfère rester sous l'autorité des Etats-Unis? Il est impossible d'imaginer de telles réponses. Alors à quoi bon ces consultations? Ces pays sont déjà prêts à l'indépendance. Accordez-leur l'indépendance en conformité avec la Déclaration et l'affaire est réglée.

207. Je voudrais relever encore deux déclarations destinées également, sans doute, à des gens naïfs, mais il n'y en a pas dans cette assemblée.

208. Le représentant américain a parlé des forces armées soviétiques en Hongrie. Il l'a fait avec la tendance habituelle des Américains à la sensation. Mais qui donc ignore que les troupes soviétiques en Hongrie y restent en vertu d'un accord avec le Gouvernement de la République souveraine de Hongrie? Qui donc ne sait pas que l'Union soviétique a déjà proposé à plusieurs reprises aux puissances occidentales de retirer toutes les troupes des territoires étrangers dans les limites de son territoire national? Et nous sommes prêts à le faire à tout moment. Mais les Etats-Unis envoient en Europe de nouveaux contingents, de nouvelles divisions. C'est un fait! Vous pouvez jouer la naïveté, mais ne comptez pas que les autres soient aussi naïfs et qu'en réponse à l'augmentation de vos forces militaires, ils vont affaiblir leur défense. On ne peut attendre cela de l'Union soviétique et des pays socialistes.

209. Maintenant une dernière remarque sur les relations économiques de l'Occident avec les pays sous-développés.

210. Le représentant des Etats-Unis a tenté de nous faire croire que l'Union soviétique souhaite la rupture de ces relations. Mais qui le croira? C'est pure invention de votre part. L'Union soviétique ne s'est jamais prononcée pour la rupture des relations des pays sous-développés avec les puissances occidentales. Ce serait absurde et naïf. Nous nous élevons contre les différentes formes du néo-colonialisme. Nous sommes opposés à ce que la coopération économique soit assortie de conditions politiques, que soient imposés à ce pays des accords de toutes sortes basés sur l'inégalité; nous nous opposons à ce que les relations économiques soient associées de menaces, d'implantations de bases militaires, de corruption, de commerce à conditions inégales et désavantageuses, etc. Voilà contre quoi s'élève l'Union soviétique. De nombreux pays d'Afrique et d'ailleurs ont fait de même. Nous serions heureux si les relations entre les pays occidentaux et les pays sous-développés présentaient un caractère réellement commercial exempt de toutes sortes de conditions politiques et discriminatoires, si ces relations se fondaient sur une pleine égalité de droits, sur une franche coopération, etc. Qui donc pourrait s'élever contre ceci? Personne.

211. Le représentant des Etats-Unis a décidé aussi de répandre toutes sortes de calomnies contre l'Union soviétique de la nature de celles dont se servent habituellement la presse à sensation et la "Voix de l'Amérique". Après tout, c'est son affaire et je n'ai pas l'intention de lui répondre à ce sujet. Il faut croire que, quand on défend une mauvaise cause, on n'est pas très difficile sur le choix des moyens et que l'on fait entrer même les informations de la presse à sensation à l'intérieur de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

212. Cette session examine sous tous ses aspects et d'une façon approfondie le problème de la liquidation du colonialisme et elle mènera cette étude à bonne fin et prendra une résolution juste. Nous n'avons aucun doute à ce sujet. Et les tentatives de diversion anticommuniste ne détourneront pas la session de l'objectif fondamental et généreux qui est le sien.

La séance est levée à 18 h 20.

La situation en ce qui concerne l'applctation de la Décla-

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite*):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole aux orateurs inscrits pour la séance de ce soir, j'aimerais attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur le nouveau projet de résolution qui a été déposé [A/L.368].

2. M. ROSSIDES (Chypre) [traduit de l'anglais]: La résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée l'an dernier et contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a été qualifiée à juste titre de résolution historique. Cette résolution qui a condamné dans le monde entier le colonialisme et même toute domination d'un peuple sur un autre peuple par la force a ouvert un nouveau chapitre dans l'histoire de l'humanité. Le colonialisme était admis autrefois sur le plan international en tant que système politique d'administration et sa légalité constitutionnelle était reconnue. Ainsi, la domination par la force et le déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme étaient choses normales. Tout en ayant toujours été en contradiction avec les fondements de la morale, le colonialisme ne constituait pas alors un problème mondial. Maintenant, c'est un problème mondial et un problème qu'il faut impérativement résoudre d'urgence.

3. Les Nations Unies auraient failli à leur responsabilité première si elles n'avaient pas, par cette déclaration, solennellement condamné et aboli le colonialisme.

4. La résolution adoptée l'an dernier reflète et enregistre le réveil de la conscience de l'humanité devant ce problème. En toute étape de l'évolution du genre humain, les idées et concepts qui ont cours déterminent les problèmes qui surgissent, leur importance et leur gravité. Ainsi, une injustice ne devient vraiment un problème qu'à partir du moment où la conscience de l'humain se réveille devant cette injustice. L'injustice est alors considérée de plus en plus comme une anomalie et une cause de friction qui ne peut être éliminée que par le rétablissement de la justice et de l'équilibre.

5. Il faut comprendre que dans de tels cas les tentatives d'immobilisme et de maintien de l'ordre par la force, sans porter remède au mal essentiel, sont condamnées à l'échec et provoquent des luttes et des conflits plus graves encore. Il est vain en effet d'essayer d'endiguer la marée de la liberté ou d'arrêter le cours de l'histoire.

6. Dans notre monde en évolution rapide, l'élément essentiel de la science du gouvernement est la capacité de s'adapter promptement à des conditions sans cesse changeantes. Plus vite les puissances administrantes s'adapteront au temps présent, mieux cela vaudra pour elles et pour le monde entier. En effet, il ne peut être dans l'intérêt véritable des puissances coloniales elles-mêmes de persister à appliquer une politique de domination et d'inégalité, avec tout ce que cela comporte de conflits et de luttes à l'intérieur ainsi que d'accroissement de la tension sur le plan international.

7. C'est ce que les Nations Unies cherchent à éviter. D'une façon générale, on peut dire qu'aucune nation, aucun peuple et aucun gouvernement, quelle que soit sa force matérielle, ne peut méconnaître impunément les principes moraux fondamentaux conditionnés par l'époque et par le lieu, ni ne tenir aucun compte de la force de l'opinion publique mondiale. Quand il s'agit de colonialisme, il ne faut pas perdre de vue que ce terme, tout en étant apparenté à celui de colonisation, a acquis une signification distincte et indépendante. Il désigne toute domination par la force et l'exploitation d'un peuple par un autre.

8. Chypre, dans son histoire moderne, n'a pas été colonisée, elle n'était pas une colonie dans aucun des sens authentiques du mot. Toutefois, durant une période récente, Chypre avait le statut d'une colonie et elle a connu le colonialisme dans une de ses manifestations les plus graves, celle de la politique qui consiste à "diviser pour régner".

9. Etant nous-mêmes à peine sortis d'un état de dépendance coloniale à l'issue d'une longue lutte que nous avons menée dans le domaine politique pour nous libérer, qui a duré des dizaines d'années et s'est terminée par quatre années de résistance armée et de grands sacrifices, nous faisons nôtre avec une sympathie particulièrement chaleureuse la cause de la libération de tous les peuples coloniaux. Nous partageons leurs espoirs et leurs aspirations, ainsi que leurs épreuves et leurs tribulations. Nous sommes à leurs côtés dans leur marche vers la liberté, qu'il s'agisse de l'Algérie, de l'Angola, du Ruanda-Urundi ou de toute autre contrée du monde où l'on refuse la liberté au peuple. Mais, indépendamment de notre engagement total pour la cause de la liberté, nous considérons la question de la liquidation du colonialisme également d'un point de vue plus large, celui de la paix et de la stabilité dans le monde, car il ne peut y avoir de paix durable sans la liberté universelle et il ne peut y avoir de liberté universelle tant que le colonialisme subsiste.

10. L'interdépendance est un des grands traits de notre époque. A mesure que les progrès de la technique permettent à l'homme de maîtriser davantage la nature, les dimensions de la terre se rétrécissent sous ses pieds. Plus que jamais, il est évident que l'humanité est indivisible, de même que sont indivisibles la liberté et la paix. Les dangers de guerre qui menacent l'humanité devraient rendre ces vérités plus saisissantes encore, de sorte que nous progressions, avec l'accord général et la coopération éclairée de tous les États, vers l'élimination du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes, du totalitarisme et de toute autre forme de domination par la force, et que nous suivions ainsi la voie de la paix.

11. Un autre aspect du colonialisme, dont les Nations Unies doivent tenir compte particulièrement, est que le colonialisme est l'un des deux grands écueils auxquels les Nations Unies elles-mêmes se sont heurtées. L'autre est la guerre froide. Le colonialisme, du reste, par son effet néfaste sur le domaine politique, a compliqué la guerre froide. La persistance de certaines puissances à appliquer un colonialisme d'une époque révolue a exercé une influence rétrograde sur l'Organisation des Nations Unies et a sérieusement porté atteinte à son prestige et à son autorité. Il en a été ainsi parce que ces puissances donnaient un exemple d'observation des résolutions des Nations Unies sur la libre détermination et les droits de l'homme, résolution dont elles réclamaient l'application, en d'autres cas, ou pis encore, parce qu'elles usaient de leur influence pour empêcher l'adoption de telles résolutions, pourtant fondées sur la Charte des Nations Unies. La politique colonialiste n'a pas exercé une influence heureuse sur l'Organisation des Nations Unies et sur son prestige. Nous en avons vu de nombreux exemples dont certains nous touchaient même directement, mais d'une façon générale la question algérienne peut être citée comme un cas d'espèce.

12. Lorsqu'à la dixième session de l'Assemblée générale, en 1955, la question algérienne a été portée pour la première fois devant les Nations Unies, l'Assemblée, influencée par les courants d'opinions qui dominaient à l'époque, a décidé [548ème séance] de ne pas l'examiner. La question a donc été laissée de côté. Ainsi, les Nations Unies n'ont pas adopté une résolution tendant à régler cette question d'une façon pacifique, à une époque où un tel règlement aurait cependant été beaucoup plus facile à obtenir. Le résultat regrettable de cette attitude a été que les effusions de sang ont continué et que la situation s'est aggravée. Il en a été de même aux sessions suivantes.

13. La force des événements qui prenaient de plus en plus la voie de la violence dans une situation en aggravation rapide a déterminé leur développement sans que les Nations Unies eussent pris une initiative constructive pour aplanir les divergences et apporter une contribution utile au règlement de la question sur la base de la Charte. Cette attitude pouvait à l'époque paraître souhaitable à ceux qui préféraient que l'Organisation des Nations Unies fût inactive, mais il est évident maintenant qu'elle n'a servi les intérêts ni du peuple français, ni du peuple algérien, ni de l'Orga-nisation elle-même et de la paix mondiale. En 1959, bien que le président de Gaulle, pratiquant une politique plus réaliste et plus perspicace, eût admis le principe de l'autodétermination pour l'Algérie, les Nations Unies ont toujours été incapables de se prononcer en faveur de ce principe conformément à leur charte, ou d'adopter une résolution sur une question d'une telle importance pour la paix mondiale. De ce fait, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a été reléguée au rôle d'une arrière-garde, au lieu d'être, comme ses fondateurs l'avaient voulu, une avant-garde qui, par une action en temps opportun, devance les crises et prévient les difficultés. Pareille incapacité d'agir conformément aux principes fondamentaux de la Charte dans un cas d'une importance aussi capitale ne pouvait pas faire honneur à l'Organisation ni rehausser son prestige.

14. Toutefois, à la suite de l'entrée de nouveaux Membres, un esprit de respect pour les principes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies s'est fait sentir, une nouvelle atmosphère s'est créée. A la quinzième session, pour la première fois, a été adoptée une résolution [1573 (XV)] sur la question algérienne, sur le fond de la question. Bien que la situation continue à s'aggraver, il y a maintenant des signes prometteurs qui annoncent la reprise prochaine de nouvelles négociations. Nous espérons sincèrement qu'elles se dérouleront dans un esprit de compréhension mutuelle qui permettra de rétablir la paix fondée sur la liberté, l'égalité et la coopération entre les deux nations intéressées et d'instituer une nouvelle ère d'association étroite et amicale entre la France et l'Algérie.

15. Je me suis étendu assez longuement sur le cas de l'Algérie, en le considérant comme un exemple des écueils auxquels les Nations Unies se sont heurtées à cause de l'esprit de colonialisme et, par conséquent, comme une preuve de la nécessité de sa suppression. Il y a eu bien d'autres cas d'écueils de ce genre. Toutefois, il faut maintenir et consolider avec soin l'autorité et le prestige de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et il faut favoriser son développement normal, car elle représente aujourd'hui le seul moyen existant d'atteindre la compréhension internationale et la paix et le seul espoir de l'humanité à un moment où son existence même est en jeu. La liquidation définitive du colonialisme renforcera l'Organisation de nombreuses façons, notamment en rendant les puissances occidentales plus libres dans leur politique, ce qui fortifiera et élargira le front commun de lutte pour la liberté et les droits de l'homme, fondements de la paix.

16. La Déclaration de l'an dernier sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a constitué un important pas en avant vers l'indépendance de tous les peuples, mais il est nécessaire de prendre des mesures pour en assurer l'application rapide. Ma délégation est heureuse de constater que, depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme, le Sierra Leone a acquis l'indépendance et est devenu Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous nous préparons à accueillir ici le Tanganyika et, peu de temps après, le Samoa-Occidental, qui seront de nouveaux États indépendants. Le fait que ces pays ont acquis leur indépendance par des moyens pacifiques est à l'honneur de la puissance administrante intéressée qui a appliqué une politique réaliste avisée et conforme à la Déclaration. Cependant, il reste encore plusieurs millions d'hommes, environ 70 millions, sous une domination coloniale dans différents territoires. Dans certains de ces territoires, le progrès vers l'indépendance semble particulièrement lent; dans d'autres, il est à peu près nul.

17. Nous sommes profondément préoccupés et affligés par la situation tragique en Angola, où les victimes de la répression et de la lutte pour la libération se chiffrent par milliers. Le déni de liberté et la violation des droits de l'homme en Angola sont un sujet de préoccupation générale tant au sein de l'Organisation qu'au dehors; on ne peut fermer les yeux devant cette situation sous le prétexte que la question relèverait de la compétence nationale d'un Etat. L'argument selon lequel l'Angola ferait partie intégrante de la métropole portugaise n'est qu'une fiction juridique dont le but est d'esquiver les dispositions de la Charte. La réalité présente parle d'elle-même et prouve que le peuple de l'Angola est un peuple colonial asservi auquel sont refusés les libertés et les droits fondamentaux de l'homme. En outre, il faut souligner que, dans tous les cas de violation massive des droits de l'homme, l'argument de la compétence nationale est sans valeur. Ma délégation est d'avis, comme nous l'avons déjà dit en une autre occasion, que les Nations Unies peuvent et doivent pouvoir, en vertu de la Charte, intervenir dans tous les cas et dans n'importe quelle partie du monde où les droits de l'homme sont violés et s'efforcer de faire opérer les redressements nécessaires dans l'intérêt de la paix, car il ne peut y avoir de paix là où les libertés et les droits fondamentaux de l'homme sont violés et où la volonté du peuple est orientée vers la rébellion, que la rébellion soit latente ou ouverte.

18. Dans certains territoires d'Afrique australe, où des colonies de blancs vivent au milieu d'une population de couleur, la situation du point de vue du respect des droits de l'homme et de la représentation politique est toujours loin d'être satisfaisante. Le tableau général qu'offre le monde colonial montre que des mesures urgentes doivent être prises pour l'application de la Déclaration adoptée l'an dernier, afin que ses dispositions soient traduites dans la réalité.

19. C'est pourquoi ma délégation a présenté, en commun avec 37 autres délégations, un projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Il est proposé dans ce projet de résolution de créer un comité spécial chargé d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-septième session; cela devrait constituer un pas utile et constructif vers l'application de la Déclaration. Nous espérons que la plupart des membres de l'Assemblée approuveront ce projet de résolution.

20. Il est également important de protéger les nouveaux Etats de toute atteinte à leur indépendance, que ce soit sous la forme d'un néo-colonialisme ou sous toute autre forme; à cet égard, la question proposée l'an dernier par les Etats-Unis sous le titre "Afrique: programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance et le développement"^{1/} avait pour but d'aider les nouveaux Etats, qui étaient alors au nombre de 16, à éviter une ingérence étrangère dans leur progression vers l'indépendance.

21. Je voudrais dire maintenant quelques mots au sujet des deux projets de résolution concernant la question de l'Irian occidental ou Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale.

22. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354] nous estimons devoir exprimer notre appréciation des bonnes intentions manifestées par les Pays-Bas dans leur façon d'envisager la question, ainsi qu'en témoigne l'offre de transférer la souveraineté à la population du Territoire de Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, ou Irian occidental, et de le placer sous l'administration de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en vue de l'application du principe de l'autodétermination, conformément à la Charte et à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Nous apprécions également le respect évident dont témoignent les Pays-Bas à l'égard de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme, en se conformant à l'esprit des temps modernes. Si pareille attitude était adoptée par d'autres puissances coloniales ou dans d'autres territoires, la liquidation du colonialisme ne poserait aucun problème.

23. Dans ce cas particulier, cependant, d'autres considérations importantes doivent également être retenues. L'intégrité de l'Indonésie en tant qu'entité nationale unique, comprenant la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, a été reconnue et traitée comme telle par le Gouvernement néerlandais durant toute la période de la souveraineté des Pays-Bas et de leur occupation de l'ensemble du territoire.

24. D'autre part, il faut tenir compte du fait que la population de l'Irian occidental n'est pas en mesure, pour le moment, et ne le sera pas avant longtemps, de s'administrer elle-même, et il faut envisager aussi s'il est possible ou pratique que l'Organisation des Nations Unies entreprenne d'exercer une sorte de tutelle directe sur la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale pendant ce temps.

25. Tout cela devra être examiné et il faudra l'examiner en tenant compte du fait que l'intégrité d'une nation, si c'est une seule nation, un seul pays, ne doit pas être détruite par une autodétermination pareille appliquée à une petite partie de cette nation. Par conséquent, tout cela devra être examiné et nous réservons, pour le moment, notre attitude.

26. Le projet de résolution de l'Inde [A/L.367 et Add.1] a le mérite de laisser s'écouler un nouveau délai d'un an avant que l'on s'engage dans un sens ou dans un autre, ce qui permet de nouvelles négociations et de nouveaux arrangements entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie dans l'espoir d'un accord sur une solution satisfaisante pour les deux parties, sauvegardant leurs intérêts ainsi que ceux de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale ou Irian occidental.

27. Le fait est significatif que le Gouvernement néerlandais lui-même a reconnu, dans la charte de transfert de la souveraineté^{2/} qui a déclaré l'Indonésie indépendante, que le sort de l'Irian occidental intéressait directement l'Indonésie et devrait être débattu et résolu par des négociations entre les deux parties, ainsi que le prévoyait la charte de transfert. Par cette disposition de la charte de transfert, deux points étaient admis. Le premier point résulte du fait même que dans la charte de transfert de la souveraineté qui a déclaré l'Indonésie indépendante on a jugé nécessaire de faire une réserve pour ce qui est de l'Irian occidental, ce qui implique que l'Irian occidental était considéré comme faisant partie de l'Indonésie, puisqu'il était nécessaire de faire cette réserve dans la charte de transfert. S'il s'était agi d'une partie d'un autre pays, il n'y aurait eu aucune nécessité de faire une réserve.

^{2/} Voir Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 69 (1950), I, No 894, p. 207.

28. Le deuxième point est que la nécessité de négociations entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie au sujet de l'avenir de l'Irian occidental est admise par cette disposition même de la charte de transfert. En conséquence, il semble qu'un nouveau délai d'un an, ou d'une autre durée — je ne sais pas s'il est question d'un an, ou d'un délai plus court ou plus long —, durant lequel des négociations se dérouleraient entre les deux parties, serait conforme aux intentions premières des Pays-Bas et utile aux deux parties en permettant d'arriver à une solution par voie d'accord quant au sort futur de l'Irian occidental. Si les deux parties n'arrivent pas à un accord, nous pourrions réexaminer la question. Mais pourquoi ne pas leur donner une chance de s'entendre? Pourquoi ne pas leur offrir la possibilité de se réunir?

29. Cela est conforme aux principes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et il me semble que ce dernier projet de résolution pourrait être utile. Néanmoins, nous ne voulons pas nous engager. Nous devons examiner la question plus avant et nous nous réservons le droit de présenter de nouvelles observations sur les deux projets de résolution.

30. Un autre point que je mentionnerai au sujet de la liquidation du colonialisme est que ma délégation n'est pas d'avis que l'année 1970 ou toute autre date soit fixée comme terme pour la décolonisation définitive. Cette proposition paraît manquer au plus haut degré de sens pratique, si l'on tient compte de la marche rapide des événements à notre époque. En cet âge de la technologie et de la vitesse, toute date fixée d'avance aurait pour effet de retarder plutôt que d'accélérer le processus de décolonisation. La décolonisation doit être immédiate et continue dans chaque territoire. Elle aurait dû commencer aussitôt adoptée la résolution 1514 (XV) et elle devrait se poursuivre dans chaque territoire avec célérité, en tenant compte des conditions propres à chaque territoire et en progressant méthodiquement vers l'indépendance. La fixation de dates à l'avance constituerait donc un obstacle à la réalisation de l'objectif même d'une rapide décolonisation.

31. Nous avons atteint une époque où la liquidation définitive du colonialisme amorcera un vaste mouvement en avant vers l'abandon de toutes les notions de domination par la force dans les conflits d'intérêts ou d'idéologies et ouvrira la voie à une paix durable. La liquidation définitive du colonialisme est une nécessité préalable à tout mouvement vers la liberté et la paix. En effet, aussi longtemps que subsistera l'esprit de domination par la force et qu'il sera sanctionné par le colonialisme, cet esprit entraînera inévitablement dans son sillage la méfiance et la suspicion, contrecarrant tous les efforts vers la réalisation d'un monde pacifique. En considérant la question dans ce sens plus large, on peut dire qu'il est de l'intérêt de toute l'humanité que le colonialisme soit liquidé au plus vite.

32. Nous adressons un appel aux Etats administrants, aux termes de notre projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3], en leur demandant leur coopération sincère pour une prompt liquidation du colonialisme dans l'ordre et le calme, en substituant l'égalité et l'amitié aux antagonismes et aux luttes entre ceux qui dominent et ceux qui sont asservis. Alors seulement pourrions-nous envisager avec espoir un avenir de nouvelles réalisations humaines dans un univers de paix fondée sur la liberté.

33. M. SYLLA (Madagascar): Prenant pour la première fois la parole à cette tribune, je me permets, Monsieur le Président, de vous réitérer les félicitations que le Gouvernement de la République malgache vous a précédemment adressées à l'occasion de votre élection à l'unanimité à la présidence de l'Assemblée générale à sa seizième session. Nous en avons été doublement heureux, d'une part, parce que, membre de la grande famille africaine, nous avons ressenti tout l'honneur qui, de ce fait, rejaillissait sur notre continent, d'autre part, parce que vous avez été, pour notre pays, un fidèle et précieux ami.

34. Il m'est agréable d'exprimer au Secrétaire général nos plus chaleureuses félicitations. Sa nomination à la tête de notre organisation contribuera à maintenir haut et ferme son prestige. Mon gouvernement est persuadé que le Secrétaire général apportera dans ses fonctions la même foi, le même enthousiasme et la même compétence que son éminent prédécesseur, Dag Hammarskjöld, devant la mémoire duquel, une fois de plus, mon gouvernement s'incline avec respect et tristesse.

35. Ma délégation, comme celles des 26 autres Etats africains, a estimé nécessaire de grouper en un seul débat les deux questions inscrites à l'ordre du jour de notre session: l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et l'assistance à l'Afrique. Elle considère que ces deux questions sont inséparables. Nous ne concevons pas que l'indépendance puisse signifier l'anarchie et la misère, et les récents événements qui se sont produits dans un pays qui nous est particulièrement cher — je veux parler du Congo (Léopoldville) — nous en apportent, s'il en est besoin, une nouvelle confirmation.

36. Ce point de vue est, du reste, partagé par tous les Etats qui, réunis du 6 au 12 septembre 1961 à Tananarive, ont formé cette union d'Etats pacifiques, résolus à conjuguer leurs efforts pour un monde meilleur et qui s'appelle l'Union africaine et malgache. Abordant ce chapitre primordial de l'indépendance, les chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement de l'Union africaine et malgache ont adopté à l'unanimité la déclaration suivante:

"Les chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement de l'UAM sont conscients du fait que voici. C'est l'existence de pays sous-développés, c'est-à-dire l'inégalité entre les peuples — inégalité organisée — qui a provoqué les deux guerres mondiales en excitant l'appétit des grandes puissances. Ils sont également conscients du fait que ce sont, en même temps, les lenteurs de la décolonisation et la faiblesse des Etats décolonisés qui entretiennent la guerre froide. Deux séries de mesures s'imposent: accélérer le processus de décolonisation, aider les pays décolonisés à se développer.

"L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit accélérer le processus de décolonisation en usant de tous ses moyens pour faire appliquer la Déclaration sur l'indépendance des pays et des peuples coloniaux votée à la XVème Assemblée générale.

"Comment? En examinant chaque cas particulier pour préconiser des solutions efficaces. Nous distinguerons, dans ce domaine, les puissances qui décolonisent efficacement et celles qui s'y refusent: essentiellement la France et l'Angleterre, d'une part, le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et les autres, d'autre part. On signalera que l'Asie est loin d'être décolonisée.

"Mais il ne suffit pas de décoloniser. Pour que la décolonisation atteigne son but, encore faut-il que les régimes des pays indépendants soient démocratisés."

37. L'on constatera que, dans ce raccourci saisissant, les problèmes de la décolonisation et ceux de la nécessité de l'assistance aux pays colonisés sont posés en termes nets et précis.

38. J'aimerais développer en quelques mots la doctrine du Gouvernement malgache sur ces deux points. Je parlerai d'abord des problèmes de l'assistance; les pays et peuples dépendants doivent être préparés à la souveraineté interne et externe. Sur ce point, notre doctrine n'a pas changé depuis que, le 13 novembre 1959, le Président de la République malgache a eu l'honneur de la développer^{3/} devant la Deuxième Commission.

39. Etudiant les problèmes du sous-développement, le président Tsiranana a exposé certaines des raisons qui ont accentué celui-ci au cours des 10 dernières années: une exceptionnelle expansion démographique, l'augmentation de l'écart entre le niveau de vie dans le monde sous-développé et celui des pays industriels. Cette inégalité se traduit par une certaine prise de conscience, par les pays insuffisamment développés, de leur situation par rapport au reste du monde.

40. Seule une aide financière judicieusement répartie peut abréger le temps que nécessite l'ascension des pays sous-développés vers une situation économique normale. Mais, comme l'a fait remarquer notre président, cette aide financière doit être humanisée en ce sens qu'on ne doit lui imposer ni des objectifs limités ni des conditions paralysantes. L'ère du paternalisme est révolue tout comme, précédemment, celle du despotisme éclairé. Il n'est plus temps de chercher à faire le bonheur et la prospérité des peuples malgré eux ou sans eux.

41. Je pense que ces quelques considérations ne devront jamais être perdues de vue par les Etats qui, si généreusement, apportent aux pays sous-développés de l'Afrique et de Madagascar une aide que l'Assemblée générale a caractérisée comme étant un sursaut de la conscience universelle. C'est aussi un acte intelligent susceptible d'éliminer l'une des causes qui empêchent la fraternité d'être la loi suprême de notre monde.

42. Il a été beaucoup question ici de la différenciation que certains tentent de faire entre l'aide bilatérale et l'aide internationale ou multilatérale. J'estime, pour ma part, que c'est là un faux problème. Si, en effet, l'aide internationale multilatérale présente d'incontestables avantages, touchant notamment à la sauvegarde de la dignité et de l'indépendance nationales, il nous faut bien reconnaître que le volume de cette aide est loin de correspondre à l'importance des buts qu'elle s'est assignés. Or, les besoins des pays sous-développés sont urgents. Seule l'aide bilatérale leur permet actuellement d'accélérer leur promotion dans tous les domaines dans la mesure où, accordée avec désintéressement et générosité, elle ne s'ac-compagne d'aucune exigence politique, d'aucune forme de servitude.

43. On a beaucoup parlé, au sein de notre assemblée et dans les commissions spécialisées, des liens économiques existant actuellement entre certains Etats européens et les Etats africains et malgache qui ont demandé d'être membres associés. Je veux parler ici du Marché commun au sujet duquel bien des affirmations contraires à la vérité ont été lancées du haut de cette tribune.

44. L'association de mon pays avec cet organisme ne comporte absolument aucun lien de caractère politique. Les obligations contractuelles de l'une et de l'autre partie sont clairement énoncées. Il est notamment précisé qu'aucune limitation ne peut être apportée à la création ou à l'expansion de nouvelles industries dans mon pays.

45. En ce qui concerne les accords bilatéraux d'assistance avec la France, mon gouvernement estime qu'ils sont des éléments primordiaux de notre développement. Certes, des critiques ont été maintes fois entendues selon lesquelles certaines grandes puissances "lâchaient, dans le vide de l'indépendance, leurs anciennes colonies après leur avoir permis d'accéder à l'indépendance". Cela n'a pas été notre cas, et je tiens à le proclamer bien haut. Cela appartient au passé; mais, en ce qui concerne l'avenir, dans les accords bilatéraux que nous recherchons, il ne pourra jamais être question d'aliéner notre souveraineté.

46. Sur ce point précis, nous avons une doctrine: c'est d'engager les nations qui ont encore des pays dépendant d'eux à octroyer à ces derniers l'indépendance dans les meilleurs délais par l'autodétermination de leurs peuples et à se faire un devoir d'adopter, parallèlement, les réformes appropriées, en particulier des mesures économiques, afin que cette indépendance s'épanouisse dans un climat de prospérité, de concorde et de paix.

47. J'ai dit tout à l'heure que l'aide économique et financière devait être judicieusement répartie. Elle doit porter sur des travaux et des investissements sélectionnés, non pas en raison de leur caractère spectaculaire, mais surtout parce qu'ils peuvent contribuer au bonheur et au progrès de l'homme, ce qui, en définitive, devrait être notre premier souci. Le président Tsiranana s'est expliqué longuement à ce sujet quand il a précisé qu'il était nécessaire de consacrer une grande partie de l'aide financière à des investissements "au ras du sol".

48. J'en viens maintenant à la question de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, qui fait l'objet du point 88 de notre ordre du jour. La base de la doctrine de mon gouvernement est l'autodétermination. Nous estimons que ce n'est pas à d'autres pays, ni même à notre organisation, de fixer le destin des peuples dépendants. C'est à ces peuples — et à eux seuls — qu'il appartient de dire clairement, lorsque le moment est venu, quel est le sort qu'ils entendent librement choisir. J'estime qu'en la matière le devoir de notre organisation est de veiller à ce que l'expression de la volonté populaire soit sincère et que le choix ne soit entaché d'aucune pression extérieure.

49. Dans notre esprit, les mesures destinées à donner force à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] sont les suivantes:

1) Prise rapide de mesures administratives et politiques tendant à associer les populations à l'administration de leurs pays et à constituer les cadres administratifs et politiques nécessaires;

2) Déclaration formelle des grandes puissances qui doivent s'engager à respecter le libre choix des populations;

3) Orientation de l'économie de ces peuples de façon à leur donner une aisance économique lorsqu'ils auront atteint l'indépendance politique;

4) Mise en œuvre de l'autodétermination par une consultation sincère, avec, en cas de besoin, l'assistance de notre organisation.

Telles sont les grandes lignes des mesures qui, d'après mon gouvernement, doivent constituer la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration.

50. Dans la ligne de ces mesures, il apparaît immédiatement que certains des Etats colonisateurs, et en premier lieu le Portugal, doivent modifier l'orientation de leur politique. Au lieu d'une assimilation, qui n'est qu'une vue utopique de l'esprit, ce pays doit résolument regarder la réalité en face. Il y a une âme africaine, une âme malgache, comme il y a une âme angolaise, une âme particulière à l'Africain du Mozambique. Je répète qu'il n'est pas réaliste de persister à vouloir orienter l'administration de ces territoires en vue d'une intégration irréalisable en fait et dangereuse dans la pratique.

51. C'est dans ce sens que mon pays voudrait voir s'infléchir la ligne de l'action coloniale du Portugal, si ce pays veut se conformer aux principes solennellement posés dans la Déclaration.

52. En ce qui concerne l'Afrique du Sud, est-il besoin de déclarer avec force que mon pays désapprouve entièrement la politique de ségrégation raciale, d'apartheid, telle qu'elle a été définie récemment à la tribune de notre assemblée par le délégué de l'Afrique du Sud [1033ème séance]. On croit rêver quand on entend défendre, à la tribune de notre organisation, une politique dont le seul but est de dénier tous droits politiques et, en fait, toute dignité morale à 9 millions d'Africains soumis à la dure loi de la suprématie d'une minorité blanche. Il est évident que de telles conceptions violent les principes les plus sacrés énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies et portent gravement atteinte à la dignité de l'homme.

53. Les derniers territoires encore sous mandat ou sous tutelle doivent faire l'objet d'une préparation intensive dans la ligne que nous avons définie plus haut, de façon qu'ils se trouvent dotés d'institutions qui leur soient propres et que l'on puisse procéder à l'autodétermination, qui doit demeurer l'assise fondamentale de la décolonisation.

54. Il existe des cas particuliers dont la solution ne semble pas être aussi simple que les intéressés veulent bien le dire. Je fais allusion ici au problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et à celui des autres territoires pour lesquels aucune annonce officielle d'accession à l'indépendance n'a encore été faite. Pour tous ces problèmes, les solutions doivent être étudiées par mon gouvernement, en liaison avec les Etats de l'Union africaine et malgache et, ce qui serait infiniment souhaitable, au sein d'un groupement plus vaste, tel que celui des participants à la Conférence de Monrovia^{4/}, ou le groupe africain dans son ensemble. Je le répète avec force, c'est aux peuples intéressés, et à eux seuls, qu'il appartient de choisir leur destin. C'est là la pierre angulaire de la politique de mon gouvernement: l'autodétermination.

55. Nous voici au terme de ces débats, au cours desquels tant d'éminents orateurs, rivaillant de générosité, ont étudié les moyens les meilleurs pour une rapide éradication du colonialisme.

56. Mon gouvernement est prêt à appuyer tous projets de résolution tendant à la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration et à voter en leur faveur. Il estime souhaitable pour cela d'avoir la collaboration des grandes puissances ayant encore la responsabilité de territoires et de peuples dépendants. Sans cette collaboration, nos résolutions risquent de conserver un caractère tout théorique ou de ne représenter que des phases de la guerre froide.

57. Si, comme je le crois fermement, la grande majorité des peuples dépendants choisit l'indépendance, la puissance administrante doit continuer à leur apporter son appui et, par ailleurs, notre organisation et les organismes internationaux doivent sans délai se pencher sur leur sort en vue de leur apporter une aide immédiate et suffisante.

58. J'ai la ferme conviction que c'est dans ces directions que l'ONU doit s'orienter pour mettre en œuvre les principes généraux qu'elle a posés dans la Charte et pour répondre à l'immense espoir que ces principes ont suscité dans le monde.

59. M. BENHIMA (Maroc): Je me souviens qu'à son retour d'exil S. M. Mohammed V, s'adressant pour la première fois au peuple marocain, a recommandé avec une émotion particulière que tout son peuple, s'il ne parvenait pas à oublier les souffrances qu'il avait endurées, fît un effort pour pardonner à ceux qui les leur avaient fait subir. Il a exhorté la nation à ne pas se préoccuper d'un passé qui pouvait sans doute lui inspirer de la rancune, mais à tendre toute son énergie vers un avenir qui réclamait d'elle plus d'efforts que le passé, qui comportait plus d'obstacles pénibles à franchir et qui ne pouvait être construit sainement que dans la concorde nationale et la coopération avec tout le monde, y compris l'ancien colonisateur. Le roi lui-même a été le premier à tendre la main du pardon à ceux qui, au Maroc ou ailleurs, avaient été les responsables de son exil et du drame qui s'en était suivi. C'est avec une particulière satisfaction que nous avons constaté que c'était là non seulement un geste politique d'une grande sagesse, mais la manifestation d'une conception philosophique d'une profonde justesse et d'une haute élévation de pensée. C'est d'ailleurs l'attitude qu'ont eue, avant ou après lui, tous ceux qui ont eu la lourde charge de diriger la lutte douloureuse de leurs peuples pour leur libération, à l'époque où la liberté était arrachée à l'occupant par le sang, les larmes et les souffrances dans les prisons. Je voudrais me référer notamment à l'exemple de Jawaharlal Nehru, de Sukarno, de Bourguiba, de N'Krumah, qui sera certainement suivi demain par Ben Bella, Ben Keddah et leurs amis.

60. C'est forte de cet enseignement et animée de cet esprit que la délégation du Maroc participe au débat sur le colonialisme, en essayant d'apporter sa contribution à la recherche des moyens appropriés pour accélérer le phénomène de décolonisation et en excluant tout esprit de rancune contre qui que ce soit, quelle que puisse être, pourtant, la légitimité de ce sentiment.

^{4/} Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique, réunie du 4 au 8 août 1959.

61. Nous avons écouté parfois, non sans une certaine surprise, des interventions qui accusaient légèrement les voix anticolonialistes de se livrer à l'expression d'un refoulement de haine ou de rancune, comme s'il était plus décent d'être un ancien colonisateur qu'un ancien colonisé. Sans vouloir faire ici le procès du colonialisme, il faut convenir cependant que ce phénomène, qui a marqué l'histoire des trois derniers siècles, ne peut être passé sous silence par simple pudeur, alors qu'aujourd'hui ceux-là mêmes qui en ont fait l'expérience se trouvent placés devant la nécessité historique de le dénoncer tel qu'il a été, et non pas tel que l'ont décrit ceux qui l'ont pratiqué.

62. Nous voulons que nos interventions soient considérées non point comme des plaidoiries, mais comme des témoignages authentiques, qui n'ont pu être apportés quand la loi du silence nous était imposée, témoignages que nous devons honnêtement verser au dossier de l'histoire pour l'honneur de ceux qui ont consacré leur vie à la liberté et par amour des générations à venir, auxquelles nous voulons à tout prix épargner ce calvaire. D'autre part, nous pensons honnêtement que, la liberté ayant rendu le dialogue possible entre colonisateurs et colonisés, la confrontation pourrait entraîner la disparition de tous les complexes et ouvrir la voie à une collaboration loyale et fructueuse. Il ne tient d'ailleurs qu'à ceux qui nous accusent que ce sujet de discussion disparaisse. Le débat auquel nous procédons actuellement devrait, à notre sens, exaucer ce vœu, si la sincérité est égale chez tous ceux qu'il concerne.

63. Il serait bien difficile de nous opposer la preuve d'une mauvaise volonté quelconque en ce qui concerne cette attitude d'oubli et cet esprit de coopération. Il serait encore plus difficile de nous citer le nom des dirigeants de peuples anciennement colonisés qui n'aient pas fait preuve du courage nécessaire pour tourner une page sur le passé et pour manifester à toute occasion leur désir réel de coopérer loyalement et de faire un apport positif, au sein de la communauté internationale, par esprit d'émulation, à la marche du progrès de leurs peuples et de l'humanité tout entière.

64. Mais force nous est de constater malheureusement que les pays colonialistes ne se sont dépouillés, ni tous ni complètement, de leurs préjugés et continuent à se manifester, en dépit de tous les courants, de toutes les évolutions et de tous les appels, dans leur position anachronique. Depuis des années déjà, tout le monde parle de la fin du colonialisme et de sa liquidation. Il suffit malheureusement de regarder la carte de certains continents pour constater que certaines puissances impérialistes qui s'y étaient établies par la conquête y sont toujours et s'efforcent d'y rester par les moyens mêmes qu'elles avaient utilisés les premiers jours de leur installation. Il suffit aussi d'examiner la liste des pays colonialistes pour y trouver les noms de toutes les puissances qui sont traditionnellement des pays à empire. Aucun nom n'y manque. Alors pourquoi parler de la fin du colonialisme? Pourquoi parler généreusement de la modification des valeurs et de la transformation des mentalités?

65. Nous craignons de nous laisser tout simplement séduire par un dialogue dans lequel les colonisateurs parlent le même langage que ceux qui veulent se libérer et que l'intention des uns, en tenant ce langage, ne soit pas exactement la même que celle des autres.

66. Bien sûr, le climat politique, depuis quelques années, a changé à tel point qu'un comportement colonialiste intégral est devenu impossible. Mais le changement de langage, s'il a donné aux pays colonisateurs la bonne conscience d'un changement, ne s'est pas toujours traduit, pour les peuples colonisés, par un changement réel.

67. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], qui a été adoptée en 1960, ne traduit pas la réalité: un an après l'adoption de cette résolution, nous sommes encore en présence de guerres d'extermination, de manifestations de racisme, de manœuvres diplomatiques sans scrupules entreprises par beaucoup de puissances qui n'ont pourtant pas voté contre cette résolution, l'année dernière.

68. Il est par ailleurs indispensable d'éclaircir un point qui risque de devenir, si ce n'est déjà fait, une source d'erreurs historiques qui obscurciraient l'origine et la portée de cet événement.

69. Les idées qui font la valeur de la Déclaration ne sont pas nées telles quelles d'une initiative des auteurs de cette déclaration ni des interventions de tous ceux qui étaient venus la commenter à cette tribune. Pendant qu'un voile de pudeur était encore jeté sur la réalité des empires coloniaux, il s'était toujours trouvé, heureusement, des gouvernements ou des peuples pour dénoncer les tragédies du colonialisme. Il y a des chefs d'Etat, des hommes politiques, de grands penseurs, dont la vie a été consacrée à la défense de la liberté partout où une atteinte lui était portée. Mais, au cours de la dernière guerre et au lendemain de la victoire sur les pays totalitaires, la valeur de la liberté a été telle que certaines consciences ont été troublées dans les rangs mêmes des colonialistes.

70. Parallèlement à l'éclosion de ces sentiments, les peuples subjugués ont pris une conscience si nette du caractère impératif de leur combat que l'aspiration à la liberté s'est manifestée de façon éclatante et que la lutte est devenue inévitable. Le cauchemar du fascisme avait réellement libéré l'homme, et la contagion de la liberté a été spontanée. Quelques pays ont bénéficié de la conjoncture internationale grâce à leur propre situation ou à celle du pays qui les dominait et ont accédé à une forme de souveraineté qui leur a permis de venir grossir les rangs de ceux qui luttent pour faire accorder une plus grande liberté aux peuples soumis à la domination étrangère. Les voix du Pakistan, de l'Irak, du Liban, de l'Indonésie, de l'Egypte et de l'Inde ont constamment dénoncé le colonialisme et tous ces pays ont apporté leur soutien aux mouvements de libération dans les pays d'Afrique et d'Asie. Cette solidarité a eu des échos qui ont retenti à travers tous les continents, et les élans encore timides de quelques mouvements de libération s'en sont trouvés fortement consolidés.

71. Une série de rencontres entre ces Etats ont donné lieu à une organisation plus efficace de ce soutien et de cette solidarité. Les conséquences de cette action ont été telles que la suprématie des puissances impérialistes a subi des secousses qui ont conduit certaines d'entre elles à réviser leurs attitudes et à modifier les structures de leur empire. Un mot qui a connu depuis un grand succès pourrait, à notre avis, résumer l'esprit dans lequel ce nouveau comportement s'est effectué. On a dit en effet, à propos du colonialisme anglais, que, lorsque l'Angleterre octroie l'indépendance à un Etat de son ancien empire, les Anglais s'en vont mais l'Angleterre reste.

72. Ce n'est pas là seulement une boutade. Cette formule exprime à notre avis une réalité propre à une première étape de la décolonisation. Le sens de l'expression a été favorablement accueilli par certains pays anciennement colonisés qui ont très sincèrement espéré et cru en une collaboration loyale entre les deux pays qui modifierait leurs anciens rapports. Nous avons tous connu cette étape au cours de laquelle nous avons voulu voir se retirer le colonisateur et maintenir une place privilégiée aux pays anciennement dominants, dans un esprit de collaboration loyale.

73. C'est cet esprit peut-être qui a fait la force du Commonwealth et qui a donné en quelque sorte et paradoxalement un certain prestige au colonialisme britannique. Le génie de ce colonialisme a été souvent donné en exemple à d'autres pays, mais malheureusement le Royaume-Uni ne l'a pas appliqué partout, et ceux qui ont voulu en fin de compte l'appliquer à leur propre cas l'ont complètement dénaturé, de sorte que cette étape s'est révélée aussi dangereuse pour l'avenir des pays en voie d'émancipation que le maintien pur et simple du colonialisme classique.

74. On pourrait dire que les premières manifestations du néo-colonialisme sont apparues dans l'application de l'esprit dénaturé de cette boutade. Je voudrais pouvoir prendre comme exemple l'évolution du colonialisme français, non pas pour des raisons subjectives particulières, mais peut-être à cause d'une connaissance plus large que l'expérience nous a permis d'en acquérir.

75. Le Gouvernement provisoire de la France libre avait été sans doute frappé, à Londres, par les conceptions, la souplesse et le sens d'adaptation du colonialisme britannique. D'autre part, le rôle joué par l'Empire français dans la continuation de la guerre et la conception libérale que je crois personnellement être celle du général de Gaulle avaient permis de dégager, à la Conférence de Brazzaville, en janvier 1944, les principes et les bases de rapports nouveaux entre la France et les pays qui constituaient son empire. Le concept de l'Union française aurait peut-être pu être autre chose qu'un euphémisme substitué à l'expression démodée d'empire. Mais toutes les subtilités juridiques mises en œuvre pour modifier les lois de ce nouveau régime ont incontestablement altéré les bonnes intentions de ses promoteurs et l'on s'est trouvé en réalité en présence d'une simple version nouvelle de l'empire colonial. La manœuvre a été si claire et si transparente que, quelques mois à peine après la Conférence de Brazzaville, le mouvement d'indépendance marocain a, dans une proclamation solennelle, dénoncé les dangers de cette nouvelle politique et réclamé l'indépendance pure et simple du Maroc. La répression qui s'est abattue sur le mouvement nationaliste a fini par faire apparaître, s'il en était besoin, le caractère fallacieux de ce qu'on a essayé de présenter comme une étape libérale.

76. Je n'ai pas l'intention de me livrer à une analyse approfondie de l'évolution du système colonial à partir de cette période, mais il me semble nécessaire, au moment où nous ressentons encore des craintes devant les manifestations du néo-colonialisme, d'en dénoncer certains aspects dont le danger risque de demeurer inaperçu grâce à la subtilité avec laquelle il a été déguisé.

77. Le droit colonial n'a pas été modifié uniquement en fonction des éléments traditionnels qui président à l'élaboration d'une loi. Les circonstances politiques et l'évolution du phénomène colonial ont constamment influencé le législateur de cette catégorie de droit. D'ailleurs la rapidité avec laquelle le droit colonial a évolué prouve que, pendant les 20 dernières années, la pression des courants politiques dans les pays en voie d'émancipation a à elle seule infléchi sérieusement son contenu. Tant de lois et de codes ont été abandonnés avant même d'avoir été définitivement élaborés! On est passé du régime de l'Union française à celui des Etats associés, des territoires d'outre-mer à la loi-cadre, à l'autonomie interne et finalement à toutes les variantes du concept de la communauté.

78. Mais, à travers toute cette évolution, un facteur est demeuré constant: la volonté du législateur de maintenir intacts la position et les privilèges de l'Etat colonisateur en cédant pour la forme, mais pour la forme seulement, aux exigences politiques internes ou internationales. La lutte des pays colonisés a été également une lutte sur le plan institutionnel puisque, à cette période de reconsidération des structures coloniales, le néo-colonialisme voulait poser sûrement de nouveaux jalons pour la pérennité de sa présence.

79. Certains peuples ont été plus heureux que d'autres et ont pu se dresser devant ces nouvelles méthodes comme ils s'étaient dressés devant les anciennes. D'autres n'ont pas pu ou n'ont pas voulu prendre garde aux conséquences dangereuses de cette subtilité et sont aujourd'hui en présence de difficultés énormes pour réaliser une indépendance véritable à laquelle ils ont réellement cru et qu'ils veulent sincèrement réaliser.

80. Notre débat a permis à des orateurs de continents différents, de croyances et de formations différentes, d'être largement d'accord sur cette forme de danger que nous voulons dénoncer, sans aucune acrimonie mais avec toute notre volonté d'être lucides. Il se peut que certains pays colonisés retrouvent leur liberté sans connaître les horreurs de la guerre, les souffrances et les tortures des prisons. Nous serons les premiers à nous réjouir que le sacrifice des uns serve à épargner aux autres les inconvénients de la voie étroite et de ses difficultés. Mais il est du devoir de ceux qui ont été contraints à d'autres voies de mettre en garde contre la fausse liberté et la fausse indépendance.

81. Nous avons tout lieu de demeurer sceptiques. Loin de conformer sincèrement son attitude à la volonté des peuples qui réclament la liberté, loin d'appliquer les résolutions auxquelles il donne l'impression de souscrire, le colonialisme ne veut en réalité rien perdre de ses privilèges. Tout au plus essaie-t-il de créer de nouveaux arguments pour créer de nouveaux privilèges et tous ne sont pas du genre que nous avons dénoncés quand nous avons essayé d'analyser l'évolution du droit sur lequel il essaie de baser son action nouvelle. D'autres systèmes ont été utilisés, qui sont plus dangereux que les subtilités juridiques. On se souviendra par exemple de quelle manière une trêve demandée pendant la guerre de Palestine a servi en fin de compte les intérêts des conquérants sionistes sur le point d'être refoulés de la Palestine. Le colo-nialisme, acculé à quitter le Moyen-Orient, a installé de la sorte un Etat artificiel dont il a fait l'instrument de ses desseins et auquel il essaie aujourd'hui encore de faire chausser ses propres bottes pour sillonner l'Afrique et l'Asie en qualité de gérant des intérêts dont il ne peut plus être lui-même le détenteur direct.

82. Cette forme de colonialisme dont le sionisme a pris la relève a été magistralement analysée et clairement dénoncée à la Conférence de Casablanca^{5/}. L'on sait également qu'une des dernières trouvailles du colonialisme a été la soustraction de certains territoires à certains pays au moment de l'indépendance, soustraction effectuée sous mille prétextes mais dont aucun n'est valable. On a d'abord étendu une souveraineté étrangère sur ces territoires pour en faire ensuite, soi-disant, des Etats indépendants. Il n'est pas suffisant de dénoncer la tricherie juridique qui consiste à écarter le détenteur normal de ces provinces et de ces territoires, le souverain naturel de ces territoires, pour créer de toutes pièces un Etat artificiel et venir ainsi bouleverser les données permanentes du droit international par une simple jonction du droit administratif et du droit constitutionnel interne. Je me suis laissé dire — et j'aimerais répéter — cette expression à propos de tels pays et de tels Etats: ce sont les enfants adultères du colonialisme que l'on demande à l'Organisation des Nations Unies d'adopter. Ce fut le cas de la Mauritanie, de l'Irian occidental et, actuellement, du Katanga.

83. Le dernier système qui a été pratiqué use de moyens encore plus radicaux. Après avoir soustrait à son profit une partie du territoire dont il avait l'administration, le pays colonisateur érige ce territoire en terre de souveraineté et le rattache à sa métropole. Telles sont les tentatives portugaises à Goa ou en Angola et les tentatives de l'Espagne en ce qui concerne les territoires marocains du Sahara méridional et des villes de Ceuta et de Melilla.

84. Devant de telles pratiques, n'est-il pas légitime de demeurer sceptique sur la sincérité des pays colonisateurs qui s'associent aux pays colonisés pour reconnaître la nécessité de mettre fin au colonialisme? Comment pourrait-on prendre au sérieux une telle attitude alors que la France continue la guerre d'Algérie, entrée depuis quelques semaines dans sa huitième année? Comment peut-on croire à la sincérité du Portugal qui mène une guerre d'extermination systématique en Angola? Comment peut-on enfin croire à la sincérité du Royaume-Uni qui maintient sa présence dans de nombreux territoires africains et qui mène une répression violente contre les populations de l'Oman? Comment peut-on demeurer tranquille quand on écoute à cette tribune le représentant d'un gouvernement exposer, avec des justifications juridiques et morales, la pratique du racisme dans les territoires qu'il contrôle? Comment peut-on être tranquille sur le sort du Sud-Ouest africain quand nous savons qu'il s'agit d'un territoire confié à une puissance par l'Organisation internationale et que l'on refuse aujourd'hui à cette dernière le droit de regard et le droit d'enquête sur ce territoire où le racisme existe à l'état intégral?

85. On comprendra aisément que devant ce doute, né de la constatation d'autant de contradictions entre les intentions et le comportement réel, de nombreux pays d'Afrique et d'Asie aient soumis à l'Assemblée un projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] tendant à la constitution d'une commission qui aurait pour tâche de dégager, avec notre collaboration, les moyens appropriés pour mettre en œuvre et réaliser l'objectif de la Déclaration adoptée, en 1960, en présence de nombreux chefs d'Etat et dont le retentissement à travers le monde peut être considéré comme un des effets les plus importants des travaux de notre organisation. Les auteurs de la résolution se sont efforcés de la faire adopter à l'unanimité comme le requiert son caractère moral; ils ont essayé de tenir compte de toutes les difficultés pour permettre à tous ceux qui administrent encore des territoires non indépendants d'effectuer le changement de régime avec la plus grande facilité et dans l'intérêt des populations en voie de devenir indépendantes.

86. Mais pour nous, qui avons participé aux Conférences de Bandoung^{6/}, du Caire^{7/}, d'Accra^{8/}, d'Addis-Abéba^{9/}, de Casablanca et de Belgrade^{10/}, la Déclaration a été la consécration à l'échelle internationale des efforts constants pour l'accès à la liberté de tous ceux qui n'y sont pas encore parvenus.

87. Notre objectif ne s'arrête pas là. Nous ne voulons pas diviser le monde en deux catégories. L'asservissement seul constitue une ligne de partage. La liberté, au contraire, rapproche les peuples, les unit et enrichit la communauté internationale grâce à l'apport de la variété des génies que seule la liberté peut faire éclore.

88. Nous avons hâte de voir s'instaurer cet esprit de coopération dont la disparition même provisoire a causé tant de crises dans le monde. Cette coopération, les petites puissances y tiennent encore plus que les grandes. Mais, si pour nous elle signifie assistance et aide contre le sous-développement économique, culturel et social, si elle signifie respect et tolérance mutuels, elle demeure encore, dans l'esprit de certains de nos partenaires, un simple voile pour cacher la subordination de nos intérêts supérieurs à leurs intérêts propres, la priorité de leur prestige sur notre dignité, la primauté de leur défense sur la nôtre, une assistance pour un développement réalisé selon leurs vœux et conforme à leur volonté de maintenir une inégalité permanente dans les nouveaux rapports que nous voulons avoir avec eux.

89. Je voudrais, avant de terminer, faire connaître l'attitude de mon pays en ce qui concerne une question importante que l'interprétation abusive de la Déclaration a introduite à dessein dans notre débat actuel.

90. Le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas a cru devoir faire triompher sa politique dans l'Irian occidental en présentant à notre assemblée un projet de résolution [A/L.354] dont le résultat consacrerait non seulement le fait accompli, je veux dire le fait colonial dans cette partie de l'Indonésie, mais constituerait l'atteinte la plus grave à l'esprit de la Déclaration elle-même. Le conflit entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie existe depuis la reconnaissance de l'indépendance à ce pays.

^{6/} Conférence réunie du 18 au 24 avril 1955.

^{7/} Conférence de solidarité des peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique, réunie du 26 décembre 1957 au 1er janvier 1958.

^{8/} Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique, réunie du 15 au 22 avril 1958.

^{9/} Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique, réunie du 14 au 26 juin 1960.

^{10/} Conférence des pays non alignés, réunie du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

^{5/} Conférence des Etats indépendants d'Afrique, réunie du 3 au 7 janvier 1961.

Les négociations qui, après une guerre douloureuse pour le peuple indonésien, ont abouti à la reconnaissance de cette indépendance avaient consacré sans équivoque la souveraineté de l'Indonésie sur ce territoire qui, de tout temps, a fait partie du territoire indonésien et que les Pays-Bas eux-mêmes ont toujours administré comme tel.

91. Nous savons tous comment, au sortir d'une guerre de libération, les négociations pour l'indépendance sont conduites. Pour des considérations qui ont paru provisoirement valables, mais provisoirement seulement, le Gouvernement indonésien, après s'être fait donner acte de sa souveraineté complète sur ce territoire, a accepté que le transfert réel des pouvoirs se fasse à une date ultérieure. Malheureusement, le Gouvernement hollandais n'a pas cru devoir respecter cet engagement, et il a constamment opposé des fins de non-recevoir aux revendications légitimes de l'Indonésie.

92. Les innombrables négociations ont toutes échoué et le litige a été porté pendant plusieurs années devant l'Organisation des Nations Unies. A aucun moment, les Pays-Bas n'ont pu réfuter le caractère indonésien de l'Irian occidental et les négociations qu'elle menait avec l'Indonésie sont, en quelque sorte, une reconnaissance formelle du droit de l'Indonésie à poser le problème. Il est bien étrange de voir dans quel esprit et avec quelle rapidité le Gouvernement hollandais veut appliquer à ce cas la résolution du 14 décembre 1960.

93. La responsabilité des Pays-Bas devait, tôt ou tard, cesser dans cette partie de l'Indonésie, et, s'ils veulent sincèrement mettre fin au régime colonial, ils devraient rendre cette province au pays dont elle est une partie intégrante. Ils le savent aussi bien que l'Indonésie. Le procédé qui a été utilisé par le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas, à la lumière et à l'abri de la Déclaration, est une grave erreur politique de sa part. Non seulement il constitue un manquement à des engagements solennellement souscrits, mais le fait de vouloir abuser de cette résolution en la dénaturant dans sa lettre et dans son esprit nous met en droit de douter de la sincérité de certaines puissances qui ont voté en sa faveur. Mon pays entretient, avec le Royaume des Pays-Bas, d'excellentes relations, et nos rapports ont été de tout temps cordiaux, à la satisfaction des deux pays. Mais nous avons le droit, au nom même de cette amitié, de dénoncer un procédé qui ne contribue pas à grandir ses auteurs.

94. La délégation de l'Inde a déposé un autre projet de résolution [A/L.367 et Add.1] sur la même question. Cette résolution invite les deux gouvernements à entreprendre de nouvelles négociations avec la collaboration du Président de l'Assemblée, en vue de résoudre ce problème. Il nous semble que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas ne devrait pas se refuser à un tel appel. Nous accorderons notre appui au projet de résolution de l'Inde. Mais, comme nous n'avons jamais eu à voter contre un projet de résolution déposé par les Pays-Bas, nous souhaiterions — et d'autres délégations le souhaiteraient sans doute comme nous — que leurs représentants le retirent pour ne pas nous mettre dans l'obligation de le rejeter. A maintes reprises, le Gouvernement de l'Indonésie a proclamé sa volonté de trouver une solution pacifique à ce problème. Nous sommes convaincus que, si le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas faisait preuve des mêmes dispositions, ce problème trou-verait bientôt une solution qui donnerait satisfaction à toutes les parties.

95. Notre attention a été attirée, au début du débat, sur un projet de résolution déposé par plusieurs pays africains [A/L.368] et relatif à la même question. Nous avons eu le temps de l'examiner avec l'intérêt qu'il mérite. Nous ne doutons pas un seul instant de la sincérité et de l'esprit dans lequel ses auteurs ont essayé de trouver, à leur manière, une solution au problème de l'Irian occidental; mais certaines dispositions de ce projet de résolution rejoignent malheureusement presque intégralement les considérations exposées dans le projet du Gouvernement hollandais, et pour ces raisons nous sommes contraints de le rejeter. Nous le rejetons avec d'autant plus de peine que ce sont des pays africains qui viennent d'accéder à l'indépendance qui veulent contribuer à la consolidation du mouvement d'indépendance dans toutes les parties du monde où la domination demeure. Mais nous leur adressons un appel pour que dans ce projet de résolution, dont la subtilité est assez dangereuse et dont les conséquences pourraient se retourner demain contre d'autres pays africains, on laisse au principe de l'autodétermination la valeur morale qu'il a toujours comportée. Nous demandons qu'on n'abuse pas de ce principe en le mettant au service de certaines causes qui sont elles-mêmes en train, je me permets de le dire, de débaucher ce principe au profit de la création artificielle de certaines nouvelles colonies; celles-ci sont actuellement présentées devant l'opinion internationale comme des pays indépendants, mais en réalité elles ne sont que des appendices des anciens empires.

96. M. THEODOLI (Italie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation n'avait pas l'intention, primitivement, de prendre la parole dans cette discussion générale. Les opinions du Gouvernement italien sur le problème du colonialisme ont été amplement exposées à l'Assemblée l'an dernier lorsque nous avons appuyé la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV). Nous pensions donc pouvoir simplement expliquer plus tard nos votes sur les divers projets de résolution dont nous sommes maintenant saisis.

97. Toutefois, de tragiques événements nous ont montré dernièrement que tout ce qui se passe en Afrique nous concerne bien plus que nous ne l'aurions cru possible. Je le dis non seulement parce que notre pays y a subi des pertes douloureuses, mais aussi parce que nous ne pouvons pas faire autrement que de participer à tous les drames qui se jouent dans ce monde, où que ce soit. Cela est particulièrement vrai quand il s'agit de l'Afrique et du Congo où 13 aviateurs italiens ont été cruellement assassinés et quatre autres ont péri au cours de vols pacifiques au service de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

98. Ainsi, 17 Italiens ont rallié les rangs de la brave troupe de soldats et de fonctionnaires de différentes nationalités qui, sous la conduite inspirée de M. Dag Hammarskjöld, ont donné leur vie au service de l'humanité. A ce propos, je voudrais donner lecture à l'Assemblée d'un passage du discours prononcé au Parlement italien le 16 novembre 1961 par notre premier ministre, M. Fanfani:

"Le message que nos aviateurs ont légué au peuple congolais, dans sa recherche tourmentée de l'indépendance et de la liberté, c'est que nous n'avons pas l'intention, après ces événements tragiques, de retirer notre aide. La générosité avec laquelle ces aviateurs ont accepté leur mission et donné leur vie dans l'accomplissement de leur devoir nous incite à ne pas oublier la mission civilisatrice exercée toujours par l'Italie durant des millénaires. Elle nous incite à persévérer dans nos efforts pour comprendre les nouvelles nations et les aider dans leurs graves difficultés. Nos aviateurs morts nous ont indiqué le chemin à suivre, qui est de persévérer, en faisant abstraction de toute discrimination, nationale, raciale ou historique, en un sentiment du devoir de solidarité et de respect de la valeur et de la dignité de la personne humaine."

Notre premier ministre a dit encore ceci:

"Nous avons l'intention de discuter les graves problèmes du Congo à l'Organisation des Nations Unies et nous ferons remarquer que les aviateurs italiens ont donné l'exemple non pas de blancs qui oppriment, mais de blancs qui donnent généreusement leur vie pour la liberté et la sécurité d'autres peuples."

99. Mon gouvernement est d'avis que le moment est venu de faire un ample examen de tous les aspects compliqués de la situation au Congo et de la tâche dévolue aux Nations Unies. Pour le moment, je désire simplement donner cet avis, mais nous portons de toute façon un vif intérêt aux deux questions de l'assistance à l'Afrique et de la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Nous avons écouté avec beaucoup d'intérêt de nombreux discours brillants et de nombreuses déclarations constructives, parmi lesquelles quatre ont particulièrement attiré notre attention, celles des représentants de Ceylan, de la Nigéria, de la Colombie et de Madagascar. Nous avons trouvé aussi des idées intéressantes dans la déclaration du représentant du Ghana.

100. Mon pays observe la naissance et la croissance des nouvelles nations d'Afrique avec beaucoup de sympathie et de compréhension; nous sommes d'avis qu'il faut aider autant qu'on le pourra les nouvelles classes dirigeantes dans leurs efforts pour favoriser l'évolution de leur pays, selon les caractères nationaux qui lui sont propres, dans les domaines politique, économique et culturel. Dans ce processus, les Nations Unies ont un grand rôle à jouer non seulement en sauvegardant la paix et en éliminant la guerre comme moyen de régler les conflits internationaux, mais aussi en offrant une assistance technique et financière et en luttant contre les causes profondes des conflits, la misère, l'ignorance et l'injustice, et en favorisant ainsi le progrès social et l'élévation des niveaux de vie.

101. Nous sommes également d'avis que le Conseil de tutelle qui a accompli incontestablement une œuvre remarquable à tous les points de vue devra continuer à fonctionner tant qu'il restera un territoire non autonome susceptible de se voir accorder l'indépendance conformément à l'Article 73 de la Charte.

102. La même considération s'applique, dans son champ propre d'activité, au Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes qui a accompli une œuvre très utile en clarifiant des situations et en accélérant le processus d'évolution vers l'autonomie politique et l'indépendance.

103. Les règles prescrites aux Chapitres XI, XII et XIII de la Charte, dont l'expérience a montré qu'elles sont fondées sur des principes d'une grande sagesse, devront continuer à nous servir de guides à l'avenir. Nous avons le devoir sacré de voir au-delà du simple processus de l'accession à l'indépendance. L'accession d'un nouveau pays à l'indépendance politique ne représente pas tellement un but définitif qu'une étape — quoique très importante sans aucun doute — dans son évolution. L'indépendance ne doit pas signifier l'isolement politique et économique et ne doit pas engendrer le désordre, l'agitation et le chaos.

104. Quant à la question très controversée d'une date limite éventuelle à laquelle les nouvelles nations devraient obtenir l'indépendance, nous sommes d'avis que la rapidité est certainement préférable à la léthargie, mais qu'il y a là essentiellement une question d'opportunité. La rapidité est importante, mais la hâte peut être dangereuse. Le vieil adage latin Festina lente, "Hâte-toi lentement", est pleinement valable en la matière. En d'autres termes, comme le représentant du Pakistan l'a dit à la Quatrième Commission [1160ème séance]:

"Nous devons être opposés aussi bien à l'établissement hâtif d'une utopie qu'à d'inutiles délais et temporisations."

105. Ainsi que l'a déclaré devant l'Assemblée le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la Nigéria, il faut en Afrique une évolution méthodique et pacifique. Il a affirmé:

"Nous voulons empêcher la subversion à l'intérieur de notre continent. Nous voulons que les conflits idéologiques s'arrêtent aux frontières de notre continent. Toutes ces réalisations ne peuvent s'accomplir dans le désordre. Je crois nécessaire que nous tirions du Congo la leçon qui s'impose." [1050ème séance, par. 19 et 20.]

106. Les délégations qui jugent essentiel de mettre complètement fin au colonialisme par tous les moyens et au plus vite soulignent l'importance du paragraphe 3 de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), qui stipule:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

Nous approuvons cette affirmation, mais nous souscrivons aussi à l'opinion autorisée qui a été exprimée ici même que cette affirmation n'enlève rien à la valeur de la préparation, car il serait difficile de nier le fait qu'il est bon que toute nouvelle nation ait une préparation suffisante. En fait, la préparation a été considérée à juste titre comme le cœur même du problème.

107. Pour toutes ces raisons, nous sommes en faveur du projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] présenté par 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie, que nous considérons comme constructif et réaliste. La création d'un comité chargé de l'étude des problèmes particuliers aux différents territoires — idée qui avait déjà été suggérée, comme nous sommes heureux de l'apprendre, il y a deux ans par le Président de la Tunisie — nous paraît le meilleur moyen d'aborder ce délicat problème, car la fixation d'une unique formule rigide pour tous les territoires non autonomes qui existent encore dans le monde serait certainement impossible et manquerait de réalisme. Nous désirons par conséquent présenter nos sincères félicitations aux nombreux auteurs de ce projet de résolution pour avoir donné un si bel exemple de coopération et de compromis.

108. D'après ce que je viens de dire, il est évident que nous ne pouvons pas accepter au contraire les idées dont s'inspire le projet de résolution [A/L.355] qui a été présenté par la délégation de l'Union soviétique et commenté très longuement dans les discours prononcés par les représentants des pays socialistes. Je dois dire que chaque fois que j'écoute de tels discours je me sens confondu d'admiration, oui, d'admiration pour leur étonnant courage — ou devrais-je dire plutôt audace — de se poser chaque fois en champions de la liberté, de la démocratie, de la justice et du progrès. Il me semble vraiment que c'est aller un peu loin que de supposer que tous les membres de l'Assemblée ignorent totalement non seulement les faits essentiels de la géographie et de l'histoire, mais même les faits relatés tous les jours dans la presse.

109. L'une des allégations les plus courantes des pays socialistes est que leurs propres mobiles sont toujours purs, altruistes et dictés exclusivement par des sentiments de solidarité et de souci du bien-être des populations: tous les gouvernements occidentaux, en revanche, et les membres de l'OTAN en particulier, sont accusés de n'entretenir que des rêves sinistres d'exploitation économique et d'oppression politique.

110. Dans le cas du Portugal, par exemple, on a beaucoup critiqué le fait que ce pays ne s'était pas conformé à une résolution de l'Assemblée générale. Nous le regrettons profondément, ainsi que nous l'avons déclaré à la Quatrième Commission [1202ème séance], mais nous devons cependant signaler que le Portugal a entrepris dans ses territoires d'Afrique un programme de réformes qu'il serait équitable de mettre quand même à son actif, dans l'espoir qu'il y a là un premier pas dans la bonne direction et que ce pays trouvera le moyen de faire plus et mieux l'an prochain.

111. Toutefois, nous comprenons l'émotion des nations d'Afrique et d'Asie dans ce cas. Plus difficiles à comprendre sont les dures critiques émanant de certaines délégations de pays qui ont pourtant beaucoup à se reprocher dans le même domaine. Nul d'entre nous n'a pu oublier les résolutions concernant les événements qui se sont déroulés en Hongrie en octobre 1956, ni la résolution concernant le Tibet qui a été adoptée à la quatorzième session de l'Assemblée, résolutions dont les parties intéressées ont fait fi ouvertement et de manière agressive.

112. On a beaucoup parlé récemment des "vents de changement" qui ont soufflé sur de nombreux anciens empires coloniaux et dont les effets ont été très encourageants. Si nous considérons l'empire néo-colonial qui s'étend d'Europe en Asie, nous y remarquons aussi des vents qui soufflent et des changements qui se produisent, mais ils sont d'une autre nature. Les vents qui soufflent sont les vents glacés de l'Arctique qui transportent les retombées radio-actives. Quant aux changements, certes, il y en a eu d'intéressants, en particulier sur la Place Rouge et en d'autres lieux.

113. Il y a quelques jours, le représentant d'un des pays socialistes nous a dûment informés que le XXIIème congrès du parti communiste avait adopté pour l'ensemble des peuples soviétiques un nouveau programme qui promettait notamment une assistance

"à tous les peuples qui luttent pour la destruction complète du système colonial". Je dois dire que je trouve cela très intéressant. Cependant, je pense que la grande majorité des membres de l'Assemblée se souviendront spécialement du XXIIème Congrès du parti communiste pour une autre raison, pour les surprenantes révélations faites sur les événements qui se sont déroulés dans l'empire soviétique pendant 30 années. Ces révélations, émanant des sources les plus hautes et les plus inattaquables, nous présentent un tableau de tortures et d'assassinats en masse de chefs du parti, d'intellectuels, d'ouvriers et de paysans.

114. Ce que je viens de dire ne constitue nullement une tentative de notre part de distraire l'Assemblée générale de la discussion du problème colonial, ainsi que certains ne manqueront pas de l'insinuer. Nous voulons simplement attirer l'attention sur le fait qu'il faut faire preuve de plus d'impartialité et d'humilité dans cette discussion. Elle porte sur la fin du colonialisme, question de la plus haute importance pour le monde entier et particulièrement pour les nouvelles nations d'Afrique et d'Asie, dont mon pays comprend parfaitement les sentiments et les aspirations, d'autant plus que nous comptons parmi elles de nombreuses et sincères amies. L'Italie n'est plus une puissance coloniale ni une puissance administrante et elle entretient des relations très amicales et fructueuses avec les pays indépendants qu'elle a administrés autrefois soit comme colonies, soit comme territoires sous tutelle. Nous n'avons pas d'intérêts particuliers ici, ni d'un côté ni de l'autre, mais nous sommes d'avis qu'on doit envisager le problème du colonialisme dans sa véritable perspective.

115. Ce que nous pourrions appeler le colonialisme à l'occidentale est en voie de disparition. Au cours des 15 dernières années, une quarantaine de pays, comptant plus de 800 millions d'habitants, ont accédé à l'indépendance. Rien qu'en Afrique, pas moins de 22 Etats nouveaux sont nés et 16 d'entre eux sont entrés à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la plupart bien avant que l'Assemblée eût adopté la résolution 1514 (XV). Dans quelques jours, le Tanganyika en fera autant. Ce pays a donné naissance à un dirigeant remarquable en la personne de son premier ministre, M. Nyerere, dont les qualités d'homme d'Etat se sont révélées lors de la déclaration qu'il a faite cette année devant le Conseil de tutelle, à sa vingt-septième session [1171ème séance].

116. L'an prochain, ce sera le tour de l'Ouganda et du Samoa-Occidental, de sorte qu'il ne restera pratiquement qu'environ 70 millions de personnes sous le régime colonial, ce qui représente approximativement le dixième du nombre primitif.

117. En revanche, une autre forme de colonialisme a dressé sa hideuse tête en Europe et en Asie, où une grande puissance exerce une domination militaire, politique et économique absolue sur des millions d'hommes et de femmes qui auparavant étaient libres, non pas dans des territoires d'outre-mer, mais dans des pays voisins. Dans ces colonies, il n'y a pas de liberté de parole, pas de liberté de la presse, même pas de liberté de se déplacer. Aucune disposition n'est prise pour leur assurer l'autonomie et rien n'est certainement prévu en vue de la diffusion d'informations sur les activités de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

118. C'est en tenant compte de ce qui précède que je voudrais citer une fois encore devant l'Assemblée les paroles émouvantes prononcées par le représentant de la Fédération de Malaisie le 25 septembre 1961, alors qu'il appuyait l'inscription à l'ordre du jour de la question du Tibet:

"Lorsque nous nous élevons contre le colonialisme et la violation des droits de l'homme en Afrique, ce n'est pas seulement parce que les victimes sont des Africains et que les oppresseurs sont des puissances coloniales occidentales, mais essentiellement parce qu'il s'agit de la domination et de l'oppression de l'homme par l'homme. Si la même oppression se produit ailleurs, il est du devoir absolu de l'Assemblée générale d'adopter une attitude identique, même si elle encourt par là le mécontentement de certains qui participent à ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler la guerre froide."
[1014ème séance, par. 178.]

119. Nous estimons, dans l'esprit du projet de résolution de la Nigéria [A/L.357], que les 10 prochaines années verront la fin du colonialisme en Afrique. Espérons qu'elles verront aussi l'aube d'une nouvelle ère de liberté et de justice pour tous les peuples opprimés du monde, "sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes", ainsi que le stipule la résolution historique 1514 (XV) que ma délégation approuve sans réserve.

M. Schürmann (Pays-Bas), vice-président, prend la présidence.

120. M. BA (Mali): Au cours de sa quinzième session au moment où elle adoptait la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], notre assemblée fut un des hauts lieux de l'histoire contemporaine, sinon de l'histoire de l'humanité. Après la suppression de l'esclavage, ce fut le deuxième acte qui honore notre condition d'homme.

121. Ce n'est pas par hasard qu'elle a été inspirée par l'Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques¹¹ et que, à l'exception des pays colonialistes impénitents, elle fut adoptée par l'ensemble des pays de progrès, en tout cas de tous les pays qui ont conscience que la suppression de l'esclavage colonial, de toute domination coloniale dans le monde, est un des facteurs essentiels du maintien de la sécurité et de la paix universelles.

122. Nous avons fait ici lors de la quinzième session [901ème séance] le procès du colonialisme classique avec son cortège d'oppressions: oppression politique, oppression économique, oppression sociale et culturelle, et leur toile de fond raciste. Nous avons mis l'accent sur les structures plaquées sur notre fond national par le colonisateur pour transfigurer et défigurer nos pays. Nous avons souligné les dangers graves, pour les Etats nouvellement indépendants, des démarches du néo-colonialisme qui, en apparence moins oppressives que les manifestations du colonialisme traditionnel, sont cependant importantes et plus perfides. Nous avons même signalé au passage ces formes d'apparence libérales, le "white man's burden", le colonialisme sous la forme du libéralisme d'affaires.

123. Les nouveaux rapports politiques à l'échelle internationale et l'émergence des pays jeunes ont atteint à mort le colonialisme. Ce fait ne saurait nous étonner. Il est inscrit dans le processus du développement historique. La liquidation du système colonial est un phénomène inéluctable; elle est irréversible. Ce sont là des vérités premières connues de tous les militants anticolonialistes des mouvements de libération nationale, et c'est pourquoi nous abordons ce problème avec une parfaite sérénité, conscients du fait que notre assemblée, dans sa sagesse, prendra des décisions qui iront dans le sens de l'histoire. A l'heure où nous parlons, à l'ombre de la déclaration qui "proclame solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations", il existe encore près de 80 territoires d'une superficie de 10 à 12 millions de kilomètres carrés comprenant plus de 70 millions d'habitants. Nous ne retiendrons pas votre attention par une énumération fastidieuse de ces colonies dont l'existence, quoi qu'on dise et quoi qu'on pense, constitue une honte à l'heure où la maîtrise de la technique et de la science ouvre à l'homme de si grandioses perspectives. Nous ne parlerons de certaines de ces colonies qu'en raison de la tragédie que connaissent les mouvements de libération dans certaines d'entre elles et du génocide qui y est pratiqué par le colonialisme décadent aux abois.

124. En Angola, le Portugal, petit pays européen arriéré, profitant de l'appui de ses alliés occidentaux puissants, se livre au massacre délibéré des populations africaines. Par respect pour les sentiments humanitaires des personnes civilisées réunies ici, nous ne parlerons pas des atrocités dont l'odieux spectacle a été présenté par le cinéma et la télévision. Des photographies qui font frissonner d'horreur ont été affichées dans cette assemblée et constituent des monuments de barbarie qui font que le Portugal et son régime fasciste sanguinaire sont couverts d'opprobre et détestés de tous les hommes civilisés du monde. Notre assemblée se doit de prendre des mesures urgentes et décisives pour que cesse le génocide qui risque, si l'on n'y prend garde, d'affecter le Mozambique et la Guinée dite portugaise. Nous reviendrons en son temps sur ce brûlant problème.

125. Au Congo, nous avons mesuré l'étendue des méfaits du colonialisme belge et de ses alliés impérialistes. Seize mois d'expérience des Nations Unies n'ont pas cessé de rendre chaque jour plus urgente la solution de ce terrible exemple de décolonisation voulue et organisée par la pire coalition impérialiste, au nom des intérêts sordides de l'Union minière du Haut-Katanga. Au Comité consultatif pour le Congo, nous avons indiqué nos positions qui peuvent se résumer en mesures pratiques et immédiates pour mettre fin à la sécession du Katanga (nœud de tout le problème congolais), et en un appui inconditionnel au Gouvernement central, seule autorité avec laquelle doivent traiter les Nations Unies. L'exacerbation des oppositions tribales au Ruanda-Urundi n'est qu'un stade prémonitoire d'une "orientation congolaise" du devenir de cette région.

126. Le Royaume-Uni au Kenya, malgré la vaillance et la détermination du peuple kikouyou debout derrière son libérateur Jomo Kenyatta, veut, par des méthodes dilatoires, arriver à une seconde révolte des Mau Mau. Cependant, tous les Africains sont convaincus que le ¹¹/ Voir Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quinzième session, Annexes, point 87 de l'ordre du jour, document A/4501.

Kenya a largement mérité son indépendance et n'a pas besoin de deux années supplémentaires d'esclavage colonial.

127. Le même Royaume-Uni, pilier du système colonial, prépare, semble-t-il, la militarisation de la Rhodésie-Nyassaland pour les fins que vous devinez.

128. En Afrique du Sud, une minorité blanche, au nom du fascisme colonial le plus exacerbé, pratique, au mépris des résolutions de notre assemblée et de celles de toutes les organisations internationales, sa honteuse politique d'apartheid cent fois condamnée par l'opinion des pays civilisés. Nul doute que dans ce pays, dominé par les héritiers du maréchal Smuts et de M. Malan à la Verwoerd, l'Organisation des Nations Unies devra, pour faire appliquer notre déclaration, envisager des moyens à la mesure de l'insolence et de la haine raciste d'un gouvernement qui affiche tant de mépris pour l'Organisation.

129. L'Afrique du Sud, comme nous le savons, pratique également son odieux système au Sud-Ouest africain et s'oppose farouchement à la mise sous tutelle de ce territoire par les Nations Unies. Le point de notre ordre du jour qui traite de ce problème nous permettra d'y revenir plus en détail.

130. Les Pays-Bas ne veulent pas lâcher l'Irian occidental, dernier souvenir de leur empire colonial. L'Irian occidental fait cependant, sans conteste, partie intégrante de l'Indonésie. Les machinations politico-juridiques des Pays-Bas ne peuvent que retarder la solution indonésienne de la question de l'Irian que le représentant des Pays-Bas appelle avec dédain la Papouasie, le pays des Papous, des hommes à queue. Nous, nous sommes pour l'indépendance et la liberté de tous les peuples, des Papous comme des femmes à plateau, des Zoulous, comme des Pygmées d'Afrique.

131. Le machiavélisme qui consiste à mélanger, dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354], les principes de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance et la reconnaissance du droit de l'Indonésie sur l'Irian occidental, n'est qu'une manœuvre pour maintenir le statu quo colonial en Guinée dite néerlandaise. Si les Pays-Bas veulent éviter l'arbitrage de l'Assemblée générale, qu'ils se décident à négocier avec l'Indonésie sur des bases pacifiques, en parfaite égalité, de nation souveraine à nation souveraine. Hors de ces voies, je doute que le problème puisse être résolu en méconnaissant un pays aussi grand que l'Indonésie dont les droits ne sont mis en doute par personne.

132. Et maintenant, voici l'Algérie, notre sœur, terre de géhenne, je dirai de génocide. Comment ne pas vitupérer contre le colonialisme français dans son entêtement à poursuivre cette guerre sans nom qui entre dans sa huitième année, cette guerre contre un peuple debout, décidé à se libérer de la tyrannie et de la domination, cette guerre enfin qui doit aboutir inévitablement à l'indépendance de l'Algérie. La France de Descartes, des humanistes, la France de la Commune de Paris, de Jaurès, accepter d'être traitée comme le Portugal de Salazar ou l'Afrique du Sud de Verwoerd, la France dont le peuple et la culture sont tant aimés de par le monde, accepter, comme disait l'autre jour Guy Mollet, ancien président du Conseil français, "cette bêtise reconnue par tant de personnalités nationales"! Nous ne comprenons pas que la France accepte de s'aliéner tant de sympathies dans tant de pays, car la guerre d'Algérie, qui est une sale guerre, aura contribué à mobiliser dans la réprobation tous les peuples de tous les pays amis des nationalistes algériens qui combattent sur leur sol la domination étrangère. L'honneur de la France exige que, pendant qu'il est temps encore, elle mette rapidement fin à cette guerre coloniale. C'est le vœu sincère de tous ceux qui ont été nourris de culture française. Nous souhaitons vivement qu'un ultime geste du général de Gaulle, en mettant fin à cette guerre qui est la nôtre, rétablisse la France dans l'estime de tous.

133. Ce tableau général du colonialisme serait incomplet si l'on ne mentionnait pas la dernière folie coloniale en date: Bizerte, base étrangère implantée sur le territoire d'un Etat souverain qui en réclame l'évacuation. Plus de 1 000 morts tunisiens, au nom des impératifs de la défense de l'Occident, de la sacro-sainte alliance de l'OTAN. Bizerte reste pour nous un symbole, la manifestation la plus typique du néo-colonialisme, qui doit donner l'alarme dans tous les Etats nouvellement indépendants.

134. Le néo-colonialisme n'est pas un mythe. Ceux qui pensent que nous en parlons dans un but de propagande, en termes freudiens, risquent simplement d'être les victimes inconscientes d'un phénomène désormais historique: le néo-colonialisme prenant la relève du colonialisme traditionnel. Le néo-colonialisme se définit comme "l'octroi d'un simulacre d'indépendance à un territoire colonial ou à un territoire sous tutelle, alors qu'on paralyse le pays devenu indépendant au moyen d'accords économiques et militaires".

135. Si nous ne craignons de retenir trop longtemps l'attention de l'Assemblée, nous pourrions brosser un tableau complet des manifestations du néo-colonialisme: plans économiques (plan de Constantine et autres) mobilisant des moyens considérables pour des objectifs officiels considérés comme irréalisables; accaparement des terres de colonisation; déplacement de populations; destruction violente des communautés de travail avec leurs techniques et leur équilibre social; pression démographique, cercle vicieux évoluant vers le stade suprême du sous-développement; erreurs de calcul, volontaires ou non, de technocrates habitués à concevoir le développement économique en termes capitalistes; refus du développement agricole parce que le colonialisme désire forger une arme nouvelle contre la révolution paysanne, une arme socio-économique qui doit "casser la paysannerie" (80 p. 100 de la population autochtone) par la famine, le surpeuplement, l'exode, la destruction du milieu traditionnel lui-même, la création enfin d'un "Lumpenproletariat" incapable, dans la majorité des cas, de produire sa subsistance. Ailleurs, le néo-colonialisme préfère subventionner indéfiniment la misère, combler indéfiniment le déficit agricole par des dons de céréales dont l'importance est appelée à s'accroître à mesure que le déficit s'aggrave, plutôt que de laisser résoudre le problème agraire par la mobilisation révolutionnaire des masses rurales sous-employées. Coexistence dans une même nation d'une économie agraire collectiviste et autoritaire et d'une économie industrielle soumise aux règles du jeu capitaliste pour le seul profit d'une "élite différenciée de la masse"; essor des productions destinées à l'exportation s'accompagnant d'une stagnation ou d'un recul des productions destinées à la consommation intérieure; désarticulation de l'économie nationale et aggravation de sa dépendance vis-à-vis de l'étranger: voilà le tableau du néo-colonialisme.

136. A cela s'ajoutent: 1) les besoins de luxe plus ou moins grands de "l'élite différenciée de la masse"; 2) un marché protégé pour les industries de l'Europe; 3) un déficit agricole chronique. Comme dirait l'économiste A. Gorz, "la révolution agraire, retardée par la mise en selle de quelque Tchang Kai-shek ou Batista, attendrait son Mao Tsé-toung ou son Fidel Castro".

137. On "achèterait" ainsi de la stabilité politique pour tel pays en voie de développement afin de le conserver au monde dit "libre". Le Dr Waxmuth, de la Eisen-Essen, définit comme suit, dans une déclaration de programme de la confédération patronale allemande, le rôle des Etats africains:

"L'industrie allemande s'intéresse au plus haut point à l'Afrique; mais, comme tout bon commerçant, elle demande des garanties — avant tout sur le plan politique. La condition primordiale, toutefois, est que les régimes africains soient stables et solidement liés à l'Europe."

Sans commentaire!

138. Comme on le voit, le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme sont des frères siamois. Hors de la libération complète et définitive des pays sous domination coloniale, pas de salut, pas de possibilité de développement économique et social, de développement tout court. C'est pourquoi, face au problème général de la liquidation du colonialisme, nous n'admettons aucune neutralité, aucun compromis. On est pour ou contre le colonialisme. C'est pourquoi, nous indiquerons sans ambages la position du Mali au sujet de l'application de la Déclaration.

139. En premier lieu, ma délégation pense que la résolution s'est prononcée sans équivoque quant à la date de mise en application: fin immédiate du colonialisme et octroi immédiat de l'indépendance aux pays et peuples coloniaux. Cette stipulation signifie que les mesures de décolonisation doivent être appliquées sans délai. Nous serons donc opposés à toute décision fixant un délai, ou minimum ou maximum. Ma délégation votera par contre en faveur de tout projet de résolution tendant à instaurer, au cours de cette session, un organisme international spécial chargé de mettre immédiatement en pratique les modalités de passation des pouvoirs aux autorités autochtones responsables des colonies ou semi-colonies, après consultations diligentes avec les ex-puissances coloniales. Cet organisme spécial devra comporter une répartition géographique équilibrée où l'Afrique, martyre du colonialisme, devra avoir une place de choix.

140. En deuxième lieu, ma délégation — au risque de paraître peu ou pas objective — est opposée à ce que j'appelle des manœuvres dilatoires tendant à retarder la fin du colonialisme sous le fallacieux prétexte de l'impréparation des populations autochtones à l'exercice du pouvoir politique. Ceux des pays africains ou asiatiques qui invoqueraient cet argument apporteraient, consciemment ou inconsciemment, de l'eau au moulin des puissances coloniales, dont le rêve est de conserver le plus longtemps possible les privilèges inhérents à l'exploitation des peuples colonisés.

141. Ceux d'entre nous qui ont eu l'occasion d'écouter les pétitionnaires de l'Angola, de la Guinée dite portugaise, du Ruanda-Urundi ou du Sud-Ouest africain ont pu apprécier leur haut degré de conscience politique, aussi bien des problèmes nationaux que des problèmes internationaux. De sorte que l'objectivité qu'on invoque dans cette affaire est l'objectivité des colonialistes impénitents qui s'accrochent encore à leurs privilèges, qui refusent d'être des hommes de leur temps. Notre rôle sera de bousculer simplement ces fossiles et d'appliquer hardiment la volonté de l'immense majorité de cette assemblée qui veut aider le colonialisme à mourir de sa belle mort.

142. Pour conclure, je voudrais souligner que le problème général de la fin du colonialisme dans le monde ne saurait souffrir des vicissitudes et des aléas de la guerre froide. La liquidation du système colonial ne saurait être le monopole ni d'un continent, ni d'un pays, ni d'un groupement de pays. La liquidation du système colonial est un problème fondamental de notre époque qui justifierait à lui seul l'existence des Nations Unies. L'honneur de notre organisation exige que, par son action éclairée et unanime, elle mette fin au colonialisme, aux foyers de guerres coloniales et injustes qui font rage en Afrique et mettent en péril la paix et la sécurité internationales. La fin du colonialisme devient de ce fait une des dominantes de la question générale de la guerre ou de la paix.

143. Les peuples africains encore sous domination coloniale attendent beaucoup de la Déclaration adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session. Ils attendent de son application, c'est-à-dire de nous, d'être des peuples libres. Ils attendent de son application l'arrêt des massacres en Algérie et en Angola. Nous n'avons pas le droit de décevoir l'espoir de plusieurs millions d'hommes humiliés, bafoués, torturés.

144. Notre assemblée, en sa seizième session, se doit d'être à la hauteur de l'humanisme du XXème siècle, cet humanisme qui, comme disait Jacques Decour il y a 25 ans, "est une foi rationnelle en la valeur et la dignité de l'homme, un respect civilisé de sa personne, un culte militant de sa liberté".

145. M. LAPINE (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: La délégation de l'Union soviétique voudrait d'abord noter avec satisfaction que la proposition tendant à examiner les moyens d'assurer l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] a été approuvée et appuyée par la majorité des pays d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine. De même qu'à la session précédente l'initiative de l'Union soviétique au sujet de la suppression du colonialisme a été reconnue comme opportune et d'une nécessité vitale.

146. L'activité que déploie l'Assemblée générale pour l'étude du problème de la liquidation du colonialisme ressort bien du fait qu'une cinquantaine de délégations ont pris part à la discussion de ce problème, discussion qui dure depuis trois semaines. Les orateurs ont souligné dans leurs interventions l'importance historique de la Déclaration adoptée à la session précédente sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique. D'autre part, les participants au débat ont exprimé leurs craintes et leur inquiétude en constatant que l'exigence majeure formulée dans la Déclaration, c'est-à-dire l'adoption de mesures immédiates pour la liquidation totale du honteux système colonial, n'a pas été mise en œuvre et que les puissances coloniales empêchent l'octroi de l'indépendance aux peuples opprimés, mènent des guerres d'extermination et intensifient la terreur et la répression à l'égard des peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté.

147. En ce qui concerne les interventions des représentants des puissances coloniales, il convient de noter cette année une certaine modification de leur tactique. A la session précédente, vous vous en souvenez, il a fallu lutter pour que la question coloniale fût examinée non pas en commission, comme le proposaient les puissances coloniales, mais en séance plénière de l'Assemblée. A la présente session, ces puissances, instruites par une amère expérience, n'ont plus décidé de s'opposer à l'examen de la question coloniale en séance plénière. C'est un fait qui mérite d'être retenu. Vous le savez, avant la quinzième session le problème colonial dans son ensemble n'avait jamais été débattu à une tribune internationale.

148. En sanctionnant la Déclaration, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a non seulement donné son appui moral à la cause des peuples coloniaux qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance, mais elle s'est chargée en même temps de les libérer de l'oppression, afin de mener à bien la grande œuvre de la liquidation totale du régime colonial.

149. Il est caractéristique que les représentants des puissances coloniales ne se sont pas prononcés directement, cette fois, contre la Déclaration qu'ils avaient attaquée avec un tel acharnement à la session précédente. Dans son intervention, le représentant des Etats-Unis a qualifié la Déclaration d'historique et de célèbre. Mais c'est là un changement d'orientation purement apparent, pour la forme. Si l'on en juge d'après les actes des puissances coloniales, elles s'en tiennent à leurs anciennes positions et continuent à chercher des voies et moyens de conserver les vestiges du système colonial, ignorant ainsi les exigences de l'Organisation des Nations Unies concernant la liquidation immédiate du système colonial. Elles produisent d'anciennes et de nouvelles conditions et réserves pour prolonger leur domination sur les pays coloniaux et dépendants.

150. Les représentants des puissances coloniales ont soutenu activement à l'Assemblée la proposition visant à reculer le délai de la liquidation du colonialisme en Afrique à l'année 1970. Ils avaient de la peine à dissimuler leur satisfaction devant cette proposition. Et, de fait, comment les colonisateurs anglais, portugais, belges, français, espagnols et autres ne se réjouiraient-ils pas du moratoire de 10 ans qu'on leur propose pour liquider leurs possessions coloniales!

151. De toute évidence, ceux qui proposent de reporter à l'année 1970 le délai pour l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays d'Afrique aident les colonisateurs, volontairement ou involontairement, en leur fournissant la possibilité légale de tourner la Déclaration et de gagner ainsi du temps pour consolider leurs positions dans les territoires dépendants.

152. L'Assemblée générale se doit de rejeter catégoriquement des tentatives de ce genre visant à "aider" les colonisateurs. Ce qu'on nous propose, c'est ni plus ni moins que de renier les grands et équitables principes adoptés par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session pour résoudre le problème colonial. La Déclaration exige la liquidation immédiate du système colonial, sans aucune condition ni réserve. C'est précisément cette exigence qui a conféré à la Déclaration ce caractère de document historique de notre époque et qui lui a valu l'approbation universelle. Et voici qu'on nous propose maintenant de renoncer à l'essentiel, à ce qui constitue l'essence et la force agissante de la résolution des Nations Unies. Non, il est impossible d'y consentir. Nous sommes réunis ici pour étudier les mesures propres à mettre en œuvre la Déclaration et non pas les voies détournées qui permettraient de réduire la Déclaration à un chiffon de papier.

153. Quels sont les arguments avancés au cours de nos débats contre l'octroi immédiat de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux? Ce sont toujours les mêmes, ces anciens arguments que nous avons déjà entendus bien des fois.

154. Ce sont avant tout des références au prétendu manque de préparation des peuples coloniaux à gouverner eux-mêmes leurs pays. On sait qu'en 1960 seulement, 18 pays, avec 85 millions d'habitants, ont accédé à l'indépendance. Et les colonisateurs avaient prétendu, pour chacun de ces pays et pendant de longues années, qu'ils n'étaient pas préparés à l'indépendance.

155. Le Premier Ministre du Tanganyika, qui accèdera encore cette année à l'indépendance, a raconté qu'il y a trois ou quatre ans les autorités anglaises estimaient qu'un délai de 20 à 25 ans pour la "préparation à l'indépendance" de ce territoire avait un caractère "trop révolutionnaire". Il est bon de rappeler ces faits pour faire mieux voir l'hypocrisie des colonisateurs quand ils parlent du manque de préparation des peuples à l'indépendance.

156. Les pays qui se sont libérés du joug colonial ont déjà remporté des succès incontestables sur la voie de leur renaissance nationale et culturelle. Un grand nombre de ces pays, il est vrai, ne sont pas encore entièrement maîtres de leur économie et de leurs richesses naturelles. Mais cela est dû au fait qu'ils ne se sont pas encore libérés de la domination des monopoles impérialistes. Toutefois, ayant accédé à cette nouvelle période de leur évolution, ils ont acquis la possibilité d'extirper les racines économiques du colonialisme. Il est hors de doute qu'ils arriveront finalement à liquider sur leurs territoires les graves conséquences de la domination coloniale sous toutes ses formes.

157. Quelles raisons peut-on invoquer pour priver du droit à une évolution nationale indépendante les pays qui se trouvent encore sous le joug des puissances coloniales? Le niveau d'évolution de ces pays est-il inférieur à celui des pays qui ont déjà accédé à l'indépendance? La Déclaration interdit d'invoquer quelque prétexte que ce soit pour retarder l'octroi de l'indépendance et l'Organisation des Nations Unies est tenue de mettre en œuvre avec persévérance ce noble principe, en rejetant toutes les "conditions" et les "réserves" des colonisateurs comme fausses et intéressées.

158. On serait tenté de rappeler les paroles si justes prononcées par l'honorable représentant de Ceylan:

"... il n'y a dans le monde ni territoire ni population qui soit incapable de se gouverner efficacement". [1048ème séance, par. 106.]

Le mythe de la nécessité d'une préparation à l'indépendance, comme il l'a souligné avec justesse, est non seulement erroné, mais aussi "moralement inadmissible".

159. Les partisans de ce mythe ne demandent pas mieux que de masquer leur défense du colonialisme par des considérations "pratiques". Ils sont, voyez-vous, contre les "appels collectifs à l'indépendance".

Ils sont en faveur d'une "étude rationnelle" du problème colonial et contre la propagande, etc. Donnez-leur le temps nécessaire, ne serait-ce encore qu'une ou deux décennies, et ils prépareront, en puisant dans la population indigène, des personnalités qualifiées comme premiers ministres, comme ministres, comme fonctionnaires, comme instituteurs et comme médecins, et après, à les en croire, ils abandonneront les pays soumis à leur pouvoir.

160. Mais qui croirait à des contes pareils? Les enfants eux-mêmes, bien qu'ils aiment les contes de fées, protestent toujours à leur manière quand le loup du "Chaperon rouge", ayant dévoré la grand-mère et pris sa place dans son lit, s'efforce de contrefaire la voix de sa victime.

161. Qui pourrait croire que les colonisateurs portugais, belges, hollandais et autres se préoccupent de la préparation des classes intellectuelles de la population indigène? Où l'a-t-on vu? En Algérie? En Angola? En Rhodésie? Au Sud-Ouest africain?

162. Chacun sait que tous les pays coloniaux, sans exception, qui sont parvenus à obtenir l'indépendance, se sont heurtés, en premier lieu, au problème de l'analphabétisme des masses et de l'insuffisance des cadres nationaux. Et ce n'est qu'après avoir chassé les colonisateurs qu'ils ont disposé pratiquement de grandes possibilités pour réussir rapidement à liquider l'analphabétisme et pour préparer des cadres nationaux. Ces pays, en deux ou trois ans, sont parvenus dans ce domaine à des résultats qui n'avaient pu être atteints pendant les siècles de domination coloniale.

163. Il convient de faire remarquer que jadis les autorités coloniales considéraient déjà comme avantageux pour elles de tirer parti de certains individus de la population indigène, en leur donnant une formation de fonctionnaires, d'employés de bureau pour leurs entreprises, etc. Mais, si elles le faisaient et continuent de le faire, c'est tout d'abord dans leur propre intérêt, en tenant compte de considérations purement mercantiles. Les fonctionnaires et les employés de bureau, formés sur place, leur reviennent moins cher que ceux qu'on fait venir de la métropole. Toutefois, il est de règle que l'accès aux postes élevés soit fermé aux représentants de la population indigène. Partout il leur est interdit d'avoir une activité politique. Vous pouvez trouver des indications sur ce "système de préparation des cadres" — si je puis dire — dans les rapports du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes et dans ceux du Conseil de tutelle, soumis à l'Assemblée générale.

164. Pour éviter d'être accusé de faire de la propagande, je me référerai exclusivement aux documents de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/4785] contient des données caractéristiques, fournies par le Gouvernement britannique, sur la préparation et la formation de cadres administratifs et techniques autochtones. Les Britanniques ont institué, l'an dernier, des cours spéciaux pour la formation des cadres. Qui préparent-ils? Il suffit de jeter un coup d'œil sur le tableau donné en appendice à l'une des annexes au rapport et tout devient clair. Tout d'abord, ils forment des agents de police et des agents des services pénitentiaires. Les cours sont suivis par 340 futurs agents de police et des services pénitentiaires et par 70 futurs instituteurs seulement. Pour l'Ouganda, par exemple, les Britanniques forment 49 agents de police et des services pénitentiaires, et tout juste trois instituteurs et deux médecins. Des Bermudes, 19 étudiants sont venus suivre les cours; 16 d'entre eux retourneront dans leur pays en qualité d'agents de police ou d'agents des services pénitentiaires. De l'avis des Britanniques, on n'a pas besoin aux Bermudes de médecins ni d'instituteurs.

165. Voilà donc comment se présente en réalité la préparation des cadres d'après les données fournies par les autorités britanniques elles-mêmes. Ce qui les intéresse, ce sont les cadres qui les aident à maintenir le régime d'oppression.

166. Dans un autre document des Nations Unies, le rapport du Comité du Sud-Ouest africain [A/4926], on cite la déclaration du Ministre des affaires indigènes de la République sud-africaine. Il affirme que c'est faute de perspicacité que l'on avait donné aux élèves africains un régime scolaire sur le modèle européen, ce qui les induisait en erreur quant à la place qu'ils pourraient occuper dans la collectivité.

167. Telle est la déclaration d'un membre du gouvernement qui applique ouvertement la politique de l'apartheid. Mais une telle politique n'est pas appliquée seulement dans la République sud-africaine. Au cours du débat à l'Assemblée et aux comités des Nations Unies, on a souvent fait voir que la politique de discrimination raciale est appliquée également en Rhodésie du Nord, au Nyassaland et dans les colonies portugaises. Le colonialisme ne peut exister sans discrimination raciale.

168. L'un des arguments invoqués par les partisans du colonialisme est le suivant: ils prétendent que les pays qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance manquent de stabilité politique, d'unité ethnique et qu'il n'y a pas d'entente entre les partis et leurs dirigeants. Mais nul n'ignore que ce sont les colonisateurs eux-mêmes qui provoquent des discords intestins et des oppositions entre les tribus et les partis et affaiblissent ainsi le front national commun de lutte, afin de rester maîtres de la situation et d'être à la fois juges et bourreaux.

169. Les événements au Ruanda-Urundi peuvent servir d'exemples probants d'une telle tactique. Les autorités belges excitent les unes contre les autres les tribus, provoquent des querelles intestines et les utilisent elles-mêmes comme prétextes pour exercer une justice sommaire contre les forces patriotiques du pays. Grâce aux lois d'exception, à l'armée et à la police, les Belges empêchent les forces patriotiques du Ruanda-Urundi de se raffermir sur une base nationale commune et justifient hypocritement leur présence dans le pays par l'absence de "l'ordre et la paix" nécessaires.

170. Mais peut-on s'attendre à "l'ordre et la paix" de la part des colonisateurs belges, armés jusqu'aux dents et qui, profitant du régime dit de tutelle, ont pratiquement occupé le pays?

171. En invoquant la nécessité d'une "stabilité politique", comme condition préalable à l'octroi de l'indépendance, le représentant des Etats-Unis a rappelé la "leçon du Congo". Quelques autres représentants des puissances coloniales ont fait de même. A leur point de vue, il n'y avait pas à se hâter d'accorder l'indépendance à ce pays. Mais les représentants de la République du Congo ont maintes fois protesté à l'Assemblée générale, au Conseil de sécurité et dans les commissions contre de telles allégations, en rappelant aux personnes de courte mémoire que la crise du Congo a été provoquée non par l'octroi de l'indépendance à ce pays, mais par l'ingérence agressive des puissances coloniales dans les affaires intérieures du peuple congolais.

172. Si ces puissances, et avant tout la Belgique, le Royaume-Uni, la France et les Etats-Unis, n'étaient pas intervenues dans les affaires du peuple congolais et avaient fait enfin cesser la querelle intestine au sujet des richesses naturelles du Katanga, le peuple congolais aurait réussi depuis longtemps déjà à en finir avec les séparatistes katangais et à rétablir l'ordre chez lui. Les documents soumis à l'Assemblée générale à la suite de l'enquête sur les circonstances de la mort du Premier Ministre de la République du Congo, Patrice Lumumba, et de ses collaborateurs ont confirmé une fois de plus que ce forfait pèse sur la conscience des colonisateurs et de leurs mercenaires. Ils ne reculent encore maintenant devant aucun moyen pour essayer d'empêcher l'unité nationale du pays et la création d'un gouvernement stable et authentiquement national.

173. A entendre raisonner les représentants des puissances coloniales, déclarant que les pays dépendants, avant de se voir accorder l'indépendance, doivent posséder une "stabilité politique", on serait enclin à demander à ces représentants si leurs propres pays peuvent servir d'exemple dans ce domaine.

174. Faut-il fournir des preuves que n'importe quel pays capitaliste est déchiré par des contradictions antagonistes? N'importe lequel de ces pays est le théâtre de contradictions extrêmement aiguës et implacables entre la classe ouvrière et la bourgeoisie. L'an dernier seulement, plus de 40 millions de travailleurs de ces pays ont participé à des grèves politiques. Dans tous les pays occidentaux importants, il est un fait caractéristique: la recrudescence du mouvement paysan. Dans tous ces pays, on observe constamment une âpre lutte entre les différents groupes de la bourgeoisie et leurs partis. Une lutte de classes implacable et une mêlée au sein même de la bourgeoisie pour le pouvoir et les profits provoquent l'instabilité des gouvernements de ces Etats et les incitent à tout moment à faire effort pour imposer un régime fasciste, ce qui, à son tour, intensifie et accroît encore la résistance de la classe ouvrière et des masses populaires.

175. Et voilà que les représentants de ces gouvernements qui vivent eux-mêmes comme sur un volcan mettent ici en avant comme conditions pour l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays coloniaux l'établissement de la stabilité politique, l'entente entre les partis et les dirigeants des pays dépendants, etc. Il est difficile de concevoir une plus grande hypocrisie que des "conditions" comme celles-là.

176. Si les puissances coloniales se souciaient véritablement de voir s'instaurer une stabilité politique dans les pays dépendants, elles ne se seraient pas mises à soulever des objections au projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] qui propose, afin de donner suite à la Déclaration, les mesures suivantes: premièrement, a) "permettre à la population autochtone de jouir véritablement de tous les droits et libertés démocratiques ..."; deuxièmement, "... abroger toutes les lois et dispositions tolérant la discrimination raciale et toutes les interdictions ou restrictions frappant l'activité des partis politiques, des syndicats et des organisations sociales autochtones, et proclamer une amnistie inconditionnelle en faveur de tous les détenus politiques."

177. Le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique propose d'organiser l'élection au suffrage universel d'organes de gouvernement et de créer ainsi des institutions nationales véritablement démocratiques, de leur transférer tous les pouvoirs et de mettre fin à l'activité de tous les organes de l'administration coloniale.

178. Qu'est-ce qui empêche les puissances coloniales d'accepter ces propositions et d'accorder ainsi leur appui aux réformes démocratiques d'un caractère général qui expriment directement les buts indiqués dans la Déclaration? On a dit ici qu'avant de transmettre le pouvoir aux mains du peuple il fallait procéder à une longue "préparation constitutionnelle" et que cette préparation devait incontestablement être effectuée par les autorités administrantes elles-mêmes.

179. Toutefois, l'expérience a démontré que les puissances coloniales cherchent à imposer aux pays dépendants des constitutions qui, en réalité, ne font que consolider l'ordre établi par le régime colonial et entravent la formation d'organes du pouvoir véritablement nationaux.

180. Ainsi, par exemple, les constitutions imposées par les Britanniques au Kenya, à la Rhodésie du Nord et au Nyassaland ont pour but de renforcer la situation dominante et privilégiée de la minorité britannique qui vit dans ces pays. Selon la constitution imposée au Kenya, tout le pouvoir continue à reposer entre les mains du gouverneur britannique. Les Européens élisent à ce qu'on appelle le Conseil législatif un représentant pour 5 000 habitants, alors que la population indigène a un représentant pour 130 000 électeurs. En Rhodésie, la loi électorale exclut de la participation aux élections la presque totalité de la population autochtone.

181. Enfin, je voudrais mentionner encore une tentative faite en vue d'inciter l'Assemblée générale à se départir de la résolution adoptée sur la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme. On propose à cette fin d'établir des délais pour l'octroi de l'indépendance à des pays pris séparément, délais qui dépendraient de l'accord, pour chaque cas d'espèce, de l'autorité administrante, de ses plans et de ses désirs. Les auteurs de cette proposition veulent, encore une fois, se faire passer, à leurs dires, pour des gens "pratiques" et "réalistes". Il est possible, après tout, qu'ils croient réellement à ce qu'ils disent. Mais l'Assemblée générale ne peut pas se laisser guider par des illusions. L'expérience a démontré que la libération du joug du colonialisme ne peut être obtenue qu'à la suite d'une lutte des peuples pour leur indépendance. Les colonisateurs ne s'en vont que lorsqu'ils sont convaincus que cela est indispensable afin de ne pas être honteusement chassés du pays. Comme l'a dit de façon imagée le chef du Gouvernement soviétique, "les colonisateurs les plus prévoyants réussissent à partir cinq minutes avant d'y être forcés à grands coups de pied, pour employer un langage familier".

182. Est-il possible, en général, de parler à cette époque de l'administration des pays coloniaux dans le sens que donnent à ces mots les colonisateurs? Existe-t-il en réalité, un "système de gouvernement" par exemple en Angola? Non, en Angola on ne gouverne pas la population indigène, on l'extermine. Peut-on parler d'un "système de gouvernement" en Algérie? Non, c'est la huitième année déjà que sévit un régime d'extermination de la population algérienne. Peut-on appeler "système de gouvernement" le régime de contrôle policier, de cantonnement dans des réserves et de discrimination raciale appliqué au Sud-Ouest africain? Evidemment non, c'est un régime d'oppression et de terreur. Les puissances coloniales parlent d'un "régime de gouvernement" pour masquer un régime d'oppression et de terreur. Elles exterminent la population autochtone, rassemblent la population indigène dans des réserves et des camps de concentration, tuent et emprisonnent les dirigeants nationaux et corrompent ceux qui ne font pas preuve d'une fermeté suffisante pour défendre les intérêts de leur peuple.

183. Imaginez-vous qu'un beau jour — et ce jour arrivera inévitablement — les pays impérialistes soient privés de leurs bases militaires, de leurs porte-avions, de leurs bombardiers et avions de chasse, des bombes au napalm et autres; que restera-t-il alors du système de gouvernement colonial? Absolument rien! Ce système est usé, il est mort. Sous la pression du mouvement de libération nationale, le système colonial s'est en fait écroulé.

184. Que diraient de l'Organisation des Nations Unies les peuples opprimés si elle emboîtait le pas à ceux qui recommandent de faire dépendre la question des délais pour l'octroi de l'indépendance de la décision des autorités administrantes, autrement dit des colonisateurs eux-mêmes?

185. Au moment où a été déposé le projet de résolution de la Nigéria [A/L.357], nous avons appris que les autorités administrantes britanniques n'envisageaient pas la liquidation totale du colonialisme en Afrique avant une dizaine d'années. Des plans identiques sont établis par les autorités administrantes australiennes et par d'autres puissances coloniales.

186. Mais y a-t-il sur notre planète des peuples qui consentiraient à attendre 10 ans l'octroi de la liberté et de l'indépendance? Les puissances coloniales se servent d'un calendrier à leur guise. Si l'on s'y conformait, les peuples coloniaux devraient attendre encore de longues années avant d'être libérés. Mais les peuples opprimés ne veulent pas vivre et ne vivront pas en s'en tenant à ce calendrier des colonisateurs.

187. Il n'y a pas motif de se faire des illusions au sujet des autorités administrantes. Après l'institution du mécanisme de contrôle de la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration, des négociations avec ces autorités pourront avoir lieu, mais ces pourparlers ne devront concerner que la liquidation totale, immédiate et absolue du colonialisme. Il ne devra pas y être question de prolonger la durée de ce système que les peuples tiennent pour honteux et odieux.

188. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux exige la liquidation immédiate et inconditionnelle du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations et les puissances coloniales doivent se soumettre sans réserve à cette exigence. C'est à cette fin que la délégation de l'Union soviétique, dans son projet de résolution, propose de réaliser la liquidation définitive du colonialisme à la fin de 1962 au plus tard. Cette proposition fait directement suite à la Déclaration.

189. Au cours des débats à la présente session, on a exprimé la crainte que la liquidation des restes du système colonial en une année ne risque de provoquer une "aggravation", des "conflits", le "chaos", etc. Est-il possible de prêter l'oreille à des craintes pareilles? Nous proposons d'en finir avec le colonialisme en 1962. Cela signifie que, d'ici un an, les colonisateurs devront quitter l'Angola, l'Algérie, le Sud-Ouest africain, le Kenya, le Ruanda-Urundi et d'autres pays où coule à flots le sang des combattants pour la libération, où pas une journée ne se passe sans que l'on persécute et que l'on tue des femmes, enfants et vieillards innocents.

190. En réponse à cela nous entendons des avertissements: "C'est dangereux", "Cela peut provoquer une aggravation et le chaos". En même temps, certains représentants des puissances coloniales, faute de tout argument, font valoir des soupçons et disent que notre proposition est dictée par le désir de maintenir la guerre froide. Etrange logique!

191. Il en ressort que les guerres coloniales qui sont menées actuellement dans le monde sont presque une manifestation de l'ordre et que, si l'on exige de les faire cesser immédiatement et d'accorder la liberté et l'indépendance aux peuples, c'est là une manifestation de la guerre froide. Voyez jusqu'à quelle absurdité peuvent en arriver les défenseurs du colonialisme!

192. On pourra dire que les délégations qui se prononcent en faveur d'un délai de 10 ans ou plus pour la liquidation du colonialisme n'ont pas en vue une prolongation des guerres coloniales. Mais que proposent-elles alors pour mettre fin aux guerres coloniales, à la terreur et à la répression qui sévissent actuellement dans les pays coloniaux et dépendants? Il n'est pas possible de supposer que, pendant ce délai de 10 ans que l'on propose d'accorder aux colonisateurs pour le règlement de leurs affaires, ils vont adopter aux colonies une attitude paisible et pacifique et vont cesser de tuer et de persécuter la population autochtone.

193. L'expérience vécue nous apprend que le colonialisme, qui est sur son déclin et vit ses derniers jours, devient de plus en plus cruel et impitoyable dans la répression du mouvement de libération nationale, en s'efforçant de se maintenir le plus longtemps possible dans les pays soumis à l'exploitation et au pillage.

194. Une inquiétude particulière est provoquée par le fait que les colonisateurs qui réagissent contre une liquidation immédiate du colonialisme continuent en même temps de prendre des mesures de guerre dirigées contre les peuples qui luttent pour leur libération ou ceux qui ont déjà accédé à l'indépendance. Nous avons en vue, en particulier, les préparatifs qui sont effectués aux Etats-Unis en vue de ce que l'on appelle des guerres limitées. Nous pensons également à l'entraînement renforcé des unités, dites spéciales, destinées, conformément à des communications officielles, à des guerres nécessitant l'application de "méthodes extraordinaires". Ce qu'on entend par "méthodes extraordinaires" ressort clairement de l'exemple d'intervention à Cuba, qui a ignominieusement échoué, et du soutien accordé aux rebelles en Indonésie. On sait que des détachements spéciaux américains sont expédiés en ce moment au Viet-Nam du Sud et dans d'autres régions.

195. L'Assemblée générale se doit de condamner catégoriquement de pareils agissements, dirigés contre les peuples d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine et qui menacent la paix et la sécurité de tous les peuples.

196. La délégation de l'Union soviétique propose, dans son projet de résolution, de retirer des pays dépendants toutes les troupes des puissances administrantes et de liquider intégralement les bases militaires étrangères dans les territoires sous tutelle et les autres territoires non autonomes.

197. Le représentant des Etats-Unis a vu dans cette proposition le désir de l'Union soviétique d'affaiblir la défense de son pays et des autres pays membres de l'OTAN. Qui pourrait croire, Messieurs, à la nécessité d'une base militaire à la Jamaïque pour la défense de Washington et de bases militaires au Kenya pour la défense de Londres? La presse américaine est plus sincère que les représentants des Etats-Unis à l'Organisation des Nations Unies et elle ne dissimule pas le fait que de telles bases militaires ne jouent évidemment aucun rôle dans la défense de ce que l'on nomme le monde occidental et qu'elles sont conçues avant tout pour des buts locaux en liaison avec le maintien de l'influence exercée sur ces territoires des anciens empires coloniaux.

198. Ces bases sont là pour défendre les sources de pétrole, les gisements d'uranium, les plantations de caoutchouc, les mines de cuivre et de pierres précieuses; elles défendent les sphères d'influence des monopoles des pays impérialistes sur des territoires étrangers. Ce sont des points d'appui pour l'impérialisme et le colonialisme. Ces bases sont dirigées contre les pays coloniaux et les Etats sous-développés d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine.

199. Soit dit en passant, ces bases n'ont jamais été utilisées pour les fins que leur attribue le représentant des Etats-Unis, mais elles ont été maintes fois utilisées et elles sont utilisées actuellement comme moyens de menace et de répression envers les peuples qui mènent leur lutte de libération nationale et pour exercer une pression militaire et politique sur les Etats d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine.

200. Les Etats-Unis, le Royaume-Uni et la France conservent ces bases contre la volonté des peuples, en ayant recours à des moyens de pression économique, au chantage, aux menaces, à la corruption, à la propagande anticommuniste et à d'autres procédés caractéristiques de la politique impérialiste.

201. Dans le rapport du Comité du Sud-Ouest africain [A/4926], au paragraphe 77, vous pouvez lire que la République sud-africaine a des bases militaires à Ohopoho, dans le Kaokoveld, à Windhoek et à Walvis Bay.

202. Un pétitionnaire du Sud-Ouest africain, Mburumba Kerina, qui a pris la parole hier, le 23 novembre, à la Quatrième Commission, a déclaré: "Nous savons que la République sud-africaine a besoin des bases militaires pour massacrer les Africains. La propagande anticommuniste, ce n'est qu'un camouflage^{12/}."

203. En ce qui concerne la déclaration sophistiquée du représentant des Etats-Unis, selon laquelle l'Union soviétique, en se prononçant contre les bases, "se propose d'affaiblir la défense des pays occidentaux", il conviendrait de rappeler que l'Union soviétique poursuit constamment une politique de paix et ne se prépare pas à attaquer qui que ce soit. On sait aussi que l'Union soviétique possède suffisamment d'armes et fusées modernes pour riposter par un coup écrasant aux attaques des agresseurs.

204. Nous ne voulons pas, cependant, minimiser le rôle dangereux des innombrables bases militaires qui servent d'appui armé au colonialisme, qui menacent l'évolution pacifique des Etats qui ont accédé récemment à la liberté et à l'indépendance, et qui sont une menace pour la paix mondiale. L'existence de ces bases empoisonne l'atmosphère internationale. Il ne fait aucun doute que le retrait des forces étrangères et la liquidation des bases militaires dans les pays coloniaux sont les moyens les plus sûrs pour assurer la liquidation pacifique du colonialisme sans effusion de sang et sans victimes inutiles. Et si vous êtes sincères, Messieurs les représentants des puissances coloniales, en parlant ici de votre volonté de résoudre le problème colonial par des moyens pacifiques, il faut avant tout que vous retiriez vos forces armées des pays coloniaux et que vous liquidiez vos bases militaires. Ce serait la meilleure preuve de vos intentions pacifiques dans la liquidation du système colonial. Ces mesures pourraient contribuer grandement à atténuer la tension internationale, à assurer la paix et à consolider la sécurité des peuples.

205. La délégation de l'Union soviétique note avec satisfaction que la majorité des délégations ont appuyé le projet de résolution [A/L.355], proposant la création d'une commission spéciale ou d'un comité spécial pour la surveillance et le contrôle de l'application, dans toutes les colonies, les territoires sous tutelle et les territoires non autonomes, de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

206. La délégation de l'Union soviétique exprime l'espoir que ladite commission comprendra les représentants des Etats qui connaissent d'expérience le colonialisme du fait qu'ils ont supporté eux-mêmes le poids du joug colonial et qui savent ce que représentent la lutte contre le colonialisme et l'édification d'Etats nationaux indépendants.

207. La détermination des pleins pouvoirs de la commission mérite une attention particulière. A notre avis, la commission spéciale des Nations Unies, créée en vue de parvenir à mettre complètement en œuvre les dispositions de la Déclaration, devrait disposer de pouvoirs suffisamment étendus pour avoir une activité efficace. La commission ne devra pas se contenter d'informations que les puissances coloniales consentiront à lui fournir. Elle doit disposer du droit d'inspection et du droit d'envoyer des missions itinérantes dans n'importe quel territoire non autonome.

208. Les peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance doivent considérer la commission spéciale comme un défenseur sincère et fidèle et qui aura toujours sans cesse en vue leurs intérêts. Mais ces peuples ne pourront avoir confiance en la commission que si elle est composée de partisans convaincus de la Déclaration, qui concentreront tous leurs efforts à réaliser complètement la noble tâche de la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme, sans chercher de compromis avec les colonisateurs.

^{12/} Cette déclaration a été faite à la 1222^{ème} séance de la Quatrième Commission, dont le compte rendu officiel n'a été publié que sous forme de compte rendu analytique.

209. Je voudrais maintenant commenter en deux mots l'intervention du représentant de l'Italie. Il a parlé ici et de la Place Rouge et du XXIIème Congrès de notre parti. J'ai été délégué à ce congrès et je pourrais parler longuement de ses travaux et des décisions qui ont été prises. Je le dis en passant, toute la documentation du Congrès a été ouvertement et abondamment reproduite par la presse. En ce qui concerne les raisonnements du représentant de l'Italie, comme dans le dicton russe "il ne le sait que par ouï-dire". S'il avait voulu être réellement renseigné sur l'Union soviétique, il aurait mieux valu qu'il demande audience à son premier ministre ou à son ministre des affaires étrangères qui se sont rendus récemment en Union soviétique, dans le cadre d'une visite amicale. Ils auraient pu lui fournir des renseignements vraiment exacts et intéressants au sujet de notre pays. Nous sommes très heureux qu'à la suite de ce voyage les relations se soient améliorées et continuent à s'améliorer entre l'Union soviétique et l'Italie. L'intervention du représentant de l'Italie, fondée sur des "on-dit", ne peut du reste porter atteinte à ces relations.

210. Il convient de relever une remarque très dangereuse dans l'intervention du représentant de l'Italie. Il a exprimé sa satisfaction des mesures prétendument prévues et qui sont en voie d'exécution par le Portugal en Angola. Il a dit son espoir que l'année prochaine ces mesures seraient encore amplifiées. Ces raisonnements provoquent de l'inquiétude. Au cours de cette année, le Portugal, grâce à l'aide des pays de l'OTAN et grâce aux armements de l'OTAN, a exterminé 50 000 Angolais sans défense. A quoi s'attend l'année prochaine, de la part du Portugal, le représentant de l'Italie, si l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne prend pas des mesures énergiques pour la liquidation du joug colonial en Angola?

211. Le représentant de l'Italie a dit qu'il admirait l'audace des représentants des pays socialistes quand ils parlent de la liquidation du colonialisme. Nous avons des raisons de parler crânement, nous avons la conscience nette. Il ne nous reste qu'à nous étonner de la couardise, de la duplicité et de l'esprit de compromis des représentants des pays de l'OTAN, quand ils évoquent les événements d'Angola, d'Algérie et d'autres régions du monde. La tendance aux compromis est en partie compréhensible. Le fait est que presque tous les pays de l'OTAN sont des puissances coloniales et ceux qui ne sont pas des puissances coloniales mais qui sont membres de l'OTAN sont tout bonnement tombés en mauvaise compagnie et sont contraints de leur emboîter le pas.

212. Je voudrais également profiter de cette occasion pour dire quelques mots de l'intervention du représentant du Royaume-Uni. Il est monté plusieurs fois à cette tribune pour défendre le colonialisme britannique. Il a déclaré être fier de l'histoire coloniale de son pays. Inutile de discuter là-dessus. Rendons à chacun son dû. Les Indiens sont fiers de s'être débarrassés du régime colonial et les colonisateurs britanniques sont fiers d'avoir opprimé pendant des siècles les peuples de l'Inde et ceux de bien d'autres pays et de continuer jusqu'à présent d'opprimer encore près de 35 millions de personnes.

213. Mais, puisqu'on vient d'aborder l'histoire de l'impérialisme britannique, il vaudrait la peine de rappeler certains faits. On sait, par exemple, qu'en un siècle 2 130 000 esclaves ont été expédiés d'Afrique aux colonies britanniques d'Amérique. Les commer-cants britanniques gagnaient des fortunes et se voyaient honorés dans leur pays grâce à la traite des esclaves. Ce sont des faits que le représentant du Royaume-Uni peut trouver dans l'ouvrage de son compatriote Ingram, publié à Londres en 1895 déjà.

214. Les représentants du Royaume-Uni nous disent ici que leur pays se serait efforcé d'amener les peuples coloniaux à l'indépendance et qu'ils en sont fiers. Mais on voudrait leur rappeler que les colonisateurs britanniques ont commencé par priver de liberté et d'indépendance des peuples constitués en Etats et qu'ils ont freiné pendant des dizaines d'années l'évolution de ces pays et de ces peuples et qu'aujourd'hui, quand on les chasse avec haine, ils exigent presque de la reconnaissance et cherchent même à en tirer profit sur le plan politique.

215. On pourrait rappeler au représentant britannique que toute l'histoire de l'administration des colonies par le Royaume-Uni, histoire dont il est fier, n'est qu'une suite de guerres coloniales, d'expéditions punitives et de répressions en masse. Pendant bien des années, le Royaume-Uni a mené des guerres contre les peuples de l'Inde, de la Birmanie, de l'Afghanistan, de la Chine, de l'Egypte, de la Nigéria, du Ghana, du Kenya, de la Rhodésie et de beaucoup d'autres pays. Il serait peut-être plus facile d'énumérer les pays contre lesquels le Royaume-Uni n'a pas mené de guerres que de continuer la liste des pays et des peuples qui ont dû subir les attaques et massacres perpétrés par les forces armées des colonisateurs britanniques. Le Royaume-Uni continue encore maintenant à mener des opérations dans ses colonies africaines. Ses bombardiers bombardent les villes et villages de l'Oman et ses forces navales menacent aussi d'autres pays arabes.

216. Ces guerres ont causé aux peuples des calamités innombrables et leur ont coûté d'innombrables victimes. Il est impossible de prendre son parti de ces essais d'embellir et de justifier l'histoire sanglante de l'impérialisme britannique, comme au reste de tout autre impérialisme. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a cité ici des textes de tout genre afin de prouver que les colonisateurs britanniques n'étaient aucunement des colonisateurs et qu'ils ont comblé de bienfaits l'Inde, le Ghana, la Nigéria et d'autres pays.

217. Permettez-moi de citer de même un ou deux textes provenant de sources dont l'authenticité et l'objectivité ne peuvent être mises en doute. Je voudrais me référer à l'autobiographie de M. Nehru, dont nous avons récemment eu l'honneur d'entendre une déclaration à l'Assemblée. Dans son livre, M. Nehru rend hommage au peuple britannique, dont les facultés sont également hautement appréciées par le peuple soviétique. Mais, à côté de cela, l'ouvrage de M. Nehru contient un certain nombre d'appréciations frappantes et profondes sur le colonialisme britannique qu'il considère comme inhumain et comme très hypocrite.

218. Voici ce que dit dans son livre M. Nehru:

"Je déteste l'impérialisme britannique et je lui tiens rigueur de s'être imposé à l'Inde. Je déteste le système capitaliste. J'ai une aversion particulière et du ressentiment pour la façon dont l'Inde est exploitée par les classes dirigeantes britanniques. Mais je ne considère pas l'Angleterre ou le peuple anglais dans son ensemble comme responsables de cet état de choses.

"...

"Mais, si les Anglais viennent ici comme des tigres, ils ne doivent pas s'attendre à de l'amitié ou à la coopération. Le tigre de l'impérialisme ne rencontrera que la plus acharnée des oppositions et aujourd'hui notre pays doit faire face à cet animal féroce. On peut apprivoiser le tigre sauvage de la forêt et, en le cajolant, lui faire perdre sa férocité innée, mais il n'y a aucune possibilité d'apprivoiser le capitalisme ou l'impérialisme.

"... la liberté et l'impérialisme britannique sont incompatibles et ni la loi martiale, ni tous les procédés mielleux du monde ne pourront jamais les rendre compatibles ni les rapprocher l'un de l'autre^{13/}."

219. Je m'excuse auprès des interprètes de les obliger à traduire du russe en anglais ce qui a été écrit en anglais.

220. Ces considérations nécessitent-elles des commentaires? Le temps ne leur a fait perdre ni leur force ni leur actualité. Je me permets de me référer aussi au testament du grand Rabindranath Tagore, dont le centième anniversaire de la naissance a été fêté l'année dernière avec un tel respect par toute l'humanité progressiste:

"Le jour viendra ou, par la force du destin, les Anglais seront contraints à renoncer à leur colonie indienne. Mais en quel état laisseront-ils l'Inde en partant, dans quel état de misère révoltante! Quand le torrent des siècles de domination britannique se sera enfin desséché, que de boue et de vase il restera dans son lit! Je croyais autrefois que les sources de la civilisation jailliraient du cœur de l'Europe, mais aujourd'hui, quand je me prépare à quitter ce monde, il ne me reste plus trace de cette croyance."

221. Nous n'aurions pas commencé à rappeler l'histoire et la littérature concernant le colonialisme si nous n'y avions pas été poussés par le représentant du Royaume-Uni qui a déclaré être fier de l'histoire coloniale du Royaume-Uni. Il n'y a pas de quoi en être fier!

222. Nous terminons aujourd'hui la discussion générale sur la question coloniale et nous sommes appelés à prendre une décision.

223. Le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique prévoit des mesures dont l'adoption à la présente session garantirait une mise en œuvre totale et absolue de la Déclaration au cours de l'année qui vient. Notre proposition s'inspire du désir de mettre fin le plus rapidement possible au honteux système colonial qui a entraîné et qui entraîne encore toujours tellement de calamités et de malheurs pour les peuples d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine. De plus, la délégation de l'Union soviétique s'inspire de la conviction qu'une liquidation immédiate des vestiges du colonialisme consolidera la paix et la sécurité des peuples et assainira l'ensemble de l'atmosphère internationale.

224. L'adoption, au cours de la présente session, de la proposition concernant la création d'une commission spéciale ou d'un comité spécial pour la surveillance de l'application de la Déclaration permettra de placer la liquidation du colonialisme sous un contrôle international rigoureux et sans relâche.

225. Nous sommes heureux de constater que l'idée d'un tel contrôle et de la création d'un comité spécial à cette fin figure également dans le projet de résolution présenté par le groupe africaino-asiatique [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Tout en notant avec satisfaction que ce projet est fondé sur les principes et les buts énoncés dans la Déclaration, nous devons toutefois attirer l'attention sur certaines faiblesses du texte, dues non seulement à ce qu'il ne fixe pas de délai pour la liquidation du colonialisme, mais aussi à ce qu'il ne contient pas de mesures concrètes garantissant la liquidation du colonialisme. Ces mesures figurent justement dans le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique.

226. La délégation de l'Union soviétique, pour les raisons exposées plus haut, s'oppose de façon catégorique à la proposition de la Nigéria tendant à étendre le délai de liquidation du colonialisme jusqu'à l'année 1970 et elle votera contre cette proposition.

227. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution au sujet de l'Irian occidental [A/L.354], la délégation de l'Union soviétique a déjà eu la possibilité de déclarer nettement que l'Union soviétique appuyait sans réserve l'attitude de l'Indonésie et ses droits naturels et légitimes à ce territoire indonésien. La délégation de l'Union soviétique votera contre le projet de résolution déposé par les Pays-Bas qui cherchent à prolonger sous une nouvelle forme leur domination sur l'Irian occidental.

228. Notre délégation exprime l'espoir que l'Assemblée générale prendra une décision qui garantira l'application complète et immédiate de la Déclaration historique adoptée par la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies et qui permettra de mener à bonne fin la noble cause de la libération des peuples du joug colonial et de la dépendance.

229. Le PRESIDENT: La parole est au représentant de la Mauritanie, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

230. M. SOULEYMANE Ould Cheikh Sidya (Mauritanie): Je serai très bref, pour la bonne raison qu'il n'est nullement dans mes intentions d'engager une polémique. Je tiens simplement à protester avec la dernière énergie contre les allégations ignobles et abjectes qui viennent d'être prononcées à l'endroit de mon pays par le représentant de S. M. le Roi du Maroc, ou plus exactement par le porte-parole d'Allal el Fassi.

231. Je ne m'appesantirai pas sur des procédés oratoires maintenant bien connus. Je dirai simplement au représentant de Sa Majesté qu'il n'a pas atteint son but, qu'il a été incapable d'emporter notre conviction.

232. La République islamique de Mauritanie n'a aucune leçon à recevoir d'une monarchie absolue où se débat dans la misère et le despotisme un peuple qui fera bientôt entendre sa voix. Ce n'est pas en faisant des discours pathétiques, ici et ailleurs, que le Gouvernement marocain fera œuvre constructive. En tout cas, nous le proclamons bien haut, nous n'avons rien à apprendre du Royaume anachronique du Maroc. La monarchie marocaine n'a aucune leçon à donner à une république née de l'autodétermination et qui est dirigée par un gouvernement démocratique s'appuyant sur la volonté populaire et non, comme le Maroc, par une clique de bourgeois et de féodaux qui sucent le sang du peuple et ne se maintiennent que par la prohibition et la démagogie.

233. Pour terminer, Monsieur le représentant de Sa Majesté, ou plus exactement, je le répète, Monsieur le porte-parole d'Allal el Fassi, que d'éloquence! Mais cette éloquence, faites-la donc chez vous et laissez les autres en paix. Pensez aux maux de votre peuple et à ce qui vous attend!

234. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la Tchécoslovaquie, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

235. M. KURKA (Tchécoslovaquie) [traduit du russe]: Monsieur le Président, je vous suis très obligé de m'avoir autorisé à exercer mon droit de réponse et de m'avoir donné la parole à une heure aussi tardive. La discussion générale est déjà terminée, semble-t-il, mais je voudrais dire quelques mots au sujet des interventions des représentants des Etats-Unis [1061ème séance] et du Royaume-Uni [1056ème séance], faites au cours de la discussion générale.

236. Je n'ai pas trouvé nécessaire de répondre à ces représentants immédiatement après leurs interventions, car je n'entendais pas les aider à détourner l'attention de l'Assemblée générale de la question dont elle est saisie.

237. A notre 1061ème séance, le représentant des Etats-Unis, M. Bingham, a déploré qu'à l'Organisation des Nations Unies certains Etats Membres critiquent sans arrêt les puissances occidentales en les traitant de colonisateurs et d'ultra-impérialistes, tandis que les critiques de la politique colonisatrice ne se dressent pas contre les pays socialistes.

238. Il est évident que cette attitude peut ne pas être du goût du représentant des Etats-Unis. Il semble qu'il ne puisse pas ou ne veuille pas comprendre qu'au cours d'un débat sur la liquidation du colonialisme des critiques sévères doivent inévitablement être adressées aux puissances coloniales, c'est-à-dire aux puissances occidentales, y compris les Etats-Unis, mais ne doivent l'être en aucun cas, comme l'aurait voulu M. Bingham, aux pays socialistes que tous les peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance considèrent à juste titre comme les adversaires logiques du colonialisme.

239. En cherchant à remédier à cette situation extrêmement désagréable pour les colonisateurs et à l'améliorer, M. Bingham et son collègue britannique, M. Godber, sont entrés en lice pour la libération des "peuples asservis" d'Europe orientale.

240. Ces messieurs, faute d'argument sérieux pour justifier la prolongation de l'existence des empires coloniaux, cherchent des échappatoires dans les calomnies bien connues et désuètes, selon lesquelles les pays socialistes de l'Europe orientale sont sous la dépendance coloniale de l'URSS, que ce sont des satellites des Soviétiques, etc. M. Godber, représentant de la délégation britannique, a même jugé nécessaire de reprendre ces déclarations devant la Commission politique lors de la discussion sur le désarmement.

241. En dépit du fait que leurs élucubrations calomnieuses ont été déjà maintes fois démenties et n'ont pas produit à l'Assemblée générale l'effet que les inspireurs de ces élucubrations s'étaient efforcés à tout prix de provoquer, les représentants des puissances coloniales ont jugé opportun d'y revenir encore et toujours.

242. Nous ne pouvons nous défaire de l'impression que, pour leurs arguments, ils se laissent guider par le principe douteux mis en circulation par le chef de la propagande nazie, feu Goebbels, à savoir qu' "un mensonge répété 100 fois devient une vérité". Cependant, le sort de l'auteur de ce principe a démontré qu'il était entièrement faux, ce que prouvent également les résultats des efforts faits par des représentants des puissances coloniales pour, d'une part, se faire passer pour des adversaires du colonialisme et pour des champions de la liberté des peuples coloniaux asservis et exploités, et, d'autre part, pour parler d'un certain colonialisme des pays socialistes.

243. Les faits sont certes chose réfractaire. On ne peut les esquiver et il est absolument impossible de les démentir par un flot d'attaques calomnieuses et d'élucubrations provocatrices. Ce n'est pas par hasard que les représentants des puissances coloniales attaquent précisément les pays socialistes, car ils voient en eux à juste titre des adversaires résolus du colonialisme et un rempart solide pour tous les peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance.

244. En s'efforçant en vain de détourner l'attention de l'Assemblée générale d'un examen logique du problème éminemment important et urgent de la liquidation définitive de tout le système d'esclavage colonial, les représentants des puissances coloniales, notamment ceux des Etats-Unis et du Royaume-Uni, ont eu recours à leur thème préféré, le souci hypocrite de la liberté des pays d'Europe orientale, qu'ils se plaisent à appeler ici des colonies de l'Union soviétique.

245. En tant que représentant de l'un de ces pays d'Europe orientale, la République socialiste tchécoslovaque, qui est l'un des membres fondateurs de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et avec laquelle, entre autres, les Etats-Unis et le Royaume-Uni entretiennent des relations diplomatiques normales, je voudrais faire à ce propos quelques observations.

246. Les puissances impérialistes n'arrivent pas à prendre leur parti du fait que le peuple de la Tchécoslovaquie et les peuples des autres pays socialistes de cette partie du monde se sont engagés dans la voie d'une évolution démocratique véritable et libre. Leur bête noire, c'est l'idée qu'à la suite des pénibles expériences du passé les peuples de ces pays, après s'être débarrassés de leurs "défenseurs" occidentaux et dans leur effort d'assurer leur liberté et leur indépendance, se sont vus contraints à ne compter que sur leurs propres forces, sur les amitiés et alliances mutuelles et, avant tout, sur l'amitié solide, l'alliance et la collaboration étroite de l'Union soviétique.

247. Il faut beaucoup d'audace au représentant du Royaume-Uni, d'un Etat qui en septembre 1938, dans l'intérêt de ses propres plans impérialistes, a sacrifié sans hésitation, je le répète, sans hésitation, à Munich, l'indépendance de la Tchécoslovaquie, il faut beaucoup d'audace au représentant de ce pays pour prêcher aujourd'hui aux Etats d'Europe orientale, y compris la Tchécoslovaquie, la liberté et l'indépendance. Munich, Messieurs, c'est la terrible contrepartie que nous avons payée pour notre alliance avec les prétendues "démocraties occidentales". Mais, en même temps, cela nous a servi de dure leçon, nous apprenons la valeur que représentent pour les Etats impérialistes la liberté et l'indépendance des autres pays.

248. Tel était l'état de choses en 1938 et c'est ce qu'il est encore aujourd'hui, alors qu'avec l'appui du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni la situation en Allemagne occidentale commence à constituer une véritable menace pour la sécurité de la Tchécoslovaquie et pour la liberté des pays de toute l'Europe. A la lumière de ces faits, les paroles prononcées par les représentants des puissances impérialistes au sujet de la liberté des peuples d'Europe orientale rendent un son tout à fait faux.

249. Il n'y aurait nul besoin de s'arrêter à ces attaques calomnieuses des représentants des Etats occidentaux et de faire perdre à notre assemblée un temps précieux s'il ne s'agissait que de calomnies. Mais les forces d'agression en Occident, dans la poursuite de leur politique de haine contre les pays socialistes, ne se bornent pas à exprimer des désirs passionnés et des calomnies sans fondement. Leur politique revêt également un autre aspect, un aspect beaucoup plus dangereux.

250. Ce n'est un secret pour personne que les puissances occidentales, les Etats-Unis en tête, n'ont pas renoncé à l'idée de provoquer de vive force un revirement dans l'évolution des pays socialistes et de les attirer à nouveau dans leur sphère d'influence et sous leur domination. Il y a toujours en vigueur aux Etats-Unis une loi selon laquelle, chaque année, plus de 100 millions de dollars sont inscrits au budget d'Etat pour l'organisation d'activités subversives dirigées contre les pays socialistes d'Europe orientale.

251. Ces derniers temps, les milieux agressifs des Etats-Unis en sont venus à prendre de nouvelles mesures dangereuses. Reconnaissant qu'à l'intérieur de chaque pays socialiste leurs plans ne peuvent compter sur aucun soutien, ces milieux, selon les déclarations de certaines personnalités officielles, ont entrepris la préparation de forces pour une guerre dite "non classique", autrement dit l'entraînement de saboteurs, chargés d'activités de subversion, de sabotage et de terrorisme dirigées contre les Etats socialistes.

252. A ce propos, je voudrais attirer votre attention sur le numéro du 24 mai de cette année du Wall Street Journal. Il publie des commentaires détaillés et des données très importantes au sujet de cette dangereuse politique des Etats-Unis. L'article du journal constate littéralement que le gouvernement de M. Kennedy entend étendre et intensifier l'application de méthodes dites "non classiques" qui comprennent les activités partisans et antipartisans, des campagnes d'espionnage, des activités de subversion, de sabotage et de terrorisme.

253. Le même article explique clairement le but de ces activités. On y cite notamment un mémorandum rédigé sous forme de circulaire par le général Trudeau qui dirige le service d'investigations et de développement de l'armée de terre. Il y est dit ce qui suit:

"Nous devons trouver un moyen de renverser le régime communiste qui règne actuellement, cela sans qu'il y ait une guerre généralisée ni même une guerre limitée."

L'article énumère d'une façon relativement détaillée les méthodes qui permettent d'atteindre ces buts. Il y est dit en particulier qu'à l'heure actuelle les Etats-Unis entraînent des contingents de partisans recrutés parmi les citoyens américains et les citoyens de pays dits "alliés". L'article poursuit en précisant que le président Kennedy, devant le Congrès, a présenté des plans prévoyant que les "contingents spéciaux" des forces armées américaines seront à peu près doublés d'ici juin 1962. Il est dit plus loin que ces contingents sont composés d'aviateurs volontaires, qui s'entraînent à la pénétration en territoire ennemi et à l'organisation de forces internes hostiles au régime. Voilà ce que dit le Wall Street Journal, d'habitude très bien informé.

254. Monsieur le Président, je vous prie de m'excuser d'avoir été contraint de recourir à de si longues citations, mais je considère qu'elles jettent une très vive lumière sur certains agissements qui sont actuellement l'objet d'une attention soutenue des cercles militaires des Etats-Unis. On fonde évidemment de grands espoirs sur ces activités pour la "libération" de nos pays, dont M. Bingham a parlé à la 1061ème séance de l'Assemblée générale, autrement dit on espère que les peuples des pays socialistes seront de nouveau absorbés par les monopoles capitalistes et placés sous leur domination.

255. Je puis donner au représentant des Etats-Unis l'assurance que ce sont là vraiment des espoirs illusoires. Mais là n'est pas la question. Ce dont il s'agit, c'est qu'ici la politique intervient dans les relations normales entre des Etats souverains. Ce genre de politique est dangereux et peut avoir des suites extrêmement graves. C'est pour cette raison que les Etats socialistes réprouvent cette politique et ils ne négligeront aucun effort pour la mettre en pleine lumière aux yeux de tous les peuples pacifiques.

256. Le peuple tchécoslovaque, aussi bien que les peuples des autres pays d'Europe orientale, s'est prononcé unanimement pour le socialisme, dans l'édification duquel il a déjà obtenu de remarquables succès. On ne peut le faire dévier de cette voie à l'aide d'attaques, de provocations ou de calomnies répandues contre le socialisme par ses ennemis.

257. A l'adresse de nos honorables collègues, les représentants des Etats-Unis et du Royaume-Uni, qui, jusqu'à présent, ne les ont pas encore comprises, je voudrais citer de nouveau les paroles prononcées de cette même tribune, à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, par le Président de la République socialiste tchécoslovaque, M. Antoine Novotny, qui s'exprimait en ces termes:

"... cessez de spéculer sur un changement du système social de notre pays, sur la défaite et la destruction du socialisme ... comprenez enfin que la notion de liberté, telle que vous la concevez et en faveur de laquelle vous plaidez aujourd'hui avec tant d'ostentation est maintenant absolument incompréhensible et inacceptable pour notre peuple. Nous envisageons notre liberté sous un autre angle, celui des intérêts de l'évolution de la société socialiste dans son ensemble, c'est-à-dire du développement complet de l'homme, sans l'avidité qui caractérise votre société capitaliste". [871ème séance, par. 39 à 43.]

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

258. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant du Royaume-Uni, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

259. Sir Hugh FOOT (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je crois savoir que je suis le dernier orateur de la séance de ce soir et je ne me propose pas de retenir l'Assemblée pendant plus de quelques minutes. A vrai dire, j'aurais préféré ne pas avoir à retenir l'Assemblée même pendant ces quelques minutes, n'était ce que le représentant de l'Union soviétique a dit à la fin de son long discours.

260. J'estime devoir dire quelques mots qui, je l'espère, apporteront une note un peu encourageante après les propos abusifs plutôt décourageants que nous avons dû écouter pendant une bonne heure et demie. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a parlé du colonialisme et il a cité le premier ministre Nehru. Dans le sens de la domination exercée par un pays sur un autre, nous sommes tous opposés au colonialisme, non seulement le premier ministre Nehru, mais nous tous. Nous sommes fiers d'avoir fait d'anciennes colonies des nations libres dans notre Commonwealth. C'est de cela que nous sommes fiers; nul n'est fier du colonialisme.

261. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a cité, au sujet du colonialisme, le premier ministre Nehru. J'accepte la déclaration qu'il a faite. Je vais cependant citer d'autres paroles. L'an dernier, j'ai eu l'honneur d'assister à deux journées de l'indépendance: la première, dans le plus petit des territoires du Commonwealth britannique qui aient accédé à l'indépendance, à Chypre; la deuxième, dans le pays gigantesque de la Nigéria, où près de 40 millions de personnes ont accédé à l'autonomie, à la libre détermination et à l'indépendance. Le soir où le drapeau vert et blanc de la Fédération de Nigéria a été hissé, nous avons écouté le discours du Premier Ministre de la Nigéria, une personnalité d'envergure mondiale, une de celles qui dominent la présente génération.

262. Qu'a-t-il dit, en parlant de ce que nous avons apporté? Voici les paroles exactes qu'il a prononcées en ce soir de l'indépendance à Lagos, en Nigéria:

"Je m'adresse maintenant, en les remerciant, aux fonctionnaires britanniques qui ont travaillé avec nous pendant des années. Vous êtes venus vers nous comme des maîtres, puis comme des dirigeants, puis aujourd'hui comme des associés, mais toujours comme des amis."

Telle est la citation que j'oppose à celle que le représentant de l'Union soviétique nous a faite.

263. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a parlé de l'esclavage et il est évident que l'esclavage marque une page honteuse dans l'histoire des hommes. Mais il a parlé d'un passé depuis longtemps révolu, d'une époque où de nombreux peuples s'occupaient de la traite des esclaves. Mais ce qui nous intéresse davantage, c'est le néo-esclavage, le néo-esclavage de l'époque présente où des multitudes de personnes, en l'ère que nous vivons et du temps de notre propre génération, ont été assujetties à une domination. C'est le néo-esclavage du système soviétique que nous condamnons.

264. Je ne vais pas parler ce soir des Etats satellites et de la prétention qui vient d'être émise, selon laquelle ces Etats seraient libres. A qui pourrait-on faire croire qu'ils sont libres? A qui pourrait-on faire croire qu'on y jouit de la liberté individuelle?

265. Je passe à un cas précis. Je me souviens que le Ministre d'Etat du Royaume-Uni, quand il a pris la parole devant l'Assemblée [1036^{ème} séance], a cité un cas précis. Et nous n'avons pas reçu de réponse, absolument aucune réponse. Nous parlons des îles du Pacifique. En ces jours, on s'intéresse beaucoup aux îles du Pacifique, parce qu'il ne restera plus de territoires sous tutelle que dans le Pacifique lorsque le Ruanda-Urundi, le dernier des territoires sous tutelle d'Afrique, aura accédé à l'indépendance. Les représentants soviétiques au Conseil de tutelle, comme ailleurs, portent beaucoup d'intérêt et à juste titre sur tout ce qui se passe dans les îles du Pacifique, en Nouvelle-Guinée, par exemple, et dans l'île minuscule de Nauru. Mais que se passe-t-il dans les îles soviétiques? Que se passe-t-il dans les îles Kouriles? Cette question précise a été posée par mon ministre d'Etat, mais les représentants soviétiques n'y ont pas répondu un mot. Ces îles, également situées dans le Pacifique, demeurent entourées de l'inquiétant silence du régime soviétique. Pas un renseignement n'est fourni à leur sujet. Ces îles ne sont pas des territoires sous tutelle. Nous ne savons rien de ce qui s'y passe. Elles sont traitées comme faisant partie de l'empire soviétique et, à partir du moment où elles sont entrées dans l'empire soviétique, le monde n'en a plus entendu parler.

266. Pour ce qui est d'affranchir des peuples, nous sommes des experts. Nous avons conduit à l'affranchissement et installé dans les assemblées mondiales, au cours des 16 dernières années, des populations trois fois supérieures en nombre à la population de l'Union soviétique. Je ne suis pas surpris que les représentants de l'Union soviétique l'ignorent. L'Union soviétique n'est pas experte en affranchissement, elle est experte en oppression. Nous sommes le peuple qui, en particulier au cours des quelques dernières dizaines d'années, les années que j'ai moi-même vécues, a travaillé pour amener d'autres peuples à la pleine indépendance et nous sommes fiers, je le répète, nous sommes fiers de ce que nous avons fait, non de ce que nous avons fait il y a des générations, mais de ce que nous avons fait à l'époque dont je parle.

267. Les nouveaux pays du Commonwealth ont progressé vers la liberté, tandis que les satellites de l'Union soviétique ont rétrogradé vers le néo-esclavage.

268. Je ne retiendrai pas l'Assemblée plus d'une ou deux minutes de plus, mais je voudrais parler de certains des territoires qui ont été mentionnés ce soir. Nous avons parfois l'impression, en écoutant ces accusations usées, répétées maintes et maintes fois, d'écouter un vieux disque de phonographe fêlé. Il y a quelque temps, dans ce débat [1059^{ème} séance], nous avons entendu M. Kisselev, de la RSS de Biélorussie. Parlant mardi dernier, il a dit: "La lutte pour l'indépendance se poursuit au Tanganyika." La lutte pour l'indépendance se poursuit au Tanganyika, voilà bien ce qu'il a dit. Or le Tanganyika va fêter son indépendance dans deux semaines. En ce moment même où, selon nos amis soviétiques, le combat, la lutte se poursuit au Tanganyika, les Tanganyikais, en réalité, se préparent à célébrer les fêtes de leur accession à l'indépendance avec la pleine approbation et la pleine coopération du Royaume-Uni. Voilà un des disques fêlés de l'Union soviétique.

269. M. Lapine nous a demandé il y a quelque temps pourquoi le Royaume-Uni refusait d'accorder l'indépendance au Kenya. Il n'est pas question de refuser l'indépendance au Kenya. Le Royaume-Uni est désireux et soucieux de voir le Kenya devenir indépendant et le retard est dû à des désaccords entre les deux principaux partis politiques du Kenya. En ce moment même, nous envoyons sans tarder un expert en questions constitutionnelles, qui arrivera dans quelques jours au Kenya, pour aider les deux partis à élaborer des propositions pour la nouvelle constitution sous le régime de laquelle le Kenya deviendra indépendant. Soit dit en passant, nous avons été mal renseignés — pour employer un terme courtois — sur la situation actuelle; il y a déjà une majorité d'Africains au Parlement du Kenya.

270. On a parlé des problèmes de la Rhodésie du Nord. Là, les divergences ont été restreintes d'une façon qui rapproche tellement les deux points de vue que nous espérons pouvoir aller bientôt de l'avant, avec une nouvelle constitution, vers de nouvelles élections.

271. Au sujet de la Rhodésie du Sud, je me souviens avoir entendu dire précédemment, au cours de ce débat, qu'une nouvelle Afrique du Sud était en train de se constituer. Je tiens à le nier formellement. Le Premier Ministre de la Rhodésie du Sud a fait récemment une déclaration aux termes de laquelle son programme pour les prochaines élections reposait sur l'abolition de toute ségrégation raciale, de toute discrimination raciale en Rhodésie du Sud. Il est extravagant de donner à entendre que la politique suivie en Rhodésie du Sud serait la même qu'en Afrique du Sud.

272. Les mêmes progrès se poursuivent dans nos autres territoires. L'un après l'autre, les territoires du Commonwealth britannique sont conduits à l'autonomie, l'autodétermination, l'indépendance. L'un après l'autre, ils entrent à l'Assemblée générale. Ce que nous faisons là, nous le justifions, nous le défendons et, je le répète, nous en sommes fiers. Toute ma vie, j'ai consacré mes efforts aux préparatifs qui sont l'objet d'un tel dédain du représentant de l'Union soviétique. Toute ma vie, j'ai travaillé avec les peuples de ces pays à constituer les parlements, à établir la fonction publique, à développer l'enseignement. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a cité des chiffres pour prétendre que nous ne formions pas d'enseignants. C'est une allégation extravagante. Il n'a pas parlé des universités qu'on est en train de créer dans ces pays. Il a parlé de trois instituteurs en Ouganda, mais il a passé sous silence l'université qu'on est en train de développer en Ouganda et qui aura des sections également au Kenya et au Tanganyika, soit trois collèges en tout, dépendant de la nouvelle Université d'Afrique orientale.

273. J'apporte mon témoignage personnel des efforts accomplis pour réaliser cette préparation et je puis dire que ce travail n'a pas été fait en vain. Je suis sûr qu'il n'est pas dans l'Assemblée un seul représentant d'un des pays anciennement sous administration du Royaume-Uni qui puisse contester que les préparatifs accomplis pendant toutes ces années ont été précieux et ont donné de bons résultats.

274. Pour terminer, je voudrais dire quelques mots au sujet du nationalisme. Je crois que le nationalisme, une des grandes forces de notre siècle, de notre génération, est une force qui agit pour le bien de l'humanité. Je crois que les nouvelles nations que la marée du nationalisme a portées à l'Assemblée peuvent sauver le monde. Je crois que leur influence peut être décisive à l'avenir. Aucun pays — ni l'Union soviétique, ni aucun autre pays — ne pourra ne pas tenir compte de l'existence de ces nouvelles nations. Elles auront une influence capitale dans les temps à venir. Je remercie Dieu qu'il en soit ainsi. Je crois qu'elles constituent à bien des points de vue l'espoir du monde. C'est la marée du nationalisme qui les a portées ici. Le nationalisme, je l'admets, peut tourner au racisme, peut devenir une source de mal, mais le nationalisme peut devenir une source de patriotisme, une source de fierté et d'effort.

275. L'Union soviétique croit-elle au nationalisme? Je me suis donné la peine l'autre jour de chercher quelle était la plus récente prise de position, dans les hautes sphères de l'Union soviétique, sur la question du nationalisme. J'ai constaté qu'on tient certains propos ici mais qu'on parle un langage différent chez soi. Au sujet du nationalisme, citerai-je à l'Assemblée quelques lignes du programme du Parti, publié récemment en URSS? Ce programme du Parti qui est omnipotent réclame "une lutte implacable contre les manifestations et survivances du nationalisme sous toutes ses formes". Voilà comment l'Union soviétique parle à son peuple, chez elle, et ce n'est pas ce qu'elle dit ici. Le programme poursuit:

"La liquidation des manifestations du nationalisme est dans l'intérêt de toutes les nations et nationalités de l'URSS."

276. Je crois et nous croyons tous que l'un des grands mouvements de notre génération, de notre ère, est la création de nouvelles nations. Personnellement, je suis heureux et fier d'avoir pu, toute ma vie, travailler avec quelques-uns des peuples intéressés à la création de ces nouvelles nations. Je n'ai pas honte de ce que nous avons fait et ceux d'entre nous qui considèrent ce qui a été fait en ces 30 ans de travail avec les peuples des nouvelles nations maintenant indépendantes estiment que ce fut du bon travail.

277. Je repousse les accusations qui ont été portées contre nous et je suis très heureux d'avoir eu l'occasion, même à cette heure tardive, de réfuter en particulier les accusations de l'Union soviétique.

278. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de lever la séance, je voudrais attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée sur un nouveau projet de résolution [A/L.369] qui a été présenté par la délégation du Mexique et qui vient d'être distribué. A notre prochaine séance, lundi, nous examinerons les divers projets de résolutions et nous passerons ensuite au vote.

La séance est levée à 0 h 35.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

g) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. Le PRÉSIDENT: Nous avons terminé vendredi la discussion générale des points 88 et 22, a, de notre ordre du jour. Nous allons maintenant procéder à la discussion et aux explications de vote concernant les projets de résolution. Je tiens, à ce propos, à rappeler les projets dont nous sommes saisis: ce sont les projets de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354], de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355], de 38 puissances [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3], de l'Inde et de neuf autres puissances [A/L.367/Rev.1], de 13 pays d'Afrique [A/L.368], du Mexique [A/L.369] et de la Nigéria et du Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1]. Je signale également que des amendements au projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 ont été déposés sous la cote A/L.370.

2. M. KOSCIUSKO-MORIZET (France): Les projets de résolution sur lesquels l'Assemblée va avoir à se prononcer intéressent, en réalité, deux questions différentes. L'une est l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], à laquelle a été rattaché le programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance, inclus originellement dans le problème général de l'assistance à l'Afrique. L'autre est l'avenir de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, dont l'examen eut peut-être été, de l'avis de ma délégation, mieux à sa place dans le cadre d'un point spécial de notre ordre du jour.

3. Je traiterai d'abord des projets de résolution relatifs au problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale.

4. La délégation française a suivi de très près les discussions qui y ont été consacrées. Cette question présente, à certains égards, un caractère sui generis qui en accentue la complexité et recommande à notre diligente attention les différents projets de résolution.

5. Le projet déposé, d'emblée, par la délégation néerlandaise [A/L.354], après les déclarations du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, nous paraît répondre à une double préoccupation. D'une part, il exprime l'engagement solennel pris par la puissance administrante de régler le sort de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale sur la base de l'autodétermination. D'autre part, il propose une procédure originale qui, compte tenu des données particulières du problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, doit permettre la mise en œuvre du principe de libre disposition.

6. Le souci du Gouvernement des Pays-Bas de régler le problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée conformément au principe de l'autodétermination ne peut rencontrer qu'un accueil très favorable de la part de ma délégation. C'est sur cette base, pensons-nous, que doit se fonder le processus de la décolonisation en vue, à la fois, de répondre aux vœux et de protéger les intérêts des populations en cause.

7. Nous constatons aussi que les mesures prises dans le territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée pour accélérer l'accession de la population à l'autonomie et les résultats obtenus font honneur au peuple et au Gouvernement néerlandais. De plus, l'engagement pris par ce dernier de se conformer aux décisions arrêtées par les populations papoues, quelles que soient ces décisions, la promesse qu'il a faite de maintenir son assistance financière à concurrence de 30 millions de dollars par an en vue du développement de la Nouvelle-Guinée, sans hypothèque d'aucune sorte, constituent, selon nous, des éléments positifs dont il convient de tenir compte.

8. En ce qui concerne la procédure de mise en œuvre de l'autodétermination préconisée par la délégation des Pays-Bas dans le cas particulier de la Nouvelle-Guinée, certains feront peut-être remarquer qu'elle s'écarte des deux moyens prévus dans la Charte des Nations Unies. L'un est l'accession à la pleine souveraineté des territoires encore dépendants, à l'initiative et sous les auspices de la puissance administrante; l'autre consiste à placer ces mêmes territoires sous le régime international de tutelle, l'Autorité chargée de l'administration pouvant être constituée par un ou plusieurs Etats ou par l'Organisation elle-même. Ce sont ces voies qu'a suivies mon pays pour assurer l'évolution des territoires dont il avait la charge. Les dispositions de la Charte auraient sans doute pu fournir une formule propre à résoudre les problèmes qui se posent en l'occurrence.

9. Mais il convient de noter que, dans le cas de la Nouvelle-Guinée, le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas s'est trouvé devant des difficultés particulières dont l'une tient à l'existence d'une revendication territoriale. La délégation française comprend que, pour avoir égard à cette situation spéciale, des solutions originales aient pu être recherchées par la puissance administrante à laquelle il appartient de préparer le règlement du problème en tenant compte de toutes les données. Aussi bien c'est à la suite d'un libre choix et de sa propre initiative que cette puissance s'adresse aux Nations Unies pour leur soumettre un plan qu'elle a elle-même conçu.

10. La délégation française a prêté également une très vive attention à la thèse soutenue par le représentant de l'Indonésie, dont l'argumentation se fonde sur le paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration: "Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

11. Il est permis de se demander si cette disposition peut être invoquée en la circonstance. Il est d'abord au moins douteux que l'Indonésie et la Nouvelle-Guinée aient constitué une seule et même entité nationale avant l'occupation de ces archipels par les Pays-Bas.

12. La délégation indonésienne se réfère alors au principe en vertu duquel un pays qui accède à l'indépendance doit être délimité par les frontières mêmes qu'a créées la puissance coloniale. Pour ma délégation, il ne saurait s'agir d'un principe absolu mais seulement d'une règle de sage empirisme. Il serait en effet aisé de citer des cas où une telle règle n'a pas été appliquée. Certains grands ensembles territoriaux placés, durant l'époque coloniale, sous une même administration pour des raisons pratiques, ont pu, au moment de l'émancipation, se séparer en plusieurs Etats, vu le caractère spécifique des différentes parties qui composaient l'entité initiale, c'est-à-dire, en dernière analyse, pour répondre aux vœux des populations elles-mêmes.

13. Si l'on veut donc, comme le souhaite la délégation indonésienne, maintenir uni l'ensemble administratif constitué par le colonisateur, cela se peut, cela est peut-être souhaitable, mais cela ne saurait être qu'avec le libre consentement des opinions dans le territoire en litige; en d'autres termes, par la mise en œuvre de l'autodétermination.

14. Dans le cas qui nous occupe, il ne semble pas que le Gouvernement indonésien soit en droit de concevoir des inquiétudes particulières puisque le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas, M. Luns, a déclaré ce qui suit. Je cite:

"Le Gouvernement néerlandais tient à affirmer solennellement que, si la population papoue décide de s'unir à l'Indonésie, le Gouvernement néerlandais ne formulera absolument aucune objection et respectera entièrement cette décision de même qu'il respecterait toute autre décision de la population papoue."

15. D'autre part, du haut de cette même tribune, l'honorable représentant de l'Indonésie s'est déclaré convaincu des aspirations de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée à rejoindre la République d'Indonésie.

16. J'en arrive donc au projet de résolution présenté par l'Inde et d'autres puissances [A/L.367/Rev.1].

17. Il préconise l'ouverture de "nouvelles négociations" bilatérales pour résoudre la question. Certes, la délégation française accueille avec faveur le principe d'une solution qui se propose de réconcilier des opinions divergentes. Mais, en la circonstance, une telle formule louable en soi n'est-elle pas incomplète? La délégation française partage l'avis, exprimé par beaucoup d'autres délégations, selon lequel tout règlement du problème doit faire mention du droit des populations à l'autodétermination. Ce droit a été proclamé solennellement par les Pays-Bas, ce qui n'exclut nullement la possibilité pour l'Indonésie de faire entendre sa voix à cette occasion dans des conditions d'impartialité que toute commission ad hoc, dont la création serait décidée par cette assemblée, aurait certainement à cœur d'assurer. C'est pour cette raison que la délégation française aura le regret de s'opposer au projet indien qui nous paraît insuffisant.

18. Le projet de résolution dû à 13 délégations africaines [A/L.368] nous semble une solution de compromis. En effet ces dispositions prennent, d'après nous, en considération les principaux éléments du problème.

19. Premièrement, étant donné d'une part qu'il existe un litige, on doit s'efforcer de régler celui-ci par la voie de négociations bilatérales à la faveur desquelles les deux parties en cause seront à même de faire valoir leurs intérêts et leurs vues.

20. Deuxièmement, il convient d'autre part de ne pas perdre de vue que toute solution qui engage le sort définitif d'un territoire non autonome doit être fondée sur le principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, droit que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas a décidé, de sa propre initiative, de laisser les habitants de la Nouvelle-Guinée exercer librement.

21. Troisièmement, au cas enfin où les intéressés n'arriveraient pas à définir d'un commun accord une solution, la création d'une commission chargée de procéder à une enquête et d'étudier l'éventualité d'établir un régime international pour l'administration et la surveillance du territoire semble pouvoir être acceptée.

22. Ainsi que je l'ai déjà remarqué, l'affaire présente un caractère sui generis en raison des conditions particulières existant dans le territoire intéressé et de l'éventualité qu'une période transitoire s'écoule avant que le statut de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale ne soit définitivement fixé. Tous les droits et aspirations des parties en cause nous semblent préservés par ce dernier projet de résolution.

23. Telles sont les considérations qui guideront les votes de notre délégation sur ce problème de la Nouvelle-Guinée.

24. Le débat relatif à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux nous semble avoir été marqué par deux sortes d'interventions qui se traduisent par deux sortes de résolutions.

25. Les premières, heureusement limitées sinon par leur longueur, du moins par leur nombre, n'ont brillé ni par la nouveauté ni par la probité, illustrant une fois de plus la parole de l'Evangile: "Pourquoi vois-tu la paille qui est dans l'œil de ton frère et ne vois-tu pas la poutre qui est dans ton œil?" C'est ainsi que si l'on a quelque peu parlé de néo-colonialisme — et en quels termes et par quelles bouches autorisées —, il n'est guère apparu que les antennes, les clichés, les slogans entendus laissent espérer à cette session la mise en œuvre d'un néo-anticolonialisme; j'entends par là celui qui s'attaquerait à toutes les formes de domination étrangère, sans distinction de couleur, de race, de religion et de continent, en Asie et en Europe aussi bien qu'en Afrique. Soyons cependant attentifs et patients, car si les Nations Unies ont vocation d'universalité, il n'est pas douteux que cette grande aspiration à l'indépendance et à la liberté — pour nous, ces deux concepts sont inséparables —, qui est exprimée dans les passages les plus valables de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, trouvera tôt ou tard un champ d'application universel.

26. Ces premières interventions trouvent leur expression dans le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355]. Il serait tentant de prendre au pied de la lettre ce projet. Mais quels que soient les changements intervenus dans ce grand pays et dans ce vaste empire, il ne semble pas que les auteurs de ce texte consentent encore à appliquer à eux-mêmes leurs propres résolutions et à se soumettre à la loi commune. La déstalinisation n'est pas encore poussée au point de décoloniser les peuples non russes. C'est une des raisons majeures pour lesquelles nous nous prononcerons contre ce premier projet et contre l'amendement soviétique [A/L.370] au projet de résolution des 38 puissances [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] qui vient d'être déposé.

27. Les autres interventions, l'immense majorité, ont eu le mérite de s'attacher — comme l'a réclamé à cette tribune notre collègue de Grèce [1052ème séance] — d'une part à mieux définir les principes exposés dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, d'autre part à rechercher un accord sur les mesures pratiques. Je n'en voudrais citer d'autre exemple que le remarquable exposé que le Ministre des affaires étrangères de Nigéria a fait devant notre assemblée [1050ème séance]. Non que nous partageons toutes ses vues, mais il a abordé les problèmes réels de la décolonisation. Et lorsqu'on entre dans le concret, les mirages s'évanouissent. Il est bon qu'il soit dit que le chauvinisme n'est pas un remède au sous-développement, le verbalisme à la stagnation, un discours de propagande un alibi aux tâches ardues, pour les nouveaux Etats, de la préparation des budgets et des plans, de la formation des cadres, de l'organisation de l'administration. Il est utile aussi de rappeler, comme l'a fait ici le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la République malgache [1064ème séance], que le processus de décolonisation ne pouvait se dissocier de l'assistance aux pays ex-colonisés. Ce réalisme nous semble inspirer le projet de résolution signé par les 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie.

28. Je voudrais indiquer à ce sujet la position de notre délégation. Je tiens d'abord, en louant les coauteurs de l'effort qu'ils ont accompli, à marquer notre accord sur le fond du problème. Au cours de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée, notre délégation rappelait les paroles prononcées par le général de Gaulle, le 5 septembre 1960: "L'émancipation des peuples ... est conforme tout à la fois au génie de notre pays ... et au mouvement irrésistible qui s'est déclenché dans le monde à l'occasion de la guerre mondiale et de ce qui s'en est suivi." [Voir 945ème séance, par. 134.] Et au cours de la quatorzième session de l'Assemblée, notre ministre des affaires étrangères, M. Couve de Murville, soulignait à cette même tribune, le 30 septembre 1959, que "Le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, qui est inscrit à l'Article premier de la Charte des Nations Unies, est ainsi la règle qui a été suivie par le Gouvernement français." [814ème séance, par. 105.] Cette règle demeure toujours la nôtre. Depuis, en effet, la Conférence de Brazzaville, en janvier 1944, en pleine guerre mondiale, en passant par la Constitution de 1946 qui créait l'Union française, la loi-cadre de 1956, l'immense référendum de 1958, la Communauté et l'accession à l'indépendance et à la vie internationale de tous ces nouveaux Etats présents ici parmi nous, nos égaux, et malgré les péripéties, retards ou précipitations, que les réalités et les hommes rendaient sans doute inévitables, c'est une continuité de pensée et d'action dans le dessein français qui nous permet d'accueillir avec sérénité les critiques, surtout quand elles sont prononcées en notre langue, et avec confiance le jugement de l'histoire.

29. Nous n'avons pas attendu la Déclaration pour savoir où nous voulions aller, ce que nous voulions faire, et pour le faire. Qu'il s'agisse des territoires sous tutelle ou des territoires non autonomes, nous avons préparé l'autodétermination par l'autogestion, et si nous ne prétendons pas imposer la généralisation de notre conception, du moins avons-nous la fierté de penser que cette méthode a épargné bien des tâtonnements et des crises aux peuples dont nous avons la charge et qui sont maintenant les seuls maîtres de leur destin.

30. Nous avons donc scrupuleusement rempli les prescriptions de la Charte des Nations Unies dans son esprit comme dans sa lettre, celles du Chapitre XI qui impliquaient la transmission de renseignements au Secrétaire général de notre organisation, comme celles des Chapitres XII et XIII qui prévoyaient la surveillance par les Nations Unies de l'administration de tutelle. Je voudrais relever à cette occasion que certains de nos territoires d'outre-mer auxquels il a été fait incidemment allusion par des délégations probablement mal informées ont atteint leur complète autonomie. C'est librement qu'ils ont choisi leur statut actuel, après les mêmes consultations démocratiques que celles qui ont engagé d'autres territoires dans des évolutions différentes. Leurs habitants bénéficient de garanties et de droits égaux à ceux de tous nos concitoyens: suffrage universel des hommes et des femmes, représentation librement élue, institutions démocratiques.

31. Parce que notre tâche est accomplie, et nous pensons bien accomplie, et parce que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance nous apparaît, en ce qui nous concerne, comme le couronnement d'une évolution déjà réalisée et non comme un point de départ, nous ne sommes que plus à l'aise pour faire, à l'égard d'une résolution dont nous approuvons l'inspiration, quelques remarques.

32. Certains de nos amis — et nous en comptons, dans tous les continents, de nombreux — nous ont dit en nous demandant notre vote: "Cette résolution ne vous gêne pas, elle ne vous concerne pas." Cela est vrai, sinon dans la mesure où les 103 Etats Membres de notre organisation sont intéressés à établir dans la vie des peuples un peu plus de sécurité, un peu plus de clarté, un peu plus de justice, un peu plus de bien-être. Si, par conséquent, nous ne sommes pas directement concernés — ou comme on dit ici: si nous ne sommes pas "visés" —, ce n'est pas une raison pour être indifférents à un certain nombre de principes qui nous tiennent à cœur parce qu'ils sont le fondement même de notre organisation, qu'ils en permettent le développement et le progrès et qu'ils sont une garantie pour tous les Etats Membres.

33. Nous avons eu l'occasion de développer ce point de vue dans les différentes commissions de l'Assemblée et à propos d'autres problèmes ou de problèmes analogues. Pour nous, la Charte demeure la Charte; c'est notre constitution, et il n'est pas possible de l'interpréter ou même de l'amender par le biais de résolutions. Si l'on considère que la Charte est insuffisante, parce que le monde depuis 16 ans s'est transformé, qu'il y a des lacunes à combler ou des corrections à apporter, si, comme l'a dit à cette tribune M. Vakil, délégué de l'Iran [1061ème séance], en termes excellents, on pense que le succès ou l'échec de notre organisation dépend de la façon dont elle s'adapte aux besoins du temps, il faut alors reviser la Charte selon les procédures légales prévues à cet effet.

34. Qu'un tel problème se pose à propos du projet de résolution qui nous est présenté, et encore davantage à propos du projet de résolution introduit par notre collègue du Mexique [A/L.369], cela n'est pas contestable. Plusieurs délégations l'ont souligné, même si elles ont abouti à des conclusions différentes des nôtres. Je pense, en particulier, à l'analyse si précise du représentant de la Colombie, M. Noriega [1054ème séance], devant notre assemblée, à l'exposé circonstancié du représentant du Japon, M. Miyazaki, un des coauteurs de la résolution africano-asiatique, qui a déclaré ici même: "La tendance prévaut de plus en plus de suggérer d'appliquer aux territoires non autonomes les dispositions primitivement prévues pour les territoires sous tutelle." [Voir 1054ème séance, par. 176*.]

35. Le problème est bien posé, et c'est dans la mesure où les projets de résolution en question tentent de le trancher par des procédures qui nous semblent contestables, parce qu'elles s'écartent de celles prévues par la Charte, que nous croyons devoir formuler expressément des réserves d'ordre constitutionnel et juridique. Que l'on ne vienne surtout pas nous accuser de formalisme ou de juridisme; il est normal dans notre organisation d'invoquer le droit, et depuis 2 000 ans, c'est-à-dire depuis que nous-mêmes avons été colonisés, nous sommes les héritiers d'une certaine conception latine, voire romaine, du droit des gens et des nations, de la foi dans les chartes et les traités, de la fidélité aux engagements pris et du respect de la signature donnée.

36. Voilà la raison pour laquelle nous ne pouvons donner notre approbation complète au projet de résolution africano-asiatique qui nous est soumis. Cette expression de nos principes juridiques ne préjuge pas du désir de notre délégation de favoriser la recherche de solutions pragmatiques. Nous ne nous opposerons pas, en tout cas, à ce que le projet de résolution des 38 puissances soit adopté à l'unanimité.

37. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole aux orateurs suivants, je me dois de signaler à l'Assemblée générale que nous avons prévu, pour terminer la discussion et le vote des deux points actuels, une séance d'après-midi et une séance du soir. La liste des orateurs inscrits pour les explications de vote est en train de s'allonger. Je dois donc clore cette liste avant le vote, c'est-à-dire dans une demi-heure, sauf objection de la part de l'Assemblée. Pour faciliter l'achèvement de nos travaux sur ce sujet, j'ai l'intention de continuer la séance, jusqu'aux environs de 7 heures. Si nous pouvons voter sur tous les projets de résolution, j'annulerai la séance du soir; sinon, nous en aurons une, de façon à terminer cette question aujourd'hui.

38. M. ADEEL (Soudan) [traduit de l'anglais]: Si ma délégation n'a pas participé au débat général sur le point 88 de l'ordre du jour et la partie a du point 22, ce n'est pas que les maux — ou mieux les péchés — du colonialisme nous laissent le moins du monde indifférents. Ces maux et ces péchés ont été dénoncés pendant des années, tant ici qu'ailleurs, au cours de débats approfondis. Nous avons fait clairement entendre notre voix durant ces débats. Il y a quelques semaines encore, le 13 octobre 1961, le chef de l'Etat soudanais, le maréchal Ibrahim Abboud, s'est adressé en ces termes à l'Assemblée générale:

"Nous sommes absolument convaincus que l'une des causes essentielles de tension, qui menacent le monde aujourd'hui et qui représentent une menace directe à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, se trouve être la perpétuation du colonialisme dans ses formes classico-modernes, dans de nombreuses parties du monde." [A/PV.1036, p. 12.]

C'est grâce à la lutte de l'homme contre l'injustice, l'oppression et l'humiliation, et à sa volonté de recouvrer les droits inaliénables que Dieu lui a donnés, que ce monstre dragon est aujourd'hui sinon mort tout à fait, tout au moins dans une espèce de coma.

39. C'est pour débarrasser l'humanité des mortels venins de ce monstre que l'Assemblée générale a pris la décision historique qu'exprime la résolution 1514 (XV). A notre avis, cette résolution, quoique tardive, fait date et n'est dépassée en importance que par la Charte.

40. Mais l'Assemblée générale n'a pas aujourd'hui, d'après nous, à faire l'historique de la question qui a mené à l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV); il lui faut plutôt examiner les moyens de la mettre immédiatement en œuvre.

41. C'est dans cet esprit que l'on a soumis diverses propositions à l'examen de l'Assemblée, et j'ai l'intention, dans ma déclaration qui sera fort brève, de dire quelques mots de chacune de ces propositions.

42. Tout d'abord, je ferai quelques remarques sur le projet déposé par les Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. Nous sommes sensibles aux motifs qui ont poussé la délégation néerlandaise à déposer ce projet et à son désir de collaborer avec les Nations Unies à la mise en œuvre de la résolution 1514 (XV); nous sommes heureux aussi que les Pays-Bas aient voté cette résolution; il nous faut pourtant faire face à certaines difficultés.

43. En premier lieu, on a demandé si la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise — ou Irian occidental — est un territoire non autonome auquel la résolution 1514 (XV) est applicable. L'Indonésie prétend en effet que le territoire en question fait partie intégrante de l'Indonésie, pays souverain et indépendant. L'attitude des deux parties directement intéressées, les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, nous semble diamétralement opposée. Elles ne peuvent même pas s'entendre sur le nom du territoire. Etant donné ces divergences fondamentales, nous pensons que le meilleur moyen de résoudre ce problème et de rétablir des relations amicales entre deux Etats Membres — qui ont tant à s'offrir mutuellement — serait de les inciter à reprendre des négociations directes.

44. Le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Indonésie nous a dit et répété que la proposition néerlandaise est tout à fait inacceptable, car elle aurait, à son avis, pour effet de porter atteinte à la souveraineté et à l'intégrité territoriale de l'Indonésie. Etant donné cette attitude, nous pensons qu'au lieu d'adopter une résolution contraire à l'avis d'une des parties directement intéressées — et dont la coopération est indispensable au succès de toute proposition destinée à résoudre ce regrettable différend —, l'Assemblée ferait bien de persuader les deux parties d'entamer des négociations immédiates, avec le cas échéant l'aide de l'ONU, en vue de résoudre ce problème. L'Assemblée générale contribuerait ainsi au rétablissement de rapports harmonieux entre deux Membres dévoués de notre organisation. Je me permets de faire cette proposition en raison de l'amitié que mon pays éprouve tant pour l'Indonésie que pour les Pays-Bas.

45. Le projet de résolution A/L.367/Rev.1, déposé à l'origine par l'Inde, semble suivre une voie analogue à la nôtre; nous serons heureux de l'appuyer.

46. En ce qui concerne ce problème particulier, plusieurs Etats africains ont déposé un troisième projet de résolution [A/L.368]. Nous estimons qu'il ne devrait y avoir, qu'il ne peut y avoir ni méfiance ni doute à l'égard des nobles sentiments qui ont dicté cette proposition. Celle-ci — comme celle de l'Inde — met l'accent sur la nécessité d'un accord négocié. De même que la proposition indienne, ce texte voudrait que les parties puissent, dans la reprise de leurs négociations, disposer de l'aide de l'ONU sous une forme ou une autre par l'entremise du Président de l'Assemblée ou du Secrétaire général. Ces deux aspects de la proposition ont notre appui sans réserve.

47. Mais, d'autre part, nous ne pouvons pas nous empêcher de voir dans ce texte certains termes qui peuvent, à notre avis, prêter à une interprétation erronée, ce qui porterait préjudice aux négociations que l'on se propose d'entamer.

48. L'exemple suivant suffira pour illustrer mon argument. Cette proposition est tout entière imprégnée de l'hypothèse que le territoire en question est un territoire auquel s'applique le droit d'autodétermination. Cette conception suscite chez ma délégation les mêmes doutes sérieux que la proposition néerlandaise. Si les Nations Unies admettaient cette idée, cela équivaudrait, selon nous, à porter un jugement sur la prétention de l'Indonésie à la souveraineté sur ce territoire. Nous estimons que l'Assemblée générale n'est pas compétente pour juger les prétentions de ce genre. Si ce texte devait finalement faire l'objet d'un vote, ma délégation voterait dans le sens que je viens d'indiquer.

49. Examinons maintenant le projet soviétique [A/L.355]. J'ai le devoir de dire que, si la teneur générale de ce texte a notre agrément, nous avons pourtant certaines réserves à faire, particulièrement à l'égard du paragraphe 2, qui donne une date limite pour la libération de tous les territoires non autonomes. Ce que nous réclamons énergiquement, c'est la liquidation définitive du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, immédiatement et sans délai.

50. Vous vous rappelez sans doute que les chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement des pays non alignés qui se sont réunis à Belgrade^{1/} avaient mentionné, au cours de leurs délibérations, l'année 1962, mais que l'unanimité finale ne s'était pas faite à ce sujet. La résolution 1514 (XV) elle-même ne mentionne aucune date. Elle dispose simplement:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés ..."

51. Je voudrais souligner, si l'Assemblée me le permet, les mots "à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés". Nous estimons que la détermination des dates est une importante question sur laquelle il faut consulter la population des territoires en cause. Si les Nations Unies fixaient une date sans consulter la population des territoires intéressés, elles agiraient, à notre humble avis, contrairement à l'esprit et à la lettre du paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV).

52. Ce serait une façon de procéder à laquelle il nous serait impossible de nous rallier, car, selon notre interprétation de ce paragraphe, il faut consulter la population des territoires non autonomes en question sur un problème aussi important que celui de la date où ils veulent accéder à l'indépendance. Cette date, c'est à eux de la choisir. Nous espérons que ce choix se fera le plus tôt possible, mais ne leur imposons pas notre volonté. A la présente session, l'Assemblée générale devrait, selon nous, examiner non pas tellement la question des dates que celle des moyens et des dispositifs à mettre en place et de la procédure à adopter pour assurer l'application rapide de la résolution 1514 (XV).

53. Le projet de résolution des 38 puissances [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] nous semble répondre à cette conception. Nous aurions voulu être coauteurs de ce projet, mais certains doutes exprimés quant à la composition du Comité spécial dont il est question au paragraphe 3 de cette résolution nous ont obligés à adopter une attitude plus réservée. Etant donné l'ampleur du sujet à examiner et le temps imparti au comité qui aurait à l'étudier, nous croyons qu'un comité plus restreint serait préférable. Cette réserve faite, nous serons heureux d'appuyer ce projet, car nous estimons que c'est le plus réalisable de tous les projets soumis jusqu'à présent à l'Assemblée.

54. En ce qui concerne le projet mexicain [A/L.369], ma délégation fera la remarque suivante. En premier lieu, nous estimons que, si l'Assemblée adopte, comme nous l'espérons, les propositions africano-asiatiques consignées dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, la proposition mexicaine deviendra superflue. En second lieu, nous devons faire certaines réserves de base à l'égard de certaines dispositions de ce projet. Nos principales objections concernent l'interprétation que l'on pourrait éventuellement donner aux paragraphes 2 et 3. Nous estimons que ces paragraphes soulèvent des problèmes qui prêtent à la controverse. Si cette proposition est mise aux voix, je vous demanderai de bien vouloir soumettre ces deux paragraphes à un vote séparé.

55. M. SCHURMANN (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Etant donné que nous en sommes à l'examen des projets de résolution présentés au titre du point 88 et de la partie a du point 22 de notre ordre du jour, ma délégation voudrait indiquer nettement sa position à l'égard de ces textes.

56. Tout d'abord, nous sommes saisis du projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, dont 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie sont coauteurs. Aux termes de ce texte, l'Assemblée nommerait un comité spécial dont la tâche serait d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, de faire des suggestions et des recommandations quant aux progrès réalisés et à la mesure dans laquelle la Déclaration est mise en œuvre, et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-septième session.

^{1/} Du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

57. Au cours de ses diverses interventions, ma délégation a déjà appuyé sans réserve les mesures de mise en œuvre de la résolution 1514 (XV), pour laquelle nous avons voté l'année dernière sans aucune équivoque. Au point où en sont les débats, nous tenons simplement à déclarer que nous voterons de tout cœur, et sans aucune réserve, le projet des 38 puissances.

58. Ce que je viens de dire du projet africano-asiatique s'applique également au projet mexicain [A/L.369]. En fait, ce texte envisage d'appliquer à tous les territoires non autonomes les mesures que les Pays-Bas ont volontairement proposé d'appliquer au seul territoire non autonome qui soit encore sous administration néerlandaise, la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale.

59. Nous sommes ensuite saisis de trois projets relatifs à l'application à la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Le premier de ces documents [A/L.354] émane des Pays-Bas eux-mêmes. Ce projet de résolution vise, en substance, à appliquer à la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale le principe posé au paragraphe 2 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV), lequel, je me permets de le rappeler à l'Assemblée, dispose:

"2. Tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique et poursuivent librement leur développement économique, social et culturel."

60. Si notre projet de résolution était adopté, une commission de l'ONU se rendrait en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et ferait rapport à l'Assemblée à sa prochaine session, sur nos propositions, dont la plus importante est que nous prêts à transférer notre souveraineté à la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale aussitôt que l'ONU sera en mesure de l'aider à administrer le territoire. Les Nations Unies constitueront une autorité internationale à cet effet et la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, dès qu'elle sera capable d'exprimer sa volonté et prête à le faire, pourra, sous le contrôle de l'ONU, décider de se joindre à l'Indonésie ou adopter tout autre statut politique de son choix.

61. Les avantages que présente l'adoption de notre projet de résolution sont les suivants. Premièrement, ce texte reflète de la façon la plus précise et la plus stricte possible la lettre et l'esprit de tous les principes, règlements et directives qui figurent dans la Charte des Nations Unies ainsi que dans toutes les résolutions pertinentes adoptées par l'Assemblée générale au cours des années écoulées. Deuxièmement, il met fin, de façon pacifique, honorable et appropriée, à notre différend avec l'Indonésie et ouvre la voie à des relations meilleures et plus amicales entre nos deux pays. Et troisièmement, il sera une première preuve et une preuve convaincante de la justesse des principes énoncés dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et de la possibilité pratique d'appliquer ces principes.

62. Notre projet de résolution a pour objet de sauvegarder et de protéger les intérêts du peuple papou, qui se tourne vers l'Assemblée avec espoir et confiance: il attend avec espoir que ses aspirations légitimes à l'autodétermination soient entendues; il attend avec confiance que les membres de l'Assemblée générale observent les principes de la Charte en lui rendant justice.

63. Je n'en dirai pas plus pour recommander l'adoption de notre projet de résolution.

64. Je passe maintenant au projet de résolution déposé à l'origine par la délégation indienne [A/L.367/Rev.1]. Je dirai d'emblée que ce projet est pour nous totalement inacceptable, et nous prions instamment tous les membres de l'Assemblée de voter contre. Voici pourquoi: ce projet, qui ne fait que reprendre les anciens projets de résolution déposés en vain par l'Indonésie en 1954, en 1956 et en 1957, présente un vice évident. Ce vice éclatant et, dirai-je, presque incroyable, est qu'en traitant de l'avenir de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, ce document ne mentionne même pas la seule partie qui ait le droit de décider de cet avenir: le peuple papou lui-même.

65. Il invite l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas à régler entre eux l'avenir du peuple papou, comme si ce peuple et son territoire étaient un objet dont d'autres peuvent disposer à leur gré. Mon gouvernement ne saurait être ni ne sera partie à une transaction de ce genre.

66. En déposant son projet de résolution, le Ministre indien de la défense nationale a trouvé bon de traiter comme une mauvaise plaisanterie le droit d'autodétermination; il l'a ridiculisé en disant que, si tout pays devait se soumettre à la doctrine de l'autodétermination, chaque village et chaque municipalité devraient devenir indépendants.

67. En d'autres occasions, nous avons entendu le représentant de l'Inde, M. Menon, déployer toute son éloquence à propos de ce même principe d'autodétermination qu'il méprise tant à l'heure actuelle. Pour nous — comme pour les autres membres de l'Assemblée, je l'espère — ce sujet mérite un examen sérieux. C'est pourquoi, je préfère rappeler à l'Assemblée générale ce qu'avait répondu, le 17 juin 1950, l'éminent Premier Ministre de l'Inde, M. Nehru, quand on lui avait demandé son opinion sur la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée; pour lui, le critère décisif était le suivant: "Qu'est-ce qui est bon pour la Nouvelle-Guinée et que veut sa population?" Telles ont été les paroles de M. Nehru.

68. Il semble que M. Menon se soit écarté de la thèse de son premier ministre et aussi, semble-t-il, de l'opinion de son propre pays. Pour vous le prouver, permettez-moi de citer l'article paru le 14 novembre 1961 dans le Hindustan Times de New Delhi, un des journaux les plus influents de l'Inde. Voici ce qu'il disait:

"C'est au Gouvernement indonésien qu'il appartient de répondre, maintenant que les Hollandais ont offert de confier l'administration du territoire à l'ONU, à condition que l'ONU garantisse à la population le droit d'autodétermination.

"Un interrègne de l'ONU ne serait acceptable pour le Gouvernement indonésien que si le territoire lui était finalement transféré sans consultation populaire. Cette thèse va à l'encontre de notre conception de la démocratie. Une lourde responsabilité repose sur les membres africano-asiatiques, celle des s'inspirer de considérations démocratiques dans la décision qu'ils prendront sur la proposition hollandaise."

69. Le Hindustan Times touche au cœur même de la question. L'autodétermination et les considérations démocratiques devraient être les principes directeurs de la décision de l'Assemblée générale. Le projet indien méconnaît et viole ces principes, et ses termes sont incompatibles avec les stipulations explicites de la Charte et de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, ainsi qu'avec les objectifs du projet néerlandais. Adopter ce projet de résolution équivaldrait donc à rejeter les propositions néerlandaises. Ma délégation votera contre ce projet de résolution et espère qu'il ne sera pas adopté.

70. Enfin, nous sommes saisis d'un autre projet de résolution [A/L.368], déposé par les délégations suivantes: Cameroun, Congo (Brazzaville), Côte-d'Ivoire, Dahomey, Gabon, Haute-Volta, Madagascar, Mauritanie, Niger, République centrafricaine, Sénégal, Tchad et Togo. Ce projet est, à notre avis, un ingénieux essai de combiner les principes énoncés dans le projet néerlandais avec l'idée indonésienne des négociations, telle qu'elle figure dans le projet indien, mais de façon à échapper aux défauts du projet indien.

71. Ce texte ne nous donne pas la satisfaction que nous procurerait l'adoption de notre propre projet [A/L.354]; mais ma délégation, voulant montrer qu'elle apprécie les sérieux efforts de ses auteurs et faire preuve d'un esprit de bonne entente et de conciliation, est prête à accepter ce projet et à se conformer à la demande exprimée au paragraphe 1. Quant à notre vote sur ce projet de résolution, nous prendrons notre décision après sa présentation et compte tenu de la suite du débat.

72. Ma dernière remarque porte sur le projet de résolution déposé par la Nigéria et le Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1]. Aborder le problème en fixant des dates pour l'indépendance de tous les peuples d'Afrique — et notamment mentionner une date finale qui doit valoir pour tous les territoires, étant entendu que chaque territoire pourrait avancer cette date — nous semble à la fois juste et pratique. Nous voterons ce texte.

73. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole aux orateurs suivants, je dois annoncer à l'Assemblée que, conformément à l'annonce que j'ai faite tout à l'heure, nous clôturons la liste des orateurs inscrits pour prendre la parole avant le vote. Elle comporte actuellement 23 orateurs.

74. M. DJERMAKOYE (Niger): En venant présenter à cette tribune le projet de résolution [A/L.368] que nous soumettons à l'approbation de notre assemblée, nous tenons tout d'abord à affirmer, en dépit des interprétations diverses et des commentaires que notre projet a suscités, que notre seul souci est de voir le différend qui oppose actuellement l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas — des pays Membres de notre organisation — trouver un aboutissement heureux.

75. L'inscription de notre projet de résolution à l'ordre du jour puise sa justification dans le fait que nous nous trouvons auparavant devant deux projets de résolution: celui déposé par les représentants de l'Inde et d'autres puissances [A/L.367/Rev.1] et celui du représentant des Pays-Bas [A/L.354]; aucun n'est accepté par les deux parties. Dans ces conditions, nous avons été amenés à rechercher une solution intermédiaire qui pourrait servir de base de discussion aux parties directement intéressées à la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée.

76. Les parties intéressées à cette question négocient depuis bientôt 12 ans afin de trouver un règlement de leur différend et, à notre connaissance, jusqu'à ce jour, aucun élément nouveau ne semble avoir été introduit en vue d'un rapprochement. En effet, les Pays-Bas, pays colonisateur, revendiquent la souveraineté sur la Nouvelle-Guinée et se disposent à faire appel à l'Organisation des Nations Unies au moyen d'un projet de résolution, pour transférer cette souveraineté à notre organisation, afin d'amener ainsi la Nouvelle-Guinée à l'autodétermination. L'Indonésie, cependant, considère que la Nouvelle-Guinée est partie intégrante de son territoire et demande la reconnaissance de sa souveraineté sur elle. Voilà où réside la controverse sur laquelle il faut pouvoir se prononcer avant d'aller plus loin.

77. Dans cette controverse, ce qui nous a beaucoup surpris, c'est qu'une des parties intéressées ne demande pas l'avis des populations de la Nouvelle-Guinée. C'était par là qu'on aurait dû d'abord commencer pour que toute équivoque fût levée. C'est aux populations de la Nouvelle-Guinée seules qu'il appartient de dire, en l'état actuel des choses, qui est habilité à revendiquer la souveraineté de son sol avant qu'elles-mêmes ne se prononcent, par voie de référendum ou par toute autre voie, sur leur propre sort. Il faudrait en convenir dans cette controverse: la voix des populations de la Nouvelle-Guinée ne devrait, en aucun cas, être négligée.

78. Qu'il me soit permis d'insister sur ce point: un des principes fondamentaux proclamé dans la Charte des Nations Unies est précisément la sauvegarde et la garantie de la libre détermination des peuples. Notre projet de résolution [A/L.363] ne trouve son sens et son fondement que dans cette préoccupation. Mais avant d'aller plus loin, il faudrait que les parties intéressées en conviennent. C'est pour cette raison que nous avons jugé utile de demander à l'Indonésie et aux Pays-Bas de reprendre les négociations sur cette base et de trouver une solution afin que la paix et la sécurité internationales déjà compromises comme on le sait, par toutes sortes de conflits, puissent être sauvegardées dans cette région du monde.

79. Certes, m'objectera-t-on, les négociations durent depuis des années. A cela je répondrai simplement qu'elles ont peut-être été mal engagées et que les deux parties restant chacune dans sa tour d'ivoire ne veulent pas se mettre à l'échelle des réalités qui commandent le monde. C'est pour cela que nous avons demandé tout d'abord la reprise des négociations qui devront aboutir, si les parties sont animées de bonne volonté, à une conclusion heureuse dans un laps de temps relativement court. Ces négociations, puisqu'il faut qu'elles aient lieu entre les gouvernements des deux parties intéressées, devront se poursuivre grâce aux bons offices du Secrétaire général qui diligentera les réunions; et, connaissant les qualités de cœur et d'esprit du Secrétaire général, je suis persuadé que tout sera mis en œuvre pour que, par la voie de négociations pacifiques, une solution à ce conflit puisse être trouvée avant la date même que nous avons cru devoir proposer pour marquer la fin des négociations.

80. S'il en était autrement — ce que, bien sûr, nous ne souhaitons pas — nous aimerions qu'une commission, que nous désignerions au cours de cette session de l'Assemblée, aille sur place étudier la situation politique, économique et sociale de la Nouvelle-Guinée. Cette commission, une fois profondément pénétrée de l'objectif qui lui est assigné, ferait un rapport à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale. Ainsi, notre organisation pourra décider en toute connaissance de cause de confier l'avenir des populations de la Nouvelle-Guinée à telle ou telle organisation internationale, étant bien entendu qu'à chaque moment les populations pourront se prononcer librement sur le genre de statut national et international qui, à leur avis, sera en mesure de satisfaire leurs propres aspirations.

81. Telle est, en toute simplicité, l'idée qui nous a conduits à déposer notre projet de résolution devant l'Assemblée. Elle n'a pas la prétention d'être une innovation, mais elle est conforme aux principes que nous n'avons jamais cessé de prôner en vue de la décolonisation de l'Afrique et de tous les pays non autonomes placés sous une domination étrangère. Négociations, autodétermination, respect de la personnalité des peuples et de leurs frontières: telles sont les conditions de vie dans lesquelles l'humanité avide de paix devrait résolument s'engager.

82. Notre souhait le plus sincère est que tous ceux qui sont épris de paix et de justice apportent leur appui à notre projet de résolution, dont le seul but est de garantir la sécurité internationale, le bonheur et l'avenir de l'humanité.

83. C'est pour toutes ces raisons que je me permettrai de demander à l'Assemblée d'accorder la priorité absolue à notre projet de résolution sur tout autre projet relatif à la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale.

M. Rossides (Chypre), vice-président, prend la présidence.

84. M. JHA (Inde) [traduit de l'anglais]: Au cours d'un débat fort long et parfois épuisant, nous avons étudié l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Nous en sommes maintenant arrivés au moment où il faut examiner et mettre aux voix les résolutions dont l'Assemblée est saisie. Je voudrais donc, avec votre permission, Monsieur le Président, indiquer l'attitude de ma délégation à l'égard de ces différents textes.

85. Il y a deux projets de résolution, l'un déposé par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355], l'autre par la Nigéria et le Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1] — il y en a même un troisième [A/L.369] déposé plus tard par le Mexique et dont je parlerai tout à l'heure — qui ne concernent aucun territoire en particulier, mais visent simplement à avancer l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) aux pays coloniaux et aux territoires non autonomes en général. Ces projets de résolution découlent logiquement de la résolution 1514 (XV), mais expriment quelques idées divergentes à l'égard de ce que l'on appelle d'une façon générale la date limite de l'indépendance.

86. Selon le projet soviétique [A/L.355], l'Assemblée générale déclarerait notamment:

"Que la liquidation définitive et inconditionnelle du colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, devra être achevée à la fin de 1962 au plus tard."

87. Le projet de résolution déposé par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de Nigéria mentionne spécifiquement les territoires et peuples coloniaux ou non autonomes d'Afrique, et proclame solennellement:

"Que tous les territoires et peuples coloniaux, dépendants ou non autonomes d'Afrique doivent accéder à l'indépendance d'ici le 1er décembre 1970 au plus tard."

88. Le fait même que nous soyons en présence de deux dates limites, assez éloignées l'une de l'autre, et que ces deux propositions viennent de délégations dont l'empressement à mettre fin au colonialisme est certain et bien connu montre combien il est difficile de fixer une date limite. Le chef de notre délégation, M. Krishna Menon, a exprimé le 20 novembre l'avis du Gouvernement indien sur la fixation de pareilles dates:

"Notre attitude est — a-t-il dit — que l'indépendance doit être immédiate. Nous ne voulons pas suivre le calendrier." [1058ème séance, par. 160.]

89. Il est difficile de choisir une date limite (1962, 1970 ou une date intermédiaire), car tout délai risque d'être trop long dans certains cas et trop court peut-être dans d'autres, quand il s'agit de faire le nécessaire pour la remise des pouvoirs: consultation du peuple, et ainsi de suite. En outre, l'Assemblée, en fixant une date limite, prendrait, il me semble, une certaine attitude protectrice et paternaliste, et méconnaîtrait dans une certaine mesure les vœux des peuples intéressés. Car c'est à la population du territoire qu'il appartient, après tout, de déterminer comment et quand elle prendra la suite de son suzerain colonial. A supposer que l'on prenne pour date limite 1962 — et les dates limites tendent à devenir des dates fixes —, elle risque d'être trop lointaine pour les pays déjà mûrs pour l'indépendance qu'ils devraient avoir depuis longtemps déjà, avec la liberté que les puissances coloniales leur ont opiniâtement refusée pendant de longues années.

90. Selon nous, ce que l'Assemblée générale pourrait faire de mieux serait d'user de tout son crédit et de toute son influence pour que des mesures soient prises immédiatement en vue du transfert de tous les pouvoirs aux peuples intéressés, conformément à leur désir librement exprimé, comme le prévoit d'ailleurs la résolution 1514 (XV).

91. Il est significatif, à cet égard, que la Conférence qui s'est tenue récemment à Belgrade^{2/} ait jugé plus sage de ne pas fixer de date limite, mais de réclamer une indépendance qui suivrait le cours des événements.

92. Nous estimons donc que l'Assemblée ne devrait pas, en fixant une date limite, se lier les mains ou entraver le cours des événements dans les pays coloniaux et les territoires non autonomes. Le mieux serait que nous persistions à réclamer aux puissances coloniales de prendre des mesures immédiates en vue de l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV), et ma délégation, tout en appréciant sans réserve la sincérité qui anime les deux projets de résolution et tout en approuvant pratiquement tous les termes de ces projets, ne pourra pas donner son appui à l'une ou l'autre des dates limites qu'ils prévoient.

93. Il y a deux jours, la délégation mexicaine a déposé un projet de résolution [A/L.369]. Nous avons, comme bien d'autres membres de l'Assemblée, un très grand respect pour la délégation mexicaine, en raison de l'attitude libérale qu'elle a toujours adoptée et de l'intérêt qu'elle a pris à tout ce qui s'est fait en faveur de la liberté des peuples coloniaux ou non autonomes. Nous estimons cependant que le dispositif de ce projet de résolution cherche à établir des principes et des modalités qui devraient, à vrai dire, faire l'objet d'une étude poussée de la part du comité spécial dont le projet du Mexique et celui des pays africano-asiatiques [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] prévoient la constitution.

^{2/} Conférence des chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement des pays non alignés, tenue à Belgrade du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

94. Dans le projet de résolution des pays africano-asiatiques, la question est prudemment et volontairement évoquée, en termes généraux, au paragraphe 4:

"Prie le Comité spécial d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, de formuler des suggestions et des recommandations quant aux progrès réalisés et à la mesure dans laquelle la Déclaration est mise en œuvre, et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-septième session."

95. Après plusieurs semaines d'examen au sein du groupe de pays qui — dois-je le rappeler — représente une grande partie de cette assemblée, nous pensons que le mieux serait de laisser l'initiative générale au comité spécial envisagé, sans le lier par aucun mandat défini, ni lui indiquer exactement sa tâche et quel genre de recommandations il lui faudra adresser à l'Assemblée générale en exécution de son mandat.

96. En outre, d'autres difficultés se présentent à propos des paragraphes du dispositif du projet mexicain de résolution. Je n'en signalerai qu'une ou deux. A l'alinéa a du paragraphe 1 du dispositif, on lit, par exemple, qu'une des attributions du comité spécial serait la suivante:

"Examiner tous les cas de territoires non autonomes, qu'il s'agisse de territoires coloniaux ou de territoires placés sous tutelle internationale et administrés par une puissance, afin de signaler quels sont parmi eux ceux qui sont déjà en mesure d'accéder immédiatement à l'indépendance complète."

Ma délégation estime que c'est là demander un peu trop à un comité. Un comité ne devrait pas avoir pour tâche de déterminer, en ce qui concerne les différents territoires, si tel ou tel d'entre eux est mûr pour l'indépendance, ou à quelle date il le sera. C'est là, estimons-nous, une attitude paternaliste. Nous croyons qu'il appartient à la population des territoires, à ses dirigeants politiques, de déterminer avec les puissances coloniales, par la discussion, la négociation ou même parfois par le recours aux armes — tel a été le cas dans certains territoires coloniaux — la date et les modalités de la remise des pouvoirs.

97. L'Assemblée risquerait de s'attirer de grandes difficultés de la part des dirigeants et des partis politiques des territoires non autonomes si elle devait indiquer des dates ou dire à quel moment, d'après elle, tel ou tel territoire serait mûr ou non pour l'indépendance.

98. Je ne vais pas poursuivre l'examen des diverses clauses qui figurent dans le premier, le deuxième et le troisième paragraphe du projet mexicain. Pris isolément, chacun de ces paragraphes pourrait n'être pas tellement critiquable, ou du moins il pourrait, dans certains cas particuliers, fournir la bonne solution. Mais nous ne pensons pas que ce soit là le genre de directives que l'on devrait donner, au point du moins où nous en sommes, au comité spécial que nous chargerions d'examiner toute la question de l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV). Avec beaucoup de regret et aussi avec tout le respect que nous avons pour la délégation mexicaine, nous ne pourrions pas appuyer son projet de résolution. Nous espérons que le projet des pays africano-asiatiques, dont le texte, soigneusement rédigé après avoir été mûrement pesé, a réuni un grand nombre de coauteurs, recevra l'approbation de l'Assemblée.

99. J'en viens maintenant à la question de l'Irian occidental. Qu'il me soit permis de dire, en premier lieu, qu'étant donné l'importance de cette question, son historique et le long différend qu'elle a suscité entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas, étant donné aussi que l'Assemblée générale l'a examinée dans le passé comme un point séparé, nous aurions préféré que cette affaire ne nous arrive pas incidemment, en quelque sorte, et à l'occasion de la question générale de l'application de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée. La question n'est pas si simple. Selon nous, l'Assemblée générale doit faire preuve de prudence et de circonspection à son égard, ne serait-ce que parce qu'il s'agit d'un différend considérable entre deux Etats Membres, différend qui a soulevé des passions aussi bien en Indonésie qu'aux Pays-Bas, et peut-être dans d'autres pays.

100. Puisque le représentant des Pays-Bas s'est montré assez dur à l'égard de notre projet de résolution et a peut-être douté de nos motifs, il va me falloir m'étendre sur le projet néerlandais un peu plus peut-être que je ne l'aurais souhaité et indiquer très exactement notre attitude à l'Assemblée. L'Irian occidental a fait, pendant plus de 350 ans, partie intégrante des Indes orientales néerlandaises, entité clairement reconnue et reconnaissable. Après la seconde guerre mondiale, les Indonésiens ont mené une lutte acharnée contre la puissance coloniale et, les bons offices de l'ONU ayant permis de mettre fin aux hostilités et d'arriver à un règlement, l'Indonésie a obtenu son indépendance. L'instrument de la remise des pouvoirs est la Charte de transfert de la souveraineté^{3/} qui figure dans l'Accord de 1949 conclu à la Conférence de la table ronde.

101. Le tout premier article de la partie de l'Accord qui s'intitule "Charte de transfert de la souveraineté" dispose:

"Le Royaume des Pays-Bas transfère à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie, de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable, l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie et par là même reconnaît ladite République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie comme un Etat indépendant et souverain."

102. Le paragraphe 2 de l'article premier est lui aussi important à cet égard:

"La République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie accepte ladite souveraineté dans le cadre des dispositions de sa Constitution dont le texte a été porté, sous forme de projet, à la connaissance du Royaume des Pays-Bas."

103. L'alinéa f de l'article 2 de la Charte de transfert de souveraineté prévoit ce qui suit au sujet de la résidence de Nouvelle-Guinée:

"Il est décidé que le statu quo sera maintenu en ce qui concerne la résidence de Nouvelle-Guinée, ^{3/} Voir Nations Unies, Recueil des Traités, vol. 69, 1950, No 894, p. 207.

étant entendu que, dans un délai d'un an à compter de la date du transfert de la souveraineté à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie, la question du statut politique de la Nouvelle-Guinée sera réglée par voie de négociations entre la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie et le Royaume des Pays-Bas."

104. Plus tard, le 2 novembre 1949, après un échange de lettres, il a été reconnu que la clause "le statu quo sera maintenu en ce qui concerne la résidence de Nouvelle-Guinée" signifiait "sous le Gouvernement du Royaume des Pays-Bas".

105. Qu'allons-nous faire de ces documents de base et de ces faits? Nous ne pouvons pas les ignorer tout simplement. Selon le paragraphe 1 de l'article premier de la Charte de transfert de la souveraineté "le Royaume des Pays-Bas transfère à la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie, de façon inconditionnelle et irrévocable, l'entière souveraineté sur l'Indonésie", c'est-à-dire les Indes néerlandaises et "la République des Etats-Unis d'Indonésie accepte ladite souveraineté dans le cadre des dispositions de sa constitution dont le texte a été porté, sous forme de projet, à la connaissance du Royaume des Pays-Bas". Cette constitution s'étendait à l'ensemble des territoires des Indes orientales néerlandaises. Et dans un délai d'un an après la date du transfert de la souveraineté complète à la République — transfert, je le répète, inconditionnel et irrévocable —, la question du statut politique de la Nouvelle-Guinée devait être réglée par voie de négociations bilatérales..

106. Nous n'avons pas ici à arbitrer les revendications rivales de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas quant à la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental. Nous n'avons pas compétence pour cela et, d'ailleurs, l'Assemblée générale non plus. Nous pensons que chacun de nous est en droit d'avoir sa propre opinion et de former son propre jugement. Ma délégation estime que ce qui a été transféré à l'Indonésie, c'est la souveraineté complète, sans réserve ni condition, sur l'ensemble du territoire des Indes orientales néerlandaises. Par conséquent, la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental, puisque ce territoire faisait partie intégrante des Indes orientales néerlandaises, est passée à l'Indonésie. Ce que l'Indonésie n'a pas reçu, c'est l'administration de l'Irian occidental, qui est demeurée entre les mains des Pays-Bas, et c'est la question du statut politique mais non pas celle de la souveraineté de la Nouvelle-Guinée qui devait faire l'objet de négociations et de discussions ultérieures. Il y a quelques années, ces négociations ont été entamées à plusieurs reprises, mais sans succès. Il a cependant été réaffirmé plus d'une fois qu'il ne devrait être apporté aucun changement à l'actuel statut politique de l'Irian occidental sans l'accord exprès des parties en cause.

107. Mais voilà que les Pays-Bas ne sont plus d'accord sur ce point; ils estiment que la Charte de 1949 maintenait la souveraineté néerlandaise sur l'Irian occidental en attendant un accord ultérieur. Il est des membres de l'Assemblée qui partagent sans doute l'avis des Pays-Bas. Nombreux sont, d'un autre côté, ceux qui reconnaissent, comme nous, la souveraineté indonésienne sur l'Irian occidental. En mettant les choses au mieux ou au pire, il est impossible de nier objectivement l'existence d'un différend de longue date et encore irrésolu entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. C'est ce qui rend très complexe cette affaire et exige que l'Assemblée générale l'examine avec prudence et sagesse si elle ne veut pas contribuer à créer de sérieuses difficultés dans cette région du monde.

108. Du point de vue de l'Assemblée générale, la question de la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental n'aurait pas de conséquences importantes en elle-même si elle ne faisait pas l'objet des propositions faites ici par la délégation néerlandaise et du projet de résolution des 13 puissances [A/L.368], lequel est, aux yeux de ma délégation, une variante adoucie des propositions néerlandaises.

109. Examinons tout d'abord les propositions néerlandaises. Qu'il me soit permis de dire, en premier lieu, que nous devons les étudier avec soin et que, dans la mesure où elles expriment le désir que ce pays a d'abandonner l'administration de la Nouvelle-Guinée et de mettre fin à son empire, nous les accueillons favorablement et y sommes sensibles. Mais il y a, dans le texte néerlandais, d'autres éléments qu'il faut examiner d'une manière particulièrement méticuleuse. Tout d'abord, ce projet de résolution [A/L.354] part de l'hypothèse — les termes du cinquième alinéa de son préambule ne laissent aucun doute à cet égard — que les Pays-Bas ont la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental. Il n'en est pas ainsi, d'après nous; en tout cas, la question de la souveraineté fait l'objet d'un grave différend. Ensuite, le projet néerlandais demande, en principe, que les Nations Unies approuvent une administration de l'ONU qui s'effectuerait par le moyen d'une autorité des Nations Unies et un plébiscite qui aurait lieu sous les auspices des Nations Unies, et propose la création d'une commission qui serait chargée de déterminer les modalités et détails d'application de ces principes.

110. Tout cela se ferait sans l'accord ni le consentement de l'Indonésie, dont le projet semble complètement ignorer les revendications. A notre avis, ce n'est pas la bonne façon de régler ce long différend, qui s'est depuis 10 ans montré rebelle à toute solution, a empoisonné les relations entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas et déchaîné en Indonésie et même aux Pays-Bas de profondes passions politiques. Même quand la solution paraît être sage, il faut y arriver de la façon qui est la bonne. Dans une affaire de ce genre, la manière de trouver la solution est aussi importante que la solution elle-même. Nous craignons que, si l'Assemblée générale avait à prendre hâtivement en la matière une décision lourde de conséquences, sans s'efforcer de chercher une solution concertée, elle risquerait de troubler les esprits en Asie du Sud-Est et d'augmenter la tension et les conflits dans cette partie du monde au lieu de les réduire.

111. Nous ne croyons pas que placer l'Irian occidental sous l'administration de l'ONU, même à titre temporaire, serait conforme à la Charte, sauf s'il y a un accord de toutes les parties en cause. La Charte des Nations Unies ne prévoit ni ne permet l'administration des territoires sous l'autorité de l'ONU, sauf dans le cadre du système de tutelle. Il y a de bonnes raisons à cela: l'Organisation s'est créée pour être un centre de règlement pacifique des différends et non pas pour devenir un Etat ou un super-Etat. Avec juste raison, les auteurs de la Charte ne voulaient pas que l'ONU reprenne elle-même la tutelle d'un territoire contre le désir des parties en cause, et risque, de ce fait, de s'attirer l'inimitié d'un Etat ou de l'opinion nationaliste de sa population. Je me permets d'attirer votre attention sur ces vérités évidentes pour vous dire qu'il ne saurait vraiment être question que l'ONU prenne la responsabilité d'administrer, même à titre d'intérim, l'Irian occidental, sans l'accord de l'Indonésie, laquelle, à notre avis, a la souveraineté sur le territoire en question. Une telle initiative ne pourrait d'ailleurs être prise sans une décision unanime ou presque unanime de l'Assemblée et sans le consentement des Pays-Bas qui administrent effectivement le territoire. Agir d'une autre manière reviendrait à contrevenir aux dispositions de la Charte et pourrait entraîner l'ONU dans un conflit sérieux avec certains de ses membres. Les mêmes observations s'appliquent au projet de résolution des 13 puissances. Ce projet n'est pas aussi détaillé que le projet néerlandais, mais le fond en est le même. Il demande à l'Assemblée d'accepter qu'en principe l'ONU prenne en charge l'administration de l'Irian occidental et admette tacitement la souveraineté néerlandaise sur ce territoire. A cet égard, j'aimerais appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée sur le sixième alinéa du préambule de ce projet.

112. Dans ces deux projets de résolution, il est beaucoup question du principe de l'autodétermination. Ce principe est, nous le savons, mentionné dans la Charte, et le droit des peuples non autonomes à disposer d'eux-mêmes est de nouveau mentionné dans la résolution 1514 (XV) que l'Assemblée a adoptée à la quasi-unanimité. Le principe de l'autodétermination tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Charte ne peut s'appliquer qu'en fonction des principes de base de la Charte, notamment du principe de l'égalité souveraine des Etats et de celui du respect de la souveraineté des Etats.

113. Le deuxième alinéa de l'Article premier de la Charte fait état lui-même du principe de l'égalité de droits des peuples et de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes, un moyen de développer les relations amicales entre les nations. Ce que dit en fait la Charte, c'est qu'un des buts de l'ONU est de développer entre les nations des relations amicales fondées sur le respect du principe de l'égalité de droits des peuples et de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes. Il est évident, d'après le libellé de l'article, que l'autodétermination des peuples est un moyen d'établir des relations amicales entre les nations. Nous appuyons le principe de l'autodétermination, mais nous ne saurions admettre qu'on l'applique au territoire et au peuple d'Etats souverains et indépendants ou que l'on s'en serve pour régler des différends sans avoir l'accord des Etats en cause et sans avoir réalisé des conditions convenues.

114. Qu'une petite digression me soit permise. A cette tribune, il y a quelques instants, le représentant des Pays-Bas a vivement critiqué notre projet de résolution [A/L.367/Rev.1], parce que ce texte ne reconnaît pas le principe de l'autodétermination. En fait, il est même allé jusqu'à dire que notre projet ignorait et violait le principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes. Je voudrais lui faire observer que ces critiques ne sont pas fondées. Que dit notre projet de résolution? J'aimerais appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée sur ce texte. On n'y trouve pas un seul mot qui puisse donner l'impression que nous sommes opposés au principe de l'autodétermination; au contraire, si on lit le paragraphe 1, on constatera qu'il:

"Invite instamment les Gouvernements de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas à entreprendre de nouvelles négociations, sous l'égide du Président de l'Assemblée générale, en vue de résoudre cette question conformément aux buts et principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

Le principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes ne figure-t-il pas parmi ceux des Nations Unies à l'Article premier de la Charte? Comment peut-on dire alors, puisque nous citons la Charte, que nous commettons la faute impardonnable de passer sous silence ou de violer le principe de l'autodétermination? Je ne peux vraiment pas comprendre cet argument.

115. Le représentant des Pays-Bas a aussi affirmé que notre projet de résolution traite la population comme inexistante ou inerte. On ne trouve rien, dans le projet indien — auquel d'ailleurs un certain nombre d'autres pays se sont associés — qui puisse s'interpréter comme signifiant que la population de l'Irian occidental est inerte. Ce projet de résolution est fort simple: il demande que, sous l'égide du président de l'Assemblée, les parties intéressées engagent des négociations en vue de résoudre cette question conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies.

116. Ce projet de résolution est simple, mais il est sage: il évite les écueils, il ne cherche pas à imposer une solution particulière ou une résolution déterminée par-dessus la tête de l'une ou l'autre des parties en cause. Rien dans ce projet ne peut se comprendre comme préjugant les questions qui pourront se poser au cours des négociations: question de l'autodétermination, question de la souveraineté, ou une autre. Nous avons, dans ce projet de résolution, évité délibérément de poser aucune condition préalable et de rien préjuger, pour permettre aux négociations de se dérouler dans les conditions les plus propices.

117. Le représentant des Pays-Bas a mentionné la déclaration faite il y a quelques jours, du haut de cette même tribune, par M. Krishna Menon (1058ème séance). M. Menon voulait simplement dire que le principe de l'autodétermination ne peut pas s'appliquer à la population d'un territoire souverain. La Charte mentionne le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, mais on ne peut pas morceler la population d'un pays, sinon où irions-nous? Il faudrait alors l'autodétermination dans chaque municipalité, l'autodétermination dans chaque groupe ethnique, linguistique, religieux et ainsi de suite? Assurément, personne ici, aucun représentant d'un Etat souverain ne pourrait accepter une proposition qui permettrait de fractionner en plusieurs groupes la population de cet Etat; le monde a déjà assez de difficultés de ce genre comme cela. Allons-nous appliquer jusqu'à l'absurde le principe de l'autodétermination, si bon qu'il soit, et détruire l'unité et la souveraineté des Etats? Tel est le sens de la déclaration de M. Menon. Nous ne sommes pas opposés au principe de l'autodétermination quand, avec l'accord des parties en cause, il est appliqué dans des conditions et des circonstances propices, mais l'appliquer à tort et à travers, dans tout les différends, jusqu'à amener le morcellement du peuple d'un Etat souverain, est, selon moi, quelque chose que les auteurs de la Charte n'ont certainement jamais eu en vue. Si nous en décidions ainsi, nous créerions un précédent et nous risquerions fort de regretter tous le jour où nous aurions ainsi décidé.

118. Je me suis écarté quelques instants de mon texte, parce que je ne voulais pas que notre proposition donne lieu à aucun malentendu. Les délégations sont libres d'accepter cette proposition ou de la rejeter. Elles sont maîtresses de leur choix. Mais prétendre que notre projet s'inspire de mauvais motifs, qu'il méconnaît ou viole les dispositions de la Charte ou certains de ses principes, c'est, je le soutiens, une critique qui n'est nullement justifiée.

119. Je passe maintenant au projet de résolution des 13 puissances, lequel, tout en réclamant des négociations, fixe comme date limite le 1er mars 1962 et invite en outre l'Assemblée à désigner une commission qui ferait une enquête au cas où les parties ne seraient pas parvenues à aucun accord à cette date. Ce projet, en dépit de tout le respect que je dois à ses auteurs, lesquels, je l'ai déjà dit, ont certainement examiné le problème avec beaucoup de sincérité, ne nous semble pas aborder la question d'une manière réaliste. Comment peut-on espérer qu'un différend qui dure depuis 10 ans sera réglé en trois mois? Il n'est guère juste d'exercer une telle pression sur les parties en cause et de faire peser sur leurs délibérations la menace d'une commission d'enquête ou de toute autre mesure. Dans la mesure où les 13 auteurs de ce projet reconnaissent le principe des négociations directes, c'est un pas dans la bonne direction, c'est un progrès. Si de telles négociations ont lieu, il est évident que les parties en cause auront les meilleures chances de réussir si aucun délai, aucune condition préalable ou postérieure ne leur sont imposés et si elles peuvent aborder l'une et l'autre l'affaire avec le maximum de souplesse.

120. Ma délégation estime que la seule décision que les Nations Unies puissent prendre est de demander aux parties d'entamer des négociations et d'aider à ces négociations. Quand deux Etats Membres sont immobilisés dans un différend aussi durable que celui-ci, rien ne peut remplacer la négociation. Tout diktat des Nations Unies serait inutile, imprudent et contraire à l'esprit de la Charte. Il n'est pas de cas, à ma connaissance, où les Nations Unies aient cherché à régler un différend entre deux Etats Membres par-dessus la tête de l'un d'eux. A cet égard, puis-je rappeler ce qui s'est passé, récemment, à la Commission politique spéciale au sujet du différend survenu entre l'Italie et l'Autriche à propos du traitement accordé à la population germanophone de Bolzano? L'an dernier, l'Assemblée avait décidé, et cette année la Commission a suivi cet exemple, de n'imposer aucune solution particulière, ni même de préciser aucune méthode de négociation ou de conciliation, sans l'accord des parties intéressées.

121. Pour les raisons que je viens d'indiquer, ma délégation, à son grand regret, devra s'opposer au projet des Pays-Bas ainsi qu'à celui des 13 puissances, si ces textes sont mis aux voix.

122. De notre côté, nous avons soumis à l'Assemblée un projet de résolution [A/L.367/Rev.1] qui porte aussi les signatures de la Bolivie, du Congo (Léopoldville), de la Guinée, du Libéria, du Mali, du Népal, de la République arabe unie et de la Syrie. Dans ce projet, nous ne préjugeons aucun problème, pas plus celui de l'autodétermination que celui du rôle éventuel de l'ONU dans l'Irian occidental. Nous ne pouvions mieux faire, pour assurer aux négociations un maximum de succès, que de les placer sous les auspices du Président de l'Assemblée générale, en qui les deux parties au différend — et bien entendu les autres Etats Membres — ont toute confiance.

123. Les parties intéressées auront, sans aucun doute, pris bonne note des idées exprimées ici par les membres de l'Assemblée. Dans le préambule de notre projet de résolution, nous avons mentionné les très importantes déclarations du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas et du Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Indonésie. Ces déclarations sont donc enregistrées ici, et il est bien évident qu'il en sera tenu compte dans les négociations. Nous les avons mentionnées toutes deux dans le préambule, sans, bien entendu, indiquer laquelle préférer. Ce n'est pas à nous à nous prononcer à ce sujet.

124. Comme je l'ai dit, les idées exprimées par les membres de l'Assemblée, les déclarations faites par le Ministre des affaires étrangères des Pays-Bas et celui de l'Indonésie et par d'autres auront leur influence sur les négociations. Ce n'est que de cette façon que la question de l'Irian occidental aura la meilleure chance d'être résolue, avec ou sans la participation de l'ONU, mais il faut tenir compte des divers aspects de la question, ainsi que des idées exprimées au cours du présent débat.

125. Nous espérons que notre projet de résolution recevra un très large appui et que les auteurs des autres projets ne réclameront pas la mise aux voix. Il est préférable, tout au moins pour le moment, de garder ces autres projets en attente, comme des idées dignes de considérations. C'est pour l'Assemblée générale la meilleure façon de traiter ce difficile et long différend entre deux Etats Membres, différend qui est à l'origine de bien des difficultés et de troubles dans cette région du monde.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

126. M. MIYAZAKI (Japon) [traduit de l'anglais]: Avec votre permission, Monsieur le Président, je voudrais évoquer les événements tragiques qui se sont produits récemment au Congo et ont entraîné la mort de 13 militaires italiens qui exécutaient une mission pour le compte de notre organisation. Ma délégation tient à exprimer ses sincères condoléances au peuple italien et à rendre hommage à ses hommes qui ont trouvé au Congo une mort tragique.

127. Il y a deux semaines, ma délégation a eu l'occasion de donner son avis à l'Assemblée [1054^{ème} séance] sur l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)].

128. Nous voudrions, maintenant, exprimer notre opinion sur les divers projets déposés à ce sujet. Trois de ces projets portent sur la Déclaration en général, un intéresse l'Afrique et trois autres un territoire en particulier.

129. Permettez-moi, tout d'abord, de parler des trois projets de résolution qui intéressent la Déclaration dans son ensemble. Le projet déposé par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] nous semble difficile à accepter, pour deux raisons. Tout d'abord ce texte propose, au paragraphe 2, une date limite. Ma délégation a déjà dit sans équivoque, lors d'une intervention antérieure devant l'Assemblée, ce qu'elle pense de cette date limite applicable à tous les territoires, quelles que soient les circonstances et conditions particulières. Nous estimons que fixer automatiquement une date limite applicable à tous les territoires sous tutelle et non autonomes n'est pas pratique, car on aura peut-être à constater qu'elle était prématurée ou, au contraire, trop tardive pour l'application de la Déclaration de l'indépendance à tel ou tel des territoires intéressés. La date limite prévue dans le projet soviétique, à savoir la fin de 1962, ne peut que contenir, je le crains, le germe d'accusations acrimonieuses.

130. L'autre raison pour laquelle nous estimons qu'il est difficile d'accepter ce projet réside dans l'alinéa c du paragraphe 3:

"Retirer toutes les troupes des puissances administrantes, licencier toutes les formations paramilitaires non autochtones et liquider intégralement les bases militaires étrangères dans les territoires sous tutelle et les autres territoires non autonomes."

131. Le retrait de toutes les troupes étrangères et la liquidation des bases militaires sont avant tout des mesures de désarmement. Or, le problème du désarmement met en jeu nombre de questions délicates, et ma délégation, après avoir mûrement réfléchi, juge préférable de ne pas introduire les affaires de désarmement dans la question de la décolonisation. Il ne faut pas, sous le couvert de questions coloniales, se mêler de la question du désarmement et y jeter la confusion.

132. C'est pourquoi ma délégation devra voter contre le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique et contre l'amendement proposé par ce pays dans le document A/L.370.

133. Contrairement au projet soviétique, celui du groupe africano-asiatique [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] est entièrement et exclusivement conforme à l'esprit et au texte de la Déclaration. Ce projet se distingue de la proposition soviétique en ce sens qu'il ne s'embarasse ni d'une date limite universelle ni d'un élément hétérogène comme la question du désarmement.

134. Les auteurs de ce projet examinent dans le préambule la situation récente de la décolonisation dans le monde et font des commentaires sur le point où en est l'application de la Déclaration. Le bilan qu'ils dressent de la décolonisation dans le monde nous paraît peut-être plus alarmant, dans l'ensemble, que la réalité, puisqu'ils ne mentionnent pas, par exemple, la récente indépendance du Sierra Leone et celle qu'auront bientôt le Tanganyika, l'Ouganda et le Samoa-Occidental. Tous ces événements dont nous nous félicitons, les auteurs se contentent d'y faire allusion en quelques mots en disant, au quatrième alinéa: "à quelques exceptions près".

135. Dans un projet de résolution de ce genre, il est d'ailleurs normal que les auteurs, souhaitant vivement une prompte et prochaine amélioration de la situation, aient tendance à considérer la question d'un œil critique.

136. Lundi dernier [1058ème séance], le représentant de l'Inde, un des auteurs du projet, en a expliqué, paragraphe par paragraphe, le dispositif. Depuis, beaucoup d'autres délégués ont pris la parole en faveur de ce projet. A vouloir parler en détail de son dispositif, je risquerais des redites. Je serai bref et concentrerai uniquement mon attention sur la proposition de créer un comité spécial.

137. Cette question mérite, en effet, qu'on s'y arrête, car c'est, en somme, l'essentiel du projet de résolution. Ce comité spécial aurait pour objectif et pour mandat d'étudier où en est l'application de la Déclaration, de faire des propositions et recommandations à son sujet et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale, à sa dix-septième session. Un comité similaire est également envisagé dans le projet soviétique. Mais les deux projets de résolution diffèrent considérablement sur un point: la composition du comité. Le projet soviétique reprend l'idée, généralement peu populaire, de la "troïka". Dans le projet africano-asiatique, la composition du comité spécial est laissée à la discrétion de l'Assemblée générale.

138. Les dispositions de ce projet sont assez souples, en ce qui concerne non seulement la composition du comité, mais aussi ses fonctions et ses méthodes de travail. Ma délégation est d'avis que la souplesse de ce texte servira davantage l'objectif qu'il cherche à atteindre.

139. Avant de conclure, j'aimerais attirer votre attention sur un point très important qui concerne la mise aux voix de ces deux textes. Il est de mon devoir de souligner ce qui rend incompatibles le projet de résolution de l'URSS et celui du groupe africano-asiatique: c'est la question du comité spécial. Les deux projets envisagent la création d'un comité spécial. Il ne nous est pas possible de les adopter l'un et l'autre, sous peine d'avoir deux comités spéciaux: l'un à "troïka", l'autre composé de 17 membres, et tous deux aux mêmes fins. Cela ne peut se faire. Aussi proposerai-je la solution suivante: quiconque voudra voter pour le projet soviétique devra se prononcer contre le projet africano-asiatique, et vice versa. Un vote affirmatif sur l'un et l'autre des projets de résolution serait pour le moins illogique.

140. Dans la forme et dans le fond, le projet mexicain [A/L.369] ne diffère guère, me semble-t-il, du projet africano-asiatique, à cela près que dans certains paragraphes il est trop ambitieux et exige beaucoup de l'ONU. Je souhaite donc sincèrement que ce texte ne remplace pas celui des pays africano-asiatiques et n'empêche pas de l'adopter.

141. En tant que coauteur, mon pays demande une écrasante majorité pour le projet de résolution des 38 puissances africano-asiatiques, parmi lesquelles figurent de nombreux pays qui étaient naguère des colonies.

142. Quant au projet de résolution de la Nigéria et du Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1], ma délégation le trouve logique, exception faite de la date limite du 1er décembre 1970, mentionnée au paragraphe 1; j'admets que cette date limite est raisonnable, mais je me demande pourquoi il en est fait mention. Bien que ma délégation soit quelque peu sceptique quant à la nécessité de cette date, elle n'hésitera pas à voter pour ce texte, dont l'ensemble lui paraît acceptable.

143. J'en viens maintenant aux trois projets relatifs au territoire qui fait l'objet d'un différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Ma délégation a étudié avec le plus grand soin le projet de résolution [A/L.354] déposé par la délégation néerlandaise. Les dispositions de ce projet suivent strictement les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies, ce qui lui confère un grand mérite.

144. Ma délégation craint pourtant que ce projet de résolution ne résolve pas le différend qui oppose depuis longtemps les Pays-Bas à l'Indonésie, deux pays qu'une étroite amitié lie au Japon. Les dispositions de ce texte pourraient même aggraver entre les deux parties une tension déjà grande.

145. Ma délégation estime, avant tout, qu'il faut régler cette question pacifiquement, par un accord qui donnera satisfaction aux deux parties, je dis bien "aux deux parties", et qu'il ne faut pas négliger le bien-être futur de la population. Toute résolution qui ne tiendrait pas compte de ces deux éléments essentiels ne satisfait pas entièrement ma délégation. Comme le projet dont je parle ne semble pas résoudre le différend, il sera difficile à ma délégation de l'appuyer.

146. Ma délégation s'abstiendra de voter sur le projet néerlandais, compte tenu de ses avantages et de ses inconvénients.

147. A la différence du texte néerlandais, le projet de résolution de l'Inde [A/L.367/Rev.1] tient compte du différend et invite instamment les parties à négocier, sous l'égide du Président de l'Assemblée générale. Ma délégation pense qu'il ne faut pas mettre aux négociations de conditions préalables — ni le transfert de la souveraineté sur le territoire contesté, ni l'autodétermination de sa population. Ces deux questions doivent être l'objet même des négociations et non leurs conditions préalables. Comme ce point d'une extrême importance n'est pas nettement précisé dans le projet et que l'une des parties s'oppose à ce texte, ma délégation pense que, dans ces circonstances, il ne sera guère utile. Aussi s'abstiendra-t-elle, lors du vote sur ce projet.

148. Ma délégation rend hommage aux délégations africaines qui ont fait le dur effort d'élaborer le projet de résolution A/L.368. Elles étaient, sans aucun doute, animées du désir louable et sincère de trouver à cette question difficile une solution acceptable. Ce projet de résolution semble être un compromis entre les deux résolutions dont je viens de parler. Ma délégation, pour désireuse qu'elle soit de l'appuyer, s'abstiendra néanmoins lors du vote sur ce projet de résolution, pour les mêmes raisons que je viens d'exposer.

149. M. SUBANDRIO (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: J'ai redemandé la parole pour préciser la position de l'Indonésie à l'égard des projets de résolution dont nous sommes saisis. Parmi les textes déposés en application de la résolution 1514 (XV), trois sont d'une portée générale. Nous avons, en premier lieu, le projet de résolution A/L.355, déposé par la délégation soviétique; en deuxième lieu, le projet de résolution A/L.366, déposé par 38 puissances africano-asiatiques, dont l'Indonésie; en troisième lieu, le projet de résolution A/L.369, déposé par le Mexique. Ce dernier document ne nous a été remis qu'avant-hier.

150. Je dirai tout d'abord que l'on relève, dans ces trois textes, une heureuse identité d'esprit et d'intention et, ce qui est encore plus important, un accord complet sur la nécessité de créer un comité qui serait chargé d'examiner la situation et de faire, à ce sujet, des propositions et des recommandations relatives à la mise en œuvre de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Cependant, après mûre réflexion, nous estimons que c'est le projet africano-asiatique qui répond le mieux aux exigences de la situation présente.

151. Nous pensons tout d'abord que ce texte — résultat de nombreuses consultations et discussions — traduit un esprit de conciliation et représente par conséquent l'accord le plus général auquel on puisse arriver au sein de notre Assemblée. Même si ma délégation estime souhaitable et possible de mettre fin au colonialisme dans deux ans, soit avant le 1er janvier 1964, les auteurs de ce projet ont considéré qu'il y existe à ce sujet des différences d'opinions, non seulement dans le groupe africano-asiatique, mais dans l'ensemble de l'Assemblée. Les auteurs de ce projet ont donc décidé de ne pas fixer de date limite, mais d'insister tout particulièrement, dans un esprit de conciliation, sur l'élément d'urgence de la question.

152. Je ferai observer ensuite que le comité spécial de 17 membres que prévoit le projet africano-asiatique aurait la plus grande latitude possible pour remplir son mandat. En effet, d'après ce texte, le comité serait chargé d'accomplir sa tâche "en se servant de tous les moyens dont il pourra disposer dans le cadre des procédures et des modalités qu'il adoptera pour bien s'acquitter de ses fonctions".

153. Ce comité pourrait se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège des Nations Unies chaque fois qu'il le jugerait souhaitable ou nécessaire, et devrait faire connaître ses propositions et recommandations à l'Assemblée générale, lors de sa dix-septième session.

154. La liberté d'action que ce texte accorde implicitement au comité est, selon nous, d'une extrême importance au stade actuel, car cet organisme aurait à examiner quantité de questions coloniales différentes qui se posent encore dans le monde, avec tous les problèmes divers qu'elles impliquent. Nous sommes persuadés que, pour faire convenablement son travail indubitablement lourd de conséquences, le comité devrait avoir un maximum de responsabilité et de liberté d'action dans le cadre des buts et principes de la Charte des Nations Unies.

155. Quant au projet de résolution du Mexique, je voudrais en retenir tout particulièrement deux points les rapprochant de notre projet de résolution, c'est-à-dire le projet africano-asiatique.

156. Le premier de ces points porte sur le droit d'autodétermination. Ma délégation approuve sans réserve ce projet quand il affirme solennellement:

"La liquidation de toute situation coloniale doit s'effectuer de manière à permettre l'application la plus large du principe fondamental de l'autodétermination des peuples."

157. Ce droit d'autodétermination s'applique, bien entendu, à toute la population qui vit dans une colonie ou sur le territoire d'une colonie qui forme un tout. Il est indispensable de bien comprendre ce principe pour éviter que certaines puissances n'appliquent chaque fois qu'elles le peuvent la politique "diviser pour régner". Ce droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes ne doit pas être appliqué aux groupes raciaux, culturels et ethniques d'une colonie, mais à l'ensemble du territoire de cette colonie et à sa population tout entière. Dans le cas qui nous intéresse, cette population a subi des humiliations et enduré des épreuves pendant des siècles et, grâce à sa lutte pour la liberté, elle a constitué une nation en dépit de différences raciales, culturelles et ethniques.

158. Le deuxième point que je voudrais soulever est la mention, dans le projet mexicain, de la possibilité d'un recours à la Cour internationale de Justice en cas de litiges qui se produiraient au cours du processus de décolonisation. Ce recours ne pourra jamais conduire à la solution nécessaire, car les accords ou les traités conclus pendant ou immédiatement après une guerre coloniale entre l'ancienne métropole et le nouveau pays ne sont pas des traités signés entre égaux; dans les différends qui en résultent, il s'agit de trancher des problèmes politiques qui sont dus à l'inégalité antérieure. La solution de pareils différends exige que les anciens rapports entre les deux pays fassent entièrement place à de nouveaux rapports de justice et d'égalité, fondés sur l'intérêt mutuel et conformes aux réalités politiques.

159. J'en viens aux trois projets relatifs à la question de l'Irian occidental: le projet néerlandais [A/L.354], celui dont l'Inde et la Bolivie ont été les premiers auteurs [A/L.367/Rev.1] et enfin celui des 13 puissances africaines [A/L.368].

160. Je voudrais pourtant d'abord exposer très nettement la position de ma délégation et de mon gouvernement à cet égard. Dès le début, ma délégation a précisé que, si nous débattons ici la question de l'Irian occidental, ce n'est pas pour obtenir des Nations Unies une résolution qui réglerait le problème. Cela, nous l'avons déjà fait autrefois, en demandant aux Nations Unies d'inviter les deux parties, par une recommandation, à engager des négociations en vue de résoudre pacifiquement le problème. A cause du refus des Pays-Bas, l'Assemblée n'a même pas pu adopter une recommandation aussi simple, bien que la majorité des Etats Membres ait appuyé les efforts pacifiques de mon gouvernement.

161. A partir de 1957, le gouvernement et le peuple indonésiens ont décidé de résoudre eux-mêmes ce problème, pour que ce territoire, seule partie de l'Indonésie qui soit encore soumise à l'occupation néerlandaise, puisse venir compléter l'unité nationale de l'Indonésie. Solennellement adoptée par le peuple et le Gouvernement de l'Indonésie, cette politique est leur décision inébranlable, dont ils ont pesé toutes les conséquences. Cela dit, nous ne nous opposons à aucune résolution qui tendrait à rapprocher les parties et à créer un climat de conciliation, même si elle ne permettait pas d'aboutir immédiatement à une solution de compromis sur un problème aussi complexe.

162. Une résolution de ce genre ne devrait évidemment pas préjuger les droits et les revendications de l'Indonésie. C'est pourquoi nous rejetons intégralement le projet néerlandais de résolution [A/L.354], car, tout d'abord, il a incontestablement pour objet de nous imposer à nous, à notre peuple, à notre gouvernement, la reconnaissance complète du droit d'autodétermination de la population de l'Irian occidental, c'est-à-dire de son droit de devenir un pays indépendant, comme si cette population n'avait pas pris part à la lutte de l'Indonésie pour l'indépendance, lutte qui a atteint son point culminant lors de la guerre coloniale de 1945 à 1950, et qui a coûté le sacrifice de plus de 500 000 vies humaines; comme si ce territoire n'avait rien à voir avec le différend néerlandono-indonésien causé par l'attitude intransigeante que les Pays-Bas ont prise à l'égard de l'Indonésie depuis 1945; comme si la question de l'Irian occidental ne relevait pas de la série de campagnes et d'agissements subversifs que les Pays-Bas ont menés pour créer des mouvements séparatistes et des mouvements de sécession dont nous avons déjà triomphé dans le passé, soit par une politique habile soit par l'action militaire, comme dans le cas de la soi-disant République des Moluques méridionales, proclamée sur le territoire indonésien à l'instigation des Pays-Bas.

163. C'est aussi pourquoi, lorsque l'Inde a présenté pour la première fois le projet de résolution A/L.367/Rev.1 [1058ème séance], j'ai déclaré que nous ne nous opposons pas à ce texte et qu'en cas d'adoption, mon gouvernement y souscrirait sincèrement, en vue de régler par négociation, comme on le souhaite, ce différend politique qui, à vrai dire, a ruiné les rapports amicaux entre deux Etats Membres. Nous espérons que les Pays-Bas vont envisager de changer d'attitude à l'égard du projet indien.

164. En tout état de cause, quelle que puisse être leur attitude en tant qu'Etat souverain, les Pays-Bas ne pourraient pas s'engager dans une décision unilatérale que nous considérerions comme une solution imposée. Dans ce cas, que l'on ne se fasse pas d'illusions, l'Indonésie ferait usage de son droit de souveraineté et de tous les moyens nationaux dont elle dispose pour éliminer une solution ainsi imposée.

165. J'en arrive maintenant au projet de résolution [A/L.368] dont les auteurs sont le Cameroun, le Congo (Brazzaville), la Côte-d'Ivoire, le Dahomey, le Gabon, la Haute-Volta, Madagascar, la Mauritanie, le Niger, la République centrafricaine, le Sénégal, le Tchad et le Togo. Nous ne mettons pas en doute la sincérité et l'honnêteté des pays signataires. Au contraire, nous leur sommes profondément reconnaissants d'avoir contribué à la recherche d'une solution pacifique de ce problème. Nous acceptons, dans l'ensemble, le préambule de ce projet de résolution, sauf, en ce qui concerne le différend qui nous occupe, le dernier alinéa. Je dois dire en revanche que, lorsque les auteurs de ce projet proposent dans le dispositif des négociations entre les deux parties, ils préjugent en même temps l'issue des négociations et même la position indonésienne.

166. Il nous est demandé de reconnaître par avance le principe de l'autodétermination du peuple de l'Irian occidental. Cela, je l'ai déjà dit, nous ne pouvons pas l'accepter. Si l'Irian occidental était un pays d'Asie, d'Europe ou d'Amérique, qui n'ait rien à faire avec l'Indonésie, nous souscririons sans réserve à ce principe. Mais nul ne saurait nier que ce territoire a quelque chose à voir avec l'Indonésie, même si nos revendications ne sont pas acceptées. Les Pays-Bas eux-mêmes n'ont pas nié les liens politiques et historiques qui unissent l'Indonésie à l'Irian occidental et tout ce qu'ils impliquent.

167. Quand ce texte dispose, dans le préambule, que l'Irian occidental est un territoire non autonome, ce que nous ne saurions admettre, il préjuge, comme je viens de le dire, l'attitude indonésienne. En revanche, nous acceptons le paragraphe 2:

"L'Assemblée générale prie le Secrétaire général d'apporter aux négociations le concours de ses bons offices, en effectuant auprès des deux gouvernements toutes les démarches susceptibles de faciliter la reprise et la poursuite de ces négociations."

168. Quant à l'alinéa a du paragraphe 5, celui qui précise qu'une commission serait envoyée en Irian occidental, en vue "de faire une enquête sur la situation existant dans ce territoire", il préjuge, comme je l'ai déjà dit, les négociations. Si j'étais à la place des Pays-Bas, je me contenterais d'entamer des négociations que je mènerais jusqu'en mars prochain sans l'intention d'arriver à un résultat quelconque, puis je chercherais ultérieurement une solution en me fondant sur les paragraphes 5 et 6.

169. Il est évident que la politique des Pays-Bas les orienterait dans ce sens. Aussi, quand ce texte prévoit la procédure à suivre en cas d'échec des négociations, il ne pousse certainement pas les Pays-Bas à parvenir à un accord sur le problème que pose l'Irian occidental. Au contraire, il les endétournerait plutôt, car les paragraphes 5 et 6 reflètent plus ou moins la teneur de la résolution néerlandaise.

170. Je comprends donc fort bien pourquoi le représentant des Pays-Bas est disposé à accepter ce projet de résolution: son pays est contre les négociations. Après l'échec des négociations — ne voulant pas, j'en suis certain, parvenir à un accord, les Pays-Bas veilleraient à ce qu'elles aboutissent à un échec — le dispositif de la résolution néerlandaise entrerait alors en vigueur.

171. C'est donc à mon grand regret — car les auteurs de ce projet sont sincères — que nous ne pouvons pas accepter le texte des 13 pays d'Afrique. Nous sommes obligés de le rejeter parce qu'il préjuge la position indonésienne et qu'en ce cas il ne peut qu'empirer les rapports entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas et augmenter la tension entre les deux forces qui s'opposent dans l'Irian occidental.

172. J'en arrive maintenant au projet de résolution A/L.357 et Add.1, déposé par la Nigéria et patronné ensuite également par le Libéria. Si les peuples africains sont disposés à l'accepter, l'Indonésie l'appuiera.

173. Je voudrais souligner une fois de plus que notre lutte pour l'indépendance, qui a duré des dizaines d'années, prouve à l'évidence que nous soutenons fermement, dans la sphère nationale comme dans la sphère internationale, le principe de l'autodétermination quand il s'agit d'indépendance et d'intégrité nationales. Mais nous nous opposons, en faisant valoir tous nos droits souverains et en utilisant tous les moyens dont nous disposons, à tout essai, de la part des puissances coloniales, de faire intervenir l'autodétermination ethnique ou régionale de façon à semer la confusion dans la lutte nationale pour l'indépendance.

174. Les récents événements du Congo montrent abondamment que l'autodétermination totale d'après des considérations régionales ou ethniques ne fait qu'apporter la confusion et la souffrance à la population intéressée, quand elle n'augmente pas la tension internationale en général. Nous appuyons sans réserve l'indépendance et l'intégrité du Congo; de plus, étant donné la résolution que le Conseil de sécurité a récemment adoptée⁴, non seulement nous revenons sur notre idée de retirer du Congo les contingents indonésiens, mais nous nous proposons d'y envoyer un nouveau contingent soutenir l'action des Nations Unies et aider le Gouvernement central du Congo à assurer son intégrité territoriale.

175. En ce qui concerne l'Indonésie, nous avons prouvé de façon indéniable que l'Indonésie, composée de 3 000 îles, grandes et petites, qu'habitent des groupes ethniques différents, constitue une entité nationale, en dépit de tous les agissements subversifs auxquels les Pays-Bas pourraient avoir recours pour la désintégrer et la partager en plusieurs Etats. Personne ne saurait prétendre que cette unité est due à l'usage de la force. Sans la conviction et le dévouement des Indonésiens et leur sentiment profond d'appartenir à une seule nation, aucune unité n'aurait pu se maintenir, même par la force.

176. Nous avons une autre raison de repousser la proposition néerlandaise. Nous refusons que l'on envoie une commission dans une partie du territoire d'une puissance souveraine, quand une puissance coloniale a réoccupé cette partie du territoire, car l'envoi d'une telle commission légaliserait cette occupation. Au surplus, étant donné le conflit néerlandais-indonésien, une commission spéciale ne saurait faire œuvre utile au service de la paix, et spécialement au service des intérêts et du bien-être de la population de l'Irian occidental.

177. En premier lieu, comme les Pays-Bas eux-mêmes l'ont déjà dit, tout le territoire de l'Irian occidental, après des siècles d'occupation coloniale, reste terra incognita même pour les occupants néerlandais. En second lieu, ce territoire, que réoccupe aujourd'hui une puissance coloniale, est privé de tous ses chefs nationalistes, hommes sincères et honnêtes qui ont combattu avec leurs autres compatriotes de toute l'Indonésie. Ils ont été expulsés du territoire ou emprisonnés.

178. Pour ces raisons, la commission ne serait qu'un instrument destiné à légaliser la situation de fait qui sépare de la République d'Indonésie l'Irian occidental. L'envoi de la commission envisagée a donc une signification essentielle et profonde et aurait en vérité des conséquences graves, d'une portée incalculable. On ne peut pas travestir cet envoi en une innocente décision technique, étant donné tout le problème complexe qui oppose les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie. Voilà pourquoi nous rejetons énergiquement l'envoi, à l'heure actuelle, d'une commission en Irian occidental, tant que ce pays restera réoccupé par les Pays-Bas, tant que la vie nationale indonésienne n'y sera pas pleinement rétablie dans la liberté et que les milliers de déportés n'y seront pas revenus. Une des raisons primordiales pour laquelle nous rejetons le projet néerlandais est que les Pays-Bas s'efforcent d'imposer à l'Indonésie, puissance souveraine, une solution unilatérale du problème de l'Irian occidental, une solution unilatérale du conflit néerlandais-indonésien, même si c'est par l'intermédiaire des Nations Unies qu'ils veulent y arriver. Une telle initiative est, à mon avis, contraire à la dignité et à l'honneur de tout pays souverain. Or, c'est un des plus importants aspects du projet néerlandais. L'Assemblée générale doit y songer très soigneusement, car il s'agit d'un conflit entre deux Etats souverains, Membres l'un et l'autre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

179. On ne peut pas imposer une solution; on ne peut pas en tout cas l'imposer pacifiquement. Si l'on essayait, le précaire statu quo qui existe dans l'Irian occidental entre les deux forces opposées pourrait même se trouver compromis et, partant, un conflit aux conséquences incalculables risquerait d'éclater.

180. J'espère, à présent, que la délégation néerlandaise, le Gouvernement néerlandais et le peuple néerlandais lui-même renonceront, dans leur propre intérêt, à fermer les yeux sur le différend qui oppose l'Indonésie aux Pays-Bas. C'est un grave différend, aux conséquences incalculables. Nous avons rompu toutes nos relations diplomatiques avec les Pays-Bas: il n'y a plus la moindre représentation diplomatique des Pays-Bas en Indonésie, ni la moindre représentation diplomatique de l'Indonésie aux Pays-Bas. Tel est le sens du différend, telle est sa profondeur, et j'espère que l'Assemblée l'aura compris. En outre, comme je l'ai déjà dit, les Pays-Bas ont triplé leurs forces en Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale — en Irian occidental — et nous sommes forcés d'avoir des effectifs d'une égale importance.

181. Je dois dire que tous les jours le statu quo est précaire, que c'est une paix précaire. Il y a de petites îles que les Pays-Bas n'occupent que pendant le jour et que nous réoccupons la nuit. Dans ces conditions, la moindre erreur d'une part ou de l'autre pourrait entraîner des conséquences incalculables.

182. Quant à nous, nous ferons de notre mieux pour maintenir la paix dans cette région tant que nous n'aurons pas résolu notre différend avec les Pays-Bas; mais nous voudrions, d'autre part, que l'Assemblée comprenne qu'elle ne devrait pas imposer une solution que l'un ou l'autre pays ne pourrait accepter ou qu'ils rejetteraient tous les deux. Toute solution adoptée par cette assemblée doit avoir l'approbation des deux parties. C'est pourquoi nous recommandons vivement — comme nous le faisons depuis le début — que les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie engagent des négociations.

183. Il est vrai qu'auparavant les négociations n'avaient a priori aucun sens, car les Pays-Bas n'étaient pas alors en mesure d'abandonner leur administration de l'Irian occidental et la souveraineté qu'ils revendiquaient. Mais aujourd'hui la politique des Pays-Bas et l'opinion de leur peuple leur permettraient, il me semble, d'abandonner la souveraineté qu'ils revendiquent et leur administration de l'Irian occidental. Il existe à l'heure actuelle de larges possibilités d'accord entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas et — que l'Assemblée en soit assurée — cet accord ne sera certainement pas fondé sur les exigences indonésiennes; il ne préjugera ni les droits et prétentions de l'Indonésie, ni les droits et prétentions des Pays-Bas. Nous aborderons avec une entière confiance et dans un esprit de coopération l'étude de ce problème afin d'en trouver la solution et je crois que le moment est venu de discuter de la question à notre avantage mutuel. Si, après une première série de négociations, il n'est pas possible de trouver une solution, nous pourrions toujours les continuer jusqu'à ce que nous arrivions à un résultat.

184. M. PLIMSOLL (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Quand j'ai pris la parole, lors de la discussion générale, sur les points dont nous débattons aujourd'hui [1055ème séance], j'ai indiqué l'attitude de ma délégation à l'égard des projets déposés par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355], la Nigéria et le Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1] et les Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. Je voudrais maintenant faire connaître nos idées sur les autres projets de résolution dont nous sommes saisis: celui de divers pays d'Asie et d'Afrique [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3], celui du Mexique [A/L.369], celui de l'Inde [A/L.367/Rev.1] et enfin le projet déposé par un certain nombre d'Etats africains d'expression française [A/L.368].

185. Quelques mots tout d'abord sur le projet déposé par l'Afghanistan et divers pays d'Afrique et d'Asie [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Les pays qui nous ont soumis ce texte se sont donné beaucoup de mal. Ils ont consulté beaucoup de délégations dans divers groupes, et nous sommes maintenant en présence d'un projet qui pourrait, je pense, recevoir un large appui au sein de notre assemblée. La délégation australienne votera pour ce texte. Je voudrais, cependant, préciser notre attitude à l'égard de certaines de ses dispositions. Il est sans doute inévitable, en effet, que le libellé d'un projet de cette nature, rédigé de façon à obtenir l'agrément général, ne soit pas absolument conforme à celui que chaque délégation aurait adopté si elle présentait le projet elle-même.

186. Je ferai la première observation que voici. Ce projet de résolution est évidemment subordonné aux dispositions de la Charte. L'Assemblée générale, comme tout autre organe des Nations Unies, doit s'en tenir à la Charte et les dispositions de la Charte l'emportent sur toute déclaration que pourrait faire tel ou tel organe. Cette réserve faite, ce projet détaille certains des buts de la Charte et propose certaines modalités propres à assurer plus rapidement et mieux l'exécution des processus prévus dans la Charte. C'est dans cet esprit que la délégation australienne peut souscrire à ce projet.

187. Le huitième alinéa du préambule déclare: "Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance." J'ai déjà fait quelques observations à ce sujet, lors de la quinzième session de l'Assemblée [933ème séance]. Le mot "prétexte", selon la délégation australienne, est le mot clef de ce paragraphe. Il signifie qu'il ne faut pas invoquer le manque de préparation comme une mauvaise raison, une fausse raison pour retarder l'indépendance des territoires non autonomes ou des territoires sous tutelle. Mais, bien entendu, cela ne veut pas dire non plus qu'il faut créer immédiatement certains Etats quand les conditions nécessaires à leur équilibre et à leur progrès ne sont pas réalisés. La Charte elle-même, à l'Article 73 et à l'alinéa b de l'Article 76, reconnaît que les puissances administrantes ont l'obligation d'aider les populations des territoires dont elles ont la responsabilité et qu'elles ont des devoirs à l'égard de ces populations comme elles en ont à l'égard des autres membres de l'Assemblée. J'ai pris acte de l'interprétation donnée à d'autres dispositions du projet par quelques-uns de ses auteurs. Ils reconnaissent qu'en prenant des mesures immédiates pour amener à l'indépendance les territoires placés sous leur administration, les Etats s'acquittent non seulement des obligations que leur fait la Charte, mais aussi de ce que réclame ce projet de résolution. Cela ne signifie pas l'indépendance immédiate. Cela signifie des mesures immédiates dans le sens de l'indépendance.

188. L'Australie, puissance administrante, honore non seulement les obligations que lui fait la Charte, mais aussi les mesures préconisées par l'Assemblée, mesures qu'elle applique dans les territoires placés sous son administration et dont elle a fait état devant l'Assemblée, en séance plénière, ainsi que devant le Conseil de tutelle, la Quatrième Commission et le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes.

189. Ma deuxième observation est que le texte de ce projet est imprécis ou parfois trop général. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, c'est évidemment le propre de toute résolution qui doit tenir compte d'une large gamme d'opinions au sein de l'ONU. En votant pour cette résolution, la délégation australienne tiendra compte, toutefois, des explications et des interprétations qu'en auront données à l'Assemblée certains de ses auteurs. Nous supposons aussi — et nous devons supposer — que le comité spécial se montrera à la hauteur de ses responsabilités. Ce projet de résolution, je le répète, est, à certains égards, assez vague et nous devons supposer — nous sommes en droit de supposer, je pense — que le comité agira avec le sens de ses responsabilités et conformément au désir de la majorité des membres de l'Assemblée. Tant qu'il en sera ainsi, le Gouvernement australien appuiera le comité et collaborera avec lui. Nous voterons donc pour ce projet.

190. Nous sommes également saisis d'un projet de résolution [A/L.369], déposé par le Mexique. Beaucoup des points auxquels touche ce texte figurent aussi dans le projet africano-asiatique; le projet mexicain les aborde, à certains égards, sous un angle un peu différent, mais ses objectifs sont dans l'ensemble à peu près semblables à ceux du projet africano-asiatique. La délégation mexicaine a joué depuis longtemps un rôle important et constructif à la Quatrième Commission de l'Assemblée générale. Le peuple mexicain et son gouvernement ont, avant même la création de l'ONU, montré l'intérêt actif et sincère qu'ils portaient à la liquidation du régime colonial. Mais je crois que ce projet de résolution présenterait certaines difficultés si l'on nous invitait à le mettre immédiatement aux voix. Le représentant de l'Inde a examiné, au début de l'après-midi, quelques-unes de ces difficultés; ma délégation est d'accord sur bien des points avec les déclarations faites par M. Jha à ce sujet. La raison de quelques-unes de ces difficultés est, me semble-t-il, que ce projet nous a été soumis très tard, le 24 novembre, au moment où le dernier orateur était à la tribune. Nous n'avons donc pas pu examiner ce texte et consulter notre gouvernement, comme nous l'avions fait pour le projet africano-asiatique [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. La délégation mexicaine ayant ainsi montré son intérêt pour ce problème et exposé l'orientation de ses idées sur la question, nous espérons qu'elle ne réclamera pas la mise aux voix de son texte. Elle pourrait peut-être, maintenant qu'elle l'a déposé, accepter qu'il constitue un document à prendre en considération, un ensemble d'idées dont tous nos gouvernements devraient tenir compte. La délégation australienne préfère, du moins au point où en sont les débats, le libellé du projet africano-asiatique.

191. Voilà donc ce que j'avais à dire des projets relatifs à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. J'en viens, maintenant, aux projets de résolution qui concernent tout particulièrement la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise.

192. J'ai déjà dit au cours du présent débat que l'Australie appuierait le projet néerlandais [A/L.354]. Je n'ai pas besoin, il me semble, de répéter les raisons de notre attitude. Depuis le moment où j'ai pris la parole, nous avons été saisis d'un projet de résolution déposé par l'Inde [A/L.367/Rev.1] et d'un projet de résolution déposé par le Cameroun et d'autres Etats d'Afrique [A/L.368].

193. Le projet indien demande des négociations entre le Gouvernement indonésien et le Gouvernement néerlandais. L'Australie ne s'est jamais opposée, pour sa part, à des négociations bilatérales entre ces deux Etats, elle ne s'y oppose toujours pas. Ce contre quoi nous nous élevons, c'est que les parties soient forcées de négocier sur une base qui exclut l'autodétermination et est de ce fait contraire aux principes de la Charte. Si le Gouvernement indonésien a toujours pour doctrine que les négociations ne peuvent pas avoir lieu sur la base de l'autodétermination, nous ne voyons pas comment, à considérer les choses pratiquement, des conversations bilatérales pourraient être fructueuses. Il ne s'agit pas d'être opposé en principe aux conversations bilatérales. Il s'agit seulement de savoir si de telles conversations pourraient être réellement fructueuses, puisque les Pays-Bas se sont engagés à appliquer à ce territoire le principe de l'autodétermination. Selon notre interprétation, la proposition néerlandaise n'envisage pas une solution unilatérale, mais une solution décidée dans le cadre de l'ONU, puisque les efforts que l'on a faits dans le passé pour régler le problème par voie de négociations bilatérales se sont soldés par un échec. C'est pourquoi la délégation australienne ne peut pas appuyer le projet indien et s'y opposera.

194. Quant au projet de résolution [A/L.368] déposé par le Cameroun et certains pays africains d'expression française, la délégation australienne estime qu'il offre la possibilité d'un véritable compromis, qui permettrait aux divers pays de manifester qu'ils sont partisans de négociations bilatérales. Le premier paragraphe de cette résolution presse le Gouvernement indonésien et le Gouvernement néerlandais "de reprendre sans délai les négociations en vue de parvenir à un accord sur l'avenir du territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, sans préjudice du respect de la volonté des populations et de leur droit à disposer d'elles-mêmes". Cela étant, la délégation australienne est disposée à appuyer la méthode préconisée par les pays africains d'expression française.

195. Dans leur projet de résolution, les Etats africains d'expression française font un nouvel effort pour tenir compte de certaines objections faites à la solution néerlandaise, au cours du présent débat. En certains endroits de leur projet, et notamment au deuxième alinéa du préambule, ils reconnaissent que "le territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale fait l'objet d'un différend entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas".

196. Pour préciser un point qui a pu causer certains malentendus au début du débat, je voudrais dire que l'Australie ne désire nullement que l'Indonésie n'ait rien à dire à aucune solution de ce problème. Si la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale choisit librement l'Indonésie, l'Australie ne s'y opposera pas; mais si la Nouvelle-Guinée choisit librement une autre forme de gouvernement, l'Australie souhaiterait que ce territoire garde avec l'Indonésie les relations les plus amicales. Il est évident que l'avenir de la Nouvelle-Guinée ne saurait être assuré par une solution qui l'opposerait à ses voisins.

197. Mais l'essentiel de notre thèse est que la solution choisie devra être une solution voulue par la population de ce territoire. L'Australie estime que la stabilité durable de la Nouvelle-Guinée et de toute la région dépend, en fin de compte, de la solution que pourra accepter et choisir la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. L'Australie s'est engagée à accorder l'autodétermination aux populations de la partie orientale de l'île, qu'elle administre. La solution la plus durable et la plus juste serait, à notre avis, celle qui offrirait également à la population de l'autre partie de l'île la faculté de déterminer librement son sort. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, si la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale décide librement de s'unir à l'Indonésie, l'Australie ne fera pas d'objection. Si elle choisit une autre solution, il est essentiel qu'elle entretienne avec tous ses voisins, y compris l'Indonésie, des relations d'amitié, de paix et de coopération.

198. Nous voterons donc pour le projet de résolution [A/L.368] déposé par le Cameroun et plusieurs autres Etats d'Afrique. Nous croyons que ce texte s'appuie sur les principes de la Charte, et en particulier sur le principe de l'autodétermination, principe qu'il faut, d'après nous, appliquer à l'ensemble de l'île.

199. M. LORIDAN (Belgique): La délégation belge votera en faveur du projet de résolution concernant l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et présenté par 38 puissances [A/L.366]. Sans doute n'en approuve-t-elle pas tous les termes, ni encore moins l'esprit dans lequel certaines délégations la conçoivent. Mais la délégation belge est en accord avec les principes qui sont à la base de ce projet. Négligeant les objections qu'elle aurait à formuler, elle votera, je viens de l'annoncer, en faveur du texte en question.

200. Je me dispenserai de réfuter ici une fois de plus les accusations calomnieuses et éculées qui ont été lancées dans ce débat contre mon pays et dont quelques délégations semblent s'être fait une spécialité. Le manque de fondement de ces attaques ressort des faits. La Belgique n'a pas attendu la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] pour accorder l'indépendance au Congo dès que les représentants du peuple congolais en ont formulé le vœu. C'est le 30 juin 1960 que le Congo devint indépendant et, dès le 7 juillet, le Conseil de sécurité approuvait sa demande d'admission à l'Organisation des Nations Unies ⁵/.

201. En ce qui concerne le Ruanda-Urundi, territoire sous tutelle, la Belgique, conformément aux principes inscrits dans la Charte des Nations Unies et exécutant les stipulations de l'Accord de tutelle, poursuit l'émancipation des populations. Ce processus est entré maintenant dans sa phase finale.

202. Tous les observateurs de bonne foi savent que la Belgique, autorité de tutelle, a apporté sa coopération aux Nations Unies et, en particulier, à la Commission des Nations Unies pour le Ruanda-Urundi qui s'est rendue dans le territoire.

203. Le Gouvernement belge n'a jamais perdu de vue que le but ultime était la réalisation des aspirations librement exprimées des populations intéressées. Je suis autorisé à réaffirmer ici solennellement que le souhait du Gouvernement belge est que, en conformité avec les procédures prévues dans la Charte et les accords de tutelle, le Ruanda-Urundi puisse accéder à l'indépendance au plus tard dans le courant de l'année 1962. Des propositions en ce sens et tenant compte des vœux des populations des territoires seront faites lorsque sera examinée, prochainement, par l'Assemblée générale, la question du Ruanda-Urundi.

204. La déclaration que je viens de faire dissipera, j'en suis convaincu, toute confusion ou tout doute qui pourrait subsister au sujet des intentions de la Belgique concernant l'octroi rapide de l'indépendance aux territoires dont elle a encore la charge.

205. M. ROS (Argentine) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Notre brève intervention a pour but d'expliquer les raisons qui guideront la délégation argentine dans son vote sur les deux points soumis à l'Assemblée.

206. En ce qui concerne le point 88 de l'ordre du jour (Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux), nous voterons pour le projet de résolution déposé par 38 pays africano-asiatiques [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3].

207. La délégation argentine a appuyé la résolution 1514 (XV) et, chaque fois que l'occasion s'est présentée, tant dans les différents organes des Nations Unies que dans les commissions de l'Assemblée, elle n'a jamais manqué de signaler l'importance fondamentale de cette résolution. Fidèle à cette attitude et estimant que le projet de résolution, qui sera sûrement adopté, est le fruit de longues et patientes délibérations et constitue un grand pas vers l'élimination progressive et ordonnée des structures coloniales actuelles, ma délégation l'appuiera par conséquent sans réserve.

208. Pour ce qui est du projet de résolution déposé par le Mexique [A/L.369], au cas où ses différents paragraphes seraient mis aux voix séparément, nous devrions malheureusement voter contre l'alinéa b du paragraphe 1 et contre les paragraphes 2 et 3. Si ce projet était mis aux voix avec ces paragraphes, nous voterions contre l'ensemble du texte.

209. Les raisons qui poussent ma délégation à voter de la sorte sont parfaitement claires. Le projet mexicain envisage comme possible que l'ONU administre des territoires dont le cas est encore en litige, et aussi que l'on applique sans discrimination le principe de l'autodétermination, avec intervention éventuelle de la Cour internationale de Justice ou d'autres organes chargés de régler pacifiquement les différends. Le texte ne fait aucune exception et ne tient pas compte des situations qui varient selon les circonstances.

210. Mon gouvernement estime que le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, énoncé au paragraphe 2 de l'Article premier de la Charte, est à envisager en fonction des circonstances qui en conditionnent l'exercice. Nous entendons par là qu'il existe des facteurs qui limitent la portée de ce droit quand des questions, telles que l'unité territoriale de l'Etat ou la situation particulière du territoire en litige, exigent une application très stricte du principe de l'autodétermination. Nous estimons, en effet, que ce principe ne peut s'appliquer sans discrimination quand un territoire a, par exemple, été séparé d'un Etat indépendant, sans qu'un accord international vienne ratifier postérieurement cette situation de fait et, notamment, quand la population autochtone a été dispersée et que des groupes de colons de la puissance occupante se sont installés sur ce territoire.

211. Par exemple, appliquer sans discrimination le principe de l'autodétermination à des territoires très peu peuplés mettrait le destin de ces territoires entre les mains d'un très petit nombre de colons de la puissance qui s'y est installée par la force, en violation des droits internationaux les plus élémentaires. Le principe de l'autodétermination servirait ainsi d'écran pour légaliser un transfert de souveraineté sous la protection des Nations Unies.

212. C'est principalement pour ces raisons, sans compter les difficultés pratiques qu'impliquerait l'adoption du projet de résolution africano-asiatique, lequel prévoit la création d'un comité spécial et l'éventuelle administration internationale de tant de territoires, ce qui exigerait d'abord une préparation minutieuse étant donné les énormes dépenses que l'Organisation serait bien en peine d'assumer en ce moment, ma délégation se verra obligée, à son grand regret, de voter contre le projet mexicain tel qu'il nous est présenté.

213. En ce qui concerne le cas particulier que constitue l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV), la délégation argentine, pour des raisons du même ordre que celles que je viens d'indiquer, s'abstiendra lors du vote sur le projet déposé par les Pays-Bas [A/L.354].

214. Nous apprécions à sa juste valeur ce projet, mais nous estimons que c'est le projet des 13 pays d'Afrique [A/L.368] qui mérite notre appui. Nous voterons donc en sa faveur. Si le sixième alinéa du préambule fait l'objet d'un vote séparé, nous nous abstenons néanmoins, pour les raisons que nous avons déjà mentionnées. Qu'il me soit permis d'exprimer notre reconnaissance au groupe des pays africains qui ont présenté ce projet de résolution, car ils ont fait un effort constructif pour trouver une solution à un problème qui préoccupe notre organisation depuis 1954. Cette initiative nous montre combien les nouvelles nations d'Afrique peuvent utilement collaborer aux travaux des Nations Unies.

215. Pour ce qui est du projet de résolution de la Nigéria et du Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1], notre délégation votera en faveur de ce texte s'il est mis aux voix. Nous estimons qu'il s'agit là d'un effort sérieux, puisqu'il prévoit, pour l'indépendance totale de tous les territoires non autonomes d'Afrique, une indispensable période de préparation.

216. Je voudrais, en même temps, mentionner qu'aucun pays n'était mieux qualifié que la Nigéria et le Libéria pour nous offrir, sans être influencé par des pressions politiques extérieures, une conception du processus de libération des territoires africains, processus que nous voulons tous voir appliquer rapidement et d'une manière ordonnée, pour que l'avenir soit prospère et exempt d'inutiles différends constitutionnels.

M. Quaison-Sackey (Ghana), vice-président, prend la présidence.

217. M. GUIRMA (Haute-Volta): Ma délégation a examiné soigneusement les problèmes auxquels se rapportent les différents documents soumis à l'Assemblée générale. Je ne m'attarderai pas à l'analyse de ces documents, car j'ai le souci de ne pas abuser de la patience de l'Assemblée. Mon intention est d'exprimer brièvement les sentiments de ma délégation au sujet des projets de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354], de 13 pays d'Afrique [A/L.368] et de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355].

218. Le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, qui traite de la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux est, en toute objectivité, très séduisant. En effet, c'est la première fois dans les annales des Nations Unies qu'une puissance coloniale vient demander à notre organisation de se rendre dans un territoire en sa possession pour enquêter et investiguer afin d'élaborer un rapport dégageant les éléments d'un référendum en vue de l'autodétermination. Nous avons tant de fois fait pression sur d'autres puissances coloniales pour avoir cette possibilité de contrôler l'autodétermination des peuples! Nous l'avons demandé à la France pour l'Algérie, au Portugal pour l'Angola et le Mozambique, à l'Afrique du Sud pour le Sud-Ouest africain, territoire pourtant sous tutelle des Nations Unies du point de vue juridique. Toutes ces puissances ont refusé avec fracas, d'un refus net et tranchant, voire méprisant et insultant, en invoquant la Charte des Nations Unies pour justifier leur refus de collaboration internationale.

219. Aujourd'hui, les Pays-Bas prouvent par leur initiative que c'était nous qui avions raison et ils tracent ainsi un magnifique chemin lumineux que les derniers colonialistes impénitents, c'est-à-dire le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud, doivent suivre immédiatement. Nous ne cacherons pas notre sympathie pour cette initiative et nous aurons le courage de l'exprimer.

220. On nous objecte qu'il s'agit d'une province indonésienne et qu'il s'agit de remettre un enfant à sa mère. Nous éviterons les détails et nous laisserons aux anthropologues le soin d'étudier si les Papous, qui sont nègres, sont de la même famille que les Indonésiens et si, avant la colonisation hollandaise, ces pays faisaient un tout un et indivisible. Nous ne chercherons pas non plus à savoir si la thèse selon laquelle les différents pays nouveaux doivent recouvrir exactement la superficie des possessions de l'ancienne puissance administrante est exacte ou non; ce sont des spéculations qui pourraient mener loin. Disons tout simplement qu'il y a tant de mères qui réclament tant d'enfants qu'il faut maintenant délivrer des certificats de filiation et de légitimité. Ces certificats, dans le cas qui nous intéresse, seront le rapport de la commission des Nations Unies et le référendum relatif à l'autodétermination dont il est question dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas.

221. Il serait contraire à la Charte, quand le principe d'autodétermination est en cause, de ne pas en tenir compte. Cependant, il est évident que les Gouvernements néerlandais et indonésien sont désireux de négocier. Ils négocient depuis 12 ans; ils peuvent encore négocier quelque temps. La négociation est un principe pacifique, conforme à la Charte des Nations Unies. Mais si la négociation est si longue, c'est la preuve que le problème est sérieux. D'ailleurs, nous ne voulons pas préjuger du résultat du référendum qui peut être favorable aussi bien à un côté qu'à l'autre. Nous sommes impartiaux et neutres. C'est pourquoi nous avons élaboré, en collaboration avec 12 autres pays d'Afrique, un projet de résolution qui se base sur ces deux principes fondamentaux de la Charte: le respect de cet instrument et l'autodétermination. Ce projet fait appel à la bonne volonté des Gouvernements de l'Indonésie et des Pays-Bas afin qu'ils négocient en vue de parvenir à un accord sur l'avenir du territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, sans préjudice du respect de la volonté des populations et de leur droit à disposer d'elles-mêmes.

222. J'en viens maintenant au projet de résolution présenté par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355].

223. Les pays africains doivent une certaine reconnaissance à l'Union soviétique: elle a toujours parlé ici en faveur des peuples coloniaux d'Afrique; elle a toujours condamné le colonialisme étranger en Afrique; elle a toujours pris des initiatives importantes dans ce domaine. Et, en 1961 encore, elle a pris l'initiative de présenter le projet de résolution que nous examinons. Ma délégation rend hommage à la générosité de l'Union soviétique vis-à-vis des peuples d'Afrique et souhaite que les gouvernements impérialistes finissent par comprendre, eux aussi, où est le chemin de la justice et du droit des peuples africains.

224. Elle constate cependant que plusieurs projets de résolution ont été déposés sur le même sujet. Le projet de résolution signé par 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] attire notre attention parce qu'il semble plus timide que celui de l'Union soviétique, pourtant, nous connaissons bien nos problèmes; nous savons quels remèdes il faut à nos maux et nous savons de quoi nous souffrons. De ces souffrances, nous avons tiré des leçons très utiles que nous méditons soigneusement. Nous avons appris aussi, à travers le monde, différentes méthodes de lutte et nous avons fait différentes expériences. Nous savons que l'on est plus fort dans la lutte quand on sait reconnaître ses fautes et apprécier ses qualités. C'est pourquoi il semble évident que tous les amis de l'Afrique se doivent d'aller vers l'Afrique et de lui demander ce qu'il faudrait que l'on fasse pour lui venir en aide.

225. Nous apprécions les concours extérieurs. Mais combien il est regrettable qu'ils dispersent nos efforts ou simplement nos attentions! Et combien nous aimerions qu'ils aident à la solution de nos terribles maux en dehors de ces marais où l'on s'enlise que constituent toutes les situations créées par la méfiance entre les gouvernements, situations causées par la guerre froide, dont les Africains ne sont pas responsables.

226. Dans ces conditions, il est clair que nous préférons soutenir ce que nous avons écrit et proposé nous-mêmes, et nous souhaitons que nos amis se joignent à nous pour voter en faveur du projet de résolution des 13 puissances d'Afrique. Nous nous abstiendrons sur les autres projets de résolution, dans l'intention de nous en tenir à l'essentiel et à l'utile.

227. M. ZOLLNER (Dahomey): Après un examen attentif des divers projets de résolution qui vont faire l'objet d'un vote aujourd'hui, ma délégation réserve son attitude à l'égard des projets de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355], de la Nigéria et du Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1], et de celui des 38 puissances [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Nous allons donc examiner les projets de résolution des Pays-Bas [A/L.354], de l'Inde et d'autres puissances [A/L.367/Rev.1] et enfin celui de 13 pays d'Afrique [A/L.368] relatifs au différend qui oppose l'Indonésie aux Pays-Bas.

228. De quoi s'agit-il?

229. D'un côté, l'Indonésie réclame la reconnaissance de sa souveraineté sur cette région parce qu'elle figurait dans le même groupe administratif que l'Indonésie actuellement indépendante, celui des Indes orientales néerlandaises. De l'autre côté, les Pays-Bas contestent toute souveraineté indonésienne sur ce territoire qui n'était pas inclus dans les accords établissant l'indépendance et la souveraineté de la République d'Indonésie dans le cadre de ses frontières actuelles.

230. Ce sont là les éléments du différend. Examinons maintenant les deux premiers projets de résolution.

231. Le projet déposé par les Pays-Bas [A/L.354] envisage la possibilité pour les Nations Unies de prendre ce territoire en main jusqu'à ce que celui-ci puisse décider de son statut. Cette initiative nous semble excellente au premier abord. Confier un territoire non autonome aux Nations Unies, c'est lui assurer en effet les meilleures chances d'un développement heureux et l'accès à la vie internationale, dans le cadre de son propre choix. L'autodétermination, le libre choix pour un territoire non indépendant, est un des principes essentiels énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies.

232. Cependant, il eût été souhaitable de voir une solution fondée sur la libre détermination des populations du territoire contesté être le résultat d'un accord des parties après négociations, et non pas un geste unilatéral. L'Indonésie étant l'une des parties dans ce différend, nous ne pouvons accepter qu'elle soit ignorée dans un projet de résolution décidant du sort du territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, ce qui est le cas dans le projet de résolution soumis par les Pays-Bas.

233. Le second projet de résolution, déposé par les délégations de l'Inde et plusieurs autres puissances, demande aux deux parties la reprise des négociations. C'est là une très bonne idée. Il est évident en effet que la meilleure solution à un conflit est un accord spontané des deux antagonistes, et nous ne devons rien négliger qui facilite leur rapprochement. L'idée en soi est pleine de sagesse, mais quelle en est la portée pratique dans le texte qui nous est soumis? Deux objections fondamentales sautent aux yeux.

234. Tout d'abord, nous constatons qu'il n'est fait aucune mention du peuple même de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale et de ce que peut être son opinion. Le texte demande des négociations entre les deux parties en litige sans qu'il y ait, du commencement à la fin, un seul mot concernant le principal intéressé, sans que rien n'indique une consultation de la population dont on voudrait ainsi disposer souverainement et arbitrairement. Représentants de peuples anciennement colonisés, nous sommes et devrions être plus imbus de ce principe de libre détermination pour les territoires non indépendants, qui est l'un des points capitaux de toute notre action.

235. La deuxième objection à ce projet de résolution réside dans le fait que préconiser purement et simplement la reprise des négociations n'apporte pas une solution au problème dans le contexte actuel. En effet, ce différend dure depuis bientôt 12 ans; plusieurs tentatives de négociations ont eu lieu et sont demeurées sans résultat, rien n'obligeant alors les parties à aboutir à un accord rapide. Qu'est-ce qui prouve que les négociations auraient plus de chances d'aboutir en ce moment, même sous l'égide d'une personnalité des Nations Unies si aucun élément nouveau n'intervient, si rien n'incite les parties à chercher un terrain commun d'entente? Des négociations engagées dans ces conditions pourraient aussi bien durer 12 nouvelles années. C'est pour cela que nous sommes convaincus qu'une simple reprise des négociations, dans les termes du projet de résolution soumis par l'Inde, ne fait qu'éluder le problème et aboutirait seulement à le poser de nouveau, peut-être même d'une manière plus aiguë, dans un avenir plus ou moins rapproché.

236. Il reste le troisième projet de résolution déposé par 13 délégations [A/L.368] dont celle du Dahomey. Ce projet de résolution donne la priorité à la négociation, mais ces négociations sont assorties de certaines conditions. Elles doivent ne pas perdre de vue le respect de la volonté des populations et leur droit à disposer d'elles-mêmes. D'autre part, si les négociations n'aboutissent pas à un résultat satisfaisant au 1er mars 1962, des dispositions accessoires entreront en vigueur. Dans cette perspective, les parties sont tenues de faire preuve de bonne volonté et d'accélérer le processus de leurs négociations. Dans le cas contraire, une commission des Nations Unies entrerait en action pour envisager les possibilités de confier momentanément l'administration à une forme d'organisation internationale qui restera à déterminer, donc les possibilités de retirer cette administration aux Pays-Bas. Il n'est que trop normal en effet que, avant de procéder à une consultation de la population, il convienne de soustraire celle-ci à l'influence néerlandaise.

237. Confier l'administration de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale à l'Organisation des Nations Unies pendant une période qui restera à déterminer et pendant laquelle les Indonésiens auraient, de même que les ressortissants de n'importe quelle autre nation, libre accès dans le territoire, donnerait à l'Indonésie toutes garanties sur la sincérité de la consultation qui suivrait cette période.

238. Si un rattachement éventuel de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale à la République d'Indonésie intervient à la suite d'une consultation de la population, cette solution ne pourrait que faire éclater au grand jour le bien-fondé de la cause indonésienne et éviter à l'Indonésie toutes les contestations et les résistances qu'elle rencontre en ce moment. Si le peuple de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale repoussait ce rattachement et souhaitait son indépendance, même après que l'influence néerlandaise eut été éliminée par la prise en charge internationale, il serait évident alors qu'une telle consultation préalable aurait épargné à l'Indonésie bien des troubles résultant du rattachement d'une population non consentante. Dans l'un ou l'autre cas, la République d'Indonésie y gagne. Nous comprenons donc difficilement une opposition du Gouvernement indonésien à cette solution de sagesse. Nous ne pouvons faire fi d'un principe aussi important que celui de l'autodétermination, serait-ce même pour faire plaisir à un pays ami. Il convient de souligner qu'il ne s'agit pas, même dans l'hypothèse pessimiste d'une absence d'accord au 1er mars 1962, de décider une mesure qui engage l'avenir du territoire contesté. Il s'agit d'une simple enquête faite par une commission objective et tenant compte de tous les éléments du problème. Une décision ne serait prise éventuellement que lors de la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale et par cette assemblée. D'autre part, cette date du 1er mars 1962 n'indique que le début des travaux de la commission, et non pas du tout un terme aux négociations. Si une solution négociée, tenant compte du peuple néo-guinéen, intervenait même après cette date, nous ne pourrions que nous en réjouir.

239. Nous espérons que ce projet de résolution emportera donc finalement l'adhésion des deux parties. Par son esprit de conciliation, il harmonise dans toute la mesure possible les aspirations des deux parties. C'est pour cela que ma délégation demande la priorité de vote en faveur de notre projet de résolution et souhaite que l'Assemblée se prononce sur cette demande, conformément à l'article 93 du Règlement intérieur de l'Assemblée générale.

M. Slim (Tunisie) reprend la présidence.

240. M. QUINTERO (Philippines) [traduit de l'anglais]: La délégation philippine désire expliquer la position de son gouvernement à l'égard des projets qui nous sont soumis. Les Philippines sont un des coauteurs du projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3; nous voterons naturellement en sa faveur.

241. Je voudrais maintenant dire ce que ma délégation pense du projet de résolution déposé par les Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. Dans des circonstances normales, une puissance administrante qui déciderait de reconnaître le droit d'autodétermination au territoire non autonome qu'elle administre et d'abandonner volontairement sa souveraineté sur ce territoire pour le placer sous l'autorité et la tutelle des Nations Unies, en vue de se conformer aux obligations de la résolution 1514 (XV), ferait preuve d'une initiative que nous saluerions tous comme un acte louable et généreux. C'est dans cet esprit que la délégation philippine considère le projet néerlandais.

242. Ce que je viens de déclarer suppose, cependant, que le statut du territoire non autonome n'est pas mis en cause. Dans le cas de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, l'Indonésie conteste les prétentions des Pays-Bas à la qualité d'autorité administrante.

243. Il ne faut pas oublier qu'au moment où les Pays-Bas ont reconnu l'indépendance de l'Indonésie, le 27 décembre 1949, le statut de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale devait faire, au cours de l'année suivante, l'objet de négociations entre les deux pays. Ces négociations ont échoué. On a essayé à plusieurs reprises de porter l'affaire devant les Nations Unies; mais là aussi c'est en vain que l'on a recherché une solution satisfaisante.

244. Il est donc évident que le projet néerlandais, quelles que soient ses qualités intrinsèques, ne saurait en aucun cas régler la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, du moins tant que l'Indonésie n'aura pas renoncé, sur ce territoire, à sa revendication contraire aux thèses néerlandaises, et accepté que l'administration en soit confiée à une commission spéciale de l'ONU, comme prévu dans le projet. C'est pourquoi la délégation philippine ne voit pas comment elle pourrait accepter ou refuser ce projet de résolution.

245. Etant donné le caractère très épineux du problème et les dangers qu'il représente pour la paix en Asie du Sud-Est, nous pensons, avec d'autres Etats, qu'il est essentiel de maintenir par tous les moyens un climat de conciliation entre les parties, dans le calme et l'amitié. Il ne faut pas, selon nous, que l'un ou l'autre pays durcisse sa position et ferme la porte à des négociations qui permettraient d'aboutir à un compromis satisfaisant. C'est dans cet esprit que nous nous voyons forcés de nous abstenir à l'égard de ce projet de résolution et d'insister auprès des deux parties pour qu'elles continuent à rechercher, dans un esprit de sérénité et de concessions mutuelles, une solution définitive au conflit qui les oppose et les moyens légitimes de parvenir à cette solution.

246. Notre attitude à l'égard des autres projets de résolution dont l'Assemblée est saisie s'inspirera de la position de mon gouvernement, telle que je viens de l'exposer, et du projet africano-asiatique [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] que nous appuierons, puisque les Philippines sont un des signataires de ce texte.

247. M. BROOKS (Canada) [traduit de l'anglais]: Voici ce que ma délégation pense du projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] déposé conjointement par 38 pays d'Asie et d'Afrique.

248. L'Assemblée générale a conclu, l'année dernière, un débat très important en adoptant la résolution 1514 (XV): Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette résolution marque une grande étape dans l'œuvre politique des Nations Unies. Elle s'accorde avec l'esprit de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et se fonde sur les principes fondamentaux de la Charte. Elle avait pour auteurs les pays d'Asie et d'Afrique, aucun Etat Membre ne s'y est opposé, elle a recueilli 89 voix; tout cela ajoute à son importance. Je relève, en passant, que le Canada a eu le plaisir d'être parmi ceux qui l'ont votée.

249. Il est juste et naturel que l'Assemblée, ayant à sa quinzième session adopté cette déclaration, ait voulu cette année examiner où en est son application.

250. L'attitude de ma délégation se fonde sur un certain nombre de considérations. Il nous importe, avant tout, que le monde entier respecte les libertés et droits essentiels de l'homme, en particulier le principe de l'autodétermination et celui de l'égalité de traitement sans acception de race, de couleur ou de croyance.

251. Nous sommes heureux de constater également le rôle grandissant que les nouvelles nations d'Afrique et d'Asie jouent sur la scène internationale. Notre désir de conserver à notre organisation son efficacité nous incite à nous joindre à ces nouveaux Etats. Le Canada attache une grande importance à la consolidation des liens du Commonwealth, qui nous unissent à quelques-unes des principales nations d'Asie et d'Afrique et à d'autres territoires africains très proches de l'indépendance. D'autre part, du fait que notre pays est bilingue, nous autres Canadiens sommes conscients de nos affinités culturelles et linguistiques avec les pays d'expression française d'Afrique et d'Asie du Sud-Est.

252. Aussi sommes-nous vraiment sincères dans notre désir de voir la décolonisation de toutes les populations non autonomes qui veulent l'indépendance se faire à un rythme que seules doivent déterminer des considérations pratiques de stabilité interne. Cela implique que les habitants du pays détermineront eux-mêmes leur destinée avec l'aide de ceux qui ont une réelle expérience du pays et ont agi pour donner aux nations nouvelles l'assurance de la stabilité politique et économique dans l'avenir.

253. C'est pourquoi ma délégation, ici comme ailleurs, a toujours insisté sur la nécessité de former rapidement des fonctionnaires et des techniciens autochtones dans les territoires sous tutelle et non autonomes. Pour que les territoires dépendants puissent prendre un bon départ et devenir des Etats viables, il leur faut la solide base que représentent des administrateurs qualifiés. Certaines délégations ont insisté à juste titre sur cette nécessité, en particulier celles de la Nigéria, de l'Inde et de la Birmanie.

254. Nous pouvons tous apporter notre aide à la réalisation de cet objectif. Au Canada, par exemple, plus de 1 000 étudiants venus de territoires non autonomes ou de territoires sous tutelle reçoivent, cette année, un enseignement supérieur ou poursuivent leurs études au titre des programmes d'assistance technique.

255. En matière d'indépendance, le danger, me semble-t-il, n'est pas que la puissance administrante refuse de s'incliner en fin de compte devant l'élan du nationalisme. Nous avons eu, dans une très grande majorité de cas, la preuve éclatante du contraire. Le danger est plutôt dans le cas de territoires administrés selon des conceptions différentes que l'indépendance ne trouve les habitants presque totalement impréparés à assumer les responsabilités nouvelles qu'ils demanderont et obtiendront certainement.

256. C'est pourquoi nous autres Canadiens appuyons pleinement la méthode britannique: créer les cadres administratifs en formant un noyau de fonctionnaires qui, à l'heure de l'indépendance, devra fidélité non pas à une tribu ou à un parti, mais à l'ensemble du pays. La sagesse de cette politique est amplement démontrée.

257. Pour que l'indépendance soit durable, pour qu'elle ne donne pas naissance à des factions et à des luttes intestines, il faut aussi qu'elle s'institue dans l'harmonie et dans l'ordre. C'est ainsi que la France et le Royaume-Uni ont procédé avec une ampleur et une rapidité sans précédent dans l'histoire mondiale.

258. Dans beaucoup de régions du monde, il est des pays qui viennent d'acquérir leur indépendance, mais notre attention se porte irrésistiblement, à l'heure actuelle, sur les événements que connaît le continent africain. Le passage à l'indépendance s'y fait à une cadence extraordinaire; la marée de la liberté y bat son plein. Vingt-deux pays d'Afrique sont arrivés à l'indépendance depuis 1946.

259. Ces derniers mois, ce sont le Sierra Leone et la Mauritanie que nous avons accueillis au sein de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous attendons avec impatience de recevoir en décembre le Tanganyika, société multiraciale, dont le facile passage à l'indépendance pourrait servir d'exemple à d'autres territoires. Mais ce n'est pas tout. L'indépendance de l'Ouganda pointe déjà à l'horizon, et nous espérons que celles du Kenya, du Ruanda-Urundi et d'autres territoires africains suivront sous peu.

260. Permettez-moi d'ajouter quelques mots au sujet de l'union de la partie méridionale du Cameroun ex-britannique avec la République du Cameroun, union qui date d'octobre 1961. Etant donné le caractère bilingue de ce pays, puisqu'il est maintenant l'expression à la fois française et anglaise, nous avons à son égard une affinité particulière. Nous voudrions également rendre un hommage particulier à tous ceux qui, dans un esprit de coopération et de bonne volonté, qui est tout à leur honneur, ont su mener cette union à bien.

261. Il est manifeste que l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance a fait des progrès, tant en Afrique que dans d'autres régions du monde. Ma délégation comprend bien que l'Assemblée puisse vouloir prendre maintenant des dispositions nouvelles pour instituer un organe, comme le propose le projet de résolution des 38 puissances, pour étudier l'application de la Déclaration coloniale et faire des propositions et des recommandations sur les progrès de sa mise en œuvre. Cela nous paraît logique et raisonnable. Nous voterons donc ce projet de résolution.

262. J'aimerais maintenant indiquer comment nous interprétons ce texte.

263. Il ne nous échappe pas qu'il s'agit d'un compromis obtenu au prix de longues et laborieuses discussions; nous pensons pourtant que l'on aurait pu libeller de façon plus heureuse certains alinéas du préambule. A notre avis, la majorité des puissances administrantes, qui honorent les obligations que leur fait la Charte, ont rapidement avancé dans la voie que préconise la Déclaration.

264. Le Gouvernement canadien considère, après mûre réflexion, qu'il faut appliquer dans le monde entier la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, que l'Assemblée doit prendre le colonialisme dans son acception la plus large et tout faire pour que la Déclaration s'applique partout où l'on entrave ou interdit, de propos délibéré, la marche des peuples vers l'indépendance et la liberté.

265. Nous devrions être particulièrement prudents quand nous examinons une formule unique ou des principes généraux applicables à tous les territoires qui sont encore sous régime colonial. Chacun d'eux connaît des problèmes et des conditions qui lui sont propres et dont il faut tenir compte. Dans certains, des mesures ont déjà été prises qui assureront la réalisation ordonnée de l'indépendance dans un proche avenir. Dans d'autres, les parties intéressées procèdent actuellement à de délicates négociations en vue de résoudre des situations complexes. Quant, à certains petits territoires, on peut sérieusement se demander si leur indépendance complète servirait au mieux les intérêts de leurs habitants. Pour obtenir des solutions pratiques, il faut appliquer des méthodes diverses, selon les circonstances. En tout état de cause, seuls les désirs et les besoins des populations sont à prendre en considération. Cette réalité est, nous semble-t-il, reconnue dans le projet nigérien relatif à l'indépendance des pays d'Afrique [A/L.357 et Add.1].

266. Nous espérons que le comité spécial qu'envisage le projet A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 tiendra compte de ces considérations, en déterminant sa méthode de travail et en s'acquittant des tâches dont il sera chargé.

267. Les puissances administrantes ne peuvent pas partager leur responsabilité ou s'en décharger. Le comité spécial n'a pas pour fonction de s'ingérer dans les affaires des puissances administrantes, mais d'examiner avec soin les progrès réalisés et faire des propositions et recommandations en vue essentiellement des mesures à prendre dans la pratique pour favoriser l'application de la Déclaration.

268. Notre interprétation du paragraphe 6 est la suivante: si le comité spécial désire se réunir ailleurs qu'au Siège de l'ONU, il ne pourra le faire qu'après avoir consulté les autorités compétentes et obtenu leur accord.

269. En collaborant étroitement avec le Conseil de tutelle et le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, le comité spécial facilitera sans aucun doute la marche des territoires vers l'autonomie complète ou l'indépendance. Mais, comme le représentant du Japon nous l'a rappelé, l'indépendance n'est pas une manne tombée du ciel; c'est une récolte, et une bonne récolte exige un travail dur et ininterrompu, de tous ceux qui la désirent: les habitants du territoire eux-mêmes, les autorités administrantes et les Nations Unies.

270. Cette collaboration à trois est la condition sine qua non de la décolonisation. Il importe par-dessus tout que le comité envisagé en tienne compte dans ses travaux. L'esprit de coopération si bien illustré par la tutelle néo-zélandaise au Samoa-Occidental doit se retrouver au sein du comité spécial.

271. Seule la collaboration avec les autorités administrantes permettra de passer, dans l'ordre et dans la paix, du régime colonial à l'autonomie ou à l'indépendance. Il faut s'assurer de leur coopération active et amicale. Nous sommes sûrs que cette considération entrera en ligne de compte non seulement lors de la nomination des membres du comité spécial, nomination qui s'inspirera de la nécessité d'une répartition géographique équitable, mais aussi lors des travaux mêmes du comité spécial.

272. M. GARIN (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je vais expliquer brièvement la position de ma délégation à l'égard des divers projets de résolution: A/L.355, A/L.357 et Add.1, A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, des amendements à ce dernier document [A/L.370] et du document A/L.369.

273. Lors de l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV), ma délégation s'était abstenue de voter; nous avions à ce moment-là exposé les raisons de notre abstention.

Nous avons dit que nous partagions entièrement le sentiment de ceux qui cherchaient à mettre fin à toutes les manifestations véritables du colonialisme, c'est-à-dire à l'asservissement politique, à l'exploitation économique ou à la domination d'un peuple pour des raisons idéologiques. Nous avons en même temps souligné que la résolution ne tenait pas compte de la complexité extrême des divers problèmes en jeu et de leur répercussion éventuelle. Nous avons dit:

"... Le projet de résolution que vient d'approuver l'Assemblée ne nous paraît tenir compte ni de la complexité de tous les problèmes traités dans ce cadre, ni de leurs répercussions éventuelles. Bien des conséquences et bien des réalités pratiques n'ont été ni prises en considération, ni placées dans la perspective qui leur convient, et il n'a pas été tenu compte de certains aspects politiques, économiques ou autres, qui peuvent surgir ultérieurement.

"De même, nous avons entendu ici les dirigeants de quatre ou cinq pays nous parler d'un nouveau type de colonialisme, qui est le système politique et économique le plus détestable que le monde ait jamais connu et qui a entraîné la subjugation et l'oppression de nombreux pays qui ont été ainsi livrés à la tyrannie. Ma délégation aurait pensé que ce type de colonialisme aurait dû, lui aussi, être condamné dans le projet de résolution adopté par l'Assemblée, car un effort dans ce sens aurait servi l'intérêt de l'humanité entière. Toutefois, l'Assemblée en a jugé autrement, et le texte qu'elle a adopté a ainsi perdu le sens et la portée universels qu'il aurait pu avoir ⁵."

274. Les projets de résolution déposés à ce sujet pendant la présente session découlent de la résolution 1514 (XV). Tous souffrent non seulement du défaut de la résolution mère, mais insistent en fait pour que l'on fonde de nouvelles mesures sur cet instrument défectueux.

275. On n'a pas essayé de définir ce qui constitue l'essence du colonialisme, ni de distinguer entre colonialisme et colonisation. On a mis l'accent sur les différences culturelles et raciales et on a insisté sur la situation géographique, alors que les facteurs dont on aurait dû tenir compte relèvent de la nature des rapports économiques, juridiques et politiques. Si ces derniers rapports sont conformes aux droits fondamentaux de l'homme, il est évident que toutes les autres considérations deviennent sans intérêt.

276. Malheureusement, on a traité toute l'affaire dans une atmosphère d'intense émotivité qui n'est certainement pas propice à une sagesse politique pratique et constructive. Aussi les projets de résolution s'écartent-ils non seulement de l'idée principale, mais soutiennent manifestement ce qui est en réalité la pire forme du colonialisme, celle qui s'étend de nos jours et tient déjà des millions d'hommes en esclavage. En fait, les prémisses sur lesquelles se fondent ces projets de résolution sont très exactement celles qu'énonce la puissance qui essaie de détourner l'attention de son propre colonialisme tyrannique en provoquant cyniquement des attitudes émotives, qui conduisent à des conclusions partiales, chimériques et myopes. Si certains ont parfois mentionné "toutes les formes du colonialisme", sa forme actuellement la plus florissante brille par son absence de ces projets de résolution: on l'a de ce fait admis comme acceptable. De l'avis de ma délégation, la question est trop grave pour qu'on la néglige.

277. Une autre forme de colonialisme n'a pas trouvé place dans les projets de résolution; c'est le colonialisme qui règne dans certaines régions où, en raison du système des castes, de vastes secteurs de la population sont privés du bénéfice des droits élémentaires de l'homme, où un confessionnalisme agressif opprime des minorités raciales ou religieuses, où les résolutions par lesquelles le Conseil de sécurité a régulièrement demandé un plébiscite sont bafouées par ceux-là mêmes qui les ont réclamées, où les populations intéressées sont tenues en échec par la force, où même les jugements de la Cour internationale de Justice sont violés et où, unilatéralement, on déclare annexés des territoires étrangers.

278. Dans les projets de résolution ne figurent pas de dispositions contre la menace du néo-colonialisme qui tente surtout de bloquer les marchés, les matières premières et les devises, et de maintenir ainsi dans la dépendance économique les pays sous-développés. Ce néo-colonialisme essaie insidieusement de constituer de nouvelles zones d'influence par le moyen détourné de l'infiltration économique, qui peut mettre en danger l'indépendance et la personnalité véritables de certains pays, surtout celles des pays d'Afrique, en en retardant le développement économique. Voilà des questions qui, bien entendu, intéressent profondément mon pays.

279. D'après les dires de certaines délégations, il semble que derrière ces projets de résolution se cache une savante manœuvre: refuser de voir la poutre que l'on a dans l'œil pour chercher la paille, réelle ou imaginaire, qui est dans l'œil de certains autres choisis à dessein. Il est significatif que deux de ces projets aient pour auteurs des pays bien connus eux-mêmes pour leur attitude impérialiste. Aussi ces projets de résolution peuvent-ils être considérés, à certains égards, comme destinés à semer la confusion; dans un cas au moins, comme certaines délégations l'on reconnu, ils cherchent à démembrer un Etat sous le couvert de l'anticolonialisme et en violation des principes fondamentaux de la Charte.

280. Au cours du présent débat, on a parlé de mon pays. Tout en protestant énergiquement contre les accusations injustifiées et calomnieuses lancées contre nous, ma délégation tient à préciser qu'elle se dissocie complètement de ces projets de résolution parce qu'elle rejette catégoriquement les allégations qui voudraient nous les rendre applicables. Certains orateurs ont essayé de tromper l'Assemblée sur les réalités historiques et présentes de la vie portugaise et sur les liens juridiques, politiques, sociaux et économiques qui unissent les différentes parties de la nation portugaise. La conception que l'on a aujourd'hui du colonialisme est tirée du système appliqué depuis le XIXème siècle par les puissances industrielles. Mais le Portugal d'outre-mer s'est, lui, formé au XVIème siècle et a obéi depuis lors à un idéal très différent, qu'il n'a jamais abandonné. Cette aspiration élevée, c'est l'intégration économique, sociale, politique et spirituelle de tous les peuples, sans aucune discrimination raciale ou autre, pour former une seule entité politique, par une évolution sociale graduelle, qui aujourd'hui encore n'a rien perdu de sa valeur humaine ni de sa force dynamique. La nation portugaise a existé sur cette base historiquement et juridiquement. Nos provinces européennes d'outre-mer n'ont pas été intégrées l'année dernière, et nous n'avons jamais changé — dans l'essentiel du moins — la structure constitutionnelle de notre pays.

281. Pour conclure, je dirai que ces projets de résolution, tout en voulant mettre fin au vrai colonialisme, passent à côté de leur objectif, car ils ne tiennent pas compte de l'essentiel du problème; ils excluent de leur champ d'application les formes les plus cruelles du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme, notamment du colonialisme économique; ils se fondent enfin, au moins en partie, sur des idées fausses et insoutenables qui, aux yeux de ma délégation, ne méritent pas examen. Pour toutes ces raisons, ma délégation ne participera pas au vote sur les projets de résolution dont est saisie l'Assemblée, à savoir les documents A/L.355, A/L.357 et Add.1, A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 et amendement [A/L.370], et A/L.369.

La séance est levée à 19 h 10.

POINTS 88 ET 22 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (fin)

Assistance à l'Afrique (suite):

a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance

1. M. PADILLA-NERVO (Mexique) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Je voudrais exposer brièvement quelques-unes des idées qui ont inspiré le projet de résolution présenté par la délégation du Mexique [A/L.369].

2. L'an dernier, l'Assemblée générale a indiqué dans la résolution 1514 (XV) le but auquel nous aspirons: l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette année, nous cherchons la voie, les méthodes, les mesures les meilleures pour atteindre ce but le plus tôt possible. Autrement dit, nous cherchons les moyens de mettre effectivement en application cette résolution 1514 (XV). Nous voulons prendre des mesures pratiques, des mesures adaptées aux réalités actuelles et qui nous rapprochent de notre but. La résolution 1514 (XV) ne sera pas réellement appliquée simplement parce que nous en aurons adopté d'autres pour la réaffirmer, elle ne sera pas appliquée simplement parce que nous aurons répété deux ou trois fois qu'elle devrait l'être.

3. Un des problèmes les plus graves que cette assemblée doit résoudre consiste à trouver des méthodes et modalités satisfaisantes pour mener à bon terme l'accession des peuples coloniaux à l'indépendance. Les expériences tragiques qui viennent de se dérouler, surtout au Congo, font apparaître que la solution qui sera donnée à ces problèmes aura généralement une influence décisive sur le sort futur des peuples coloniaux et même sur le maintien de la paix internationale.

4. Jusqu'à présent, l'apparition d'Etats nouveaux n'avait presque jamais été préparée ni facilitée par une action organisée de la communauté internationale. Les Nations Unies n'ont patronné et soutenu l'avène-ment de nouveaux Etats que dans certains cas particuliers, comme ceux des anciennes colonies italiennes de Libye et de Somalie, et à l'occasion des plébiscites organisés dans quelques pays, comme le Ghana et le Cameroun. Jusqu'à présent, les conditions dans lesquelles les nouveaux Etats ont accédé à l'indépendance résultaient exclusivement d'une lutte entre la ferveur nationaliste de la population et la résistance que lui opposait l'ancienne autorité coloniale.

5. Ma délégation estime que dans l'esprit de la résolution 1514 (XV) il ne s'agit pas seulement que les Etats accèdent à l'indépendance, mais encore qu'ils y accèdent dans des conditions telles que leur vie économique et leur indépendance elle-même ne soient pas hypothéquées en faveur d'une puissance quelconque. A notre avis, l'Assemblée doit donc s'assurer que les conditions dans lesquelles s'effectue la décolonisation ne représentent pas une menace pour la paix et la sécurité internationales, et qu'elles ne faussent pas la souveraineté et l'indépendance des territoires et des peuples qui acquièrent leur liberté.

6. Les Nations Unies ont une responsabilité en ce qui concerne les conditions et les modalités selon lesquelles se réalise la libération des peuples coloniaux. Tel est à notre avis le sens profond de la résolution historique 1514 (XV) que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée et qui contient la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

7. L'Assemblée générale a décrété par un acte réfléchi et solennel la fin du colonialisme, mais, en la décrétant, elle a souligné en même temps dans l'un des considérants de cette résolution le rôle important qui incombe à l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour ce qui est de favoriser le mouvement d'indépendance dans les territoires sous tutelle et les territoires non autonomes.

8. Cette déclaration signifie que l'Assemblée se charge désormais de veiller à ce que cette indépendance soit obtenue dans les meilleures conditions pour les populations autochtones et non pas sous une forme anarchique ou nuisible. Telles sont les considérations qui ont inspiré le projet de résolution présenté par le Mexique.

9. Nous ne croyons pas que l'octroi de l'indépendance puisse être une opération mécanique, automatique, survenant à une date fixée d'avance, identique dans tous les cas et réalisée toujours dans les mêmes conditions. La liberté et l'indépendance ne résultent pas d'affirmations solennelles et le départ officiel de la puissance administrante ne suffit pas à rendre un Etat souverain. La situation des 80 territoires dépendants peut être extrêmement variée et il n'est pas possible de suivre la même marche dans tous les cas.

10. Les Nations Unies ne doivent ni ne veulent provoquer des révolutions dans les territoires non autonomes, ni une hostilité stérile à l'Assemblée contre les puissances coloniales.

11. La collaboration des puissances administrantes des colonies et des autorités administrantes des territoires sous tutelle est indispensable pour assurer l'évolution ordonnée et pacifique vers l'autodétermination et l'indépendance. Les puissances qui administrent des territoires ont en la matière des politiques très différentes et on ne peut les placer toutes sur le même plan.

12. Tous les hommes et tous les peuples, quel que soit leur degré de développement et les progrès qu'ils ont réalisés, ont le même droit à la liberté, mais il existe aussi des différences considérables dans la capacité des territoires à devenir des Etats souverains reconnus comme tels sur le plan international.

13. Ma délégation estime que le véritable objectif ultime que nous visons est l'autodétermination pour les peuples qui n'exercent pas encore ce droit. Or, l'autodétermination d'un peuple s'exprime, se traduit et se reflète normalement dans la constitution d'un Etat indépendant, mais la création d'une entité politique douée d'une personnalité internationale propre, c'est-à-dire la création d'un nouvel Etat, n'est pas toujours viable et n'est même pas toujours possible. Il faut savoir dans quels cas elle est possible et viable et dans quels autres elle ne l'est pas, ou pas encore. Il est indispensable que le territoire remplisse certaines conditions évidentes, dictées par sa géographie, le nombre de ses habitants et d'autres facteurs qui permettent de supposer que le nouvel Etat sera viable.

14. Songez par exemple au cas de l'île Tristan da Cunha, perdue dans l'immensité de l'océan Atlantique, qui comptait moins de 300 habitants; songez encore à l'île de la Passion. Parmi les territoires dépendants, il en est plusieurs qui sont dans des situations semblables, sinon identiques. Dans leur cas, l'indépendance, au sens classique du mot, n'aurait aucune signification; mieux vaudrait parler de gouvernement local et d'autonomie.

15. Voyons maintenant d'autres territoires plus peuplés et plus riches de ressources, voisins d'autres Etats ou territoires dont ils sont séparés par des frontières artificielles, malgré les nombreux liens ethniques et culturels qui unissent leurs populations. Il peut se présenter des cas où la bonne solution ne consisterait pas nécessairement à créer un nouvel Etat indépendant, mais où l'on devrait par exemple provoquer la fédération ou même la fusion des deux territoires voisins si les populations en manifestaient le désir dans l'exercice de leur droit à l'autodétermination.

16. Enfin, dans certains cas très particuliers, lorsqu'un territoire se trouve géographiquement séparé d'un Etat, mais qu'il existe entre eux des liens étroits, l'indépendance peut signifier l'union sur la base de l'égalité complète, si telle est la volonté réelle de la population. Ainsi, les îles Hawaii et l'Alaska ont vraiment accédé à l'indépendance en se rattachant aux Etats-Unis comme Etats de l'Union, sur la base d'une égalité totale, sans devenir des entités indépendantes sur le plan international.

17. Comme je le disais tout à l'heure, il peut exister une multitude de situations différentes et des cas très variés. La décision à prendre dans chaque cas dépendra des circonstances et caractéristiques particulières. C'est pourquoi nous proposons qu'un comité spécial constitué à cet effet examine tous les cas de territoires non autonomes et recommande à l'Assemblée, l'an prochain, les mesures qui pourraient être prises, avec la collaboration des puissances administrantes, pour accélérer l'octroi de la liberté ou de l'indépendance aux territoires qui ne l'ont pas encore.

18. Inspiré de ces idées, le projet de résolution que nous avons présenté prévoit l'indispensable contact avec la puissance administrante et suppose une coopération qui sera finalement profitable non seulement aux populations des territoires, mais aussi aux Etats qui les administrent.

19. Le projet de résolution du Mexique représente un effort sincère de mon gouvernement pour contribuer à la liquidation accélérée du colonialisme. Je suis persuadé que la méthode que nous proposons permettra d'atteindre ce noble objectif d'une façon ordonnée, continue et complète.

20. M. UYS (Afrique du Sud) [traduit de l'anglais]: Nous avons écouté avec attention la discussion générale sur la question du colonialisme dans l'espoir qu'à cette occasion on accorderait aussi beaucoup d'attention au cas des 200 millions de personnes qui ont perdu leur indépendance par la conquête et qui vivent sous la subjugation depuis 1945. Plusieurs orateurs ont évoqué cet aspect de la question, mais la grande majorité des délégations ne se sont occupées que d'un seul type de colonialisme. Faut-il y voir un nouvel exemple de l'application de deux poids et deux mesures? Pas un seul des projets de résolution dont l'Assemblée générale est saisie ne vise ces millions de personnes qui subissent ce nouveau type d'oppression et d'asservissement. Pour comble, un des projets de résolution a été présenté par le principal architecte de ce moderne régime d'oppression.

21. Il est également intéressant de noter que beaucoup de ceux qui ont lancé contre mon pays des accusations sans fondement, souvent sans aucune retenue et même au mépris du règlement intérieur, n'ont manifesté aucun intérêt pour les nombreux millions de personnes qui vivent sous le joug de la nouvelle puissance impérialiste d'aujourd'hui.

22. Certaines parties du projet de résolution qui figure dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 sont acceptables pour mon pays. Nous sommes sensibles aussi à l'esprit dans lequel ce projet de résolution a été présenté. Malheureusement, il contient certaines dispositions qui, à notre avis, vont au-delà des obligations prescrites dans la Charte; il sera donc impossible à ma délégation de voter pour lui. Il en est de même des projets de résolution contenus dans les documents A/L.357 et Add.1 et A/L.369. Nous voterons naturellement contre le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355].

23. M. BINGHAM (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais définir brièvement la position de ma délégation sur les divers projets de résolution qui nous sont soumis.

24. Pour parler d'abord des projets de résolution d'ordre général, nous sommes très reconnaissants aux nombreux auteurs du projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 pour la peine qu'ils ont prise et la patience qu'ils ont montrée durant plusieurs semaines de discussions difficiles pour mettre au point un texte qui puisse être accepté, croyons-nous, par l'écrasante majorité des Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, un texte qui, mieux encore, puisse donner des résultats.

25. Ma délégation se propose donc de voter pour le projet de résolution dit africano-asiatique s'il est mis aux voix sous sa forme actuelle. Nous sommes fermement opposés aux amendements de l'Union soviétique [A/L.370] à ce projet de résolution. Nous estimons que ces amendements détruiraient l'équilibre délicat établi dans le projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 sous sa forme actuelle, équilibre réalisé grâce à des concessions mutuelles pendant des semaines de négociations; il importe, à notre avis, de ne pas détruire cet équilibre. L'adoption de ces amendements rendrait le projet de résolution inacceptable pour mon gouvernement.

26. Nous avons lu avec un vif intérêt le projet de résolution du Mexique [A/L.369]. Nous estimons que ce texte donne à penser et renferme beaucoup d'idées intéressantes, notamment celles qui viennent d'être exposées en détail par le représentant du Mexique. Nous estimons cependant que nous n'avons pas eu assez de temps pour étudier comme il le faudrait toutes les incidences de ce projet de résolution. De plus, il nous semble incompatible avec le projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 et, comme il est bien certain que ce dernier sera adopté par l'Assemblée à une très forte majorité, nous espérons qu'ensuite le représentant du Mexique n'insistera pas pour que son propre projet soit mis aux voix.

27. Quant au projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.357 et Add.1, déposé à l'origine par la délégation de la Nigéria, nous avons été très frappés par l'exposé des motifs fait par le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la Nigéria lorsqu'il a présenté ce texte [1050ème séance]. Si ce projet de résolution est mis aux voix, nous le voterons.

28. Nous voterons contre le projet de résolution A/L.355, présenté par l'Union soviétique, non parce qu'il vient de l'Union soviétique, mais parce que nous le trouvons tendancieux et non conforme aux réalités.

29. Je passe maintenant aux projets de résolution d'ordre particulier qui se rapportent à la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale. Lorsque j'ai pris la parole dans la discussion générale l'autre jour [1061ème séance], j'ai signalé que pour diverses raisons nous avions certaines critiques à formuler contre le projet de résolution présenté par le Gouvernement néerlandais [A/L.354] et contre le projet de résolution présenté par le Gouvernement indien [A/L.367/Rev.1]. Nous estimons que le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas ne tenait pas suffisamment compte de la position du Gouvernement indonésien en la matière. Nous estimons d'autre part que le projet de résolution de l'Inde n'apporterait rien d'utile et qu'il avait le tort de ne pas mentionner le principe de l'autodétermination. Nous n'avons pas été convaincus par l'exposé fait avec beaucoup de compétence cet après-midi par le représentant de l'Inde, M. Jha. Il a effectivement souligné que ce projet de résolution faisait mention de la Charte et des principes de la Charte d'une façon générale et que parmi ces principes figurait celui de l'autodétermination. Nous pensons cependant qu'il ressortait clairement de la déclaration de M. Jha que pour la délégation de l'Inde — et sans doute aussi pour les autres auteurs du projet de résolution — l'autodétermination ne devait pas s'appliquer dans ce cas particulier, car les délégations en question — et ici encore M. Jha l'a dit très clairement — acceptent l'argument du Gouvernement indonésien selon lequel il s'agirait d'un seul Etat indivisible et l'autodétermination ne pourrait pas s'appliquer pour ce motif.

30. Mais, comme je l'ai fait observer l'autre jour, c'est précisément là ce qui fait l'objet du différend. Voilà pourquoi, je le répète, il nous semble que l'adoption de ce projet de résolution n'apporterait rien d'utile et nous écarterait même de notre objectif au lieu de nous en rapprocher, car elle équivaldrait à rejeter la proposition tendant à une autodétermination organisée sous les auspices des Nations Unies.

31. Nous estimons que dans le projet de résolution A/L.368 on a conservé ce qu'il y avait de meilleur dans les deux projets de résolution, celui des Pays-Bas et celui de l'Inde, et nous pensons que les 13 délégations de pays d'Afrique qui l'ont déposé doivent être félicitées de cette initiative. Nous approuvons les déclarations faites à l'appui de ce projet de résolution par les représentants du Niger, de la Haute-Volta et du Dahomey. A notre avis, ce projet de résolution offre la possibilité d'une solution par voie de négociations entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas, et tous ici nous préférons, j'en suis sûr, voir parvenir à une solution par cette voie. Cependant, le projet de résolution indique ensuite ce qu'il y aurait lieu de faire si les négociations ne donnaient pas de résultat dans un délai raisonnable. Je crois que le représentant de l'Argentine et d'autres représentants ont émis l'avis dans des conversations privées qu'il serait préférable de supprimer le paragraphe 6 du dispositif du projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.368. Ce paragraphe semble donner lieu à certaines difficultés particulières, et nous suggérons donc aux auteurs du projet d'envisager la suppression du paragraphe 6 du dispositif.

32. Ma délégation votera pour ce projet de résolution des 13 nations africaines, ainsi que pour la motion de priorité en sa faveur dont le représentant du Niger a parlé [1065ème séance, par. 83]. Nous espérons que ce projet de résolution sera adopté, ce qui rendra inutile de voter soit sur la proposition des Pays-Bas soit sur la proposition de l'Inde.

33. M. COMAY (Israël) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a déjà annoncé qu'elle appuie le projet de résolution africano-asiatique figurant dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, ainsi que le projet de résolution de la Nigéria [A/L.357 et Add.1]. Nous allons examiner certains autres projets de résolution et amendements sous l'angle de leur compatibilité avec ces deux projets de résolution.

34. Pour le moment, je me bornerai à quelques observations sur les projets de résolution relatifs à la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise. En principe, nous sommes vivement partisans du règlement de tous les différends entre Etats par voie de négociations directes. Toutefois, dans le cas particulier qui nous occupe, je ne crois pas que l'on puisse demander à deux pays de négocier entre eux ce que doit être l'avenir d'un troisième pays. Le principe de l'autodétermination doit être respecté et la décision définitive doit être laissée aux habitants du territoire intéressé.

35. Nous voterons contre le projet de résolution de l'Inde [A/L.367/Rev.1] parce qu'il présente le problème comme un simple différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie et ne tient aucun compte de la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale.

36. Ma délégation considère le projet de résolution qui figure dans le document A/L.368, projet déposé par un groupe de délégations africaines, comme un effort constructif, une tentative, digne de véritables hommes politiques, de concilier le principe de la négociation et le principe de l'autodétermination; nous lui donnons donc notre entier appui. Nous appuyons de même la proposition tendant à voter sur ce projet de résolution par priorité.

37. M. BOZOVIC (Yougoslavie): Comme nous l'avons déclaré au cours du débat général sur le point 88 de l'ordre du jour [1057^{ème} séance], le Gouvernement yougoslave considère l'Irian occidental comme ayant été et comme étant toujours une partie intégrante de l'Indonésie se trouvant encore, pour certaines raisons, sous l'administration des Pays-Bas. Partant de ce point de vue et considérant que tout projet qui ne tiendrait pas compte des droits légitimes de l'Indonésie ne pourrait servir de base à une solution équitable et constructive de cette question, la délégation yougoslave votera contre le projet de résolution présenté par les Pays-Bas [A/L.354].

38. Le projet de résolution de 13 pays d'Afrique [A/L.368], malgré les efforts louables de ses auteurs, ne diffère ni quant au fond ni quant à son but du projet de résolution des Pays-Bas. En conséquence, ma délégation, pour les raisons que j'ai indiquées et qui s'appliquent également à ce texte, votera contre le projet de résolution présenté par 13 pays d'Afrique. Si le vote sur ce projet a lieu par division, ma délégation votera contre le sixième considérant qui, par implication, considère l'Irian occidental comme un territoire non autonome aux termes du Chapitre XI de la Charte; à notre avis, ce n'est pas le cas, en dépit du fait que le Gouvernement des Pays-Bas a présenté tous les ans des rapports sur cette partie du territoire indonésien, ce qui — nous le savons tous — a été l'objet de réserves et d'une opposition continue les plus expresses de la part de l'Indonésie. Nous voterons également contre les paragraphes 1 et 5 de ce projet parce que les négociations entre le Gouvernement de l'Indonésie et celui des Pays-Bas sont soumises à un délai déterminé d'avance et parce que ces paragraphes contiennent des éléments qui, s'ils étaient acceptés en ce moment, pourraient être considérés comme préjugant la position de l'une ou de l'autre des parties en cause.

39. Finalement, ma délégation votera contre les autres paragraphes de ce projet de résolution, à l'exception du paragraphe 2, de même que contre le projet de résolution dans son ensemble, étant donné que la création de la commission proposée non seulement ne facilitera pas le règlement de cette question, mais, bien au contraire, nous le craignons, créera une situation qui, comme cela est souligné au troisième considérant, serait "susceptible de mettre en danger la paix et la sécurité internationales".

40. Le projet de résolution déposé par l'Inde et plusieurs autres pays [A/L.367/Rev.1] trace, à notre avis, la voie à suivre pour le règlement de cette question, de façon à contribuer au rétablissement de relations normales et amicales entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas ainsi qu'à la stabilisation de la paix dans cette partie du monde. C'est pourquoi ma délégation votera pour ce projet de résolution.

41. Nous voterons aussi en faveur du projet de résolution présenté par 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Ce projet, bien qu'il eût pu être complété par une analyse plus poussée des termes du mandat du Comité spécial, représente, tel qu'il est devant nous, un pas important vers la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépen-dance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)].

42. Par contre, ma délégation n'est malheureusement pas en mesure de voter en faveur du projet de résolution soumis par la Nigéria et par le Libéria [A/L.357 et Add.1]. Si les dispositions de ce projet sont mises aux voix séparément, nous voterons contre les paragraphes 1 et 2, qui prévoient l'année 1970 comme la date avant laquelle tous les territoires et peuples coloniaux doivent accéder à l'indépendance.

43. Ayant voté contre la date envisagée qui, à notre avis, ne correspond pas aux besoins et à la réalité d'aujourd'hui, nous ne pourrions que voter contre le projet de résolution dans son ensemble si ces paragraphes sont acceptés, bien que nous soyons favorables aux autres paragraphes de ce projet de résolution.

44. Ma délégation votera en faveur du projet de résolution soumis par l'Union soviétique [A/L.355], qui prévoit une série de mesures concrètes pour l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, si ce projet est mis aux voix. Nous voudrions toutefois ajouter que, dans la composition de la commission spéciale qui y est proposée, la participation majoritaire des pays qui se sont récemment libérés du colonialisme serait maintenue; pour ces raisons, ma délégation s'abstiendra dans le vote sur le paragraphe 4 si un vote par division intervenait. Dans le cas où le projet de résolution présenté par l'Union soviétique serait retiré, ma délégation voterait en faveur des amendements que la délégation soviétique a présentés [A/L.370], pour autant que ces amendements seront mis aux voix.

45. Malgré la sympathie que nous éprouvons à l'égard de certaines idées contenues dans le projet de résolution présenté par le Mexique [A/L.369], nous ne sommes pas en mesure de l'appuyer. En principe, nous nous accordons à reconnaître qu'il importe "que les autorités locales aient un degré d'aptitude politique et administrative qui leur permette de se soustraire aux pressions internationales et d'assurer de façon satisfaisante le développement économique et le progrès social des habitants de leurs territoires". La question fondamentale qui se pose ici est celle de savoir comment déterminer l'existence d'une telle aptitude, et qui devrait en être juge. Nous savons tous que les puissances coloniales ont toujours considéré et considéré encore qu'elles sont seules compétentes pour prendre des décisions; il va de soi que nous ne sommes pas d'accord avec une telle interprétation du rôle des puissances administrantes. Ce sont les habitants des territoires dépendants et leurs représentants politiques qui doivent en décider. Nous considérons que, dès l'instant où un peuple demande à accéder à l'indépendance, la question des aptitudes politiques ne se pose plus; elle ne se pose ni en ce qui concerne l'exercice des fonctions politiques ni en ce qui concerne la solution des difficultés d'ordre administratif auxquelles d'ailleurs beaucoup de pays indépendants ont toujours à faire face.

46. D'autre part, les litiges relatifs à la souveraineté sur un territoire qui fait partie d'un système colonial ou qui est le résultat d'un héritage colonial ont toujours été considérés — ainsi que l'expérience l'a démontré — comme étant essentiellement des différends de nature politique. Ces différends ne sauraient donc être réglés aujourd'hui, dans de nouvelles conditions, seulement et exclusivement sur la base des principes de droit international qui étaient applicables à l'époque des conquêtes coloniales, et sur la base des traités conclus entre les puissances coloniales et ceux qui étaient ou que l'on voulait croire les représentants des populations autochtones.

47. Telles sont quelques-unes des raisons pour lesquelles ma délégation ne pourra pas donner son appui au projet de résolution présenté par le Mexique.

48. M. ABDEL WAHAB (République arabe unie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais définir l'attitude de ma délégation devant les divers projets de résolution dont nous sommes saisis et expliquer les motifs qui nous ont incités à nous inscrire parmi les auteurs du projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3.

49. Dans sa résolution 1514 (XV), l'Assemblée générale a demandé instamment que tous pouvoirs soient transférés immédiatement aux peuples des territoires dépendants et que des mesures immédiates soient prises à cet effet. Or, aucune mesure importante n'a été prise dans le sens indiqué par l'Assemblée générale dans cette résolution. Les auteurs du projet de résolution ont donc jugé nécessaire la création d'un comité spécial chargé de surveiller l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et de prêter assistance aux Etats intéressés pour l'application effective de la Déclaration. Ce comité jouirait d'un mandat étendu afin de pouvoir exécuter au mieux la tâche qui lui serait confiée. Selon l'avis de ma délégation, ce comité devrait pouvoir recevoir des pétitions et se rendre dans les territoires dépendants, pour être en mesure d'offrir une assistance selon la situation qui y règne.

50. Ma délégation a déjà exprimé son avis sur le projet de résolution [A/L.354] présenté par les Pays-Bas; elle votera contre ce projet.

51. Nous sommes persuadés que les auteurs du projet de résolution A/L.368 sont poussés par un vif désir de trouver une solution au problème de l'Irian occidental, mais ma délégation estime que la solution juste est celle que pourront accepter les deux parties au différend, celle qui résultera de négociations entre ces parties. Le projet de résolution part de l'hypothèse que les Pays-Bas ont la souveraineté sur le territoire. Or, tout le monde reconnaît que l'Indonésie a toujours contesté et continue à contester cette prétention des Pays-Bas. L'Indonésie affirme à bon droit que l'Irian occidental est partie intégrante de son territoire, et la validité de cette attitude a été reconnue ici par de nombreuses délégations, notamment celle de la République arabe unie.

52. Si nous admettons, comme il est écrit dans le projet de résolution, que la souveraineté sur l'Irian occidental fait l'objet d'un différend entre les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, il faut aider les parties intéressées à trouver une solution par voie de négociations; il ne faut pas imposer une solution à l'une des parties intéressées.

53. Pour toutes ces raisons, ma délégation espère que l'Assemblée adoptera le projet de résolution A/L.367/Rev.1, que ma délégation a eu l'honneur de présenter avec d'autres délégations.

54. Ma délégation ne peut appuyer le projet de résolution A/L.368 et votera contre lui.

55. Bien que ma délégation soit parmi les auteurs du projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, elle n'hésitera cependant pas à appuyer tout amendement ou toute autre proposition en faveur de l'abolition immédiate du colonialisme.

56. Quant au projet de résolution A/L.369, il a exactement le même objet que le projet A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3. D'ailleurs, nous n'avons pas eu le temps de l'examiner de près. Nous demandons en conséquence à la délégation mexicaine de bien vouloir reconsidérer sa position.

57. M. LAPINE (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: La délégation de l'Union soviétique se félicite vivement du fait que les pays d'Afrique et d'Asie ont appuyé sa proposition tendant à ce que l'Assemblée générale examine la question de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)] et ont présenté un projet de résolution à ce sujet [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3].

58. Il est hors de doute que le projet de résolution souscrit par 38 pays d'Asie et d'Afrique est conforme aux principes et aux objectifs de la Déclaration qui a été adoptée à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale. Nous constatons aussi avec satisfaction que les auteurs du projet de résolution ont appuyé la proposition de l'Union soviétique tendant à créer un comité spécial qui assurerait le contrôle de l'application de la Déclaration. Mais le projet de résolution africaino-asiatique présente aussi, à notre avis, certains côtés faibles que nous avons déjà signalés. Son défaut principal est de ne pas indiquer de délai pour la liquidation du colonialisme.

59. De nombreuses délégations ont relevé à juste titre, dans leurs interventions, que si la Déclaration adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session avait indiqué des délais précis pour la liquidation du colonialisme, ainsi que l'Union soviétique l'avait alors proposé, nous ne serions pas contraints aujourd'hui de constater une grande lenteur dans l'application de la Déclaration. C'est pourquoi la délégation soviétique propose de compléter le paragraphe 2 du dispositif du projet de résolution africaino-asiatique par les mots: "et proclame solennellement que 1962 sera l'année de la liquidation du colonialisme".

60. Ce paragraphe 2 serait donc rédigé de la manière suivante:

"2. Invite les Etats intéressés à agir sans plus tarder afin d'assurer scrupuleusement l'application et la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration et proclame solennellement que 1962 sera l'année de la liquidation du colonialisme".

61. Cette rédaction découle directement de l'esprit et de la lettre de la Déclaration et correspond au paragraphe 5 de son dispositif qui stipule que des mesures immédiates seront prises pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples des territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve.

62. Cette proposition est fondée sur le fait qu'il n'y a pas, à l'heure actuelle, de peuples qui ne soient pas prêts à l'indépendance. Il est nécessaire de préciser un délai pour éviter aussi que les puissances colonialistes continuent à poser, sous une forme ou une autre, des conditions et réserves de toutes sortes tendant à reculer le plus longtemps possible la liquidation des vestiges du colonialisme.

63. On a soutenu ici que l'indépendance ne pouvait être accordée qu'une fois atteint un certain "niveau d'instruction et d'expérience", une fois conclu un "accord avec l'autorité administrante", s'il existe une "stabilité politique", etc.

64. Les conditions et réserves de cette nature — et elles sont légion — sont contraires à l'esprit de la Déclaration et doivent être résolument repoussées. La fixation d'un délai pour la liquidation complète du colonialisme, ainsi que le propose l'Union soviétique, permettra d'appliquer la Déclaration sur une base solide et pratique.

65. On a essayé ici de suggérer des délais plus longs pour la liquidation du colonialisme, ou encore on s'est opposé à la fixation de délais en général, en invoquant certaines conditions ou situations particulières comme dans les cas des îles peu peuplées, etc. Il est toutefois impossible de ne pas voir l'artifice de tels arguments. La diversité de situation des différents territoires ne doit pas faire perdre de vue l'obligation la plus importante de notre époque: la liquidation du colonialisme. L'objectif principal est de permettre à l'Algérie, à l'Angola, au Kenya, au Ruanda-Urundi, à la Rhodésie du Nord, au Nyassaland, à la Nouvelle-Guinée, à la Guyane britannique et à d'autres territoires d'obtenir la liberté complète et l'indépendance au plus tard à la fin de 1962 et de pouvoir accueillir parmi nous, au cours de la prochaine session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, les représentants de ces pays comme Membres de plein droit de la famille des nations. On ne peut pas admettre que l'on substitue à une question de cette importance les problèmes concernant telle ou telle île peu peuplée. Les problèmes particuliers de ce genre seront résolus sans difficulté lorsque les questions importantes auront elles-mêmes trouvé une rapide et bonne solution.

66. Adopter la proposition sur la liquidation du colonialisme serait mettre fin à toutes les guerres coloniales. Ce serait vraiment le meilleur moyen d'arrêter le plus rapidement possible l'effusion de sang. Les sacrifices et souffrances de l'humanité seront d'autant moins nombreux et les chances de consolider la paix du monde d'autant plus grandes que le colonialisme sera plus vite liquidé.

67. Certains ont exprimé la crainte que la fixation d'un délai ne serve de prétexte aux puissances coloniales pour retarder d'un an l'octroi de l'indépendance à des pays qui auraient pu la recevoir dès maintenant. Nous voudrions expliquer que notre proposition ne doit pas provoquer de telles craintes. De nombreux pays, certes, doivent recevoir et recevront l'indépendance sans délai, c'est-à-dire avant la fin de 1962.

68. D'autres ont dit encore que le délai proposé par la délégation soviétique ne tenait pas assez compte des traits spécifiques de l'Afrique et de l'Asie et qu'il était purement formel. On a également essayé de prêter à la proposition soviétique des intentions de propagande. Nous avons expliqué notre position en détail dans nos interventions précédentes et nous avons fait justice de ces soupçons. Mais peut-être faudrait-il citer certains dirigeants africains influents à qui l'on ne peut reprocher de ne pas suffisamment connaître l'Afrique, leurs peuples et la volonté de ces peuples d'acquiescer la liberté et l'indépendance. C'est précisément parce que ces dirigeants connaissent l'Afrique qu'ils insistent pour que 1962 soit l'année de la liquidation complète du colonialisme.

69. A la Conférence de Belgrade, en septembre dernier^{1/}, le Président du Ghana, M. Nkrumah, a dit qu'il faut avertir les colonisateurs qu'ils ont à débarrasser l'Afrique de leur présence. Les machinations constitutionnelles et les tergiversations tendant à entraver l'octroi de la liberté et de l'indépendance sont vouées à l'échec. Je propose à la Conférence, a dit M. Nkrumah plus loin, de décider que les puissances colonialistes aient à quitter l'Afrique le 31 décembre 1962 au plus tard.

70. M. Nkrumah a ajouté que, si l'Organisation des Nations Unies n'agissait pas ainsi, c'est-à-dire si elle ne pouvait obtenir que sa propre déclaration sur la liquidation du colonialisme soit mise en œuvre immédiatement, la cause de la paix universelle en souffrirait gravement.

71. C'est pourquoi je voudrais souligner une fois de plus le fait que liquider le plus rapidement possible le colonialisme, ce serait non seulement accorder la liberté et les droits de l'homme à des millions de personnes opprimées, mais aussi créer des conditions propices à la consolidation de la paix.

72. Le colonialisme est synonyme de guerre et de terreur. Il est la cause constante de la tension internationale. Toute tentative de retarder la liquidation des vestiges du colonialisme implique le danger de nouvelles crises et conflits militaires, de nouvelles victimes et de nouveaux malheurs. C'est pourquoi la délégation soviétique estime indispensable de fixer un délai précis — à savoir l'année 1962 — pour l'application de la Déclaration.

73. La délégation soviétique estime qu'il est également nécessaire de compléter le paragraphe 4 du dispositif du projet de résolution africano-asiatique. A notre avis, le paragraphe où le comité spécial est prié d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale en formulant des suggestions et des recommandations doit être précisé de la manière suivante:

"de formuler des suggestions et des recommandations quant à la mise en œuvre immédiate et à l'achèvement de l'exécution de la Déclaration, et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-septième session".

74. Nous estimons que cette précision donnerait au mandat du comité spécial un caractère plus concret qui correspondrait aux objectifs et aux principes de la Déclaration. Les termes que nous voudrions ajouter au paragraphe 4 de la résolution africano-asiatique découlent directement du préambule de cette résolution et des objectifs que ses auteurs se sont fixés.

75. Nous espérons que notre amendement ne soulèvera pas d'objections et sera adopté par les délégations.

76. Je voudrais dire deux mots à propos des interventions tardives des représentants du Portugal et de la République sud-africaine.

77. Vous vous rappelez, certes, qu'au cours des discussions générales la délégation des Etats-Unis s'est déjà efforcée de faire prendre aux débats sur certaines questions et une tournure anticommuniste et le ton de la "guerre froide". Mais ces tentatives ont échoué. Malgré l'insistance du représentant des Etats-Unis, personne n'a voulu s'engager sur un terrain aussi mauvais et aussi ingrat. Les Etats-Unis en ont été réduits à se charger seuls de cette pénible besogne. Mais voici qu'après nombre d'interventions malheureuses qui ont suscité l'opposition et n'ont recueilli aucune sympathie il est même paru un document plein de calomnies, de colère et de ces sottises qui accompagnent généralement la colère.

^{1/} Tenue du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

78. Je veux parler des "observations" sur le mémorandum soviétique que le représentant des Etats-Unis a fait distribuer ici [A/4985]. Il faut reconnaître, par pure objectivité, que la délégation des Etats-Unis a remporté aujourd'hui un grand succès puisque son document a été appuyé par les délégations du Portugal et de la République sud-africaine. C'est là un fait fort significatif qui caractérise peut-être mieux ce document et les efforts déployés pour que notre discussion adopte le ton de la "guerre froide".

79. Les interventions des représentants du Portugal et de la République sud-africaine n'ont fait que souligner la communauté d'esprit qui lie les colonisateurs et la volonté des Etats-Unis d'assumer désormais la direction idéologique du colonialisme.

80. Vous savez que le discours du Ministre des affaires étrangères de la République sud-africaine a été censuré par l'Assemblée générale. L'intervention qu'a faite aujourd'hui le représentant de cette — si l'on peut dire — "république" mérite de l'être également. Les représentants des Etats-Unis eux-mêmes sentent probablement que leur document a une fâcheuse odeur, car autrement ils ne l'auraient pas ainsi fait passer à la sauvette une fois terminée la discussion générale.

81. Nous avons déjà eu l'occasion de réagir à de semblables tentatives des Etats-Unis pour détourner l'attention de l'Assemblée générale de la discussion sur la liquidation du colonialisme. Le représentant de la Tchécoslovaquie dans son intervention et celui de la Pologne dans sa lettre au Président de l'Assemblée [A/4989] ont dignement répliqué à ces tentatives. Nous aurons nous-mêmes l'occasion de répondre d'une façon appropriée aux Etats-Unis qui essayent de répandre de nouveau leurs absurdes et calomnieuses élucubrations. Des manœuvres de ce genre avaient eu lieu déjà l'an dernier et les nouvelles n'auront pas plus de succès que les précédentes.

82. Nous voudrions dire encore deux mots pour préciser la position de la délégation soviétique au sujet de certains projets de résolution.

83. Nous souscrivons aux idées défendues dans le projet de résolution présenté par l'Inde et d'autres pays [A/L.367/Rev.1] au sujet des négociations entre l'Indonésie et les Pays-Bas. Nous avons déjà dit que l'Union soviétique soutient pleinement les revendications légitimes de l'Indonésie sur l'Irian occidental.

84. Nous prendrons position contre le projet de résolution du Mexique [A/L.369] qui, comme on l'a fait remarquer ici à juste titre, affaiblirait la Déclaration. De toute évidence, les auteurs de ce projet n'ont pas disposé du temps nécessaire pour réfléchir suffisamment à la rédaction de leur texte et ce n'est pas par hasard que le représentant des Pays-Bas et les représentants de certains pays colonialistes, entre autres les Etats-Unis, ont appuyé avec tant d'empressement ce projet de résolution. Pour les mêmes raisons, nous ne pourrions pas appuyer le projet de résolution du groupe de Brazzaville [A/L.368].

85. Nous voudrions souligner de nouveau que nous voterons contre le projet de résolution de la Nigéria

[A/L.357 et Add.1] pour les raisons qui ont été exposées en détail dans les interventions précédentes de la délégation soviétique.

86. Nous voterons pour le projet de résolution du groupe africano-asiatique portant sur le sujet général de la discussion de l'Assemblée, à savoir la situation en ce qui concerne l'application et la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

87. M. FLORES AVENDAÑO (Guatemala) [traduit de l'espagnol]: A la séance du 17 novembre [1057ème séance], la délégation du Guatemala a défini la position de son gouvernement devant l'importante question du colonialisme, dans la discussion des points 22 et 88 de l'ordre du jour, et a réaffirmé alors l'enthousiasme avec lequel elle avait voté pour la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale. Je dois rappeler cependant que la délégation du Guatemala a déclaré à cette occasion que "le Guatemala, à la Conférence de San Francisco, a formulé d'expresses réserves à l'égard de ses droits lorsque nous avons discuté la question du régime international de tutelle ou les rapports soumis par les puissances chargées de l'administration des territoires non autonomes. Ces réserves, nous les avons réaffirmées devant l'Assemblée générale, au Conseil de tutelle et dans les diverses commissions des Nations Unies chaque fois que cela est devenu nécessaire". A cette occasion, la délégation du Guatemala a déclaré que "le projet de résolution que nous venons d'adopter ne saurait en rien affecter les territoires faisant l'objet de litiges ou de revendications".

88. Avec de tels précédents et ayant examiné les divers projets de résolution qui vont être bientôt mis aux voix, ma délégation se prononce comme suit. Elle votera pour le projet de résolution présenté par 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3], car elle estime que ce projet répond au juste désir qu'éprouve l'Assemblée d'assurer l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) en édictant toute mesure justifiée et recommandable pour accélérer le processus de la liquidation du colonialisme; ce projet de résolution n'a pas les inconvénients signalés par les représentants qui ont fait l'analyse des autres projets de résolution et qui y ont relevé de graves contradictions et des mesures difficilement applicables en pratique. Toutefois, en votant pour ledit projet de résolution, ma délégation répète une fois de plus qu'une telle résolution ne pourra en rien affecter les légitimes droits de souveraineté que le Guatemala ne cesse de revendiquer depuis plus de 100 ans sur le territoire guatémalien de Belize, illégalement occupé par une puissance colonialiste.

89. Quant au projet de résolution présenté par la délégation du Mexique [A/L.369], ma délégation apprécie l'esprit qui l'anime, mais elle aura le regret de voter contre; elle estime que le dispositif vise certains points qui, d'après la teneur des principes de la Charte de San Francisco, ne sont pas de la compétence de l'Assemblée.

90. M. GEBRE-EGZY (Ethiopie) [traduit de l'anglais]: J'ai l'honneur de monter à cette tribune pour expliquer les votes de la délégation éthiopienne.

91. Nos vues sur le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme ont été longuement exposées le 20 novembre 1961 [1058ème séance]. Ma délégation est l'un des auteurs du projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3. Il se trouve que ce projet a l'appui du plus grand nombre d'Etats Membres parce qu'il est présenté par le plus grand nombre de délégations. En d'autres termes, selon la formule de Jeremy Bentham, ce projet de résolution est celui qu'il faut adopter parce que c'est celui dont l'adoption fera le plus plaisir au plus grand nombre de délégations.

92. Pour parler sérieusement, nous pensons qu'après l'adoption de ce projet de résolution il sera inutile de voter sur aucun autre des projets de résolution. Ma délégation a beaucoup travaillé, avec d'autres délégations amies, à l'élaboration de ce projet. Nous avons beaucoup réfléchi et nous avons pris beaucoup de précautions pour rendre ce texte aussi acceptable que possible, sans jamais oublier l'essentiel du problème, c'est-à-dire le fait qu'il faut prendre des mesures immédiates pour liquider le colonialisme de la façon la plus pratique.

93. Au paragraphe 3 du dispositif de ce projet de résolution, il est proposé de créer un comité spécial de 17 membres, chargé d'examiner loyalement l'application et la mise en œuvre de la déclaration historique sur le colonialisme. Si tout s'arrange assez bien pour que tous les territoires dépendants obtiennent leur indépendance avant la dix-septième session, ce sera parfait. Le comité spécial en rendra compte à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-septième session. Si, au contraire, les colonialistes irréductibles essaient de retarder ce mouvement irrésistible et irréversible vers la libération, s'ils vont à contre-courant de ce mouvement de l'histoire, alors le comité spécial de 17 membres formulera des suggestions et recommandations appropriées sur les moyens de contrecarrer cet état de choses. De plus, le projet de résolution autorise le comité spécial de 17 membres à se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège de l'Organisation des Nations Unies lorsque cela pourrait être nécessaire, en consultation avec les autorités compétentes. Tous les Etats Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, notamment ceux qui administrent des territoires dépendants, sont invités à assurer au comité leur coopération la plus complète.

94. Ma délégation a exposé, voici une semaine, qu'on atteindrait certainement les objectifs du point 22, a, de l'ordre du jour si l'on créait ce comité spécial. Bien qu'il y ait en Afrique trois fois plus de peuples dépendants que dans toutes les autres parties du monde, je rappellerai respectueusement à l'Assemblée que nous menons aujourd'hui dans le monde entier une croisade contre le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Le comité spécial de 17 membres sera notre instrument pour la liquidation du colonialisme.

95. Ma délégation estime en conséquence qu'il n'est pas nécessaire d'adopter le projet de résolution de la Nigéria, figurant dans le document A/L.357 et Add.1. Nous sommes convaincus que la délégation de la Nigéria n'avait que de bonnes intentions en présentant ce projet de résolution. Toutefois, en tenant compte des diverses observations qui ont été faites au nom de ma délégation, je me permettrai de demander formellement à la délégation de la Nigéria de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution soit mis aux voix maintenant. J'espère que dans le contexte de l'unité africaine mes amis de la Nigéria pourront accéder à cet appel.

96. Ma délégation désire aussi saisir cette occasion pour exprimer ses très vifs remerciements à la délégation de l'Union soviétique pour ses efforts en faveur de la libération des peuples coloniaux. Néanmoins, les points visés par le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique, figurant dans le document A/L.355, sont déjà visés par notre propre projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3]. Ma délégation demande donc à la délégation de l'Union soviétique de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution soit mis aux voix.

97. Nous avons eu l'occasion d'exprimer notre opinion sur le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, figurant dans le document A/L.354. Je n'entrerai pas dans les détails. Je dirai simplement que nous sommes obligés de voter contre lui. Il faut toutefois rappeler que notre délégation a récemment déclaré devant l'Assemblée générale que d'après nous "l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit faire appel tant aux Pays-Bas qu'à l'Indonésie pour qu'ils, entament immédiatement des négociations en vue de régler leur différend relatif à l'Irian occidental" [1058ème séance, par. 305]. Nous estimons que c'est le moyen qui permettra de régler la question de la manière la plus amicale et, en même temps, nous sommes convaincus que cette formule sera acceptable pour les Pays-Bas comme pour l'Indonésie. C'est pourquoi ma délégation votera pour le projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.367/Rev.1.

98. Mon pays entretient des relations très cordiales et très amicales avec le Mexique et avec la délégation mexicaine. Le projet de résolution du Mexique [A/L.369] contient certaines propositions intéressantes; cependant, il nous semble que notre projet de résolution exprime déjà la substance du projet de résolution du Mexique. Je demanderai donc respectueusement à la délégation mexicaine de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution soit mis aux voix. Je tiens à exprimer au Mexique et à sa délégation notre reconnaissance et notre admiration pour avoir exprimé avec tant de réalisme et de vigueur leur opposition au colonialisme.

99. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.368, ma délégation estime que le projet de l'Inde traite la question comme il convient. Nous avons beaucoup de respect et de reconnaissance pour les efforts de nos collègues qui ont présenté le projet de résolution A/L.368. A notre grand regret, notre position nous oblige à voter contre lui.

100. Avant de terminer, je voudrais pour la dernière fois lancer un appel à toutes les délégations en leur demandant de voter pour le projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3; nous mettons en ce texte toute notre confiance et tous nos espoirs et nous comptons qu'il sera l'instrument de la liquidation totale du colonialisme.

101. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la Nigéria pour une motion d'ordre.

102. M. NGILERUMA (Nigéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je désire profiter de l'occasion qui m'est offerte pour remercier toutes les délégations qui ont donné leur appui au projet de résolution figurant dans le document A/L.357 et Add.1 présenté au titre du point 22 de l'ordre du jour, intitulé "Assistance à l'Afrique, a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance". Ce projet de résolution a pour auteurs ma délégation et la délégation du Libéria.

103. Je dois également affirmer que ma délégation reconnaît la sincérité et l'honnêteté de la plupart des délégations qui ont exprimé des doutes et des craintes au sujet de la disposition fixant au 1er décembre 1970 la date limite à laquelle tout le continent africain devra être libéré du colonialisme.

104. Dans l'intérêt de l'unité et de la solidarité africaines, j'ai le plaisir d'annoncer que, pour répondre à l'appel que le représentant de l'Ethiopie vient de nous adresser, nous n'insisterons pas pour que notre projet de résolution soit mis aux voix maintenant. Le Gouvernement nigérien espère que les chefs de gouvernement de pays d'Afrique qui doivent se réunir à Lagos, en Nigéria, tout au début de l'année 1962, réussiront à concilier leurs vues et à adopter une position commune que nous présenterons de concert à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale.

105. En conséquence, ma délégation demande formellement que le point 22 de l'ordre du jour, intitulé "Assistance à l'Afrique, a) Programme des Nations Unies pour l'indépendance", ainsi que notre projet de résolution sur ce point, soit renvoyé à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale pour suite de la discussion et pour décision.

106. Ma délégation votera naturellement pour le projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, dont nous avons l'honneur d'être signataires avec d'autres pays d'Afrique et d'Asie. Nous espérons qu'il sera voté unanimement par l'Assemblée.

107. Ma délégation doit remercier la délégation de l'Union soviétique de l'intérêt qu'elle a montré et des initiatives qu'elle a prises pour la liquidation rapide des derniers vestiges du colonialisme. Cependant, ma délégation croit devoir ajouter que c'est nous, et par "nous" j'entends les pays d'Afrique et d'Asie, que c'est nous, dis-je, qui avons porté le hât du colonialisme, qui savons le mieux où il blesse. Nous estimons que notre projet de résolution est construit avec soin et prudemment équilibré, et qu'il répond le mieux à nos intentions. J'adresse donc sincèrement un appel à l'URSS en lui demandant de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution [A/L.355] ni ses amendements [A/L.370] au projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3 soient mis aux voix.

108. Ma délégation est également très sensible à la bonne volonté et aux bonnes intentions de la délégation mexicaine. Là encore, nous lançons un appel en faveur de la solidarité et nous demandons au Mexique de ne pas insister pour faire mettre aux voix son projet de résolution [A/L.369].

109. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Union soviétique pour une motion d'ordre.

110. M. LAPINE (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique et le projet de résolution des pays africano-asiatiques [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] partant d'un même principe, nous voterons en faveur de ce dernier projet de résolution souscrit par 38 pays. Nous n'y avons apporté que des amendements peu importants [A/L.370] qui peuvent être acceptés sans provoquer quelque dissidence ou divergence que ce soit. Bien plus, dans un esprit de coopération, nous sommes prêts à nous rallier aux appels du représentant de l'Ethiopie et du représentant de la Nigéria et nous n'insisterons pas pour que l'on mette aux voix notre propre projet de résolution.

111. Nous espérons que les autres délégations feront également preuve de bonne volonté et de bonnes intentions, d'abord pour appuyer nos amendements et ensuite — je m'adresse surtout aux Pays-Bas, au Mexique et au groupe de Brazzaville — pour retirer leurs projets de résolution afin que nous puissions adopter à l'unanimité le projet de résolution des pays africano-asiatiques et appuyer le projet de résolution de l'Inde [A/L.367/Rev.1].

112. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne maintenant la parole aux deux orateurs qui ont demandé à expliquer leur vote avant le scrutin.

113. M. GALLIN-DOUATHE (République centrafricaine): Si la délégation de la République centrafricaine porte, comme il se doit, un intérêt particulier aux questions se rapportant à la libération des dernières colonies d'Afrique, elle ne laisse pas pour autant de suivre avec un vif intérêt l'évolution de la décolonisation dans les autres parties du monde. Mon pays estime en effet qu'il s'agit là d'une question qui revêt, où qu'elle se pose, une importance primordiale. Elle comprend une série de problèmes locaux dont la solution contribuera puissamment à détendre l'atmosphère dans laquelle nous travaillons. Je crois que l'Organisation pourra accueillir d'un grand soulagement la disparition, de son ordre du jour, de la dernière affaire coloniale.

114. En attendant ce moment, nous devons travailler sans relâche à trouver et à imposer pour ce genre de questions des règlements conformes à l'esprit de la Charte. Il faut aussi que l'Organisation intervienne là où sa protection est nécessaire pour permettre à des populations sur le point d'être émancipées d'exprimer librement leurs vœux.

115. C'est pourquoi mon pays considère avec faveur le plan que M. Luns a exposé le 26 septembre 1961 à la tribune de l'Assemblée générale [1018ème séance]. Mon gouvernement constate, en effet, que le projet néerlandais aura pour résultat immédiat, s'il est adopté, de placer l'administration et le développement de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise sous la surveillance active des Nations Unies. Par la suite, les Pays-Bas seraient disposés à transférer leurs pouvoirs actuels à un organisme international créé et dirigé par les Nations Unies, sous l'autorité duquel la population serait préparée à l'exercice rapide du droit d'autodétermination. Cette formule me paraît convenir fort bien à un territoire dont l'évolution politique est encore peu avancée. Elle est de nature à lui éviter les épreuves et les convulsions dont certaines régions du continent africain ont été et sont encore affectées.

116. En revanche, ma délégation ne peut donner son adhésion à la thèse du représentant de l'Indonésie, malgré toute sa sympathie pour ce pays. L'un des principaux arguments donnés à l'appui de cette thèse par M. Subandrio, dans son intervention devant l'Assemblée générale [1050ème séance], est que, lorsqu'un territoire colonisé accède à l'indépendance, sa souveraineté nouvelle doit s'exercer dans les limites où s'étendait la souveraineté coloniale. Il s'agit là d'un principe qui est sans doute juste, dans la plupart des cas, mais qu'il convient de tempérer lorsqu'on se trouve en présence de territoires dont les populations ne sont pas unies par des liens raciaux et culturels ou par des croyances communes, ce qui est le cas de l'Indonésie et de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise.

117. Que les habitants de cette colonie veuillent devenir indonésiens, mon gouvernement ne demande qu'à le croire et verrait avec satisfaction l'Irian occidental unir son destin à celui des grandes îles de l'Ouest placées sous l'autorité du Gouvernement de Djakarta. S'il en est ainsi, une libre consultation populaire, fondée sur le droit à l'autodétermination des populations intéressées, ne manquera pas de l'établir clairement, et l'une des tâches de l'organisme de contrôle des Nations Unies prévue pour la première période d'application du plan ne sera-t-elle pas de neutraliser cet esprit anti-indonésien qui préoccupe tant le Gouvernement de Djakarta?

118. Voilà les raisons pour lesquelles ma délégation s'est proposé, à l'origine, de donner sa voix au projet de résolution présenté par les Pays-Bas [A/L.354]. Dans notre esprit, son adoption aurait confirmé l'universalité de ce principe de l'autodétermination auquel le représentant de l'Indonésie et moi-même devons l'honneur de siéger ici.

119. Cependant, à la réflexion et après avoir entendu les énergiques interventions de la délégation indonésienne, les représentants d'un certain nombre de pays africains, dont le mien, se sont demandé si le droit à l'autodétermination, accordé dans un tel contexte politique, ne comportait pas des risques assez grands pour que nous tentions un ultime effort de conciliation.

120. Je ne veux nullement dire par là que les arguments de l'Indonésie m'aient amené à douter des principes qui m'avaient incliné à soutenir le plan de M. Luns, mais simplement que l'inimitié d'un puissant voisin ne me semble pas un heureux don de joyeux avènement à faire à une jeune nation qui devient maîtresse de ses destinées.

121. C'est pourquoi ma délégation souhaite qu'un ultime effort soit entrepris, avec le concours du Secrétaire général, par les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie, pour arriver, avant le 1er mars 1962, à une solution acceptable par les deux parties et ne préjugant en rien du droit de la population à décider en dernier ressort du statut du territoire.

122. Ma délégation votera donc en faveur du projet de résolution A/L.368, dont elle demande qu'il soit mis aux voix en priorité.

123. D'autre part, si ma délégation a noté avec intérêt l'esprit de conciliation qui anime le projet A/L.367/Rev.1, présenté à l'origine par l'Inde, il n'en demeure pas moins qu'elle regrette que ce projet ne mentionne pas le principe de l'autodétermination. En outre, comme les Pays-Bas et l'Indonésie négocient sans résultat depuis plus de 10 ans sur le sort de la Nouvelle-Guinée néerlandaise, il convient désormais, pour toute nouvelle tentative de conciliation, de fixer une date limite.

124. Je parlerai pour finir, et très brièvement, de deux autres projets de résolution présentés à l'Assemblée générale, et tout d'abord du projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3. Un grand nombre de délégations ont participé à sa rédaction et parmi elles se trouvent des délégations de pays qui ont été des territoires coloniaux, notamment en Afrique. Je suis d'autant plus heureux de constater que la décolonisation y est traitée à la fois avec l'énergie et la hauteur de vues que paraît réclamer cette importante question. Aussi est-ce très volontiers que la République centrafricaine donne sa voix à ce texte qui lui paraît constituer une utile contribution à la solution de notre problème.

125. Enfin ma délégation s'abstiendra lors du vote sur le projet de résolution présenté par le Mexique

[A/L.369], car elle n'a pas eu le temps matériel d'examiner ce projet avec tout le soin qu'il requiert.

126. M. URQUIA (Salvador) [traduit de l'espagnol]: L'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV) par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session a parfaitement défini, on peut le dire, la position du monde devant l'existence de territoires qui demeurent encore aujourd'hui sous domination étrangère, soit à titre de colonies, soit à titre de territoires administrés selon le régime international de tutelle institué par la Charte des Nations Unies.

127. Ma délégation est une de celles qui ont voté avec le plus d'enthousiasme en faveur de ladite résolution, bien qu'à son avis elle présente des points un peu exagérés et peut-être trop ambitieux. La preuve en est que nous nous trouvons aujourd'hui devant de nombreux projets de résolution relatifs à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Par bonheur, les décisions qui ont été annoncées du haut de cette tribune il y a quelques instants par le représentant de la Nigéria, puis par le représentant de l'Union soviétique, simplifient un peu la tâche de l'Assemblée générale pour les votes auxquels elle procédera dans quelques instants sur ces projets de résolution; on peut en effet considérer à toutes fins utiles que le projet de résolution de l'Union soviétique [A/L.355] et le projet de résolution de la Nigéria [A/L.357] ont été retirés, puisque leurs auteurs n'insistent pas pour qu'ils soient mis aux voix.

128. Dans ces conditions, nous avons devant nous deux groupes de projets de résolution. Le premier groupe de projets de résolution, de caractère général, dirai-je, concerne la question de l'application de la résolution relative à l'indépendance des territoires coloniaux; à ce groupe appartiennent le projet de résolution présenté par 38 pays d'Asie et d'Afrique [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3], auquel l'Union soviétique a proposé des amendements [A/L.370], et le projet de résolution du Mexique [A/L.369]. L'autre groupe de projets de résolution, de caractère particulier, concerne l'un des territoires considérés comme non autonomes, celui de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, appelée aussi l'Irian occidental; à ce groupe appartiennent trois projets de résolution: celui des Pays-Bas [A/L.354], celui de la Bolivie et de sept autres pays [A/L.367/Rev.1], celui de la Haute-Volta et de 12 autres pays d'Afrique [A/L.368].

129. Sur les deux premiers projets de résolution, celui des 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie et celui du Mexique, je tiens à dire que ma délégation croit que tous deux contiennent des éléments intéressants que l'on pourrait reprendre dans une résolution mieux structurée, réunissant une partie de l'un et une partie de l'autre.

130. Le projet de résolution des pays d'Afrique et d'Asie a un caractère plus général, mais il ne nous paraît pas si bien coordonné que le projet de résolution du Mexique, même si ce dernier présente lui aussi certains inconvénients que je ne crois pas nécessaire de mentionner à ce point du débat, alors que nous en sommes aux explications de vote; il est regrettable que tous les représentants soient animés d'une telle hâte qui nous pousse à vouloir voter aujourd'hui même sur ces projets de résolution, bien que l'un d'eux, celui du Mexique, n'ait été présenté, me semble-t-il, que vendredi dernier et n'ait pas pu être étudié à fond par toutes les délégations.

131. Si cela avait été possible, ma délégation aurait proposé la constitution d'un groupe de travail composé des auteurs de ces projets de résolution et chargé d'examiner si l'on ne pourrait tirer de ces textes un projet de résolution unique, qui puisse satisfaire les aspirations de toute l'Assemblée. Nous estimons cependant qu'une proposition de ce genre risquerait d'être considérée comme tardive à ce moment et nous ne faisons donc pas de proposition formelle à cet effet.

132. Entre ces projets de caractère général et les projets de caractère particulier, notamment le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, on constate aussi un certain lien, que nous aimerions signaler ici: en effet, dans leur projet de résolution, les Pays-Bas proposent de transférer à l'Organisation des Nations Unies le territoire de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale ou de l'Irian occidental; or, le projet de résolution du Mexique renferme une disposition en vertu de laquelle de tels territoires pourraient être placés sous l'administration conjointe des Nations Unies sans aucun doute dans le cadre du régime international de tutelle organisé aux Chapitres XII et XIII de la Charte.

133. De plus, le projet de résolution du Mexique contient une déclaration qui rendrait plus acceptable, si l'on peut dire, l'idée fondamentale qui est à la base du projet de résolution des Pays-Bas. C'est la déclaration qui figure au paragraphe 2 du dispositif et où il est dit que l'Assemblée décide "de proclamer solennellement que, pour ce qui est de territoires au sujet desquels il existe un différend en ce qui concerne le titulaire de la souveraineté, le fait de les placer temporairement sous la tutelle des Nations Unies ne préjuge ni leur sort final ni les droits que d'autres Etats prétendent avoir sur eux et ne limite pas le droit de la population desdits territoires à la libre détermination". Si un texte semblable pouvait figurer dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, je crois qu'il permettrait de dissiper certaines craintes que manifeste spécialement, comme il est naturel, la délégation de l'Indonésie: si cette partie de l'île de la Nouvelle-Guinée était transférée, comme il est proposé dans le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas, à une commission ou autorité internationale désignée par les Nations Unies, on pourrait croire que la voie légale d'une revendication sur ce territoire serait désormais interdite à l'Indonésie.

134. Nous savons tous que ce territoire a un statut spécial en vertu des dispositions de la charte de transfert de la souveraineté, et qui date du moment où, en 1949, les Pays-Bas ont reconnu solennellement l'indépendance de l'Indonésie au cours d'une conférence de la "table ronde" réunie sous les auspices des Nations Unies. D'autre part, c'est un fait qu'il existe actuellement une contestation encore non résolue aujourd'hui, malgré tous les efforts déployés jusqu'à maintenant par l'Assemblée générale pour la recherche d'une solution.

135. Il est regrettable aussi qu'à ce point du débat il ne paraisse plus possible de chercher à établir un ajustement entre ces projets de résolution, car, je le répète, entre le projet de résolution des Pays-Bas et une partie du projet de résolution du Mexique, ma délégation trouve une sorte de lien qui pourrait contribuer nettement à faciliter la compréhension de ces questions et la conclusion d'un accord général.

136. Les choses se sont simplifiées du fait que deux projets de résolution ont été pratiquement retirés; le vote en sera évidemment plus facile; un problème subsiste cependant: si tous ces projets de résolution sont adoptés, nous nous trouverons devant plusieurs commissions ou comités dont les mandats ne s'harmoniseront pas toujours entre eux et pourront même être incompatibles, ce qui nuirait beaucoup à l'intérêt de leurs travaux et à la recherche de l'objectif visé. Cet objectif, comme nous le savons tous, est d'arriver dans un délai relativement bref — mais non aussi bref que certains paraissent le désirer — à la pleine indépendance de territoires qui sont actuellement sous tutelle ou qui sont simplement des colonies ou territoires non autonomes et dont beaucoup sont protégés par les dispositions du Chapitre XI de la Charte.

137. J'estime qu'il y aurait peut-être une certaine exagération à proclamer que l'année 1962 sera l'année de la liquidation du colonialisme, comme le voudrait un des amendements de l'Union soviétique [A/L.370]. Il est indéniable en effet que les populations de ces territoires ne sont pas toutes en état d'accéder à la pleine autonomie, encore moins à la pleine indépendance. Le projet de résolution du Mexique contient à ce sujet des considérations et des dispositions qui nous semblent d'une valeur inappréciable et qui, à notre grand regret, ne sont pas entrées en ligne de compte à l'heure de la décision.

138. On dirait que dans l'esprit de certaines délégations les populations de tous ces territoires sont identiques et vivent dans les mêmes conditions; indiscutablement, il n'en est rien. On se trompe si l'on croit à cette uniformité. De même que les médecins affirment qu'il n'y a pas de maladies sans malades, nous pourrions dire qu'il n'y a pas de colonialisme sans colonies, puisque chacune des colonies est un cas particulier. Voilà ce que nous apprécions le plus dans le projet de résolution du Mexique: l'idée de constituer un comité spécial qui étudierait séparément chaque cas particulier et ferait rapport sur chacun d'eux, afin que l'Assemblée générale soit ainsi en mesure de se prononcer et que les Etats intéressés puissent prendre les dispositions qui s'imposent.

139. Ces idées serviront de guide à la délégation de mon pays quand nous voterons sur les projets de résolution en discussion. Nous ignorons s'ils seront tous mis aux voix. Nous regretterions beaucoup que le projet de résolution du Mexique ne le soit pas, mais nous pensons que, si le projet de résolution des 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie est adopté, il sera très difficile à l'Assemblée d'adopter aussi le projet de résolution du Mexique, parce qu'il risquerait peut-être d'y avoir incompatibilité, jusqu'à un certain point, entre deux résolutions de l'Assemblée générale. C'est pourquoi, à notre grand regret, nous devons nous joindre aux délégations qui ont demandé à la délégation du Mexique de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution soit mis aux voix, en supposant que l'Assemblée adopte d'abord le projet de résolution des 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie, qui bénéficie de la priorité du point de vue chronologique. Si le projet de résolution des 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie est adopté comme nous pensons qu'il le sera — nous le souhaitons et nous voterons en sa faveur —, je crois qu'il serait préférable de ne pas mettre aux voix le projet de résolution du Mexique.

140. Le PRESIDENT: Nous en avons terminé avec les explications de vote. Avant de passer au scrutin, je crois utile de faire le point de la situation.

141. A la suite de l'appel lancé par certaines délégations, le représentant de l'URSS a déclaré que sa délégation n'insisterait pas pour que son projet de résolution [A/L.355] soit mis aux voix; comme le représentant de la Nigéria a annoncé que sa délégation n'insisterait pas non plus pour que l'on vote sur son projet de résolution [A/L.357 et Add.1], ces deux projets ne seront pas mis aux voix. En conséquence, l'Assemblée n'aura pas à se prononcer au sujet du point 22, a, de l'ordre du jour, auquel se rapportait le seul projet de résolution de la Nigéria, et devra donc voter uniquement sur les propositions relatives au point 88.

142. En outre, je dois signaler que l'on vient de soumettre un amendement [A/L.371] au projet de résolution A/L.367/Rev.1, tendant à ajouter, à la fin du paragraphe 1 de ce projet, le membre de phrase suivant: "et notamment la volonté des populations et leur droit à disposer d'elles-mêmes". Le texte de cet amendement va être distribué immédiatement.

143. J'estime qu'il serait raisonnable que l'Assemblée vote d'abord sur les projets de résolution de caractère général et ensuite sur les projets de caractère particulier, ceux qui touchent la question de la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, tout en respectant pour chaque série de projets l'ordre dans lequel ils ont été présentés.

144. Donc — et je me résume — je mettrai d'abord aux voix les propositions appartenant au premier groupe, c'est-à-dire les amendements [A/L.370] au projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, puis ce projet lui-même, et le projet de résolution A/L.369. J'inviterai ensuite l'Assemblée à se prononcer sur les propositions du second groupe: le projet de résolution A/L.354, l'amendement [A/L.371] au projet de résolution A/L.367/Rev.1, puis ce projet lui-même, et le projet de résolution A/L.368; une demande de vote en priorité ayant été formulée pour ce dernier projet, je consulterai l'Assemblée à ce sujet au moment voulu.

145. Si personne ne soulève d'objection, je considérerai que l'Assemblée accepte cette procédure.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

146. Le PRÉSIDENT: Avant de procéder au vote, je rappelle, afin d'éviter toute équivoque, que la majorité requise pour l'adoption des diverses propositions dont nous sommes saisis est celle des deux tiers, conformément à tous les précédents.

147. J'invite l'Assemblée à se prononcer sur les amendements [A/L.370] que l'URSS a proposé d'apporter au projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3. Je mets d'abord aux voix le premier amendement. On a demandé le vote par appel nominal.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

Le vote commence par l'Afrique du Sud, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, Yougoslavie, Albanie, Bulgarie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Congo (Léopoldville), Cuba, Tchécoslovaquie, Ghana, Guinée, Hongrie, Irak, Mali, Mongolie, Maroc, Pologne, Roumanie.

Votent contre: Afrique du Sud, Espagne, Suède, Thaïlande, Tunisie, Turquie, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, États-Unis d'Amérique, Uruguay, Venezuela, Argentine, Australie, Belgique, Bolivie, Brésil, Canada, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Costa Rica, Danemark, République Dominicaine, Equateur, Salvador, Fédération de Malaisie, France, Grèce, Guatemala, Haïti, Islande, Iran, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Japon, Luxembourg, Mexique, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Norvège, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Pérou, Philippines.

S'abstiennent: Soudan, Togo, Haute-Volta, Yémen, Afghanistan, Autriche, Birmanie, Cambodge, Cameroun, République centrafricaine, Ceylan, Tchad, Congo (Brazzaville), Chypre, Dahomey, Ethiopie, Finlande, Gabon, Inde, Indonésie, Côte-d'Ivoire, Jordanie, Laos, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Madagascar, Mauritanie, Népal, Niger, Nigéria, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Somalie.

Le Portugal ne participe pas au vote.

Par 46 voix contre 19, avec 36 abstentions, le premier amendement est rejeté.

148. Le PRÉSIDENT: J'invite l'Assemblée à se prononcer sur le second amendement soumis par l'URSS.

Par 36 voix contre 22, avec 35 abstentions, le second amendement est rejeté.

149. Le PRÉSIDENT: Je mets aux voix le projet de résolution [A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3] présenté par 38 pays. On a demandé le vote par appel nominal.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par l'Arabie Saoudite, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Somalie, Soudan, Suède, Syrie, Thaïlande, Togo, Tunisie, Turquie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, États-Unis d'Amérique, Haute-Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Argentine, Australie, Autriche, Belgique, Bolivie, Brésil, Bulgarie, Birmanie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cambodge, Cameroun, Canada, République centrafricaine, Ceylan, Tchad, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (Léopoldville), Costa Rica, Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, Danemark, République Dominicaine, Equateur, Salvador, Ethiopie, Fédération de Malaisie, Finlande, Gabon, Ghana, Grèce, Guatemala, Guinée, Haïti, Hongrie, Islande, Inde, Indonésie, Iran, Irak, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Côte-d'Ivoire, Japon, Jordanie, Laos, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigéria, Norvège, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Pérou, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie.

Votent contre: néant.

S'abstiennent: Afrique du Sud, Espagne, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, France.

Le Portugal ne participe pas au vote.

Par 97 voix contre zéro, avec 4 abstentions, le projet de résolution est adopté.

150. Le PRÉSIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Inde pour une motion d'ordre portant sur la procédure du scrutin, conformément à l'article 90 du règlement intérieur.

151. M. JHA (Inde) [traduit de l'anglais]: Nous venons de procéder au vote sur le projet de résolution présenté par des Etats Membres d'Afrique et d'Asie. Le vote de ce projet de résolution a été impressionnant: il a été acquis à l'unanimité, à l'exception de quatre abstentions. Considérant le résultat de ce vote massif, je me suis permis de demander la parole pour adresser un appel à la délégation du Mexique et lui demander de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution [A/L.369] soit mis aux voix. Comme je l'ai déjà dit dans ma déclaration de cet après-midi [1065ème séance], la sincérité des motifs qui animent la délégation du Mexique et les objectifs qu'elle a visés en déposant ce projet de résolution devant l'Assemblée générale sont bien dans la ligne de la contribution remarquable que le Mexique a déjà apportée à la cause de la liberté des peuples dépendants et, je dirai même, dans la ligne du grand libéralisme dont il a fait preuve dans son attitude aux Nations Unies. J'ai cependant cru devoir faire observer alors que ce projet de résolution contenait de nombreux points de détail et nous estimons qu'au point où nous en sommes le mieux que puisse faire l'Assemblée serait de se contenter de la résolution qu'elle vient d'adopter.

152. Si le projet de résolution du Mexique n'est pas mis aux voix et s'il est plus ou moins laissé de côté pour le moment, nous sommes certains que les objectifs de la délégation mexicaine seront atteints, car le comité spécial qui va être constitué en exécution de la résolution que nous venons d'adopter pourra examiner ce projet de résolution et peut-être prendre en considération certaines des idées qu'il renferme. Je désire donc ajouter ma voix à celles des autres représentants qui ont déjà demandé à la délégation mexicaine de ne pas insister pour que son projet de résolution soit mis aux voix.

153. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant du Mexique pour une motion d'ordre portant sur la procédure du scrutin.

154. M. PADILLA NERVO (Mexique) [traduit de l'espagnol]: J'ai écouté avec grande attention les observations faites par plusieurs représentants au sujet du projet de résolution de ma délégation [A/L.369]. Nous avons pris en considération les raisons qui ont motivé leurs réserves et les difficultés qu'ils éprouvent à l'appuyer.

155. Nous sommes reconnaissants des paroles généreuses que nous ont values les objectifs dont s'inspirait notre projet de résolution et nous avons reçu dans le même esprit l'appel amical qui nous a été adressé par plusieurs délégations pour nous demander de ne pas insister pour le faire mettre aux voix.

156. De plus, le projet de résolution A/L.366 et Add.1 à 3, présenté par 38 pays d'Afrique et d'Asie, a été adopté à une majorité extraordinaire, comprenant la voix de ma délégation. Bien qu'à mon avis le projet de résolution du Mexique eût établi sous une forme plus précise un dispositif destiné à assurer la liquidation du colonialisme, il coïncide dans ses grandes lignes avec celui que nous venons d'adopter. C'est pourquoi je n'insiste pas pour que notre projet de résolution soit mis aux voix et je me réserve le droit de le soumettre à l'examen de l'Assemblée une autre fois.

157. Le PRESIDENT: Le représentant du Mexique ayant annoncé qu'il n'insistait pas pour que le projet de résolution présenté par son pays [A/L.369] soit mis aux voix, l'Assemblée n'a pas à se prononcer sur ce projet.

158. Cela étant, nous en avons terminé avec les projets de résolution de caractère général. Nous allons passer au vote sur les projets de résolution de caractère particulier, concernant la Nouvelle-Guinée occidentale, que je vais énumérer. Il y a d'abord le projet de résolution A/L.354, puis vient le projet de résolution A/L.367/Rev.1, qui a fait l'objet d'un amendement [A/L.371], et, enfin, le projet de résolution A/L.368.

1810 (XVII). La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux

L'Assemblée générale,

Rappelant sa résolution 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960, contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et sa résolution 1654 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961 portant création d'un Comité spécial de dix-sept membres chargé d'étudier l'application de ladite Déclaration,

Consciente du fait que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et la création ultérieure du Comité spécial ont suscité partout, notamment chez les peuples qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, de grands espoirs de voir éliminer sans retard toutes les formes de colonialisme et de domination étrangère,

Ayant examiné le rapport du Comité spécial²¹,

Notant avec un profond regret que, malgré les efforts de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, les dispositions de la Déclaration n'ont pas été appliquées intégralement dans un grand nombre de territoires et que, dans certains cas, des mesures préliminaires n'ont même pas encore été prises en vue de réaliser les objectifs de la Déclaration, Profondément inquiète de l'attitude négative et du refus délibéré de certaines puissances administrantes de coopérer avec le Comité spécial,

Réaffirmant sa conviction que tout retard dans l'application de la Déclaration est une source continue de conflits sur le plan international, entravant sérieusement la coopération internationale et créant, dans de nombreuses régions du monde, des situations de plus en plus dangereuses qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales,

1. Exprime sa reconnaissance au Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux pour le travail qu'il a accompli;

2. Prend note avec satisfaction des méthodes et des procédures que le Comité spécial a adoptées pour s'acquitter de ses fonctions;

3. Proclame à nouveau et réaffirme solennellement les objectifs et les principes énoncés tant dans la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) que dans la résolution 1654 (XVI);

4. Déplore le refus de certaines puissances administrantes de coopérer à l'application de la Déclaration dans les territoires placés sous leur administration;

5. Invite les puissances administrantes intéressées à mettre fin immédiatement à toute action arriérée et répressive dirigée contre les peuples qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, notamment contre les activités politiques de leurs dirigeants légitimes;

6. Prie instamment toutes les puissances administrantes de prendre des mesures immédiates pour permettre à tous les territoires et peuples coloniaux d'accéder sans retard à l'indépendance, conformément aux dispositions du paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration;

7. Décide d'élargir la composition du Comité spécial, créé par la résolution 1654 (XVI), en y adjoignant sept nouveaux membres qui seront désignés par le Président de l'Assemblée générale;

8. Invite le Comité spécial ainsi remanié:

a) A continuer de rechercher les voies et moyens les mieux appropriés en vue de l'application rapide et intégrale de la Déclaration à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance;

b) A proposer des mesures concrètes en vue de l'application intégrale de la Déclaration;

c) A présenter à l'Assemblée générale en temps opportun, et au plus tard à sa dix-huitième session, un rapport complet contenant ses suggestions et ses recommandations sur l'ensemble des territoires mentionnés au paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration;

d) A informer le Conseil de sécurité de tous faits, survenus dans ces territoires, qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales;

9. Prie tous les Etats Membres, notamment les puissances administrantes, de prêter leur entière coopération au Comité spécial;

10. Prie le Secrétaire général de continuer à fournir au Comité spécial tous les moyens et le personnel nécessaires à l'application de la présente résolution.

1195ème séance plénière,
17 décembre 1962.

* * *

Le Président de l'Assemblée générale, agissant conformément au paragraphe 7 de la résolution ci-dessus, a nommé les sept nouveaux membres suivants du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: Bulgarie, Chili, Côte-d'Ivoire, Danemark, Irak, Iran et Sierra Leone²².

En conséquence, le Comité spécial se compose des Etats Membres suivants: AUSTRALIE, BULGARIE, CAMBODGE, CHILI, CÔTE-D'IVOIRE, DANEMARK, ETATS-UNIS D'AMÉRIQUE, ETHIOPIE, INDE, IRAK, IRAN, ITALIE, MADAGASCAR, MALI, POLOGNE, ROYAUME-UNI DE GRANDE-BRETAGNE ET D'IRLANDE DU NORD, SIERRA LEONE, SYRIE, TANGANYIKA, TUNISIE, UNION DES RÉPUBLIQUES SOCIALISTES SOVIÉTIQUES, URUGUAY, VENEZUELA et YOUGOSLAVIE.

POINT 25 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale*

71. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): L'Assemblée va maintenant passer à l'examen du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, à l'exception des chapitres II, IX et XI qui ont trait à la Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain et à l'Angola, territoires qui font l'objet de points distincts de l'ordre du jour de la dix-septième session.

72. M. RIFAI (Syrie) [Rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux] (traduit de l'anglais): J'ai l'honneur de présenter à l'Assemblée générale le rapport qui rend compte des travaux du Comité spécial pendant la période allant du 20 février au 19 septembre 1962 [A/5238].

73. Le Comité spécial a été créé par la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale, adoptée le 27 novembre 1961. Conformément à cette résolution, le Président de l'Assemblée générale a désigné, le 23 janvier 1962, les 17 membres du Comité spécial.

74. La tâche assignée au Comité spécial par l'Assemblée générale consistait à étudier l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, figurant dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Cette déclaration stipule notamment que:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

Ainsi que le souligne le rapport, l'adoption de la Déclaration par l'Assemblée générale a été considérée comme une réalisation éminemment constructive et comme une étape dans les efforts déployés par l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour atteindre les buts et objectifs de la Charte. La Déclaration elle-même est une déclaration de foi, une source d'inspiration pour ceux qui vivent encore sous le régime colonial et une expression du désir universel d'accélérer le processus de libération des peuples coloniaux, où qu'ils se trouvent.

75. Le Comité spécial a commencé ses travaux le 20 février 1962, moins d'un mois après la désignation de ses membres par le Président. Il a poursuivi ses travaux jusqu'au 19 septembre 1962. Pendant cette période, le Comité spécial a tenu 117 séances plénières en plus des réunions de ses sous-comités et groupes de travail officiels ou officieux. Cela montre l'importance que les membres du Comité spécial ont attachée à la tâche qui leur était confiée et le sérieux avec lequel ils l'ont entreprise. A cet égard, je tiens à rendre hommage au Président de la seizième session de l'Assemblée générale, aujourd'hui ministre des affaires étrangères de Tunisie, M. Mongi Slim, et au Secrétaire général par intérim, pour l'intérêt qu'ils ont porté aux travaux du Comité spécial. Ils l'ont manifesté non seulement en participant à sa séance d'ouverture, mais aussi en suivant de près l'évolution de ses travaux.

76. Dans sa résolution 1654 (XVI), l'Assemblée générale a chargé le Comité spécial:

"... d'accomplir sa tâche en se servant de tous les moyens dont il disposera dans le cadre des procédures et des modalités qu'il adoptera pour bien s'acquitter de ses fonctions".

La première tâche du Comité spécial a donc été d'adopter ses méthodes de travail et ses procédures. Après un débat très approfondi et constructif, le Comité spécial est parvenu à un accord sur les méthodes et procédures à suivre pour remplir son mandat. Un résumé des opinions exprimées par les membres du Comité spécial concernant l'organisation de ses travaux figure aux paragraphes 15 à 111 du chapitre premier du rapport et les décisions prises sont indiquées au paragraphe 112 de ce même chapitre. Je n'y reviendrai donc pas ici. Je tiens toutefois à souligner que l'expérience a prouvé au Comité spécial que les méthodes et procédures adoptées et suivies se sont révélées très appropriées et efficaces pour l'accomplissement de ses fonctions.

77. Pour ce qui est de l'examen de l'application de la Déclaration en ce qui concerne les "territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance", je voudrais aussi appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur quelques-unes des plus importantes décisions du Comité spécial. D'abord, il a décidé que la méthode la plus efficace pour s'acquitter de son mandat était d'examiner les territoires un à un. Puis il a décidé que priorité serait donnée aux territoires d'Afrique. Un ordre de priorité a donc été dressé, étant entendu que, si les circonstances l'exigeaient, des additions et des modifications pourraient y être apportées par la suite. Sur ce point, j'attire l'attention sur les paragraphes 124 à 127 du chapitre premier du rapport.

78. La résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale autorisait le Comité spécial à se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, lorsque cela pourrait être nécessaire pour lui permettre de s'acquitter efficacement de ses fonctions, en consultation avec les autorités compétentes. Invité par les Gouvernements du Maroc, de l'Éthiopie et du Tanganyika, le Comité spécial a décidé de tenir des séances dans ces trois pays d'Afrique. On trouvera, aux paragraphes 134 à 142 du chapitre premier de ce rapport, des précisions sur les déplacements du Comité spécial en Afrique pendant la période du 20 mai au 8 juin 1962. Comme l'indique le rapport, ce voyage en Afrique a été très utile par suite de l'expérience que ses membres ont acquise et de son effet psychologique sur les pays dépendants et indépendants de ce continent.

* Reprise du débat de la 1164^eme séance.

79. Je tiens à exprimer, au nom du Comité spécial, sa gratitude aux Gouvernements du Maroc, de l'Éthiopie et du Tanganyika pour l'avoir invité et à les remercier de l'assistance et de l'hospitalité qu'il a reçues pendant son séjour.

80. Des renseignements détaillés sur l'examen des différents territoires par le Comité spécial figurent aux chapitres II à XI du rapport. Chacun de ces chapitres contient les sections suivantes. La section A donne des renseignements sur le territoire. La section B expose l'examen de la question par le Comité spécial. Cette section est divisée en trois sous-sections: introduction, audition de pétitionnaires et observations de membres du Comité spécial. Puis la section C est intitulée "Décisions prises par le Comité spécial". Elle contient les décisions et recommandations adoptées par le Comité spécial. Certains chapitres contiennent en outre des sections supplémentaires où figurent des renseignements sur toutes mesures pertinentes prises par l'Assemblée générale concernant le territoire intéressé.

81. Le Comité spécial a décidé de faire figurer dans son rapport, pour chaque territoire, le résumé des opinions des pétitionnaires qui se sont présentés devant lui, ainsi que le résumé des observations des membres du Comité spécial. Le volume du rapport s'en trouve accru, mais on a pensé que les membres de l'Assemblée générale seront ainsi mieux à même de comprendre les décisions et recommandations du Comité spécial. Bien que le rapport soit assez long, pour les raisons que je viens d'expliquer, je suis certain que la table des matières détaillée qui figure en tête du volume permettra aux membres de le consulter facilement.

82. Je vais passer maintenant à la situation de chacun des 12 territoires examinés dans le rapport.

83. Le chapitre premier traite, comme je l'ai déjà indiqué, de l'organisation des travaux et fait état de l'opinion du Comité spécial sur les travaux futurs.

84. Le chapitre II concerne la Rhodésie du Sud, le premier territoire dont le Comité spécial se soit occupé. Comme le savent déjà les membres de l'Assemblée générale, le Comité spécial a étudié à fond la situation en Rhodésie du Sud et a envoyé à Londres un sous-comité chargé de s'entretenir avec le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni en vue de trouver une solution conforme au mandat du Comité spécial et aux aspirations des populations de la Rhodésie du Sud.

85. Par la suite, un rapport spécial sur la Rhodésie du Sud a été présenté par le Comité spécial lors de la reprise de la seizième session de l'Assemblée générale. Sur la base du rapport du Comité spécial, l'Assemblée générale a alors examiné d'urgence la question de la Rhodésie du Sud et a adopté la résolution 1747 (XVI). Le Comité spécial a pris note de cette résolution et en particulier de son paragraphe 3 aux termes duquel il était prié de poursuivre les efforts constructifs qu'il déployait pour que la Déclaration soit appliquée au plus tôt à ce territoire. La Quatrième Commission a déjà examiné la question de la Rhodésie du Sud à la présente session et, sur rapport de la Commission, l'Assemblée générale a déjà adopté deux résolutions, la résolution 1755 (XVII) du 12 octobre 1962 et la résolution 1760 (XVII) du 31 octobre 1962.

86. Le chapitre III traite de la Rhodésie du Nord. Les conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial concernant ce territoire sont exposées aux paragraphes 193 à 205 de ce chapitre du rapport. Les recommandations comportent un projet de résolution qui est proposé à l'Assemblée générale pour adoption. Comme le Comité spécial l'en avait prié, le Secrétaire général par intérim a communiqué le 18 juin 1962 au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni les conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial. Je signalerai en passant que des élections ont eu lieu en Rhodésie du Nord le 30 octobre 1962 et qu'il faudra sans doute tenir compte de leurs résultats avant l'adoption de toute résolution relative à ce territoire.

87. Le chapitre IV concerne le Nyassaland. Le Comité spécial a constaté que la situation au Nyassaland était relativement moins difficile étant donné qu'aux élections de 1961 le Malawi Congress Party, sous la direction du Dr Hastings Banda, avait déjà obtenu la majorité des sièges. Les conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial concernant le Nyassaland sont exposées aux paragraphes 67 et 68 de ce chapitre du rapport. De même, le Secrétaire général par intérim a communiqué le 18 juin 1962 au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni les conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial.

88. Le chapitre V traite des territoires dépendant du Haut Commissaire: Bassoutoland, Betchouanaland et Souaziland. En raison de la situation géographique de ces territoires et de la similitude de leurs problèmes, le Comité spécial a décidé de les étudier ensemble. Il recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'examiner un projet de résolution concernant ces trois territoires; ce projet figure au paragraphe 214 de ce chapitre du rapport.

89. Le chapitre VI concerne le territoire de Zanzibar. Dans ce cas encore, le Comité spécial recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'examiner un projet de résolution qui se trouve au paragraphe 154 de ce chapitre du rapport.

90. Le chapitre VII concerne la Guyane britannique. En raison du caractère d'urgence de la situation en Guyane britannique, le Comité spécial l'a étudiée par priorité et a adopté le 30 juillet 1962 une résolution aux termes de laquelle le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni était prié de prendre immédiatement certaines mesures. Le Secrétaire général par intérim a communiqué cette résolution à ce gouvernement le 1er août 1962. Le texte en est donné au paragraphe 84 de ce chapitre du rapport.

91. Le chapitre VIII traite du Mozambique. Lorsqu'il a examiné la situation dans ce territoire, le Comité spécial était saisi du rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal. Le Comité spécial recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'exami-ner un projet de résolution relatif au Mozambique qui se trouve au paragraphe 109 de ce chapitre du rapport.

92. Le chapitre IX traite du Sud-Ouest africain. En étudiant l'application de la Déclaration à ce territoire, le Comité spécial était notamment saisi du rapport du Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain. Les conclusions et recommandations relatives au Sud-Ouest africain se trouvent aux paragraphes 120 à 124 de ce chapitre du rapport.

93. Le chapitre X traite du Kenya. Le Comité spécial recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'examiner un projet de résolution qui se trouve au paragraphe 88 de ce chapitre du rapport.

94. Le chapitre XI traite de l'Angola. Comme dans le cas du Mozambique, le Comité spécial était saisi du rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal. Un projet de résolution recommandé à l'Assemblée générale pour examen figure au paragraphe 44 de ce chapitre du rapport.

95. Le dernier chapitre, le chapitre XII, est constitué par des résumés de pétitions de caractère général et de pétitions concernant des territoires autres que ceux dont il est question aux chapitres II à XI.

96. Avant de terminer cette partie de mon exposé, je voudrais dire quelques mots des travaux futurs du Comité spécial. Cette question a fait l'objet d'un examen très attentif par le Comité spécial ainsi que par un groupe de travail nommé à cette fin. Les opinions du Comité spécial sur cette question sont exposées aux paragraphes 146 à 152 du rapport.

97. Au cours de ses travaux depuis février 1962, le Comité spécial a étudié l'application de la Déclaration dans 12 territoires, dont 11 territoires situés en Afrique. Comme on le constatera, l'importance accordée à l'Afrique dès le début des travaux se justifie par le caractère impérieux des problèmes qui se posent dans les colonies d'Afrique et la nécessité de prendre d'urgence des mesures appropriées en vue d'éviter des difficultés encore plus grandes à l'avenir. Le Comité spécial estime que la sagesse de sa décision d'examiner les territoires d'Afrique par priorité a été amplement démontrée par les événements politiques survenus dans ces territoires.

98. Le Comité spécial reconnaît qu'il n'a, en aucune façon, terminé la tâche que lui a confiée l'Assemblée générale et qu'il reste encore bien des territoires dans lesquels la situation doit être étudiée en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration. En outre, il faudra que le Comité spécial suive l'effet des décisions déjà prises, ou qui le seront, par l'Assemblée générale concernant les territoires dont elle s'est déjà occupée mais où la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'a pas encore été mis en œuvre.

99. Une autre question sur laquelle je voudrais appeler l'attention particulièrement, à propos des travaux futurs du Comité spécial, est celle de la coordination des travaux entre les divers organes des Nations Unies dont les activités s'exercent dans le domaine colonial. C'est ce que le Secrétaire général par intérim a signalé dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel [A/5201/Add.1, p. 4]. Le Comité spécial en a pris note au paragraphe 152 du chapitre premier de son rapport et a exprimé l'espoir que l'opinion du Secrétaire général retiendra l'attention de l'Assemblée générale.

100. Enfin, si vous le permettez, Monsieur le Président, je voudrais dire quelques mots sur certaines questions de méthode. L'examen du présent rapport a été attribué à l'Assemblée générale en séance plénière. Si l'on tient compte de la façon dont cette déclaration historique a été adoptée et de la décision qui a été prise par la suite de créer le Comité spécial, il est tout à fait normal que ce rapport soit examiné par l'Assemblée générale en séance plénière. Toutefois, l'Assemblée voudra peut-être faire la lumière sur quelques questions d'ordre pratique avant d'aborder l'examen des divers projets de résolution qui figurent dans le rapport du Comité spécial. Je prendrai d'abord la question de la Rhodésie du Sud, dont traite le chapitre II du rapport. Comme on le sait, cette question constitue un point de l'ordre du jour de la présente session et l'Assemblée générale a déjà adopté deux résolutions que j'ai rappelées précédemment. Par conséquent, en attendant le rapport demandé au Secrétaire général aux termes du paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la résolution 1760 (XVII) du 31 octobre, il serait peut-être inutile de procéder maintenant à un examen détaillé de ce territoire. C'est là une question qui doit être laissée au jugement et à la discrétion des membres de l'Assemblée.

101. Puis vient la question du Sud-Ouest africain, dont traite le chapitre IX du rapport. La Quatrième Commission en discute actuellement sur la base du rapport du Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain. Par conséquent, la Quatrième Commission pourrait aussi se reporter au chapitre IX du présent rapport dans l'examen de cette question. De cette façon, nous éviterions que des propositions particulières concernant ce territoire ne proviennent de deux instances.

102. La troisième question est celle du Mozambique, dont traite le chapitre VIII du rapport. Ce territoire fera l'objet d'un examen par la Quatrième Commission dans le cadre du rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal. Comme je l'ai déjà signalé, le chapitre VIII contient un projet de résolution sur le Mozambique, présenté à l'Assemblée générale pour examen. Il faudra donc prévoir des aménagements appropriés des travaux entre les séances plénières et la Quatrième Commission pour éviter que des recommandations ou des projets de résolution ne prennent naissance dans deux organes différents.

103. Le quatrième et dernier problème concerne l'Angola, dont traite le chapitre XI du rapport. Là encore, un projet de résolution est recommandé à l'Assemblée générale pour examen. En outre, il y a le rapport du Sous-Comité chargé d'examiner la situation en Angola [A/5286], qui doit être examiné en séance plénière. La Quatrième Commission sera aussi saisie de la question de l'Angola dans le cadre du rapport du Comité pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160 et Corr.1]. Comme dans le cas du Mozambique, il y aurait donc lieu de trouver le moyen d'éviter la présentation de recommandations ou de projets de résolution en double.

104. Je suis certain que nous pourrions trouver des dispositions pratiques qui assureront l'efficacité du débat et la possibilité de prendre des décisions sans difficultés de procédure.

105. En terminant, j'ai l'honneur, au nom du Comité spécial, de présenter son rapport à l'Assemblée générale en exprimant l'espoir qu'il lui sera d'un grand secours dans ses efforts tendant à mettre fin au colonialisme.

106. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): La parole est au représentant de la Guinée sur une motion d'ordre.

107. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): J'ai demandé, par motion d'ordre, à faire un très bref exposé et une proposition concrète concernant la méthode de travail de l'Assemblée générale sur l'important rapport dont nous venons d'être saisis [A/5238].

108. En effet, avant de lever la 1165ème séance, le Président a proposé — et il n'y a pas eu la moindre objection — d'exclure les trois territoires de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain et de l'Angola, des délibérations de l'Assemblée dans le cadre du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept. Le rapporteur de ce comité vient d'ajouter à cette liste le Mozambique, qui fera également l'objet d'un examen par la Quatrième Commission dans le cadre du rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160].

109. Il ressort du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept et du brillant exposé que vient de faire son rapporteur qu'en dehors des trois territoires sur lesquels une décision a été prise hier — Rhodésie du Sud, Sud-Ouest africain et Angola — neuf autres territoires, dont huit sous administration britannique, ont fait l'objet d'une étude particulière et d'une décision du Comité des Dix-Sept.

110. Le problème qui se pose à nous — et c'est là qu'intervient la proposition concrète de la Guinée — est de savoir s'il convient de procéder ici à l'étude détaillée de chacun de ces territoires. La proposition de la Guinée consiste à renvoyer la discussion sur ces neuf territoires à la Quatrième Commission. Et voici pour quelles raisons.

111. Le Comité des Dix-Sept a reçu, par la résolution 1654 (XVI), une mission bien précise qui est la mise en application de la résolution 1514 (XV). Cette dernière résolution contenait une proclamation solennelle et un certain nombre de dispositions. La proclamation solennelle, tout le monde s'en rappelle. Le 14 décembre 1960, l'Assemblée générale proclamait solennellement "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Les dispositions, très nombreuses, peuvent se résumer dans le paragraphe 5 de la résolution, ainsi libellé:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

112. Ainsi, l'Assemblée générale prenait la décision historique de proclamer la nécessité de l'indépendance de tous les pays et de tous les peuples colonisés. L'année dernière, 12 mois après, en présence d'un fait, extrêmement décourageant pour nous, de la non-application de cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale prenait une deuxième décision importante: après avoir réitéré et solennellement réaffirmé les objectifs et les principes essentiels contenus dans la Déclaration de 1960^{1/}, elle invitait instamment les Etats intéressés (c'est-à-dire les puissances coloniales) à agir sans plus tarder afin d'assurer scrupuleusement l'application et la mise en œuvre de cette déclaration. Cette résolution créait un comité spécial de 17 membres, auquel elle demandait de s'occuper de la mise en application effective de la Déclaration et de rendre compte de son travail à la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale.

113. Nous sommes à présent saisis du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept. Nous pensons très sincèrement qu'à la fois pour des raisons d'efficacité et de logique il serait très difficile, ici, en séance plénière, d'entrer dans la discussion détaillée et de prendre une décision pour chacun des territoires. En effet, ce qu'on attend de nous, ce que prévoyait la résolution 1654 (XVI), c'est la suite logique, normale, nous voulons espérer la conclusion, des deux résolutions précédentes: 1514 (XV) et 1654 (XVI). Et notre décision doit nécessairement s'appliquer à l'ensemble des territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, ceci quel que soit le statut de ces territoires, qu'il s'agisse de territoires sous tutelle, de territoires non autonomes ou de territoires à statut international, comme le Sud-Ouest africain usurpé par le Gouvernement de la République sud-africaine. Il nous faut donc nécessairement une décision de principe qui concerne l'ensemble de ces territoires. Je suis persuadé que l'Assemblée fera en sorte que cette décision soit la conclusion de nos travaux.

114. Pour cette raison et bien que l'étude sur les différents territoires (Rhodésie du Nord, Nyassaland, Bassoutoland, Betchouanaland, Souaziland, Zanzibar, Guyane britannique, Mozambique et Kenya) soit extrêmement utile, nous pensons que l'Assemblée générale devrait faire la synthèse de l'ensemble de cette étude et, sur la base de cette synthèse, dégager la décision définitive qu'elle exigerait des puissances coloniales pour mettre un terme, cette fois pour de bon, à la colonisation. Sur la base des directives ainsi données, la Quatrième Commission, qui est déjà saisie de l'ensemble de la question, prendrait une décision définitive et concrète pour chacun des territoires.

115. Il convient en effet de rappeler que le Mozambique, dont faisait état, tout à l'heure, le rapporteur du Comité des Dix-Sept, est tout naturellement inclus dans le rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160]. Les huit autres territoires, tous sous administration britannique, sont traités dans le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5125]. Il s'agit, je crois qu'il n'est pas inutile de le répéter, des territoires sous administration britannique. Or, depuis quelque temps déjà, l'administration coloniale britannique consent à fournir, sur ces territoires, non seulement les renseignements exigés aux termes du Chapitre XI de la Charte, mais également des renseignements politiques et constitutionnels.

116. En toute hypothèse, pour éviter toute difficulté, nous pensons que l'Assemblée générale, sur la base des directives précises et de la synthèse qui auront été déterminées ici, pourrait habiliter spécialement la Quatrième Commission à prendre pour base de discussion non seulement les rapports des autres comités spéciaux, mais le rapport du Comité des

^{1/} Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, adoptée par l'Assemblée générale le 14 décembre 1960 [résolution 1514 (XV)].

Dix-Sept, afin qu'une fois pour toutes elle se débarrasse de cette question de la colonisation.

117. Telle est la proposition, portant sur la méthode, que voulait faire la délégation de la Guinée.

118. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Le représentant de la Guinée serait-il disposé à présenter à l'Assemblée la conclusion de sa déclaration sous la forme concrète d'une proposition, afin que l'Assemblée puisse être appelée à se prononcer sur cette proposition?

119. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): Pour la sérénité même des débats extrêmement importants sur le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, la délégation de Guinée n'a pas cru devoir faire une proposition formelle, espérant que sa suggestion recevrait l'assentiment unanime. S'il y a des objections, la délégation de Guinée est prête à faire une proposition concrète. Compte tenu de la clarté et de la nécessité de la méthode de travail qui a été suggérée, la délégation de Guinée n'a pas cru devoir faire une proposition concrète. Elle ne le fera que si elle y est obligée.

120. M. AGUIRRE (Uruguay) [traduit de l'espagnol]: La délégation de l'Uruguay n'a pas d'objection à formuler sur le fond de la proposition du représentant de la Guinée. Bien plus, la délégation de l'Uruguay aurait jugé plus pratique que le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept fût renvoyé directement à la Quatrième Commission pour qu'elle propose à l'Assemblée des projets de résolution sur chacune des questions. Mais au point où nous en sommes, où la Quatrième Commission a arrêté son programme de travail et où il a été décidé que le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept serait discuté directement en séance plénière, la délégation de l'Uruguay considère, eu égard à l'efficacité des travaux, à la nécessité de s'en acquitter d'une façon rapide et réaliste, qu'il est préférable de suivre la méthode suggérée par le Rapporteur du Comité des Dix-Sept et de soumettre à la Quatrième Commission celles des questions du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept qui se trouvent inscrites aussi à l'ordre du jour de la Quatrième Commission.

121. Quant aux autres questions, elles devraient être examinées directement en séance plénière, car, si, au point où en est l'Assemblée, nous soumettions à la Quatrième Commission les neuf questions traitées dans le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept et si les longs débats auxquels chacune d'elles a donné lieu au Comité des Dix-Sept devaient se répéter, nous ne voyons pas comment il serait possible d'accomplir la tâche dont nous voulons tous nous acquitter pour faire aboutir les principes qui ont inspiré la résolution portant création du Comité.

122. Aussi ma délégation se permet-elle d'insister pour que nous suivions la méthode de travail suggérée par le Rapporteur: renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission les questions qui figurent déjà à son ordre du jour et maintenir l'examen en séance plénière des autres questions traitées dans le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept; il faut tenir compte du fait que le Comité a déjà présenté à l'Assemblée un projet de résolution pour chacune d'elles: l'Assemblée peut se prononcer à leur sujet sans y passer trop de temps et avec l'aide du Comité qui doit mériter sa confiance.

123. M. QUAISON-SACKY (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: Nous espérons que la suggestion du représentant de la Guinée ne soulèverait pas d'objection à l'Assemblée puisque, comme il l'a dit lui-même, la Quatrième Commission est déjà saisie de l'ensemble des questions traitées dans le rapport du Comité spécial. La délégation du Ghana attache une grande importance à ce rapport. Comme l'Assemblée l'avait décidé l'an dernier, le Comité spécial devait étudier l'application de la Déclaration de 1960, formuler des suggestions et des recommandations quant aux progrès réalisés et à la mesure dans laquelle la Déclaration est mise en œuvre, et faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale lors de sa dix-septième session. L'Assemblée n'a pas précisé alors que ce serait en séance plénière.

124. Nous estimons que la suggestion du représentant de la Guinée est très pratique en ce sens que toutes les questions traitées dans le rapport doivent aussi être examinées en détail par la Quatrième Commission. Peut-être le représentant de l'Uruguay ne tient-il pas compte du fait que le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5215] traitera de tous les territoires visés dans le présent rapport. Nous estimons donc que la Quatrième Commission doit entrer dans les détails et étudier quelles résolutions l'Assemblée devrait adopter. C'est alors seulement que ce rapport pourra être utilement examiné en séance plénière. A notre avis, la question doit rester à l'ordre du jour des séances plénières; toutefois, elle ne doit pas y être discutée maintenant, mais seulement lorsque la Quatrième Commission aura étudié de façon approfondie la situation dans les divers territoires dont traite le rapport. Sinon, nous en arriverions à cette situation que la Quatrième Commission étudierait la question du Bassoutoland ou celle du Sud-Ouest africain, puis que l'Assemblée générale en ferait autant en séance plénière. Il y aurait ainsi chevauchement des efforts, ce que nous voulons tous éviter, j'en suis certain.

125. Je ne veux pas non plus présenter une proposition formelle, dans l'espoir que le représentant de l'Uruguay ne formule pas officiellement son objection. J'espère avoir convaincu l'Assemblée générale par mon explication de la nécessité de ne pas s'opposer à la suggestion du représentant de la Guinée.

126. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): A l'intention du représentant de l'Uruguay, je voudrais très brièvement préciser une fois de plus — et je remercie le représentant du Ghana qui vient de le faire pour sa part — qu'il ne s'agit absolument pas d'escamoter en quoi que ce soit la discussion du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, auquel nous attachons la plus haute importance. Nous voulons que l'ensemble de ce rapport soit discuté ici. Mais ce sur quoi il nous paraît important de prendre une décision dès à présent, c'est la nécessité d'avoir, à l'issue de nos discussions ici, en séance plénière, la suite normale et logique qui doit être donnée et à la résolution 1514 (XV) et à la résolution 1654 (XVI), d'où est né, l'an dernier, le Comité des Dix-Sept. En d'autres termes, il faut prendre une décision d'ensemble, qui vise l'ensemble des territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance. Il est certain que cette décision d'ensemble, que cette synthèse qui aura été tirée de l'étude du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, servira de directive à la Quatrième Commission lorsque celle-ci aura à se prononcer, sur la base de tous les documents à sa disposition, au sujet de tel ou tel territoire.

127. Pour préciser, une fois de plus, la situation, nous disons donc qu'à notre avis l'Assemblée générale devrait discuter le rapport dans son ensemble, et prendre ainsi une décision visant l'ensemble des territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance. Après, sur la base de cette décision de principe — que nous souhaitons être la conclusion définitive sur le problème de la décolonisation — la Quatrième Commission, compte tenu de tous les éléments, c'est-à-dire compte tenu du rapport même du Comité des Dix-Sept [A/5238] en ce qui concerne les points précis, compte tenu du rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160], compte tenu du rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5215], compte tenu du rapport du Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain [A/5212 et Add.1 à 3], et compte tenu aussi, éventuellement, du rapport du Sous-Comité chargé d'examiner la situation en Angola [A/5286], prendra des décisions particulières pour chacun des territoires.

128. Il va sans dire que, dans la décision définitive que nous prendrons ici et qui, à notre point de vue, sera nécessairement une décision d'ensemble, bien d'autres questions connexes seront examinées; en particulier le sort du Comité des Dix-Sept ou de tout autre organe que l'Assemblée générale pourrait instituer pour donner suite à la décision qui sera prise cette année.

129. J'espère que ces éclaircissements donneront satisfaction au représentant de l'Uruguay et qu'il n'insistera pas, permettant ainsi à l'Assemblée de poursuivre ses travaux.

130. M. BOZOVIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ayant entendu l'explication que le représentant de la Guinée vient de donner, la délégation de la Yougoslavie estime que sa suggestion — qui, nous a-t-il dit, pourrait être présentée comme proposition formelle s'il est nécessaire — est très pratique pour l'examen du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept et en particulier des chapitres qui traitent des territoires pris un à un.

131. Au sujet des observations du représentant de l'Uruguay, je me souviens, sans avoir les documents en main en ce moment, que le Président de la Quatrième Commission a reçu un certain nombre de demandes de représentants de partis politiques de quelques territoires africains qui demandent à être entendus par la Quatrième Commission lorsque la question des territoires non autonomes sera examinée. Certaines de ces demandes proviennent de territoires dont le Comité des Dix-Sept a étudié la situation.

132. D'un point de vue pratique, si nous décidons d'examiner tous les territoires à l'exception de ceux que vous avez mentionnés hier, Monsieur le Président, et en y ajoutant le Mozambique, et si nous prenons des décisions sur les recommandations du Comité des Dix-Sept, nous nous trouverons par la suite, lorsque nous examinerons la question des territoires non autonomes, amenés à entendre des pétitionnaires de certains de ces territoires et à rouvrir la question, et peut-être à présenter à l'Assemblée générale une nouvelle proposition ou des additifs à une proposition déjà adoptée.

133. C'est pour cela et en tenant compte aussi de la possibilité de nouvelles demandes d'auditions provenant de divers territoires qu'à mon avis la proposition du représentant de la Guinée est judicieuse, nous épargnera du temps et évitera sans doute un chevauchement des travaux. Nous pourrions alors discuter en séance plénière les questions de principe, tandis que les cas particuliers traités dans le rapport pourraient être examinés par la Quatrième Commission à la lumière de tous renseignements nouveaux qui pourraient être recueillis auprès des pétitionnaires qui ont déjà demandé à être entendus ou qui pourraient le faire.

134. Mlle BROOKS (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je crois que les représentants de la Guinée et de la Yougoslavie ont déjà dit ce que je voulais dire moi-même, mais je désire expliquer en outre au représentant de l'Uruguay que, si le point de l'ordre du jour concerne les renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, on constate dans le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5215] que les mêmes territoires qui sont énumérés dans le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept sont énumérés aussi dans le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes. Par conséquent, en ce qui concerne sa suggestion tendant à accepter la demande faite par le Rapporteur du Comité des Dix-Sept qui a pour objet de faire renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission les questions relatives aux territoires dont elle a déjà à connaître, on constate que tout territoire qui n'est pas autonome figure sur la liste du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes.

135. J'appuie le représentant de la Guinée afin que, lorsque la Quatrième Commission discutera finalement la question, il ne soit pas porté atteinte au sens général de la Déclaration sur la décolonisation. C'est un aspect du problème, mais en séance plénière nous avons la possibilité de faire une évaluation sur la base des rapports présentés par le Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160] et par le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes. Si la Quatrième Commission examinait le rapport présenté par le Comité des Dix-Sept, à cette étape elle serait dans une meilleure position pour faire en séance plénière une évaluation efficace de la situation d'ensemble selon l'intention du projet de résolution.

136. Le PRÉSIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de la Syrie.

137. M. RIFAI (Syrie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je vous remercie, Monsieur le Président, d'avoir donné la parole au représentant de la Syrie, car c'est en cette qualité que je vais parler et non en qualité de Rapporteur.

138. Je voudrais d'abord mettre en garde les membres de l'Assemblée générale contre une mesure qui pourrait être inconsiderée. Je ne suis pas monté à la tribune pour entamer une dispute avec le représentant de la Guinée. Je respecte ses opinions et je suis certain que tous ici nous avons le souci d'éviter des doubles emplois dans les travaux et d'inutiles conflits entre des recommandations. Il me semble qu'il y a là un point dont il faut tenir compte. En présentant le rapport à l'Assemblée, j'y ai déjà fait allusion et j'ai fait certaines suggestions pratiques pour éviter des résolutions et des recommandations faisant double emploi ou même divergentes.

139. Je sais que le représentant de la Guinée s'inspire d'un noble motif, de même que le représentant du Ghana et que tous ceux qui ont pris la parole en faveur de la méthode qu'il a suggérée. Il me semble que le mieux serait maintenant de différer toute décision sur la motion que le représentant de la Guinée vient d'exposer et de renvoyer la décision à demain. A mon avis, nous risquons de prendre une décision inconsidérée que nous pourrions regretter par la suite. Je ne veux pas dire que la meilleure méthode soit de continuer l'examen du rapport dans tous ses points, mais j'estime qu'étant donné son importance et la décision déjà prise par le Bureau et par l'Assemblée elle-même de le discuter directement en séance plénière nous ne devrions pas renverser maintenant cette décision inconsidérément.

140. Pour cette raison, je fais appel aux représentants, en particulier au représentant de la Guinée, en leur demandant de ne pas s'opposer à l'ajournement de la décision à prendre sur la question de méthode que ce représentant a soulevée, jusqu'à ce que nous ayons disposé d'assez de temps pour examiner ce problème qui est d'une très grande importance pour nous tous. Je suis certain que le représentant de la Guinée conviendra avec moi que nous sommes tous animés du même désir et je lui renouvelle donc mon appel en lui demandant d'accepter pour le moment que la décision soit ajournée.

141. M. MONGUNO (Nigéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation n'avait pas l'intention d'intervenir, mais, après avoir entendu la proposition du représentant de la Guinée, je tiens à dire qu'à notre avis il y aurait doubles emplois à tous égards si la question était examinée à la fois en séance plénière et à la Quatrième Commission. Si l'on envisage la chose d'un point de vue pratique, il semblerait même difficile d'entendre les pétitionnaires en séance plénière, s'il est exact qu'une demande d'audition ait été reçue par le Président de la Quatrième Commission. Il faudrait, je crois, reconstruire la salle des séances! J'espère que ceux qui ont présenté des objections à la suggestion du représentant de la Guinée reconnaîtront qu'il est plus pratique de renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission l'ensemble de la question et que nous y gagnerons du temps, car presque tous ses aspects devront être examinés par la Commission. J'espère que les autres délégations en conviendront aussi.

142. M. GEBRE-EGZY (Ethiopie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il semble y avoir une certaine confusion sur ce qu'est en réalité la proposition de la délégation de la Guinée. Si j'ai bien compris, selon cette proposition la Quatrième Commission devrait traiter des territoires énumérés par le représentant de la Guinée, premièrement parce qu'il est plus pratique d'entendre les pétitionnaires en commission, deuxièmement parce que dans certains cas les territoires font déjà l'objet d'un examen de la part d'autres comités, troisièmement parce que la discussion en serait accélérée. Mais la proposition de la délégation de la Guinée — et je crois qu'on n'a pas bien compris ceci — est aussi que l'Assemblée discute en séance plénière le principe de l'application de la Déclaration. En d'autres termes, la proposition tend à renvoyer l'examen de détail du rapport à la Quatrième Commission, tandis que la question générale de l'application de la Déclaration serait discutée en séance plénière.

143. Il se trouve que nous avons fait presque la même proposition au Comité des Dix-Sept. Malheureusement, cette idée en est restée là, d'abord faute de temps et aussi parce qu'à cette étape un accord tacite semblait être intervenu pour réserver toutes ces questions aux séances plénières.

144. Ce que je tiens à faire ressortir, c'est ceci: la proposition de la délégation de la Guinée ne signifie pas que la question soit discutée à la fois en séance plénière et à la Quatrième Commission. Elle signifie que l'Assemblée, en séance plénière, examinera si la résolution 1514 (XV) a été convenablement appliquée, tandis que la Quatrième Commission discutera le cas d'un certain nombre de territoires qui, d'une façon ou d'une autre, font déjà l'objet d'un examen de la part de la Commission ou de comités, ce qui présentera des avantages tant du point de vue de l'audition des pétitionnaires que du point de vue de l'accélération des travaux.

145. J'ai demandé la parole pour préciser ce point et pour appuyer la proposition de la délégation de la Guinée. Je ne pense pas que cette question soulève des difficultés telles que nous devions ajourner la suite du débat. Je prie donc les représentants de l'Uruguay et de la Syrie de ne pas insister sur leurs suggestions, afin que l'Assemblée puisse trancher la question.

146. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Le représentant de la Guinée a demandé la parole, certainement pour donner d'autres explications sur des points qui seraient restés obscurs pour les représentants qui ont pris la parole depuis sa dernière intervention ou pour d'autres représentants. Avant de lui donner la parole, je voudrais savoir si quelqu'un désire exposer son opinion sur la question afin que le représentant de la Guinée, s'il le veut bien, puisse répondre à toutes les questions à la fois.

147. Il semble qu'aucun autre représentant ne désire intervenir maintenant. Je donne donc la parole au représentant de la Guinée.

148. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): Je me trouve embarrassé parce que devant deux appels. J'avais demandé la parole avant que monte à cette tribune le représentant de l'Ethiopie, pour répondre favorablement à l'appel du représentant de la Syrie. Mais, comme le Président m'y a indirectement invité, je voudrais tout de même donner encore quelques précisions.

149. Je suis content que le représentant de l'Ethiopie ait parfaitement compris, sauf sur un point, la thèse de la Guinée. Je ne pense pas que ce soit un certain nombre de territoires évoqués devant le Comité des Dix-Sept qu'il faille renvoyer en commission, mais c'est l'ensemble des territoires particuliers évoqués dans le rapport de ce comité et, sur ce point, la représentante du Libéria a parfaitement traduit ma pensée. C'est en effet l'ensemble de ces territoires qui se trouve, de par le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes (A/5215), porté devant la Quatrième Commission.

150. Une autre précision est également absolument indispensable: Je déclare une fois de plus que l'ensemble du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept devrait, à notre point de vue, être discuté ici et faire l'objet d'une décision de l'Assemblée générale. Mais la question que je pose — ou la question sur laquelle je voudrais que l'on médite si jamais on reportait la séance à demain — est celle-ci: combien de résolutions voudrait-on que l'on adoptât à l'issue de nos débats sur le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept? La réponse à cette question, du point de vue de ma délégation, est très simple.

151. Il serait souhaitable d'avoir une résolution et une seule, qui soit la suite normale, la suite logique de nos débats. Je souhaiterais que ce soit la conclusion de l'ensemble des débats sur la décolonisation. Sur la base de directives aussi claires et précises données par l'Assemblée générale, la Quatrième Commission, à la fois en fonction des éléments précis que contient le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept (A/5238), en fonction également du rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes (A/5215), du rapport du Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain (A/5212 et Add.1 à 3) et des rapports des autres comités spéciaux, prendrait, dans le cadre de ces directives bien précises, une décision définitive sur chacun des territoires.

152. Voici la position de la Guinée concernant l'appel du représentant de la Syrie. Je dois dire que, désireux de ne rien bousculer, je ne vois aucune objection, si c'est le sentiment de l'Assemblée, à reporter ultérieurement le débat en vue d'un examen plus approfondi. Je voudrais ajouter que je regrette que le rapporteur du Comité des Dix-Sept, le représentant de la Syrie, n'ait pas assisté à une réunion importante cet après-midi; car notre proposition n'est pas précipitée du tout. C'est à la suite de consultations avec un certain nombre de délégations qui ont tout le temps travaillé ensemble que la proposition a été faite ici. Je regrette infiniment que le représentant de la Syrie n'ait pas été au courant et n'ait pas pris part à ces assises importantes. Quoi qu'il en soit, ma conclusion est que je ne vois pas d'objection à reporter ma proposition à plus tard en vue de consultations plus approfondies.

153. M. PACHACHI (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il serait bon, je crois, de préciser les questions dont l'Assemblée est saisie.

154. Si j'ai bien compris le représentant de la Guinée, ce qu'il propose, c'est, en termes concrets et précis, que l'Assemblée procède en séance plénière, sur l'ensemble du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, à une discussion générale à l'issue de laquelle elle adopterait une résolution contenant des principes généraux. Alors et alors seulement, la Quatrième Commission serait saisie des divers chapitres du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept qui traitent des différents territoires. Lorsqu'elle aurait terminé cet examen, la Quatrième Commission recommanderait à l'Assemblée générale d'adopter certaines résolutions à la lumière des principes généraux contenus dans la résolution que l'Assemblée aurait adoptée. C'est ainsi que je comprends la proposition du représentant de la Guinée. Toutefois, si l'Assemblée adoptait cette proposition, il se poserait, je crois, une question de méthode de travail...

155. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Ceci, bien entendu, à condition que le sens de la proposition du représentant de la Guinée soit celui que le représentant de l'Irak lui donne.

156. M. PACHACHI (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: En effet, mes observations sont fondées sur l'hypothèse que j'ai compris le sens exact de la proposition du représentant de la Guinée. Cela signifierait, bien entendu, que la Quatrième Commission ne pourrait pas poursuivre ses travaux pendant que l'Assemblée générale procéderait à la discussion générale du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, et, puisque les résultats de la discussion du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept seraient portés devant la Quatrième Commission, il me semblerait naturel que les deux organes ne se réunissent pas en même temps, car toute décision que la Quatrième Commission pourrait prendre serait sans doute prématurée et pourrait être dépassée par les principes généraux de la résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée générale.

157. Il y a donc là une difficulté et je saisis cette occasion pour faire une observation. Je crois que le représentant de la Guinée a dit que la Quatrième Commission examine la situation des divers territoires qui relèvent du Chapitre XI, en ce qui concerne le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes ou aussi le Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal. Mais je suis sûr qu'il sera d'accord avec moi si je lui fais remarquer que le contexte dans lequel la Quatrième Commission examine la situation des territoires portugais aux termes de la résolution [1699 (XVI)] portant création du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal est tout à fait différent du contexte de la résolution adoptée en 1960 et de la résolution de l'an dernier portant création du Comité des Dix-Sept.

158. Pour toutes ces raisons, je cherche encore des éclaircissements sur la question. Si nous adoptons la proposition du représentant de la Guinée telle que je la comprends, est-il vraiment utile que la Quatrième Commission poursuive ses travaux, puisqu'il est très vraisemblable qu'ils seraient rendus sans valeur ou en tout cas modifiés radicalement à la lumière de toute résolution qui serait adoptée par l'Assemblée générale sur les principes généraux relatifs à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) ?

159. Mlle BROOKS (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il est exact que j'ai entendu dire que 104 ou 105 nations peuvent interpréter la Charte de 104 ou 105 et maintenant de 110 façons différentes. En fait, je n'ai pas compris que le représentant de la Guinée ait proposé de différer les travaux de la Quatrième Commission jusqu'après la discussion générale du rapport en séance plénière. Je crois que c'est tout le contraire. J'estime que la Quatrième Commission devrait d'abord avoir la possibilité d'examiner la question en détail et d'entendre les pétitionnaires, et que l'Assemblée générale examinerait alors le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept en séance plénière en tenant compte des discussions détaillées de la Quatrième Commission, puis en dégagerait des principes généraux, notamment pour ce qui est du concept qui donne son sens à la résolution sur la décolonisation. Voilà comment je voyais les choses. Mais, s'il faut changer tout cela et procéder à une discussion en vue d'établir un principe général auquel la Quatrième Commission devra se conformer dans ses travaux, je crois que les choses seront très différentes et que je devrai reconsidérer la position que j'avais prise.

160. Etant donné ce qui précède, je pense que le mieux serait de suspendre l'examen de la question, au point où nous en sommes, jusqu'à ce que nous ayons pu nous réunir par groupes et nous expliquer clairement les uns aux autres ce que signifie réellement la motion. Peut-être serons-nous mieux en mesure, plus tard, de prendre une décision ou de voter sur la question.

161. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): Le représentant de l'Irak a posé deux questions importantes qui méritent d'être éclaircies. Tout d'abord, il a évoqué la base légale du travail qui s'effectue à la Quatrième Commission, dans le cadre des dispositions du Chapitre XI de la Charte. Je crois savoir, et je suis persuadé, que le représentant de l'Irak sera d'accord avec moi pour constater que, depuis l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV), en décembre 1960, c'est bien dans le cadre des dispositions d'ensemble de cette résolution que la Quatrième Commission élabore ses projets de résolution concernant les territoires non autonomes.

162. En toute hypothèse et pour lever toute équivoque, je ne verrais aucun inconvénient, au contraire, à ce qu'un mandat spécial soit donné à la Quatrième Commission par l'Assemblée générale en ce qui concerne les points particuliers des territoires spécifiquement mentionnés dans le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept.

163. La deuxième question soulevée par le représentant de l'Irak est celle de la continuité ou de la simultanéité des travaux de la Quatrième Commission et de l'Assemblée générale. Sur ce point, il résulte des informations venant des amis qui nous représentent à la Quatrième Commission que cet organe étudie actuellement le rapport du Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain [A/5212 et Add.1 à 3]; il abordera ensuite, compte tenu de l'ordre du jour qu'il a déjà adopté, le rapport du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160], et ce n'est qu'à l'issue de l'étude de ce document que la Quatrième Commission s'occupera du rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5215].

164. Je pense donc qu'avant que la Quatrième Commission aborde l'examen des territoires particuliers mentionnés dans le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept l'Assemblée générale aura terminé son travail. Mais je veux être très clair et très précis, en particulier après l'exposé que vient de faire la représentante du Libéria. Je pense qu'il est préférable qu'une décision de principe, qui soit une décision d'ensemble, soit prise ici sur le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, et que ce soit à la lumière des principes ainsi dégagés, et des objectifs ainsi fixés, que la Quatrième Commission, en venant à l'étude concrète de chacun des territoires, détermine son action.

165. J'ajoute, pour être clair et précis, que je ne pense pas que le fait d'étudier ici l'ensemble du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept arrête la Quatrième Commission dans son travail. Je crois néanmoins que, pour éviter toute équivoque, il serait important, à l'issue de notre débat ici, de donner un mandat spécial à la Quatrième Commission, pour que sur la base de ce mandat, et à la lumière des principes et des objectifs dégagés, elle prenne des décisions concrètes et pratiques sur chacun des territoires.

166. M. PACHACHI (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: Si j'ai bien compris le représentant de la Guinée, il n'envisage pas que la Quatrième Commission prenne une décision quelconque concernant aucun des territoires avant que l'Assemblée générale ait adopté une résolution contenant des principes généraux à l'issue de la discussion générale sur l'ensemble du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept. Je crois que c'est bien là ce que je lui ai entendu dire. Mais, s'il n'envisage pas cela, c'est qu'il ne voit pas qu'il puisse y avoir incompatibilité entre les décisions prises par la Quatrième Commission sur des territoires particuliers et une résolution où seraient énoncés des principes généraux, adoptée en séance plénière. Or, je prévois précisément, si je comprends bien le motif qui pousse à l'adoption d'une telle résolution énonçant des principes généraux, que des complications pourraient surgir au cas où des résolutions adoptées par la Quatrième Commission ne seraient pas complètement ou entièrement compatibles avec les principes généraux de la résolution qu'adopterait l'Assemblée et d'où devraient découler, pour ainsi dire, toutes les décisions de la Quatrième Commission sur des territoires particuliers.

167. Telle est la difficulté dans laquelle je me trouve. D'ailleurs, je ne vois pas très bien comment la Quatrième Commission pourrait continuer à étudier, discuter et décider au sujet de territoires particuliers tout en sachant que l'Assemblée générale peut lui envoyer une résolution dont les principes généraux ne seraient peut-être pas compatibles avec les décisions qu'elle aurait déjà prises.

168. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): Je voudrais préciser de nouveau que la Quatrième Commission discute actuellement du Sud-Ouest africain, territoire qui ne figure pas aujourd'hui sur la liste des territoires en discussion, pour la simple raison qu'hier, à la fin de la 1165ème séance, le Président a demandé d'exclure ce territoire de nos délibérations. En l'absence de toute opposition, il me semble qu'une décision a été prise sur ce point.

169. En tout état de cause, je n'ai pas demandé — et je n'ai pas pensé un seul instant qu'il faille le faire — d'arrêter le travail de la Quatrième Commission qui, dans mon esprit, ne peut ni ne doit cesser de travailler, pour la simple raison, comme je l'ai déjà dit, que, depuis 1960, elle a adopté tous ses projets de résolution dans le cadre des dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Il va sans dire que la résolution que nous adopterons ici sera une suite normale et logique, pour ne pas dire la conclusion naturelle, des débats qui ont conduit à l'adoption des résolutions 1514 (XV) et 1654 (XVI).

170. Je ne vois absolument pas — et je ne propose rien dans ce sens — que la Quatrième Commission doive arrêter son travail à la fois sur le Sud-Ouest africain et sur les colonies portugaises. Ce que je veux dire, c'est que pour les autres territoires, qui font l'objet de la discussion et de ma proposition, et qui sont non autonomes, l'Assemblée générale aura certainement adopté une résolution d'ensemble avant que la Quatrième Commission aborde leur examen.

171. Voilà ce que je voulais dire; j'espère que ces éclaircissements auront satisfait le représentant de l'Irak.

172. M. BAYONA (Colombie) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Les observations pertinentes du représentant de l'Irak et le souci exprimé par la représentante du Libéria rejoignent précisément les idées centrales qui ont été celles de ma délégation pendant ce court débat de procédure.

173. Nous sommes très pressés; nous cherchons une méthode qui puisse écourter nos travaux tout en nous permettant de parvenir à une heureuse conclusion. Le représentant de la Guinée nous propose: premièrement, une discussion générale; deuxièmement, le renvoi du rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept à la Quatrième Commission; troisièmement, le retour de la question en séance plénière de l'Assemblée générale. En d'autres termes, nous ne doublons pas les travaux, nous les trions!

174. Ma délégation juge très judicieuses les observations faites tout d'abord par le représentant de la Syrie et auxquelles le représentant de l'Irak a donné son appui avisé. Puisque nous cherchons une méthode pour faciliter la tâche qui consiste à mettre fin au colonialisme, ma délégation appuie la proposition du représentant de l'Irak.

175. M. AGUIRRE (Uruguay) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Ma délégation regrette beaucoup de prendre encore le temps de l'Assemblée. Je le fais précisément en raison d'une réflexion du représentant de la Guinée qui nous a demandé, certainement sans mauvaise intention, de permettre à l'Assemblée de continuer à examiner le problème.

176. Or ma délégation se préoccupe toujours précisément de ne pas empêcher la poursuite des travaux de l'Assemblée, mais au contraire de contribuer à les abrégier et à les rendre plus pratiques. C'est pourquoi ma délégation n'a pas en ce moment l'intention de maintenir son objection. Mais, tenant compte de la proposition qu'a faite le représentant de la Syrie et après avoir entendu notamment des opinions divergentes sur le sens et la portée de la proposition du représentant de la Guinée, ma délégation a l'intention de demander la levée de la séance afin de donner aux représentants le temps de méditer la question et de chercher à concilier les opinions diverses qui ont été exposées à cette tribune, et afin qu'on puisse adopter la méthode la meilleure pour la poursuite de nos travaux.

177. Cependant, ma délégation désire faire aussi une autre observation au sujet de ce qu'ont dit certains représentants selon lesquels les questions traitées dans le rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept sont en fait inscrites à l'ordre du jour de la Quatrième Commission dans le cadre de la question intitulée "Renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes". Si tel était réellement le cas, rien n'aurait justifié qu'aucune des huit autres rubriques fût traitée à part. En inscrivant cette question à l'ordre du jour, nous aurions inscrit en même temps tous les aspects de cette grande lutte que nous avons entreprise pour mettre fin au colonialisme et à laquelle nous nous sommes voués. Il y a une raison de fond, de principe, pour avoir séparé les huit autres rubriques de cette question et pour qu'elle suive le cours normal qu'elle a toujours suivi à l'Assemblée générale bien avant la création du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept et l'adoption de la résolution qui a donné le jour à ce comité.

178. Pour terminer, j'insiste sur ma proposition tendant à ce que la séance soit levée immédiatement.

179. M. DIALLO Tell (Guinée): Je m'excuse d'avoir demandé la parole, mais, tant à rester dans le cadre du règlement intérieur, je voudrais appuyer la proposition d'ajournement faite par le représentant de l'Uruguay et, toujours dans le cadre du règlement, l'appel lancé par le représentant de la Syrie. Mais, avant de descendre de la tribune, je voudrais, résumant le plus brièvement possible la proposition de la Guinée, redire à l'intention des membres de l'Assemblée que ce que voudrait la Guinée, c'est une discussion d'ensemble du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept et l'adoption d'une résolution unique sanctionnant cette discussion. Je suis persuadé que ceci résume exactement la pensée de la Guinée.

180. Nous voudrions, dans cette résolution finale, donner un mandat à la Quatrième Commission en ce qui concerne les territoires spécifiquement mentionnés dans le rapport.

181. En conclusion, je soutiens, afin de permettre des négociations et des contacts plus fructueux, la motion d'ajournement soumise par les représentants de l'Uruguay et de la Syrie.

Organisation des travaux de l'Assemblée

182. Le PRÉSIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je puis dire que la discussion qui vient de se dérouler a été très utile et qu'elle était aussi très nécessaire en raison de la situation où nous nous trouvons du fait que des questions interdépendantes ont été renvoyées à la Quatrième Commission et aux séances plénières de l'Assemblée. En séance plénière, nous devons discuter la question générale qui est traitée dans le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept et qui porte sur tous les territoires coloniaux. Puis, en séance plénière aussi, est prévue la discussion de la question de l'Angola qui est le point suivant, le point 25 de la liste des questions à discuter en séance plénière.

183. D'un autre côté, les questions de la Rhodésie du Sud et du Sud-Ouest africain, ainsi je crois que des autres territoires portugais, ont été renvoyées à la Quatrième Commission. Il est donc très nécessaire qu'avant d'aborder l'examen du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept nos idées soient bien claires quant à la méthode et la procédure à suivre pour éviter des actions parallèles inutiles. Je suis très heureux que la question ait été soulevée avant que nous entamions la discussion du rapport, afin qu'il ne nous reste aucun doute dans l'esprit au sujet de la procédure à suivre.

184. Si l'Assemblée ne s'y oppose pas, voici ce que je proposerai de faire. Nous nous réunirons en séance plénière vendredi matin 9 novembre 1962. Les délégations auront ainsi toute la journée de demain pour examiner la question et pour se faire une opinion sur la façon de discuter le rapport du Comité spécial. J'aurai aussi le temps de réfléchir à tout ce qui a été dit cet après-midi et je serai peut-être en mesure de saisir l'Assemblée, lorsque nous nous réunirons vendredi matin, d'une proposition répondant aux vœux et aux points de vue exprimés en général cet après-midi. Si nous pouvons alors nous mettre d'accord sur une solution, que ce soit celle que j'aurai proposée ou toute nouvelle solution qui aura pu être présentée — mais j'espère que nous ne passerons pas trop de temps sur cette question de procédure après en avoir délibéré si longuement cet après-midi —, nous pourrions alors continuer en sachant où nous allons et comment y parvenir.

185. Il reste deux autres points à mentionner. Premièrement, si je comprends bien, il ressort de la discussion d'aujourd'hui que la question distincte de l'Angola, qui est le point suivant de la liste des questions à discuter en séance plénière, serait en un sens, à cette étape, en tout cas, examinée dans le cadre de la discussion de l'ensemble du rapport, quelle que soit la procédure que nous adoptons. Naturellement, elle devra être examinée séparément aussi. Il appartiendra à l'Assemblée de décider, après s'être prononcée sur la façon de procéder pour ce qui est du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept, ce qu'elle entend faire pour la question de l'Angola, si elle veut la traiter ici même ou la renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission.

186. Deuxièmement, une autre question que l'Assemblée devra examiner en ce qui concerne la procédure, c'est — à supposer qu'elle préfère la discussion générale du rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept — l'adoption d'une résolution générale où elle indiquerait ses vues sur l'application de la résolution primitive sur laquelle le Comité des Dix-Sept était chargé de faire rapport, et dont la Quatrième Commission s'inspirerait dans l'examen des questions particulières dont elle est saisie. Cela admis, quelle serait alors l'étape suivante? L'Assemblée en aura-t-elle terminé avec le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept et étudierait-elle dans quelle mesure il peut s'appliquer aux résolutions dont la Quatrième Commission la saisira sur des points particuliers qui relèvent de la Quatrième Commission, sous réserve toutefois de la façon dont devra être traitée la question de l'Angola? Ou bien envi-sage-t-elle qu'une fois saisie des résolutions présentées par la Quatrième Commission elle reprenne le rapport du Comité des Dix-Sept? C'est là un point sur lequel je n'ai pas bien compris l'intention des représentants qui ont pris la parole, mais je ne veux pas que le débat reprenne maintenant sur ce point. Je suis certain que les représentants réfléchiront à ce point également. Lorsque nous nous réunirons vendredi, nous verrons plus clair sur toutes ces choses. La prochaine séance aura lieu vendredi à 10 h 30.

La séance est levée à 19 h 5.

POINT 25 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale (A/5238) [suite]

110. M. SHUKAIRY (Arabie Saoudite) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ce que nous avons maintenant à examiner n'est pas un rapport ordinaire d'un comité des Nations Unies. Le rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept sur la décolonisation marque une étape décisive dans la lutte des hommes pour la liberté et la dignité. Dans sa marche vers la liberté pendant des siècles innombrables, l'homme n'a épargné aucun effort, si dur fût-il, l'homme n'a esquivé aucune souffrance, si accablante fût-elle. A notre époque même, les tentatives des Nations Unies pour favoriser la cause de la liberté n'ont pas été négligeables. C'est le 23 septembre 1960 que le président Khrouchtchev a proposé d'inscrire à l'ordre du jour de la quinzième session une question intitulée "Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". Vu que l'opinion publique mondiale a applaudi l'Union soviétique pour avoir pris une initiative si hardie et de si grande portée, nous sommes heureux de voir que les Nations Unies n'ont pas hésité à accepter le défi. Vraiment, sur ce point les Nations Unies n'ont pas failli à leur devoir: elles ont saisi l'occasion de prêter leur appui à cet appel de la communauté internationale. Ainsi, dans la résolution 1514 (XV), l'Assemblée générale a déclaré solennellement: "La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies..." Tout en affirmant les droits de tous les peuples à l'autodétermination, l'Assemblée générale a souligné que des mesures immédiates doivent être prises pour accorder l'indépendance à tous les peuples et à tous les pays.

111. Considérée dans sa juste perspective et dans le contexte écrasant du colonialisme, cette résolution, à vrai dire, n'était pas une résolution. C'était une charte de la liberté, une grande charte universelle de la liberté, un décret d'émancipation de tous les peuples qui luttent pour la dignité et l'égalité. Adoptée le 14 décembre 1960, cette charte de la liberté n'était pas moins suprême et pas moins sublime que la Charte des Nations Unies de 1945. Les peuples et les pays asservis se doivent d'exprimer leur reconnaissance à l'Union soviétique pour avoir pris cette initiative et aux Nations Unies pour mener le combat dans ce domaine jusqu'au dernier moment de la victoire. Le 14 décembre 1960 devrait entrer dans l'histoire comme le jour de l'indépendance de tous les peuples, digne d'être commémoré comme fête internationale d'actions de grâces et d'allégresse.

112. A la seizième session, les Nations Unies, encore une fois sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique, ont examiné l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Pour cet évangile, il fallait un missionnaire, si je puis dire, chargé de le prêcher et de le mettre en pratique. Dans sa résolution 1654 (XVI), l'Assemblée générale a adopté certaines mesures propres à donner plus d'efficacité à la Déclaration. La décolonisation était lancée et un Comité spécial de 17 membres a été chargé de donner effet à la Déclaration. C'était une nouvelle étape historique, le passage de la Déclaration à son application, de la colonisation à la décolonisation, de la domination à l'émancipation et de l'exploitation à la nationalisation.

113. Muni de tous ces pouvoirs, le Comité spécial a décidé de se mettre en route et son pèlerinage a commencé par un voyage en Afrique. En effet, pour connaître les problèmes de la liberté, il faut les vivre. Il faut aller sur le continent où le colonialisme se pratique, où la discrimination raciale s'exerce, où des souffrances sont infligées aux hommes. Depuis de nombreuses générations, l'Afrique tremblait dans l'affliction et sous la répression. Aller voir l'Afrique, c'était donc le moins que pût faire l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour racheter le passé, pour offrir une promesse au présent et donner un espoir à l'avenir. Ce voyage avait pour objet de cicatriser des blessures qui saignaient depuis très longtemps, de réparer une injustice écrasante, de libérer des millions de gens à qui l'on refusait tout, sauf les chaînes de la subjugation et le joug de la domination.

114. C'est ainsi que le Comité spécial est parti pour l'Afrique, avec la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux en guise d'évangile — et quel précieux évangile! Ce voyage était un débarquement des Nations Unies — j'insiste sur cette expression —, c'était un débarquement des Nations Unies dans la bataille pour la liberté. Au Maroc, le Comité a été touché par les paroles émouvantes de S. M. le roi Hassan II, digne chef d'un grand pays. En Ethiopie, le Comité a été bouleversé par la voix d'un ancien combattant de la liberté, S. M. I. Haile Sélassié. Au Tanganyika, le Comité a été enthousiasmé par la passion de liberté qu'exprimaient les chefs du pays. C'est ainsi qu'une vague d'allégresse a déferlé sur l'Afrique, depuis l'Atlantique à l'ouest jusqu'à l'océan Indien à l'est, et je dirai qu'il soufflait sur le continent non seulement un vent de changement, mais une vraie tempête. Par l'intermédiaire du Comité spécial, les Nations Unies menaient campagne en Afrique pour la liberté, partaient en croisade pour l'indépendance, chassaient les derniers vestiges de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme.

115. Malgré son caractère généreux, c'était une mission désespérante, une tâche terrifiante. Il est facile d'imaginer les maux du colonialisme, mais, pour en mesurer l'angoisse, pour en éprouver la détresse et pour en jauger la profondeur, il faut le vivre, il faut au moins le voir, voir le colonialisme dans les souffrances des peuples et voir l'impérialisme dans les tortures des nations. Rendons grâce à notre éminent comité pour son endurance et à son éminent rapporteur pour sa persévérance. Le rapport de M. Rifai, de la Syrie, est un noble plaidoyer pour la liberté et une terrible mise en accusation pour l'impérialisme.

116. Je rends un hommage sincère et profond au Comité spécial qui a accompli sa tâche avec tant de compétence, qui a dressé un rapport si clair sur ses travaux et qui s'est donné tant de peine pour trouver une ligne de conduite à recommander.

117. Je dis "tant de peine", car tous les membres du Comité étaient en proie à des sentiments divers et contradictoires. C'était un drame de réactions contraires, encourageantes et décourageantes. La volonté des peuples d'Afrique, résolus à obtenir leur liberté, était très encourageante; la volonté des puissances coloniales, résolues à ralentir la marche de la liberté, était très décourageante. Les puissances administrantes — Royaume-Uni, Portugal et Afrique du Sud — persistent à vouloir maintenir leur domination coloniale, luttent pour un jour de plus de colonialisme, une proie de plus pour l'exploitation.

118. En Rhodésie du Sud, en Rhodésie du Nord et au Nyassaland, le Royaume-Uni — j'aimerais le dire en termes modérés — n'a pas répondu à la résolution de l'Assemblée générale contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Par le moyen de mécanismes constitutionnels, par des intrigues législatives, par des manœuvres électorales, par des techniques discriminatoires, les Britanniques ont tout combiné — oui, combiné vraiment — pour servir les intérêts britanniques, sans tenir compte des intérêts des Africains, habitants légitimes du pays.

119. En Rhodésie du Sud, il est évident que la grande majorité de la population a repoussé la Constitution du 6 décembre 1961. En fait, l'Assemblée générale, dans sa résolution 1747 (XVI) du 28 juin 1962, a exigé que le Royaume-Uni réunisse une conférence représentant tous les partis et chargée de formuler une constitution pour remplacer celle de 1961.

120. En Rhodésie du Nord, d'autre part, il est devenu évident que la Constitution de février 1962 était incompatible avec la Déclaration des Nations Unies et avec la résolution des Nations Unies. Au Nyassaland, aucune mesure n'a été prise pour élaborer une constitution ou pour réaliser l'indépendance. Ainsi, la Constitution de la Rhodésie est inconstitutionnelle. Elle a été promulguée par la Grande-Bretagne et non par les grandes Rhodésies ou le grand peuple de la Rhodésie. On peut imposer la domination étrangère, mais on ne peut imposer une constitution. Elle doit être la libre expression de la volonté du peuple, non le diktat des maîtres.

121. En ce qui concerne les élections générales, le Royaume-Uni se préparait, par une série de lois discriminatoires, à établir un gouvernement étranger, parfaitement étranger au territoire et à la population. Ce gouvernement allait être un gouvernement blanc, trop blanc, mais animé des plus noires intentions.

et, visant les plus sombres objectifs. La méthode était caractéristique de l'impérialisme: "à chaque homme une voix" pour les blancs, mais "à 1 000 hommes une voix" pour les Africains. Voilà le système appliqué par la Puissance administrante. Pour mettre en œuvre une telle politique, le Royaume-Uni a lancé une série de lois discriminatoires, accompagnée d'une campagne d'arrestations visant les chefs politiques du pays.

122. La Rhodésie du Sud n'est pas une terre négligeable sans passé et dont le Royaume-Uni puisse faire si peu de cas avec tant de légèreté. D'une superficie voisine de celle du Japon, la Rhodésie du Sud est célèbre par les fabuleuses mines du roi Salomon et par le monument de pierre des Zimbabwé, dont les ruines sont aujourd'hui les plus formidables et les plus mystérieuses du monde.

123. Le Royaume-Uni vise, semble-t-il, à établir dans le pays des ruines formidables et mystérieuses, mais cette fois sur le plan politique, dans les trois territoires, les deux Rhodésies et le Nyassaland. La limitation du droit de vote en tenant compte des biens et de l'instruction n'est qu'un des moyens employés pour maintenir la suprématie des blancs. En Rhodésie du Sud, par exemple, la Constitution de 1961 prévoit un système très compliqué de conditions à remplir pour avoir le droit de vote, système qui vise à disqualifier les habitants et à établir un gouvernement blanc dans le territoire. On trouve là deux listes électorales, la liste A et la liste B, caractérisées par des critères différents fondés sur l'âge, la résidence, la propriété et l'instruction. On a fixé des échelles diverses, établies en centaines de livres sterling, pour les revenus annuels et les biens. Pour être électeur, il faut avoir un revenu annuel de quelques centaines de livres ou posséder des biens évalués à tant de centaines de livres sterling.

124. Avec une telle technique électorale, aux élections précédentes qui ont eu lieu en Rhodésie du Sud 429 Africains seulement ont voté, alors qu'il y avait 3 millions de citoyens africains — imaginez un peu: sur 3 millions d'Africains, 429 seulement peuvent voter! Avec le système électoral actuel, moins de 5 p. 100 des Africains auraient le droit de vote. Un Africain ne peut gagner un revenu si élevé ni avoir des biens d'une telle valeur. Il ne peut pas non plus acquérir l'instruction requise, puisqu'il n'y a que deux écoles secondaires dans tout le pays. Cette politique n'est que trop claire. Elle vise indubitablement à donner le droit de vote aux colons blancs et à en priver les Africains. Cette politique rappelle les paroles de sir Godfrey Huggins, l'ancien premier ministre, paroles qui résonnent encore dans les échos de l'Afrique. Brutalement et sans vergogne, il a déclaré: "Dans une démocratie, il faut qu'il y ait une aristocratie et les gens doivent gagner leur droit de vote." Mais comment donc les Africains peuvent-ils gagner leur droit de vote lorsqu'on les dépouille jusqu'aux os et qu'on les laisse dans la misère et l'indigence!

125. C'est vrai, le pays abonde en richesses et ressources naturelles de toutes sortes, mais la politique du Royaume-Uni, puissance administrante, vise à rendre les colons de plus en plus riches et les Africains de plus en plus pauvres. La Rhodésie est bien connue pour son chrome, et le fait que les Etats-Unis en sont le principal acheteur témoigne de sa haute valeur stratégique. La zone cuprifère de la Rhodésie du Nord produit environ 15 p. 100 du cuivre du monde entier. Ce gisement est, pour sa richesse, le deuxième du monde. Il suffit de savoir que la production annuelle des mines est évaluée à 130 millions de livres: chiffres impressionnants de richesse et de pauvreté, richesse des colons blancs, pauvreté des Africains! Ce chiffre comprend le bénéfice des compagnies, qui s'élève à 40 millions de livres. La British South Africa Company, qui a gouverné le pays pendant un demi-siècle, avait enregistré en 1954 un bénéfice net de 3 225 898 livres sterling. Il est inutile de dire que dans ces compagnies les propriétaires sont blancs et les travailleurs sont noirs.

126. Toute cette richesse est refusée aux Africains et la question angoissante est de savoir comment les Africains peuvent gagner leur droit de vote et devenir électeurs, alors que les colons blancs pompent — et j'emploie le mot à dessein — pompent toute la richesse du pays pour eux-mêmes et pour eux-mêmes seulement.

127. Comment l'Africain aurait-il assez de biens pour devenir électeur, alors que presque tout ce qui a de la valeur est la propriété des colons blancs? En Rhodésie du Sud, bien que les colons blancs ne représentent pas plus de 8 p. 100 de la population, ils possèdent à eux seuls 47 millions d'acres des meilleures terres — quel chiffre! C'est presque la moitié de la superficie totale du pays.

128. Si vous traversez une terre de la meilleure catégorie, elle appartient à un blanc, il est inutile de le demander. Les Africains peuvent même être chassés de leur terre et envoyés dans des réserves si l'on découvre dans leur sol des richesses minérales. C'est ainsi que des centaines de familles ont été transférées dans des régions qui leur étaient totalement étrangères au point de vue du climat, du milieu et même de la langue. Ces gens ont été déracinés de leur région simplement parce qu'on y avait découvert des richesses minérales. Je me demande comment ces malheureux pourraient devenir électeurs et comment ils pourraient gagner leur droit de vote, alors qu'ils peuvent à peine gagner leur pain. Vous ne pouvez demander à des gens qui peuvent à peine gagner leur pain de réussir à gagner leur droit de vote, avec le système électoral actuel et les conditions exigées.

129. Au contraire, les colons blancs, en sus des nombreux privilèges dont ils sont gratifiés, peuvent avoir des baux de 999 ans sur les terres de la Couronne. Le chiffre est amusant — 999 ans. Ce n'est pas 1 000 ans. C'est, pour être précis, 1 000 ans moins un an. C'est caractéristique de la minutie et de la précision britanniques.

130. Au Nyassaland, les colons blancs possèdent un million d'acres des terres les plus fertiles, tandis que les noirs — je n'aime pas ce terme — ne sont que des ouvriers à gages. N'oublions pas qu'au Nyassaland il y a 600 fois plus de noirs que de blancs. Oui, au Nyassaland, les noirs sont 600 fois plus nombreux que les blancs et pourtant la plupart des terres fertiles appartiennent aux blancs.

131. Quant à l'idée d'une aristocratie dans la démocratie, telle qu'elle est traduite dans la politique du Royaume-Uni, c'est tout simplement, dans son principe et dans ses détails, de l'indépendance politique. Dans les Rhodésies, les Britanniques instituent une aristocratie de la couleur, une aristocratie du travail et une aristocratie fédérale. Les constitutions, les lois et les systèmes électoraux sont prévus pour instituer cette triple aristocratie. La troïka est attribuée aux Russes, mais les Britanniques semblent l'apprécier aussi. En tout cas, ils l'apprécient pour l'Afrique, sinon pour le Royaume-Uni.

132. Dans les Rhodésies et au Nyassaland, la discrimination fondée sur la couleur est si odieuse qu'on l'a dénoncée comme encore plus abominable qu'en Afrique du Sud, patrie de l'apartheid, patrie détestée de l'apartheid. Un dirigeant ségrégationniste bien connu s'est écrit un jour: "Songez au changement qui se produirait dans notre évolution politique et affective s'il y avait un jour des noirs au Parlement!" Telles sont les paroles honteuses d'un dirigeant ségrégationniste.

133. Peut-être cette remarque serait-elle encore tolérable s'il s'agissait d'élections au Parlement britannique; mais comment peut-on songer à élire en Afrique un parlement sans Africains? Si cette politique de suprématie blanche continue, les parlements d'Afrique, je le crains fort, se fermeront entièrement à tous les blancs, à tous les Européens. Il se pourrait même que les blancs soient expulsés de tout le continent africain s'ils n'apprennent pas à mieux se conduire.

134. Voilà le danger qui, malgré nous et à notre regret — car nous le regrettons, nous n'en éprouvons aucun plaisir —, menace les blancs en Afrique s'ils ne se conduisent pas mieux. Lorsque les Africains ont réclamé un système électoral libre et libéral pour les Rhodésies et le Nyassaland, un ministre éminent de la Fédération a dit: "Ces Africains ne savent pas ce qu'ils veulent. Autant demander à un enfant de deux ans de commander un cuirassé." Je crains que cet argument ne soit désastreux pour la situation de la Puissance administrante. Après un siècle presque entier pendant lequel le Royaume-Uni a exercé sa mission civilisatrice — j'emploie ce terme de "mission civilisatrice" pour les besoins de la cause, mais je n'admets pas cette mission —, s'il n'y a pas dans ce territoire un seul Africain capable de commander un cuirassé, c'est que la politique suivie par le Royaume-Uni est un fiasco, un échec, une faillite.

135. Quant à l'aristocratie du travail, la politique britannique en Rhodésie manque totalement de générosité. Elle vise à refuser aux travailleurs autochtones le droit de vote, pour ne rien dire de la possibilité de gagner décemment leur vie. Le mineur blanc bénéficie en Rhodésie du Nord du plus haut niveau de vie et du salaire le plus élevé de tous les mineurs du monde entier, y compris les Etats-Unis. A part le logement et de nombreux services sociaux, le salaire annuel moyen du mineur blanc s'élève à 2 000 livres sterling. Le salaire mensuel moyen d'un ouvrier blanc est de 105 livres. Le salaire de l'Africain, ridiculement bas et insuffisant, est de 6 livres sterling par mois. Il était encore plus bas avant la grève de 1953. Je le demande donc, du haut de cette tribune: comment, le salaire de l'Africain étant de 6 livres par mois, le salaire de l'Européen étant de 2 000 livres par an, comment un Africain pourrait-il gagner son droit de vote?

136. En Rhodésie du Sud, l'inégalité est incroyable. Les travailleurs européens y gagnent 250 livres par mois. Le salaire des Africains va de 21 cents à 50 cents par jour. Il s'évalue en centaines de dollars par mois pour le colon blanc, en simples cents pour l'Africain. Et, avec ces quelques cents par jour, le travailleur africain devrait gagner non seulement sa vie, mais encore son droit de vote?

137. L'aristocratie de la fédération — dernier terme de cette triple aristocratie britannique dans le pays — présente un autre aspect désastreux qui ne doit pas nous échapper. L'idée de fédération, c'est vrai, présente de nombreux attraits pour les Africains ou les Asiatiques. Quand toutes les conditions requises pour cela sont réunies, l'unité ou la fédération est un bienfait. Mais la Fédération des Rhodésies et du Nyassaland telle qu'elle est actuellement conçue est une malédiction pour les Africains. Derrière son organisation se cache un plan pour maintenir la suprématie des blancs et l'infériorité des Africains, plan déguisé sous le slogan de l'association entre Européens et Africains. Les temps ont changé, mais les Britanniques n'ont changé que des titres et leur politique est restée exactement la même. Ils ont essayé par tous les moyens de rester, de rester pour continuer leur domination et leur exploitation.

138. En 1922, M. Huggins, le premier ministre à vie du territoire, préconisait l'union de la Rhodésie du Sud et de l'Afrique du Sud. Ce n'était point par amour de l'union. L'union en vue était l'union dans la persécution et la discrimination raciale, l'union dans l'apartheid. Plus tard, M. Huggins a décidé de poursuivre une politique de fusion. Il préconisait la transformation de la Rhodésie du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Nord en un seul Etat unitaire. Il a aussi abandonné cette idée et a prôné la fédération, l'actuelle aristocratie britannique.

139. Dans le cas présent, la fédération est prévue surtout pour fédérer les blancs et diviser les noirs. Elle vise à grouper les forces des blancs pour les mobiliser contre le nationalisme africain. Une fédération réelle est incompatible avec la persécution et la discrimination raciales. Ces avocats européens de la fédération ont déclaré maintes et maintes fois qu'ils sont contre "le mélange des peuples et la constitution d'une société "café au lait". Telle est leur politique. Tels sont les rudiments de la politique qui domine en Afrique. On est contre le mélange des peuples, qui produirait une population "café au lait".

M. Forthomme (Belgique), vice-président, prend la présidence.

140. En Afrique, les Européens — et je regrette de devoir dire les Européens en général, mais il semble que telle est bien la politique et la pratique des Européens en Afrique —, les Européens n'ont pas honte de se moquer des souffrances du peuple et de tourner en ridicule la créature de Dieu. Ils aiment bien prendre leur café au lait, mais ils ne veulent pas voir ce mélange de couleurs dans la société. Ils aiment bien prendre leur café au lait payé par la sueur des Africains, mais ils repoussent l'idée d'une société café au lait, ils repoussent l'unité et la fraternité de la population. La faute n'en incombe pas à ceux qui ont la peau noire, mais à ceux qui ont la conscience noire: l'esprit sombre où germent des intentions monstrueuses et une politique perfide.

141. Aujourd'hui, l'abominable chef du parti de la fédération, Roy Welensky, marche sur les traces de son maître Huggins. Comme son maître, il tourne la fédération en une sorte d'aristocratie britannique, d'aristocratie européenne. C'est la domination de la majorité par la minorité, des Africains par les Européens. Si les Africains essayaient d'exercer leurs droits, Roy Welensky appliquerait les paroles de son maître qui disait: "Si les Africains tentent de prendre le pouvoir, nous les arrêterons net." Welensky s'en tient aujourd'hui au slogan "Nous les arrêterons net", mais il sait très bien que c'est la fin du colonialisme qui est nette. Le colonialisme ne ressuscitera pas. C'est pourquoi Welensky, dernier symbole du colonialisme britannique, livre son dernier combat, et la fédération est sa dernière arme dans cette guerre qu'il va perdre. Dans sa défense de la fédération, il s'est trahi par ses propres paroles quand il a dit: "Le régime colonial est fini, mais il faut que nous tenions quand même, d'une manière ou d'une autre" — il est fini, mais nous devons tenir quand même d'une manière ou d'une autre — "ou bien nous perdrons tout comme nous avons perdu l'Inde."

142. Il ne s'agit pas de fédération. Ce n'est pas la fédération qui les intéresse. C'est l'exploitation. Ce sont les fabuleuses richesses qu'ils ont dans leurs coffres, même si elles proviennent des cercueils des Africains. Dans ces conditions, la fédération est en réalité le cercueil du nationalisme africain. Cette politique consiste à unir les blancs dans la liberté, les noirs dans l'esclavage et sous la domination. Il s'agit de les unir, mais par les chaînes de la discrimination raciale. Les intentions des Britanniques sont parfaitement claires: les 9 millions d'Africains des Rhodésies et du Nyassaland se prosterneront aux pieds des 300 000 Européens, tout comme en 1888 le super-impérialiste britannique Cecil Rhodes avait pris à son service les jeunes princes du territoire pour cirer ses bottes — mais l'histoire de l'Angleterre est encore noire de ce cirage-là.

143. Récemment, lorsque les élections ont eu lieu en Rhodésie du Nord contrairement aux résolutions de l'Assemblée générale, Roy Welensky a ranimé le souvenir de Cecil Rhodes. Dans le New York Times du 31 octobre, alors que l'Assemblée était en session et peu avant les élections, un article a rapporté que Welensky avait parlé du nationalisme africain comme d'un "poing martelant la porte sauvagement". Un poing martelant la porte sauvagement! Que le poing africain frappe sauvagement, je dis que c'est faux, absolument faux. Welensky et sa clique, voilà l'image de la sauvagerie. Que ce poing africain martèle la porte, c'est vrai, absolument vrai. Le poing africain mettra en morceaux la porte du colonialisme et ni Welensky ni le Royaume-Uni ne pourront jamais en réunir les morceaux. Peut-être ces morceaux pourraient-ils trouver place au British Museum où sont exposés bien d'autres objets de l'impérialisme.

144. Je parle avec colère et ressentiment, c'est vrai, parce que nous ne pouvons pas et nous ne devons pas tolérer cette dégradation de l'homme. Que les Africains aient le visage noir et les cheveux crépus, ce n'est pas une raison pour qu'ils soient dominés par les blancs qui ont le visage clair, les yeux bleus et les cheveux blonds. La proportion des noirs par rapport aux blancs est en Rhodésie du Sud de 14 contre un, en Rhodésie du Nord de 40 contre un, au Nyassaland de 700 contre un et Roy Welensky, réfugié européen hors la loi, veut jouer les Nérons à Rome et incendier le pays/même qui lui a donné asile. Quelle ingratitude indicible, qui nous rappelle Brutus, et combien perfide était Brutus!

145. Ce tableau sinistre que j'ai brossé de la situation dans les trois territoires de la Rhodésie du Nord, de la Rhodésie du Sud et du Nyassaland est plus ou moins exact aussi pour ce qui est des trois autres territoires, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland. Je ne parlerai pas de la situation dans ces territoires, parce qu'il n'y a qu'une différence de degré entre eux et ceux dont j'ai déjà parlé.

146. Le Royaume-Uni a nié que l'on eût l'intention de rattacher ces trois territoires à l'Afrique du Sud. J'estime que c'est là un dessein très dangereux. Dans la Constitution de 1961 de la République sud-africaine figurent des dispositions visant expressément l'annexion de ces territoires par l'Afrique du Sud. Les Britanniques nient, mais combien de fois ces dénégations se sont-elles révélées être de purs aveux? N'ont-ils pas nié des dizaines de fois qu'ils eussent l'intention de créer un Etat juif en Palestine, ce qui a été une entreprise désastreuse? Israël a été créé pour menacer la paix, et un peuple entier a été chassé de sa patrie.

147. Cette méthode britannique qui consiste à tout nier, on la trouve à l'état pur partout où il y a des Britanniques en Afrique. Au Kenya, dont l'histoire a été sanglante sous la domination britannique, on a entendu maintes fois de telles dénégations. Les Britanniques prétendent qu'ils font tous leurs efforts pour réaliser l'unité du pays. Mais nous savons de la bouche même des dirigeants du Kenya que le Royaume-Uni fait tout ce qu'il peut afin de diviser pour régner, qu'il encourage le régionalisme et soutient le séparatisme. Telles sont les déclarations des chefs du pays et on les trouve dans les documents du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept. Créer plusieurs Katangas au Kenya, tel est le pain quotidien de la politique britannique. Or la katanaganisation est le casse-tête le plus déprimant qui ait été infligé aux Nations Unies.

148. Quant aux techniques constitutionnelles et à l'exploitation économique du Kenya, il est superflu d'en parler longuement. Il suffira de savoir que ce sont des techniques britanniques. Il existe toutefois un point par où le problème du Kenya présente une menace pour la paix mondiale. Ce n'est pas un secret militaire que le Royaume-Uni a établi au Kenya, contre la volonté de la population, un noyau de bases militaires. Le plus grave est que des armes nucléaires sont stockées dans les arsenaux britanniques du Kenya. Cela non plus n'est pas un secret militaire. Il en est question dans le rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept [A/5238]. Une de ces bases militaires se trouve à une quinzaine de kilomètres de la capitale, Nairobi.

149. Récemment, le Times de Londres a reconnu que des forces britanniques sont stationnées au Kenya pour protéger les intérêts du Royaume-Uni au Moyen-Orient. Un expert militaire des Etats-Unis a confirmé que des fusées lancées du Kenya peuvent avoir le même effet que des fusées lancées de Londres, du Royaume-Uni. Dans un article du Daily Express, on annonce que le Royaume-Uni a décidé de stocker des armes nucléaires sur ses aéroports d'Aden, de Chypre et d'Afrique orientale, notamment au Kenya.

150. Le peuple du Kenya, en même temps qu'il exige son indépendance immédiate, exige le démantèlement immédiat de ces bases militaires. Il y a là une situation vraiment très grave; la crise de Cuba, sans aller au fond des choses (je n'ai pas l'intention d'aller au fond des choses pour le moment), la crise de Cuba doit servir d'avertissement aux Nations Unies. Je ne vais pas faire ici un parallèle ou une comparaison. Rappelons-nous toutefois que le Kenya n'est pas territoire britannique. Cuba est un pays cubain qui a un peuple cubain et un gouvernement cubain. Rappelons-nous aussi que le Kenya se trouve dans l'hémisphère de l'Afrique, de l'Asie et du Moyen-Orient.

151. Si les Etats-Unis, grande puissance nucléaire, se croient menacés par la nucléarisation de Cuba, que doivent croire alors les Africains et les Asiatiques qui ont des armements si limités ? Les peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique ne sont pas disposés à voir leur terre ravagée et leurs hommes exterminés par une guerre nucléaire sur leur continent, une guerre à laquelle ils ne sont pas partie. Le Kenya doit être dénucléarisé et notre sécurité assurée. Si le démantèlement de Cuba est justifié, celui du Kenya l'est encore plus. Il faut reconnaître, je pense, que les vies humaines en Afrique et en Asie sont aussi sacrées, aussi dignes d'amour que les vies humaines dans l'hémisphère occidental. Si nous devions maintenir les bases de missiles au Kenya et les démanteler à Cuba, nous démantèlerions la Charte même des Nations Unies.

152. Sur la question de Zanzibar, je n'ai pas grand-chose à dire. Le rapport du Comité spécial donne un bon tableau de la situation actuelle. Le Comité adresse au Royaume-Uni un pressant appel pour qu'il libère tous les prisonniers politiques et mette fin à l'état d'urgence à Zanzibar. Pour le moment, je ne peux porter de jugement favorable ou défavorable sur l'attitude du Royaume-Uni. Nous ne savons pas si le Royaume-Uni a accepté ou repoussé l'appel du Comité spécial et nous serions très heureux si le représentant du Royaume-Uni montait à cette tribune pour nous dire que son gouvernement a accepté les recommandations du Comité. Nous verrons bien. Nous ne sommes pas portés à condamner ou à critiquer pour le plaisir de condamner ou de critiquer. Nous voudrions seulement voir le Royaume-Uni agir avec justice en Afrique et se conduire correctement à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

153. Sur le fond de la question, le Comité spécial a adressé un appel à tous les éléments de la population de Zanzibar pour qu'ils fassent l'unité nationale et a invité le Royaume-Uni à ne négliger aucun effort pour que le territoire accède à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible. Nous appuyons cette initiative et nous attendons avec impatience le jour de l'indépendance.

154. Avec la même impatience, nous attendons aussi que soit fixé le plus tôt possible la date de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique. Loin de tout, sur la côte nord-est du continent sud-américain, la Guyane britannique, nous en sommes certains, réalisera bientôt ses aspirations nationales. La liberté doit être accessible aux pays lointains comme aux pays proches. Nous espérons que ce territoire va devenir une Guyane indépendante. Les atlas universels ne mentionneront plus la Guyane britannique, mais la Guyane tout court, ou la Guyane tout ce qu'on voudra, mais non britannique.

155. Au Mozambique et en Angola, le Portugal défend les mêmes principes qui ne sont en rien des principes. Le Portugal a été condamné pour son impérialisme classique, pour sa discrimination raciale sans merci, pour ses pratiques de travail forcé et ses actes brutaux de répression. Au Mozambique, les 7 millions d'habitants sont désignés comme "não civilizados", à l'exception de quelques milliers qui sont classés comme "civilizados". Même sans savoir le portugais, et je le prononce très mal, on peut comprendre les termes "civilizados" et "não civilizados". Au bout de 456 ans de mission civilisatrice — je reprends l'argu-ment des Portugais, non le mien — les Portugais n'ont réussi à civiliser que quelques milliers d'habitants sur plusieurs millions. Nous devrions sans doute attendre le jour du jugement dernier avant que le Portugal ne parvienne à civiliser le reste des habitants.

156. En 1951, le statut du territoire a été changé: il est devenu province d'outre-mer sous le nom de "provincia de Mozambique", mais ce changement de nom n'a pas changé les faits de l'histoire et de la géographie. Le Mozambique n'est pas une province du Portugal et ne le sera jamais. Faisant partie de l'Afrique, le Mozambique doit partager avec les Etats africains les joies de l'indépendance et les gloires de la liberté.

157. En Angola persiste la même situation douteuse. Le Portugal mène une guerre coloniale pour combattre une guerre de libération. Il est déplorable que les puissances de l'OTAN, au lieu d'aider les populations africaines à reconquérir leur liberté, aident le Portugal à supprimer la liberté. L'OTAN expédie au Portugal des armes modernes tandis que les Africains défendent leur patrie avec des armes d'autrefois. En fait, l'OTAN prouve bien, comme il le prétend, qu'il défend la liberté, mais c'est la liberté de refuser aux peuples leur liberté. Telle est la liberté que l'OTAN défend.

158. Je passe enfin à la question d'Aden. Pour nous, le problème d'Aden est le problème primordial, même s'il vient en dernier dans le rapport du Comité. La question d'Aden, et, d'ailleurs, de toute la bordure du sud et de l'est de l'Arabie, est trop bien connue pour qu'il soit besoin de l'exposer en détail. C'est une question coloniale et rien d'autre. La Grande-Bretagne s'était emparée de ces territoires pour s'assurer la route des Indes au temps où les Indes étaient les plus beaux bijoux de la Couronne britannique. Mais les Indes ne sont plus britanniques et j'espère que personne en Grande-Bretagne ne le niera. Les Indes appartiennent à leurs peuples libres, indépendants et souverains, et les deux grands Etats de l'Inde et du Pakistan sont maintenant représentés à l'Assemblée.

159. Il est donc naturel qu'Aden et les autres territoires arabes deviennent libres, indépendants et souverains. Les procédés tactiques envisagés actuellement par le Royaume-Uni pour établir une fédération comprenant Aden et les régions voisines, contre la lettre et l'esprit de la résolution de l'Assemblée générale sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, se révèlent au grand jour. Depuis quand les Britanniques sont-ils favorables à une fédération des peuples arabes ? N'est-ce pas la Grande-Bretagne qui a démembre le monde arabe après la première guerre mondiale ? Les Britanniques soutiennent la fédération quand elle sert leurs intérêts, mais, quand leurs intérêts l'exigent autrement, c'est le démembrement qui devient l'objet de leur politique et l'évangile pour lequel ils partent en croisade. Peu leur importe que cet évangile ne soit pas sacré et que cette croisade ne soit pas sainte.

160. La question d'Aden présente une grave menace pour la paix et la sécurité du Moyen-Orient et même du monde entier, dirai-je. Vous comprenez tout de suite de quoi je veux parler. Je pense aux bases militaires d'Aden. En fait, Aden tout entier n'est qu'une énorme base militaire. Avec son potentiel militaire, Aden sera forcément un objectif stratégique ou une base d'opérations. Quoi qu'il en soit, il s'agira d'un échange nucléaire ou thermonucléaire. Aden est terre arabe et tous les territoires voisins sont terres arabes; c'est tout un sous-continent arabe.

161. Il est inévitable que nous, les Arabes, avec nos terres et nos peuples, nous devenions parties à une guerre à laquelle nous n'avons aucune raison d'être partie et à laquelle nous ne désirons pas participer. Nous serons entraînés dans la guerre contre notre volonté et contre une nation avec laquelle nous n'avons aucune raison de nous quereller, encore moins de faire la guerre.

162. Cette situation est intolérable et les Nations Unies doivent y mettre fin. Les bases militaires britanniques d'Aden doivent être démantelées sous le contrôle des Nations Unies. Si les puissants Etats-Unis s'inquiètent de Cuba, ce petit Etat, vous pouvez imaginer les sentiments de nos tribus sans défense, qui ne sont pas à 150 kilomètres du rivage inquiétant, mais au cœur même du pays, là où se trouvent les missiles et les bases des missiles. En un mot, il faut laisser libres les peuples d'Aden et des autres territoires. C'est à eux d'établir eux-mêmes leur propre constitution. C'est à eux de choisir leur propre destin, que ce soit fédération, rattachement, union ou toute forme possible d'autodétermination.

163. En conclusion, je me permettrai de dire que le Comité spécial a fait d'excellent travail. Il a amorcé la décolonisation. Nous sommes certains que le Comité continuera son activité en Afrique, en Asie et en Océanie avec le même zèle et la même volonté. Aussi longtemps que le colonialisme subsistera sur la terre, le Comité devra subsister lui aussi; il faut qu'il reste là pour chasser le colonialisme de la terre entière.

164. Au cours de cette session, six nouveaux Etats Membres ont été admis à l'Organisation. Nous ne pouvons que nous réjouir de voir cette maison de la fraternité humaine ainsi bondée, remplie d'un mur à l'autre. Mais nous aurons toujours de la place pour de nouveaux venus, il y aura toujours ici de la place en abondance pour de nouveaux Membres d'Asie et d'Afrique, car la maison de la liberté ne cesse de s'agrandir. Elle n'exclura personne, elle accueillera tout le monde.

165. Nous trouvons pourtant que nous ne sommes pas encore au complet. Certainement, notre joie est immense d'avoir vu entrer six nouvelles nations à l'Organisation pendant cette session. Nous sommes heureux que la Trinité et Tobago et la Jamaïque apportent à l'Organisation le charme de leur climat, la beauté et l'harmonie de leurs paysages. Nous nous sommes réjouis de voir le Rwanda et le Burundi rejoindre leurs collègues africains dans la course vers la liberté. Nous avons été heureux d'accueillir l'Algérie, et l'admission de l'Ouganda ajoute encore à notre joie. Nous sommes vraiment heureux et même profondément remués de cette réunion attendue si longtemps. Mais, au milieu de ces émotions joyeuses, nous ne pouvons nous empêcher d'exprimer notre grande inquiétude.

166. Trop nombreuses sont les nations qui restent en dehors de l'Organisation. Environ 100 millions de personnes souffrent encore dans les chaînes de la répression sous le joug de la domination étrangère. Il y a encore des guerres de libération menées contre le colonialisme sur plusieurs champs de bataille. Il y a encore des centaines de camps de concentration, de prisons, de tribunaux militaires, de chambres de torture, et toutes formes de souffrances humaines. Il y a encore des millions de nos frères qui sont persécutés et victimes de la discrimination simple-ment parce que leur peau est noire et parce que leurs cheveux sont crépus. Il y a encore des millions de réfugiés partout dans le monde qui languissent loin de leur patrie et aspirent à rentrer dans leurs foyers. A l'ordre du jour de la présente session, comme aux 14 sessions précédentes, figure la question des réfugiés de Palestine. Toute une nation réfugiée vit actuellement en exil, mais elle est résolue à regagner sa mère patrie, à rétablir sa vie nationale, à libérer le pays de ses ancêtres, à mettre en pratique sa souveraineté et son indépendance, et à occuper enfin sa place légitime ici, à l'Organisation, aux côtés de toutes les nations du monde.

167. Nous pensons à tous ces millions de gens d'Asie et d'Afrique alors que nous examinons ce rapport sur la décolonisation. Faisons donc de notre rapport à la présente session, pour libérer ces membres de la famille humaine, les millions de nos frères qui luttent encore si vaillamment pour leur liberté en Angola, en Palestine, en Afrique du Sud, au Mozambique, en Oman, sur les côtes méridionales de l'Arabie et dans toutes les régions d'Asie et d'Afrique. Si nous y parvenions, les Nations Unies atteindraient un nouveau caractère d'universalité: ce serait les Nations Unies d'un monde libre. L'Organisation ne serait plus seulement celle des nations qui étaient unies dans la guerre, mais celle de toutes les nations unies dans la paix et la liberté.

M. Zafrulla Khan (Pakistan) reprend la présidence.

168. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de Cuba qui a demandé à faire usage de son droit de réponse.

169. M. JUARBE Y JUARBE (Cuba) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Nous sommes au regret de retenir l'Assemblée à cette heure tardive, mais nous avons jugé nécessaire d'apporter un petit éclaircissement à propos de l'allusion faite à Cuba par le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite.

170. Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite, dont nous admirons tous l'éloquence impétueuse, nous a dit qu'il ne voulait pas établir de parallèle entre la présence d'une base atomique britannique sur le territoire du Kenya et les armes défensives de la République révolutionnaire de Cuba. Il nous a dit que Cuba est un pays libre, souverain et indépendant. Mais il a ajouté que, si les craintes des Etats-Unis au sujet de Cuba sont justifiées, les craintes des pays voisins du Kenya se justifient aussi, notamment celles des peuples d'Asie qui sont dans la même zone que le Kenya.

171. Nous voulons préciser au représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite, et nous savons bien qu'il ne l'ignore pas, que Cuba n'est pas une colonie, que les armes qui existent à Cuba sont des armes défensives d'une République qui, comme il l'a dit, est libre, souveraine et indépendante, que les armes qui existent au Kenya sont des armes offensives, comme toutes celles qui se trouvent aux mains des puissances colonialistes dans des territoires coloniaux, que les armes du Kenya, comme celles de tout territoire colonial, sont destinées à maintenir et à renforcer le colonialisme, toujours en vue de l'agression interne contre le peuple asservi et de l'agression externe contre celui qui menacerait le maintien du colonialisme.

172. D'autre part, les armes qui existent à Cuba sont anticolonialistes et anti-impérialistes; ce sont les armes défensives d'un peuple menacé de mort par l'impérialisme des Etats-Unis, par le colonialisme des Etats-Unis, par l'acharnement des Etats-Unis à continuer l'exploitation de notre peuple et sa dégradation, comme l'a rappelé le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite. Tout cela, nous avons réussi à l'arrêter le 1er janvier 1959.

173. Nous regrettons de ne pas être du même avis pour ce qui est d'établir un parallèle impossible entre les deux situations; nous regrettons vivement qu'on ait parlé de Cuba et établi un tel parallèle, même sans intention de le faire. En ces jours où notre pays, qui n'est pas une grande puissance, ni militaire ni économique, lutte pour son existence même, nous savons que le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite n'a pas eu l'intention de nous blesser, mais nous avons jugé bon de donner des précisions pour le cas où ces paroles risqueraient, dans un certain milieu ou sur un certain plan, de provoquer quelque confusion.

174. Pour terminer, nous répétons ceci: il existe à Cuba des armes pour la défense de la liberté, de l'indépendance et de la souveraineté, défense pleinement légitime, dans le cadre de la Charte des Nations Unies et conformément aux dispositions du droit international. Il existe à Cuba des armes pour défendre cette liberté et même, si nécessaire, pour défendre le Kenya, pour défendre le peuple de l'Arabie Saoudite, ou tout autre peuple menacé dans sa liberté, son indépendance et sa souveraineté.

175. Cuba est prête à se défendre, la tête haute, sans peser les risques, car, lorsqu'il s'agit de défendre la liberté, l'indépendance et la souveraineté d'un peuple, autrement dit sa vie même, on ne songe pas à peser les risques.

176. Nos armes ne sont pas comme celles qui se trouvent au Kenya et nous regrettons d'avoir dû le dire à la suite des déclarations du représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite.

177. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite qui désire faire usage de son droit de réponse.

178. M. SHUKAIRY (Arabie Saoudite) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je serai très bref. Je ne veux pas engager un débat sur la question de Cuba. J'ai dit bien clairement dans ma déclaration que je ne voulais pas toucher au fond de la question, dans un sens ou dans l'autre, et, si je ne me trompe, je l'ai dit deux fois. Tel est mon premier point.

179. Deuxième point: j'ai dit dans ma déclaration que je ne voulais établir aucun parallèle, aucune comparaison entre la situation de Cuba et celle des territoires en question, Aden et le Kenya. Je l'ai dit deux fois aussi et je le répète; je ne désire en cette occasion établir aucun parallèle, aucune comparaison entre la situation de Cuba et toute autre situation.

180. Troisième point: j'ai dit nettement que, si la situation provoquée à Cuba est justifiée, elle l'est plus encore au Kenya et à Aden. Ce petit mot "si", avec ses deux lettres "s" et "i", répond à toute la question. Je prends bonne note de l'explication et des éclaircissements fournis par mon collègue de Cuba et je comprends parfaitement ses appréhensions.

La séance est levée à 13 h 20.

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale (suite) 793

POINT 25 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale (suite)

1. M. DIALLO Telli (Guinée): Depuis de nombreuses années, et singulièrement depuis 1960, les divers aspects de la décolonisation sont devenus, sans contestation possible, le centre principal des préoccupations de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Aujourd'hui, plus que jamais, la décolonisation reste de loin, avec le désarmement, dont elle est une des conditions primordiales, le problème international le plus grave auquel notre organisation doit faire face dans ses efforts pour la réalisation de ses objectifs essentiels qui sont le maintien et le renforcement de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Il n'est, en effet, aucun des organes essentiels des Nations Unies, aucun de ses organismes de travail, aucune de ses institutions spécialisées qui n'ait été mis sérieusement à contribution dans cette œuvre de décolonisation politique, économique et culturelle. Session après session, une proportion de plus en plus importante des points de notre ordre du jour se rapporte à ce thème central, et l'ordre du jour de la présente session confirme éloquentement cette tendance qui demeure la meilleure illustration des efforts louables des Nations Unies pour la liquidation du système de domination et d'exploitation coloniales.

2. En outre, depuis 1958, à la quasi-totalité des reprises de session, l'attention s'est en fait concentrée sur la décolonisation que discutent non seulement le Conseil de tutelle, la Quatrième Commission et l'Assemblée réunie en séance plénière, mais également, et à des titres divers, toutes les autres commissions de l'Assemblée générale. Le Conseil de sécurité et la Cour internationale de Justice eux-mêmes n'ont pu se tenir à l'écart de cette préoccupation centrale; le premier a eu à s'occuper non seulement du drame congolais, mais aussi de la menace à la paix que constitue la guerre coloniale menée par le Portugal en Angola; quant à la Cour internationale de Justice, elle se trouve saisie depuis 1959 de la question du Sud-Ouest africain, territoire à statut international, mais que le Gouvernement de la République sud-africaine, par un procédé inqualifiable, a constamment refusé de soumettre au régime normal de tutelle des Nations Unies, en vue de sa libération définitive. Cette activité ne s'est pas limitée, il s'en faut, au Siège de l'Organisation à New York. En effet, durant le seul été dernier et dans le seul cadre de la décolonisation, quatre organes importants des Nations Unies ont parcouru le continent africain pour s'acquitter de leurs mandats respectifs. Les missions effectuées en Afrique respectivement par le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, le Sous-Comité chargé d'examiner la situation en Angola, le Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal et, enfin, le Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain, toutes ces missions ont soulevé en Afrique un intérêt considérable et renforcé les espoirs et la confiance des peuples africains que de nouvelles et décisives étapes seraient franchies en vue d'assurer l'accélération du processus de leur libération définitive.

3. Tout ce qui précède prouve suffisamment qu'une partie importante des activités de notre organisation se trouve accaparée par les divers problèmes qui se rattachent à la décolonisation.

4. Le temps nous paraît venu de nous débarrasser définitivement de cette gangrène coloniale, afin de consacrer nos préoccupations, nos activités et nos énergies aux autres fins constructives de la Charte, l'amitié entre les peuples et la coopération entre les Etats. Aussi bien, ma délégation ne perdra pas de temps à faire le procès du colonialisme; les faits sont connus de tous. Au cours de nombreux débats antérieurs, toute la lumière a été faite sur le colonialisme, sur ses causes et ses manifestations, sur ses conséquences, ses abus, ses forfaits et ses crimes. Par ailleurs, tout a été dit sur le régime de répression et de terreur, sur les pratiques de travail forcé et de discrimination raciale, sur les violations systématiques de toutes les formes de liberté, sur les humiliations gratuites et les brutalités infligées à des peuples sans défense, sur les actes de vandalisme et, par endroits, sur la politique de génocide que l'on a tenté d'employer en vain pour endiguer la marée du nationalisme; la cause est désormais entendue. Et c'est bien sur la base de ces informations que l'Organisation des Nations Unies, se faisant l'écho de l'opinion publique mondiale, a condamné solennellement le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Son verdict historique n'est autre que la Déclaration solennelle du 14 décembre 1960 sur l'octroi immédiat et inconditionnel de l'indépendance à tous les pays et à tous les peuples encore colonisés^{1/}.

5. Pour la délégation de la Guinée, cette déclaration, comme l'a dit à cette tribune le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite [1168ème séance], n'est pas une résolution comme les autres. Bien plus qu'une résolution, le texte fondamental adopté le 14 décembre 1960 est, en réalité, une deuxième charte, celle de la liberté pour tous les peuples asservis, celle qui vient combler si heureusement les graves lacunes de la Charte élaborée à San Francisco. A bien des égards, la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960 apparaitra, avec le temps, comme la deuxième charte politique des Nations Unies, élaborée à l'intention des peuples dominés d'Asie et d'Afrique que les puissances coloniales avaient réussi, des siècles durant, et même à la Conférence de San Francisco, à maintenir en marge de la vie internationale. On comprendra aisément, dans ces conditions, l'importance exceptionnelle que nous donnons au rapport du Comité spécial [A/5238] soumis à notre examen et à notre sanction. Tout comme la Déclaration à la mise en œuvre de laquelle il est consacré, ce rapport n'est pas pour nous un rapport comme les autres. C'est un monument capital destiné à la mise en application de la deuxième charte qui sera retenue par l'histoire comme l'une des œuvres maîtresses, peut-être l'œuvre maîtresse, de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est dans ces perspectives qu'il convient de replacer notre débat actuel pour lui restituer tout à la fois sa signification véritable, son sens politique et aussi toute sa portée universelle. Les faits sont tout à la fois très simples et très clairs.

6. L'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, au cours de sa quinzième session, a proclamé solennellement la nécessité d'assurer l'indépendance immédiate et inconditionnelle de tous les pays et peuples coloniaux. A cette fin, elle a invité toutes les puissances coloniales à transférer sans condition ni réserve tous les pouvoirs aux peuples des territoires encore subjugués, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes.

7. Un an plus tard, au cours de sa seizième session, devant le refus de coopération et la carence des puissances coloniales, en tout cas devant l'inobservation de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, l'Assemblée générale, notant les graves dangers que fait courir à la paix et à la sécurité internationales tout retard dans l'application de cette déclaration, insistait auprès des puissances coloniales pour qu'elles assurent une application scrupuleuse des dispositions prescrites en matière de décolonisation. En outre, l'Assemblée générale créait, par sa résolution 1654 (XVI), un Comité spécial de 17 membres ayant pour mandat de veiller à la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance.

8. Ainsi donc, l'Assemblée générale, après avoir posé en 1960 le principe de la libération de tous les peuples, s'est penchée, en 1961, sur l'urgente nécessité d'une application effective de ce principe.

9. Qu'en sera dans ce domaine capital la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale? Se haussera-t-elle au niveau des responsabilités que lui imposent tout à la fois les impératifs de notre temps, sa mission historique et les espoirs fervents que tant de peuples encore asservis placent aujourd'hui en elle? Telle est, brièvement résumée, la question qu'il importe d'avoir constamment à l'esprit en abordant l'examen du rapport du Comité spécial (A/5238) soumis actuellement à notre appréciation.

10. Ce rapport a retenu toute notre attention. Il convient dès l'abord de féliciter très sincèrement le Comité spécial pour le travail sérieux qu'il vient de nous présenter et qui constitue, à nos yeux, un outil précieux pour permettre à notre assemblée, au cours de la présente session, d'accélérer considérablement le processus de décolonisation.

11. Notre approbation porte à la fois sur les méthodes de travail du Comité spécial comme sur les résultats auxquels ce travail a abouti. Tout d'abord, sur le plan de la méthode, il était particulièrement opportun que le Comité spécial abordât son travail par l'Afrique, où se trouve la quasi-totalité des pays et des peuples encore maintenus sous domination coloniale et où se situent incontestablement les situations les plus explosives et qui, de ce fait, requièrent les solutions les plus urgentes.

12. Par ailleurs, nous pensons que le Comité spécial a eu parfaitement raison de refuser de se transformer en comité de renseignements. En décidant d'utiliser non seulement les informations du Secrétariat, mais aussi les données recueillies sur place en Afrique au cours de ses déplacements au Maroc, en Ethiopie et au Tanganyika, le Comité spécial a montré un souci louable d'aller au cœur même du problème qu'il avait mission de résoudre. Le séjour du Comité spécial en Afrique a soulevé partout dans le continent et particulièrement chez les populations encore asservies un intérêt intense et nourri de légitimes espoirs.

13. Quant à la substance même du rapport, l'étude spécifique de territoires particuliers, qui se trouvent être les plus peuplés ou qui se trouvent devant les situations les plus graves, demeure certainement une contribution positive à notre commune entreprise. Néanmoins, sur ce point, notre sentiment est que ces études apparaissent un peu trop longues pour les conclusions auxquelles le Comité spécial est finalement parvenu. Un travail plus concis aurait certainement permis au Comité spécial de se pencher sur plus de territoires et de formuler, à l'issue de ces études particulières, une conclusion d'ensemble portant sur la totalité de son mandat, conclusion qui n'a pu être formulée, hélas, probablement faute de temps. Il reste, cependant, que, si le Comité spécial n'a pas tiré cette conclusion d'ensemble, il nous a fourni tous les éléments nécessaires pour permettre à chaque délégation de se prononcer en toute connaissance de cause. En effet, les résultats des études concrètes et spécifiques par territoire peuvent permettre de dégager une synthèse d'ensemble valable pour tous les territoires coloniaux et donner ainsi la substance nécessaire à une résolution générale qui soit sinon la conclusion définitive, du moins la suite logique et normale des résolutions 1514 (XV) et 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale.

14. A cet égard, il nous paraît particulièrement indiqué d'analyser succinctement les conclusions du Comité spécial sur les 12 territoires sur lesquels son enquête a porté. Ainsi donc, nous allons passer rapidement en revue les recommandations principales et les conclusions définitives auxquelles le Comité spécial a abouti à l'issue des études consacrées à chacun des territoires.

^{1/} Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale.

15. Tout d'abord, en ce qui concerne la Rhodésie du Sud, le rapport (A/5238), au paragraphe 152 du chapitre II, cite la résolution 1747 (XVI) dans laquelle l'Assemblée générale, après avoir noté avec regret que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord n'a pas encore pris des mesures pour transférer tous pouvoirs au peuple de la Rhodésie du Sud, demande que la résolution 1514 (XV) soit appliquée au plus tôt — je souligne les mots "au plus tôt" — à la Rhodésie du Sud afin que ce territoire puisse devenir un nouvel Etat africain indépendant.

16. Au sujet du Nyassaland, le Comité spécial, prenant acte de la décision du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni d'engager des pourparlers avec le Dr Banda sur les progrès constitutionnels du territoire, a exprimé l'espoir que ces pourparlers aboutiront à la fixation d'une date — je répète "à la fixation d'une date" — de l'accession du Nyassaland à l'indépendance (par. 67 du chap. IV du rapport).

17. Par ailleurs, le Comité spécial, après avoir réaffirmé le droit inaliénable des peuples du Bassoutoland, du Betchouanaland et du Souaziland à l'indépendance, demande à l'Assemblée de déclarer solennellement à l'intention de l'Afrique du Sud que toute tentative pour annexer ces territoires ou pour porter atteinte à leur intégrité territoriale sera considérée par l'Organisation des Nations Unies comme un acte d'agression qui viole la Charte des Nations Unies (par. 214 du chap. V du rapport).

18. En ce qui concerne Zanzibar, le Comité spécial invite la Puissance administrante à ne négliger aucun effort pour que ce territoire accède à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible — je répète "accède à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible" — conformément à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (par. 154 du chap. VI du rapport).

19. Quant à la Guyane britannique, le Comité spécial prie le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et le Gouvernement de la Guyane britannique de reprendre immédiatement — je souligne "immédiatement" — les négociations en vue d'aboutir à un accord sur la date de l'indépendance — encore "la date de l'indépendance" — de ce territoire, conformément aux vœux de la population tels que son parlement les a exprimés (par. 84 du chap. VII du rapport).

20. En ce qui concerne le Mozambique, le Comité spécial, après avoir réaffirmé solennellement le droit inaliénable du Mozambique à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, appuie ses revendications en vue de son accession immédiate à l'indépendance et prie le Conseil de sécurité, au cas où le Portugal refuserait d'appliquer la présente résolution et les résolutions antérieures de l'Assemblée, de prendre des mesures appropriées, y compris, le cas échéant, l'adoption de sanctions, pour obtenir que le Portugal se conforme à ses obligations (par. 109 du chap. VIII du rapport).

21. Au sujet du Sud-Ouest africain, le Comité spécial conclut que le moment est venu pour les Nations Unies de prendre d'urgence des mesures concrètes, y compris éventuellement des sanctions à l'encontre de l'Afrique du Sud, pour empêcher l'annexion du Sud-Ouest africain par ce pays et pour assurer au plus tôt — je souligne "pour assurer au plus tôt" — son accession à l'indépendance (par. 124 du chap. IX du rapport).

22. Pour le territoire du Kenya, le Comité spécial invite la Puissance administrante et tous les intéressés à n'épargner aucun effort pour que le territoire accède à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible — je souligne "accède à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible" — conformément à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et, pour conclure, le Comité exprime l'espoir que le Kenya deviendra un Etat indépendant et souverain et se joindra à la communauté des nations dans le plus bref délai (par. 88 du chap. X du rapport).

23. Finalement, en ce qui concerne l'Angola, le Comité spécial, après avoir réaffirmé solennellement le droit inaliénable du peuple angolais à l'indépendance et appuyé ses revendications en vue de son accession immédiate à l'indépendance — je souligne "son accession immédiate à l'indépendance" — demande au Gouvernement portugais d'assurer le transfert des pouvoirs au peuple de l'Angola, conformément à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. En outre, le Comité spécial prie le Conseil de sécurité, au cas où le Portugal persisterait à refuser d'appliquer la présente résolution et les résolutions antérieures de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, de prendre les mesures appropriées, y compris l'adoption de sanctions, pour obtenir que le Portugal se conforme à ses obligations (par. 44 du chap. XI du rapport).

24. Ainsi donc, une même idée se dégage de l'ensemble des conclusions particulières sur les territoires spécifiques étudiés par le Comité. Cette idée a été traduite pour chacun des territoires par la nécessité d'une libération qualifiée tantôt d'immédiate, tantôt de très rapide, devant avoir lieu tantôt le plus tôt possible, tantôt dans les plus brefs délais et autres expressions analogues, qui toutes traduisent la même pensée: la nécessité urgente d'une action, la nécessité urgente de l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV), la nécessité urgente et impérieuse qu'il y a d'accélérer le processus de décolonisation. A cette idée fondamentale, il n'y a pas une seule exception: c'est donc, pensons-nous, autour de cette idée qu'il convient de bâtir la résolution d'ensemble sanctionnant le rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept. A cet égard, il n'est pas superflu de rappeler que c'est précisément cette nécessité d'accélérer le processus de décolonisation qui a été à la base de l'intervention des Nations Unies tant en 1960 qu'en 1961. Sur ce point précis, la résolution 1514 (XV) avait été claire en invitant les puissances coloniales à prendre des mesures immédiates en vue de transférer sans aucune condition ni réserve tous les pouvoirs aux peuples coloniaux.

25. Ainsi donc, libération immédiate, sans condition ni réserve, de tous les peuples coloniaux, tel est bien le principe fondamental consacré par la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960. Afin qu'il ne subsiste aucune équivoque et pour couper court aux arguments fallacieux de tous ceux qui brandissent avec obstination la prétendue nécessité d'une préparation à l'indépendance, l'Assemblée générale écartait catégoriquement tout préalable basé sur le retard des territoires subjugués. Elle posait ainsi au paragraphe 3 de cette même déclaration de 1960 le principe, à nos yeux fondamental, que:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

Il importe aujourd'hui d'avoir présent à l'esprit ce principe sans lequel toute politique de décolonisation ne serait que pure duperie par le fait qu'on laisserait à la fantaisie de la puissance coloniale le libre choix de se dérober à toute obligation de décolonisation effective.

26. Fort heureusement, ce principe posé, rien ne pouvait plus servir de refuge légal ni même de paravent aux tenants de la prolongation du système de domination coloniale. Deux issues, et deux seules, s'offraient désormais aux colonisateurs : s'exécuter, en libérant leurs colonies, ou se rebeller ouvertement contre l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Comme on pouvait le craindre, c'est bien malheureusement la deuxième attitude, si lourde de conséquences, que nombre de puissances coloniales ont préféré adopter.

27. Devant cette rébellion et ce défi délibéré, et eu égard aux menaces de discorde et de graves conflits internationaux qui en découlent, il importe que l'Assemblée générale assume aujourd'hui toutes ses responsabilités en exigeant, quoi qu'il advienne, le respect de sa déclaration solennelle du 14 décembre 1960 et sa mise en œuvre sans délai. Les puissances coloniales, par leur inaction, par leur manque de coopération et, dans certains cas, par leur rébellion ouverte, cherchent à vider de tout sens l'expression "libération immédiate". Il nous appartient de couper court à ces manœuvres si nous voulons sauver notre œuvre en exigeant le respect de l'esprit et de la lettre de la résolution 1514 (XV). C'est pour cette raison qu'il importe de donner à présent à la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960 une signification plus concrète et plus précise en fixant un délai limite pour la libération effective des territoires sous tutelle, des territoires non autonomes et de tous les autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à leur pleine indépendance.

28. Nous nous sommes, pour notre part, toujours prononcés contre tout sursis, si minime soit-il, au régime de domination, car notre conviction a toujours été et demeure que tout peuple, à tout moment, doit être laissé libre de diriger lui-même ses propres destinées. De ce fait, à notre avis, rien ne peut justifier un seul instant l'esclavage des individus ou la domination des peuples. Cependant, l'attitude de résistance passive ou de rébellion caractérisée de certaines puissances coloniales oblige aujourd'hui l'Assemblée générale à prévoir de nouvelles dispositions en fonction des réalités nouvelles afin de parachever son œuvre de salut universel. Cette étape nouvelle qu'exige de nous la situation créée par la non-application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, c'est celle-là même que faisait acclamer à cette tribune, le 9 octobre 1962, le président Sekou Touré, lorsqu'il a déclaré :

"Si nous devons tous nous réjouir de l'adoption par l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies d'une résolution relative à l'indépendance immédiate des pays africains, nous conservons, cependant, de sérieuses inquiétudes quant à la lenteur apportée par certaines puissances coloniales dans l'application de ladite résolution.

"... C'est pourquoi il est rendu nécessaire que l'actuelle session de l'Assemblée adopte une nouvelle résolution fixant au 24 octobre 1963 — dix-huitième anniversaire de l'ONU — la date limite pour l'accession des colonies à l'indépendance nationale." [1148ème séance, par. 32 et 33.]

29. Telle est la proposition concrète que la délégation de la République de Guinée est heureuse de soumettre à nouveau à l'appréciation de notre assemblée à titre de conclusion générale à nos débats sur le rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept.

30. Cette proposition, qui découle tout naturellement de l'analyse détaillée des études spécifiques faites sur les divers territoires inventoriés, est, en réalité, la synthèse des conclusions diverses auxquelles le Comité spécial a finalement abouti dans l'ensemble des cas particuliers qu'il a eu l'occasion d'examiner. Une telle proposition correspond parfaitement à la nécessité impérieuse, unanimement reconnue par l'opinion internationale, d'accélérer sérieusement le cours irréversible de la décolonisation. A ce titre, elle comblerait heureusement les immenses espoirs que tous les peuples encore asservis placent dans nos assises actuelles. Par-dessus tout, cette proposition est la suite normale et logique de la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

31. Enfin, et il convient de le proclamer hautement, l'adoption de cette proposition serait le couronnement d'une œuvre qui réhabiliterait définitivement les Nations Unies aux yeux de tous les peuples colonisés, dont la triste condition et les cris de détresse n'avaient pas été, pour des motifs connus de tous, suffisamment pris en considération à la Conférence de San Francisco.

32. Pour toutes ces raisons, nous pensons que, pour demeurer fidèle à elle-même et parachever sa grande œuvre de décolonisation, l'Assemblée générale, à l'issue de nos débats actuels, se doit de proclamer solennellement le 24 octobre 1963 comme la date de la fin de la colonisation dans le monde. Dans le même esprit, elle se doit d'inviter instamment toutes les puissances coloniales à observer scrupuleusement les dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance et, en particulier, à transférer sans condition ni réserve, avant cette date, tous les pouvoirs qu'elles détiennent encore aux peuples des territoires dépendants afin de leur permettre d'accéder à leur pleine indépendance nationale et de jouer sur le plan international le rôle normal dévolu à tous les peuples souverains du monde.

33. L'adoption par l'Assemblée d'une telle proposition consacrerait, sur le plan des principes, l'achèvement de l'œuvre de décolonisation entreprise par l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Elle aurait sans nul doute une portée immense partout dans le monde. Il est aisé de prévoir les conséquences heureuses qu'elle engendrerait partout, en Asie, en Amérique, dans le Pacifique, en Europe même, et plus particulièrement dans le continent africain. Ce serait certainement un pas décisif vers la réconciliation générale des peuples et des Etats qui pourraient, enfin, lier à jamais, pour les célébrer ensemble, la fin du régime colonial et l'anniversaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

34. C'est compte tenu de toutes ces raisons que nous soumettons avec confiance à l'approbation de l'Assemblée générale cette proposition destinée à mettre un terme définitif, en 1963, à toutes les aventures coloniales qui ont coûté et qui coûtent encore si cher, à tous égards et inutilement, à toute la communauté internationale.

35. Enfin, notre proposition, si elle était approuvée, aurait tout naturellement une incidence directe sur l'ensemble des questions coloniales et des résolutions soumises dans ce domaine, à quelque titre que ce soit et par quelque organe que ce soit, à la décision de l'Assemblée générale.

36. Sous cette seule réserve, qui s'imposait de toute évidence, notre délégation approuve l'ensemble des conclusions et, partant, les projets de résolution contenus dans le rapport du Comité spécial, objet de nos délibérations actuelles.

37. C'est assez dire que la délégation guinéenne est d'avis que le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, ayant donné satisfaction, devrait être reconduit pour parachever, dans les nouveaux délais impartis, sa mission qui est de veiller à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, dans le cadre de son mandat initial et à la lumière des dispositions de la résolution qui sera adoptée à la présente session.

38. Dans ce même ordre d'idées, notre délégation approuve la suggestion du Secrétaire général par intérim visant à supprimer tous les autres comités et sous-comités chargés, à des titres divers, des territoires non autonomes, en vue de concentrer toutes les questions antérieurement de leur ressort au niveau du seul Comité spécial des Dix-Sept.

39. En dehors de tous les avantages signalés à cet égard par le Secrétaire général dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel [A/5201/Add.1], avantages qui ont trait à l'économie de personnel et d'argent et à l'allègement des tâches des délégations intéressées, cette suggestion nous paraît parfaitement conforme à la nouvelle situation créée, depuis 1960, par l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance.

40. Depuis cette date, en effet, le stade d'information nous semble révolu, en tout cas dépourvu de tout intérêt pratique. Aussi tout comité créé à cette fin, comme le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, aurait dû disparaître en raison de l'inutilité manifeste de son mandat dans le contexte politique nouveau créé au sein des Nations Unies.

41. Mieux, nous pensons quant à nous que le Conseil de tutelle lui-même devrait disparaître, non seulement pour les raisons précitées, mais encore parce qu'il importe hautement que les Nations Unies, ayant pris sur la décolonisation les décisions que l'on sait, donnent l'exemple en cette matière en libérant immédiatement tous les territoires sous tutelle. Toute modification touchant le Conseil de tutelle requiert, nous le savons, un amendement de la Charte, mais notre délégation pense que cette adaptation se révèle presque indispensable. Faute de la possibilité de dissolution légale du Conseil de tutelle, celui-ci devrait être mis en sommeil au plus vite. Les faits, tout autant que la situation politique, l'exigent comme étant la seule solution de bon sens.

42. Cependant nous reconnaissons que la suppression de tous les comités et comités spéciaux relatifs aux territoires dépendants pourrait justifier un élargissement de la composition actuelle du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept pour des raisons de stricte efficacité. A notre avis, un tel aménagement devrait absolument éviter de modifier l'équilibre actuel de la composition politique qui a permis au Comité spécial de réaliser le travail fécond que nous approuvons aujourd'hui.

43. A cette fin et compte tenu des délais dont nous disposons, nous souhaitons que les éventuelles adjonctions soient limitées à la fois en nombre et en qualité. En ce qui concerne le nombre de ces adjonctions, quatre nous paraît un chiffre raisonnable à ne pas dépasser, sous peine de nuire à la cohésion d'ensemble.

44. Au sujet de la qualité, les nouvelles délégations incluses dans le Comité spécial, quel que soit leur mode de désignation, devraient être choisies en fonction du seul critère de l'efficacité positive de leur contribution réelle à l'objectif essentiel des Nations Unies dans ce domaine, objectif qui demeure l'accélération du processus de décolonisation.

45. Enfin, pour conclure, la délégation guinéenne estime que toute résolution d'ensemble sur le rapport du Comité spécial doit porter au moins sur les deux idées essentielles que nous venons d'analyser: la fixation d'une date limite d'accession à l'indépendance nationale de tous les peuples colonisés et le sort qu'il convient de réserver à l'organisme chargé de suivre la mise en œuvre des décisions de l'Assemblée générale en cette matière.

46. Fidèle à la position anticolonialiste constante de son peuple et de son gouvernement et profondément convaincue d'être en pleine communion d'idées et de sentiments avec non seulement tous les peuples africains et leurs dirigeants, mais également avec tous les autres peuples asservis par le colonialisme et qui luttent pour leur libération et leur réhabilitation totale, la délégation de la République de Guinée se déclare prête, comme toujours, à s'associer activement à toute initiative hardie destinée à permettre à l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies de parachever, au cours de sa dix-septième session, son œuvre la plus noble et la plus immortelle: celle de la décolonisation totale dans le monde en 1968.

47. Notre espoir — celui de tous les peuples colonisés et de toutes les forces de progrès et de paix dans le monde —, notre espoir demeure que, sur une question de cette importance et de cette portée, tous les représentants à cette assemblée accepteront de franchir ensemble au coude à coude, comme en 1960, ce grand pas historique vers un avenir plein de promesses, de liberté et de bonheur pour tous. Ce sera sans doute, pour les Nations Unies, une de leurs plus belles victoires depuis leur création. Nous souhaitons que chaque représentant dans cette salle puisse avoir la fierté d'y avoir contribué pour la plus grande gloire du peuple et du pays au nom desquels il décide ici souverainement de la liberté et du destin des autres peuples maintenus encore arbitrairement et contre leur gré en dehors de la scène internationale.

48. M. WINIEWICZ (Pologne) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il est devenu parfaitement clair pour tous ceux qui siègent à l'Assemblée que c'est le problème de la liquidation du colonialisme qui tient maintenant la première place, juste après la question du désarmement général et complet, aussi bien dans l'opinion publique mondiale que dans les travaux de l'Organisation. Ces deux problèmes sont étroitement liés. En fait, le maintien de la paix, le renforcement de la coexistence pacifique des Etats et le développement de la coopération internationale dépendent de la solution qui sera finalement donnée à ces deux problèmes.

49. Tant que nous ne serons pas parvenus à mettre effectivement fin à la course aux armements, tant que nous n'aurons pas désarmé le monde, nous ne pourrons pas extirper radicalement les menaces permanentes de conflits et le cauchemar d'une guerre destructrice. Nous ne pourrions pas non plus créer des conditions propices à une coopération pacifique entre les nations tant que l'exploitation, la discrimination et l'asservissement des nations qui subissent le joug du colonialisme ne seront pas finalement éliminés.

50. Ceux qui ont jusqu'à présent tiré profit de la faiblesse et de l'oppression des peuples misérables et qui entendent continuer à le faire s'appuient sur la force et avant tout sur la force militaire. Le maintien des positions stratégiques et le développement des bases militaires sont un des facteurs de la vigoureuse résistance opposée à l'émancipation et à la libération des peuples opprimés. Si le progrès de la décolonisation favorise et contribue à renforcer la coexistence pacifique et la coopération pacifique de l'humanité, le progrès de la lutte pour l'arrêt de la course aux armements et la mise en œuvre d'un programme de désarmement général et complet ne peut donc qu'accélérer la liquidation définitive du colonialisme. De même que le désarmement est la nécessité la plus impérieuse de notre époque, de même la liquidation du système colonial est un phénomène qui influence les événements contemporains et qui constitue à notre époque une révolution — je dirai même que c'est la révolution de notre époque.

51. Nous nous rappelons encore nettement la réception touchante et enthousiaste qui a été faite dans cette salle, à si juste titre, à la délégation de l'Algérie libre et indépendante. Elle a montré combien la question de la liberté et de l'indépendance des nations touchait profondément tous les cœurs et tous les esprits. Le rôle important joué par les nations libérées des liens coloniaux et devenues Membres de l'Organisation est significatif par son influence sur l'évolution de la situation internationale. Ce sont ces nations qui élèvent leur voix puissante pour défendre la paix mondiale, qui agissent en faveur du désarmement, qui ont conscience des liens entre le colonialisme et les préparatifs de guerre et qui réclament le respect des principes de la coexistence pacifique des nations, énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies.

52. Avec la fin du colonialisme, des perspectives entièrement nouvelles s'ouvrent pour l'humanité. Les nations déjà libérées apportent aux entreprises de l'homme la pleine contribution de leur génie national, jusqu'ici opprimé par les colonisateurs. En se joignant aux Nations Unies, elles n'ont pas seulement élargi l'Organisation quantitativement, elles y ont aussi apporté un changement qualitatif.

53. Il existe encore des territoires et des peuples qui attendent leur admission dans la communauté des nations indépendantes, souveraines et égales. Cinquante millions d'hommes subissent encore la domination coloniale dans trois continents. Beaucoup d'entre eux meurent en combattant, les armes à la main, ou devant des pelotons d'exécution, ou en prison. C'est leur destin, leurs infortunes et leur avenir qui font l'objet de notre débat. Allons-nous les aider dans la lutte qu'ils mènent pour leur émancipation nationale? Allons-nous répondre à leurs espoirs, qui dépendent de nos décisions?

54. Tout à fait récemment, un des pétitionnaires, un représentant du peuple de la Rhodésie du Sud, a demandé à la Quatrième Commission: "Vous qui êtes des gens libres, comprendrez-vous jamais ce que c'est que d'être né en esclavage, de vivre en esclavage, sans autre espoir que de mourir en esclavage?"

55. Souvenons-nous des étapes du colonialisme, de triste mémoire. On a commencé par traiter les territoires dépendants comme un "no man's land", pour en faire par la suite le théâtre de l'inhumanité de l'homme envers l'homme, du trafic des esclaves, de guerres coloniales oruelles, pour finir par des tentatives de disculper le colonialisme en alléguant sa prétendue mission civilisatrice. Il est grand temps de clore ce chapitre infamant de l'histoire humaine.

56. Au cours de la dernière guerre, bien des pays en Europe ainsi qu'en Asie ont connu l'oppression des fascistes de la "race des seigneurs". A la Pologne non plus, les épreuves les plus terribles n'ont pas été épargnées. Nous savons bien ce que c'est que de vivre sans la liberté. Bien que nous en ayons été privés pendant six ans, nous n'avons jamais capitulé et nous avons combattu, sans égard aux sacrifices, jusqu'à la victoire finale.

57. Les Nations Unies — c'est-à-dire nous, peuples libres, d'où que nous venions, quelles que soient la couleur de notre peau, nos idéologies ou nos croyances — ne peuvent pas et ne doivent pas rester indifférentes au sort de ceux qui sont encore tenus en esclavage. Les aspirations de tous les territoires coloniaux, grands ou petits, vers une émancipation nationale doivent faire l'objet de toute notre sollicitude jusqu'à l'élimination complète du colonialisme. Nous devons déjouer toutes les manœuvres politiques, dont les buts sont si faciles à deviner, qui mettent en cause l'avenir de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guyane britannique, du Kenya, de la Rhodésie et d'autres territoires. Nous devons le faire non seulement dans l'intérêt des nations qui luttent pour leur liberté, mais aussi dans l'intérêt de la paix et dans notre intérêt à tous.

58. Nous nous souvenons de quels principes on s'est inspiré lorsqu'on a abordé la question de la liquidation du colonialisme à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, qu'on peut qualifier d'historique. Selon la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, énoncée dans la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée le 14 décembre 1960:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales."

La Déclaration est devenue une arme puissante aux mains des peuples dépendants qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance. Nul n'a osé s'opposer à l'adoption de la Déclaration. Pourtant, même à cette époque, plusieurs abstentions ont fait naître des doutes sur la sincérité de quelques puissances en ce qui concerne la mise en œuvre des dispositions de la Déclaration. Comme les événements l'ont prouvé depuis deux ans, cette mise en œuvre s'est heurtée à la résistance, déclarée ou dissimulée, des puissances coloniales.

59. Lorsque nous avons examiné, à la seizième session, la question de l'application de la Déclaration — à nouveau sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique —, nous sommes arrivés à la conclusion qu'à part quelques exceptions les puissances coloniales s'opposaient à cette application. C'est pourquoi l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 1654 (XVI).

priant instamment toutes les puissances coloniales d'observer scrupuleusement et sans délai les principes de la Déclaration. En même temps, aux termes de cette résolution, le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept a été créé et chargé de surveiller, au nom des Nations Unies, le processus de décolonisation et d'élaborer des mesures pratiques et des recommandations concernant les territoires dépendants en vue d'obtenir l'application complète de la Déclaration anti-colonialiste.

60. Le Comité spécial a présenté les résultats des travaux approfondis qu'il a accomplis pendant une période relativement courte — six mois dans un rapport complet et détaillé portant sur les 12 territoires qui ont fait jusqu'à présent l'objet de ses délibérations [A/5238]. De l'étude des faits très précis et analysés objectivement qui sont présentés dans le rapport, on ne peut manquer de conclure qu'il constitue une mise en accusation, pondérée mais grave, du colonialisme. Le caractère angoissant des faits relatés et analysés dans le rapport frappe d'autant plus qu'il décrit une situation qui existe toujours à une époque où le colonialisme, déjà critiqué et condamné, approche de sa fin.

61. Le Comité spécial a adopté la bonne méthode en étudiant séparément chaque territoire, ce qui lui a permis d'examiner attentivement les caractères propres à chacun d'eux. Grâce à l'audition de pétitionnaires, le Comité a eu connaissance des opinions, des vœux et des réclamations des autochtones. On peut considérer également que le voyage du Comité en Afrique, où se trouvent la plupart des territoires dépendants, a donné des résultats concrets, de même que la pratique qui consiste à envoyer des missions pour étudier sur place la situation dans certains territoires.

62. Grâce à ces méthodes, le Comité a pu examiner attentivement les problèmes qui lui étaient soumis, porter un jugement sur ces problèmes en connaissance de cause et élaborer des conclusions, soit sous la forme de projets de résolution présentés à l'Assemblée générale, soit, comme il a eu raison de le faire, sous la forme de recommandations adressées directement aux puissances administrantes.

63. Bien que le rapport se limite à l'étude de la situation dans 12 pays seulement, il montre cependant que de nombreuses mesures sont encore d'une application généralisée dans la politique coloniale des puissances administrantes. Je me permettrai d'en citer quelques exemples. En Angola, le Gouvernement portugais poursuit depuis près de deux ans, comme chacun sait, une guerre d'extermination contre le mouvement de résistance. Il y a eu des dizaines de milliers de morts. Il semble évident, je pense, que le Portugal n'aurait pu agir ainsi sans l'aide militaire et sans le soutien des puissances atlantiques. On peut donc dire que le gouvernement de Lisbonne n'est pas le seul responsable des événements de l'Angola, mais que la responsabilité est partagée par ceux qui fournissent du matériel militaire au Portugal et qui tolèrent la politique coloniale de leur allié. Ce n'est pas en prétendant qu'on s'en lave les mains qu'on y changera quelque chose. Il est grand temps que les Nations Unies prennent la décision de mettre fin au sauvage massacre de la population de l'Angola. Il est grand temps de mettre en œuvre des mesures énergiques pour obliger le Portugal, qui s'y refuse, à respecter les décisions de l'Assemblée générale.

64. Une situation explosive existe aussi au Mozambique où l'on peut affirmer que les autorités portugaises sont en train de préparer, par le rassemblement de 40 000 soldats, une action ouverte contre le mouvement national de libération. Attendrons-nous que le Mozambique explose à son tour et se mue en un autre Angola? Il faut que la répression contre la population autochtone cesse, que les prisonniers politiques soient libérés et que les partis politiques soient autorisés à exercer librement leurs activités. Il faut créer des institutions politiques représentatives pour que les pouvoirs soient finalement transférés au peuple du Mozambique.

65. Les événements qui se sont déroulés récemment en Afrique du Sud — il est d'ailleurs question de ce problème dans presque tous les comités et commissions de l'Organisation — suscitent de graves inquiétudes. La militarisation du pays se poursuit rapidement, les dépenses militaires ont été doublées et on a toutes raisons de supposer que des préparatifs militaires sont dirigés contre les mouvements nationaux de libération au Sud-Ouest africain et, en fait, contre la population africaine de la République sud-africaine également.

66. De même, dans la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland les autorités ont augmenté les effectifs de la police et de l'armée. Le Premier Ministre de la Fédération, sir Roy Welensky, menace d'employer la force pour maintenir la domination des colons blancs et briser le mouvement national de libération des Africains. Là aussi, la situation est lourde de graves menaces.

67. Le rapport du Comité spécial révèle d'ailleurs d'autres faits qui méritent une attention particulière. Par des constitutions imposées et des régimes électoraux égarément compliqués, les autorités coloniales cherchent à maintenir le pouvoir aux mains de la minorité de colons blancs et essayent d'empêcher, ou tout au moins de retarder, la mise en place de gouvernements exprimant la volonté de l'écrasante majorité de la population. La Constitution de la Rhodésie du Nord est un exemple frappant de cette politique. Seulement 3 p. 100 de la population africaine possède en fait le droit de vote, en raison des nombreuses conditions discriminatoires portant sur la propriété, les impôts et l'instruction, qui sont mises à l'octroi du droit de vote. Le régime électoral prévu par la Constitution est tellement complexe que, comme l'a fait remarquer à juste titre un quotidien digne de foi, The Scotsman, les experts le considèrent comme le plus compliqué qui ait jamais existé en ce bas monde. C'est sur de telles bases qu'ont eu lieu les récentes élections, dont les résultats n'ont fait que confirmer la nécessité d'instituer dans ce territoire le suffrage universel et égal. C'est exactement dans ce sens que le Comité spécial a formulé ses conclusions et ses recommandations — ce qui montre une fois de plus sa sagesse.

68. Je me permettrai maintenant de parler de la situation dans deux autres territoires où l'inégalité des Africains se manifeste d'une manière tout aussi troublante. Il y a quelques jours, malgré la résistance de la population africaine et au mépris de l'opinion exprimée par l'Assemblée générale, une nouvelle Constitution ouvertement discriminatoire envers la population africaine est entrée en vigueur en Rhodésie du Sud. Au Betchouanaland, les deux tiers des sièges au Conseil législatif sont occupés par les 3 000 colons blancs, tandis que les 350 000 Africains n'en ont que le tiers. Je pourrais citer bien d'autres exemples du même genre.

69. Des mesures frappant d'interdiction la création de partis politiques ou d'illégalité ceux qui existent déjà ont été prises pour empêcher la population autochtone d'exprimer sa volonté. L'Assemblée générale s'est déjà déclarée très nettement contre l'interdiction arbitraire de la Zimbabwe African Peoples Union en Rhodésie du Sud et contre les persécutions dont ses dirigeants font l'objet, par l'adoption, à la présente session, de la résolution 1755 (XVII). Nous attendons maintenant la réaction de la Puissance administrante qui est, en dernier ressort, responsable du territoire de la Rhodésie du Sud. Les autorités de la Rhodésie du Sud ont eu recours à cette même méthode exactement pour la troisième fois en trois ans afin de supprimer toute opposition contre leur politique raciale et contre leurs tentatives de création d'un Etat raciste au cœur même de l'Afrique noire.

70. Les autorités coloniales utilisent aussi, parmi les manœuvres tactiques qui font partie de leur arsenal, celle qui consiste à susciter des conflits d'ordre politique, racial ou tribal et à les exploiter, comme c'est le cas au Kenya et à Zanzibar, ou même en Guyane britannique. Elles refusent ensuite d'accorder aux peuples le droit inaliénable d'exprimer leur volonté et de devenir indépendants, sous prétexte de désaccords entre les groupements politiques des pays dépendants. L'histoire fournit de nombreux exemples montrant que les impérialistes ont souvent appliqué cette méthode qui consiste à diviser pour régner, bien que ses résultats n'aient jamais été heureux. Pour ce qui est de la Guyane britannique, je ne peux qu'exprimer notre déception de l'échec récent de la conférence constitutionnelle dont la convocation avait été retardée si souvent par la Puissance administrante et qui, sous prétexte d'un différend entre le gouvernement et les partis politiques d'opposition, a remis à plus tard, une fois de plus, la fixation de la date de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique. L'Assemblée générale se trouve ainsi devant une situation nouvelle et, par conséquent, elle devra adopter de nouvelles recommandations pour assurer l'octroi de l'indépendance sans autre retard au peuple de ce pays.

71. Une question vient évidemment à l'esprit: comment comprendre et expliquer cette résistance des puissances coloniales? La réponse ne semble pas difficile: par la position prise sur le plan international par ces puissances et aussi par des motifs très forts fondés sur des intérêts très particuliers d'ordre financier et économique.

72. Dans la région de l'Afrique étudiée par le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept se trouvent de nombreux et riches gisements de précieux minerais non ferreux comme des minerais de cuivre, de nickel, d'or, d'argent, de tungstène, de cobalt, d'uranium, etc. L'extraction de ces minerais fournit des bénéfices énormes aux capitaux américains et aux capitaux de l'Europe de l'Ouest. C'est sur les liens mutuels des trusts internationaux et non sur la charité qu'est fondée l'alliance — qu'on ne peut qualifier de "sainte-alliance" — du Portugal, de l'Afrique du Sud et de la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland. Telle est la clef qui permet aussi de comprendre les mobiles secrets de la sécession du Katanga.

73. D'autre part, les colons blancs qui se sont emparés des terres arables les plus étendues et les plus fertiles, d'où ils ont expulsé la population autochtone, sont considérés comme les garants de la sécurité des intérêts acquis dans ces pays. Les colons blancs s'étant appropriés les meilleures terres, les autochtones en sont réduits à chercher du travail à un salaire de famine et à émigrer en masse. Dans les colonies portugaises, la vie économique est entièrement fondée sur le travail forcé. Les autorités portugaises vont même jusqu'à tirer des bénéfices de l'exportation de la main-d'œuvre autochtone. C'est ainsi qu'aux termes de ce qu'on appelle la Convention du Mozambique, conclue par le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland, le Gouvernement portugais, comme le Comité l'a appris grâce aux pétitionnaires, s'est engagé à envoyer chaque année dans ces pays des dizaines de milliers d'Africains pour y travailler dans les mines. Les autorités portugaises reçoivent 7 livres par travailleur africain. Tout commentaire serait superflu.

74. Il est un autre fait auquel je n'ai fait qu'une brève allusion dans mes remarques préliminaires et dont il faut tenir compte.

75. De nombreuses bases militaires appartenant à des puissances coloniales sont disséminées un peu partout dans les territoires dépendants. Il est évident qu'elles jouent toutes un rôle déterminé dans la stratégie d'ensemble des puissances atlantiques. Il ne faut ni sous-estimer le rôle de ces bases dans la lutte menée contre le mouvement d'indépendance des territoires en question, ni oublier qu'elles constituent des moyens de pression sur les nouveaux Etats indépendants voisins. Il est donc facile de comprendre pourquoi la grande conférence sur un monde sans bombe, qui s'est tenue à Accra en juillet dernier, a été si résolument favorable à des mesures de désarmement et plus particulièrement à la dénucléarisation de l'Afrique. A ce propos et en tenant compte de la résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée générale sur la dénucléarisation de l'Afrique [résolution 1652 (XVI)], il vaudrait la peine de se demander de quel genre d'armes les puissances coloniales et leur alliés disposent dans leurs bases africaines. Ont-ils des stocks de bombes nucléaires destinées à une force de frappe aérienne? Ont-ils des plates-formes de lancement pour fusées à tête nucléaire? Le représentant de l'Arabie Saoudite a parlé plus franchement de ce problème dans son impressionnant discours d'il y a deux jours. Je me borne à poser des questions; c'est aux représentants de l'Afrique d'exiger des réponses.

76. Le rapport du Comité spécial ne peut fournir des réponses à toutes les questions pertinentes. Les données qu'il rassemble et les conclusions qu'il en tire permettent cependant d'évaluer d'une façon tout à fait satisfaisante l'étendue et la portée des problèmes qu'il reste encore à résoudre.

77. Bien entendu, on peut souligner que la lutte pour l'émancipation nationale et l'influence qu'elle a eue sur les décisions des Nations Unies ont déjà contribué à libérer tant de peuples coloniaux qu'il ne reste aujourd'hui plus grand-chose de ce problème. Mais cette constatation ne fait que renforcer l'argument selon lequel il faut accélérer d'autant plus le processus de libération des nations encore dépendantes. Il est inadmissible que des droits qui ont déjà été octroyés à certains peuples soient refusés à ceux qui luttent avec une impatience croissante pour obtenir l'application pleine et entière du droit à l'autodétermination, à l'indépendance et à l'égalité souveraine, énoncé dans la Charte des Nations Unies.

78. Aucun argument ne peut être invoqué en sens contraire. Les défenseurs du régime colonial cherchent encore à nous convaincre que les peuples dépendants n'ont pas encore atteint la maturité nécessaire et ne sont pas prêts à prendre le pouvoir entre leurs mains. Pourtant, il est apparu, à la lumière de l'expérience, que cette thèse était dépourvue de tout fondement et la démonstration en a été donnée clairement après la guerre par la rapide émancipation de nations dont les représentants, pleinement conscients de leurs responsabilités et faisant preuve d'une grande maturité d'esprit, prennent part aux initiatives et aux décisions internationales les plus importantes comme aux travaux de l'Organisation. Ce n'est que dans l'indépendance, dans le libre exercice de leur volonté nationale et dans une évolution nationale sans contraintes que les forces créatrices propres à chaque nation peuvent se donner libre cours. Ce n'est que dans l'indépendance qu'elles peuvent contribuer pleinement et efficacement au progrès de l'humanité.

79. Le processus de décolonisation doit être mené à bonne fin au plus tôt. Le Président de la Guinée a suggéré à juste titre, dans son discours à l'Assemblée générale [1148ème séance] qu'on fixe la date limite de la décolonisation à octobre 1963. L'orateur qui m'a précédé a aussi exposé ce problème. Nous approuvons le bien-fondé de cette proposition, mais en même temps nous pensons qu'il faudrait prendre des mesures conformément aux conclusions du Comité spécial pour: premièrement, faire cesser toutes les persécutions et toutes les pratiques discriminatoires dont sont victimes les populations des territoires dépendants; deuxièmement, accorder les libertés démocratiques et la liberté d'action aux partis politiques représentant la population autochtone; troisièmement, procéder à des élections fondées sur le suffrage universel et égal; quatrièmement, transférer dans le plus bref délai possible tous les pouvoirs constitutionnels à des organes nationaux établis à la suite de ces élections. Toutes ces conditions figurent d'ailleurs dans les projets de résolution présentés par le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept sur les divers territoires.

80. Le paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la Déclaration anticoloniale devrait être étudié d'une manière approfondie. Je le cite encore une fois:

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète, et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée."

81. Ce qui importe réellement, ce n'est pas l'indépendance et la liberté d'action pour les colons blancs qui ont récemment été représentés à la Quatrième Commission par sir Edgar Whitehead; c'est l'indépendance pour les habitants autochtones qui sont les seuls véritables maîtres de ces territoires jusqu'à présent coloniaux.

82. La délégation polonaise est en faveur de l'approbation du rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept et de l'adoption des recommandations qu'il contient. Nous sommes d'avis que les Nations Unies doivent continuer à déployer leurs efforts en matière de décolonisation dans le cadre du Comité spécial. En six mois, le Comité spécial a prouvé son utilité; les résultats de son activité auraient été encore plus concrets si les puissances administrantes avaient fait preuve d'un plus grand esprit de coopération.

83. Le Comité spécial, en prenant pour principe directeur la résolution 1654 (XVI), est parvenu à élaborer des méthodes qui, dans ses activités pratiques, ont résisté à l'épreuve du temps et ont permis de mieux comprendre la situation telle qu'elle existe actuellement dans les principaux territoires coloniaux. Je crois aussi que nous devons exprimer toute notre reconnaissance au Comité spécial pour n'avoir négligé aucun des événements importants qui ont marqué la lutte de libération des peuples coloniaux au cours de l'année 1962 et pour avoir formulé des conclusions soigneusement pesées.

84. L'Assemblée générale devrait recommander au Comité spécial, en tant que principal organe chargé de la décolonisation, de continuer, conformément à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, à observer l'évolution de la situation dans tous les territoires sous tutelle et non autonomes, ainsi que dans tous les autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance. Ces efforts devraient, dès que possible, porter particulièrement sur les territoires que le Comité n'a pas encore pu étudier jusqu'à présent.

85. Par tous les moyens dont il dispose, le Comité spécial devrait s'efforcer de parvenir à une décolonisation rapide et pacifique conformément aux termes de son mandat et avec la collaboration aussi complète que possible des puissances administrantes. Au cas où cette entreprise rencontrerait une résistance et des obstacles consistant en une violation des principes de la Charte des Nations Unies ou de la Déclaration anticolonialiste, et au cas où cette situation mettrait en danger les intérêts de la population autochtone ou représenterait une menace contre la paix, le Comité pourrait et devrait avoir recours à la convocation d'une session extraordinaire de l'Assemblée générale ou à la convocation du Conseil de sécurité. En même temps, nous estimons opportun d'adresser un appel solennel à toutes les puissances pour qu'elles accordent au Comité spécial leur entière coopération et leur assistance sans aucune restriction.

86. Les peuples qui aspirent, aujourd'hui plus que jamais, à la paix et au progrès sont pleinement en droit de demander à tous les gouvernements leur coopération active afin de supprimer les restes du colonialisme et, au cas où ce serait nécessaire, pour condamner et châtier ceux qui ne se montrent pas disposés à renoncer à leurs intérêts égoïstes et qui s'opposent à la marche irréversible de l'histoire. C'est ce qu'a déclaré M. Wladyslaw Gomulka, au nom de la Pologne, à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, dans les termes suivants:

"... rien ni personne ne pourra restaurer le régime colonial, que ce soit sous ses formes anciennes ou sous de nouvelles formes. Toute tentative pour faire machine arrière se heurtera à la résistance des nations récemment libérées, qui ne sont plus seules, car elles ont à leurs côtés des forces puissantes. A leurs côtés, se trouvent tous ceux qui chérissent la cause de la paix et de la liberté, les pays qui édifient un nouvel ordre socialiste, les nations qui ont fait l'expérience de l'oppression et de l'exploitation coloniales." [874ème séance, par. 32.]

87. Le chemin qui conduit les peuples coloniaux vers l'indépendance complète n'a jamais été un chemin facile et il en est toujours ainsi. C'est tout d'abord d'eux-mêmes que dépend la bonne direction que ce chemin prendra. C'est le devoir des Nations Unies de les aider dans la réalisation de leurs aspirations, dans leur lutte et dans leurs efforts, et c'est là ce qu'ils attendent de nous.

88. M. AUBAME (Gabon): Vous avez reçu, Monsieur le Président, le jour de votre élection à la présidence de notre dix-septième session, les félicitations que le représentant du Cameroun, M. Bindzi, vous a adressées au nom des 12 pays frères de l'Union africaine et malgache.

89. Je tiens cependant, avant d'aborder la question inscrite à notre ordre du jour, au nom du Président de l'Union africaine et malgache, Léon Mba, et au nom du Gouvernement gabonais, à vous exprimer la joie que nous éprouvons causée votre brillante élection à un poste où tant de vos prédécesseurs illustres ont fait entendre les paroles de sagesse et de paix qui restent un précieux enseignement.

90. Ce n'est certes pas une tâche facile que de présider aux destinées de notre haute institution. Mais, quand on fait un retour en arrière et que l'on constate que notre famille, qui comptait, lors de sa fondation, 51 pays, groupe aujourd'hui 110 nations libres, on peut dire que les secrétaires généraux et les présidents qui ont eu la lourde charge de nos institutions ont bien mérité de l'humanité.

91. Avec quelle émotion nous avons tous salué l'admission du Rwanda, du Burundi, de la Jamaïque, terre de liberté, célébrée par le grand libérateur Simon Bolivar, du territoire de la Trinité et Tobago, de l'Ouganda, qui viennent pacifiquement d'accéder à la souveraineté.

92. Enfin, la présence de la délégation de la République algérienne démocratique et populaire consacre la naissance à l'indépendance de ce peuple qui vient d'obtenir sa liberté. La sagesse et le courage du général de Gaulle, l'appui de tous les pays d'Afrique et d'Asie qui doivent à la France leur fierté nationale, ont mis un terme à de douloureux combats. Une fois encore le libérateur de la France, fidèle à l'idéal de liberté de la nation française, a montré que l'amitié fraternelle pouvait succéder aux combats et aux déchirements.

93. Pendant longtemps, l'Occident a détenu le monopole de la puissance mondiale. Les deux guerres qui ont dévasté le monde, l'évolution de populations trop longtemps opprimées, la naissance de jeunes nations qui ont pris conscience de leur rôle international, ont créé de nouveaux centres de puissance, et l'Afrique a surgi de son long sommeil pour prendre la place à laquelle son dynamisme et sa sagesse lui donnent un droit incontestable.

94. Le Gabon est fier de collaborer à la construction d'une Afrique nouvelle, car son gouvernement, sous la sage et ferme direction du président Léon Mba, est conscient des responsabilités écrasantes qu'impose la construction d'une nation. La cause de nombreuses catastrophes a été l'indifférence des dirigeants aux besoins du peuple, avec sa contrepartie inévitable, l'attitude négative des populations. Mon gouvernement s'est efforcé d'associer les élites aux responsabilités politiques. Les Gabonais acceptent l'immense effort de construction nationale qui leur est demandé et suivent attentivement les grands débats de notre organisation, qui permettent à toutes les nations de faire entendre leur voix. Ils savent bien qu'il n'est point d'espoir de conserver une jeune indépendance sans la solidarité internationale et la protection de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, comme d'ailleurs les populations encore colonisées savent que leur combat pour leur libération serait par trop inégal sans l'appui des peuples libres.

95. Le gouvernement et le peuple gabonais ont suivi avec passion l'évolution de la situation des pays opprimés d'Afrique, mais ils estiment que la mauvaise volonté — pour ne pas dire la mauvaise foi — de certains interlocuteurs a entravé considérablement le déroulement rapide de nos travaux.

96. La création du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept chargé de la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux marque une étape importante dans la voie de la libération. Comment, en effet, notre organisation pourrait-elle laisser se prolonger la situation tragique de nos frères de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise, de l'île Saint-Thomas et de l'île du Prince? Chaque jour nous parviennent de ces territoires occupés des informations dignes de foi sur les massacres de populations qui aspirent à la liberté. D'ailleurs, comment une nation occupante qui impose à son peuple une dictature fasciste, qui en violation flagrante des droits de l'homme a inscrit 15 p. 100 seulement de la population sur les listes électorales, a créé des tribunaux d'exception, interné ou emprisonné sans jugement, contraint toute opposition libérale à vivre dans la clandestinité, comment cette nation pourrait-elle entendre la voix de populations d'une autre race écrasées par le plus impitoyable des régimes d'oppression? De tous les territoires occupés par le Portugal nous parviennent les mêmes appels déchirants qui confirment les résultats de l'enquête du Comité spécial.

97. Au Mozambique, les travailleurs noirs sont recrutés par la Chambre des mines de l'Afrique du Sud et, chaque année, plus de 100 000 malheureux sont obligés de quitter leur pays et d'abandonner leur famille, souvent sans espoir de retour. Cette nouvelle forme d'esclavage est d'ailleurs une source de revenus importants, puisque l'Afrique du Sud verse 6 dollars par travailleur recruté par les autorités portugaises. La situation des paysans n'est guère plus enviable — grâce à des salaires de famine, la production cotonnière rapporte au Portugal plus de 50 millions de dollars par an et permet aux fabricants de textiles portugais de produire à bas prix et de réaliser d'énormes bénéfices au détriment des travailleurs noirs.

98. En ce qui concerne l'instruction des habitants du Mozambique, 1 p. 100 seulement de la population a fréquenté l'école pendant deux ans. L'enseignement secondaire et supérieur ne sont ouverts qu'à une infime minorité de privilégiés.

99. En Angola, la situation est toujours tragique. La lutte dans le maquis fait des dizaines de milliers de victimes; des femmes, des enfants, des vieillards sont sauvagement assassinés. Jamais, dans la douloureuse histoire du colonialisme, on n'avait vu un pareil acharnement dans la tuerie. Les prêtres, les pasteurs n'ont pas été épargnés, car, aux yeux de l'occupant portugais, leurs sentiments de compassion passent pour une complicité et une adhésion aux idées de liberté. Et à Lisbonne le révérend père de Andrade a été jeté en prison.

100. Faut-il rappeler que, depuis plus de 500 ans, tous les droits sacrés de l'homme sont refusés aux Angolais: le droit à l'assistance médicale, la liberté d'expression, l'égalité devant la justice et devant la loi.

101. Le représentant de mon pays et ses collègues de l'Afrique noire ont apporté à la Commission la documentation émouvante recueillie auprès des réfugiés qui ont réussi à s'évader des territoires occupés par le Portugal; ils ont souligné, une fois encore, la non-observation par le Gouvernement portugais du Chapitre XI de la Charte et de la résolution 1542 (XV). Il est en effet inadmissible que le droit de décider unilatéralement s'il lui appartient ou non de donner des renseignements sur la situation de ces territoires soit évoqué par la délégation portugaise.

102. L'échange de notes entre les représentants du gouvernement de Lisbonne et le Président du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/5160, par. 10 à 12] permet de juger avec quelle obstination ce gouvernement a toujours refusé l'entrée de ses territoires colonisés aux représentants des Nations Unies. C'est ainsi que le chargé d'affaires du Portugal à Léopoldville faisait savoir au Président du Comité spécial des Sept que quelques membres seulement dudit Comité pourraient être autorisés à se rendre en Angola, mais que les représentants de certains pays, s'étant montrés de parti pris, ne pouvaient pénétrer dans ce territoire. Aussitôt, le 28 mai 1962, le Comité jugeait que cette exclusion de deux membres nommés par l'Assemblée générale était une insulte et rendait l'invitation portugaise inacceptable. En tant qu'Etat Membre des Nations Unies, le Portugal devait apporter son concours à l'ONU pour l'application des résolutions de notre assemblée. Aussi le Comité spécial des Sept s'est-il vu dans l'obligation de recevoir des pétitions et d'entendre des pétitionnaires au sujet de la situation qui règne dans les territoires administrés par le Portugal.

103. En décidant de se rendre en Afrique pour prendre connaissance des renseignements que les réfugiés des colonies portugaises pourraient lui fournir, le Comité spécial a marqué l'intérêt que notre organisation portait aux malheureux habitants des régions d'Afrique en voie de libération.

104. Au cours de ce séjour, les représentants de tous les partis politiques des colonies portugaises ont été entendus, parmi lesquels il convient de citer: l'Union démocratique nationale du Mozambique, l'Union nationaliste africaine du Mozambique, l'Union nationale africaine du Mozambique indépendant, le Mouvement populaire de libération de l'Angola, présidé par M. Mario Andrade, le Front national pour la libération de l'Angola, présidé par M. Roberto Holden, l'Union nationale des travailleurs angolais, le Mouvement de libération de la Guinée dite portugaise et le Comité de libération des îles Saint-Thomas et du Prince.

105. Si j'ai cru utile d'énumérer quelques-uns de ces principaux mouvements d'indépendance, c'est pour que vous vous rendiez compte de l'état de maturité politique des populations asservies par le Portugal. Mais, malgré les nuances dans l'exposé de leurs justes revendications, un idéal commun unit les dirigeants de ces groupements: la volonté de libération, de la libération sans retard.

106. Ces populations ne peuvent, en effet, rester soumises à des maîtres qui n'ont su ni respecter leur culture, ni assurer leur progrès économique et social, ni développer leur instruction, ni les protéger contre les abus, l'exploitation, la maladie, la misère et la faim.

107. Et le Comité spécial des Sept estimait qu'il incombait au Portugal d'assurer la mise en application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, qui déclare en son paragraphe 1:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation ... étrangère constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales."

108. Dans son paragraphe 3, donnant ainsi une réponse anticipée à certaines affirmations d'un membre d'un gouvernement colonialiste, la résolution 1514 (XV) dispose:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

109. D'ailleurs, ce prétexte évoqué à plusieurs reprises par les occupants n'est-il pas la condamnation même du colonialisme et l'aveu qu'aucun effort n'a été tenté pour éduquer les masses asservies, condamnées à travailler pour leur maître?

110. Le problème de l'Angola, le plus angoissant peut-être, puisque c'est sur ce territoire que des victimes sont tombées par milliers et tombent encore chaque jour, met d'ailleurs doublement la paix en péril et constitue une menace de conflit qui doit être écartée le plus rapidement possible. Il ne s'agit pas seulement des massacres de populations pacifiques, mais également de l'aide apportée par le Portugal au mouvement séparatiste des dirigeants katangais. Car l'Angola, relié directement par voie ferrée au Katanga, permet le transit des armes et des munitions pour les mercenaires qui combattent les troupes des Nations Unies et entravent l'œuvre de pacification entreprise avec énergie par notre organisation. Les Etats-Unis s'étaient émus de l'utilisation faite par le Portugal des armes livrées dans le cadre de l'OTAN et avaient même effectué une démarche à Lisbonne invitant le Portugal à ne pas utiliser cet armement pour décimer la population angolaise. Nous pensons que les nations amies membres de l'Organisation du Traité de l'Atlantique nord doivent exercer un contrôle absolu sur l'usage fait par le Portugal d'engins de destruction, qui doivent être réservés à la défense du monde libre et non à l'écrasement d'un peuple qui aspire à vivre, lui aussi, dans un monde libéré.

111. Le Portugal se retranche naturellement derrière des interprétations juridiques, prétendant que les résolutions de l'Assemblée ne peuvent avoir d'effet obligatoire, et affirme que ce problème ne relève pas de la compétence des Nations Unies. Ces arguments ne peuvent être retenus; il s'agit, bien, avant tout, d'une question politique. Aucune échappatoire de procédure ne saurait être acceptée. Chaque jour se traduit par de nouvelles victimes, et nous trahissons l'esprit et la lettre de la Charte des Nations Unies en n'exigeant pas le respect des principes qui sont à la base même de notre institution.

112. Pour abuser l'opinion, certains gouvernements ont étendu à leurs territoires d'outre-mer leur législation nationale, transformant ainsi théoriquement une colonie en une province. Je doute fort que cette fiction juridique ait modifié en quoi que ce soit la volonté d'indépendance de ces populations. Les habitants noirs de terres situées à des milliers de kilomètres, d'une culture différente, ayant leur propre histoire, leurs traditions ancestrales, ne peuvent pas et ne veulent pas considérer leur patrie comme une parcelle du territoire de leur maître. Seule une politique de décolonisation peut assurer aux puissances coloniales actuelles qu'elles conserveront l'amitié des peuples qu'elles doivent libérer.

113. L'afflux régulier de colons auxquels de larges facilités d'installation sont consenties, le renforcement de l'armée, de la police et de la milice du pays colonisateur nous prouvent que la volonté d'indépendance des populations opprimées et leur combat pour leur libération s'affirment chaque jour plus passionnés.

114. En 1946, la Charte de San Francisco a donné à tous les peuples colonisés l'immense espoir d'une libération tant attendue. Quant à nous, des anciennes colonies françaises, nous savions, depuis la Conférence de 1944 tenue à Brazzaville, que l'heure de notre indépendance allait sonner. Mais, seules de tous les territoires d'Afrique ou d'Asie, les possessions portugaises et espagnoles restent soumises à l'occupation. Alors que la France et la Grande-Bretagne ont su, par leur libéralisme, conquérir l'amitié des peuples d'Afrique et d'Asie qu'elles avaient colonisés, le Portugal et l'Espagne s'obstinent à vouloir maintenir sous leur dictature des territoires situés à des milliers de kilomètres et habités par des populations d'une autre race. Le Portugal, indifférent à la souffrance d'une population dont la mortalité infantile atteint 60 p. 100 et où, faute de soins, deux adultes sur trois sont incapables de travailler, a soulevé dans toute l'Afrique une indignation dont cette assemblée doit, dans son intérêt même et pour le maintien de son autorité, tenir le plus grand compte.

115. J'ai, il y a un an, à cette tribune, affirmé que mon pays considérait que le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes était un droit sacré inscrit comme un des buts fondamentaux de notre action [1029^e séance]. Je suis persuadé que la Grande-Bretagne, dont le libéralisme mérite souvent notre hommage, ne laissera pas plus longtemps les populations de la Rhodésie du Sud dans une situation d'inégalité politique et sociale qui est une injure à nos principes.

116. Ce sont les jeunes pays indépendants et ceux qui vont le devenir qui ont droit à toute notre sollicitude. Bientôt, et nous sommes presque unanimes ici à le vouloir, les populations de couleur d'Afrique du Sud seront aussi libérées de cette forme inhumaine de colonialisme qui s'appelle l'apartheid. Oui, il faut que nos frères du Sud-Ouest africain et d'Afrique du Sud soient libérés de la peur, il faut que cessent, comme l'a dit le poète, l'esclavage de la peur et la peur de l'esclavage.

117. Ainsi, le jour, que nous espérons tous proche, où l'amitié universelle des peuples aura chassé toute possibilité de conflit, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, après avoir facilité la libération des nations encore colonisées, pourra consacrer tous ses efforts à l'assistance aux pays en voie de développement. Car, si le monde est divisé par la guerre froide, il est aussi un autre fossé à combler, c'est celui qui sépare les peuples qui bénéficiaient d'une surabondance de produits de ceux qui sont écrasés par la maladie et la faim. Tant qu'une partie de l'humanité aura faim, la décolonisation ne sera pas achevée, car cette division du monde entre satisfaits et misérables est une forme moderne, tout aussi néfaste, du colonialisme, de l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme. Je sais que de nombreux pays ont fait des sacrifices — et nous leur rendons hommage — pour instruire, soigner, nourrir les peuples qui sont encore dans la double misère intellectuelle et matérielle. Mais nous pensons qu'il faut faire encore davantage, car il n'est pas juste, il n'est pas humain, il n'est pas pensable, que deux hommes sur trois ne puissent se nourrir.

118. C'est en cette année de la Décennie des Nations Unies pour le développement que les nations libres d'Afrique reconnaissent l'œuvre accomplie par le Conseil économique et social, mais il reste encore beaucoup à faire. Car le progrès technique, si rapide dans les pays surdéveloppés, accentue le retard des nations qui en sont encore au premier stade de leur infantilisme économique.

119. Il est tout de même terrible que la majorité des nations représentées ici ne soient pas encore parvenues à une étape normale de développement.

120. Ah! si, comme le Conseil l'a justement constaté, la question du désarmement intégral et complet était réglée, si les sommes fantastiques consacrées aux forces de destruction étaient affectées à l'œuvre d'amélioration du niveau de vie de l'humanité, comme la tâche de notre organisation serait facilitée!

121. Conscientes de leur devoir, la délégation et la mission gabonaises ne manqueront pas de collaborer de toute leur énergie à assurer le succès des travaux du Conseil économique et social, en qui les jeunes nations d'Afrique placent tant d'espoir.

122. Notre devoir impérieux, notre véritable raison d'être, les obligations que nous impose la Charte et que nous voulons respecter nous commandent d'oublier tout ce qui nous sépare pour assurer la paix, la sécurité internationale et la justice.

123. La République gabonaise, soyez-en persuadés, ne ménagera aucun effort, ne reculera devant aucun sacrifice pour apporter à cette œuvre humaine et généreuse sa plus large contribution. La foi du peuple gabonais dans notre institution, l'idéal de paix de tous nos compatriotes, la volonté du Président de la République, Léon Mba, et du gouvernement de collaborer de tout notre cœur, de toute notre âme, de toute notre énergie à la libération des peuples encore opprimés, à la sauvegarde de la paix, au progrès moral et matériel de l'humanité sont le gage le plus fidèle de notre attachement aux obligations de notre charte.

124. Quelle déception pour le monde si la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale ne donnait pas, aux graves problèmes inscrits à son ordre du jour, des solutions conformes à l'esprit de coopération internationale qui fut la raison profonde de l'établissement de notre organisation!

La séance est levée à 17 h 25.

POINT 25 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale (suite)

1. U TIN MAUNG (Birmanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Depuis trois ans à peu près, l'Organisation des Nations Unies s'occupe activement de l'examen des divers aspects de la décolonisation. Tant en séance plénière qu'à la Quatrième Commission — désignée officiellement sous le nom de Commission de tutelle — de nombreuses délégations ont participé avec énergie aux débats sur le colonialisme. D'autre part, les représentants des puissances administrantes ont suivi avec plus d'attention les discours et les interventions des représentants des nouveaux Etats indépendants, qui, par leur expérience personnelle et leur connaissance de la situation politique dans certains des territoires dont nous nous occupons, apportent un atout supplémentaire dans notre travail. La délégation birmane apprécie à sa juste valeur leur rôle constructif.

2. Les délégations qui représentent les puissances administrantes se sont efforcées de faire gagner du temps en ne faisant pas souvent usage de leur droit de réponse, ce qui a contribué, me semble-t-il, à accélérer les travaux de la Commission. Le point 25 de l'ordre du jour dont est saisie l'Assemblée générale réunie en séance plénière ne peut pas être réglé en un ou deux jours et nous nous réjouissons de voir l'intérêt manifesté à son sujet par beaucoup de délégations.

3. Le rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale, qui comprend quelque 600 pages, n'est pas un document ordinaire des Nations Unies. Ce dossier volumineux sur la politique coloniale des puissances administrantes et les réactions que cette politique a suscitées chez les représentants des 17 Etats Membres chargés d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme, ainsi que les témoignages présentés au Comité spécial par les pétitionnaires, constitue un ouvrage passionnant et qui donne à réfléchir. Il ressort de ce rapport que, grâce à la pression exercée par l'opinion publique mondiale, le colonialisme peut parfaitement être enterré une bonne fois pour toutes.

4. Je manquerais à mon devoir si je n'offrais pas, au nom de ma délégation, mes félicitations les plus chaleureuses au Comité spécial des Dix-Sept pour la façon dont il a répondu à l'appel des peuples dépendants du monde entier. Les peuples coloniaux se sont tournés vers cet organe compétent pour lui demander conseils et directives dans la lutte qu'ils mènent pour l'indépendance et la liberté.

5. Ce rapport où est examinée la situation dans plus de 10 territoires représente un instrument efficace grâce auquel ceux d'entre nous qui souscrivent pleinement aux buts et aux principes de la Charte et qui souhaitent voir le passage inévitable de la dépendance à l'indépendance s'effectuer de manière pacifique et dans l'ordre pourront, avec la meilleure volonté du monde, accélérer le processus de décolonisation.

6. On sait que, même la fameuse Déclaration une fois adoptée, les puissances coloniales ont été unanimes à manifester de la lenteur, voire de la paresse, à s'acquitter des obligations internationales qui leur incombent en vertu des Chapitres XI et XII de la Charte. Les puissances coloniales avancent fort aisément des arguments et des affirmations qui sont en contradiction avec les normes habituelles de la logique et avec les faits qui existent dans les régions coloniales du monde, ces régions qu'il est impossible de faire entrer, par quelque effort d'imagination que ce soit, dans les limites traditionnelles du monde libre.

7. A maintes reprises, dans les organes principaux des Nations Unies, les représentants de nouveaux Etats indépendants qui étaient passés par des stades divers de la décolonisation nous ont fait profiter de leur expérience et ont présenté des suggestions précieuses aux puissances administrantes, afin que le passage inéluctable de l'état de tutelle et de dépendance à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté nationale puisse se faire de manière pacifique.

8. Je n'ai pas besoin de rappeler ici les vieux arguments usés auxquels les puissances coloniales ont recours. L'Assemblée les connaît bien. Qu'il me suffise de dire que, par le paragraphe 3 du dispositif de la Déclaration [résolution 1514 (XV)], la thèse colonialiste qui a été utilisée naguère comme une ruse contre les peuples dépendants se trouve catégoriquement répudiée une fois pour toutes. Je veux évidemment parler du paragraphe suivant:

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

9. Avant l'adoption de la Déclaration qu'on appelle à juste titre la charte de l'indépendance et de la liberté, le rythme de la décolonisation était toujours fixé par les puissances coloniales. Elles faisaient croire à leurs pupilles, les peuples dépendants, qu'après l'accession à l'indépendance ils se trouveraient en difficultés à moins que leurs problèmes futurs, postérieurs à l'indépendance, ne fussent résolus pendant qu'ils étaient encore au seuil de l'indépendance. Mais tous ces vains efforts pour retarder l'indépendance ont été réduits à néant lorsque les peuples dépendants, exerçant leur droit inaliénable à la libre détermination, se sont lancés avec ténacité dans des mouvements de libération qui ne sont pas allés parfois sans violence ni effusion de sang.

10. Dans certains territoires où les autorités coloniales ont dénié tous les droits politiques et les libertés fondamentales et où, avec la complicité de régimes qui partagent leurs opinions, elles se sont disposées à réprimer sauvagement le mouvement de libération populaire, les puissances et les régimes coloniaux ont eu recours à l'action armée ou à des mesures de répression de toutes sortes pour agir contre le peuple qui luttait pour son indépendance et sa liberté.

11. Bien qu'il y ait longtemps maintenant que la Déclaration sur la décolonisation a été proclamée au monde entier, certaines puissances coloniales s'accrochent encore opiniâtement à leurs idées périmées et à leur politique de domination politique, d'exploitation économique et de discrimination raciale.

12. Bien contre le gré de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ces puissances coloniales se sont opposées à la poussée vers la liberté qui se manifestait chez les peuples coloniaux. Elles n'ont pas cherché à appliquer de leur propre chef et de leur plein gré les dispositions de la Déclaration. Elles ont invoqué toutes sortes d'excuses vagues et équivoques pour retarder l'indépendance.

13. Un an après que l'Assemblée générale eut adopté la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, les Nations Unies ont jugé absolument indispensable de ne pas laisser dépendre l'application de cette déclaration de la bonne volonté et des bonnes dispositions des puissances coloniales, et de les obliger à se rendre compte du danger qu'elles couraient en retardant cette application. Pour constituer un organe efficace et compétent des Nations Unies qui se verrait confier la surveillance de l'application de la Déclaration, 17 États Membres ont été désignés par le Président de l'Assemblée générale, à la seizième session, pour siéger au Comité spécial. Nous sommes maintenant saisis du rapport de ce comité spécial [A/5238].

14. Nous voulons dire d'abord que nous approuvons les méthodes de travail et la procédure du Comité spécial. Sauf en de très rares circonstances, les membres du Comité se sont efforcés de concilier leurs opinions divergentes et sont parvenus à un accord sans devoir voter. Il ne leur a pas toujours été facile d'arriver à l'unanimité sur certaines questions coloniales. À l'exception de cas où des questions de principe essentielles étaient en cause, les 17 membres ont tenté de faire et d'obtenir l'unanimité et de prendre leurs décisions sans recourir à des votes.

15. Deuxièmement, il n'était que juste et équitable que, dans ses délibérations, le Comité accordât la priorité au continent africain et que les 17 membres aient tous considéré absolument indispensable de se rendre dans les territoires africains où existent les situations les plus tendues qui exigent notre attention immédiate.

16. Troisièmement, le Comité ne s'est pas borné à devenir un organe chargé de recueillir des faits ou des renseignements, car, comme nul d'entre nous ne l'ignore, toutes les populations du monde sont parfaitement au courant des manifestations stupéfiantes du colonialisme, des maux qu'il engendre et des craintes qu'il inspire.

17. On ne peut évidemment s'attendre que le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, le premier de son espèce dans les annales des Nations Unies, ait été parfait en tout point. La délégation birmane est la moins qualifiée pour critiquer de trop près la tâche accomplie avec tant d'efficacité par les 17 États Membres.

18. Le volume même du rapport est tel qu'il suffit à faire hésiter les lecteurs éventuels ou ceux qui voudraient étudier le processus de la décolonisation et il ne faut pas oublier que le Comité spécial a à peine abordé les territoires situés dans des continents autres que l'Afrique. Les observations des membres du Comité occupent une place considérable dans le rapport; ces observations nous aident évidemment beaucoup à comprendre les réactions des représentants siégeant au Comité spécial devant les pétitions ou les diverses politiques, mais je crois qu'on pourrait apporter de grandes améliorations aux chapitres qui traitent exclusivement des conclusions générales.

19. Ma délégation estime que ces conclusions générales auraient dû être plus poussées, mais nous comprenons fort bien les raisons pour lesquelles le Comité n'a pas pu formuler de suggestions et recommandations aux fins d'examen par l'Assemblée générale, s'agissant d'accélérer le rythme de la décolonisation. Malgré le caractère peu concret de ses conclusions, le Comité spécial nous a permis d'étudier la situation qui existe dans chacun des territoires dépendants et de recommander les mesures précises que les puissances administrantes devraient prendre, à notre avis, afin que le transfert des pouvoirs aux peuples dépendants qui doivent être finalement maîtres de leur destin puisse s'opérer pacifiquement, dans l'ordre et avec méthode.

20. La responsabilité très nette qui incombe au Comité spécial en vertu du mandat défini par la résolution 1554 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961 est de veiller à ce que la Déclaration ne reste pas lettre morte. Le Comité doit décourager et dissuader les puissances administrantes de prendre toute mesure qui entraverait la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration et des décisions de l'Assemblée générale.

21. En présentant nos observations sur les territoires dont traite le rapport du Comité spécial, nous serons uniquement guidés par des considérations touchant l'urgence du problème et la nécessité d'empêcher la situation de s'aggraver davantage dans tous les territoires.

22. En ce qui concerne la Rhodésie du Sud, territoire non autonome, la Quatrième Commission lui a consacré 38 séances pendant lesquelles 60 délégations ont pris part à la discussion générale. Deux résolutions importantes, la résolution 1755 (XVII) du 12 octobre 1962 et la résolution 1760 (XVII) du 31 octobre 1962, ont été adoptées à l'écrasante majorité des Etats Membres. Nous avons le regret de devoir noter que la Puissance administrante, en l'occurrence le Royaume-Uni, n'a pas encore pris de mesures pour transférer tous les pouvoirs à la population de ce territoire.

23. Le gouvernement de sir Edgar Whitehead a promulgué la Constitution de 1961, que la population a rejetée et à laquelle elle s'oppose avec véhémence, mais qui est maintenant en vigueur. Les élections qui devaient avoir lieu au printemps 1963 sont maintenant fixées au 14 décembre 1962, c'est-à-dire dans quelques semaines seulement. Rien ne permet jusqu'à présent de penser que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni soit parvenu à prendre les mesures nécessaires pour atteindre les objectifs définis au paragraphe 3 du dispositif de la résolution 1760 (XVII) de l'Assemblée générale, en date du 31 octobre 1962.

24. En Rhodésie du Nord, M. Kaunda et son parti ont abondamment prouvé leur modération et leur esprit de coopération en acceptant de se présenter aux élections, alors qu'ils estiment que la Constitution est entachée de racisme et inapplicable. Dans ce territoire, le pouvoir est aux mains d'une petite minorité de colons blancs, au préjudice des droits et des intérêts de la très grande majorité autochtone. L'Assemblée générale doit aider les autochtones de la Rhodésie du Nord en suivant de très près la situation générale en Afrique centrale. La majorité africaine rejettera les rapports de toute nature avec d'autres pays que la puissance coloniale britannique voudrait imposer aux peuples africains. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni devra renoncer au système multiracial tant vanté, dans ses répercussions politiques et économiques, et inviter les autorités fédérales à retirer leurs forces armées de la Rhodésie du Nord.

25. Passant maintenant au Nyassaland, on constate que les problèmes y sont évidemment plus faciles à résoudre que dans les autres territoires de la Fédération. La raison en est simple et claire: les colons européens sont moins nombreux au Nyassaland que dans les autres territoires. Il n'y a donc aucune raison, du point de vue politique, pour que le Nyassaland continue à faire partie de la Fédération.

26. A la Conférence constitutionnelle du Nyassaland, qui s'est ouverte le 12 novembre 1962, M. Hastings K. Banda, chef du parti majoritaire, le Malawi Congress Party, et ministre du gouvernement à majorité africaine, aurait pris l'engagement de retirer le Nyassaland de la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland une fois l'indépendance obtenue. Sous la direction compétente et désintéressée de M. Banda, le peuple du Nyassaland a accepté la Constitution actuelle, faute de mieux.

27. Aux élections générales d'août 1961, le Malawi Congress Party a obtenu 22 des 28 sièges de l'Assemblée législative. Sur les 10 membres du Conseil exécutif, sept sont membres de ce parti.

28. La Conférence constitutionnelle du Nyassaland avait pour tâche et pour objectif d'élaborer une nouvelle constitution, mais les autorités britanniques se trouvent en présence d'un des problèmes les plus difficiles qui se soient jamais posés à elles en

Afrique. Dans son premier discours à la Conférence, le dirigeant du Nyassaland a déclaré que la population du Nyassaland hérit les liens qui l'unissent à la Grande-Bretagne. Mais il a ajouté:

"... nous avons été profondément irrités du fait qu'on nous a imposé un type d'association qui n'est pas en conformité avec ces liens et nous nous sommes élevés avec vigueur contre cette association".

La délégation birmane exprime l'espoir que les autorités britanniques et les dirigeants du Nyassaland auront de nouveaux entretiens qui permettront de fixer la date de l'indépendance.

29. Si nous considérons maintenant les trois territoires dépendant du Haut Commissaire, à savoir le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland, nous nous rappelons que le Gouvernement sud-africain a toujours eu l'intention d'annexer ces trois territoires dont deux sont des protectorats et le troisième est une colonie. Nous savons évidemment ce que dira le Royaume-Uni: c'est qu'il existe dans le South Africa Act de 1909, qui a créé l'Union sud-africaine, des dispositions en vertu desquelles certaines mesures pourraient intervenir si un accord devait être conclu ultérieurement en vue du transfert à l'Union sud-africaine, maintenant devenue la République sud-africaine, des trois territoires dépendant du Haut Commissaire.

30. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a déclaré au Comité spécial que, sur le plan politique, les territoires sont complètement indépendants de l'Afrique du Sud et qu'en 1954 sir Winston Churchill s'est engagé, devant la Chambre des communes, à ce que ces territoires ne soient pas transférés sans que leurs habitants aient été consultés.

31. La Puissance administrante n'a pas besoin de perdre son temps à s'informer officiellement des vœux des autochtones de ces trois territoires. En effet, les pétitionnaires représentant les habitants de ces territoires qui ont été entendus par le Comité spécial ont déjà demandé l'aide des Nations Unies et invité la Puissance administrante à veiller à ce que ces territoires ne soient pas annexés par le Gouvernement sud-africain.

32. En tant que Puissance administrante, le Royaume-Uni n'a pas le choix et doit accorder l'indépendance à ces territoires le plus tôt possible. Nous voulons donc demander instamment au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de ne tenir aucun compte de l'"avertissement" de M. Verwoerd, premier ministre de l'Afrique du Sud, qui, parlant au Transvaal le 30 septembre 1961, a dit que, s'ils étaient indépendants, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland risqueraient de devenir un danger pour l'Afrique du Sud. Je pense qu'il voulait dire que, lorsque ces trois territoires africains accèderaient à l'indépendance, ils seraient si faibles économiquement qu'ils constitueraient une menace grave pour la souveraineté d'une Afrique du Sud dominée par les blancs.

33. Etant donné que la population autochtone des territoires, sous l'impulsion de nationalistes africains progressistes aux idées modernes, a rejeté des constitutions réactionnaires, racistes et antidémocratiques, la Puissance administrante a maintenant pour tâche évidente d'abroger les dispositions constitutionnelles actuellement en vigueur et d'organiser sans plus de retard dans ces trois territoires des élections sur la base du suffrage direct et universel des adultes, comme le Comité spécial l'a recommandé.

34. Les autorités de Pretoria n'ont pas encore renoncé à leur plan en vue d'annexer le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland ou d'empiéter sur leur intégrité territoriale. Il serait donc sage que les Nations Unies se préparent à toute éventualité qui pourrait se produire si l'on tentait de porter atteinte à l'unité nationale et à l'intégrité territoriale d'un de ces trois territoires, ce qui obligerait à prendre des mesures fermes et résolues.

35. Si, quittant ces territoires, nous nous dirigeons vers le nord-est, nous arrivons au protectorat de Zanzibar et Pemba. Ces îles tropicales où croissent les cocotiers et où se répand le parfum du girofle auraient dû rester un paradis paisible. Toutefois, en juin 1961, à la suite d'élections générales, Zanzibar est devenue le théâtre de scènes de désordre et de troubles, dont les causes sont exposées en détail dans le rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept.

36. Le Comité spécial s'est adressé à bon droit à la Puissance administrante pour lui demander de relâcher tous les prisonniers politiques arbitrairement détenus et de mettre fin à l'état d'urgence proclamé à Zanzibar. Là encore il est fait appel à la Puissance administrante qui est le Royaume-Uni et qui est censée protéger le peuple de Zanzibar dont les intérêts devraient passer avant tout, pour qu'elle favorise l'harmonie et l'unité parmi les groupes politiques de Zanzibar, sans retarder l'accession du territoire à l'indépendance sous quelque prétexte que ce soit.

37. Lorsque, partant de Zanzibar, nous allons vers le sud de l'équateur, nous arrivons au Mozambique où nous trouvons une situation tout à fait différente. On sait que le Portugal refuse de coopérer avec les Nations Unies pour préparer le peuple de ce territoire non autonome à l'indépendance complète.

38. Depuis 450 ans, le Portugal exerce au Mozambique, comme dans le reste de son empire, une domination coloniale impitoyable. Les intérêts des autochtones, qui devraient passer avant toute autre chose, sont négligés. La population est privée de ses libertés fondamentales et se voit interdire toute activité politique. Sur les 6 millions et demi d'habitants du Mozambique, les 4 554 Africains qui représentent 0,3 p. 100 de la population et qui sont classés "assimilados" ne peuvent pas siéger au Conseil législatif. En vertu des prétendues réformes constitutionnelles, deux chefs de village africains seulement seront autorisés à siéger au Conseil législatif. Ces prétendues réformes à la portugaise ne peuvent tromper personne.

39. Au Kenya, nous apprenons que la Puissance administrante a demandé à tous les chefs de parti de conjuguer leurs efforts afin de donner une véritable impulsion à l'évolution vers l'autonomie et l'indépendance, mais, de l'avis de ma délégation, la Puissance administrante a le devoir très net d'encourager l'harmonie et l'unité, si les intérêts de la minorité doivent être respectés et protégés par la majorité. Mais quelles sont les minorités au Kenya? Ce sont les communautés d'immigrants venus d'Europe et d'Asie, dont les intérêts économiques sont maintenant au Kenya qui, nul ne l'ignore, est un pays africain. Veulent-ils continuer à demeurer paisiblement dans un Kenya indépendant? Veulent-ils servir un Kenya indépendant, ou bien veulent-ils mener une campagne pour obtenir des indemnités, ou encore veulent-ils se joindre aux éléments défaitistes qui prônent la théorie — que soutiennent sans aucun doute certains Européens — en vertu de laquelle il vaut mieux "partir avant qu'il ne soit trop tard"?

40. Je citerai quelques extraits d'un article de M. Tom Mboya, intitulé "Qui sont ces habitants du Kenya?", M. Mboya écrit ce qui suit:

"Jamais un nationaliste qui a tout son bon sens ne pourra confier le destin de son peuple à un individu ou à un groupe d'individus prêts à profiter du moindre différend pour abandonner le pays qui a tant fait pour eux et pour les leurs. En effet, tous les Européens, tous les Asiatiques doivent bien admettre que le Kenya les a réellement servis pendant toutes ces années. Ceux qui désertent à l'heure actuelle ne font que confirmer l'idée des Africains qui pensent que les immigrants ont eu et ont encore pour premier objectif d'exploiter notre pays et sa population. Aux yeux des Africains, nul ne peut revendiquer l'égalité de droits, de possibilités, de privilèges et de protection s'il n'est prêt à accepter en même temps sa part de devoirs, de responsabilités et de risques. Ceux qui envoient leur argent hors du pays au moment où le Kenya en a le plus besoin, ceux qui propagent la panique et la crainte en sapant ainsi la confiance dans le Kenya tant à l'intérieur qu'à l'extérieur au moment où le Kenya en a le plus besoin, ceux-là ne sont pas dignes de s'appeler habitants du Kenya et leur conduite ne plaide pas en faveur des garanties qu'ils s'efforcent d'obtenir du peuple africain."

41. La Puissance administrante préférerait retarder l'indépendance en alléguant que les deux grands partis politiques africains sont désunis ou incapables de se mettre d'accord sur certains problèmes politiques et constitutionnels, mais le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni devrait sans tarder, puisqu'il a déclaré vouloir mener la population du Kenya à l'indépendance complète, faire tous les efforts nécessaires pour organiser des élections nationales.

42. En terminant, je dirai que, si ma délégation a omis de parler de certains territoires visés dans le rapport, ce n'est pas faute d'intérêt de notre part pour ces territoires, mais uniquement parce que nous pensons avoir aisément l'occasion soit en séance plénière, soit à la Quatrième Commission, d'examiner ces questions dans l'intérêt bien compris des meilleures méthodes de la procédure parlementaire.

43. M. PACHACHI (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: Voici la troisième fois que l'Assemblée générale examine en séance plénière la question de l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Le premier débat sur cette question, à l'issue duquel a été adoptée la Déclaration solennelle qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV), avait été ouvert par le Président du Conseil de l'Union soviétique en personne, au mois de septembre 1960 [869^eme séance]. La discussion a porté alors, ce qui était inévitable et opportun, sur la question générale du colonialisme, sa place dans l'histoire et le rôle que les Nations Unies devaient jouer pour hâter sa disparition complète du monde entier.

44. Cette année, l'Assemblée doit trouver les moyens les meilleurs et les plus efficaces de mettre en œuvre sans délai et complètement cette déclaration qu'on peut considérer à bon droit comme une des plus grandes réussites des Nations Unies et un des jalons les plus lumineux de leur histoire.

45. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a été créée pour satisfaire l'immense besoin de paix et de sécurité de l'humanité, et pour étancher sa soif éternelle de liberté et de dignité. Ce besoin est plus grand dans les colonies que partout ailleurs. De tous les nobles idéaux et principes qui sont énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies, aucun n'est plus pertinent ni important à l'époque actuelle que la double notion de la responsabilité internationale du bien-être des populations non autonomes et de la responsabilité des puissances coloniales devant la communauté mondiale.

46. Les Nations Unies ont commencé par prendre des mesures prudentes et vagues pour appliquer les dispositions de la Charte concernant les territoires sous tutelle et non autonomes, mais, le nombre des Membres ayant beaucoup augmenté et le mouvement mondial de libération nationale prenant de plus en plus de vigueur, elles n'ont plus pu se contenter de mesures palliatives et des progrès modestes qui avaient caractérisé les premières années d'activité de l'Organisation. On considérerait alors l'octroi de l'indépendance comme un but éloigné et dans certains cas inaccessible, tandis qu'il a pris rang maintenant parmi les responsabilités qui incombent directement aux Nations Unies.

47. C'est en tenant compte de cette évolution qu'il convient de considérer les travaux du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept. A la différence d'autres organes comme le Conseil de tutelle ou le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, le Comité spécial a reçu un mandat clair et précis qui ne laisse subsister ni doute ni équivoque. Ce mandat est défini en quelques mots dans un seul paragraphe de la résolution 1554 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale, ainsi libellé :

"Prie le Comité spécial d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration, de formuler des suggestions et des recommandations quant aux progrès réalisés et à la mesure dans laquelle la Déclaration est mise en œuvre, et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale lors de sa dix-septième session".

On peut constater que les instructions de l'Assemblée générale au Comité spécial lui donnent un mandat très précis. Il est chargé d'une tâche particulière et d'une seule, celle de faire des recommandations en vue de l'application rapide de la Déclaration dans tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance. C'est compte tenu de ce mandat précis que nous examinerons les recommandations du Comité sur les divers territoires. Toutefois, avant de procéder à cet examen, nous jugeons nécessaire de commencer par considérer l'avenir du Comité et ses rapports avec les autres organes des Nations Unies.

48. En ce qui concerne l'avenir, il n'y a pas de doute que le Comité spécial a encore beaucoup à faire. Il n'a pas encore examiné la situation des territoires situés hors d'Afrique et il pourrait même reprendre à ses prochaines sessions l'examen de certains territoires africains qu'il a déjà étudiés. Ce qui importe, c'est que le Comité spécial continue à exister et que ses moyens d'action soient élargis et améliorés de manière qu'il puisse s'acquitter efficacement de ses responsabilités croissantes. Si l'on se rappelle que la Déclaration envisageait le transfert immédiat des pouvoirs aux peuples des territoires dépendants, il est évident non seulement qu'une tâche très lourde attend le Comité spécial, mais aussi qu'il devra exécuter cette tâche promptement et avec le minimum de retard.

49. Pour permettre au Comité spécial d'accomplir ses fonctions comme il convient, l'Assemblée générale devrait, en priorité, faire disparaître les chevauchements actuels des activités des Nations Unies dans ce domaine. C'est là un véritable problème qui doit être résolu de manière à renforcer les possibilités de l'Organisation. Sinon, les efforts qu'elle fait pour assurer le progrès rapide des peuples dépendants vers la liberté et l'indépendance se trouveraient entravés et dispersés. Nous devons examiner ce problème avant tout du point de vue de la pertinence des mandats des divers organes actuellement chargés de ces activités par rapport aux buts et principes généraux de la Déclaration. Le Conseil de tutelle qui est un des organes principaux des Nations Unies devra continuer à exister tant que la Charte ne sera pas modifiée. En tout état de cause, les territoires qui relèvent encore du régime international de tutelle présentent des caractères et sont à un stade de développement tels que la Déclaration les intéresse peut-être moins directement, tout au moins dans l'avenir immédiat, que les autres territoires dépendants d'Asie et d'Afrique. Donc, si la Charte n'est pas modifiée, et nous ne prévoyons pas qu'elle le soit dans un avenir proche, le Conseil de tutelle devra poursuivre ses travaux.

50. Pour les autres organes, la situation est assez différente. La création du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, le plus ancien de ces organes, représentait à l'époque une mesure novatrice hardie et importante. Le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes s'occupait essentiellement des problèmes de l'enseignement et des problèmes sociaux et culturels des territoires non autonomes, mais il a été pendant des années le seul organe des Nations Unies où l'on examinait à fond et en détail les problèmes des peuples dépendants autres que ceux qui relèvaient du régime de tutelle. C'est au Comité des renseignements que des voix s'élevaient pour défendre les aspirations légitimes à la liberté et à la justice de beaucoup de territoires qui sont maintenant représentés ici en qualité de membres pleinement souverains de la communauté internationale. Mon pays a eu l'honneur de siéger neuf ans de suite à ce comité et nous connaissons l'importance des services qu'il a rendus et du rôle qu'il a joué.

51. Maintenant que cette phase des travaux de l'Organisation touche à sa fin, j'estime qu'il est de mon devoir de rendre publiquement hommage au Secrétariat qui, sous l'impulsion de deux chefs éminents, M. Wilfrid Benson et M. Arnold Kunst, a été pendant toutes ces années au service du Comité. L'Organisation a envers eux, comme envers leurs compétents collaborateurs, une dette de reconnaissance dont il est impossible de s'acquitter par des mots.

52. A mesure que le mouvement de libération nationale s'est répandu et amplifié, à mesure que des colonies ont accédé de plus en plus nombreuses à l'indépendance et sont devenues Membres de l'Organisation, l'importance du rôle du Comité des renseignements a décliné en proportion. L'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et la création du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept ont entraîné une nouvelle diminution des responsabilités du Comité des renseignements, même si elles n'en ont pas amoindri l'utilité. Les études techniques qu'il établit chaque année conservent une grande valeur; elles pourront être poursuivies et elles aideront certainement le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept à évaluer sa tâche dans les divers territoires.

53. Bien que les trois autres organes, c'est-à-dire le Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal, le Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain et le Sous-Comité chargé d'examiner la situation en Angola, aient des fonctions particulières, les cas de double emploi sont encore fréquents. En outre, le mandat de ces organes est devenu inactuel. Que le Portugal respecte l'Article 73 de la Charte, cela importait peut-être à l'époque où l'Assemblée s'efforçait de convaincre ce pays de s'acquitter de ses obligations de puissance administrante, mais, après l'adoption de la Déclaration et la création du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, il semble qu'il n'y ait guère d'utilité à poursuivre ce dialogue avec le Portugal. Le Sous-Comité chargé d'examiner la situation en Angola constitue peut-être un cas particulier. Bien qu'il ait été créé par l'Assemblée générale, il doit faire rapport à la fois à l'Assemblée et au Conseil de sécurité. On se rappelle que le Conseil de sécurité a été saisi pour la première fois de la question de la situation en Angola en février 1961, en vertu de l'Article 34 de la Charte. Par la suite, tant l'Assemblée générale [résolution 1742 (XVI)] que le Conseil de sécurité ont adopté des résolutions sur la question.

54. Cela veut dire que, du point de vue juridique, la question de l'Angola est examinée sous deux angles différents. D'une part, en tant que menace éventuelle à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, la situation serait toujours de la compétence du Conseil de sécurité et le Sous-Comité pourrait être maintenu afin d'informer le Conseil de tous faits nouveaux qui risqueraient de menacer la paix. L'autre aspect des travaux du Sous-Comité, qui a trait à l'avenir politique de l'Angola et à son accession à l'indépendance, devrait normalement être confié au Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, qui a déjà adopté une résolution particulière sur la question.

55. En ce qui concerne le Sud-Ouest africain, je crois qu'il faut envisager la situation d'un point de vue complètement différent. Pendant des années, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a cherché patiemment à reproduire, dans la mesure du possible, le régime des mandats dans ce territoire, conformément à l'avis consultatif donné par la Cour internationale de Justice en 1950, mais ces efforts se sont révélés vains devant l'attitude intransigente du Gouvernement sud-africain. Depuis l'adoption des résolutions 1514 (XV) et 1654 (XVI), il n'y a plus guère de raison de ne pas traiter le Sud-Ouest africain de la même manière que les autres territoires non autonomes.

56. L'Assemblée a fait un dernier effort, en adoptant sa résolution 1702 (XVI), pour inciter le Gouvernement sud-africain à s'acquitter des obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de la Charte. Cet effort ayant échoué, la question du Sud-Ouest africain devrait maintenant être reprise par le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept où elle sera examinée dans les mêmes conditions que tous les autres territoires dépendants, dans le cadre du mandat précis attribué au Comité par la résolution 1654 (XVI).

57. Les Nations Unies doivent aujourd'hui obtenir plus que des progrès partiels et une évolution progressive vers l'indépendance. Elles doivent obtenir rien de moins que l'indépendance immédiate. Les organes dont je viens de parler et dont la tâche était en grande partie définie en fonction du concept de l'évolution progressive ont donc été dépassés complètement par les événements révolutionnaires de ces dernières années.

58. Compte tenu de toutes ces considérations, notamment du fait que les mandats de la plupart de ces organes ne sont plus pertinents, et étant donné qu'il est nécessaire d'éviter les cas de double emploi ainsi que de s'attaquer avec rapidité et énergie à l'un des buts principaux que les Nations Unies se sont engagées à atteindre, à savoir l'octroi de l'indépendance, il semble qu'il n'y ait qu'une solution possible: unifier les travaux et les rassembler entre les mains du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept. Pour que le Comité spécial puisse s'acquitter promptement de sa tâche et élargir ses activités de manière à s'occuper de tous les territoires coloniaux, on pourrait avantageusement répartir son travail entre plusieurs sous-comités qui se réuniraient en même temps et étudieraient en profondeur et en détail les problèmes particuliers à chaque territoire. Il faudrait alors augmenter le nombre des membres du Comité spécial. Les membres actuels ont apporté une contribution précieuse, et l'expérience qu'ils ont acquise au cours de plusieurs mois de dur labeur et de grands voyages devrait être d'un grand secours au Comité spécial dans ses réunions futures. Mais, étant donné que les activités du Comité spécial vont probablement être élargies et qu'il est absolument indispensable d'agir avec rapidité, l'accroissement du nombre de ses membres lui permettrait de mieux s'acquitter de ses responsabilités. Si l'on décidait de ne pas augmenter le nombre des membres, le Comité spécial devrait continuer à appliquer sa méthode de travail actuelle, c'est-à-dire procéder à un examen détaillé des divers territoires les uns après les autres et non simultanément. Cette méthode est lente. Il faudrait des années au Comité spécial des Dix-Sept pour achever l'étude détaillée des territoires encore sous le régime colonial, qui sont plus d'une cinquantaine, si ces études détaillées devaient être faites l'une après l'autre au cours de séances plénières du Comité spécial.

59. Il est vrai que telle était la méthode employée par le Conseil de tutelle. Mais il existe une différence importante entre les deux organes. Le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept doit accomplir sa tâche dans les plus brefs délais, tandis que le Conseil de tutelle n'est aucunement limité par le temps.

60. Il n'y a donc pas d'autre moyen de procéder que d'attribuer l'étude de territoires ou groupes de territoires à des sous-comités qui les examineront en détail et en profondeur et qui feront rapport au Comité plénier, lequel prendra alors des décisions en se fondant sur les rapports de ses sous-comités, sans avoir à étudier lui-même en détail les territoires un à un. Des petits sous-comités peuvent seuls procéder à un examen simultané en détail et en profondeur. Actuellement, le nombre des membres du Comité spécial est trop réduit pour qu'il puisse se diviser en cinq ou en six sous-comités qui puissent travailler efficacement.

61. Pour résumer, voici quelles sont nos suggestions quant aux travaux futurs du Comité spécial. Premièrement, le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, le Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain, le Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal et le Sous-Comité chargé d'examiner la situation en Angola cesseraient d'exister, sous réserve du maintien de ce dernier sous-comité uniquement afin de tenir le Conseil de sécurité au courant des événements pouvant avoir une influence sur la paix et la sécurité, comme le Conseil l'a envisagé dans sa résolution du 9 juin 1961¹. Les études qui incombent au Comité des renseignements pourraient être continuées par le Secrétariat, si l'Assemblée le demande. Deuxièmement, on devrait élargir la composition de l'actuel Comité spécial des Dix-Sept en lui ajoutant sept nouveaux membres choisis en fonction d'une répartition géographique équitable et, comme l'a dit le représentant de la Guinée [1167ème séance], en fonction aussi de leurs compétences. A notre avis, il ne suffirait pas, étant donné le programme de travail très chargé qui attend le Comité spécial, d'ajouter quatre membres seulement, comme ce représentant l'a envisagé. Troisièmement, le Comité spécial élargi devrait entreprendre l'examen de la situation dans tous les territoires qui ne sont pas encore indépendants et présenter ses recommandations à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-huitième session. Il devrait également être autorisé à proposer, lorsque faire se peut, des dates limites précises pour l'accession à l'indépendance des divers territoires.

62. En ce qui concerne les méthodes que le Comité spécial a adoptées pour l'organisation de ses travaux, nous appuyons les décisions qui ont été prises pour ce qui est du rassemblement de renseignements, de l'audition de pétitionnaires et de l'envoi de groupes de visite. Nous félicitons particulièrement le Comité spécial d'avoir décidé de porter son attention sur l'Afrique, où le colonialisme se manifeste encore sous les formes les plus néfastes. La domination coloniale sévit toujours dans des régions étendues de ce continent et des millions d'Africains sont encore soumis à une discrimination raciale infamante.

63. Avant d'examiner séparément les divers territoires, je tiens à féliciter les membres du Comité spécial du travail remarquable qu'ils ont accompli dans le laps de temps relativement court dont ils disposaient. Cela ne m'empêchera pas de dire que le rapport est peut-être inutilement long, surtout lorsqu'il s'agit des comptes rendus des débats du Comité spécial dont nous disposons évidemment aussi sous forme sténographique et analytique.

64. Lorsqu'on étudie les 10 chapitres qui traitent des différents territoires, on est frappé par la similitude de leurs problèmes: retard et lenteur sans justification dans l'octroi de l'indépendance; acceptation, voire encouragement des pratiques de discrimination et de persécution raciales; refus des libertés démocratiques et politiques fondamentales; protection des intérêts économiques étrangers et acceptation des formes les plus flagrantes d'exploitation.

65. Dans les observations qui suivront, je m'abstiendrai de parler de la Rhodésie du Sud, au sujet de laquelle nous avons déjà exprimé notre opinion lors de la reprise de la seizième session et au début de la présente; je ne parlerai pas non plus des territoires administrés par le Portugal et du Sud-Ouest africain, qui feront l'objet de débats à la Quatrième Commission. La délégation irakienne à cette commission fera connaître son opinion en temps opportun et nous examinerons les résolutions proposées par le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept sur l'Angola et le Mozambique conjointement avec les résolutions que la Quatrième Commission jugera bon de présenter à propos de ces deux territoires. Je me bornerai donc à des observations sur les autres territoires dont le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept s'est occupé, à savoir la Rhodésie du Nord, le Nyassaland, les trois territoires dépendant du Haut Commissaire, Zanzibar, la Guyane britannique et le Kenya, et sur d'autres territoires hors d'Afrique dont le Comité n'a pas pu s'occuper faute de temps.

66. En ce qui concerne la Rhodésie du Nord, j'ai à dire ce qui suit. Là, comme dans plusieurs autres territoires africains, le grand problème est celui de la minorité européenne. La Rhodésie du Nord revendique légitimement son indépendance immédiate, ce qui continue à lui être refusé, et son peuple aspire à la liberté, aspiration qui est toujours frustrée, et ce sans autre raison que le fait que la Puissance administrante n'est pas disposée à remplir les obligations qui lui incombent aux termes de la Charte et à mettre fin à la domination despotique qu'une minorité blanche de 77 000 personnes exerce sur une population de 2 millions et demi d'Africains. Le Comité spécial nous brosse un tableau réaliste de la situation déplorable qui règne en Rhodésie du Nord. Dans la déclaration qu'il a faite en avril dernier au Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, M. Kenneth Kaunda, chef nationaliste, en a donné un compte rendu détaillé que je ne me propose pas de répéter.

67. Depuis la publication du rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, des élections ont eu lieu en Rhodésie du Nord le 30 octobre 1962. Environ 40 p. 100 du total de la population blanche y a pris part, tandis que 4 p. 100 seulement de la population africaine votait. Le système électoral complexe, qui défie le bon sens, est essentiellement conçu de manière à interdire à l'immense majorité africaine l'exercice de ses droits politiques fondamentaux. Toutefois, les 100 000 Africains qui ont été autorisés à voter n'ont pas laissé la moindre incertitude quant à leurs vœux et à leurs aspirations pour l'avenir. Les voici: obtenir l'indépendance immédiate; mettre fin à la Fédération d'Afrique centrale; résister à tous les efforts faits pour séparer du pays la partie riche et l'annexer à la Rhodésie du Sud; enfin, rendre au pays ses richesses naturelles qui sont exploitées depuis des années par des sociétés étrangères comme la British South Africa Company qui contrôle les ressources minières du pays et exploite ses richesses dans l'intérêt d'étrangers et qui, soit dit en passant, fournit à Welensky et à son parti leur principal appui financier. Toutefois, par suite des obstacles compliqués qui entravent le droit de vote des Africains, les résultats officiels des élections n'ont pas correspondu à la volonté réelle de l'écrasante majorité africaine.

68. Le bruit court maintenant que l'United National Independence Party, et l'African Congress Party s'associeraient pour pouvoir exercer un contrôle sur le nouveau Parlement. Il reste néanmoins 11 sièges à pourvoir pour lesquels des élections partielles doivent avoir lieu le mois prochain et il n'est pas encore sûr que la Rhodésie du Nord aura un gouvernement véritablement nationaliste et africain. Mais, si les élections ont vraiment démontré quelque chose, c'est que la majorité africaine a une confiance absolue dans l'United National Independence Party. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni devrait avoir la sagesse de tirer les leçons qui s'imposent et de prendre des mesures pour hâter les progrès du parti dans la voie de l'indépendance. Telle est la raison pour laquelle nous appuyons le projet de résolution que recommande le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept [A/5238, par. 205] et qui correspond dans une large mesure aux vœux de la majorité de la population, puisqu'il fait état de ses trois exigences essentielles, l'indépendance immédiate, la dissolution de la Fédération d'Afrique centrale et le respect de l'unité et de l'intégrité territoriale du pays,

69. Si nous passons maintenant au Nyassaland, nous constatons que la Fédération d'Afrique centrale y a été rejetée de manière encore plus catégorique. Toutefois, l'évolution de ce territoire vers l'indépendance s'est faite avec beaucoup moins de heurts que dans le cas de la Rhodésie du Nord, notamment en raison du fait que la minorité européenne y est relativement réduite. La Constitution de 1960, qui a bien des défauts, s'est néanmoins révélée un texte éprouvé lorsque le Nationalist Malawi Congress Party, dirigé par M. Hastings Banda, s'est assuré le contrôle du Parlement en août 1961. M. Banda est actuellement à Londres où il discute non seulement des conditions de l'octroi de la pleine autonomie interne mais aussi, officiellement peut-être, mais avec autant d'ardeur, de la date de l'indépendance du Nyassaland et de sa séparation complète d'avec la Fédération d'Afrique centrale. Le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept n'a pas recommandé de résolution et il est sans doute bon d'attendre l'issue des entretiens qui ont lieu en ce moment à Londres et dont nous espérons vivement qu'ils aboutiront à la reconnaissance totale du droit du Nyassaland à l'indépendance et à la séparation complète d'avec la Fédération d'Afrique centrale de Welensky.

70. En ce qui concerne les trois territoires dépendant du Haut Commissaire, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland, le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept a esquissé dans son rapport les principaux problèmes qui se posent. On note en premier lieu le niveau relativement bas de leur développement économique et social, la pratique courante de la discrimination raciale, le caractère peu satisfaisant des dispositions constitutionnelles actuellement en vigueur et enfin la crainte constante de l'annexion à l'Afrique du Sud. Je voudrais appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée sur la déclaration des trois pétitionnaires entendus par le Comité spécial. Ce qu'ils ont dit et ce que de nombreux membres du Comité spécial ont indiqué dans leurs opinions ne laisse subsister dans notre esprit aucun doute quant à la situation qui règne actuellement dans ces territoires. Les recommandations du Comité spécial nous ont paru raisonnables et l'Assemblée aurait raison de les adopter. Elles consistent à suspendre les dispositions constitutionnelles actuelles, à procéder à des élections au suffrage universel des adultes et à convoquer une conférence constitutionnelle avec la participation des représentants librement élus du peuple, afin de fixer la date de l'accession à l'indépendance. D'autre part, avant de renoncer à son autorité, la Puissance administrante devait restituer aux autochtones les grandes étendues de terre qui leur ont été enlevées. Une fois que les territoires auraient accédé à l'indépendance, l'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait adopter des mesures d'urgence pour leur permettre de s'attaquer à leurs très graves problèmes économiques et pour remédier à la pauvreté et à la misère dues à des années d'exploitation et de négligence.

71. Au sujet de Zanzibar, le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept a entendu de nombreux pétitionnaires qui ont tous déclaré qu'une accession rapide à l'indépendance est nécessaire. Des divergences de vues se sont fait jour sur les modalités du nouveau système élec-toral qui doit être établi dans le territoire et sur la date des nouvelles élections. Ces opinions divergentes ont été conciliées dans une large mesure, et le seul problème qui ne soit pas encore résolu est celui de la date des élections. La solution idéale consisterait à ce que les partis se mettent d'accord et forment éventuellement un gouvernement de coalition; dans cette hypothèse, le problème de la date des élections cesserait d'être un élément décisif ou un prétexte pour retarder l'octroi de l'indépendance. Nous espérons qu'un accord interviendra bientôt entre les partis.

72. En Guyane britannique, la situation continue à être grave. La Conférence constitutionnelle de Londres s'est soldée par un échec, pas plus tard que la semaine dernière, et la date de l'accession du pays à l'indépendance semble être à nouveau reculée. Le gouvernement de M. Jagan et les partis de l'opposition ne peuvent toujours pas se mettre d'accord sur le régime électoral. Il semble que des deux côtés on soit maintenant d'accord pour que des élections aient lieu avant l'indépendance, mais le grand problème essentiel qui les sépare encore est de savoir si ces élections devraient être organisées sur la base de la représentation proportionnelle ou sur celle du scrutin uninominal. La puissance administrante ne peut pas, non plus qu'à Zanzibar, nier toute responsabilité en ce qui concerne l'impasse dans laquelle la Guyane britannique se trouve aujourd'hui. N'eussent été les émeutes de février dernier, le pays aurait accédé à l'indépendance depuis plusieurs mois.

73. Je rappellerai brièvement les faits nouveaux intervenus depuis la dernière session. Il y a un peu plus d'un an, le Parlement de la Guyane a demandé au Gouvernement britannique de fixer une date pour l'indépendance en 1962. Le Gouvernement britannique a donné une suite favorable à cette demande et a informé M. Jagan qu'une conférence constitutionnelle chargée de fixer la date de l'indépendance se tiendrait en mai 1962. Cette décision a été communiquée à la Quatrième Commission juste avant la fin de la deuxième partie de la seizième session, le 22 février 1962 [1302^{ème} séance]. Néanmoins, peu après, la conférence a été renvoyée au mois de juillet, sous prétexte que la commission d'enquête sur les troubles avait besoin d'un délai pour mener à bien ses investigations. La conférence n'a pas été tenue en juillet, mais a été remise à octobre, et voici qu'elle vient de se terminer par un échec. Il semble n'y avoir aucun doute que des menées de l'extérieur ont contribué aux émeutes de février dernier et que ceux qui se sont employés à fomentier ces désordres intérieurs ont certainement envisagé le renvoi de l'indépendance à une date ultérieure. Il n'est pas difficile de découvrir leurs motifs, mais il faut que tous comprennent que les pays qui sont à la veille de l'indépendance doivent être libres de choisir eux-mêmes leur politique économique et sociale. D'autre part, il faut aussi que les dirigeants des petits pays qui luttent pour améliorer leur situation économique se rappellent que ces petits pays ne peuvent pas se permettre de jouer le jeu dangereux de la politique de puissance ni de se laisser entraîner dans la guerre froide.

74. L'Assemblée doit insister pour que rien ne soit épargné afin de permettre à la Guyane d'accéder sans retard à une indépendance dont elle devrait jouir depuis longtemps; le projet de résolution présenté par le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept pourrait servir de base à toute nouvelle décision que l'Assemblée pourrait prendre.

75. Je passe maintenant au Kenya, un des territoires africains les plus importants, auquel l'Irak, comme d'autres pays arabes du Moyen-Orient, attache une importance particulière car le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni désire manifestement y conserver une base militaire pour défendre les intérêts pétroliers étrangers implantés jusque dans nos pays. Je parlerai de cet aspect essentiel du problème colonial lorsque j'examinerai la situation à Aden et en Arabie du Sud. Il est indéniable que le Kenya a fait de grands progrès dans la voie de l'indépendance, surtout depuis 1960. Les résultats obtenus en deux ans sont exposés dans le rapport et il est inutile que je les énumère ici. La situation est actuellement la suivante: le Kenya a l'autonomie interne, avec un parlement et un gouvernement qui contrôlent les partis nationalistes. Il semble qu'il n'y ait plus qu'une étape à franchir avant que l'indépendance soit pleine et entière: il faut rédiger une constitution sur la base des principes adoptés par la conférence constitutionnelle qui s'est tenue cette année et organiser des élections au suffrage universel des adultes. Ces mesures devraient être prises au cours de l'année qui vient et le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni devrait décider sans plus tarder de la date des élections. Nous acceptons entièrement le projet de résolution présenté par le Comité spécial.

76. Le dernier chapitre du rapport du Comité spécial des Dix-Sept, c'est-à-dire le chapitre XII, est consacré à des pétitions qui concernent des territoires dont le Comité ne s'est pas occupé en particulier. Parmi ces territoires, Aden intéresse particulièrement ma délégation. La situation s'est beaucoup aggravée dans ce territoire et dans les régions voisines depuis que la Chambre des communes du Royaume-Uni a adopté, mardi dernier, le plan établi par le gouvernement en vue de la création d'une fédération entre Aden et les cheikats voisins. M. Jawad, ministre des affaires étrangères d'Irak et chef de la délégation irakienne, a parlé, dans le discours qu'il a prononcé dans la discussion générale le mois dernier, de la fédération et des motifs véritables pour lesquels le Gouvernement britannique préconise sa création. Il a cité des passages d'un document du Gouvernement britannique sur sa politique de défense^{2/} et il a appelé l'attention sur les brefs extraits suivants que je citerai à mon tour:

"Pour des opérations éventuelles dans le golfe Persique, nous avons compté sur Aden comme base et sur des renforts provenant du Kenya. Dorénavant, nous nous proposons de maintenir des forces terrestres en permanence à Aden et dans le golfe Persique et de les renforcer rapidement, en cas d'urgence, non seulement par air, mais aussi au moyen d'une force amphibie mixte spéciale à l'est de Suez, capable de débarquer des forces terrestres avec leur équipement lourd dans les régions menacées et de fournir un appui aérien et des moyens de communication... Actuellement, nous maintenons au Kenya une partie de la Réserve stratégique de l'Armée, qui peut venir soutenir le pouvoir civil dans les territoires africains dont nous avons la charge et qui peut servir de renfort à nos forces du Moyen-Orient, principalement pour des opérations dans le golfe Persique." [1152^{ème} séance, par. 40.]

77. Outre qu'elle était due au désir de maintenir une base militaire permanente, la fédération a été imposée au peuple d'Aden afin de perpétuer la séparation de la ville et ses environs, d'une part, et, de l'autre, du

Yémen dont ils sont partie intégrante. La précipitation avec laquelle on a fait adopter le plan de fédération au Parlement peut s'expliquer par les grands changements survenus au Yémen, où un gouvernement progressiste s'est tourné vers l'avenir et enfin pris le pays en main. La révolution yéménite et l'instauration d'un gouvernement dévoué à la cause des réformes et du progrès ôtent aux éléments libéraux d'Aden tous les doutes qu'ils auraient pu avoir quant à la réunion avec le Yémen. D'autre part, on n'a jamais obtenu l'assentiment du peuple d'Aden en faveur de la fédération. On a rejeté la demande des partis d'opposition qui voulaient que des élections aient lieu avant la fusion. Au lieu de cela, le prétendu Conseil législatif a adopté le plan de fédération. Ce conseil est élu par un mode de scrutin absolument antidémocratique. Ses membres élus, qui sont au nombre de 12, représentent les voix de 2 p. 100 seulement de toute la population. Huit de ces membres élus se sont abstenus et quatre seulement ont voté pour le projet de fédération.

78. La décision d'un tel conseil peut-elle remplacer une décision qui serait prise par un organe élu par la majorité de la population, avec un mode de scrutin vraiment démocratique? Comment peut-on trancher d'une telle manière une question aussi importante pour l'avenir de la population?

79. La décision du Gouvernement britannique est encore moins justifiable si l'on se rappelle que des élections devaient avoir lieu en janvier 1963. En vérité, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni aurait au moins dû attendre que ces élections aient eu lieu. On nous dit que la situation dans le territoire n'aurait pas permis d'organiser des élections à une date aussi rapprochée.

80. Supposons, pour pouvoir poursuivre la discussion, que ce soit exact. Le Gouvernement britannique n'aurait-il pas dû aussi reculer la mise en application du plan de fédération jusqu'au moment où des élections pourraient avoir lieu dans le territoire? Aucune raison majeure n'obligeait à faire adopter le plan par le Parlement à l'heure actuelle et avant les élections, d'autant plus qu'Aden ne pourra pas se retirer de la Fédération avant six années accomplies. Le destin de la population d'Aden a donc été fixé pour six ans au moins par le vote minoritaire d'un conseil choisi par un mode de scrutin extrêmement restrictif et sélectif il y a quatre ans, lors d'élections que les partis nationalistes d'opposition avaient boycottées.

81. M. Duncan Sandys, secrétaire d'Etat aux relations avec le Commonwealth et aux colonies, a donné à la Chambre des communes, le 13 novembre 1962, une raison fort curieuse pour expliquer son refus de renvoyer la fédération jusqu'après les élections. Il a déclaré qu'il ne pouvait pas y avoir d'élections parce que le gouvernement fédéral pourrait reconsidérer l'offre qu'il avait faite d'une fédération avec Aden si un nouveau retard intervenait.

82. Si nous songeons que le gouvernement fédéral est l'instrument fidèle et obéissant des Britanniques, nous pouvons nous rendre compte de l'absurdité de cet argument. Toutefois, M. Sandys a dit très franchement que la révolution au Yémen était la grande raison pour laquelle le Gouvernement britannique s'était hâté de faire approuver le plan de fédération. Il a dit ceci:

"La question essentielle n'est plus de savoir s'il doit ou ne doit pas y avoir d'élections avant la fusion.

"La question principale est maintenant de savoir si Aden et la fédération doivent, en s'unissant, être renforcés et consolidés, face à des incitations ouvertes à la rébellion."

83. La mesure précipitée et inconsidérée qu'a prise le Gouvernement britannique en faisant adopter le plan de fédération par le Parlement a provoqué des réactions immédiates à Aden, où le Ministre de l'éducation et de l'information, l'une des rares personnalités élues d'Aden, a démissionné en signe de protestation, tandis que le Secrétaire général de la Confédération des syndicats d'Aden, qui est actuellement détenu, a été fouetté — je dis bien: fouetté — parce qu'il ne voulait pas accepter le plan du Gouvernement britannique.

84. Au Royaume-Uni même, des voix se sont élevées en grand nombre pour protester contre la décision hâtive du Gouvernement britannique. Je ne vais pas citer d'extraits des interventions des membres de l'opposition travailliste à la Chambre des communes, qui ont condamné le plan de fédération, mais je citerai une source impartiale.

85. Dans un éditorial judicieusement intitulé "Un dinosaure à Aden", The Observer de dimanche dernier, 18 novembre 1962, constatait ce qui suit:

"Le gouvernement a décidé d'imposer une fusion entre la colonie d'Aden et la Fédération d'Arabie du Sud (cheikats de l'ancien protectorat occidental d'Aden) sans s'assurer du consentement de la population d'Aden; c'est une décision surprenante, dangereuse et imprudente. Elle est surprenante parce qu'elle va à l'encontre de toutes les leçons que la Grande-Bretagne a pu tirer de son expérience en matière d'émancipation des colonies et d'affaires du Moyen-Orient depuis 15 ans. Elle est dangereuse parce qu'elle risque de créer inutilement un foyer de violence et de répression, au nom de l'ordre et de la stabilité. Elle est imprudente parce qu'elle portera certainement atteinte aux intérêts britanniques qu'elle se propose de sauvegarder et risque même de les détruire."

86. Le plan de fédération est totalement incompatible avec la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Je vais dire pourquoi en quelques mots. Dans la lettre qu'ils ont adressée au Secrétaire d'Etat aux colonies, les ministres de la Fédération et d'Aden — qui ont été soigneusement choisis — déclarent notamment, et je cite:

"Le Gouvernement britannique nous a fait comprendre qu'aucune des propositions que nous pourrions vouloir formuler ne doit toucher la souveraineté britannique sur Aden ni les pouvoirs réservés du Gouverneur. Nous nous rendons compte que la Grande-Bretagne, étant donné l'importance stratégique d'Aden, doit avoir les garanties les plus complètes qui lui permettent de faire fonctionner librement son dispositif de défense dont elle a un besoin absolu pour s'acquitter de ses responsabilités mondiales."

C'est très commode, en vérité.

87. L'article II du "traité", qui vient maintenant d'être ratifié par la Chambre des communes, stipule catégoriquement: "Aucune clause du présent traité ne porte atteinte à la souveraineté britannique sur Aden."

88. Il n'est guère nécessaire que je souligne l'incompatibilité de cet article avec la Déclaration. Selon l'Article IX du traité:

"Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni peut à tout moment exclure ou retirer de la Fédération toute zone située à l'intérieur d'Aden, s'il le juge souhaitable aux fins de ses responsabilités mondiales en matière de défense."

En outre, Aden n'a pas le droit de se retirer de la Fédération sauf avec l'approbation du Gouvernement britannique, ce qui ne peut d'ailleurs pas se faire avant l'expiration d'un délai de six ans. Toutefois, même en cas de retrait, Aden restera toujours colonie britannique.

89. L'objectif essentiel de la Fédération est donc de maintenir le statut colonial d'Aden et de garantir l'autorité britannique dans cette partie du monde arabe. Les méthodes employées sont diverses. Par exemple, le Gouverneur ou le Haut Commissaire britannique, puisque tel sera son titre, pourra annuler toute décision prise par la Fédération sur des questions intéressant la défense, les affaires extérieures et la sécurité intérieure. De cette manière, les Britanniques n'ont rien laissé au hasard; si bien que, même si les cheiks chefs de tribus de la Fédération devaient un jour, ce qui est peu probable, demander l'indépendance véritable ou exiger le retrait des armes nucléaires ou des autres installations militaires d'Aden, le Gouvernement britannique pourrait opposer son veto. Nous nous trouvons donc ici en présence d'un territoire que le Gouvernement britannique ne prétend même pas préparer à l'indépendance.

90. Ce territoire est une base militaire et restera une base militaire, que cela plaise ou non à ses habitants ou à la population des autres pays arabes directement menacés par cette base. En d'autres termes, Aden doit rester colonie à tout jamais. Et pourquoi? La réponse est évidente: pour maintenir la domination britannique sur les diverses colonies pétrolières du Moyen-Orient.

91. Je n'exagérerai pas en disant qu'il existe aujourd'hui dans notre région du monde un mode de colonialisme plus insidieux et plus dangereux que dans n'importe quelle autre région. Une poignée de cheiks et de potentats locaux doivent être défendus à tout prix. Et pourquoi? La raison en est simple: où donc les sociétés pétrolières étrangères pourraient-elles trouver des associés aussi dociles et serviles pour l'exploitation des ressources pétrolières du monde arabe?

92. Le monde entier est au courant du gaspillage inconsidéré des vastes richesses nationales des pays arabes. La colonie britannique du Koweït en fournit l'exemple le plus frappant et la délégation irakienne a eu maintes occasions de révéler les bénéfices fabuleux que les sociétés pétrolières étrangères et les cheiks tirent de leur association, alors que tous les pays arabes font appel à leurs ressources jusqu'à la dernière limite pour faire face aux besoins pressants de leur population dans les domaines économique et social.

93. Nul ne doit s'attendre à voir le peuple arabe tolérer ce système néfaste et inique. Le courant de réforme et de progrès envahit les pays arabes l'un après l'autre et les bases d'Aden et d'ailleurs ne pourront jamais arrêter cette évolution irréversible. On compte 47 cheiks et petits potentats le long de la côte du golfe et de l'Arabie méridionale et orientale. Ils sont liés au Royaume-Uni par des traités spéciaux de protectorat qui assurent le maintien de la prédominance des intérêts britanniques et de la puissance coloniale britannique. Leur importance stratégique a beaucoup diminué depuis la disparition de l'Empire britannique en Asie, mais le Royaume-Uni continue à s'accrocher obstinément à sa position privilégiée, surtout à cause du pétrole. Et c'est pour le pétrole que cet étrange conglomérat de potentats féodaux et de principicules, du Cheik du Koweït au Sultan de Mascate, doit être conservé et protégé. Les richesses et les capitaux dont les pays ont un besoin tellement désespéré pour améliorer les conditions d'existence de millions de personnes dans les masses indigentes du monde arabe doivent être remis à une poignée de cheiks et de gouvernants ignares et irresponsables.

94. Je voudrais ici encore citer un extrait du même éditorial de The Observer, qui décrit la situation en Arabie méridionale:

"Il y a l'alliance de la puissance impériale, des chefs féodaux locaux et d'une minorité de négociants contre une opposition nettement nationaliste et de gauche, appuyée par une grande partie de la population. Il y a un droit de vote défini de manière à exclure la plupart des voix qui pourraient être d'opposition. Il y a les dirigeants syndicaux emprisonnés pour s'être livrés à des activités politiques et avoir organisé des grèves illégales, qui sont fouettés, à coups de canne, parce qu'ils ont menacé de faire la grève de la faim pour manifester leur solidarité avec un des leurs. A l'arrière-plan, il y a l'assimilation de la puissance impériale à tous les régimes réactionnaires qui subsistent au Moyen-Orient et s'opposent aux forces de la réforme et du nationalisme qui se sont enfin affirmées au Yémen et donc dans l'ensemble de la péninsule Arabe. Et quelle est la raison de tout cela? C'est qu'on veut maintenir, que la population locale l'accepte ou non, une base militaire dont le rôle essentiel est la protection des intérêts pétroliers dans le golfe Persique."

95. Voilà une description de la pire des formes du colonialisme, du colonialisme fondé purement et simplement sur la cupidité. Je peux dire incidemment qu'au moins dans ce cas particulier on nous épargne généreusement les arguments hypocrites qui invoquent "le fardeau des blancs" et prétendent que le colonialisme prépare les peuples arriérés à l'indépendance. Dans les colonies pétrolières du monde arabe, dont le Koweït constitue le pire exemple, on ne prétend rien de tel, on ne donne pas de nobles excuses. C'est tout bonnement une question de bénéfice. Et Aden doit être maintenu comme base pour protéger ce règne de l'exploitation et de la cupidité.

96. Nous espérons, et je suis convaincu que toutes les délégations des pays arabes ont ce même espoir, que les Nations Unies porteront leur attention sur ce coin oublié de notre terre. Nous espérons aussi qu'à la présente session l'Assemblée générale adoptera une résolution affirmant le droit du peuple d'Aden et de l'Arabie méridionale à se réunir au Yémen et à réaliser ses aspirations à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

97. Je dois ajouter que la politique coloniale du Royaume-Uni dans cette partie du monde arabe est très différente de la politique libérale et éclairée qu'il suit en Afrique occidentale et dans certaines régions d'Asie. Nous avons eu l'occasion de féliciter le Royaume-Uni, comme l'ont fait aussi les représentants de quelques-unes de ses anciennes colonies, de sa politique clairvoyante. Mais il semble que dans le monde arabe, le pétrole ait annihilé toute capacité de raisonner et qu'il ait fait du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, qui a été pendant des années à l'avant-garde des puissances coloniales lorsqu'il s'agissait de préparer les peuples coloniaux à l'indépendance, l'un des auxiliaires les plus puissants de la réaction et de l'exploitation dans notre région du monde.

98. Pas un Arabe ne peut parler du colonialisme sans se rappeler la victime la plus tragique que le colonialisme ait faite dans le monde arabe. Il n'est pas d'autre victime du colonialisme qui mérite, autant que le peuple de Palestine, une juste restitution. Nous ne perdrons jamais l'espoir de réveiller la conscience de l'humanité, endormie depuis des années par les allégations mensongères des agresseurs et l'impulsance des victimes. Nos voix ne cesseront pas de se faire entendre jusqu'à ce que le peuple de Palestine ait retrouvé la terre de ses ancêtres, où il pourra de nouveau marcher sans crainte ni honte dans la liberté et la dignité.

99. Le rapport dont nous sommes saisis ne fait pas mention de la Palestine, mais cela n'empêche pas que son nom soit gravé de manière indélébile dans notre esprit et dans notre cœur. Tout débat sur le colonialisme sera toujours incomplet si l'on n'y parle pas de la Palestine et de son peuple, qui sont les victimes les plus tragiques du colonialisme de notre époque. Ce qui a peut-être fait le malheur du peuple de Palestine, c'est qu'il a dû mener sa lutte pour la liberté à un moment où l'impérialisme était encore à l'apogée de sa puissance et où les continents d'Afrique et d'Asie étaient encore courbés sous le joug de la domination étrangère.

100. Comme tout aurait été différent si le peuple de Palestine s'était trouvé face au défi sioniste aujourd'hui plutôt qu'hier! Nous ne doutons pas qu'alors que le mouvement de libération nationale atteint son point culminant les peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique, enfin libérés des chaînes du colonialisme, seraient venus au secours de leurs frères de Palestine pour les aider à lutter contre l'assaut des envahisseurs étrangers.

M. Malizta (Roumanie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

101. Notre foi dans la justice de cette cause est inébranlable. Nous sommes certains que tôt ou tard les peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique contribueront eux-mêmes à dénoncer cette imposture qu'est Israël. Ils comprendront que, dans le monde arabe d'aujourd'hui, le sionisme constitue une force beaucoup plus néfaste et dangereuse que l'apartheid, une force expansionniste et agressive qui a pour but de dominer nos terres et d'arrêter les progrès de notre peuple.

102. La Commission politique spéciale doit examiner prochainement à nouveau un aspect particulièrement douloureux de la question de Palestine, le problème des réfugiés; ma délégation exposera alors en détail son point de vue sur cette terrible tragédie qui, après plus de 15 ans, pose aux Nations Unies le plus grave problème qu'elles aient à résoudre: respecter les idéaux et les principes de la Charte et rendre justice, une justice due depuis trop longtemps, à un peuple sur lequel se sont abattues les pires calamités engendrées par le colonialisme. Qu'il me suffise ici, pendant ce débat historique en séance plénière, de rappeler à l'Assemblée qu'elle n'aura pas achevé sa tâche de décolonisation tant que la Palestine continuera à subir la domination coloniale des envahisseurs étrangers.

103. M. ADEYINKA (Nigéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je veux d'abord, au nom de ma délégation, féliciter le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux de la compétence avec laquelle il a exécuté sa tâche et rempli son mandat pendant sa première année d'existence, et du rapport complet, impressionnant et objectif qu'il a présenté à l'Assemblée générale [A/5238].

104. Ma délégation constate avec satisfaction que le Comité spécial a examiné en détail tous les territoires coloniaux, qu'il s'agisse de la Rhodésie du Sud, de la Rhodésie du Nord, du Nyassaland, du Bassoutoland, du Betchouanaland, du Souaziland, de Zanzibar, de la Guyane britannique, du Mozambique, du Sud-Ouest africain, du Kenya ou de l'Angola. Après avoir lu le rapport du Comité spécial, nul ne peut éprouver d'incertitude quant aux problèmes que pose la situation et à ceux qui doivent être résolus. La délégation nigérienne exprime ses remerciements sincères au Comité spécial pour les travaux qu'il a accomplis pour les Nations Unies afin de faire progresser le mouvement de décolonisation et de libération.

105. Bien que la perspective d'ensemble de la situation coloniale reste sombre, ma délégation ne peut que se réjouir et se féliciter des progrès actuels, dont témoigne l'admission récente de nouveaux Etats indépendants en qualité de Membres de l'Organisation. Néanmoins, nous ne devons pas nous reposer sur nos lauriers. Nous devons poursuivre la lutte jusqu'à ce que nous ayons complètement fait disparaître de la surface de la terre les derniers vestiges de la domination et l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme.

106. Il est évident que nous devons redoubler nos efforts. Le mouvement de libération des colonies va maintenant s'attaquer au cœur du problème. Je veux parler ici particulièrement de la situation en Afrique australe et en Afrique centrale, où les blancs ont installé des régimes minoritaires qui, le dos au mur, livrent un dernier combat dans un effort vain et désespéré en vue de résister à la vague inexorable de l'émancipation et du nationalisme africain. Qu'il s'agisse du régime colonial auquel le Portugal soumet les territoires de l'Angola et du Mozambique, de la Fédération d'Afrique centrale qui groupe les Rhodésies et le Nyassaland, ou du régime impie de l'apartheid avec sa monstrueuse et abominable politique raciale, le problème posé avant tout par l'existence de groupes minoritaires qui, depuis des siècles, jouissent de privilèges immérités et exercent une domination politique sur une vaste majorité, qui bénéficient à des degrés divers de l'aide économique et militaire de leurs amis d'Europe dont l'origine raciale est généralement la même, et qui refusent de tenir compte de la marche du temps et de comprendre les avertissements prophétiques.

107. Ma délégation, comme beaucoup d'autres, juge absurde la théorie portugaise selon laquelle une partie de l'Afrique pourrait être partie intégrante du Portugal. Cette théorie est aussi incongrue qu'elle est erronée. Le Gouvernement nigérien et le peuple de mon pays appuient sans la moindre réserve les masses qui luttent en Angola et au Mozambique pour obtenir les droits de l'homme fondamentaux et la libre détermination, et qui sont résolues à se gouverner elles-mêmes. La même politique est valable pour toutes les autres régions d'Afrique qui sont encore sous le joug de la domination coloniale ou de régimes minoritaires, que ce soit dans la Fédération d'Afrique centrale, en Afrique du Sud ou au Sud-Ouest africain, ou d'ailleurs dans n'importe quelle autre région du monde. Le Gouvernement nigérien et le peuple de mon pays sont fermement convaincus que notre indépendance sera dénuée de toute signification tant que la totalité de l'Afrique n'aura pas été libérée de la domination coloniale.

108. Dans la partie de l'Afrique où ma délégation estime que se trouve le cœur du problème de la décolonisation, c'est-à-dire dans le centre et le sud de l'Afrique, ce problème se présente sous divers aspects. Des minorités blanches exercent une discrimination raciale contre d'écraçantes majorités africaines en s'efforçant malhonnêtement de maintenir le statu quo en invoquant une supériorité raciale. De même, toujours pour que ce statu quo soit préservé, les Africains sont victimes de discrimination dans le domaine de l'enseignement comme sur le plan économique. Dernièrement, ces mêmes régimes minoritaires blancs se sont mis à faire équipe pour constituer ce qu'on a appelé une "alliance impie" pour se fournir mutuellement des défenses militaires et un soutien moral. Malheureusement, nous savons — et nous en avons des preuves — qu'ils sont soutenus par certains pays, notamment par ceux du bloc de l'OTAN.

109. D'autre part, les minorités blanches se sont aussi groupées en un complexe industriel de plus en plus étendu où les conseils d'administration sont étroitement reliés et dont les activités vont du Katanga à Salisbury et jusqu'au Cap; il s'agit du groupe d'exploitations minières qui va du Cap au Katanga. Nous avons des preuves qui indiquent clairement que ce complexe industriel prend de l'extension et se transforme en un mécanisme économique puissant qui deviendra supranational et pourra exercer une influence considérable non seulement sur les gouvernements de ces territoires africains, mais aussi dans les capitales occidentales. Etant donné que ces mêmes sociétés qui réalisent des bénéfices fantastiques et astronomiques dépendent de la main-d'œuvre migratoire africaine à bon marché, nous pensons qu'elles représentent un autre élément de forte résistance aux progrès politiques et économiques des Africains dans le sud et le centre de l'Afrique.

110. Nous avons procédé à cet examen rapide des problèmes en cause afin que l'Assemblée puisse les aborder sous un angle exact et mieux en comprendre tous les éléments. Ma délégation estime que les Nations Unies devraient étudier de manière approfondie les activités et les opérations de ce puissant complexe industriel aux conseils d'administration étroitement reliés et nous espérons que l'Assemblée générale s'occupera de cette question.

111. En 1961, le budget de défense nationale de l'Afrique du Sud est passé de 12 millions à 35 millions de livres. En 1962, il a fait un bond inquiétant et a atteint 60 millions de livres. Ce que nous devons nous demander tout d'abord, c'est si la situation existant dans le territoire peut justifier une somme aussi énorme et si l'on peut considérer que cet accroissement des dépenses militaires est fait uniquement pour assurer la défense intérieure et le maintien de l'ordre public.

112. Ma délégation exprime la vive inquiétude qu'elle ressent devant les préparatifs militaires de l'Afrique du Sud qui, si on les laisse se poursuivre, constitueront une menace à la paix et à la sécurité de l'Afrique et du monde entier. Ils deviennent de nature offensive et l'on pourrait penser qu'ils correspondent aux intentions agressives du régime d'apartheid qui est hanté par sa politique raciale inique que condamne le monde entier qui blâme également les procédés de bandits dont est victime le Territoire sous mandat du Sud-Ouest africain.

113. Ma délégation constate avec satisfaction que l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 1761 (XVII) à une immense majorité et elle compte que cette résolution sera appliquée scrupuleusement, notamment par les puissances qui donnent au Gouvernement sud-africain les moyens économiques et militaires de continuer à s'efforcer de poursuivre sa politique haïssable.

114. La Nigéria espère voir bientôt admettre à l'Organisation un Kenya libre et indépendant, ainsi qu'une Guyane britannique indépendante. Nous escomptons également que les colonies qui subsistent en Afrique deviendront des États africains libres et indépendants. Nous demandons instamment à toutes les puissances coloniales intéressées en Afrique australe et centrale d'aider les Nations Unies à hâter l'œuvre de décolonisation qui doit être accomplie. Nous leur demandons instamment d'arriver le plus rapidement possible à une entente avec les mouvements de libération en Afrique et d'épargner à l'Afrique et au reste du monde l'holocauste racial que pourrait provoquer leur refus persistant, aveugle et intransigeant de s'incliner devant l'inévitable.

115. Je citerai l'ouvrage d'un érudit éminent, spécialiste des affaires africaines, M. Thomas Patrick Melady, dont l'étude intitulée The White Man's Future in Black Africa (L'avenir des blancs en Afrique noire) présente les conclusions de l'auteur sur l'avenir des blancs en Afrique; voici ces conclusions, qui ont l'approbation de ma délégation:

"La signification du changement rapide qui intervient dans l'équation du pouvoir dans le monde se manifeste en grande partie dans le changement brusque du statut des blancs en Afrique. Ils ont été les maîtres pendant des siècles. Maintenant, ils ne peuvent envisager de rester en Afrique que s'ils acceptent le nouvel ordre de choses."

116. Les régions qui sont encore contrôlées par les Portugais et par les groupes blancs minoritaires constituent les sources de conflit en puissance. L'avenir des blancs y est incertain, car l'intransigeance persistante des gouvernants qui ne tiennent aucun compte des réalités et encore moins des droits des noirs obscurcit la possibilité d'établir à l'avenir des rapports harmonieux. Il est déplorable que l'attitude inflexible de quelques hommes, à Lisbonne, à Salisbury, à Pretoria, soit la cause non seulement d'effusions de sang, mais aussi d'une aggravation des rapports entre les races.

117. Les résultats obtenus par les dirigeants noirs en Afrique occidentale sont tout à fait rassurants pour l'avenir des blancs. Lorsqu'on se rappelle ce qu'ont enduré les populations noires d'Afrique sous la domination blanche, on ne peut qu'être touché en voyant les dirigeants noirs préconiser en retour l'aide mutuelle et la fraternité. Les résidents blancs des régions qui sont encore dépendantes ne devraient-ils pas être réconfortés par ce qu'ont accompli les États indépendants d'Afrique occidentale et équatoriale depuis quelques années? Les blancs qui sont prêts à accepter l'ordre nouveau le seront; ceux qui veulent toujours maintenir leur prédominance ne le seront pas. Rien ne pourra les rassurer, car les derniers vestiges de la domination blanche en Afrique fondront aussi sûrement que la neige de l'hiver dernier s'est transformée en eau sous le soleil du printemps. Un chaud soleil printanier brillera bientôt sur la neige de ces régions. Comme il est tragique que ces hommes, au lieu d'accepter la société nouvelle avec l'enthousiasme qui salue un jour nouveau, en aient fait l'objet de leur hantise et de leur crainte.

118. Ces quelques blancs préfèrent toujours se tourner vers le passé, vers l'époque où les peuples blancs représentaient la force politique et économique dominante du monde. L'ère de la domination absolue des blancs est révolue. Elle ne reviendra jamais. Il est regrettable que ces hommes s'obstinent à s'accrocher à des formes mortes. Pis encore, ils préfèrent, comme les nobles Français du XVIIIème siècle, marcher à l'échafaud en alléguant qu'eux seuls sont des hommes d'honneur et aller à la mort dans l'angoisse et dans des tourbillons de sang. Laissera-t-on cette poignée d'hommes envahis par la peur entraîner la destruction des centaines de milliers d'innocents noirs et blancs?

119. D'autre part, l'harmonie qui règne entre les noirs et les blancs dans les anciens territoires britanniques et français d'Afrique occidentale et d'Afrique équatoriale constitue un hymne ininterrompu de courage et d'espoir d'amitié entre les races en Afrique. Pour beaucoup, c'est l'indice qu'une aube nouvelle d'harmonie raciale peut poindre en Afrique. L'Afrique, qui a vu naître les millions de personnes qui ont subi les indignités brutales de l'esclavage, peut devenir le lieu de rencontre où une réconciliation s'opérera entre noirs et blancs. Cela pourra se produire parce que les noirs sont prêts à pardonner et à oublier le passé, et disposés à vivre en harmonie avec les blancs qui ont choisi de s'établir en Afrique. Cela s'est déjà produit dans la plupart des régions où les peuples africains ont obtenu leur indépendance.

120. Comme il est regrettable que l'aurore de demain, pleine d'espoir, puisse être assombrie par la politique de l'axe Salisbury-Pretoria-Lisbonne, qui n'a jamais été morale et qui n'est maintenant plus viable! Les nations blanches du monde doivent agir avant qu'une poignée d'hommes n'entraînent leurs compatriotes dans une lutte sanguinaire et ne fassent un tort irréparable à la cause de l'harmonie entre les races dans toute l'Afrique.

121. Les peuples blancs d'Europe et d'Amérique doivent assumer leurs responsabilités et s'assurer qu'il ne se produise pas de massacre racial dans les régions portugaises d'Afrique, dans les Rhodesies et en Afrique du Sud. C'est là une occasion de transformer de sinistres ténèbres en une aube nouvelle et éclatante. Il n'y a plus un instant à perdre. Les peuples noirs d'Afrique, maintenant qu'ils sont libres, ont offert leur amitié. L'avenir des blancs en Afrique noire sera prometteur s'ils acceptent cette amitié et trouvent une solution aux problèmes qui subsistent. La conscience des blancs ne peut donner ici que la seule réponse possible: la liberté pour tous les peuples d'Afrique de se gouverner eux-mêmes, dans toute l'Afrique. S'il en est ainsi, les blancs auront en Afrique un avenir brillant, car ils pourront créer leur foyer parmi leurs amis africains, dans la nouvelle nation africaine.

122. La délégation nigérienne souhaite que le Comité spécial pour la décolonisation continue son œuvre utile. Nous partageons l'avis de ceux qui ont dit que le Comité spécial devrait être chargé de poursuivre l'examen du problème de la décolonisation. Nous coopérerons avec nos collègues des autres délégations en cherchant à définir avec eux les mesures que l'Assemblée pourrait prendre afin de hâter le jour qui verra la disparition de la colonisation.

M. Zairulla Khan (Pakistan) reprend la présidence.

123. M. BARNES (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Plusieurs orateurs qui sont intervenus avant moi dans ce débat sur le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/5238] ont émis l'opinion, lorsqu'ils ont évalué l'importance de cette question, que la décolonisation et le désarmement sont les deux problèmes de caractère vital et crucial qui se posent aux Nations Unies dans les efforts constants que fait l'Organisation pour atteindre l'objectif essentiel en vue duquel elle a été créée: le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Bien plus: depuis les débuts des Nations Unies, à San Francisco, en 1945, débuts auxquels j'ai eu l'honneur d'assister en qualité de Secrétaire de la délégation du Libéria, le problème colonial s'est imposé comme l'une des principales préoccupations de l'Organisation. C'est l'importance politique de ce problème qui a incité les auteurs de la Charte à y énoncer le principe de l'égalité et de la libre détermination, afin que les pays et les peuples dépendants puissent s'engager aussi vite que possible sur la voie de l'indépendance nationale, et à écrire, au paragraphe 2 de l'Article premier, que les buts et les principes des Nations Unies comprendraient notamment le suivant:

"Développer entre les nations des relations amicales fondées sur le respect du principe de l'égalité des droits des peuples et de leur droit de disposer d'eux-mêmes, et prendre toutes autres mesures propres à consolider la paix du monde."

124. Il importe de noter que cette disposition de la Charte, qui attache une importance primordiale à la mise en œuvre des principes d'égalité et de libre détermination de tous les peuples, a été inspirée par l'Union soviétique et a été insérée dans la Charte à la suite d'un amendement présenté par les Etats-Unis, l'Union soviétique, le Royaume-Uni et la Chine, pays sous les auspices desquels la Conférence des Nations Unies sur l'organisation internationale s'est réunie le 25 avril 1945. Tout le monde s'accordait donc à reconnaître que la communauté internationale était directement intéressée par l'avenir et le destin des peuples coloniaux.

125. Je crois qu'il est exact de dire que plus des deux tiers des Membres actuels de l'Organisation peuvent faire remonter leur indépendance à leur libération, sous une forme ou sous une autre, de la domination coloniale; cette constatation témoigne d'une manière éloquente et significative que le colonialisme touche effectivement à sa fin et qu'il doit se hâter maintenant de préparer ses propres obsèques. C'est compte tenu de tous ces éléments que les Nations Unies se sont déclarées à une écrasante majorité en faveur de l'abolition du colonialisme en adoptant la résolution 1514 (XV) par laquelle l'Assemblée se félicitait de ce qu'un grand nombre de territoires dépendants ont accédé à la liberté et à l'indépendance au cours de ces dernières années et reconnaissait les tendances toujours plus fortes vers la liberté qui se manifestent dans les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance.

126. Lorsque, en promulguant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, les Nations Unies ont proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, et qu'elles ont déclaré que la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales, elles se sont fait l'écho des prières pressantes et des exigences de tous les peuples qui réclament l'indépendance totale et absolue et qui subissent les misères et les indignités que la domination étrangère leur impose, et elles ont réaffirmé qu'il est nécessaire de faire disparaître sur-le-champ tous les vestiges du régime colonial. Cette déclaration historique et mémorable n'est donc pas le fruit de quelque caprice, mais constitue un document bien intentionné et significatif et qui est né, comme une nécessité historique, des événements, des luttes héroïques et des aspirations qui ont été pendant des années celles de peuples réduits en esclavage, pour lesquelles des millions de vies humaines ont été sacrifiées et pour lesquelles des êtres humains luttent encore. Cette déclaration est donc irréversible et irrésistible et fait partie des réalités de l'existence auxquelles chacun doit, tôt ou tard, qu'il le veuille ou non, adapter sa pensée, ses actes, sa politique et son mode de vie national.

127. La Conférence des chefs d'Etat africains et malgache, qui s'est tenue à Monrovia en mai 1961 et à Lagos en janvier 1962, a souligné sans équivoque le caractère inique du colonialisme dans toutes ses manifestations et a invité en conséquence toutes les puissances coloniales à déclarer publiquement qu'elles acceptaient le principe du droit naturel de toutes leurs dépendances coloniales à accéder à l'indépendance complète. La Conférence a aussi demandé aux puissances coloniales de prendre les mesures nécessaires pour faire en sorte que tous les territoires coloniaux accèdent à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible, conformément aux vœux librement exprimés de la population de ces territoires. Les chefs de 22 Etats africains et malgache se sont donc déclarés pleinement et inébranlablement solidaires du grand mouvement historique de notre temps et ont appuyé sans restriction la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

128. Pour assurer l'application de ce document historique, le Comité spécial des Dix-Sept constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) a présenté à l'Assemblée un rapport sur les travaux qu'il a accomplis du 20 février 1962 au 19 septembre 1962. La délégation libérienne attache une importance particulière aux activités du Comité spécial et je m'empresse d'ajouter que nous le félicitons de l'esprit de dévouement, de justice et de compréhension avec lequel il a conçu et mené à bien sa tâche.

129. Dans les parties de son rapport qui traitent du fond de la question, le Comité spécial examine un certain nombre de territoires, en Afrique notamment. La raison qui a incité le Comité spécial à étudier en priorité les problèmes coloniaux sur le continent africain, parce que c'est en Afrique qu'on trouve le plus grand nombre d'hommes encore soumis à la domination coloniale et que c'est là que se posent quelques-uns des problèmes les plus difficiles, est tout à fait fondée. Le mouvement qui tend à libérer l'Afrique du colonialisme acquiert de la force de jour en jour. Il importe vraiment de savoir si le peuple qui lutte pour rejeter le joug de siècles de domination et d'exploitation se verra aider dans l'accomplissement de son destin par l'action constructive des Nations Unies ou s'il sera contraint de faire des efforts de plus en plus désespérés et de prendre des mesures de plus en plus dangereuses pour défendre son existence et arriver à jouer le rôle qui lui revient dans l'humanité et dans la société internationale. Les nombreux pétitionnaires que le Comité spécial a entendus ont affirmé qu'ils croient que l'Organisation peut contraindre les puissances administrantes à leur octroyer l'indépendance immédiate et qu'elle est décidée à le faire. Si nous voulons que cette évolution politique se fasse dans la paix et non dans la violence, nous ne pouvons ni ne devons les décevoir et il est évident qu'il est du devoir des Nations Unies de veiller à ce que cette évolution pacifique ait lieu.

130. En ce qui concerne la Rhodésie du Sud, l'un des territoires dont le Comité spécial s'est occupé, nous constatons avec un regret et un trouble croissants que, malgré la résolution 1747 (XVI) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale par 73 voix contre une et où elle a affirmé que la Rhodésie du Sud est un territoire non autonome au sens du Chapitre XI de la Charte, le Royaume-Uni continue à alléguer que ce territoire ne relève pas de la compétence de l'Organisation, et qu'il n'a donc pas jugé possible de se conformer à l'intention et aux vœux de la grande majorité des Etats Membres de l'Organisation qui ont exprimé leurs désirs dans la résolution susmentionnée. Nous prenons note des conclusions auxquelles est parvenu le Comité spécial, à savoir que le Royaume-Uni n'a pas encore pris de mesure pour transférer tous les pouvoirs au peuple de la Rhodésie du Sud. Je désire rappeler que la délégation libérienne a dit à ce sujet à la seizième session [1111ème séance] que le Royaume-Uni ne peut pas, comme Ponce Pilate, se laver les mains du problème de la Rhodésie du Sud.

131. Pour ce qui est de la Rhodésie du Nord, le Comité spécial a conclu [A/5238, par. 193 à 201] que les conditions d'électorat inscrites dans la Constitution du 28 février 1962 sont discriminatoires et portent préjudice aux intérêts des autochtones; que l'inclusion de la Rhodésie du Nord dans la Fédération d'Afrique centrale a été imposée contrairement aux vœux des autochtones qui constituent l'écrasante majorité de la population de la Rhodésie du Nord, et que la situation dans ce territoire est telle qu'une petite minorité détient les pouvoirs gouvernementaux au détriment des droits et des intérêts de l'écrasante majorité autochtone. Le tableau brossé par le Comité est déplorable et fait bien ressortir que la Constitution actuelle est conçue pour maintenir la suprématie des blancs en Rhodésie du Nord. Les Africains qui sont en Rhodésie du Nord — leur foyer naturel — se trouvent donc être des étrangers dans leur propre patrie.

132. En affirmant le droit inaliénable de la population du Nyassaland à la libre détermination et à l'indépendance nationale, le Comité spécial, dans les conclusions qu'il a présentées sur ce territoire, a noté avec satisfaction que M. Hastings Banda et le Royaume-Uni ont décidé d'engager des pourparlers sur le progrès constitutionnel et il a exprimé l'espoir que ces pourparlers aboutiraient à l'accession du Nyassaland à l'indépendance, conformément aux vœux du peuple. La délégation libérienne prend une part sincère à ces espoirs et à cette attente.

133. La situation créée dans les territoires dépendant du Haut Commissaire, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland, par les projets de l'Afrique du Sud qui a l'intention de les annexer, a conduit le Comité spécial à recommander à l'Assemblée de déclarer que toute tentative faite pour annexer ces territoires ou pour tenter atteinte d'une façon quelconque à leur intégrité territoriale sera considérée par l'Organisation des Nations Unies comme un acte d'agression qui viole la Charte des Nations Unies. La délégation libérienne appuie les conclusions du Comité spécial.

134. Dans les conclusions auxquelles il est parvenu pour les territoires de Zanzibar, de la Guyane britannique et du Kenya, le Comité a souligné qu'il est nécessaire de leur accorder l'indépendance le plus tôt possible. Pour ce qui est de la Guyane britannique, il est extrêmement regrettable que la Conférence sur ce territoire, qui s'est tenue à Lancaster House, à Londres, pendant trois semaines dans le courant de l'automne 1962, ait abouti à une impasse.

135. Je passe maintenant aux territoires de l'Angola et du Mozambique, administrés par le Portugal. L'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité ont adopté plusieurs résolutions à leur sujet. Je veux parler notamment de la résolution 1542 (XV) qui a déclaré que l'Angola et le Mozambique, ainsi que plusieurs autres territoires, sont des territoires non autonomes; de la résolution 1603 (XV) qui a invité le Portugal à envisager d'urgence l'application, en Angola, de mesures et de réformes visant à donner effet à la Déclaration sur la décolonisation; de la résolution S/4824 du Conseil de sécurité qui a invité les autorités portugaises à cesser immédiatement les mesures de répression prises contre la population angolaise. On espérait et l'on escomptait, comme je l'ai dit, que, par suite de l'effet cumulatif des résolutions concernant ces territoires, par suite aussi de la pression de l'opinion publique internationale, pratiquement unanime à considérer que le Gouvernement portugais veut arrêter le cours de l'histoire en s'obstinant à poursuivre une politique coloniale archaïque et inique pratiquée sous ses aspects les plus rétrogrades, la conscience et le sens politique des dirigeants portugais se seraient éveillés et les auraient conduits à renoncer, une fois pour toutes, à ce régime moyenâgeux d'exploitation et de terrorisme auquel le Portugal soumet sans relâche et sans honte la population de ces territoires.

136. Depuis cinq siècles ou davantage, les Portugais accomplissent leur "mission civilisatrice" en Angola et au Mozambique, et, comme l'a dit M. Grimes, secrétaire d'Etat du Libéria, dans son intervention dans la discussion générale le 26 septembre 1962:

"La prétendue mission historique du Portugal, chargé de répandre la civilisation, a été démasquée; on constate que c'est un tissu de mensonges et l'une des plus grandes tromperies que le monde ait jamais connues." [1132ème séance, par. 31.]

137. Je dirai tout de suite que la coopération du Portugal pourra sans nul doute favoriser une action constructive des Nations Unies en vue de rendre espoir aux populations de l'Angola et du Mozambique, et que des mesures doivent être prises pour réfuter cette thèse insoutenable selon laquelle ces territoires africains sont partie intégrante du Portugal, pays européen, situé en Europe. De nos jours, alors que les peuples montrent partout qu'ils aspirent à la dignité, au droit à exercer et à cultiver ces facultés que notre créateur à tous a données à chaque homme, alors que se fait entendre un appel puissant et prolongé en faveur de la liberté et d'une plus grande justice sociale, les derniers vestiges du colonialisme, où qu'ils se trouvent dans le monde, ne peuvent que susciter le mécontentement, la tension, le danger. Cette constatation est particulièrement vraie lorsqu'il s'agit de territoires situés sur le continent africain, où le souffle du renouveau se fait sentir très fortement. Le Portugal ne peut d'aucune manière s'abriter des forces du progrès qui se manifestent dans le monde d'aujourd'hui. S'il s'obstine à pratiquer dans le monde du XX^{ème} siècle une politique du XV^{ème} siècle, s'il s'obstine à rester dans les rangs des colonialistes qui s'éclaireissent de jour en jour, il risque d'entretenir une source évidente d'instabilité internationale et de troubles en Afrique, qui pourra avoir des conséquences catastrophiques pour tous les intéressés.

138. Je saisis cette occasion pour adresser un appel au Portugal et l'inviter à tendre la main aux Nations Unies pour coopérer avec elles et participer à l'effort collectif afin de réparer les torts dont a été et dont est toujours victime la population sans défense des territoires africains, et pour aider à créer dans le monde un ordre nouveau dans lequel toutes les nations coopéreront aux efforts et aux aspirations de l'humanité vers la dignité, la liberté, la prospérité et la paix.

139. Au Sud-Ouest africain, la situation est caractérisée par la tristesse et le désespoir. La politique de discrimination raciale flagrante du Gouvernement du Sud-Ouest africain a pris maintenant des proportions telles qu'elle a dépassé le stade de la patience et de l'endurance non seulement des habitants africains de cette région, mais aussi de tous les hommes et de toutes les femmes de bonne foi dans le monde entier. Le spectre sinistre de ce régime abominable jette toujours son ombre menaçante sur le continent africain, et le Gouvernement sud-africain intensifie progressivement la répression systématique contre les Africains, qui constituent plus des deux tiers de la population du pays.

140. Je crois que, dans ce cas, aucun pays ne peut se vanter d'avoir poursuivi, comme le fait l'Afrique du Sud, une politique aussi dépourvue de moralité, d'humanité et de réalisme, et condamnée par le reste du monde. On s'efforce ainsi, brutalement, de maintenir une classe blanche privilégiée en exploitant systématiquement la population africaine autochtone; cela doit prendre fin immédiatement.

141. Enfin, ma délégation demande que le processus de décolonisation soit accéléré afin que disparaissent définitivement les conditions effroyables imposées par la domination coloniale. C'est là un des besoins urgents de notre époque si nous voulons que les nobles principes des Nations Unies concernant l'égalité et la libre détermination des peuples deviennent des réalités vivantes.

142. Dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel [A/5201, Add.1], le Secrétaire général a appelé l'attention de l'Assemblée sur la prolifération des comités et co-mités spéciaux chargés de s'occuper de la question des territoires non autonomes et, pour des raisons évidentes, il a suggéré de confier au Comité spécial toutes les activités dans ce domaine. Il convient aussi de noter que le Comité spécial a soulevé le problème de la coordination de ses activités avec celles du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, du Sous-Comité de l'Angola, du Comité spécial pour les territoires administrés par le Portugal et du Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain. Ma délégation estime qu'il est nécessaire de reconsidérer l'utilité de cette pléthore de comités qui traitent exactement des mêmes problèmes.

143. Dans son intervention de ce matin, le représentant de l'Irak a fourni d'abondantes raisons et justifications pour le maintien du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes. Nous pensons nous aussi qu'il est utile de conserver ce comité, mais qu'il convient de regrouper les activités des autres comités sous les auspices du Comité spécial. A notre avis, cela entraînera forcément une modification du mandat du Comité spécial, et il faudra porter le nombre de ses membres à 21 au moins.

144. L'Organisation des Nations Unies concrétise notre civilisation et correspond donc aux aspirations de l'humanité tout entière. Il nous appartient par conséquent, et c'est clair et net, de nous attaquer au problème du colonialisme avec fermeté et décision, car, si nous fléchissons devant la résistance, notre génération restera longtemps dans la mémoire des hommes comme ayant manqué de volonté, de largeur de vues et d'enthousiasme.

La séance est levée à 13 h 10.

POINT 25 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

La situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale (A/5238) [suite]

39. M. BINGHAM (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il y a près d'un an [1048^{ème} séance], j'ai eu le privilège de prendre part à cette tribune à la discussion sur la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)]. J'ai évoqué à cette occasion la tradition immuable d'anti-colonialisme de mon pays, qui remonte à ses origines. J'ai indiqué la situation dans nos trois petits territoires encore non autonomes et dans le Territoire sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique, et j'ai exposé notre politique à l'égard de ces territoires. J'ai également expliqué en détail notre opinion sur certains des problèmes coloniaux encore en suspens, en particulier en Afrique australe, et j'ai montré l'opposition entre ce que les puissances occidentales avaient fait d'une façon générale depuis 20 ans et ce qui s'était fait dans l'empire communiste.

40. Je ne voudrais pas abuser de la patience des représentants en revenant sur ces sujets. Je n'en ai d'ailleurs pas besoin. La position de mon gouvernement procède d'un engagement fondamental envers la liberté et elle ne varie pas d'une année à l'autre. En conséquence, la politique de mon gouvernement, procédant de cet engagement, demeure non moins constante. C'est ainsi que les Etats-Unis, aussi bien hors des Nations Unies qu'à l'Organisation, se sont employés depuis longtemps à favoriser l'application universelle du principe de la libre détermination. Chaque fois que des démarches diplomatiques et des remontrances discrètes offraient un espoir d'améliorer la situation dans une colonie, mon pays a joué, à ma connaissance, un rôle utile dans un sens progressiste. Certes, le succès a été loin d'être total et le rythme a pu souvent paraître lent, mais, fidèles à leur engagement, les Etats-Unis persévéreront. Cette constance de l'objectif visé explique pourquoi la politique de mon pays à l'égard du colonialisme est exactement ce qu'elle a toujours été, pourquoi mon pays est resté fidèle au critère primordial de la liberté. Il n'y a nul mérite intrinsèque dans l'ancienneté ou la nouveauté d'une politique. Ce qui importe réellement, c'est sa validité. Les Etats-Unis ne se proposent donc pas de modifier leur politique fondamentalement saine envers le colonialisme pour chercher à tout prix à "faire du neuf". Nous sommes opposés à tout ce qui tend à restreindre la liberté et nous serons toujours en faveur de toute action promettant de donner des résultats pratiques pouvant servir la cause de la liberté.

41. Avant de passer au rapport du Comité spécial sur l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/5238], comité qu'on appelle maintenant couramment Comité des Dix-Sept, je passerai brièvement en revue certains événements de l'année écoulée.

42. Tout d'abord, ma délégation note avec satisfaction qu'au cours des 12 derniers mois huit nouveaux territoires ont accédé à l'indépendance et à l'état de nation. Pour quatre d'entre eux, le Tanganyika, le Samoa-Occidental, le Rwanda et le Burundi, les Nations Unies, par le fonctionnement de leur régime de tutelle, ont joué un rôle important en rapprochant le jour de l'accession à l'indépendance et en permettant aux peuples intéressés d'accéder à l'état de nation dans les meilleures conditions de liberté politique et de possibilités de développement économique et de progrès social. Dans un cas, celui de l'Algérie, ce pays est devenu une nation après une longue période de luttes, dont l'apogée des étapes finales a été marquée par de nombreux actes d'une grande sagesse de la part des chefs algériens et français. Dans le cas des trois autres pays, la Jamaïque, la Trinité et Tobago et l'Ouganda, le processus d'accession à l'indépendance s'est déroulé pacifiquement et dans l'ordre, et il fait le plus grand honneur au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et aux dirigeants et aux peuples de ces trois nouveaux pays. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a fait régulièrement rapport aux Nations Unies sur ces territoires conformément à l'Article 73 de la Charte. Le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes a examiné ces rapports. Cependant, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a joué lui-même le rôle prépondérant en élaborant, de concert avec les territoires, les mesures préparatoires à l'indépendance et en faisant effectivement accéder ces territoires à l'indépendance.

43. De ces huit nouvelles nations, sept, à notre satisfaction unanime, siègent à présent en qualité de Membres de l'Organisation et apportent à nos délibérations une contribution d'importance vitale. La huitième, le Samoa-Occidental, en raison de l'exiguïté de son territoire et de ses ressources limitées, a décidé de ne pas demander son admission à l'Organisation.

44. A l'exception de l'année 1960, durant laquelle 18 nations ont accédé à l'indépendance, l'année écoulée a été sans précédent quant au nombre de territoires non autonomes qui sont devenus des nations indépendantes.

45. Il est particulièrement significatif que, dans les huit cas qui viennent d'être cités, les Etats Membres qui administraient auparavant ces territoires faisaient tous partie du monde libre, de cette partie du monde que nous appelons libre parce qu'elle repose sur le principe fondamental de la liberté de choix. Durant la même période, aucun des pays étrangers qui se trouvent sous la domination du nouvel impérialisme communiste, pays habités par des peuples qui ont des traditions culturelles différentes, une langue différente et dans bien des cas une race différente de celles de leurs maîtres, durant la même période, dis-je, aucun de ces pays sous domination communiste n'a obtenu la vraie liberté ou même une liberté de choix à un degré limité.

46. Il me suffira de rappeler l'exposé historique qui se trouve dans le document A/4985^{1/} et, en particulier, la section relative aux pratiques coloniales soviétiques. Voici les victimes ethniques du colonialisme soviétique: les Tartares de Crimée, les Kalmouks, les Ingriens, les nations des pays baltes et celles de l'Asie centrale. Vous les connaissez tous et ceux qui contesteront le plus bruyamment ce que j'ai dit sont ceux qui les connaissent le mieux.

47. Peut-être puis-je épargner au représentant de l'Union soviétique la peine de faire usage de son droit de réponse. Il rétorquerait sans aucun doute que dans le monde communiste la domination des peuples par un gouvernement étranger d'un pays éloigné n'est pas du colonialisme.

48. Le fait est que la délégation soviétique n'applique les termes de "colonialisme" ou d'"impérialisme" qu'aux régions dont le système gouvernemental n'est pas de son goût. En cela, les représentants de l'Union soviétique nous font penser à un personnage de Lewis Carroll: Humpty Dumpty. Ceux qui connaissent la classique Alice au pays des merveilles et sa suite, De l'autre côté du miroir, se rappelleront que Humpty Dumpty, expliquant ses principes sémantiques à Alice, lui disait sur un ton de raillerie:

"Lorsque j'emploie un mot, il prend le sens que je veux lui donner, ni plus ni moins.

— Il reste à savoir, dit Alice, si vous pouvez vraiment donner aux mots tant de sens différents.

— Il reste à savoir, réplique Humpty Dumpty, qui sera le maître. C'est tout."

En appliquant le raisonnement de Humpty Dumpty au monde moderne, on peut dire que, là où le maître est l'Union soviétique, il n'y a pas de colonialisme et que là où le maître n'est pas l'Union soviétique, mais qu'elle cherche peut-être à le devenir, on lance l'alerte au colonialisme.

49. Nous envisageons le problème d'une façon différente; nous disons qu'il y a colonialisme ou impérialisme là où il n'y a pas de liberté de choix. Nous attachons une importance particulière à la partie de la résolution 1514 (XV) qui proclame que

"Tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique et poursuivent librement leur développement économique, social et culturel."
