102. La valeur historique de ce document important réside dans le fait que, par cette déclaration, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a reconnu et affirmé le processus révolutionnaire de la décolonisation, de la destruction du colonialisme comme phénomène périmé et monstrueux indigne de notre époque. Par sa Déclaration, notre organisation a entrepris la tâche de créer des conditions permettant que le processus de la décolonisation se poursuive de façon paisible, sans effusion de sang, à la condition, bien entendu, que les puissances colonialistes reconnaissent les réalités et nécessités historiques.

103. En proclamant la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme dans toutes ses formes et manifestations, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a en même temps mis hors la loi toutes formes de répression coloniale et sanctionné, légalisé la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour l'indépendance. Elle s'est même proclamée la promotrice de cette lutte historique.

104. Dans l'atmosphère d'enthousiasme qui régnait lors de l'adoption de la Déclaration du 14 décembre 1960, bien des représentants ne s'imaginaient sans doute pas que le processus de décolonisation ainsi sanctionné par l'Organisation des Nations Unies se heurterait à tant d'obstacles de la part de certains Etats Membres de notre organisation. En effet, bien que depuis lors un certain nombre de nouveaux Membres aient été accueillis ici — résultat heureux de la mise en œuvre des principes de la Déclaration — et alors que nous aurons bientôt le privilège de saluer l'arrivée parmi nous cette année du Kenya et de Zanzibar, il reste néanmoins le fait grave et déplorable que le colonialisme se maintient et survit dans de vastes régions de l'Afrique, en certains endroits de l'Arabie et des Antilles, ainsi que dans les espaces de l'Océanie.

105. En outre, les conséquences néfastes de la domination coloniale se font encore sentir sur l'économie et d'autres aspects de la vie de beaucoup de pays d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine. Mettre fin au colonialisme et à ses conséquences est donc pour l'Organisation des Nations Unies une tâche primordiale. Même trois ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, c'est une tâche importante, complexe et difficile. La responsabilité de cette assemblée à l'égard de cette tâche est grande et grave.

106. Cette tâche ne devrait pas être minimisée par l'affirmation que le colonialisme est pratiquement mort et qu'il ne s'agit que d'une survivance limitée à une petite fraction de la superficie de notre planète et à une minorité insignifiante de l'humanité, aux territoires les moins importants et, dans de nombreux cas, dispersés et souvent, dit-on, incapables d'une vie économique et politique autonome.

107. La réalité, c'est qu'il s'agit d'un ensemble de territoires très vaste. Il a été rappelé que l'étendue de ces territoires est supérieure à 6 millions de kilomètres carrés et qu'ils comptent une population de 50 millions d'êtres humains soumis au régime colonialiste. La plupart d'entre eux se trouvent en Afrique; aussi bien dans le cas des colonies portugaises que dans celui des pays dominés par des minorités racistes de colons étrangers sous la protection britannique ou sud-africaine, ou des pays menacés par une emprise de ces minorités, il s'agit de régions riches, pleinement capables de vivre et de se développer en pays indépendants, suivant l'exemple d'autres nations africaines déjà libérées. Dans d'autres cas, nous nous trouvons en face de territoires séparés, par la force, de pays dont ils font partie géographiquement et ethniquement et auxquels ils s'uniraient si, en vertu de la Déclaration, leurs peuples obtenaient le droit et la possibilité physique de l'autodétermination.

108. D'ailleurs, rien au monde n'autorise quiconque à maintenir des êtres humains dans l'esclavage colonialiste, ni à transformer leur patrie en base de guerre.

109. Quelles sont donc les raisons qui empêchent que la Déclaration ne soit appliquée pleinement, inconditionnellement et instantanément à ces territoires? Il ne peut s'agir de raisons géographiques, économiques et ethniques, bref: de raisons qualifiées d'objectives ou d'inhérentes à ces peuples et à ces territoires. On ne peut pas non plus prétendre que la population de ces pays soit tellement heureuse sous la domination étrangère ou tellement peu mûre qu'elle ne désire pas déterminer elle-même son propre sort.

110. La lutte courageuse et héroïque du peuple d'Angola, du Mozambique, de Rhodésie du Sud, d'Arabie du Sud ou de la Guyane britannique est par elle-même un démenti formel de telles affirmations. L'élément fondamental et décisif du maintien des survivances colonialistes dans le monde consiste dans les pressions étrangères, qui, du point de vue et aux termes de la Déclaration, peuvent et doivent être considérées comme illégales.

111. Il s'agit, tout d'abord, de toute une catégorie de pressions économiques. Qu'il me soit permis de rappeler quelques noms, hélas! trop familiers à quiconque étudie les racines du colonialisme et surtout à quiconque combat pour sa liquidation: l'Union minière du Haut-Katanga, avec la Société générale belge et ses dépendances; l'Anglo-American

^{2/} Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, quinzième session, Annexes, point 87 de l'ordre du jour, documents A/4501 et 4502.

Corporation of South Africa, la British South Africa Company, la De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd., ou bien, si l'on veut, la Vacuum Oil, l'Aluminium Ltd., ou encore la Bauxite du Midi, l'Unilever, et de nombreuses compagnies pétrolières, pour ne citer que quelques-uns des monopoles coloniaux. Il s'agit là d'un réseau de liens et de connexions mutuels par lesquels le capital américain, britannique, français, belge, allemand de l'Ouest ou sud-africain maintient en sa possession les richesses de ces pays. Il est bien connu que les profits tirés de ces richesses sont plusieurs fois supérieurs à ceux des capitaux investis dans les territoires européens ou américains, que les salaires des travailleurs africains ne représentent qu'une petite fraction des salaires européens ou américains, faisant tomber le revenu annuel moyen par habitant des pays coloniaux bien au-dessous du minimum vital.

112. De même est bien connu le rôle sinistre de ces monopoles dans la récente histoire du Congo, dans le processus d'émancipation des divers pays comme dans l'histoire du Congo ou de la Rhodésie et de tout ce qui entre dans ce que l'on nomme la Fédération centrafricaine, ainsi que dans l'histoire récente de l'Afrique du Sud-Ouest ou de l'Arabie du Sud. Ce sont les monopoles qui ont organisé et financé les dernières tentatives des colonialistes pour maintenir les formes périmées et brutales de l'oppression; ce sont les monopoles qui s'efforcent, une fois obligés de faire tomber les instruments de cette oppression, d'empêcher les peuples libérés de devenir maîtres chez eux, en sabotant leur économie, en sapant l'unité nationale, en appuyant les scissions et sécessions ou finalement en tâchant de soumettre l'économie des pays libérés à des formes de dépendance néo-colonialiste.

113. L'autre catégorie d'obstacles à la mise en pratique des principes et stipulations de la Déclaration — autre catégorie qui est souvent alliée à ces pressions économiques —, ce sont les méthodes de répression brutale. Il est significatif que, sur une grande échelle, ces formes et méthodes tellement discréditées et qui ont souvent échoué dans le passé, ainsi que le démontre l'exemple des nombreuses victoires des peuples africains, ne sont employées ouvertement que par les régimes les plus réactionnaires, tels que le colonialisme portugais, ou, comme en Afrique du Sud, les régimes racistes des minorités blanches privilégiées, ou, encore, comme en Rhodésie du Sud, les régimes des minorités blanches créés par les colonialistes, pourvus de terres et d'autres possessions aux dépens de la population autochtone et finalement investis de pouvoirs sur ces populations.

114. Cette répression armée, tout en causant des souffrances aux populations des colonies, représente en même temps un grave danger pour la paix, comme l'ont souligné maintes fois les orateurs, notamment les représentants des pays africains, ici, à la tribune de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et comme l'a démontré le Conseil de sécurité, qui s'est occupé à plusieurs reprises de la question de ces vestiges du colonialisme. Il est significatif que les grandes puissances colonialistes ou ex-colonialistes, bien entendu à de nombreuses exceptions près, cherchent à se servir des formes plus raffinées mais non moins dangereuses du néo-colonialisme. Ce qui ne les empêche pas de prêter leur plein appui, ici aux Nations Unies, et plus encore en Afrique et ailleurs, aux colonialistes réactionnaires de la vieille école, et, comme nous l'avons vu en étudiant l'excellent rapport du Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1], de recourir même, de temps en temps, à ces méthodes périmées et brutales.

115. A ce propos, notre délégation croit devoir rappeler le rôle que jouent, dans le maintien de ces derniers réduits du colonialisme aussi bien que dans les tentatives visant à créer de nouvelles formes et de nouvelles méthodes néo-colonialistes, les alliances militaires dirigées par les puissances occidentales. Il faut souligner ici, de même qu'à la Quatrième Commission, que le colonialisme portugais, par exemple, ne pourrait pas exercer ses répressions contre le mouvement de libération nationale sans appui économique, politique et militaire de la part de ses alliés.

116. Il suffit aussi de rappeler d'autres guerres de répression colonialiste, dans un passé très récent, pour se rendre compte que l'Alliance atlantique, pendant toute sa durée, a démontré son efficacité pratique surtout dans ce domaine d'appui au colonialisme. Les armes et autres moyens matériels pour massacrer les populations des pays coloniaux s'opposant à l'oppression étrangère dans toutes les parties du monde ont été produits et livrés dans le cadre de l'Alliance atlantique, que ses auteurs et promoteurs ont si souvent tenté de glorifier et de dépendre comme une alliance pour la défense du prétendu monde libre. Les armes fabriquées et payées par les contribuables de nombreux pays occidentaux pour la prétendue défense de la liberté et de la démocratie n'ont pratiquement été employées que dans les guerres coloniales, précisément contre la liberté et la démocratie de ceux qui les demandent en Afrique et ailleurs.

117. C'est en général l'atmosphère de l'anti-communisme, de la guerre froide, des préparatifs de guerre, de la course aux armements qui constitue un facteur très important dans le maintien des derniers bastions du colonialisme. Cela est évident dans le cas de la Guyane britannique, dont le peuple courageux a donné dans ce pays, depuis de longues années, la preuve de sa maturité politique en édifiant un régime constitutionnel et politique formellement modelé sur l'exemple britannique. Ce peuple continue d'être privé de l'indépendance qui lui avait été promise depuis longtemps par la puissance coloniale, qui, sous divers prétextes, n'a pas honoré ses obligations. Cela est également vrai, sous d'autres formes, pour les territoires coloniaux transformés en base de guerre dans diverses parties du monde, que les puissances occidentales se refusent obstinément à quitter.

118. Il s'agit vraiment d'une interdépendance du colonialisme et de la politique de guerre froide pratiquée par les puissances occidentales. Elle a été constatée et caractérisée, à juste titre, au cours des débats du Comité spécial, de même qu'à la Quatrième Commission et en séance plénière de l'Assemblée générale. Nous regrettons que certains représentants de pays occidentaux se refusent à constater et à admettre cette interdépendance et cette fonction de leurs groupements et de leurs alliances militaires. Au lieu d'étudier les conséquences déplorables que cette interdépendance peut entraîner, ces représentants s'efforcent de détourner l'attention de ces faits en formulant des invectives et en se livrant à des insinuations sans fondement dirigées contre les liens d'amitié et de coopération fondés sur l'égalité, l'identité de vues et le respect mutuel pour l'indépendance et la souveraineté qui existent entre les pays socialistes. Ces pays sont, par principe, opposés à toute oppression nationale et raciale et ont démontré leur anticolonialisme par des actes concrets, par la solution de problèmes nationaux à l'intérieur de leurs frontières, ainsi que par l'appui inconditionnel qu'ils prêtent à la lutte anti-impérialiste des peuples coloniaux dans les diverses régions du globe.

119. Cette interdépendance du colonialisme et de la politique de guerre froide est visée par la résolution anticolonialiste de la Conférence des chefs d'Etat africains, tenue à Addis-Abéba au mois de mai 1963, que vient de citer le représentant de la Nigéria, qui m'a immédiatement précédé à cette tribune. Cette résolution avertit les alliés des puissances coloniales d'avoir à choisir entre l'amitié des peuples africains et l'appui qu'ils prêtent aux puissances qui oppriment les peuples d'Afrique. Nous venons d'entendre le même avertissement, sous une autre forme, dans le discours éloquent du représentant de la Guinée.

120. La Conférence des chefs d'Etat africains, ainsi que d'autres initiatives et d'autres mesures prises par les nations africaines, a démontré le degré de maturité de ces Etats ainsi que le rôle actif qu'ils jouent et ont à jouer dans le processus de décolonisation, en les considérant comme des facteurs très importants. La position prise par la Conférence d'Addis-Abéba à l'égard des questions du désarmement et de la guerre froide témoigne de la part très importante que les nations libérées du joug colonial peuvent prendre dans les efforts déployés en vue de la détente internationale et de la victoire des idées et principes de coexistence pacifique. C'est ainsi que nous voyons que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'a pas seulement appuyé et renforcé la lutte des peuples contre le colonialisme, mais a aussi aidé ces derniers à secouer le joug de l'oppression, à augmenter les forces de paix et à appuyer les principes de la Charte.

121. Dans le processus de décolonisation, un rôle très important a été assumé par les peuples du monde arabe, et c'est à bon droit que ceux-ci demandent que des parties intégrantes de la péninsule arabe telles que l'Arabie du Sud et Aden, ou Oman, soient libérées, réunies et associées aux nations auxquelles elles appartiennent du point de vue géographique et ethnique.

122. Dans ce processus de décolonisation, la région de la mer des Caraïbes, elle aussi, est devenue, par les efforts et grâce à la lutte de ses populations, un facteur très significatif dont il faut tenir compte.

123. Ma délégation ne saurait partager les doutes et les préoccupations de certains de nos collègues — si bien intentionnés soient-ils — qui se sont exprimés contre l'octroi, prétendument prématuré, du droit d'autodétermination à certains peuples ou à certains territoires trop petits, disent les auteurs de ces observations, pour résister dans un monde où les grandes puissances jouent un rôle tellement important. Ma délégation — comme on l'a déjà souligné — ne peut accepter aucune excuse pour justifier un retard dans l'application des dispositions prévoyant le droit de ces peuples et de ces territoires à disposer d'eux-mêmes. C'est à ces peuples eux-mêmes qu'il appartient de choisir librement leur régime, soit dans l'indépendance, soit dans l'association avec le ou les pays de leur choix. Notre organisation doit s'efforcer de leur garantir cette liberté et non point de les en priver.

124. Le peuple et le gouvernement de la Tchécoslovaquie sont, par tradition historique ainsi que par le caractère de leurs institutions socialistes, adversaires par principe de toute oppression colonialiste. Avec tous les autres pays socialistes, la République socialiste tchécoslovaque affirme sa position anticolonialiste, en toute occasion, aux Nations Unies aussi bien qu'en dehors de notre organisation, par ses déclarations sans équivoque aussi bien que par ses actions pratiques.

125. C'est sur cette base que nous apprécions pleinement le rapport excellent du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Grâce aux efforts incessants des partisans décidés de la décolonisation, ce comité a contribué de façon importante à l'étude approfondie et objective des véritables conditions de la lutte anticolonialiste et a fait entendre la voix de ceux qui sont à la tête de cette lutte, là où elle est menée, aux endroits les plus brûlants. Au cours des délibérations du Comité, on a pu découvrir et identifier les obstacles opposés à cette lutte de libération par les forces de la réaction colonialiste et l'on a aussi indiqué les voies et les méthodes pour supprimer ces obstacles. Donc, nous sommes d'avis que le Comité a fait un bon travail et qu'il mérite l'appui de l'Assemblée générale pour la tâche qu'il lui reste encore à accomplir.

126. Cet appui devrait s'exprimer par l'approbation du rapport et des recommandations et solutions proposées par le Comité, ainsi que par l'extension de son mandat. L'Assemblée générale devrait également réaffirmer les principes de la Déclaration. Elle devrait condamner la résistance obstinée des colonialistes à la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration, en attirant, entre autres, l'attention sur l'activité des monopoles coloniaux. Il faut notamment demander d'urgence qu'il soit mis fin à la répression coloniale armée; il faut retirer les unités armées colonialistes de ces territoires; il faut réitérer la nécessité de l'octroi des libertés et des droits démocratiques à la population des pays coloniaux pour leur faciliter l'institution d'organes représentatifs capables d'assumer le pouvoir. Il faut empêcher toutes les manœuvres tendant à rompre l'union nationale et à porter atteinte à l'intégrité du territoire national des pays en voie de libération du joug colonialiste. Enfin, il faut penser à restituer aux peuples colonisés la terre et les autres richesses naturelles dont ils ont été privés par des actes arbitraires des colonialistes. Le Comité spécial devrait assumer le contrôle sur la mise en œuvre de toutes ces stipulations en se servant des méthodes qu'il a si heureusement établies et appliquées dans son activité au cours de l'année qui vient de s'écouler.

127. L'Assemblée générale, à la session actuelle, a été témoin de certains phénomènes nouveaux qui ont contribué à la détente internationale et au renforcement des éléments de coexistence pacifique dans les relations internationales. Nous ne pouvons que nous associer à ceux qui se sont félicités de ces phénomènes, en demandant que ceux-ci soient suivis d'autres actes positifs auxquels notre assemblée pourrait apporter sa contribution. Tout récemment, l'Assemblée délibérait sur les possibilités de célébrer dignement le vingtième anniversaire de la fondation de notre organisation. Notre délégation est d'avis que tous ces phénomènes et toutes ces mesures positives seraient incomplets sans un achèvement accéléré du processus de décolonisation. Nous ne pouvons que répéter la suggestion de notre gouvernement: il serait digne de notre organisation de marquer son vingtième anniversaire par la suppression définitive du régime honteux du colonialisme, qui, ainsi, disparaîtrait pour toujours de la société contemporaine, permettant à des millions d'êtres humains de participer activement à une coopération internationale fructueuse, permettant en même temps à notre organisation de consacrer tout son temps et toute son énergie aux débats et aux activités tendant à renforcer les bases d'une paix stable et durable.

128. M. CAYCO (Philippines) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation tient à exprimer sa satisfaction du travail accompli par le Comité spécial sur la décolonisation et à rendre hommage au zèle et à la conscience avec lesquels tous les membres du Comité ont accompli la tâche qui leur a été confiée. Il n'est peut-être pas exagéré de dire que le rapport du Comité [A/5446/Rev.1] sera l'un des documents les plus précieux dans le domaine de la décolonisation.

129. Les progrès de la décolonisation, depuis la fin de la dernière guerre, sont extrêmement encourageants. Parmi les vingtaines de pays dépendants d'Afrique et d'Asie, plus de 40 ont accédé à l'indépendance au cours des 18 dernières années, tandis que deux autres, le Kenya et Zanzibar, se joindront à la famille des nations, en se suivant de très près, au cours des semaines à venir.

130. La libération rapide des peuples colonisés et la liquidation des empires qu'elle a entraînées sont des phénomènes remarquables de la période d'après-guerre. Quand on y verra plus clair, on s'apercevra peut-être que la colonisation aura été le plus brillant chapitre de l'histoire de notre temps. Néanmoins, comme le présent rapport ne nous le rappelle que trop, il subsiste des citadelles du colonialisme qui refusent obstinément de disparaître. Elles concernent environ 50 millions d'hommes et constituent, ainsi que des exemples frappants nous l'ont montré, le plus ardu des problèmes coloniaux.

131. Rien ne milite en faveur du maintien de l'impasse actuelle. L'Assemblée est nettement résolue à ce que l'on progresse dans la voie de l'élimination du colonialisme jusqu'à ce que la dernière poche d'infection soit résorbée.

132. Deux observations s'imposent au sujet des colonies subsistantes. Tout d'abord, on peut dire que l'introduction de réformes dans une colonie, si libérales soient-elles, ne peut plus remplir son objet. Les colonies n'accepteront rien de moins que l'autonomie et la liberté. Le vrai problème est par conséquent de savoir comment, après l'octroi de l'indépendance, l'ancienne colonie et l'ancien colonisateur pourront poursuivre leur association sur la base des intérêts stables communs.

133. On peut observer, d'autre part, que, dans le cas des sociétés multiraciales, il ne s'agit pas seulement d'octroyer aux populations en cause le droit de s'administrer elles-mêmes ou de disposer de leur sort, mais il faut aussi octroyer ces droits de manière que le pouvoir politique appartienne à ceux auxquels il revient, c'est-à-dire à la majorité plutôt qu'à la minorité. Il n'y a aucune autre solution viable, selon nous, et nous ne pouvons nous contenter de moins si les principes démocratiques doivent garder un sens.

134. Avant d'aller plus loin, je voudrais m'arrêter sur les annexes I et II du rapport dont l'Assemblée est saisie et à l'égard duquel la délégation des Philippines tient à exprimer certaines réserves. L'annexe I, qui contient une liste préliminaire des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, mentionne le Bornéo du Nord. L'annexe II est une lettre adressée par le représentant du Royaume-Uni au Président du Comité spécial qui contient un calendrier des progrès constitutionnels réalisés de septembre 1962 à août 1963. La lettre et le calendrier mentionnent tous deux le Bornéo du Nord.

135. Se fondant sur des textes juridiques et des documents historiques incontestables, les Philippines considèrent qu'elles peuvent prétendre à juste titre à la souveraineté sur le Bornéo du Nord, connu aussi sous le nom de Sabah. Les Philippines ont déjà formulé leurs réserves au sujet de ce problème à l'Assemblée générale ainsi qu'à la Quatrième Commission et au Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes. Je ne voudrais donc pas lasser la patience de l'Assemblée en définissant de nouveau la position de mon gouvernement, que nous avons déjà eu l'occasion d'exposer en détail. Qu'il me suffise de dire dans les présentes circonstances que ces réserves restent valables et le demeureront jusqu'à ce que la question que nous avons soulevée soit tranchée par les moyens prévus dans la Charte des Nations Unies.

136. L'Accord de Manille, auquel a abouti, le 11 juin 1963, la Conférence des Ministres des affaires étrangères de l'Inde, de la Malaisie et des Philippines, contient le passage suivant:

"Paragraphe 12. Les Philippines ont clairement indiqué que leur position quant à l'inclusion du Bornéo du Nord dans la Fédération de Malaisie dépendait du sort final de la revendication des Philippines concernant le Bornéo du Nord. Les ministres ont pris note de cette revendication des Philippines et du droit de ce pays à poursuivre l'affaire en question conformément au droit international et aux principes de règlement pacifique des différends. Ils ont reconnu que l'inclusion du Bornéo du Nord dans la Fédération de Malaisie ne devait pas préjuger cette revendication ou tout droit y afférant. De plus, eu égard à leur étroite association, les trois pays sont convenus de déployer tous leurs efforts pour parvenir à une solution juste et rapide au sujet de cette revendication par des moyens pacifiques tels que la négociation, la conciliation, l'arbitrage ou le règlement judiciaire, de même que par tous autres moyens pacifiques arrêtés par les parties qui seraient conformes à la Charte des Nations Unies et à la Déclaration de Bandoung."

137. En outre, dans la déclaration commune faite le 5 août 1963 par le Président de l'Indonésie, le Premier Ministre de la Fédération de Malaisie et le Président des Philippines à la Conférence historique au sommet de Manille, il était dit:

"Paragraphe 8. Conformément au paragraphe 12 de l'Accord de Manille, les trois chefs de gouvernement ont décidé de demander au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni d'accepter de rechercher une solution équitable et rapide au différend existant entre lui et le Gouvernement des Philippines concernant le Sabah (Bornéo du Nord) par la voie de la négociation, de la conciliation, de l'arbitrage, du règlement judiciaire ou par tous autres moyens pacifiques conformes à la Charte des Nations Unies que choisiraient les parties. Les trois chefs de gouvernement prennent acte de la situation de la revendication des Philippines au sujet du Sabah (Bornéo du Nord) après la constitution de la Fédération de Malaisie, telle qu'elle ressort des dispositions du paragraphe 12 de l'Accord de Manille, à savoir que l'inclusion du Sabah (Bornéo du Nord) dans la Fédération de Malaisie ne préjuge en rien cette revendication ou tout droit y afférant."

138. Le Gouvernement des Philippines continue de rechercher activement un règlement équitable de notre revendication concernant le Sabah "conformément au droit international et aux principes de règlement pacifique des différends", pour reprendre les termes de l'Accord de Manille. Dans cette tentative, nous avons tout lieu de compter sur la coopération de la partie ou des parties directement intéressées.

139. Cette réserve faite, je reviens à la question dont nous sommes saisis. La position de ma délégation sur les questions de la Rhodésie du Sud, des territoires sous administration portugaise et du Sud-Ouest africain a été clairement exposée au cours des débats de la Quatrième Commission, et la délégation des Philippines a été au nombre des auteurs des résolutions qui ont été adoptées au sujet de ces questions. En outre, mon pays a eu l'occasion d'exposer en détail sa position sur les deux premières questions devant le Conseil de sécurité et de montrer l'intérêt sincère qu'il portait au bien-être et aux aspirations des peuples coloniaux en s'associant aux projets de résolution dont le Conseil de sécurité a été saisi au sujet des questions dont il s'agit.

140. Je ne m'étendrai donc pas davantage sur ces questions et me contenterai d'assurer une nouvelle fois les peuples coloniaux intéressés qu'ils peuvent compter, dans leur lutte légitime pour conquérir le droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes, sur le ferme appui de mon pays.

141. La délégation des Philippines attache une grande importance au droit du Comité spécial de se rendre dans les territoires coloniaux pour observer les conditions qui y règnent actuellement. Il va de soi que le meilleur moyen d'apprécier la valeur des renseignements communiqués par les puissances administrantes ou fournis oralement ou par écrit, par les signataires de pétitions, est l'observation directe. De surcroît, ceux qui peuvent avoir des renseignements utiles à soumettre au Comité spécial ne pensent pas toujours se présenter devant le Comité ou communiquer leurs renseignements par écrit.

142. Mais l'importance du droit de se rendre dans les territoires en cause que possède le Comité ne réside pas seulement dans le fait qu'il permet d'obtenir de plus amples et plus complets renseignements, si précieux que cela soit. Plus important encore est l'effet psychologique et moral produit sur l'esprit et le cœur des gens tenus depuis longtemps dans la servitude et qui, dans leur profonde frustration, peuvent avoir renoncé à l'espoir de voir leur peuple accéder à la liberté. Pour eux, la seule présence d'un comité des Nations Unies, ayant expressément pour but de les aider à accéder à la liberté le plus tôt et dans les meilleures conditions possibles, renforcera leur volonté et réveillera leur résolution.

143. Aussi, ma délégation a-t-elle été très déçue par le refus du Royaume-Uni, qui administre le plus grand nombre de colonies qui subsistent, de coopérer avec le Comité spécial en autorisant ses sous-comités à se rendre à Aden et en Guyane britannique. A notre déception s'ajoute la considération que, si le Royaume-Uni persiste dans cette attitude, les efforts ultérieurs du Comité spécial en vue d'envoyer des missions dans les autres colonies britanniques seront d'emblée compromis.

144. Comme beaucoup d'autres délégations, nous estimons qu'il est difficile d'admettre le point de vue du Royaume-Uni selon lequel une visite d'observations dans ses colonies équivaldrait à une ingérence dans ses affaires intérieures et à partager ses responsabilités de Puissance administrante. Cette position nous paraît trop rigoureusement juridique. Elle ne correspond pas aux réalités de la situation internationale actuelle; elle est contraire à l'esprit de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme et aux buts pour lesquels le Comité spécial a été créé. En fait, cette position du Royaume-Uni ne vaut pas mieux que l'affirmation du Portugal selon laquelle ses colonies sont des "provinces d'outre-mer".

145. Ma délégation prie donc instamment le Royaume-Uni de bien vouloir reconsidérer son attitude dans cet esprit de coopération dont il a si souvent fait preuve.

146. Le Président du Comité spécial, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, dans sa déclaration du 28 novembre 1963 [1266ème séance], et le représentant du Chili, dans sa déclaration du jour suivant [1267ème séance], ont fait observer à juste titre que de nombreux territoires dont la situation sera examinée par le Comité spécial sont de petits territoires, avec une population restreinte. Ma délégation convient que les caractères particuliers de ces territoires devraient être pleinement pris en considération lorsqu'ils s'agira de formuler les recommandations appropriées concernant leur avenir. Nous estimons cependant que dans la recherche d'une solution il faut, comme dans le cas des territoires plus importants, tenir compte avant tout des vœux et des aspirations des populations intéressées.

147. La tâche qui attend le Comité spécial en ce qui concerne les petits territoires sera sans doute difficile, et la coopération des puissances administrantes est indispensable pour son accomplissement. Le Comité spécial devrait se voir donner toutes facilités pour se rendre dans ces territoires, pour s'entretenir avec les populations et les dirigeants afin de s'informer exactement de leurs vues et de leur exposer les diverses solutions susceptibles de garantir un avenir stable. Il pourrait aussi consulter avec profit les pays voisins, amis et indépendants. Dans certains cas, le Comité spécial pourra juger nécessaire de rechercher un heureux compromis entre les vœux de la population et les mesures que les Nations Unies croiraient les meilleures pour elle.

148. J'en viens à un autre aspect du problème concernant certains territoires dont s'occupera le Comité spécial à sa prochaine session. J'ai une brève observation à faire au sujet d'une question dont mon pays a une expérience non négligeable. Je veux parler de certains territoires mentionnés dans la liste préliminaire figurant à l'annexe I du rapport, à propos de laquelle des réserves et contre-réserves ont été formulées par diverses délégations.

149. Les efforts déployés par les Nations Unies pour assurer la liberté à tous les peuples vivant encore sous la domination coloniale s'exercent parallèlement à leur mission, qui est d'aider à maintenir et à favoriser des relations amicales entre les nations. Les questions non réglées, concernant la souveraineté sur certains territoires, sont une source constante de friction. A notre avis, si le Comité spécial examinait la situation de certains de ces territoires avant que ces divergences ne soient réglées, une telle initiative pourrait exacerber ces divergences au lieu de les atténuer. Le Comité spécial pourrait donc juger utile de différer l'examen de la situation de certains de ces territoires litigieux jusqu'à ce que les parties intéressées soient parvenues à un règlement mutuellement acceptable.

150. Entre-temps, l'Assemblée générale pourrait inviter et encourager les parties directement intéressées à régler leurs différends au moyen des procédures prévues par la Charte des Nations Unies ou par tout autre moyen pacifique qui aurait leur agrément. Ma délégation est prête à appuyer toute initiative qui pourrait être prise dans ce sens.

151. Pour terminer, la délégation des Philippines tient à déclarer qu'elle souscrit, pour l'essentiel, au projet de résolution adopté par le Comité spécial et qui figure dans son rapport. Nous appuyons fermement les recommandations tendant à accroître l'efficacité du Comité spécial dans l'accomplissement de la tâche qui lui a été confiée.

M. Sosa Rodríguez (Venezuela) assume à nouveau la présidence.

152. M. AL-RASHID (Koweït) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'Assemblée générale ainsi que d'autres organes des Nations Unies se sont occupés de la question de la décolonisation depuis la création même de l'Organisation. C'est, toutefois, en 1960 que cette question a été considérée dans une perspective nouvelle pouvant être mieux définie. Cette année-là, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 1514 (XV), qui stipulait, au paragraphe 2 de son dispositif, que "tous les peuples ont le droit de libre-détermination". Il est également dit au paragraphe 5 de ce dispositif:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leur vœu librement exprimés..."

153. Depuis l'adoption de cette résolution, la libération des colonies a cessé de faire l'objet unique de vœux pieux pour entrer dans le domaine des réalisations. C'est pour cela qu'a été créé le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre, chargé par l'Assemblée de s'occuper de cette question. Il a réussi à procéder à un examen complet de 25 questions sur les 64 qui lui avaient été confiées à l'origine.

154. Nous ne pouvons manquer de nous déclarer satisfaits de la nouvelle attitude conciliante des puissances administrantes dans de nombreux cas. C'est toutefois surtout grâce aux efforts incessants et à la persévérance du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre que tout cela a été obtenu. L'œuvre accomplie par ce comité marquera une page brillante dans les annales de l'Organisation. Nous félicitons son président, son bureau et ses membres.

155. Permettez-moi maintenant, Monsieur le Président, de présenter de brèves observations au sujet du rapport soumis par le Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1]. Du fait des renseignements précieux qu'il contient et des importantes conclusions qu'il formule, ce rapport a permis à ma délégation de se faire une idée juste de la question du colonialisme dans son ensemble. Nous sommes particulièrement satisfaits de la façon dont le Comité spécial a abordé son travail, traitant chaque question en soi.

156. Un problème auquel le Comité se heurtera de plus en plus est celui de l'octroi de l'indépendance à une multitude de petits territoires. Non que la grandeur d'un territoire donné doive constituer un facteur déterminant dans l'application du principe de l'autodétermination, mais, du fait même de ce principe, nous devons dûment tenir compte des vœux des habitants de telle ou telle région qui pourraient souhaiter se fondre ou s'associer avec la population d'une autre zone. Cela impliquerait, outre le facteur de la viabilité économique, des liens historiques, une communauté de tradition et de culture. Nous serions particulièrement heureux que le Comité accorde une attention croissante à ce problème et fasse rapport à ce sujet à l'Assemblée générale au cours de sa prochaine session.

157. Le travail du Comité, toutefois, ne pourra s'achever rapidement et avec fruit sans la collaboration sincère des puissances administrantes. La libération des colonies n'est pas seulement dans l'intérêt des puissances administrantes et des territoires administrés, elle doit être considérée aussi comme l'un des aspects du principe de la responsabilité collective qui est à la base de notre organisation.

158. Les puissances administrantes ont le devoir de respecter et de remplir leurs obligations découlant de la Charte, obligations réaffirmées dans de nombreuses résolutions des Nations Unies, notamment dans la résolution 1514 (XV).

159. Je passe maintenant à la question d'Aden et du Protectorat britannique dans la partie sud de la péninsule Arabique. Il s'agit là, nettement, d'un problème colonial. Les preuves historiques abondent, et point n'est besoin de les exposer à ce stade de notre débat. Néanmoins, les assertions du Royaume-Uni quant à la légitimité de sa domination doivent être rejetées une fois pour toutes, car la domination britannique a été imposée aux populations par la force et sans tenir compte des vœux et des aspirations des intéressés. Ces revendications britanniques sont en réalité bien fragiles, comme le prouve le boycottage par le Royaume-Uni du Sous-Comité du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre créé pour enquêter sur ce point.

160. Nous sommes déçus, à vrai dire, par l'attitude du Royaume-Uni, qui diffère de la politique plus réaliste et libérale qu'elle a suivie au sujet de bon nombre d'autres questions coloniales. Nous regrettons d'en conclure, par conséquent, que le maintien de la domination du Royaume-Uni dans la région a pour objet de servir principalement les intérêts britanniques. Il est clair que les intérêts véritables de la population de ce territoire ne sont pas entrés en ligne de compte.

161. La Fédération que la Puissance administrante a instituée dans cette région était absolument à l'opposé des vœux de la population, qui n'a pas eu la possibilité de faire connaître son opinion en la matière. Cette mesure est en contradiction flagrante avec le paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV), où il est dit:

"Toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies."

162. Pour combattre toute résistance de la part de la population, comme nous l'apprend le rapport du Sous-Comité, les autorités britanniques ont eu recours à des actes antidémocratiques et inhumains à l'encontre des dirigeants et des organisations nationalistes. Nous sommes reconnaissants au Sous-Comité des renseignements qu'il nous a fournis à cet égard. En fait, son œuvre doit être applaudie et doit amener d'autant plus les autorités britanniques à réfléchir sur la question de leurs rapports futurs avec le Comité.

163. En ce qui concerne les recommandations contenues dans le rapport du Sous-Comité, ma délégation tient à affirmer son adhésion au principe de l'auto-détermination, dont l'application, dans le cas du Sud de la péninsule arabique, implique nécessairement des élections libres et démocratiques sous la surveillance des Nations Unies. Des élections impartiales de ce genre permettraient une représentation véritable de la population, qui, seule, peut déterminer sa destinée nationale.

164. A moins d'une procédure aussi démocratique, aucun gouvernement ne peut valablement prétendre représenter le peuple. En fait, les gouvernements locaux actuels sont conçus de manière à perpétuer la domination coloniale et à sauvegarder leurs propres intérêts individuels, ce qui n'aura pour résultat que d'aggraver la crise dans l'ensemble de la région et d'entraîner des répercussions néfastes dans tout le monde arabe.

165. Puisque j'ai la parole sur la question du colonialisme, j'ajoute que ma délégation ne perd pas de vue les autres problèmes de ce genre qui se posent dans d'autres parties du monde. Hier, nous avons adopté une résolution [1913 (XVIII)] sur la question des territoires portugais d'Afrique. Il existe aussi en Afrique des territoires espagnols, et nous espérons sincèrement que le processus de la décolonisation jouera dans ce cas également.

166. Pour conclure, la question de la décolonisation dans son ensemble est l'une des préoccupations majeures de notre organisation. Aussi pouvons-nous espérer avec confiance une solution définitive et heureuse de cette question qui nous permettra de chasser tout sentiment de rancœur et d'éliminer de notre vocabulaire toute accusation acrimonieuse. Ainsi, notre organisation pourra réellement devenir une organisation de paix, de sécurité et de fraternité pour tous les peuples.

167. Nous comptons que, pour atteindre ce but, les puissances administrantes accorderont aux Nations Unies, et en particulier au Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre, libre accès dans les territoires qu'elles administrent et qu'elles leur fourniront des renseignements directs à ce sujet.

168. Dato 'ONG (Malaisie) [traduit de l'anglais]: C'est l'une des hontes du monde contemporain que, en un temps où les fruits de la civilisation moderne permettent à l'homme de projeter la conquête et l'exploration des régions lointaines de l'espace extra-atmosphérique, il y ait encore des millions de nos frères qui languissent dans l'avilissement humiliant où les maintient la domination coloniale. La persistance du colonialisme pose un problème qui exige une solution rapide et auquel nous devons nous attaquer avec toutes nos ressources afin que cette institution surannée et diabolique de la domination de l'homme par l'homme disparaisse définitivement et rapidement.

169. Une tendance inévitable n'est toutefois déjà que trop évidente. Le désir ardent qu'a l'homme de la liberté et du respect de sa dignité ne peut être éternellement étouffé par la domination et la tyrannie. Pendant la première moitié du siècle, et en particulier au cours des décennies qui ont suivi la seconde guerre mondiale, le monde a été témoin de ce mouvement spectaculaire vers la liberté, dont le résultat a été l'apparition de vingtaines d'Etats indépendants et la libération de centaines de millions d'êtres humains après des siècles de domination étrangère. Ce mouvement continuera jusqu'à ce que tous les hommes soient libres.

170. Sans parler de son aversion pour le concept du respect des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, de la dignité et de la valeur de la personne humaine et de l'égalité des droits des hommes et des femmes et des nations grandes et petites, le colonialisme est un obstacle à la réalisation de l'un des principaux buts des Nations Unies, à savoir le développement de relations amicales entre les nations, fondées sur le respect du principe de l'égalité des droits des peuples et de leur droit à disposer d'eux-mêmes.

171. Son existence est une source constante de frictions entre les peuples, et ce qui se passe actuellement, en particulier en Afrique, montre déjà que sa résistance tenace aux forces de libération trouble sérieusement la paix et l'harmonie internationales.

172. Ainsi, de l'avis de ma délégation, la reconnaissance par la Charte du droit inaliénable des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes n'est pas simplement l'expression d'un idéal noble et élevé, c'est aussi la compréhension d'une réalité fondamentale, à savoir qu'une paix juste et durable ne peut être assurée que dans le cadre de la liberté et de l'égalité pour tous les peuples et pour toutes les nations. Ces aspects et d'autres encore des maux du colonialisme sont définis avec précision dans la célèbre Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa quinzième session, il y a trois ans.

173. Cette déclaration historique marque, de l'avis de ma délégation, une étape importante dans les progrès des Nations Unies vers la réalisation d'un ordre mondial pacifique, fondé sur le respect de la liberté et de l'égalité de tous les peuples et de toutes les nations. En ce qui concerne le rôle actif de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans le domaine de la décolonisation, cette déclaration a ouvert la voie à un examen constant, systématique par les Nations Unies, du progrès vers l'autonomie dans tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance.

174. La tâche de l'Assemblée générale concernant le problème important et complexe de la décolonisation a été considérablement facilitée par le travail initial accompli par le Comité spécial créé à la seizième session par la résolution 1654 (XVI), comité qui a été reconduit et élargi par la résolution 1810 (XVII), qui a porté le nombre de ses membres de 17 à 24.

175. C'est la seconde fois que l'Assemblée générale a la bonne fortune d'examiner le problème colonial avec l'aide d'un rapport d'une grande clarté présenté par le Comité spécial. Le Comité a droit à notre profonde gratitude pour le travail opiniâtre qu'il a accompli au cours de l'année et pour le rapport monumental en cinq volumes dont l'Assemblée est actuellement saisie [A/5446/Rev.1].

176. Siégeant presque continuellement tout au long de l'année, le Comité a tenu en tout 101 réunions, au cours desquelles il a examiné le cas de 26 territoires, situés pour la plupart en Afrique, couvrant une superficie totale de près de 6 475 000 kilomètres carrés et représentant une population de près de 37 millions de personnes.

177. Le volumineux rapport du Comité spécial contient une abondance de chiffres, d'analyses et de commentaires, d'observations et de recommandations d'une valeur inappréciable pour guider l'Assemblée dans l'examen du problème. Les délibérations de la Quatrième Commission ont été grandement facilitées cette année par les rapports que le Comité spécial a soumis sur la Rhodésie du Sud, sur les territoires portugais et sur le Sud-Ouest africain. Ma délégation saisit cette occasion pour s'associer à ceux qui ont exprimé leurs remerciements et leur gratitude au Comité spécial, qui, sous la présidence de M. Coulibaly, du Mali, et avec le précieux concours de M. Sonn, du Cambodge, et de M. Velazquez, de l'Uruguay, ses vice-présidents, a accompli une tâche difficile en couvrant tant de terrain au cours de la période relativement courte dont il disposait.

178. Ma délégation tient aussi à féliciter tout particulièrement le Rapporteur du Comité, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, et son prédécesseur, M. Najmudine Rifai, de la Syrie, pour la présentation intelligente et ordonnée du rapport du Comité.

179. S'il est vrai que des progrès ont été constatés en ce qui concerne certains territoires et que les autorités administrantes ont offert une certaine coopération néanmoins, le rapport du Comité spécial signale encore une fois, à notre grand regret, que certaines puissances coloniales, en particulier le Portugal, continuent d'adopter une attitude absolument négative. Je ne me propose pas en ce moment de discuter le problème que posent certains territoires africains, où le dernier bastion du colonialisme oppose encore une résistance obstinée. Le cas de ces territoires a été examiné à fond par la Quatrième Commission, et ma délégation a déjà eu l'occasion de faire connaître en détail sa position au sujet de chacun d'eux. S'appesantir de nouveau sur ces problèmes serait une simple répétition et une perte de temps.

180. Ma délégation tient toutefois à souligner l'importance et l'urgence des problèmes relatifs à ces territoires. Le refus persistant du Portugal de reconnaître le droit à la libre détermination du peuple de l'Angola, du Mozambique et d'autres territoires sous son administration est non seulement dénué de réalisme dans son principe, mais dangereux par ses répercussions sur la paix internationale et sur l'harmonie en Afrique. Ma délégation ne peut, dans ces conditions, qu'exprimer sa condamnation de la déplorable attitude de défi adoptée par le Portugal à l'égard des efforts des Nations Unies pour s'assurer de sa coopération pour la mise en œuvre de la résolution 1514 (XV).

181. De même, le Sud-Ouest africain pose un grave problème. Ici encore, le refus du Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud de coopérer avec les Nations Unies au sujet de ce territoire est absolument déplorable et appelle la condamnation la plus sévère de la part de la communauté internationale.

182. Quant au Royaume-Uni, bien que l'on soit encore fondé à formuler des critiques au sujet de certains de ses territoires coloniaux, il a cependant poursuivi la tâche louable de préparer ses territoires à l'indépendance. Le calendrier des progrès constitutionnels, présenté par le Royaume-Uni et qui figure à l'annexe II du rapport du Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1], montre que la date d'accession à l'indépendance d'un grand nombre de territoires a été fixée. Ma délégation se réjouit tout particulièrement de l'accession à l'indépendance, au cours des prochains jours, de Zanzibar et du Kenya, et de leur prochaine admission comme Membres des Nations Unies. Nous espérons aussi que Malte sera indépendante le 31 mai 1964, comme il est prévu.

183. Ma délégation est particulièrement heureuse que les territoires de Singapour, du Sabah et du Sarawak, mentionnés dans le calendrier des progrès constitutionnels, aient en fait accédé à l'indépendance le 16 septembre 1963, en fusionnant avec la Fédération de Malaisie dans une fédération agrandie. Comme je l'ai dit dans ma déclaration au cours du débat général à la présente session [1228ème séance], lorsque j'ai exposé en détail le processus constitutionnel et démocratique qui a précédé la création de la Grande-Malaisie, celle-ci constitue un acte important de décolonisation, entièrement conforme au principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes tel qu'il est inscrit dans diverses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale. L'union de ces trois territoires à la Malaisie dans une fédération élargie, conformément aux vœux librement exprimés des populations intéressées, a apporté l'indépendance et la liberté à plus de trois millions de personnes.

184. Au cours de l'année prochaine, le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre étudiera pour la première fois le cas d'un certain nombre de territoires pour lesquels des problèmes particuliers se posent. Certains de ceux-ci ont une petite superficie et une population clairsemée; plusieurs délégations ont déjà indiqué certaines des difficultés les plus évidentes qui résultent de cette situation. Ma délégation ne doute pas que, grâce à sa profonde expérience et à ses connaissances approfondies, le Comité spécial n'aborde ces problèmes avec le plus grand soin et l'objectivité la plus absolue. De l'avis de ma délégation, le facteur essentiel doit rester les vœux des populations intéressées. En effet, quel que soit le problème, le principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes doit être pleinement respecté.

185. Pour terminer, je tiens à exprimer au nom de ma délégation le ferme espoir que le Comité spécial, qui a accompli un travail de grande valeur cette année, continuera à faire de même l'année prochaine. Bien que certaines puissances coloniales opposent une résistance énergique, de dernière heure, le processus de décolonisation est irréversible. Tôt ou tard, les peuples encore assujettis seront libérés. Espérons que cette liberté sera obtenue dans la paix et l'amitié et non pas dans l'effusion de sang et l'inimitié.

186. Il y a quelques instants, le représentant des Philippines a de nouveau soulevé la question des revendications de son gouvernement au sujet du Sabah. La position de mon gouvernement à cet égard a été exposée dans la déclaration faite par ma délégation au cours de la discussion générale, le 10 octobre 1963, à la 1237ème séance plénière, en réponse à la déclaration du Ministre des affaires étrangères des Philippines; les membres ici présents pourront s'y reporter.

187. M. SYLLA (Madagascar): Je suis heureux de faire connaître aujourd'hui le point de vue du Gouvernement malgache sur le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/5446/Rev.1].

188. Madagascar fait partie de ce comité depuis sa création, qui, je le rappelle, découle des résolutions 1654 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961 et 1810 (XVII) du 17 décembre 1962. Elle a, en 1963, été désignée comme membre du Sous-Comité des pétitions et du Sous-Comité d'Aden. A ce dernier titre, son représentant a participé à un voyage d'étude dans les pays proches d'Aden, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni ayant refusé l'accès du territoire au Sous-Comité.

189. Ma délégation est entièrement solidaire des conclusions auxquelles le Comité spécial a abouti et demande à l'Assemblée générale de les entériner. Elle se doit de souligner, en passant, l'objectivité totale des constatations faites par le Comité ainsi que le caractère réaliste des mesures proposées pour chaque territoire. Les travaux ont été menés dans un esprit constructif en vue de l'objectif final: le bien-être des habitants des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration. Qu'il soit permis à la délégation de rendre hommage à tout le Comité pour les précieux services rendus à l'humanité, et notamment à son président, M. Sori Coulibaly, et aux rapporteurs, MM. Rifai et Natwar Singh, pour leur rare compétence et leur dévouement.

190. Les résolutions 1514 (XV) et 1654 (XVI), qui sont à la base des travaux du Comité spécial, constituent pour tous les Etats Membres une doctrine permanente qui ne laisse place à aucun compromis, car il s'agit d'égalité, de liberté, de justice et de dignité de l'homme. Tous les pays, tous les peuples encore dépendants ont droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Ce droit est indivisible, absolu, et ne saurait faire l'objet de discussion ni de marchandage. Mais l'application n'en est pas toujours aisée. Les puissances administrantes ne se sont pas montrées dans tous les cas compréhensives et coopératives. Certaines, comme le Portugal, font état de fictions juridiques pour essayer de faire accroire que les territoires sous leur administration, devenus des provinces, font partie intégrante de la métropole. Pour la Rhodésie du Sud, le Royaume-Uni prétend qu'il s'agit d'un territoire autonome, libre de gérer ses propres affaires et sur lequel il n'a plus juridiction.

191. Les rapports qui vous sont soumis font justice de ces manœuvres dilatoires et posent le problème de chaque territoire en termes nets et précis, définissant son statut au regard de la résolution 1514 (XV) et suggérant les méthodes les plus appropriées pour aboutir, d'une façon pacifique, à la mise en vigueur des principes de cette résolution. A aucun endroit on n'y trouve trace d'une hâte injustifiée ni d'une quelconque tendance à la démagogie, qui, en fin de compte, se retournerait contre les populations elles-mêmes.

192. Si le Comité spécial s'est surtout penché sur l'Afrique, c'est que c'est dans cette partie du monde que se trouvent le plus grand nombre de pays et de peuples encore sous domination étrangère. C'est là aussi que le monde a constaté, au cours des dernières années, les efforts constructifs et généreux de deux grandes puissances, la France et le Royaume-Uni, qui ont accordé l'indépendance, par des voies pacifiques et dans l'amitié, à la plus grande partie des territoires qu'elles y administraient. C'est dans cette même voie que nous leur demandons de poursuivre leur politique.

193. Me limitant, dans ce propos, aux territoires examinés par le Comité spécial, je lance un appel au Royaume-Uni pour qu'il continue de collaborer avec notre comité pour la mise en application des résolutions concernant notamment Malte, les îles Fidji, la Guyane britannique, la Rhodésie du Nord, la Rhodésie du Sud, le Nyassaland, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland, le Souaziland et la Gambie.

194. Les territoires sous administration portugaise, le Sud-Ouest africain et les territoires soumis par le Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud à l'odieux régime de l'apartheid doivent faire l'objet, de la part de notre assemblée et du Conseil de sécurité, de résolutions et de décisions énergiques, car il n'est plus possible que notre organisation tolère que ses recommandations les plus solennelles soient continuellement bafouées. Il y va non seulement de son audience et de son prestige, mais de sa survie.

195. On a parlé, au cours de la discussion générale, de petits territoires dont la situation démographique ou économique ne permet pas, dans l'immédiat, l'accession à l'indépendance. De l'avis de ma délégation, il faut laisser aux habitants de ces territoires leur droit à l'autodétermination et la faculté de choisir la forme d'association qu'ils préfèrent, ou le degré d'autonomie dont ils veulent jouir. Ces territoires tombent incontestablement sous la juridiction du Comité spécial, mais celui-ci aura à examiner attentivement leur cas en liaison avec les puissances administrantes, à qui nous demandons de lui apporter une franche collaboration. Le Comité aura à s'informer, par des études faites sur place, de la situation économique et sociale de ces territoires, du libre choix des populations et, éventuellement, de l'assistance à leur fournir par notre organisation.

196. Ce sont là les très brèves observations que la délégation malgache voulait soumettre aux membres de l'Assemblée.

197. Mon pays, qui a conquis son indépendance par de libres négociations avec la France, et qui a ensuite gardé avec elle des liens d'amitié et de collaboration, pense que ce même processus peut s'appliquer à tous les pays entrant dans le cadre des études entreprises par le Comité spécial. Le problème racial ne peut pas et ne doit pas être un obstacle à la création d'Etats indépendants, où les droits des minorités doivent être sauvegardés. Mon pays, pour sa part, a résolu ce problème, car 19 tribus, d'origine variée, y vivent en paix et en harmonie.

198. Mais lorsqu'une puissance administrante refuse de s'incliner devant les principes de la Charte et les décisions de notre organisation, nous avons tous le devoir d'exprimer avec fermeté notre désapprobation et d'envisager des mesures pour l'amener à se conformer à ses obligations de Membre.

199. Ma délégation compte que l'Assemblée renouvellera au Comité spécial sa confiance et l'autorisera à poursuivre, en 1964, l'œuvre importante dont elle l'a chargé, et qui doit aboutir, dans un avenir que je souhaite aussi proche que possible, à l'exercice de l'autodétermination pour tous les peuples et pays encore dépendants.

200. M. TABIBI (Afghanistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: Nous avons la chance de vivre à une époque que l'on qualifie d'ère de l'émancipation des peuples et des nations et de liquidation du colonialisme. En très peu de temps, le nombre des nations libres, du fait de la lutte pour la libération et l'indépendance menée partout dans le monde, a augmenté rapidement, et cette heureuse évolution se poursuit. Avant la fin de la présente session de l'Assemblée, nous espérons que le Kenya et Zanzibar seront présents parmi nous.

201. A notre époque, nul ne croit plus aux races supérieures ou inférieures ni aux missions civilisatrices des pays européens dans les continents d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine.

202. Le Pacte de la Société des Nations, les Chartes de l'Atlantique et des Nations Unies et, enfin, la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux reconnaissent formellement à tous les peuples et à toutes les nations le droit à la liberté et à la libre détermination. L'Afghanistan, fort de son propre passé de lutte contre le colonialisme, appuie fermement la lutte des peuples pour l'indépendance. Tant à la Conférence de Bandoung de 1955^{8/} qu'à celle de Belgrade en 1961^{9/}, nous avons chaleureusement appuyé la lutte menée par les peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique pour obtenir leur indépendance, car nous estimons que le colonialisme est la pire des injustices que l'on puisse faire à l'humanité; tant qu'il subsistera, il faudra le considérer comme une menace permanente à la paix et à la dignité de la personne humaine.

203. Nous n'admettons pas que l'on invoque un prétexte quelconque, qu'il soit d'ordre politique, juridique ou économique, pour retarder l'accession à l'indépendance des peuples qui luttent pour s'affranchir du joug du colonialisme. C'est pour cette raison que nous accordons toute notre sympathie aux nationalistes de la Rhodésie du Sud, des colonies portugaises, du Sud-Ouest africain et à tous les autres peuples

^{8/} Conférence des nations asiatiques et africaines, tenue à Bandoung du 18 au 24 avril 1955.

^{9/} Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés, tenue à Belgrade du 1er au 6 septembre 1961.

soumis à un régime d'occupation dans une partie quelconque du monde.

204. Nous rejetons l'argument selon lequel les peuples qui sont sous domination coloniale n'ont pas encore acquis la maturité nécessaire pour être libres. A notre avis, la maturité et la liberté vont de pair et aucun pays n'est mûr pour l'autonomie à moins qu'il ne soit libre de diriger ses propres affaires.

205. Il est vraiment regrettable de constater que plus de 70 territoires comptant plus de 50 millions d'habitants sont encore assujettis et attendent impatiemment le jour où ils pourront se joindre à la communauté libre des nations sur un pied d'égalité.

206. Ma délégation a étudié le volumineux mais important rapport du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre et l'a jugé extrêmement utile tant pour la compréhension des populations et des régions colonisées que pour les futurs historiens qui décriront la fin du régime colonial.

207. L'annexe I du rapport du Comité spécial énumère 64 territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration des Nations Unies, mais, de l'avis mûrement réfléchi de ma délégation, cette liste est incomplète et ne comprend pas d'autres territoires également visés par la Déclaration. En dépit de tous ses efforts, le Comité spécial n'a malheureusement pas pu terminer l'examen de tous les territoires relevant de son mandat, mais, comme il est indiqué au paragraphe 50 du chapitre I du rapport, le Comité s'est dûment occupé de la plupart des territoires coloniaux d'Afrique, qui sont les plus vastes et dont les problèmes sont plus complexes.

208. Nous déplorons que, en dépit des louables efforts déployés par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, les Gouvernements du Portugal et de l'Union sud-africaine n'aient pas coopéré aux travaux du Comité spécial. Le Royaume-Uni a fait preuve d'une certaine coopération, mais il est vraiment regrettable qu'il ait refusé d'autoriser les missions de visite des Nations Unies à se rendre à Aden et dans ses protectorats ainsi qu'en Guyane britannique.

209. Ma délégation estime que, sans la coopération étroite et sincère de la Puissance administrante, les buts de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, comme ceux de l'Article 73 de la Charte, ne pourront être atteints.

210. Nous ne partageons pas l'opinion des puissances administrantes selon laquelle les activités du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre constituent une ingérence dans l'administration de leurs territoires; nous les considérons plutôt comme des efforts utiles qui visent non seulement à affirmer la dignité de la personne humaine dans tous les pays, mais aussi à aider les puissances coloniales elles-mêmes à résoudre leurs problèmes.

211. Nous estimons que, en dépit de multiples difficultés le Comité spécial a accompli une tâche extrêmement utile; en un court laps de temps, il a examiné 26 territoires couvrant une superficie de près de 2 400 000 de milles carrés, soit 6 475 000 kilomètres carrés, avec une population de 37 millions d'habitants. Nous avons tout lieu d'espérer que le rapport concernant les autres territoires qui relèvent de son mandat fournira, l'an prochain, un tableau plus satisfaisant de la situation.

212. Nous espérons qu'il sera mis fin au colonialisme et que le sort de millions d'êtres humains ne dépendra plus du bon vouloir des puissances coloniales. Celles-ci auraient intérêt à réviser leur attitude intransigeante actuelle et à coopérer avec les Nations Unies dans leur noble tâche d'émancipation des peuples du monde entier. Ma délégation nourrit l'espoir que lors du vingtième anniversaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, qui coïncidera avec l'Année de la coopération internationale, les derniers vestiges du colonialisme auront disparu et qu'un monde de peuples et de nations libres s'unira pour œuvrer en commun à l'amélioration des conditions d'existence actuelles et futures.

213. M. BUDO (Albanie): La question de l'élimination de l'asservissement colonial sous toutes ses formes qu'examine à présent l'Assemblée générale est l'un des problèmes les plus importants de notre époque; c'est un problème d'intérêt vital pour tous les peuples qui se trouvent encore sous la dépendance coloniale de l'impérialisme; il concerne leurs droits inaliénables et imprescriptibles à la liberté, à l'indépendance et à l'égalité; il touche à la cause de la liberté, de la paix et du progrès de l'humanité tout entière.

214. Le rapport volumineux présenté par le Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1], les problèmes dont il traite, concernant des millions d'êtres humains, en particulier les difficultés auxquelles s'est heurté le Comité dans l'accomplissement du mandat que lui a confié l'Assemblée générale, tout cela témoigne aussi à nos yeux de la portée et de la nature du problème. Le rapport met en évidence la tâche qui, conformément à la Charte, s'impose en la matière à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, les efforts que doivent déployer les Etats Membres, tous ceux qui ont à cœur la cause de l'indépendance et de la paix des peuples, pour apporter une contribution efficace à la lutte héroïque de libération nationale que mènent les peuples subissant encore le jour odieux du colonialisme.

215. L'humanité a assisté au cours de ces dernières années aux victoires historiques remportées par les peuples dans leur lutte héroïque pour se délivrer des chaînes du colonialisme. Des dizaines de pays d'Afrique et d'Asie ont accédé à l'indépendance. La vague de la lutte révolutionnaire de libération des peuples d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine a secoué les fondements mêmes du système de domination et d'exploitation inhumaine de l'impérialisme. Le système abhorré du colonialisme se désagrège et sa fin inéluctable approche.

216. On ne saurait pourtant ne pas souligner qu'il reste encore beaucoup à faire dans la lutte contre le colonialisme pour parvenir à la liquidation totale et sous toutes ses formes de ce système. Des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains souffrent encore sous le joug de la domination étrangère, et dans divers points du globe les peuples mènent une lutte résolue contre les envahisseurs colonialistes, et même des combats armés sont imposés par ces derniers. Des milliers d'hommes tombent au champ de bataille, comme au Viet-Nam du Sud, en Angola et ailleurs, ou sont victimes de mesures de répression atroces du fait de leur lutte patriotique pour la liberté et l'indépendance. Nombreux sont les pays qui sont actuellement l'objet de l'exploitation et de l'agression impérialistes ou qui sont transformés en champs de conflits entre les anciens et les nouveaux colonialistes. Dans maints pays, l'ancien système colonial est remplacé par le néo-colonialisme, les puissances colonialistes cherchant par diverses manœuvres, y compris les mesures législatives, les prétendus changements constitutionnels et autres, à maintenir leur exploitation inhumaine sous des formes nouvelles; dans d'autres cas, les anciens colonialistes sont remplacés par les néo-colonialistes des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, pays colonialiste le plus puissant et le plus dangereux.

217. De l'avis de la délégation albanaise, une attention particulière doit être attachée à ce nouveau phénomène de notre temps, le néo-colonialisme, qui vise à perpétuer la subjugation des peuples sous des formes mieux adaptées aux nouvelles conditions historiques du monde d'aujourd'hui. Par des voies et moyens variés, y compris "l'assistance économique", les impérialistes s'efforcent de leur mieux de maintenir encore sous leur férule certains pays récemment devenus indépendants ou qui sont en train de le devenir. Les faits de la réalité internationale nous montrent à l'évidence que les puissances coloniales, les Etats-Unis en tête, en vue de s'assurer des sources de matières premières et des marchés pour l'exportation de leurs produits industriels et de leurs capitaux, et conformément à leurs plans agressifs, ne reculent devant aucun moyen. Ils s'efforcent de grouper certains pays en fédérations ou en communautés et même de les organiser dans des blocs militaires, avec toutes les conséquences que cela comporte pour la sécurité et la paix internationales, aggravant ainsi encore davantage le danger d'une nouvelle guerre mondiale. Le néo-colonialisme est devenu aujourd'hui la forme la plus dangereuse de la domination et de l'exploitation impérialistes des peuples.

218. Un examen objectif du rapport du Comité spécial, qui concerne un grand nombre de territoires, et une comparaison de ce rapport avec celui présenté à la session précédente par ce même comité ^{10/} nous prouvent à l'évidence, en particulier, que, malgré les efforts du Comité en vue d'accomplir sa tâche conformément à son mandat, il se heurte toujours aux mêmes difficultés qui résultent notamment du refus tenace des puissances administrantes de coopérer avec lui, conformément aux obligations qui leur incombent en vertu de la Charte et des résolutions adoptées en la matière par les Nations Unies.

219. Le Comité spécial exprime encore dans le présent rapport sa préoccupation à cet égard et nous met en garde contre l'attitude généralement négative des puissances administrantes qui élèvent des obstacles de toutes sortes pour empêcher l'accession à l'indépendance des territoires placés sous leur administration.

220. Les obstacles élevés par les puissances colonialistes et les prétextes dont elles font état pour retarder l'accession des peuples à l'indépendance sont bien connus. Nous en avons parlé en maintes occasions, et de nombreux représentants qui m'ont précédé dans ce débat les ont mentionnés ici. La résolution 1514 (XV) a rejeté de telles prétentions et exige l'indépendance et la liberté complètes et sans retard des territoires dépendants.

221. Il est bien connu que les Nations Unies ont adopté, avant et après la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, un très grand nombre de résolutions concernant l'élimination du système colonial. Cependant, les puissances colonialistes non seulement n'ont pas tenu compte de ces résolutions, mais, au contraire, ont eu recours à tous les moyens possibles à leur disposition, allant des supercheries, des intrigues et des pressions jusqu'aux arrestations, aux assassinats, aux massacres atroces d'êtres innocents, aux complots et aux coups d'Etat, y compris les agressions armées, attachées qu'elles sont à la mise en œuvre de leur politique visant à perpétuer, sous une forme ou sous une autre, la domination et l'exploitation des pays et des peuples coloniaux et dépendants.

222. Les puissances coloniales se cramponnent aux territoires qu'elles dominent et s'empressent, pour y demeurer, d'avoir recours à toutes les voies. Le Portugal, suivant une politique absurde, intolérable et criminelle, et jouissant de l'aide de ses alliés de l'OTAN, s'est lancé dans une guerre meurtrière contre les peuples d'Angola, de la Guinée dite portugaise et des autres colonies portugaises en Afrique. Les Etats-Unis ont accordé au Gouvernement de Salazar une aide militaire de près de 340 millions de dollars, que celui-ci emploie pour réprimer la lutte de libération nationale des peuples des colonies portugaises. Des crimes atroces, commis par les forces portugaises contre les populations autochtones dans le continent africain, ont été mis en évidence en détail et non pour la première fois par de nombreux orateurs. Je ne considère pas nécessaire d'y revenir; mais je voudrais souligner que les peuples de l'Afrique tout entière et tous les peuples épris de liberté sont profondément indignés et élèvent une ferme accusation contre les puissances impérialistes de l'OTAN, en premier lieu contre les Etats-Unis, qui sont à la tête de ce bloc agressif, pour l'aide fournie au Portugal, et en l'absence de laquelle ce pays se serait trouvé, depuis longtemps déjà, dans l'impossibilité de continuer la guerre dévastatrice qu'il mène dans ses colonies. La voix des peuples de l'Afrique et de l'Asie contre les puissances impérialistes qui arment le Portugal pour massacrer le peuple angolais s'est fait également entendre à la troisième Conférence de la solidarité des peuples afro-asiatiques à Moshi ^{11/}, ainsi qu'à la Conférence des chefs d'Etat africains à Addis-Abéba.

223. Depuis 18 ans, on entend parler ici de la possibilité d'amener la République sud-africaine à changer le cours de sa politique criminelle d'apartheid et de ségrégation raciale et d'accorder au territoire du Sud-Ouest africain son indépendance. Depuis 18 ans, le Gouvernement raciste de l'Afrique du Sud, foulant aux pieds des dizaines de résolutions adoptées par notre organisation et ne tenant aucun compte de l'opinion publique mondiale, n'a pas montré la moindre volonté en ce sens; en particulier, il s'efforce, contre toute logique et toute justice, d'annexer le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain, recourant à ces fins à la répression la plus sauvage contre le peuple de ce territoire.

^{11/} Conférence réunie du 4 au 10 février 1963.

224. Des résolutions comportant des mesures importantes et des sanctions ont été adoptées par notre organisation et appliquées par de nombreux pays. Mais l'Afrique du Sud ne renonce pas pour autant à sa politique d'apartheid et d'annexion, encouragée qu'elle est en cela par les autres puissances impérialistes qui font cause commune avec elle et lui fournissent une aide considérable. C'est un fait bien connu que les puissances colonialistes coordonnent leurs actions contre les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples. Ainsi, en Angola, au Mozambique, en Oman, en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain et dans les autres pays où les peuples luttent pour la liberté, les troupes portugaises, britanniques et de l'Afrique du Sud sont équipées d'armes provenant directement ou indirectement de l'OTAN et bénéficient de l'aide multilatérale des Etats-Unis d'Amérique.

225. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, sous la pression croissante du mouvement de libération nationale dans les territoires sous son administration, poursuit une tactique qui a pour but de voiler ses visées colonialistes. Les plans de création de fédérations comme celle de la Rhodésie du Nord et du Nyassaland, ainsi que celle de l'Arabie du Sud, les tactiques de la prétendue indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud, où un gouvernement de racistes blancs répond aux objectifs des colonialistes britanniques, sont des méthodes caractéristiques de ces derniers.

226. C'est conformément à cette ligne politique que Winston Field prêche actuellement la prétendue indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud, en vue d'imposer à ce pays la loi raciste fondée sur la Constitution, de sinistre renommée, qui nie à la population africaine tout droit de participation à la vie politique. Un autre raciste blanc, Roy Welensky, le Président du Conseil de la prétendue Fédération de l'Afrique centrale, ne trouve pas d'autre voie pour prolonger l'exploitation inhumaine de la population africaine et garder les privilèges colonialistes que de se rapprocher de ses amis de l'Afrique du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Sud.

227. Ainsi, les politiciens blancs des colonies britanniques d'Afrique centrale ne renoncent pas à l'idée de la création d'une "Afrique blanche". A cette fin, un accord militaire secret fut signé l'année dernière entre la République sud-africaine, la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland et les autorités des colonies portugaises. Cette alliance, connue sous le nom d'"Alliance impie", fut créée pour entreprendre une action commune contre les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples africains de l'Afrique du Sud et de l'Afrique centrale. Dans le dessein de créer un Etat policier en Rhodésie du Sud, Winston Field a demandé au Gouvernement sud-africain une aide militaire et l'intervention de la police sud-africaine dans le territoire de la Rhodésie.

228. Il n'y a aucun doute que tous ces complots et toutes ces machinations contre les peuples africains des colonies britanniques ont l'approbation du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni. Mais les desseins des racistes blancs de l'Afrique et de leurs patrons se heurtent à la résistance des peuples de ces colonies et de tous les peuples africains. Lors de sa visite en Rhodésie du Nord au mois de janvier de 1963, le Vice-Premier Ministre britannique, R. A. Butler, a été accueilli par des cris des masses demandant la liquidation de la Fédération détestée et une nouvelle constitution pour la Rhodésie du Nord.

229. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni ne ménage rien pour présenter sous un faux aspect la situation dans les territoires se trouvant sous son administration. En Guyane britannique, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a eu recours à tous les moyens pour étouffer le mouvement de libération nationale et retarder l'accession de ce pays à l'indépendance, en se servant des divergences qu'il avait lui-même créées entre les groupes politiques.

230. Les mêmes méthodes sont utilisées par ce pays à Aden, où il vise à diviser les tribus et à les pousser les unes contre les autres en vue d'empêcher la réalisation des aspirations légitimes du peuple d'Aden et de supprimer sa juste lutte pour l'indépendance. Le peuple d'Aden demande qu'il soit mis fin sans délai au régime colonial. C'est à juste titre qu'il considère la Fédération de l'Arabie du Sud comme une création des colonialistes britanniques visant à empêcher l'indépendance d'Aden et à perpétuer la séparation de ce territoire du Yémen. Les colonialistes britanniques, poussés par leurs intérêts égoïstes et par leurs plans de stratégie militaire concernant la chaîne des bases militaires qu'ils ont construites au Moyen-Orient, foulent aux pieds les droits légitimes du peuple d'Aden et s'efforcent par tous les moyens de consolider leur domination coloniale dans ce pays.

231. Depuis déjà huit années, les forces armées du Royaume-Uni mènent une guerre sans merci contre le peuple d'Oman, qui lutte héroïquement pour son indépendance et pour son droit légitime de jouir des richesses de son pays. Le peuple d'Oman s'est engagé résolument dans sa lutte de libération nationale. Les colonialistes britanniques mènent dans ce pays une guerre d'extermination pour s'assurer la possession du pétrole et la position stratégique d'Oman. En exprimant la sympathie et la solidarité du peuple albanais pour la lutte héroïque des peuples d'Oman et d'Aden pour leur liberté, nous exprimons en même temps notre conviction que le jour n'est pas loin où l'on verra cette lutte couronnée de succès et les peuples devenir libres et maîtres dans leur propre pays.

232. Bien conscients des desseins et des plans diaboliques des colonialistes et des impérialistes, les peuples qui subissent le joug colonial et l'oppression impérialiste en Afrique et ailleurs renforcent leur solidarité d'armes, continuent leur lutte et leurs efforts pour la libération nationale et pour la consoliquidation de l'indépendance contre les menées des néo-colonialistes.

233. Pour ce qui est de la ferme résolution des peuples africains et de leur solidarité pour rejeter une fois pour toutes le joug colonial et barrer la voie à toute entreprise impérialiste qui, sous une forme ou sous une autre, vise à perpétuer la domination et l'exploitation des peuples d'Afrique, permettez-moi de citer ici le Président de la République du Ghana, M. Nkrumah, qui, dans une déclaration publiée dans la revue française France nouvelle en mars 1963, a dit notamment:

"En ce qui concerne la révolution africaine, nous ne pouvons pas parler d'équilibre de force ni même de coexistence pacifique tant que le colonialisme et l'impérialisme ne seront pas entièrement liquidés sur notre continent. Ainsi donc, la révolution africaine ne peut coexister avec l'impérialisme."

234. Certes, les peuples asservis n'attendent pas des colonialistes qu'ils abandonnent volontairement leurs positions et qu'ils accordent l'indépendance. Ils savent que la liberté ne s'offre pas, mais qu'elle se conquiert; ils savent, par leur propre expérience et par celle de leurs frères qui ont déjà remporté la victoire, que c'est par leur lutte résolue qu'ils parviendront à expulser de leur terre nationale les envahisseurs étrangers et à mettre fin à l'exploitation coloniale. C'est grâce à leur lutte héroïque et parce qu'ils ont joui de la solidarité et de l'appui de tous les pays et de tous les peuples épris de paix et de liberté que les peuples d'un grand nombre de pays d'Afrique et d'Asie ont pu se délivrer des chaînes de la subjugation étrangère et accéder à l'indépendance.

235. La composition actuelle de notre organisation et la part active que prennent les représentants des pays devenus récemment indépendants à la défense des droits inaliénables des peuples à la liberté, à l'égalité et à la justice sont un témoignage éclatant des succès remportés par le puissant mouvement historique de libération de la servitude coloniale, ainsi que de l'importance et de la portée que revêtent les transformations actuelles de la société humaine.

236. Plus que jamais la situation internationale évolue en faveur des peuples. Le puissant mouvement révolutionnaire de libération nationale, qui est caractéristique de notre époque, continue et va de l'avant et finira, certes, par triompher totalement et définitivement de l'impérialisme, malgré les efforts désespérés déployés pour maintenir le régime esclavagiste. C'est là le processus irréversible de l'histoire de la société humaine. L'élimination totale et définitive du colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, est inéluctable.

237. Le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme ne sont pas seulement la négation des droits inaliénables de l'homme à la liberté, à l'égalité et à la dignité; ils constituent en même temps des sources de guerres d'agression et de tension internationale. La lutte que mènent les peuples pour la liquidation de cette séquelle hideuse de notre siècle est étroitement liée au mouvement mondial pour la défense de la paix. La liberté et la paix des peuples sont insé-parables l'une de l'autre. Chaque victoire remportée par les peuples dans leur lutte pour leur indépendance nationale constitue un coup porté aux forces de guerre impérialistes et, partant, une contribution à la consolidation de la paix.

238. L'une des tâches primordiales de l'Organisation des Nations Unies est, conformément à la Charte, d'apporter sa contribution efficace à ce mouvement grandiose de libération nationale. Très nombreuses, certes, sont les résolutions adoptées par les Nations Unies visant à la délivrance des peuples du joug colonial. Mais la déclaration et les résolutions de notre organisation ne valent que dans la mesure où elles servent à la réalisation de l'objectif que l'on se propose. L'expérience de longues années nous montre que les puissances coloniales, à cause du caractère même de leur système, ne tiennent pas compte de ces résolutions et ne sont pas disposées à renoncer à leurs intérêts égoïstes et inhumains. Devant un tel état de choses, l'Assemblée générale se doit de prendre des mesures adéquates et énergiques afin d'apporter une aide réelle à la lutte des peuples et de rendre possible la mise en œuvre de ses propres résolutions pour l'élimination du système de servitude coloniale dans toutes ses manifestations.

239. L'histoire des longs débats sur le colonialisme qui se sont déroulés à l'ONU au cours des années, depuis sa création, nous révèle l'existence de deux courants opposés au sein de notre organisation. D'une part, la majorité écrasante des Etats Membres qui luttent pour l'élimination sans délai du régime colonial, ancien et nouveau, et, d'autre part, une minorité de Membres, principalement composée de puissances impérialistes, qui s'efforce par tous les moyens possibles, y compris les pressions, de perpétuer ce régime ou tout au moins d'en prolonger autant que possible l'existence. Il incombe aux Etats Membres qui ont à cœur la cause sacrée de la liberté des peuples d'agir en conséquence et d'apporter à la lutte de ces derniers une aide réelle afin de ne plus retarder la liquidation de ce régime esclavagiste. Dans les conditions présentes, des mesures concrètes et efficaces doivent être adoptées par l'Assemblée générale en vue de couper court à toutes les manœuvres dilatoires des puissances colonialistes et de forcer la mise en œuvre des résolutions précédemment adoptées, en fixant à cet effet une date limite aussi rapprochée que possible.

240. Le peuple albanais, qui a connu lui-même la domination et l'exploitation étrangères, comprend parfaitement les aspirations légitimes des peuples opprimés et dépendants; il est entièrement solidaire de leur lutte héroïque de libération nationale. Le peuple albanais et son gouvernement ont fermement appuyé les droits fondamentaux des peuples à l'autodétermination, à la liberté et à la souveraineté. Nous considérons qu'il ne peut y avoir de paix durable ni de coopération saine tant qu'existera la subjugation étrangère des peuples. Nous saluons et nous soutenons de tout cœur la lutte héroïque et lourde de sacrifices des peuples d'Oman, d'Aden, de Zanzibar, d'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise, du Sud-Ouest africain, de la Rhodésie du Sud et de tous les peuples qui combattent contre l'oppression féroce des puissances coloniales. Nous soutenons fermement le droit légitime de la Guyane britannique à l'indépendance entière et immédiate.

241. La délégation de la République populaire d'Albanie estime que la tâche la plus élevée de l'Organisation des Nations Unies consiste à appuyer la lutte sacrée de libération des peuples. Nous considérons qu'il est grand temps d'adopter des mesures énergiques en vue de contribuer efficacement à cette lutte pour liquider définitivement et dans le plus bref délai le système de servitude coloniale et pour barrer la route au néo-colonialisme sous toutes ses formes.

242. La délégation albanaise appuiera toutes les mesures susceptibles d'apporter une contribution réelle à la réalisation de cet objectif.

243. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Comme on l'a déjà annoncé, la prochaine séance aura lieu ce soir à 20 h 30 précises. Nous finirons la discussion générale du point 23 de l'ordre du jour. Je demande aux délégations de bien vouloir se présenter ponctuellement à 20 h 30 ce soir.

La séance est levée à 18 h 55.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

DISCUSSION GÉNÉRALE (fin)

1. M. RIFA'I (Jordanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'examen du rapport du Comité spécial sur la décolonisation incite ma délégation à formuler quelques observations d'ordre général sur les travaux du Comité, sans entrer nécessairement dans le détail de chacune des questions et de chacun des problèmes particuliers qui sont abordés dans le rapport ou des situations qui y sont exposées.

2. Nous estimons que l'Assemblée générale a déjà dépassé le stade qui consiste à reconnaître la nécessité de mettre définitivement fin au régime colonial où qu'il sévise et quelle que soit la forme qu'il présente. Sans aucun doute, l'une des pages les plus exaltantes de l'histoire de la civilisation sera celle qui relatera comment l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dans sa jeunesse, s'est consacrée avec le plus grand dévouement et avec la plus grande diligence à la noble tâche qui consiste à élever chaque nation et chaque territoire qui se trouvait dans une situation d'infériorité par rapport aux nations libres et indépendantes au niveau de toutes les autres nations souveraines. Nous devons donc attendre avec confiance le jour où l'étendard de l'indépendance et de la liberté flottera en chaque point de la surface du globe.

3. Dans cette perspective, je suis amené à aborder deux des principales questions qui nous concernent et qui sont étroitement liées : il s'agit de savoir quels sont les territoires qui ne jouissent pas encore de l'indépendance et combien de temps il faudra pour qu'ils puissent y accéder.

4. Le Comité spécial sur la décolonisation accomplit une œuvre vraiment remarquable en s'efforçant d'assurer l'application rapide de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance et il a contribué pour beaucoup à faire naître le désir d'indépendance et à encourager l'espoir de celle-ci dans l'esprit et le cœur de tous les peuples coloniaux. L'important rapport du Comité traduit fidèlement les efforts magnifiques déployés par le Comité pour mettre en œuvre la Déclaration et la contribution précieuse qu'il a apportée à cette fin. L'exposé que le Président du Comité a fait devant l'Assemblée le 28 novembre 1963 [1266^e séance] nous apprend qu'il y a dans le monde certains territoires qui ignorent encore l'existence de la célèbre Déclaration. On peut en conclure qu'une solide barrière coloniale sépare du reste du monde les habitants de ces territoires qui vivent dans l'ignorance. L'Assemblée générale devrait donc fournir au Comité spécial tout l'appui nécessaire pour lui permettre de diffuser la portée de la Déclaration dans tous les territoires isolés et d'aider tous les peuples non autonomes à réaliser leurs aspirations nationales légitimes et à retrouver leur dignité en tant qu'individus et que nations libres, comme Dieu les a créés.

5. Il est regrettable de constater que les puissances coloniales ne sont pas disposées à aider le Comité spécial à remplir les conditions indispensables à l'accomplissement de sa tâche. L'attitude déplorable du gouvernement raciste de l'Afrique du Sud et du Gouvernement portugais à cet égard devrait être examinée le plus sérieusement possible par l'Assemblée générale.

6. En outre, la délégation jordanienne se joint à d'autres délégations pour inviter instamment le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni à collaborer de façon plus satisfaisante aux travaux du Comité spécial en facilitant aux missions de visite du Comité l'accès au territoire d'Aden et en Rhodésie du Sud pour y examiner la situation. En agissant autrement, le Royaume-Uni adopterait une ligne de conduite contraire au vent de changement qui souffle dans la direction indiquée par les résolutions et les méthodes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui reflètent l'esprit d'aujourd'hui.

7. Nous constatons avec satisfaction que certains pays d'Afrique viendront bientôt s'ajouter à la liste des Etats indépendants et nous sommes heureux d'apprendre que le Kenya et Zanzibar accèderont ce mois-ci à l'indépendance et que la Rhodésie du Nord et le Nyassaland obtiendront peut-être la leur au cours de l'année prochaine.

8. Cependant, il existe encore une longue liste d'attente de colonies et de territoires non autonomes; certain d'entre eux sont mentionnés dans le rapport, d'autres pas. On nous dit que le Comité spécial doit encore examiner la situation de 38 territoires coloniaux auxquels d'autres viendront s'ajouter plus tard. Nous devrions réfléchir à cela quand nous envisageons le temps nécessaire à l'application intégrale de la résolution sur l'indépendance.

9. Une région ayant une importance particulière dans le Moyen-Orient est celle d'Aden et des protectorats du Sud de la péninsule Arabique. Lorsque l'on regarde la carte de la côte méridionale, on ne peut manquer d'y voir les nombreux sultanats, émirats et cheikats égrenés les uns à côté des autres et groupés en un seul système colonial, qui a pour but le maintien des intérêts et de l'influence de la puissance coloniale et prive les populations de leur indépendance et du droit à disposer d'elles-mêmes. Mon pays, que les liens nationaux les plus étroits attachent à cette terre arabe et à ses habitants, appuie sans réserve le mouvement vigoureux d'indépendance qui se manifeste à Aden et dans les protectorats, ainsi que les aspirations des peuples de cette région à l'unité nationale et territoriale. Nous demandons instamment au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de créer à Aden et dans la région des protectorats les conditions qui permettront aux habitants de réaliser l'unité de leur territoire national, quelle que soit l'étendue que ce territoire puisse avoir, selon qu'il ira au nord s'unir à la mère patrie, le Yémen, ou qu'il englobera à l'est la région du Hadramaout. Cette évolution devrait avoir lieu dans le cadre d'un régime national entièrement indépendant, issu de la volonté librement exprimée de la population. La délégation jordanienne appuiera donc les recommandations du Comité spécial du 19 juillet 1963 concernant Aden et les protectorats. De plus, nous croyons sincèrement que le maintien d'une base militaire britannique à Aden menace la paix et la sécurité dans toute la région arabe.

10. L'éveil national des peuples de l'Arabie du Sud, inspiré par leur propre ambition et par la vague de nationalisme qui déferle sur la patrie arabe et renforcé par les progrès constants accomplis dans la voie de la liberté et de l'indépendance dans le monde entier, exige que l'on mette immédiatement et définitivement un terme au colonialisme dans le territoire d'Aden et dans les protectorats. A cet égard, la délégation jordanienne se joint à d'autres pour préconiser la nécessité de l'unité territoriale des territoires qui appartiennent à la même terre natale et des peuples qui sont de même souche et ont une histoire et un avenir communs. Cette unification offrira aux petits Etats indépendants, d'une part, la possibilité de vivre, et, d'autre part, la sécurité.

11. En entreprenant la lourde tâche de la mise en œuvre intégrale de la résolution sur l'indépendance, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a assumé une énorme responsabilité. Nous espérons sincèrement et ardemment qu'il pourra s'acquitter de cette tâche le plus rapidement possible. Cela dépendra de l'attitude des puissances coloniales, qui, nous l'espérons, feront toujours preuve de coopération, de la réaction des peuples colonisés, qui, nous le souhaitons, se montreront toujours capables de répondre d'une manière énergique mais pacifique aux espérances suscitées par la Déclaration, ainsi que des mesures que prendront les Nations Unies, qui, nous l'espérons, s'avèreront toujours efficaces. Mais, si nos calculs quant à la durée du mandat du Comité spécial se révélaient faux pour une raison ou pour une autre, la question de la constitution de ce comité et des critères qui doivent être adoptés pour sa composition pourrait alors se poser.

12. M. PALAR (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a droit à nos félicitations pour le travail qu'il a accompli. Le rapport du Comité [A/5446/Rev.1] fournit amplement la preuve que la situation des 26 territoires considérés a été examinée avec la plus grande compétence et il est en soi un hommage à l'efficacité des méthodes de travail et des façons de procéder adoptées.

13. Les diverses propositions, recommandations et suggestions formulées par le Comité pour chacun des territoires ont l'appui entier de la délégation indonésienne. Elles sont solidement fondées sur les principes et les objectifs inscrits dans la résolution initiale 1514 (XV) qui contient la célèbre déclaration de l'Assemblée sur la décolonisation. Nous sommes particulièrement heureux de constater que le Comité a toujours gardé présent à l'esprit le très important paragraphe 3 du dispositif de cette résolution, qui déclare que "le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance". Ce principe fondamental du droit inaliénable des peuples dépendants à la libre détermination immédiate figure dans toutes les recommandations et, dans un esprit louable de réalisme politique, le Comité a souligné à plusieurs reprises la nécessité urgente de l'appliquer dans tous les cas, tant dans l'intérêt du territoire lui-même que dans l'intérêt de la paix et de la sécurité internationales.

14. Faute de temps, le Comité est malheureusement très loin d'avoir terminé ses travaux. Vingt-six seulement des 64 territoires considérés comme territoires sous tutelle et territoires non autonomes ont été examinés et cette liste ne comprend pas "tous les autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance" visés par le paragraphe 5 du dispositif de la Déclaration. Il est vrai que ces 26 territoires sont les plus vastes et les plus importants de la liste; mais les événements survenus en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain, à Aden, en Guyane britannique et dans les territoires sous administration portugaise indiquent que ces régions continueront d'exiger toute l'attention du Comité. En outre, celui-ci doit encore examiner une quarantaine d'autres territoires. Ainsi, il lui reste à accomplir une grande partie de sa tâche, qui est également celle que s'est fixée notre organisation, et qui est de mettre fin rapidement à toutes les formes de colonialisme. Le Comité a fait un excellent travail en 1963 et l'Assemblée devrait proroger son mandat jusqu'en 1964.

15. La majorité des territoires que le Comité doit encore examiner sont peu peuplés. C'est précisément pour cette raison qu'un certain nombre de représentants ont émis des doutes quant à la possibilité de leur appliquer la Déclaration. Certains ont exprimé la crainte que ces territoires, s'ils accèdent à l'indépendance, ne puissent se suffire à eux-mêmes sur les plans politique et économique. Nous pensons que ces craintes sont nées en grande partie d'un sincère souci du bien-être des populations intéressées. Nous respectons naturellement un tel sentiment mais nous ne partageons pas ces doutes, car nous estimons qu'une étude plus approfondie de l'ensemble du problème des petits territoires montrera que ce pessimisme n'est pas réellement justifié.

16. Tâchons d'abord de définir ces expressions. Qu'est-ce exactement qu'un petit territoire? L'une des premières questions que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre devra certainement régler lorsqu'il abordera les autres territoires dont il doit examiner la situation sera de décider quels sont ceux qui doivent être considérés comme de petits territoires. Ce faisant, il devra également s'efforcer de découvrir si les populations intéressées sont désireuses de voir leur pays classé dans cette catégorie. Par exemple, bien que le reste du monde puisse ne pas être d'accord, les 25 000 habitants du Sahara espagnol qui vivent dans une région relativement vaste de 102 703 milles carrés (soit environ 266 000 kilomètres carrés) pourraient fort bien s'offenser de ce que leur territoire soit considéré comme petit. Réciproquement, il serait difficile de considérer comme un petit territoire l'île de Hong-kong, dont la superficie n'est que de 390 milles carrés (soit environ 1 010 kilomètres carrés) mais qui compte 3 millions et demi d'habitants, même si la population le désirait. La délégation indonésienne estime que, en ce qui concerne l'examen des problèmes liés à la décolonisation, un territoire peut être considéré comme petit lorsque sa population est d'environ 100 000 habitants ou moins et que ses ressources naturelles ne suffisent pas pour assurer à la population une autonomie économique satisfaisante. Un autre élément défavorable, bien que secondaire, est peut-être qu'un grand nombre de ces territoires sont mal situés du fait qu'il s'agit d'îles très éloignées des continents.

17. Si l'on admet comme hypothèse de travail cette définition commode de la notion de "petit territoire", on peut estimer qu'une trentaine de peuples n'ayant pas encore accédé à l'indépendance appartiennent à un pays entrant dans cette catégorie. De même, si nous acceptons cette définition, nous constatons que la non-viabilité économique en est un élément inévitable. Cependant, malgré les sérieux obstacles économiques dont l'existence est reconnue, cette trentaine de territoires devra accéder à l'indépendance dans un proche avenir si nous voulons faire pleinement honneur à l'engagement contenu dans notre déclaration solennelle de la quinzième session. Aucun de ces territoires, fût-ce le plus petit, ne devrait être exclu. Je pense plus particulièrement à ces îles minuscules qui ne figurent guère que comme des points sur la carte et dont la population est inférieure à 5 000 habitants — voire, dans le cas des îles Pitcairn, inférieure à 1 000 habitants.

18. Que faut-il penser du prétendu manque de préparation de ces territoires dans les domaines politique, social ou dans celui de l'enseignement? La délégation indonésienne ne reconnaît aucunement l'existence d'un problème quelconque de viabilité politique impliquant qu'un peuple puisse être considéré comme trop arriéré pour s'administrer lui-même. Peut-être certains peuples n'ont-ils pas acquis une formation ou une expérience suffisante dans le domaine de l'administration, telle que nous la concevons aujourd'hui. Peut-être ignorent-ils les méthodes administratives modernes et peut-être ont-ils trop longtemps laissé à d'autres le soin de diriger leurs propres affaires. Mais il est bon de rappeler que, avant l'arrivée des colonisateurs, qui ont assumé cette charge, la plupart de ces peuples s'étaient organisés d'une manière toute pacifique et avec beaucoup d'efficacité en fonction de leur isolement économique. Nous estimons que la plupart des peuples, à quelque région du globe qu'ils appartiennent, possèdent suffisamment de bon sens et de jugement et ont un instinct de conservation assez développé pour se rendre compte de ce qui leur est profitable et de ce qui leur est nuisible, et pour s'organiser en conséquence. En outre, chaque peuple recèle des aptitudes latentes que seule l'expérience permet de développer, s'il est vrai, comme on le dit souvent, que l'expérience est le meilleur des maîtres.

19. Aussi, tenant compte du bon sens inné qu'ont les peuples, la délégation indonésienne est-elle fermement convaincue que les peuples dépendants dont nous examinons la situation ne manqueront pas de faire un choix raisonnable lorsqu'ils pourront exercer leur droit à la libre détermination. D'après le principe VI de l'annexe à la résolution 1541 (XV):

"On peut dire qu'un territoire non autonome a atteint la pleine autonomie:

"a) Quand il est devenu Etat indépendant et souverain;

"b) Quand il s'est librement associé à un Etat indépendant; ou

"c) Quand il s'est intégré à un Etat indépendant."

Les principes VII, VIII et IX expliquent comment cette libre association ou cette intégration à un autre Etat peuvent résulter du désir librement exprimé des populations du territoire intéressé.

20. Ainsi, lorsque la population d'un territoire exercera son droit de libre détermination, elle aura le choix entre trois formes d'indépendance. Lorsqu'il s'agit d'un territoire relativement riche, on peut imaginer que la population exprimera le désir de s'efforcer de vivre en toute indépendance. Dans les autres cas, il est permis de supposer qu'elle aura la plupart du temps la sagesse d'adopter l'une des deux autres possibilités qui lui sont offertes.

21. En ce qui concerne les îles minuscules dont je viens de parler, il est évident qu'elles sont absolument incapables de pourvoir elles-mêmes à leurs besoins dans le monde moderne. Selon toutes probabilités, elles s'efforceront donc de s'unir à leurs voisins, voire aux anciennes puissances coloniales qui les administraient. On ne peut toutefois écarter l'éventualité dans laquelle aucun pays ne voudrait d'elles. Dans ce cas, la délégation indonésienne envisage pour elles la création d'un statut entièrement nouveau, grâce auquel ces fies minuscules pourraient jouir d'une existence libre, avec la coopération et l'appui de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et de ses institutions spécialisées. On aurait tort, selon moi, de craindre que des dépenses considérables n'en résultent pour l'Organisation déjà aux prises avec des difficultés financières: les territoires dont il s'agit sont si exigus et si peu nombreux que les dépenses qu'ils entraîneraient ne seraient pas importantes, que ce soit sous forme d'assistance administrative ou d'aide économique.

22. Ainsi, aux yeux de la délégation indonésienne, une partie importante de la tâche du Comité, lorsqu'il passera en revue les petits territoires figurant sur sa liste, sera de formuler des recommandations précises sur la forme d'indépendance qui serait le mieux appropriée pour chacun d'eux. Pour ce faire, le Comité devra, naturellement, se familiariser complètement avec les nombreux problèmes économiques et politiques en jeu. J'ajoute, en passant, que nous avons remarqué avec satisfaction, dans le rapport du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5514], que le Secrétariat préparait actuellement un document sur les diverses difficultés qui se présenteront lors de l'examen de la situation de ces territoires. Une fois adoptées par l'Assemblée, les recommandations du Comité pourront être utilisées pour l'orientation des populations des petits territoires qui sont sur le point de se voir accorder leur droit à la libre détermination. Pour moi, il ne fait pas de doute que ces peuples seront généralement enclins à prêter attention aux conclusions du Comité pour ce qui est de la forme d'indépendance jugée la plus appropriée pour eux. Si, comme j'y compte fermement, il en est ainsi, le spectre de la non-viabilité économique des petits territoires cessera d'être un véritable souci.

23. En raison des considérations qui précèdent, la délégation indonésienne estime qu'il serait malséant de trop insister sur l'insuffisance de ressources économiques. Il ne devrait pas y avoir de véritables raisons d'inquiétude à cet égard. En tout état de cause, l'insuffisance reconnue des ressources économiques de ces territoires, dans leur situation actuelle, ne saurait être tenue pour une raison valable de retarder l'indépendance, car ce serait aller directement à l'encontre de l'un des principes fondamentaux de notre déclaration sur la décolonisation. Comme je l'ai souligné dans mon intervention de l'an passé sur ce point, l'inclusion dans la Déclaration du paragraphe 3 du dispositif était en elle-même une façon d'admettre que certains territoires non autonomes pourraient ne pas être économiquement prêts à l'indépendance. Or, c'est essentiellement pour cela que ce paragraphe a été inclus: pour nous rappeler notre obligation de respecter le droit de libre détermination quelles que soient les difficultés à surmonter.

24. Il ne faut pas supposer que la délégation indonésienne essaie de minimiser ces difficultés, mais nous ne doutons pas qu'elles puissent être surmontées de façon satisfaisante si nous nous y attaquons courageusement et en faisant preuve d'ingéniosité. Un problème, cependant, nous inquiète: c'est celui de s'assurer que les petits territoires seront réellement en mesure d'exercer librement leurs droits à l'autodétermination au moment où la possibilité leur en sera donnée. En d'autres termes, il s'agit de faire en sorte qu'ils soient à même de choisir en toute liberté entre les diverses formes d'indépendance.

25. Ceux d'entre nous qui appartiennent à des pays précédemment colonisés peuvent naturellement craindre — et cette préoccupation est partagée par d'autres membres — qu'il ne soit pas facile, pour de petits territoires, de faire un choix vraiment libre tant qu'ils sont encore sous un régime colonial. La délégation indonésienne est convaincue que les Nations Unies ont un rôle à jouer en mettant ces territoires à même d'exercer un libre choix. Le fait même de la part du Comité des Vingt-Quatre de formuler des recommandations quant à la forme d'indépendance qui leur conviendra le mieux sera, pour ces peuples, une aide précieuse. Toutefois, dans certains cas, de simples recommandations pourraient être insuffisantes et il faudra peut-être fixer une période transitoire pendant laquelle l'Organisation des Nations Unies serait présente dans le territoire même. Toutefois, je tiens à souligner que l'éventualité de la présence des Nations Unies dans un territoire non autonome ne devrait être envisagée qu'à la demande directe de la population du territoire intéressé.

26. En résumant les suggestions de la délégation indonésienne en ce qui concerne l'action future du Comité à l'égard des petits territoires, je tiens à rappeler les termes de la résolution 1810 (XVII) adoptée à la dernière session. Le paragraphe 8 a et b du dispositif de cette résolution stipulait que le Comité spécial devait "continuer de rechercher les voies et les moyens les mieux appropriés en vue de l'application rapide et intégrale de la Déclaration à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance", et devrait proposer "des mesures concrètes en vue de l'application intégrale de la Déclaration".

27. En ce qui concerne les petits territoires, la délégation indonésienne estime que le Comité aura une triple tâche à remplir pour exécuter les instructions de l'Assemblée. Tout d'abord, il lui faudra passer en revue tous les autres territoires figurant sur sa liste, afin de déterminer une fois pour toutes, quels sont ceux qui doivent être considérés comme des petits territoires, suivant une interprétation sensée du terme, c'est-à-dire dans la ligne de l'interprétation que j'ai présentée à titre indicatif il y a quelques minutes. En second lieu, le Comité devra formuler des recommandations concrètes et détaillées sur la base d'un examen approfondi des problèmes inhérents à chaque territoire, quant à la forme d'indépendance jugée dans chaque cas la plus appropriée. Enfin, le Comité devrait être prêt à se rendre dans un territoire non autonome, s'il en est prié par la population, et à aider activement cette population à exercer librement son droit à l'auto-détermination.

28. Dans mon intervention de l'an dernier sur ce point [1192ème séance], je me suis surtout étendu sur le problème des petits territoires. J'ai fait de même cette année. Cela montre combien la délégation indonésienne se préoccupe de cet aspect de la décolonisation. Nous ne songeons pas à nous en excuser, au contraire, et il n'est pas exclu que nous présentions, s'il est nécessaire, un projet de résolution mettant en lumière le rôle du Comité en ce qui concerne les petits territoires.

29. Notre insistance sur cet aspect de la décolonisation ne tient pas au simple fait que les petits territoires constituent la majorité des territoires encore dépendants dont le Comité devra s'occuper. Nous estimons que c'est surtout dans le cas de ces petits territoires que la mise en œuvre du paragraphe 3 du dispositif de la Déclaration, qui est le paragraphe essentiel, sera nécessairement le plus malaisée.

30. En outre, nous estimons que ce sont ces petits territoires qui ont le plus besoin de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. En effet, ils ne sont pas assez grands pour que leurs mouvements intérieurs de libération créent une force suffisamment efficace pour obliger les puissances coloniales intéressées à leur octroyer l'indépendance à une date rapprochée, comme ce fut le cas pour nombre des grandes colonies. C'est précisément parce qu'ils sont petits qu'ils ont besoin d'une aide extérieure désintéressée.

31. Permettez-moi d'illustrer cet argument par deux exemples. Malte est un petit territoire, maintenant sur le point d'accéder à l'indépendance, mais il n'aurait probablement jamais acquis si vite cette indépendance, n'eût été la pression exercée en sa faveur par certains Membres des Nations Unies agissant dans le cadre des trois grandes résolutions sur la décolonisation.

32. Un petit Etat a déjà accédé à l'indépendance par suite de la coopération au sein des Nations Unies; c'est le Samoa-Occidental. Ce petit pays, qui ne compte que 120 000 habitants vivant sur une superficie à peine supérieure à 1 130 milles carrés (soit environ 2 900 kilomètres carrés) jouit maintenant de l'indépendance complète avec tous les droits, devoirs et obligations que cela comporte, bien qu'il n'ait pas encore été admis à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est un exemple qui doit dissiper nos craintes et inspirer nos décisions futures en nous incitant à aider d'autres petits territoires à acquérir la souveraineté.

33. La tâche du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre consistant à aider les petits territoires à être en mesure d'assurer leur droit à l'autodétermination sera difficile et stimulante et ce sera aussi, j'en suis sûr, l'une des tâches les plus utiles que le Comité aura accomplies. C'est seulement si cette tâche est menée à bien que l'Organisation atteindra l'un des principaux buts qu'elle s'est elle-même fixés lors de l'élaboration de la Charte.

34. M. GEBRE-EGZY (Ethiopie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Permettez-moi tout d'abord de dire que ma délégation est profondément peignée de la mort prématurée du Président des Etats-Unis, M. John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Je tiens à offrir nos condoléances aux membres de la délégation des Etats-Unis et, par son intermédiaire, aux membres de la famille du regretté Président, comme au peuple entier des Etats-Unis. Le président Kennedy était un champion de la liberté et il aimait la paix. Il était profondément attaché aux idéaux et aux principes de la Charte des Nations Unies.

Le monde a perdu en lui un grand chef dont la clairvoyance et le courage étaient une inspiration et une raison d'espérer pour toute l'humanité.

35. La délégation éthiopienne faisant partie du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, elle a eu maintes occasions d'exposer au sein de cet organe sa position au sujet de chacun des territoires se trouvant encore sous une domination coloniale. Elle a participé aux discussions et donné son avis sur les conclusions et recommandations contenues dans le rapport et en fait sur l'ensemble du rapport dont l'Assemblée est actuellement saisie. Cela étant, et pour répondre à l'appel du Président, notre intervention ce soir sera brève. Nos observations porteront sur l'ensemble du problème du colonialisme, sur les efforts déjà faits par le Comité spécial et sur son programme futur. Mais, auparavant, qu'il me soit permis d'exprimer la grande satisfaction de la délégation éthiopienne pour la manière dont le Président du Comité, M. Coulibaly, s'est acquitté de sa lourde tâche. Malgré les obstacles et les difficultés auxquels s'est heurté le Comité dans ses efforts pour mettre en œuvre la Déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV), le Président s'est acquitté de son devoir d'une façon remarquable et il a contribué à l'élaboration d'un rapport très complet, qui expose parfaitement la situation de chacun des territoires non autonomes.

36. Je voudrais également adresser les félicitations de ma délégation aux Vice-Présidents du Comité, M. Carlos Maria Velazquez, d'Uruguay, et M. Sonn Voeunsai, du Cambodge. Tous deux ont contribué pour une large part aux travaux du Comité. Leur dévouement sincère à la tâche confiée au Comité et leur compréhension de la situation qui règne dans les territoires étudiés ont été un stimulant pour ceux d'entre nous qui ont travaillé avec eux. Le précédent Rapporteur du Comité, M. Rifai, de Syrie, qui a quitté New York l'été dernier pour accomplir une mission spéciale, et son successeur, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, méritent également des félicitations spéciales pour s'être si bien acquittés de leur tâche. Je n'entrerai pas dans le détail de leurs réalisations, car l'excellent rapport soumis à l'Assemblée en rend compte éloquemment.

37. Le droit des pays et des peuples coloniaux à l'autonomie et à l'indépendance a été inscrit et proclamé dans la Charte des Nations Unies, il y a près de 20 ans, comme l'un des principes fondamentaux de notre organisation. Depuis l'adoption de la Charte, plusieurs pays d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'autres parties du monde ont successivement accédé à l'indépendance, et tous, sans exception, sont aujourd'hui des Membres actifs de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Beaucoup d'autres les suivront. Cependant, notre organisation, consciente des conflits toujours plus nombreux qui résultent du refus d'accorder la liberté à ces populations ou des obstacles à leur indépendance, consciente aussi du désir passionné de liberté de tous les peuples non autonomes et de leur rôle décisif dans leur accession à l'indépendance, a proclamé la nécessité de mettre fin rapidement et sans condition au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Trois années se sont écoulées depuis l'adoption de cette déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, mais le processus de la décolonisation, malheureusement, traîne en longueur de façon décourageante, contrairement aux vœux de l'écrasante majorité des Membres des Nations Unies qui ont voté pour la résolution contenant la Déclaration.

38. Le Portugal continue sans désenrayer sa guerre coloniale, au Mozambique et dans ses autres colonies. Il a refusé de coopérer avec le Comité spécial pour l'exécution du mandat confié à ce dernier par la résolution 1514 (XV). Ainsi, le problème des colonies portugaises demeure une menace sérieuse pour la paix et la sécurité en Afrique et dans le monde entier.

39. En Rhodésie du Sud, la situation reste sans solution malgré les efforts renouvelés du Comité spécial ainsi que des deux principaux organes des Nations Unies. Le Gouvernement minoritaire blanc de ce pays continue d'opprimer impitoyablement la majorité africaine, politique qui n'a d'égal que l'apartheid pratiqué par le Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud. La situation du Sud-Ouest africain a empiré, et les violations des dispositions des obligations contenues dans le mandat ne font qu'augmenter.

40. La situation dans les trois territoires de la Haute Commission, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland, ainsi que les progrès de ces territoires vers l'indépendance sont loin d'être satisfaisants. Le processus du transfert des pouvoirs à la population est extrêmement lent et ne se fait pas conformément aux dispositions de la Déclaration. La délégation éthiopienne éprouve de vives préoccupations et déplore le refus persistant de la puissance administrante de coopérer pleinement avec le Comité spécial dans l'accomplissement des responsabilités qui lui incombent en ce qui concerne l'accession à l'indépendance de ces trois territoires. Nous avons mis le Comité spécial en garde et nous tenons à répéter ici que l'augmentation dangereuse de la tension dans les territoires de la Haute Commission provoquée par la connaissance des intentions avouées de la République sud-africaine rend nécessaire l'examen de la question à bref délai par l'Assemblée.

41. Les territoires dépendants situés à l'extrémité sud de l'Arabie Saoudite et autour d'elle sont encore sous le joug cruel du colonialisme et leur espoir et leur désir d'accéder à l'autonomie et à l'indépendance conformément à la Déclaration des Nations Unies n'ont pas encore été satisfaits. Le retard apporté à l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique nous préoccupe aussi beaucoup. Le manque de coopération de l'autorité administrante avec le Comité spécial à propos de ce territoire ainsi que les difficultés politiques internes du pays rendent nécessaire l'adoption sans tarder de mesures positives par l'Assemblée.

42. Après une longue lutte qui a fait verser beaucoup de sang, le Kenya a réussi à faire valoir son droit à l'indépendance et il viendra occuper sa place parmi nous dans une dizaine de jours. Je profite de l'occasion qui m'est offerte pour exprimer notre profonde satisfaction et notre grande joie. Le peuple du Kenya a conquis son indépendance en dépit des efforts de l'autorité administrante. Zanzibar accédera à l'indépendance complète plus tôt encore. Tout cela est pour nous une source de satisfaction, mais nous sommes vraiment préoccupés par la lenteur de l'évolution vers l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Nord et du Nyassaland et par le fait qu'il n'ait pas été fixé de date précise pour l'accession à l'indépendance de la population de ces territoires. Nous avions espéré que ces deux pays africains entreraient dans la communauté mondiale avant la fin de cette année.

43. En fait, l'avenir de la majorité des territoires africains actuellement sous domination coloniale est encore très sombre. La population de ces territoires n'a qu'un espoir et c'est bien entendu l'aide que peuvent lui apporter ceux qui se sont montrés fermement résolus à veiller à l'application des décisions des Nations Unies les concernant. A ce propos, les dirigeants africains, au cours de leur conférence au sommet, ont décidé à l'unanimité cette année de se consulter et de coordonner leurs efforts et leur action dans le domaine de la décolonisation et ils ont à cette fin arrêté plusieurs mesures qui, sans aucun doute, porteront des fruits à mesure qu'elles seront appliquées.

44. Je voudrais, pour terminer, exprimer, au nom de la délégation éthiopienne, l'espoir que le rapport et les recommandations du Comité spécial seront adoptés à l'unanimité par l'Assemblée. Nous tenons à souligner qu'une adoption des recommandations et des résolutions qui ne serait pas suivie d'une application générale, en particulier de leur application par ceux qui sont en position d'intervenir efficacement, serait dénuée de tout sens. En conséquence, le Gouvernement éthiopien est sincèrement convaincu que, à ce stade ultime, tous les Etats Membres qui, jusqu'à présent, se sont montrés circonspects et réservés à l'égard des efforts croissants déployés par les Nations Unies pour éliminer le colonialisme, se joindront maintenant à nous pour mettre un terme à la domination coloniale.

45. Enfin, je déclare au nom de ma délégation que nous comptons avec confiance sur l'entière coopération des puissances administrantes, en particulier sur celle du Royaume-Uni, aux efforts du Comité spécial pour l'application intégrale des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale relatives aux territoires coloniaux. En ce qui concerne le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud, qui ont obstinément refusé d'une manière provocante de coopérer avec les Nations Unies, il faudrait demander instamment à leurs alliés et à leurs partisans de mettre un terme à toute assistance à ces pays, ainsi que le prévoient les résolutions antérieures, et d'intervenir pour que les décisions des Nations Unies soient appliquées.

M. Rossides (Chypre), vice-président, prend la présidence.

46. M. YOMEKPE (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je me permets de rappeler que, le 29 novembre 1962, à une séance plénière de la dix-septième session de l'Assemblée générale, M. Quaison-Sackey a déclaré ce qui suit:

"... En ce qui nous concerne, toutes les puissances coloniales qui, d'ici au 31 décembre 1962, n'auront pas accordé l'indépendance aux pays africains encore dépendants seront considérées comme des agresseurs qui troublent la paix mondiale. Au-delà de cette date, les puissances coloniales présentes en Afrique seront considérées par le Ghana comme transgressant la Charte des Nations Unies et défiant la conscience de l'humanité." [1180ème séance, par. 140.]

Cette position du Ghana est confirmée par la Déclaration historique de l'Assemblée générale de 1960, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), qui dit entre autres:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales."

47. Aujourd'hui, donc, nous tendons un doigt accusateur vers les puissances coloniales, parce qu'elles ont transgressé la Charte des Nations Unies et la Déclaration des droits de l'homme. Elles sont condamnées par le monde entier.

48. La délégation du Ghana a étudié avec grand intérêt le volumineux rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, le second depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. La longueur de ce rapport démontre clairement que le monde colonial n'a connu que peu ou pas de changements depuis le premier rapport présenté par le Comité l'an dernier. Avant de faire quelques brèves observations sur les travaux du Comité spécial, ma délégation voudrait exprimer sa satisfaction au Président du Comité, M. Sory Coulibaly, du Mali, aux deux Vice-Présidents, M. Velazquez, d'Uruguay, et M. Sonn Voeunsai, du Cambodge, au Rapporteur du Comité, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, ainsi qu'aux autres membres du Comité pour la diligence avec laquelle ils ont rempli les tâches qui leur étaient assignées par la résolution 1810 (XVII) du 17 décembre 1962. Nous exprimons également notre satisfaction au Secrétaire général et aux autres membres du Secrétariat qui ont assisté le Comité dans sa tâche.

49. La délégation ghanéenne regrette que, en dépit des efforts opiniâtres du Comité spécial, les résultats obtenus jusqu'ici aient été négligeables. Cela résulte du fait que certaines puissances coloniales, en particulier le Portugal, ont obstinément refusé de coopérer avec le Comité et que d'autres, qui ont coopéré avec le Comité, n'ont pas accepté ses décisions.

50. Ma délégation déplore le fait que le Royaume-Uni, membre du Comité, ait réduit l'efficacité de celui-ci en refusant de permettre à ses représentants de se rendre dans quelques-uns ou dans tous les territoires sous administration britannique. A notre avis, ces visites sont nécessaires pour que le Comité spécial s'acquitte de son mandat, qui est de s'assurer des désirs des peuples de ces territoires. Nous espérons donc que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni revisera sa position à cet égard et coopérera pleinement avec le Comité.

51. Etant donné que le cas de la majorité des territoires faisant l'objet du rapport du Comité a été ou est actuellement examiné dans d'autres commissions et organes des Nations Unies, je me bornerai à faire quelques brèves observations sur un ou deux territoires.

52. Tout d'abord, je parlerai des territoires de la Haute Commission, le Betchoualand, le Bassoutoland et le Souaziland. Dans son intervention dans la discussion générale, le vendredi 27 septembre 1963, le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Ghana, M. Betsio, a fait au sujet de ces territoires, la déclaration suivante:

"Les ouvertures inquiétantes récemment faites par le Gouvernement sud-africain au sujet du statut futur du Bassoutoland, du Betchoualand et du Souaziland ont mis nettement en évidence les anomalies politiques et économiques déplorables qui existent dans ces territoires. Malgré les dispositions de la résolution 1817 (XVII) de l'Assemblée générale, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'a pas encore pris de mesures en vue de créer des institutions démocratiques après la réunion d'une conférence constitutionnelle, avec la pleine participation de tous les chefs politiques régulièrement élus, afin de préparer la voie à l'obtention de l'indépendance complète. Au lieu d'appliquer cette résolution, le Royaume-Uni a imposé au Souaziland une constitution contre la volonté de la majorité, et il en est résulté une grève générale qui a été réprimée par la force armée. Par ailleurs, la composition des conférences constitutionnelles pour le Betchoualand et le Bassoutoland était absolument insatisfaisante, étant donné qu'il y avait prépondérance des fonctionnaires et des chefs traditionnels. L'autorité administrante a nettement tendance à dresser le peuple de ces territoires contre ses chefs traditionnels. Ma délégation espère que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni se rendra compte des dangers inhérents à la vieille pratique qui consiste à diviser pour régner." [1219ème séance, par. 34]

53. La délégation du Ghana fait entièrement siennes les recommandations du Comité spécial tendant à ce que des observateurs des Nations Unies soient envoyés dans ces trois territoires afin d'empêcher tout empiètement de la part de l'Afrique du Sud et en vue de garantir leur intégrité territoriale. Ma délégation souscrit également aux recommandations du Comité spécial concernant la fourniture d'une assistance technique des Nations Unies aux trois territoires de la Haute Commission. Les populations de ces territoires devraient être autorisées à exercer sans nouveau retard leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, sur la base du suffrage universel des adultes.

54. J'en viens à la question de la Guyane britannique, ce malheureux pays qui est devenu un pion sur l'échiquier diplomatique du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis d'Amérique. Les tentatives qui seraient faites par les Etats-Unis pour retarder l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique sous prétexte que ce pays va vers le communisme préoccupent vivement ma délégation. Nous nous sentons obligés de faire à ce sujet quelques observations sur la déclaration faite récemment devant le Congrès par les dirigeants du parti républicain des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, telle qu'elle a été rapportée par la presse. Ces dirigeants auraient dit que:

"... La mainmise du communisme sur un nouveau pays d'Amérique latine est imminente et seule la diplomatie la plus persuasive, de la part des États-Unis, peut l'empêcher. Le pays en cause est la Guyane britannique, colonie de la Couronne à laquelle la Grande-Bretagne doit accorder la pleine indépendance d'ici à la fin de l'année en cours. Nous estimons que la situation actuelle dans ce pays nous oblige à adopter cette ligne de conduite."

55. Seuls les habitants de la Guyane ont le droit de choisir la forme de gouvernement qui convient à leur pays. C'est un droit divin, en vertu duquel cette population peut prétendre choisir la forme de gouvernement, capitaliste ou communiste, ou tout autre forme d'administration, qu'elle estime, et elle seule, lui convenir. Nous espérons que cette ingérence flagrante dans les affaires intérieures de la Guyane britannique cessera.

56. La délégation du Ghana veut croire et espérer que la décision d'imposer une constitution au peuple de la Guyane prise dernièrement par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'a aucun rapport avec les craintes exprimées aux États-Unis au sujet de la forme de gouvernement de ce territoire. Cependant, ma délégation a été très déçue du fait que le système de la représentation proportionnelle ait été imposé au corps électoral guyanais. Le Ghana s'est toujours élevé contre l'imposition de la volonté d'une minorité à la majorité des intéressés. Il a toujours été en faveur d'un gouvernement majoritaire issu du suffrage universel des adultes, chaque électeur disposant d'une voix. Quelles que soient les raisons invoquées pour imposer le nouveau système électoral en Guyane, ma délégation ne pense pas que ce soit la réponse appropriée aux problèmes qui se posent dans ce pays. Nous sommes convaincus que ce système ne peut avoir pour résultat que de raviver les excès de l'intolérance, du racisme et du sectarisme. En outre, il étendra la ligne de démarcation raciale actuelle au régime politique du pays. Le Secrétaire britannique aux colonies s'est-il absolument assuré qu'il n'y a pas d'autre méthode pour faire régner l'harmonie raciale en Guyane britannique que la représentation proportionnelle? Par exemple, a-t-il envisagé de faire appel aux bons offices du Commonwealth pour concilier les oppositions au sein de la population de la Guyane britannique? Nous estimons, nous, qu'il existe d'autres méthodes, et l'expérience a montré qu'une solution meilleure et plus acceptable aurait pu être trouvée.

57. La Guyane britannique est située dans la zone des Antilles, de même que la Jamaïque et la Trinité et Tobago. La population de ces trois pays est composée de groupes raciaux différents. A la Jamaïque, l'unité totale des diverses races est réalisée. Elle est symbolisée par la devise nationale "Out of many, one people" (La diversité compose l'unité). A la Trinité et Tobago, la même unité des races a été réalisée, en dépit des difficultés qui existaient sous le régime colonial. Cette unité est également symbolisée par la devise nationale: "Ensemble nous voulons, ensemble nous accomplissons". Si l'unité est possible à la Jamaïque et à la Trinité et Tobago, sans aucun doute, il pourra être de même en Guyane britannique. Je sais que le Président de la République du Ghana, M. Kwame Nkrumah, s'est efforcé de rapprocher les dirigeants de la Guyane britannique et je crois qu'il poursuivra son action dans ce sens.

58. En conséquence, nous espérons fermement que le grand peuple de la Guyane britannique oubliera ce qui le divise et s'unira pour édifier une nation. Il ne doit pas perdre de vue que l'indépendance n'est pas une fin en soi mais un moyen de parvenir à un but. Il incombera à ce peuple, au lendemain de son indépendance, de faire les sacrifices nécessaires pour effacer toute considération d'ordre racial et pour construire son pays.

59. La délégation du Ghana ne voit pas pourquoi le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'a pas annoncé la date de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique lorsqu'il a proclamé la nouvelle constitution qu'il a imposée à la population de ce pays. Nous avons appris que l'une des conditions — en fait, la plus importante — sur lesquelles les dirigeants de la Guyane britannique étaient tombés d'accord pour accepter l'arbitrage du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni était que la date de l'indépendance serait annoncée en même temps que toute modification constitutionnelle.

60. La constitution a été modifiée sous l'autorité du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, mais aucune date n'a été fixée pour l'octroi de l'indépendance. Si ce que l'on nous a dit est exact, il y a manifestement de la part du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni manquement à un engagement quant à la fixation de la date de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique. Le chef de l'opposition, M. Burnham, et le premier ministre, M. Cheddi Jagan, ont publié, au sujet des modifications constitutionnelles intervenues, des déclarations dans lesquelles ils ont exprimé leur déception qu'aucune date n'ait été fixée pour la proclamation de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique. Il s'ensuit donc que la question de la date de l'indépendance n'est pas le point principal de désaccord entre les dirigeants. C'est pourquoi nous demandons instamment au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni qu'il fixe sans plus tarder la date de l'indépendance de ce pays.

61. Avant de conclure, je voudrais dire une fois de plus que la délégation du Ghana attend avec joie l'indépendance du Kenya et de Zanzibar; nous espérons que ces deux États s'associeront à nous dans cette communauté mondiale. Nous attendons également avec plaisir l'indépendance prochaine du Nyassaland et de la Rhodésie du Nord, et, en fait, celle de tous les autres territoires d'Afrique. Les puissances coloniales ont été maintes fois invitées à quitter l'Afrique. Loin de coopérer avec les Nations Unies, ces puissances font fi de l'esprit comme de la lettre, des décisions de l'Organisation, en s'enracinant plus profondément encore en Afrique centrale et méridionale et en se préparant à combattre les forces de la liberté et de la démocratie, au risque d'encourir la réprobation de l'opinion publique mondiale.

62. Je dirai toutefois que leurs jours sont comptés; ces puissances ne sauraient continuer à résister à l'indignation universelle que provoquent leurs pratiques inhumaines de sujétion et de domination. Nous savons que bientôt elles devront rendre des comptes au monde; nous savons que les deux plus grandes et plus puissantes nations du monde se sont engagées à lutter pour la liberté de l'humanité. Nous rendons hommage au Premier Ministre de l'URSS, M. Nikita Khrouchtchev et au peuple soviétique pour le rôle qu'ils ont joué dans le combat pour la liberté des peuples non encore libérés; nous rendons également hommage à la mémoire du président Kennedy, qui, durant sa présidence brève mais si bien remplie, a agi sans crainte, en faveur de l'émancipation du genre humain. C'est pour nous un motif de satisfaction que le président Lyndon B. Johnson ait réaffirmé les principes de liberté qui étaient ceux de ses grands prédécesseurs, le président Roosevelt et le président Kennedy.

63. Dans un message adressé récemment au Président du Ghana, le président Johnson déclarait: "Soyez assuré, M. le Président, de nos efforts continus pour consolider les fondements de l'indépendance des Etats africains et pour permettre à tous les peuples d'Afrique qui ne sont pas encore libres d'accéder à la liberté."

64. Nous avons bon espoir que ces magnifiques paroles se traduiront par une action résolue et une ferme conviction et que nous nous unissons tous pour éliminer du monde le racisme, le sectarisme, la haine et l'esprit de domination.

M. Sosa Rodríguez (Venezuela) reprend la présidence.

65. M. TARAIZI (Syrie): L'Assemblée générale a, le 14 décembre 1960, adopté sa résolution historique, la résolution 1514 (XV) sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette résolution était due à l'initiative de l'Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques.

66. En dépit de son adoption et malgré le fait que trois années se sont déjà écoulées depuis cette date, nous avons le regret de constater que la plupart des territoires que cette résolution visait n'ont pas encore atteint leur indépendance ou leur autonomie.

67. Bien plus, l'Assemblée générale a décidé en 1961 [résolution 1654 (XVI)] la création d'un comité spécial chargé de mettre en œuvre la résolution précitée. Ce comité s'est réuni au cours de l'année 1962 et il a présenté son rapport à l'Assemblée générale au cours de sa dix-septième session^{1/}; l'Assemblée a chargé le Comité spécial, tout en l'élargissant, de continuer ses travaux [résolution 1810 (XVII)]. Le Comité spécial a présenté un rapport à la présente session de l'Assemblée générale [A/5446/Rev.1] et malgré cela, nous avons le regret de constater deux choses:

1) En dépit des efforts continus poursuivis par le Comité spécial, les puissances administrantes n'ont pas voulu répondre à l'appel qu'il leur a fait et, de ce fait, lesdites puissances n'ont pas entendu coopérer avec le Comité et n'ont pas entendu donner suite aux dispositions de la résolution du 14 décembre 1960.

2) Le Royaume-Uni a refusé de recevoir deux missions de visite ou deux sous-comités que le Comité spécial avait chargés de se rendre dans le Royaume-Uni et dans les territoires en question afin d'y étudier la situation. Cette attitude du Royaume-Uni est, c'est le moins qu'on puisse dire, déconcertante.

68. En effet, la raison qui a été avancée du refus de coopérer avec les sous-comités en question n'est pas concluante et les arguments que le Royaume-Uni apporte ne sauraient nous convaincre, pour la raison que les territoires en question sont des territoires soumis à l'autorité des Nations Unies; ce sont des territoires qui tombent sous le coup des dispositions de la Charte et des dispositions de la résolution du 14 décembre 1960.

69. Par conséquent, le fait par le Royaume-Uni de prétendre qu'en envoyant des missions de visite le Comité spécial s'ingère dans les affaires intérieures du Royaume-Uni ne constitue ni plus ni moins qu'une prétention qui relève des dispositions du droit international public colonial.

70. Ce droit et les dispositions qu'il comporte ont complètement disparu. Nous sommes en présence aujourd'hui de dispositions nouvelles qui reposent sur les données de la Charte. Les dispositions dont veut arguer le Royaume-Uni relèvent en fait d'une époque qui est dépassée, l'époque coloniale. Aujourd'hui, après l'adoption de la Charte des Nations Unies et la création de l'Organisation mondiale, nous avons accédé à une époque nouvelle dans les relations internationales: c'est l'époque de la libération complète des colonies, et, par conséquent, les dispositions du droit international que les puissances coloniales invoquent ne sont pas valables et ne sont pas vérifiées par les faits nouveaux.

71. En ce qui concerne les progrès réalisés par les puissances administrantes, je tiens à dire que le Portugal et la République sud-africaine ont complètement déçu le Comité spécial, et que ma délégation est parfaitement d'accord avec les conclusions de ce dernier à cet effet.

72. En ce qui concerne la question brûlante d'Aden et du sud du Yémen, ma délégation partage entièrement les points de vue qui ont été exprimés en la matière, et notamment l'opinion du représentant du Yémen [1266ème séance]. Nous estimons qu'Aden et les protectorats qui font partie aujourd'hui de ce qu'on appelle la Fédération de l'Arabie du Sud ne sont, en fait et historiquement parlant, que des territoires devant relever de la juridiction et de la souveraineté du Yémen. Les prescriptions et les dispositions historiques dont a fait état le représentant du Yémen sont, à cet égard, tout à fait valables. Ma délégation les approuve entièrement.

73. Mais je dois dire que l'attitude du Royaume-Uni, en ce qui concerne Aden et les protectorats qui aujourd'hui font partie de ce que l'on appelle la Fédération du sud du Yémen, repose sur une base qui n'est pas juste et ne se fonde pas sur des arguments bien établis. En effet, les traités qui ont permis la souveraineté du Royaume-Uni dans toutes les affaires qui concernent Aden et les territoires faisant partie du sud du Yémen ont été arrachés illégalement aux chefs locaux. On ne peut plus parler aujourd'hui de la validité de ces traités parce que les conditions dans lesquelles ils ont été conclus sont dépassées. Parler de ces traités équivaudrait, par exemple, à parler de la guerre de l'opium, qui a créé une situation qui, à l'heure actuelle, nous semble tout à fait injuste et résulte de dispositions également injustes. Par conséquent, ma délégation considère qu'Aden et les protectorats qui font partie aujourd'hui du sud du Yémen doivent revenir à leur mère patrie. Mais, en attendant, le Royaume-Uni devrait prendre les dispositions nécessaires pour permettre à ces territoires d'accéder à leur pleine indépendance, de réaliser leur souveraineté entière, et ce en accomplissant la volonté de leurs populations.

74. Aussi ma délégation voit-elle avec faveur les conclusions que le Comité spécial a voulu adopter à cet effet [A/5446/Rev.1, chap. V, par. 478]. Elle est parfaitement d'accord avec ces dernières et souhaite que les dispositions prévues par le Comité spécial soient mises en œuvre par la Puissance administrante, à savoir le Royaume-Uni.

75. Ma délégation regrette également le traitement accordé par le Royaume-Uni au Sous-Comité d'Aden que l'on a empêché de se rendre dans ce territoire. J'ai eu déjà l'occasion de me prononcer à ce sujet [1233^{ème} séance] et je ne voudrais pas y revenir. Je me bornerai à rappeler au représentant du Royaume-Uni que les membres de ce sous-comité ne sont pas des malfaiteurs et que, par conséquent, les autorités de l'immigration, à Aden, n'auraient pas dû prendre de dispositions leur interdisant l'accès du territoire d'Aden car, en fait, ils représentent leurs pays à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Cette disposition prise par les autorités de l'immigration à Aden ne constitue ni plus ni moins qu'une insulte aux Nations Unies, et je crois que la Puissance administrante, qui n'est sans doute pas au courant de ce que font les autorités locales — il s'agit peut-être de leur part d'un excès de zèle —, devrait veiller tout au moins à ce que les Nations Unies soient respectées dans les territoires qu'elle administre.

76. En second lieu, il ressort du rapport du Sous-Comité qui avait été chargé d'étudier la situation à Aden et dans les protectorats que les conditions de vie et de travail de toutes les forces qui luttent contre les autorités d'occupation à Aden sont tout à fait précaires et que le régime que subissent ces organisations et les personnes qui en font partie a un caractère policier auquel il faut remédier.

77. En troisième lieu, ma délégation estime qu'une partie du sud du Yémen, à savoir Hadramaout, devrait également être intégrée au reste, pour revenir définitivement au Yémen. Surtout en ce qui concerne Aden, ma délégation ne voit pas, pour le maintien de la Puissance administrante dans ce territoire, de raisons autres que des considérations d'ordre stratégique ou d'ordre pétrolier. Cependant, les intérêts de la stratégie sont aujourd'hui quelque peu dépassés et les intérêts du pétrole devraient se combiner avec ceux de la population. Faut-il rappeler que des négociations secrètes ont été engagées récemment par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni avec les autorités d'Aden et les ministres de ce qu'on a appelé la Fédération de l'Arabie du Sud, négociations au terme desquelles ces autorités concéderaient au Royaume-Uni un bail sur Aden?

78. Cela nous rappelle également la politique dite de la canonnière, en usage au XIX^{ème} siècle, politique qui ne peut plus exister aujourd'hui et grâce à laquelle des territoires comme Hong-kong et Kowloon — on peut en trouver la preuve dans l'histoire, même dans des livres écrits par des Britanniques — ont été arrachés à la Chine. J'espère que cette époque est complètement révolue; aussi est-il nécessaire que la question relative à ces territoires soit envisagée avec plus de lucidité et conformément aux directives du Comité spécial, qui, je l'espère, seront entièrement approuvées par l'Assemblée générale.

79. Pour ce qui est des autres dispositions du rapport du Comité spécial, ma délégation est parfaitement d'accord avec les conclusions qu'il contient, notamment en ce qui concerne les travaux futurs de ce comité, et elle espère qu'au cours de l'année 1964 le Comité spécial sera en mesure d'achever la mission qui lui a été confiée par l'Assemblée générale, il y a deux ans, c'est-à-dire que les territoires qui sont encore non autonomes pourront accéder à l'indépendance au cours de 1964 ou que des dispositions seront prises pour que cette dernière leur soit accordée le plus vite possible. En raison de l'urgence en la matière, ma délégation est convaincue que l'Assemblée générale prendra toutes mesures nécessaires à cet égard.

80. M. HESSELUNG JENSEN (Danemark) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le Danemark a été nommé membre du Comité des Vingt-Quatre au début de l'année 1963, en vertu de la résolution 1810 (XVII) de l'Assemblée générale. Il a ainsi siégé à ce comité pendant environ un an.

81. Les observations qui suivent sont donc faites à la lumière de l'expérience que nous avons acquise pendant cette période. En tant que pays n'ayant ni territoire ni intérêts coloniaux et opposé à toute discrimination raciale, le Danemark a estimé qu'il avait un rôle à jouer dans ce comité et mon gouvernement s'est avant tout attaché à aider à trouver des solutions pragmatiques pour la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Nous estimons que, au cours de l'année écoulée, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a fait beaucoup de bon travail et que des progrès notables ont été réalisés. A ce sujet, je voudrais citer quelques extraits de la déclaration faite par le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Danemark devant l'Assemblée, lors de la discussion générale, en septembre dernier. Notre ministre des affaires étrangères a dit notamment:

"... Nous comptons accueillir bientôt le Kenya en tant que nouveau Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous espérons que Zanzibar ne tardera pas à le suivre. L'évolution qui aboutira à l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Nord et du Nyassaland est déjà très avancée. En Extrême-Orient, trois territoires — Singapour, le Bornéo du Nord et le Sarawak — se sont récemment unis à la Malaisie pour former avec elle une fédération indépendante.

"Cependant, plus il y aura de progrès en la matière, plus nous nous retrouverons devant des situations soulevant de sérieux problèmes, soit à cause des conditions propres aux territoires considérés, soit à cause de l'attitude du pays administrant, soit encore à cause de ces deux facteurs à la fois. C'est ainsi qu'à l'Assemblée et dans ses commissions on a pu observer une certaine tendance à laisser des considérations et des principes théoriques prendre le pas sur l'examen des conditions locales et le souci du bien-être des populations intéressées. Chaque fois que la puissance administrante se montre disposée à accorder l'indépendance aussitôt que possible et à collaborer avec l'Organisation des Nations Unies, nous devrions, à mon avis, tenir largement compte des vues de cette puissance sur les problèmes locaux et nous garder de préconiser des mesures précises d'une utilité contestable.

"Une précipitation excessive ne peut en pareil cas que contribuer à diminuer notre influence et à détourner l'attention des problèmes sur lesquels devraient se concentrer nos efforts, à savoir ceux à propos desquels le pays ou le gouvernement administrant ne manifeste aucune bonne volonté. L'Organisation des Nations Unies ne devrait intervenir énergiquement que dans ce dernier cas et nous ne devrions alors pas hésiter à employer, le cas échéant, tous les moyens que la Charte met à notre disposition, pourvu que ceux-ci se révèlent propres à opérer les transformations que nous souhaitons et qu'ils puissent obtenir une adhésion suffisante pour produire cet effet."

82. Il semble naturel de soulever la question de l'action future à entreprendre par les Nations Unies dans ce domaine qui intéresse au premier chef les pays et les peuples coloniaux qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance. Je suis convaincu que la grande majorité des membres de l'Assemblée sera d'accord avec moi pour constater que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a fait un excellent travail et pour déclarer qu'étant donné qu'il y a encore un certain nombre de territoires dont la situation n'a pas été examinée par le Comité il est tout à fait justifié que celui-ci continue ses travaux. A en juger par l'expérience que nous avons acquise au cours de l'année passée, nous estimons que le mandat du Comité ne devrait pas être modifié. Le Comité a encore un grand nombre de territoires à étudier. Tout élargissement du champ des travaux du Comité, par exemple l'inclusion des activités actuellement exercées par le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes, devrait à notre avis être différé, tout au moins jusqu'au moment où le Comité aura traité les problèmes plus immédiats dont l'étude et l'examen lui ont été assignés.

83. Comme d'autres représentants l'ont déjà dit, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre se trouvera en présence d'un problème spécial l'an prochain, celui des petits territoires à faible population. De l'avis de la délégation danoise, la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux doit s'appliquer à tous les territoires grands et petits, mais nous sommes entièrement d'accord avec les suggestions qui ont été faites par plusieurs représentants et suivant lesquelles le Comité des Vingt-Quatre devrait entreprendre l'étude de la mise en œuvre de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale dans ces territoires pour que les Nations Unies puissent leur apporter l'aide nécessaire et leur donner des conseils afin que leur indépendance soit viable du double point de vue politique et économique. A ce sujet, nous sommes heureux d'apprendre que, conformément au communiqué commun du Gouvernement du Sénégal et de celui de Gambie, le Secrétaire général constitue un groupe d'experts pour l'étude des problèmes soulevés par une association éventuelle de ces deux pays.

84. Enfin, je tiens à répéter que mon pays est chaudement partisan d'un processus de décolonisation rapide. Nous constatons avec satisfaction que cette année verra l'accession à la liberté et à l'indépendance de différents territoires non autonomes, de sorte que l'ampleur du problème colonial continuera de diminuer. Nous nous rendons cependant compte du fait que les problèmes qui restent à résoudre ne sont pas les moins complexes; mais les difficultés ne devraient pas être insurmontables. Au sein de l'Organisation et à l'extérieur, ma délégation apportera son appui pour la mise en œuvre rapide de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

85. M. KOIRALA (Népal) [traduit de l'anglais]: Nous sommes saisis du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/5446/Rev.1].

86. Les chapitres II à V contiennent les rapports du Comité des Vingt-Quatre concernant les territoires sous administration portugaise, la Rhodésie du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et Aden. Dans sa totalité, le rapport du Comité spécial comprend plus d'un millier de pages dactylographiées. Vingt-six territoires sont traités dans le rapport et le Comité y présente des recommandations au sujet de la plupart d'entre eux.

87. Il va sans dire que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre s'est acquitté de sa tâche parfaitement et avec diligence. L'excellent rapport qu'il a établi tiendra, sans aucun doute, une place importante dans la documentation relative à la question dont il s'agit et il exercera une profonde influence sur le processus de décolonisation. La délégation du Népal félicite donc le Comité des Vingt-Quatre de ce travail si utile. Nos remerciements s'adressent particulièrement à M. Coulibaly, du Mali, président du Comité, à M. Velazquez, d'Uruguay, et à M. Sonn Voeunsai, du Cambodge, tous deux vice-présidents, ainsi qu'à M. Rifai, de Syrie, rapporteur, et à son successeur, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde.

88. Sur les 26 territoires dont traite le rapport neuf, à savoir les sept territoires sous administration portugaise, la Rhodésie du Sud et le Sud-Ouest africain, ont déjà été examinés par la Quatrième Commission et la délégation népalaise a eu l'occasion de formuler des observations au sujet de chacune de ces questions difficiles et très complexes. Quant aux 17 autres territoires, le Comité spécial a remis à plus tard l'examen approfondi de la situation de cinq d'entre eux, à savoir Gibraltar et Fernando Poo, Ifni, Rio Muni et le Sahara espagnol. Tant que le Comité spécial n'aura pas examiné le cas de ces derniers territoires et présenté des recommandations, il serait prématuré de la part de ma délégation de formuler à la hâte des observations sur la situation qui règne dans les territoires en question. Nos observations porteront donc seulement sur les 12 territoires dont il est question dans le rapport et au sujet desquels, après une étude attentive et détaillée des divers aspects de la situation, le Comité spécial a formulé des recommandations adoptées à l'unanimité indiquant à l'Assemblée générale certaines lignes de conduite à suivre.

89. Ma délégation constate avec satisfaction que le représentant du Royaume-Uni, dans une lettre du 10 septembre 1963, adressée au Président du Comité spécial, et qui est reproduite dans le rapport, a communiqué un calendrier des progrès constitutionnels dans lequel il est dit:

"La Conférence de l'indépendance de Malte a eu lieu et l'on annonce que le Gouvernement britannique a décidé que Malte accèderait à l'indépendance au plus tard le 31 mai 1964." [A/5446/Rev.7, Annexe II.]

90. En ce qui concerne le territoire des îles Fidji, les perspectives sont toutefois moins brillantes. Le demi-million d'habitants de ce territoire est sous la domination du Royaume-Uni depuis 90 ans. Le calendrier des progrès constitutionnels inclus dans la lettre du 10 septembre 1963 du représentant du Royaume-Uni montre qu'une nouvelle constitution a été mise en vigueur dans les îles Fidji en février 1963 et que, deux mois plus tard, les élections générales ont eu lieu conformément à la nouvelle constitution. Toutefois, cette constitution n'offre pas grand chose aux habitants en fait de pouvoirs réels ou substantiels leur permettant de décider de leur propre avenir, et le représentant du Royaume-Uni, dans sa déclaration devant le Comité spécial, n'a même pas exprimé la volonté de son gouvernement d'octroyer à la population son droit inaliénable à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. La délégation népalaise estime que la puissance administrante ne peut maintenant invoquer aucun prétexte, après un siècle ou presque de domination sur ces îles, pour retarder l'autonomie et l'indépendance. Elle souscrit par conséquent sans réserve au projet de résolution adopté le 19 juillet 1963 par le Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1, chapitre VII, par. 135], qui invite la puissance administrante à rédiger une nouvelle constitution prévoyant des élections libres, à prendre des mesures immédiates pour transférer tous les pouvoirs à la population du territoire, conformément à ses désirs et à sa volonté, et à s'efforcer, avec la coopération de la population du territoire, de mener à bien l'intégration sociale, économique et politique des diverses communautés.

91. J'en viens maintenant à la question du Kenya, de Zanzibar, de la Rhodésie du Nord et du Nyassaland, où l'on constate de nouveau d'heureux progrès. Les dates de l'indépendance pour le Kenya et Zanzibar sont fixées pour ce mois-ci et nous aurons sous peu l'honneur d'accueillir ces deux territoires dans la communauté des nations. Nous adressons nos félicitations aux vaillantes populations du Kenya et de Zanzibar à l'occasion de leur indépendance imminente. Nous félicitons également le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni d'avoir rendu cette évolution possible.

92. En ce qui concerne la Rhodésie du Nord et le Nyassaland, il est encourageant de constater que le Nyassaland a accédé à l'autonomie interne et que l'accord a été réalisé sur la dissolution de la Fédération centrafricaine, conformément aux vœux de la population. La Rhodésie du Nord ne jouit pas encore d'une autonomie suffisante, mais d'importants changements constitutionnels indiquent que de nouveaux progrès sont imminents. Réaffirmant les droits inaliénables des populations de la Rhodésie du Nord et du Nyassaland, le projet de résolution adopté par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5446/Rev.1, chapitre VII, par. 184] exprime notamment l'espoir que la dissolution de la Fédération ne sera pas retardée et que ces territoires accèderont à l'indépendance immédiatement; elle demande en outre à la puissance administrante de fixer, en consultation avec les gouvernements élus, la date la plus rapprochée pour l'accession à l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Nord et du Nyassaland. Ma délégation approuve entièrement ce projet de résolution et espère que la décision de l'Assemblée à cet égard suivra les suggestions du Comité spécial.

93. La situation dans les trois territoires de la Haute Commission, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland, est vraiment critique. Les grands espoirs et l'optimisme suscités par les événements du Kenya et de Zanzibar sont bien compromis lorsqu'on pense aux problèmes raciaux et coloniaux qui existent dans le continent africain au sud du Congo. Dans ces territoires de la Haute Commission, l'autorité administrante a, sans aucun doute, pris certaines mesures pour favoriser le progrès constitutionnel et elle envisage d'autres améliorations; mais les progrès constitutionnels dont le représentant du Royaume-Uni a fait état dans le calendrier dont j'ai parlé, au sujet du Souaziland et du Betchouanaland, ne répondent pas aux exigences de la résolution 1817 (XVII) de l'Assemblée générale, en date du 18 décembre 1962; ils ont un caractère discriminatoire et sont très loin de répondre aux modestes aspirations politiques des populations de ces territoires. Par conséquent, conformément à la résolution adoptée le 26 juillet 1963 par le Comité spécial, nous voudrions demander à la puissance administrante de prendre immédiatement les mesures nécessaires pour convoquer, dans chacun des territoires, une conférence constitutionnelle qui conduira à des élections générales fondées sur le suffrage universel des adultes et qui sera le prélude de l'indépendance; nous demandons également que de sérieux efforts soient faits pour fournir l'aide nécessaire dans le cadre des programmes d'assistance technique de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et des institutions spécialisées.

94. Ces trois territoires sont encerclés par l'Afrique du Sud, dont le Gouvernement est hostile, extrêmement puissant et pratique la discrimination raciale. En outre, il a quasiment déclaré son intention d'annexer ces territoires. Aussi l'Assemblée doit-elle proclamer une fois de plus que toute tentative d'annexer ces territoires constituera un acte d'agression en violation de la Charte des Nations Unies, et demander à la puissance administrante de s'en tenir fermement à sa décision selon laquelle l'Afrique du Sud ne pourra annexer aucun des trois territoires de la Haute Commission.

95. La situation en Guyane britannique a préoccupé tout particulièrement le Comité spécial, car le seul problème à résoudre en ce qui concerne ce territoire est celui de la fixation d'une date pour l'indépendance. D'une part, nous regrettons que l'action du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni nous donne à penser que ce gouvernement poursuit la même politique périmée consistant à "diviser pour régner"; d'autre part, nous ne sommes pas très satisfaits de constater que les dirigeants de la Guyane britannique n'ont pas encore pu concilier les divergences qui les séparent, d'autant plus que ces divergences servent maintenant de prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance. Nous approuvons entièrement le principe établi par le paragraphe 5 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV), selon lequel aucune condition ne doit être attachée à l'octroi de l'indépendance, mais nous constatons que les divergences qui séparent les dirigeants guyanais sont telles qu'elles ont amené le Sous-Comité de la Guyane britannique à insister sur la responsabilité incombant aux dirigeants politiques de la Guyane britannique, ceux-ci ne devant pas permettre à des considérations personnelles ou autres de faire obstacle à l'unité nationale et à l'accession immédiate du pays à l'indépendance. La délégation népalaise approuve les conclusions et recommandations du Sous-Comité, adoptées ultérieurement par le Comité spécial, dans lesquelles notre attention est attirée sur la nécessité de faire tout notre possible pour que la Guyane britannique accède immédiatement à l'indépendance, sans aucune condition ni réserve.

96. Je reviens maintenant au continent africain. C'est un motif de satisfaction de constater que, grâce à la bonne volonté de la puissance administrante, c'est-à-dire du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, l'autonomie interne a été instaurée en novembre dernier en Gambie, territoire ayant une superficie de 4 000 milles carrés (soit 10 360 kilomètres carrés) et une population d'environ 300 000 habitants. Ce qui cause encore plus de satisfaction, c'est l'accord intervenu entre les Gouvernements du Sénégal et de la Gambie en vue d'une association économique et politique des deux pays, dont les grandes lignes sont indiquées dans le communiqué conjoint publié par ces deux gouvernements et dans la déclaration faite en octobre 1962 par le Gouvernement de la Gambie. Celui-ci a obtenu de l'Organisation des Nations Unies qu'un groupe d'experts en matière constitutionnelle, économique et fiscale soit chargé de rassembler les données de fait nécessaires sur lesquelles les deux gouvernements espèrent fonder l'association envisagée de leurs pays. Cette association doit constituer une importante contribution à la stabilité, au développement et à la prospérité des deux pays et à la cause de l'unité africaine. Ma délégation accueille avec sympathie toute évolution de ce genre et félicite ces deux pays de leur initiative qui, en dehors de l'effet considérable qu'elle ne manquera pas d'avoir sur la cause de l'unité, fera peut-être aussi apparaître les voies et moyens de donner une solution pratique aux problèmes que soulève l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays de faible superficie et n'ayant que de maigres ressources économiques. Cependant, ma délégation estime que, ni l'étude des experts des Nations Unies, ni aucune sorte de condition préalable ne doit être un obstacle sur la voie de l'octroi immédiat de l'indépendance au peuple de la Gambie.

97. A ce stade, ma délégation voudrait rendre hommage aux dirigeants du Tanganyika, de l'Ouganda et du Kenya, qui ont proposé la formation d'une fédération de l'Est africain par leurs pays, conformément aux désirs des populations, après l'accession du Kenya à l'indépendance, la semaine prochaine. Cette initiative tendant à harmoniser les grands principes de l'indépendance et de l'intégration est vraiment louable. Ma délégation considère cette décision d'une grande portée comme une manifestation profonde du désir croissant de solidarité et d'unité des peuples africains.

98. Enfin, je voudrais dire quelques mots d'Aden. En dépit de l'attitude et des actes du Gouvernement britannique qui s'est montré peu disposé à coopérer à cet égard, le projet de résolution adopté par le Comité spécial sur la base de l'étude par son sous-comité d'Aden [A/5446/Rev.1, chap. V, par. 478] répond dans l'ensemble aux exigences de la situation. Le droit du peuple d'Aden à l'indépendance immédiate a été réaffirmé et l'accent a été mis comme il se devait sur la nécessité absolue de permettre au peuple de cette région "d'exercer son droit de libre détermination en ce qui concerne son avenir, l'exercice de ce droit de libre détermination devant se traduire par une consultation de toute la population dans le plus bref délai au suffrage universel des adultes". Ma délégation estime que l'Assemblée peut adopter, avec les modifications qui s'imposent, le projet de résolution adopté par le Comité spécial.

99. Cela m'amène à la fin de mon intervention, mais, avant de terminer, je voudrais réaffirmer l'appui sans réserve du Gouvernement népalais à la cause de la lutte contre le colonialisme et aux principes dont s'inspire la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, parce que, quels qu'aient été les progrès accomplis dans le domaine de la décolonisation depuis 1945 ou depuis l'adoption de cette déclaration historique, le problème du colonialisme est loin d'avoir disparu. Il y a encore, dispersés sur toute la surface de la terre, des peuples assujettis et tant que les derniers vestiges du colonialisme n'auront pas été éliminés, les efforts des Nations Unies dans ce sens ne devraient nullement se ralentir. Nous considérons le colonialisme, dans toutes ses manifestations, comme un mal absolu dont il faut se débarrasser le plus rapidement possible. Le Comité spécial, qui existe depuis deux ans, a accompli un travail remarquable dans l'élimination du colonialisme, et ma délégation invite instamment l'Assemblée à renouveler le mandat de ce comité en lui manifestant toute la confiance qu'il mérite.

100. Je tiens aussi à rendre hommage au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni pour le sens politique et la clairvoyance dont il a fait preuve en reconnaissant le droit des peuples sous sa domination à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Nous n'approuvons peut-être pas toujours les méthodes qu'il a adoptées pour mettre en œuvre ce principe de l'autodétermination et de l'indépendance des peuples. En fait, nous sommes parfois exaspérés par ses procédés dilatoires et par son manque de coopération comme, par exemple, son refus de permettre aux sous-comités du Comité des Vingt-Quatre de se rendre en Guyane britannique et à Aden. Mais un pays comme le Royaume-Uni, ainsi que l'a dit le roi Mahendra, "ayant compris que les jours du colonialisme sont comptés, a su agir de telle sorte, dans l'ensemble, qu'il a recueilli l'approbation de nombreux pays... Alors qu'il avait pris la tête du mouvement d'assujettissement de grandes masses de populations, il a aussi su prendre la tête du mouvement de libération." Nous espérons simplement qu'il adoptera une cadence plus rapide et que son exemple sera suivi par d'autres pays qui, eux aussi, libéreront les territoires qu'ils dominent.

101. M. ROSSIDES (Chypre) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation tient tout d'abord à féliciter le Président, les membres du Bureau ainsi que les membres du Comité spécial des efforts diligents qu'ils ont accomplis pour exécuter le mandat qui leur a été assigné par les résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée générale. Le rapport du Comité spécial, que l'on peut à juste titre qualifier de monumental, contient une grande diversité de renseignements sur les territoires examinés et, avec les observations et décisions du Comité, on a là un document précieux et extrêmement instructif qui présente une importance majeure pour l'Assemblée. Ma délégation appuie le maintien du Comité et est en faveur de la prorogation de son mandat.

102. La Déclaration sur le colonialisme, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), a peu à peu acquis, grâce à sa force morale croissante, l'autorité d'un instrument juridique dans les relations entre Etats concernant les questions qu'elle traite. Il est réconfortant de constater que, depuis l'adoption de cette déclaration, 13 territoires ont accédé à l'indépendance, et qu'au cours de la présente session le Kenya et Zanzibar également deviendront indépendants. Nous nous réjouissons à l'avance d'accueillir leurs représentants au sein de cette assemblée.

103. Il est toutefois décevant de voir qu'aucun progrès n'a été réalisé jusqu'à présent dans le cas de certains territoires, malgré les efforts persistants et méritoires du Comité spécial. Nous regrettons profondément cette situation, de même que nous regrettons que certaines puissances administrantes aient refusé de recevoir des missions de visite déléguées par le Comité. Nous tenons à nous joindre à l'appel adressé à ces puissances pour qu'elles cherchent à faciliter le travail du Comité dans l'exécution de son mandat et ce conformément au paragraphe 7 de la résolution 1654 (XVI), qui invite les puissances administrantes à "assurer au Comité spécial leur coopération la plus complète dans l'accomplissement de ses tâches".

104. Nous déplorons profondément, je l'ai dit, le fait qu'un nombre considérable de territoires, habités par des millions d'hommes, n'aient pas encore acquis l'indépendance. Il n'y a là, cependant, aucune raison de se décourager. Ainsi que la Déclaration l'a relevé à si juste titre, le processus de libération est irrésistible et irréversible. Nous pensons par conséquent que l'heure n'est pas loin de sonner où ces pays viendront occuper la place qui leur revient dans la communauté des nations libres.

105. Le rapport fait ressortir que le Comité spécial doit encore examiner le cas d'un nombre impressionnant de territoires non autonomes en ce qui concerne leur indépendance. Nombre d'entre eux sont très petits et le problème de leur indépendance propre soulève des questions difficiles. Ma délégation est en faveur de l'unité territoriale partout où elle est raisonnablement possible, et nous sommes dans tous les cas pour l'unité des peuples. La cause de la liberté et de l'indépendance pour tous les peuples est chère au cœur des Chypriotes. Le peuple de Chypre a désiré si ardemment la liberté et l'indépendance pendant des siècles de vicissitudes et de domination étrangère qu'il est instinctivement et chaleureusement partisan de tous les peuples qui luttent pour leur droit à une vie libre et indépendante. Que cette lutte soit physique ou mentale, que les territoires en question soient situés en Afrique ou dans n'importe quelle autre partie du monde, c'est une lutte que le peuple chypriote comprend et appuie.

106. Au-delà de la notion de liberté, il y a celle de la paix qui est impliquée dans le problème de la décolonisation comme dans celui, plus général, de l'indépendance. La liberté du monde est en effet la condition préalable de la paix mondiale. Tant que dans une région quelconque les peuples seront en rébellion parce que la liberté leur est refusée, on ne pourra parler de paix sur la terre. Il faut donc libérer le monde de toutes les sortes de colonialisme, du totalitarisme ou de toutes autres formes de domination par la force, afin que nous puissions trouver le moyen de coopérer dans la liberté et dans la paix.

107. Le représentant du Chili, expliquant le processus de la décolonisation et traitant des problèmes qui se posent au sujet des nombreuses petites entités, a montré de façon très pertinente le contraste entre, d'une part, la marche contemporaine "vers de grandes intégrations, que ce soit des économies ou des peuples en quête d'unité", et, d'autre part, ce qu'il a appelé la "marche à reculons" que représente "une attitude rétrograde et illogique" qui "met l'accent sur la division, sur le fractionnement et la désintégration, tant politique et économique que culturelle et sociale". Il a ajouté:

"Notre but doit continuer d'être... l'indépendance pour tous les peuples et la disparition de toutes les colonies et de leur cortège d'abus..." [1267ème-séance, par. 24.]

108. La division est un legs du colonialisme, qu'elle ait revêtu la forme d'un découpage de zones entre les puissances coloniales ayant souvent pour effet de rompre des entités territoriales, ou qu'elle se soit traduite de façon plus significative par la création de dissensions au sein de la population d'un territoire quelconque conformément à la règle classique "diviser pour régner"; la division est toujours allée

de pair avec le colonialisme. Le fait qu'un groupe de la population avait une religion ou une origine ethnique différentes de celles de la majorité a dans certains cas été utilisé pour créer des droits électoraux distincts et introduire d'autres séparations qui maintenaient à part certains éléments de la population et créaient des antagonismes de nature à retarder l'indépendance. Cet héritage de division et l'esprit d'antagonisme qui l'accompagne constituent des séquelles du colonialisme et ont créé des dissensions et entraîné des frictions qu'il eût été possible d'éviter là où aucune autre différence fondamentale ou essentielle n'existait entre les éléments de la population: toutes ces personnes avaient œuvré ensemble et auraient dû continuer de le faire comme un seul peuple que l'intérêt commun de leur bien-être aurait naturellement uni si l'esprit de division n'avait pas été systématisé et perpétué par la constitution.

109. Il incombe donc à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de veiller non seulement à ce que l'indépendance soit accordée, mais aussi à ce qu'elle soit positive et réelle et à ce que l'unité de la population et l'intégrité du territoire soient maintenues. A cet égard, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a agi avec sagesse et efficacité au Congo où son intervention a permis de surmonter les divisions de la population, d'éviter le morcellement du pays, de rétablir la coopération et de maintenir l'intégrité du territoire. En fait, la Déclaration contient un mandat précis à cet égard; elle souligne, tant dans son préambule que dans son dispositif, que l'indépendance doit être complète et l'intégrité du territoire respectée. Le préambule contient notamment la phrase suivante:

"Convaincue que tous les peuples ont un droit inaliénable à la pleine liberté, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national";

ce qui veut dire que le droit naturel des peuples à leur complète indépendance et au plein exercice de la souveraineté est inaliénable. Un pays qui devient indépendant et Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne peut donc être privé de la substance de son indépendance et de sa souveraineté par aucune disposition constitutionnelle propre à le diviser, imposée au moment de l'octroi officiel de l'indépendance. Tout instrument contenant des dispositions de ce genre et impliquant une intervention dans les affaires intérieures d'un Etat Membre irait à l'encontre de la notion même d'indépendance telle qu'elle ressort de la Charte des Nations Unies et serait contraire aux normes fondamentales du droit international.

110. La Déclaration précise également, au deuxième alinéa du préambule, la nécessité de droits égaux pour tous, sans distinction de race, de langue ou de religion, afin de créer des conditions de stabilité et de bien-être et de favoriser des relations pacifiques et amicales.

111. Il convient donc que l'indépendance accordée dans tous les cas dont s'occupe le Comité spécial soit réelle et non compromise par des conditions qui l'annihilent; il faut que règnent, avec la compréhension et le respect mutuels, l'esprit de bonne volonté afin que les habitants de tous les territoires écartent ce qui les divise et s'attachent aux problèmes plus importants qui devraient les unir dans une marche vers le progrès et vers ce grand objectif de l'humanité qu'est la paix dans un monde de justice et de liberté. La liberté exige toutefois un sens égal de la responsabilité tant à l'égard des autres personnes que des autres pays; elle exige le respect de la justice et des droits légitimes d'autrui et surtout un souci réel du bien public joint à un sens véritable du devoir de contribuer au progrès moral de l'humanité, qui est si nécessaire à notre époque pour sa survie et pour la paix.

112. M. CARDUCCI ARTENISIO (Italie) [traduit de l'anglais]: La délégation italienne ne se propose pas à cette heure tardive de présenter des observations sur le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. L'Assemblée générale dira le moment venu si le Comité spécial s'est montré digne de la confiance placée en lui. Nous pouvons seulement témoigner de la bonne volonté, des efforts et des contributions précieuses de toutes les délégations qui ont participé à ses activités.

113. En outre, c'est pour nous un devoir et un plaisir que de rendre hommage à la sagesse, au tact et à la compétence avec lesquels son président, M. Sory Coulibaly, a dirigé les travaux. Il a été habilement secondé par les deux vice-présidents, M. Velazquez, dont nous avons tous tant apprécié la profonde culture juridique et l'esprit pénétrant, et M. Sonn Voensai, dont l'enthousiasme et le dévouement n'ont pas peu contribué au succès des travaux du Comité.

114. Nous tenons également à mentionner M. Rifai, de Syrie, et notre ami M. Natwar Singh, qui, tour à tour, se sont acquittés avec tant de compétence de leurs fonctions de Rapporteur.

115. Nous voudrions mentionner également les deux sous-secrétaires, M. Protitch et M. Amachree, ainsi que tous les membres du Secrétariat qui ont travaillé assidûment pour le Comité.

116. La délégation italienne n'entend pas davantage donner un aperçu des règles et des principes qui l'ont guidée au cours de l'examen des problèmes de la décolonisation. Celles des délégations que cela peut intéresser n'auront aucune difficulté, j'en suis sûr, à consulter le texte du rapport pour voir quelle a été notre attitude au sujet de chacun des points examinés.

117. La délégation italienne tient seulement à dire qu'elle a été heureuse et s'est estimée privilégiée d'être associée, en tant que membre du Comité des Dix-Sept, puis du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, au processus de décolonisation, et d'avoir pu apporter sa propre contribution d'idées et d'initiatives.

118. Nous ne sommes pas de ceux qui pensent que les grands événements historiques peuvent se ramener entièrement aux activités d'un seul organe, si représentatif ou autorisé qu'il soit. Nous croyons au contraire à l'impulsion des grandes forces spirituelles qui se créent au cours des siècles, qui acquissent de l'élan avec les années et qui, à un moment donné de l'histoire mondiale, conduisent le monde vers son destin. Il est cependant indéniable que, parfois, comme dans le cas de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ces forces peuvent être canalisées et, pour ainsi dire, mises en œuvre dans le cadre d'une organisation politique et juridique de sorte que leur action devient de plus en plus efficace.

119. Ce qu'il faut nous demander au stade actuel, ce n'est pas ce que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a fait jusqu'ici pour faciliter la réalisation de ces idéaux, mais bien le rôle que l'Organisation mondiale, et en particulier le Comité spécial de la décolonisation, peut être appelée à jouer à l'avenir. Nous sommes parfois enclins à envisager ce phénomène historique d'un point de vue trop distant. Nous pouvons nous féliciter des résultats acquis. Nous pouvons fixer de nouveaux objectifs pour l'avenir, mais ce faisant nous oublions parfois que chaque acte de décolonisation est, dans la plupart des cas, tant pour la puissance administrante que pour le territoire colonial intéressé, le résultat d'un effort extraordinaire et la source de problèmes très graves.

120. Lorsque nous parlons de décolonisation, il s'agit surtout des problèmes de ces nouveaux Etats indépendants qui parfois, du jour au lendemain, se trouvent en présence de tâches politiques et économiques effrayantes et se voient dans l'obligation de s'adapter aux réalités d'un monde impitoyable et de créer une nouvelle économie capable de survivre et d'entrer en concurrence avec des structures plus anciennes et plus solides. Cependant, nous ne devons pas oublier les problèmes que la puissance administrante doit résoudre pour assurer la décolonisation de ses possessions d'outre-mer, que ce soit dans le domaine politique, économique ou simplement psychologique. Nous sommes convaincus que l'Organisation des Nations Unies peut continuer à jouer un rôle très utile dans la solution de ces problèmes. Nous estimons d'autre part que la condition nécessaire à leur solution est de reconnaître qu'ils existent dans toute leur complexité politique, économique, sociale, culturelle, etc.

121. Nous avons constaté, au cours des séances du Comité spécial, et parfois au cours de celles de l'Assemblée générale, qu'on a souvent tendance à simplifier à l'excès les problèmes, à soutenir que certaines situations sont dues uniquement à la mauvaise foi de quelques hommes malveillants qui détiennent le pouvoir, et à affirmer que l'adoption par un organe des Nations Unies d'une résolution rédigée en termes énergiques suffira pour apporter une solution à tous les problèmes fondamentaux. La délégation italienne estime que, loin d'être de nature à donner de bons résultats, de telles méthodes ont au contraire pour effet de décourager la coopération et de porter préjudice, dans l'opinion publique mondiale, à la réputation de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en tant qu'instrument capable d'obtenir des résultats concrets.

122. L'une des pensées les plus profondes et les plus stimulantes que nous ayons entendues au cours de la présente discussion — et qui va dans le sens de notre opinion en la matière — a été exprimée par le Président du Comité spécial, M. Coulibaly, qui a dit dans son intervention sur ce point de l'ordre du jour:

"Je suis convaincu que dans beaucoup de cas l'Organisation des Nations Unies pourrait aider les puissances coloniales à résoudre certaines de leurs difficultés..." [1266ème séance, par. 42.]

Nous estimons que ces paroles contiennent beaucoup de vérité et de sagesse. Nous devrions nous en souvenir et les méditer pendant les travaux futurs du Comité spécial.

123. Nous croyons fermement en la valeur des méthodes telles que les pourparlers, la négociation, la conciliation et le compromis, non pas sur les principes, mais dans la pratique. Nous pensons qu'il est bon d'attirer l'attention du public mondial sur un problème donné afin d'exercer toute la pression morale convenable sur la partie non consentante. Nous comptons beaucoup sur le rôle de plus en plus grand que le Secrétaire général peut jouer pour faciliter la solution des différends internationaux. Nous avons été témoins, au cours des deux dernières années, d'exemples très encourageants de la façon dont le Secrétaire général et ses représentants peuvent favoriser les négociations entre les parties à un conflit colonial ou obtenir la mise en œuvre des dispositions d'un accord. Nous ne pensons pas — pour ne citer qu'un seul exemple — que les efforts faits par le Secrétaire général pour établir des contacts entre le Gouvernement portugais et les représentants des Etats africains en vue d'assurer la mise en œuvre des décisions des Nations Unies doivent être abandonnés.

124. Le peuple italien est optimiste par nature. Aussi, sommes-nous sincèrement convaincus que les problèmes les plus difficiles dans le domaine de la décolonisation tout comme dans les autres domaines de la vie internationale trouveront eux aussi, le moment venu, une solution juste, pacifique et durable. Nous n'en disons pas moins: que ces problèmes et les émotions qu'ils suscitent ne troublent ou n'affaiblissent pas l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Qu'ils ne créent pas de divisions entre les peuples d'Europe et ceux d'Afrique alors que l'avenir même du monde entier dépend de leur coopération et de leur intégration. N'évoquons même pas l'image de l'horrible tragédie que pourrait connaître l'humanité: un conflit entre deux races. Maîtrisons nos émotions. Efforçons-nous de sacrifier certains de nos intérêts et travaillons ensemble.

125. Avant de conclure ces brèves observations, nous voudrions dire également quelques mots d'une question qui a déjà été soulevée au cours du débat. Nous sommes reconnaissants aux représentants du Chili et de Ceylan d'avoir très opportunément soumis à l'Assemblée générale le problème des petits territoires et des territoires peu peuplés. Il ne s'agit pas d'un problème nouveau. Le Comité spécial a eu à examiner, à sa dernière session, la situation de deux territoires qui entrent apparemment dans cette catégorie. Les débats du Comité spécial ont toutefois révélé une grande incertitude quant à la façon d'envisager le problème. Dans un cas par exemple, la majorité des membres du Comité s'est vigoureusement opposée à ce qu'il soit fait mention de certains accords qui étaient sur le point d'être conclus par le gouvernement d'un territoire et un Etat voisin, concernant l'association future des deux pays. Dans un autre cas, des objections analogues ont été élevées, contre un appel aux institutions spécialisées des Nations Unies les invitant à étudier la situation économique du territoire lorsque celui-ci aurait accédé à l'indépendance.

126. Dans les deux cas, on a fait valoir qu'aussi bien la mention des accords en question que l'appel aux institutions spécialisées pouvaient être interprétés comme portant atteinte à la souveraineté future du territoire en question. Après avoir entendu les déclarations faites ici au cours du débat, nous avons l'impression que la tendance a été renversée et que le sentiment général est en faveur d'une action ferme des Nations Unies pour rendre viable, du point de vue politique et économique, l'indépendance des petits territoires. Nous sommes heureux que ces idées aient été exprimées au cours du débat et nous les appuyons sans réserve.

127. Nous sommes, bien entendu, tout disposés à reconnaître que ce problème est extrêmement complexe et qu'il exige des recherches sérieuses et approfondies. Tout en nous en tenant aux principes énoncés dans la résolution 1514 (XV) selon laquelle l'indépendance doit être accordée à tous les territoires qui ne l'ont pas encore obtenue, nous ne pouvons nous dissimuler que l'octroi de l'indépendance sic et simpliciter à des vingtaines de territoires — ce qui pourrait fort bien doubler le nombre des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies — n'irait pas sans inconvénients et risques sérieux.

128. Le représentant du Chili, exprimant une idée largement partagée au sein de l'Organisation, a déclaré, il y a quelques jours à cette tribune:

"Dans un monde qui avance vers de grandes intégrations, que ce soit des économies ou des peuples en quête d'unité, il me semble rétrograde, anachronique et illogique de placer l'accent sur la division, sur le fractionnement et la désintégration, tant politique et économique que culturelle et sociale." [1267ème séance, par. 23.]

129. En vue d'éviter de s'engager dans une voie qui ne pourrait manquer de mener à une situation aussi indésirable et qui serait la source d'une instabilité très nette pour la société internationale, on a suggéré divers remèdes, tels que les fédérations, l'association libre à des Etats indépendants existants et d'autres méthodes déjà envisagées dans la résolution 1514 (XV).

130. La délégation italienne estime que chacune de ces suggestions a de la valeur et devrait être attentivement étudiée. Cependant, nous estimons aussi que, en vue d'éviter l'adoption de solutions hâtives, pour des raisons de facilité politique ou sous la pression de certains intérêts, le Comité spécial devrait s'abstenir d'aborder l'examen de ces petits territoires de façon fragmentaire. A notre avis, l'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait proclamer sa responsabilité particulière à l'égard de ces territoires. Nous pourrions même essayer de poser les fondements d'un nouveau mécanisme qui permettrait à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de se charger, directement ou indirectement, d'amener ces territoires à l'indépendance.

131. Nous estimons aussi que l'Organisation des Nations Unies pourrait mettre à profit dans ce domaine — bien entendu mutatis mutandis — l'expérience infiniment précieuse qu'elle a acquise dans le domaine de l'administration de la tutelle.

132. Nous savons tous que l'imagination est l'un des principaux moyens de la politique. Nous espérons que les Nations Unies sauront en faire preuve pour amener à une conclusion satisfaisante le processus de décolonisation. Nous espérons qu'elles ne resteront pas prisonnières de vieilles formules qui étaient applicables à la décolonisation classique, mais qui peuvent avoir moins de valeur dans ces cas marginaux.

133. Nous sommes persuadés que le Comité spécial n'épargnera aucun effort pour s'acquitter de ses responsabilités; pour notre part, nous nous engageons à participer sincèrement et activement à ses efforts.

134. M. KING (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le Royaume-Uni est membre du Comité spécial et, comme nos vues sur les diverses questions étudiées par cet organe ont été exposées de façon détaillée dans le rapport, ma délégation n'a pas jugé opportun d'intervenir à un stade antérieur du débat et a préféré attendre que les autres délégations aient eu la possibilité de présenter leurs observations sur le rapport. Comme vous êtes désireux, Monsieur le Président, de terminer ce débat le plus rapidement possible, mes observations porteront principalement sur les points soulevés au cours du débat par les orateurs qui m'ont précédé et je n'aborderai pas la question des territoires qui ont fait l'objet d'un examen spécial à la Quatrième Commission.

135. Tout d'abord, je voudrais faire connaître la position de mon gouvernement sur la question de la décolonisation. Les buts et objectifs de la politique du Royaume-Uni à l'égard des territoires non autonomes sous administration britannique ont été fréquemment exposés devant cette assemblée et tout récemment encore ils ont été énoncés par lord Home — qui était alors Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni — dans un discours prononcé à cette tribune le 1er octobre 1963 [1222ème séance].

136. En bref, nous sommes convaincus que les peuples de ces territoires devraient parvenir le plus rapidement possible à l'autonomie et à l'indépendance, et nous nous efforçons systématiquement de faire en sorte que ces nouvelles nations aient la force, la stabilité et les moyens nécessaires pour jouer un rôle utile dans les affaires mondiales et dans le progrès économique et social. Fort heureusement, les preuves de la sincérité de nos intentions et de notre détermination à poursuivre cette politique sont faciles à trouver.

137. A chaque nouvelle session de l'Assemblée générale, nous sommes accoutumés à voir un plus grand nombre de représentants d'anciens territoires dépendants siéger en tant que membres indépendants du Commonwealth et de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. L'an dernier a vu l'indépendance de la Jamaïque, de l'Ouganda et de la Trinité et Tobago, trois pays dont la population totale atteint plus de 9 millions d'habitants. En 1963 déjà, nous avons été témoins de l'indépendance du Sabah — qui constituait autrefois le Bornéo du Nord —, du Sarawak et de Singapour, qui groupent au total environ 3 millions d'habitants et dont les représentants siègent maintenant à cette assemblée en tant que membres de la délégation de la Malaisie. Au cours de la présente session, nous assisterons à l'admission de Zanzibar et du Kenya, qui comptent à eux deux plus de 8 millions d'habitants. Ces deux pays deviendront en effet indépendants les 10 et 12 décembre 1963 respectivement.

138. Ma délégation exprime sa reconnaissance aux nombreux orateurs, parmi lesquels je tiens à citer tout spécialement les représentants de l'Argentine, du Cambodge, de la Colombie, du Libéria, de Madagascar, du Sénégal et du Tchad, qui ont généreusement rendu hommage au rôle joué par mon gouvernement dans l'accession de ces pays à l'indépendance.

139. Outre le Kenya et Zanzibar, j'ai le plaisir d'informer l'Assemblée — et tout spécialement les représentants du Libéria et de l'Éthiopie qui ont parlé respectivement de Malte et du Nyassaland — que la date d'accession à l'indépendance de ces deux territoires dont la population totale dépasse 3 millions d'habitants a déjà été fixée. Malte deviendra indépendante le 31 mai 1964 et le Nyassaland le 6 juillet 1964. Ainsi, depuis que l'Assemblée a discuté pour la dernière fois du rapport du Comité spécial il y a un peu plus d'un an, sept territoires, dont la population totale dépasse 14 millions d'habitants, ont acquis leur indépendance ou sont sur le point de l'obtenir au cours des mois à venir.

140. Cependant, le succès qu'a rencontré la politique de décolonisation de mon gouvernement au cours des dernières années ne signifie pas que nous ayons l'intention de nous reposer sur nos lauriers ni de permettre au rythme du progrès constitutionnel et politique de se ralentir. Il y a encore nombre de problèmes et de difficultés à résoudre avant que les territoires que nous administrons encore puissent atteindre l'autonomie et l'indépendance. Par exemple, six de ces territoires ont une population de moins de 10 000 habitants. Un certain nombre de représentants ont parlé de cette question des petits territoires. Les représentants du Chili et du Mexique [1267^{ème} séance], par exemple, ont relevé le fait que certains d'entre eux pouvaient difficilement être viables du point de vue politique ou économique, en raison de leur petite superficie ou de leur faible population.

141. A cet égard, ma délégation partage l'avis des représentants du Chili et du Sénégal, selon lequel il faut considérer chaque cas séparément, aucune solution simple ne pouvant s'appliquer à tous. Mon gouvernement a cependant confiance que l'on trouvera pour ces territoires des solutions qui pourront, conformément aux termes de l'Article 73 de la Charte, tenir compte des "conditions particulières de chaque territoire et de ses populations et [de] leurs degrés variables de développement".

142. En vertu du Chapitre XI de la Charte, c'est à la puissance administrante qu'il incombe de trouver des solutions à ces problèmes, et mon gouvernement n'a nullement l'intention de se soustraire à ses responsabilités à cet égard.

143. J'en viens maintenant au rapport du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre et voudrais dire quelques mots des méthodes de travail et de la façon de procéder de cet organe. La base de la participation de ma délégation aux travaux du Comité au cours de l'année écoulée a été exposée en maintes occasions et peut se résumer comme suit. Nous nous sommes montrés disposés à collaborer avec le Comité, à lui communiquer des renseignements et à participer à ses discussions. En revanche, étant donné que nous sommes sûrs que notre politique est la bonne, nous devons également prendre l'entière responsabilité de sa mise en œuvre.

144. Je tiens à déclarer à ce sujet que la position de mon gouvernement en ce qui concerne sa participation future aux travaux du Comité dépendra des conclusions auxquelles l'Assemblée parviendra quant à la composition et au mandat de cet organe.

145. Le rapport du Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1] montre clairement que ma délégation a joué un rôle très actif dans les travaux du Comité. En particulier, un certain nombre de délégations ont félicité mon gouvernement d'avoir reçu à Londres pour la deuxième année consécutive un sous-comité du Comité spécial. Le représentant du Mexique a souligné l'importance de l'acceptation par mon gouvernement d'une telle procédure. Cependant, la question entièrement distincte de l'envoi de missions de visite dans les territoires administrés par le Royaume-Uni soulève des questions de principe fondamentales pour mon gouvernement. Étant donné qu'un grand nombre de représentants ont abordé cette question, je voudrais maintenant exposer de façon plus détaillée la position de mon gouvernement à ce sujet.

146. Cette position est fort simple. Mon gouvernement estime que l'envoi de missions de visite dans les territoires britanniques constitue une intervention dans leur administration. Je dois souligner que mon gouvernement ne prétend pas que ces missions de visite accompliraient une fonction administrative, comme l'a déclaré le représentant de l'Uruguay. Mais il est absolument convaincu que la présence de missions de visite constituerait une interruption du processus normal de progrès politique et constitutionnel dans les territoires et compliquerait le dialogue permanent qui a lieu entre la puissance administrante et les dirigeants des territoires et qui se traduit soit par des conférences constitutionnelles soit par d'autres formes de consultation; cette présence aurait donc pour effet de retarder l'accession des territoires à l'indépendance au lieu de l'accélérer.

147. Cela ne veut pas dire que mon gouvernement soit opposé à toutes les visites faites au nom des Nations Unies. A ce sujet, l'exemple de la mission de visite qui s'est rendue au Groenland en 1950, exemple auquel le représentant de Ceylan a fait allusion [1267^{ème} séance], est tout à fait pertinent. Cette mission était composée non de représentants des États Membres mais de deux fonctionnaires du Secrétariat des Nations Unies.

148. Les représentants de l'Uruguay [1268^{ème} séance] et du Sénégal [1270^{ème} séance] ont parlé de visites faites récemment, avec le consentement du Royaume-Uni, par des missions analogues dans des territoires sous administration britannique. Il ressort clairement de cela que mon gouvernement est disposé à coopérer avec les Nations Unies dans ce domaine, en toutes circonstances opportunes, et par tous les moyens appropriés.

149. J'en viens maintenant à certaines questions soulevées au cours du débat au sujet de certains territoires administrés par le Royaume-Uni, cela étant particulièrement nécessaire, étant donné que la politique de mon gouvernement a été présentée, dans certains cas, de façon inexacte. Je parlerai tout d'abord d'Aden et des protectorats de l'Arabie du Sud.

150. Pendant bien des années, les souverains des divers Etats du Protectorat ont été peu disposés à s'unir; cependant, à mesure que le temps passait, ils ont pris de plus en plus conscience de la nécessité de s'unir d'une façon ou d'une autre pour former un seul Etat assez important pour avoir une existence autonome et pour accéder à l'indépendance. Au début de 1959, six souverains ont, de leur propre initiative, décidé de former une fédération pour assurer mutuellement leur défense et pour favoriser le développement politique, économique et social dans l'intérêt de leur pays et de leur peuple. Pendant les quatre années qui ont suivi, cinq autres Etats se sont joints à leur Fédération qui, au début de 1963, comprenait 11 membres.

151. Pendant la même période, une série de réunions a eu lieu entre les ministres de la Fédération et les ministres d'Aden, qui sont convenus d'agir en faveur de l'entrée d'Aden dans la Fédération de façon à mettre fin à la division artificielle qui existait entre Aden et l'arrière pays dont les habitants étaient principalement de race arabe et de religion musulmane, parlaient la même langue et se considéraient comme formant un seul peuple.

152. L'entrée d'Aden dans la Fédération a été discutée au Parlement britannique et aux assemblées législatives de la Fédération et d'Aden pendant l'automne de 1962 et approuvée par eux. Le 18 janvier 1963, Aden est devenu le douzième membre de la Fédération. En mars 1963, deux autres Etats se sont joints à la Fédération qui comprend maintenant la majorité des Etats de l'Arabie du Sud.

153. Le cours des événements en Arabie du Sud depuis l'entrée d'Aden dans la Fédération est encourageant. En particulier, l'harmonie a été beaucoup plus grande à Aden depuis la fusion. On peut citer à titre d'exemple le fait que deux membres de l'assemblée législative d'Aden qui avaient voté contre la fusion en 1962 sont maintenant ministres du Gouvernement de l'Etat d'Aden.

154. Je voudrais appeler tout particulièrement l'attention du représentant de l'Irak sur ce fait, car ce qu'il a dit de l'attitude d'Aden à l'égard de la fusion semblait reposer sur des renseignements qui n'étaient pas à jour. La situation en ce qui concerne les questions ouvrières qui ont parfois donné lieu à des différends dans le passé s'est améliorée grâce à l'institution, en août 1963, d'un conseil consultatif commun comprenant six représentants des employeurs et six représentants désignés par le Congrès des syndicats d'Aden.

155. L'Etat d'Aden et le Gouvernement fédéral ont nommé des comités qui ont pour tâche d'accélérer le rythme et d'étendre l'application de l'arabisation de la fonction publique. Enfin, une commission d'enquête a été chargée par le Ministre principal d'Aden, en août 1963, d'examiner l'importante question des conditions à remplir pour obtenir le droit de vote et pour être éligible au Conseil législatif. Cette commission, qui était composée entièrement d'autochtones, et où toutes les nuances politiques étaient représentées, a achevé ses travaux dernièrement. Son avenir sera discuté prochainement entre le Gouvernement britannique et les ministres d'Aden.

156. En ce qui concerne les autres Etats de la Fédération, leurs dirigeants et leurs Conseils d'Etat comprennent qu'ils auront intérêt à aligner leur régime électoral sur la pratique suivie dans d'autres pays, dès que les conditions locales le permettront. Des progrès appréciables ont été accomplis dans ce sens au cours de l'année écoulée; c'est ainsi que le Conseil de l'Etat de Shaib compte maintenant huit membres élus; des élections ont eu lieu dans l'Etat de Fadhl en novembre dernier et des élections municipales se tiendront à Lahej à la fin de 1963. Ainsi, 1963 a été une année de progrès en Arabie du Sud et l'adhésion d'Aden à la Fédération a entraîné d'importantes modifications d'ordre administratif, politique, économique et social.

157. Il faut encore du temps pour évaluer les conséquences de tous ces changements. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni espère que les Etats qui n'ont pas encore adhéré à la Fédération décideront d'en faire partie, mais c'est d'eux que doit venir la décision. De même, il appartient aux membres de la Fédération de décider de la forme précise qu'elle prendra. Ce qui importe, c'est que l'Arabie du Sud avance vers l'indépendance le plus rapidement possible, conformément aux vœux de ses habitants et à la politique que suit le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni.

158. Je voudrais maintenant dire quelques mots au sujet des derniers événements survenus en Guyane britannique et auxquels plusieurs représentants ont fait allusion. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a annoncé le 17 juillet 1963 que si les dirigeants des partis politiques n'arrivaient pas à se mettre d'accord il convoquerait de nouveau la conférence constitutionnelle en octobre 1963 au plus tard. Cette déclaration est consignée au chapitre X du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5446/Rev.1, annexe III]. Ainsi, la décision de convoquer de nouveau la conférence a été prise avant que les deux dirigeants aient été entendus par le Sous-Comité du Comité des Vingt-Quatre en septembre 1963 et, lorsque les dirigeants se sont réunis à Londres en octobre, ils n'étaient pas encore parvenus à un accord.

159. En fait, ils ont écrit une lettre au ministre responsable, M. Sandys, l'informant de cet état de choses et demandant au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de régler de sa propre autorité toutes les questions constitutionnelles en suspens. Ils se sont engagés à accepter la décision que prendrait le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni. Il n'est donc pas vrai, comme l'a prétendu le représentant de la Pologne, que la décision que M. Sandys a fait connaître le 31 octobre ait été "imposée" à la Guyane britannique. Ce sont les dirigeants politiques eux-mêmes qui ont demandé à M. Sandys de régler les différends d'ordre constitutionnel subsistant.

160. Il n'est pas exact non plus de dire, comme certains représentants l'ont affirmé, que le Royaume-Uni pratique une politique consistant à diviser pour régner. M. Sandys a souligné que le but de la solution qu'il proposait était de parvenir à un degré raisonnable de confiance et de coopération entre les races. De nouvelles élections vont avoir lieu prochainement, après quoi le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni convoquera une autre conférence pour régler tous les problèmes constitutionnels en suspens et fixer une date pour l'indépendance. Mon gouvernement désire vivement voir la Guyane britannique accéder à l'indépendance le plus tôt possible et notre objectif est toujours d'éliminer les obstacles à l'indépendance et de mettre sur pied une constitution qui recueille l'appui de toutes les races.

161. Un certain nombre de représentants ont parlé de la situation en Rhodésie du Nord. La situation actuelle est la suivante: une nouvelle constitution a été annoncée le 5 novembre 1963. En vertu de ses dispositions, le Conseil exécutif sera remplacé par un cabinet composé d'un premier ministre et de 13 autres ministres au maximum, tandis que le Conseil législatif comptera au total 75 membres, dont 65 seront élus sur la liste électorale principale, c'est-à-dire celle des circonscriptions africaines et 10 sur la liste réservée, en d'autres termes, celle des circonscriptions européennes.

162. Cette constitution fait suite à l'accord intervenu dans une large mesure entre les divers dirigeants politiques lors des récentes discussions dirigées par le Gouverneur. Les élections au nouveau Conseil législatif auront lieu en janvier 1964 et la constitution entrera en vigueur après ces élections. La Rhodésie du Nord jouira alors d'une pleine autonomie interne, comparable à celle qui existe actuellement au Nyassaland.

163. Je voudrais maintenant parler de l'évolution de la situation aux îles Fidji, qui semble avoir préoccupé quelque peu le représentant du Libéria [1267ème séance] et le représentant du Népal. Je tiens à assurer le représentant du Libéria que l'attitude de mon gouvernement n'a rien qui dénote la suffisance et que nous n'avons pas l'intention d'interrompre l'évolution politique des îles Fidji. Une nouvelle constitution est entrée en vigueur en avril 1963 et des élections ont eu lieu au mois de mai sur la base du suffrage élargi. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni propose maintenant la convocation d'une conférence à laquelle lui-même et les représentants de l'opinion des îles Fidji s'efforceront d'arrêter de concert des propositions concrètes en vue de stimuler les progrès politiques. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a également suggéré l'adoption en 1964 de mesures provisoires qui feraient progresser les territoires vers l'autonomie interne. J'espère que ces précisions rassureront le représentant du Libéria.

164. Un certain nombre de représentants ont évoqué la situation existant dans les territoires du Bassouto-land, du Betchouanaland et du Souaziland. Je tiens à leur dire que le rapport de la Commission constitutionnelle du Bassoutoland est maintenant terminé et qu'il en est de même des consultations relatives à la révision de la Constitution de 1960 qui ont eu lieu entre le Commissaire de Sa Majesté au Betchouanaland et les représentants de la population de ce territoire. Ces questions sont maintenant examinées au Conseil national du Bassoutoland et au Conseil législatif du Betchouanaland.

165. En ce qui concerne le Souaziland, nous espérons organiser des élections dans ce territoire au début de 1964, en vertu des dispositions de la nouvelle constitution qui représente un compromis équitable entre les vues de toutes les parties intéressées de ce territoire.

166. Je voudrais maintenant dire quelques mots au sujet de la Gambie. Ma délégation note avec reconnaissance la réaction favorable des représentants du Chili [1267ème séance], du Népal et de l'Irak [1269ème séance] devant la possibilité d'une association entre la Gambie et le Sénégal; tout comme la délégation sénégalaise, ma délégation regrette que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre n'ait mentionné ni l'accèsion de la Gambie à l'autonomie interne en octobre, ni la visite du groupe d'experts que le Secrétaire général avait chargé de formuler un avis au sujet de la forme des relations futures entre la Gambie et le Sénégal. Le rapport de ce groupe d'experts est attendu avec le plus vif intérêt par les gouvernements intéressés.

167. Ces observations sur l'évolution des territoires sous administration britannique montreront à l'Assemblée que nous accélérons le plus possible les progrès constitutionnels. C'est donc avec surprise et regret que j'ai écouté le discours du représentant de la Hongrie [1268ème séance]; celui-ci a non seulement passé sous silence les réalisations à l'actif de mon gouvernement en matière de décolonisation, mais il a, semble-t-il, recherché toutes les occasions d'attaquer mon pays et de déformer les paroles de notre ministre des affaires étrangères, afin de les faire cadrer avec sa thèse. Lorsque notre ministre a dit que, en cet âge nucléaire, nous devons tous apprendre à résister à la tentation de résoudre nos problèmes par la force, il n'entendait pas par là, comme le représentant de la Hongrie l'a soutenu, que le statu quo devait être maintenu partout. Ce qu'il a voulu dire — et il l'a d'ailleurs dit — c'est qu'il fallait modifier le statu quo par des négociations et non par la force des armes. Le représentant de la Hongrie a cru bon, pour des raisons qui lui sont propres, de s'arrêter au milieu de la citation, mais si les représentants se reportent au procès-verbal, ils verront que lord Home avait poursuivi en ces termes:

"Il est vrai, bien entendu, que toute nation a le droit de légitime défense et ce droit est nécessaire pour le cas où un de ses voisins serait pris d'une folie meurtrière, mais l'exemple et la négociation, la patience et la persévérance sont les seuls moyens légitimes de modifier le statu quo. C'est là une vérité que toutes les nations, grandes et petites, doivent admettre parce que, je le répète, une bombe nucléaire peut exploser en Europe, en Union soviétique ou en Amérique, mais la poussière nucléaire ne connaît pas de frontières et, si cette vérité n'est pas admise, tous les hommes périront." [1222ème séance, par. 61.]

Lord Home a également exprimé l'avis que l'Union soviétique, les Etats-Unis et les pays d'Europe devaient "donner cet exemple de changement pacifique". Vous constaterez que l'accent est mis non pas sur le maintien rigide du statu quo mais sur un changement pacifique. Il n'est guère nécessaire de rappeler à l'Assemblée que le but principal de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, tel qu'il est énoncé à l'Article 1 de notre charte, est de "... réaliser par des moyens pacifiques, conformément aux principes de la justice et du droit international, l'ajustement ou le règlement de différends ou de situations, de caractère international, susceptibles de mener à une rupture de la paix". Quiconque ne croit pas en la solution des problèmes par la voie de négociations n'a pas sa place dans notre organisation.

168. Avant de terminer, je voudrais également parler d'une question générale — les accusations de néo-colonialisme que l'on prodigue à l'adresse de mon pays et d'autres pays toutes les fois que les territoires dépendants ou les problèmes que rencontrent les territoires nouvellement indépendants sont discutés. Il est temps de reconnaître la vraie nature de ces accusations: une tactique de guerre froide des communistes qui va à l'encontre des faits. Autrefois, l'un des mythes communistes consistait à affirmer qu'une société capitaliste avancée avait besoin de colonies pour rester prospère et que sans colonies elle s'effondrerait. Lorsque, mis en présence d'un fait évident, les communistes ont dû constater que le Royaume-Uni est plus prospère que jamais bien qu'il ait accordé l'autonomie ou l'indépendance à la plupart de ses colonies, ils ont changé de tactique et ont inventé l'argument selon lequel notre prospérité se fonderait sur l'exploitation économique de nos anciennes colonies, et même de tous les pays en voie de développement. Il semble que par "exploitation" on entende non seulement le commerce avec ces pays mais aussi l'aide qui leur est fournie sous forme d'investissements de capitaux, de source publique ou privée. En d'autres termes, tous les pays qui acceptent l'aide ou qui encouragent les investissements privés étrangers en provenance du monde libre se trouvent être des néo-colonies et ne sont nullement des Etats indépendants.

169. Mon gouvernement rejette la thèse d'après laquelle les relations des pays en voie de développement avec le reste du monde doivent se fonder sur l'absorption ou l'exploitation. Nous reconnaissons pleinement l'existence des pays en voie de développement en tant qu'Etats ayant des droits, des besoins et un avenir qui leur sont propres. Nous ne les considérons pas comme des phénomènes temporaires devant être utilisés au profit du monde libre ou absorbés par l'empire communiste. Nous ne contestons le droit d'aucun pays d'arrêter sa propre politique, intérieure ou extérieure. Dans le domaine économique, nous reconnaissons sans réserve le droit qu'ont tous les pays, y compris les pays en voie de développement, d'établir des relations commerciales ou de recevoir une aide s'ils jugent que c'est dans leur intérêt bien compris. Une déclaration de principe de cet ordre serait entièrement superflue sans les accusations de néo-colonialisme qui ont été lancées si souvent contre mon gouvernement. Nous rejetons énergiquement ces accusations. Permettez-moi de citer les paroles du Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni lorsqu'il s'est adressé à l'Assemblée le 1er octobre 1963. Il a dit alors ce qui suit:

"Les pays nouvellement indépendants ont-ils besoin de capitaux pour leur développement ou non? Le plus grand problème qui se pose actuellement au monde est celui de l'écart qui grandit entre les revenus des pays riches et ceux des pays pauvres. N'en est-il pas ainsi?"

"... Notre gouvernement souhaite ardemment consacrer une partie du revenu national aux investissements dans les pays sous-développés.

"... J'espère donc... que nous entendrons moins parler de néo-colonialisme. Le mieux que l'on en puisse dire, à mon avis, c'est qu'il s'agit là d'un grief inventé de toutes pièces, et le pire, c'est qu'il est dangereux parce qu'il encourage la pauvreté et le racisme." [1222ème séance, par. 84 à 86.]

170. Ma délégation n'a nullement l'intention de faire renaître la guerre froide à l'Organisation, mais si cette campagne artificielle se poursuit nous n'hésiterons pas à puiser dans le dossier volumineux d'informations dont nous disposons pour montrer qu'en réalité les rôles sont renversés.

171. On peut voir la preuve de l'absurdité de cette propagande dans le fait que les gouvernements du monde entier reconnaissent la contribution importante que les investissements en provenance de l'extérieur peuvent apporter au développement de leur économie. Les prospections fructueuses de pétrole dans la Nigéria par la Shell Oil Company et la construction du complexe sidérurgique de Durgapur en Inde ne sont que deux exemples des réalisations remarquables obtenues récemment avec l'aide de sociétés ou de capitaux britanniques. Les hommes d'Etat de toute l'Afrique ont répété que leurs gouvernements poursuivaient une politique consistant à encourager les investissements en provenance de l'extérieur.

172. Lorsqu'il a pris la parole à Londres le 17 septembre 1963, M. Kawawa, premier ministre du Tanganyika, a réaffirmé que la politique de son gouvernement était de créer des conditions favorables aux investissements étrangers. Le Gouvernement du Congo (Léopoldville) a promulgué, en septembre dernier, une nouvelle loi garantissant les investissements étrangers et nationaux dans son pays. Des lois analogues ont été adoptées dans d'autres pays. Le président Nkrumah, parlant à Tema, le 24 août 1963, lors de l'inauguration d'une fabrique de savon de la Lever Brothers, a déclaré: "Le climat favorable aux investissements créé par le Gouvernement ghanéen permet des réalisations industrielles telles que cette fabrique de savon... qui a été construite par l'une des sociétés les plus sérieuses opérant en Afrique... les capitaux que les sociétés du monde entier investissent dans l'unité africaine présentent aujourd'hui autant d'importance pour elles que pour tous les Africains."

173. Ce ne sont pas des paroles ou des actes de personnes dupes de l'exploitation étrangère. Au contraire, ils témoignent de la reconnaissance du fait que l'indépendance politique ne présuppose pas automatiquement un développement économique, que les pays nouvellement indépendants continuent d'avoir besoin de l'aide et du concours des pays industrialisés. Le commerce avec des pays amis et l'aide de ces derniers, loin de constituer une forme de néo-colonialisme sont des facteurs vitaux dans la réalisation du progrès économique et dans la création et la répartition des richesses souhaitées par tous les peuples. Maints pays nouvellement indépendants ont accepté des investissements de capitaux de pays appartenant au bloc soviétique et ont noué des relations commerciales avec ces pays. Le commerce des pays du bloc soviétique est aux mains de l'Etat et les investissements relèvent directement du gouvernement et non des sociétés privées. Le commerce de l'Etat et les investissements contrôlés par l'Etat semblent offrir de meilleures occasions à la mainmise du gouvernement et au néo-colonialisme que le commerce et les investissements privés. Il appartient aux pays en voie de développement de faire en sorte qu'il n'y ait aucune mainmise étrangère quelle qu'elle soit sur leur territoire.

174. Je termine mon intervention comme je l'ai commencée en parlant de l'accession prochaine à l'indépendance du Kenya, de Zanzibar, de Malte et du Nyassaland, qui sont autant de preuves tangibles de la sincérité de notre politique. On en trouvera d'autres preuves à l'annexe II du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5446/Rev.1] qui consigne un fait remarquable, à savoir qu'au cours de chaque mois de l'année écoulée des progrès considérables ont été réalisés dans nos territoires. Nous ne pouvons récrire l'histoire ni modifier les données de la géographie: nous devons faire face à la situation telle qu'elle existe et nous nous tournons vers l'Assemblée en lui demandant de comprendre les difficultés que nous rencontrons et d'apprécier avec réalisme la politique que nous appliquons. Quoi que puissent dire ceux qui nous critiquent au Comité des Vingt-Quatre ou à l'Assemblée, nous menons à bien notre tâche et nous ne ralentirons pas nos efforts tant que tous nos territoires n'auront pas accédé à l'autonomie et à l'indépendance conformément à la Charte.

Organisation des travaux

175. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous avons terminé la discussion générale du point 23. Etant donné que les délégations qui préparent les projets de résolution relatifs à ce point n'ont pas encore fini leur travail, et afin de leur permettre d'achever la préparation de ces documents et de les soumettre au Secrétariat, nous ne tiendrons pas de séance plénière demain matin. Nous reprendrons demain après-midi, à la séance plénière, l'examen du point 12 de l'ordre du jour, c'est-à-dire le chapitre du rapport du Conseil économique et social concernant la composition du Comité intergouvernemental Nations Unies/FAO pour le Programme alimentaire mondial, au sujet duquel la Deuxième Commission a présenté un rapport, ainsi que les chapitres relatifs aux questions sociales et aux droits de l'homme sur lesquels l'Assemblée a reçu un rapport de la Troisième Commission, et enfin un rapport de la Cinquième Commission relatif aux incidences financières du projet de résolution, recommandé par la Troisième Commission, concernant la convocation en 1964 d'une réunion de la Commission des droits de l'homme.

176. Il y aura deux séances plénières, vendredi 6 décembre, pour l'examen des projets de résolution relatifs au point 23 qui auront été soumis et pour le vote sur ces projets. J'espère que nous pourrons ainsi terminer vendredi l'examen de ce point.

La séance est levée à 23 h 35.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

EXAMEN DES PROJETS DE RESOLUTION

14. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): L'Assemblée va maintenant passer au deuxième point de son ordre du jour: l'examen du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/5446/Rev.1] et des huit projets de résolution qui concernent cette question. Comme vous le savez, la discussion générale de cette question est terminée. L'Assemblée doit donc maintenant prendre une décision sur les projets de résolution dont elle est saisie.

15. Je donne la parole au représentant des Etats-Unis.

16. M. ATTWOOD (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: En déposant l'amendement A/L.445 et Add.1, ma délégation a pour but de dissiper toute interprétation erronée du cinquième alinéa du préambule et d'harmoniser le style de cet alinéa avec celui du sixième alinéa du préambule et celui du paragraphe 1. Nous espérons que les auteurs examineront cet amendement avec bienveillance et l'accepteront.

17. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): L'Assemblée doit maintenant examiner le projet de résolution relatif à Aden [A/L.436 et Add.1]; le projet relatif à Malte [A/L.437 et Add.1 et 2]; le projet relatif aux îles Fidji [A/L.438 et Add.1]; le projet relatif à la Rhodésie du Nord [A/L.439 et Add.1]; le projet relatif au Nyassaland [A/L.440 et Add.1 et 2]; le projet relatif au Bassoutoland, au Betchouanaland et au Soudan [A/L.441 et Add.1 et 2]; le projet relatif à la Guyane britannique [A/L.442 et Add.1]; le projet relatif à la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2], et un amendement à ce dernier projet, amendement déposé par les Etats-Unis et l'Australie [A/L.443 et Add.1].

*Après le scrutin, le représentant de l'Islande a fait connaître au Président que, s'il avait été présent lors du vote, il se serait abstenu.

18. Je donnerai tout d'abord la parole aux orateurs qui, avant de voter, désirent expliquer leur vote sur tel ou tel des projets de résolution dont nous sommes saisis. Nous procéderons ensuite au vote sur les projets de résolution l'un après l'autre. Après le scrutin, je donnerai la parole aux autres orateurs qui souhaiteraient expliquer leur vote.

19. Je rappelle aux membres de l'Assemblée que, selon l'article 90 du règlement intérieur, le Président ne peut pas autoriser l'auteur d'une proposition ou d'un amendement à expliquer son vote sur sa proposition ou sur son amendement.

20. Je donne la parole aux représentants qui voudraient expliquer leur vote avant le scrutin.

21. M. CHANDERLI (Algérie): Nous célébrons cette semaine, avec des sentiments partagés, deux anniversaires particulièrement importants. Il y a trois ans, notre Assemblée adoptait ce que nous considérons comme la charte de la décolonisation, la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

22. D'autre part, peuples et gouvernements viennent de célébrer avec éclat le quinzième anniversaire de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme.

23. C'est dans ce contexte que ma délégation souhaite proposer quelques observations sur ce qui a été accompli et sur ce qui devrait être fait. Le Comité spécial, dont nous avons examiné le rapport [A/5446/Rev.1], a été certainement un instrument efficace dont l'activité ne pouvait que contribuer à accélérer la mise en œuvre intégrale des dispositions de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV).

24. Cependant, malgré son activité, malgré l'importance et l'objectivité des rapports qu'il nous a soumis, il apparaît que, dans le monde où nous vivons, il y a encore trop de peuples et de territoires dépendants.

25. Il nous appartient d'œuvrer pour que le colonialisme, condamné par la Charte et l'histoire, disparaisse le plus rapidement possible. C'est dans cet esprit que ma délégation appuie la prolongation de la mission du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et souhaite même renforcer son autorité.

26. Je ne reviendrai pas sur ce qui a été dit quant aux difficultés rencontrées par le Comité spécial pour accomplir sa mission. Une tâche considérable l'attend encore et il ne pourra la remplir qu'avec la coopération franche et totale des puissances administrantes. Or, dans quatre cas au moins, il y a réellement menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, et dans ces quatre cas, les puissances administrantes se refusent à collaborer avec le Comité spécial et, donc, à appliquer les termes de la résolution 1514 (XV).

Il s'agit de la situation en Rhodésie du Sud, du problème du Sud-Ouest africain, du conflit dans les territoires portugais et de la question d'Aden. Nous espérons vivement que dans ces quatre cas particuliers, comme dans d'autres, l'intérêt bien compris des Etats comme le respect des décisions de l'Assemblée amèneront les puissances coloniales à adapter leur politique aux impératifs d'un monde qui refuse de permettre que le colonialisme puisse exister plus longtemps.

27. A ce propos, ma délégation regrette que, dans le souci respectable d'éviter que des situations difficiles et parfois chaotiques soient engendrées par l'octroi trop rapide de l'indépendance à certains territoires, quelques délégations aient suggéré que l'indépendance devrait être envisagée à plus long terme. Ma délégation craint que la générosité manifestée de bonne foi à l'égard des puissances coloniales ne soit pas payée de retour. Lorsqu'une puissance administrante s'est évertuée parfois pendant des siècles à ne pas préparer à l'indépendance les peuples sous sa domination, nous pouvons légitimement douter de sa volonté de modifier brusquement une attitude séculaire. Nous pensons donc que nous devons nous en tenir aux termes de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui prévoit que l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux doit être immédiat. Autrement dit, si la bonne volonté des puissances administrantes et leur assistance doivent être demandées dans cette conjoncture, c'est dans le cadre de cette résolution et surtout une fois qu'elles l'auront appliquée. Qu'elles octroient l'indépendance d'abord et qu'elles assistent par la suite, s'il y a lieu, les territoires nouvellement indépendants. La crainte qui a été manifestée ici concernant de nouvelles formes de dépendance qui pourraient surgir d'une situation où un pays nouvellement indépendant demeurerait sous le contrôle indirect de telle ou telle puissance, n'est pas à nos yeux un argument suffisant pour retarder l'accession de ce pays à la souveraineté internationale. Il appartiendra à la communauté internationale, aux Nations Unies et aux peuples de ces territoires eux-mêmes de veiller à ce que leur indépendance soit réelle.

28. Dans un autre ordre d'idées, il a été suggéré ici que parfois les indépendances nouvelles acquises pouvaient poser des problèmes territoriaux. Nous savons tous que des problèmes de cette nature se sont posés au cours des âges à tous les Etats du monde. Nous savons que si, dans le passé, des litiges de cette sorte ont été réglés par les armes, il ne peut plus en être ainsi de nos jours. Bien plus, la Charte des Nations Unies, comme celles des grandes organisations internationales, telles que l'Organisation des Etats américains ou l'Organisation de l'unité africaine, recommandent la recherche de solutions pacifiques et négociées à ces problèmes, tout en précisant que l'intégrité territoriale des Etats et le respect de leurs frontières devraient, en principe, demeurer intangibles. S'il fallait remettre en question les frontières des Etats jeunes comme celles des Etats plus anciens sur la base de thèses géographiques ou historiques, c'est toute la carte politique du monde qu'il faudrait reconsidérer. La société moderne à laquelle nous appartenons se doit de tenir compte du caractère explosif que peuvent représenter des revendications territoriales à l'heure des grands ensement, à l'heure de l'interdépendance économique, à l'heure de l'unité et de la paix.

29. Ces problèmes, qui se posent à beaucoup d'autres d'entre nous, devront recevoir leur solution dans la compréhension mutuelle, dans l'intérêt des peuples et des Etats, dans le refus d'imposer par la force des formules qui ne peuvent être viables qu'à la suite d'accords librement consentis. Bien plus, à l'heure où les jeunes Etats veulent apporter une contribution efficace à la décolonisation, nous serions malvenus et nous donnerions au monde un spectacle pénible en étalant des querelles que nous pouvons régler fraternellement, hors de cette enceinte et dans l'application des recommandations de la Charte qui mettent l'accent sur l'intérêt et l'utilité des solutions négociées, dans le cadre bilatéral ou dans celui des organisations régionales.

30. En adoptant le rapport du Comité spécial, nous avons voulu exprimer notre volonté de participer activement à la libération des territoires dépendants. Nous avons voulu également manifester notre confiance à ce comité et, en même temps, en appeler à la raison des puissances administrantes pour qu'elles comprennent que le colonialisme a été une tare de l'humanité, et qu'elles comprennent aussi que les problèmes coloniaux, qui ont souvent été résolus par la violence, peuvent trouver leur solution par la coopération et le bon sens. Nous croyons que les enclaves conservées ici ou là par les grands empires du temps passé doivent disparaître pour faire place à des rapports nouveaux entre peuples, rapports fondés sur l'intérêt mutuel et sur la nécessité de construire un monde d'où seraient éliminées les causes de tension. C'est le sens que nous donnons au soutien que nous apportons aux travaux du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, en ajoutant que toute tentative en vue de freiner le mouvement de l'histoire dans ce domaine est non seulement vouée à l'échec mais peut donner lieu à de nouveaux conflits qui seraient indignes des grands courants contemporains, tels qu'ils sont contenus dans les textes qui nous lient et qui s'appellent: Charte des Nations Unies, Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

31. Mon gouvernement n'a pas à faire la preuve de son anticolonialisme et n'a pas cru devoir infliger à l'Assemblée un long discours à cet effet. Il importait cependant de faire entendre notre voix dans ce concert des peuples qui expriment du fond des âges leur besoin éternel de liberté et de dignité.

32. M. YOMEKPE (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais tout d'abord annoncer que la délégation ghanéenne est co-auteur du projet de résolution A/L.442 et Add.1, qui concerne la Guyane britannique. Je crois comprendre que le nom du Ghana a été omis par erreur dans la liste primitive des auteurs.

33. Ma délégation a déjà fait connaître ses idées sur le travail du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Nous avons grande confiance dans le travail du Comité; nous estimons que ses méthodes et ses procédés sont conformes à l'esprit des résolutions 1514 (XV) et 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale.

34. Nous voudrions pourtant faire consigner au procès-verbal la façon dont nous interprétons la création de ce comité. Par sa résolution 1654 (XVI), l'Assemblée générale avait décidé de créer un comité spécial de 17 membres, désignés par son Président, en vue de la mise en œuvre de sa résolution 1514 (XV).

35. Au cours de sa dix-septième session, l'Assemblée générale a élargi la composition de ce comité, qui compte maintenant 24 membres. Nous avons cru comprendre alors que la composition du comité reposerait sur un système de roulement, analogue à celui qui s'applique au Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes. Nous comprenons bien qu'il est actuellement un peu tard pour faire des propositions concrètes sur le système de roulement qu'il faudrait adopter pour le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, mais nous souhaiterions vivement que l'on tienne compte de cette possibilité à la dix-neuvième session de l'Assemblée générale, et nous pensons que le Secrétaire général devrait peut-être étudier les moyens de parvenir à ce résultat.

36. Voici en quelques mots notre position, telle que nous voudrions la voir consignée au procès-verbal: la délégation ghanéenne estime que la composition du Comité des Vingt-Quatre ne devrait pas être fixe, mais obéir à un roulement. Nous ne voudrions pas faire des propositions expresses pour la durée du mandat des membres du Comité, mais chaque membre, à notre avis, devrait y siéger au moins deux ans.

37. A ce propos, je désire rappeler que la Quatrième Commission est actuellement saisie d'un projet de résolution sur la dissolution du Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes [A/5673, par. 28]. Si elle adopte ce projet et si l'Assemblée le vote par la suite en séance plénière, il faudra peut-être se demander ce que deviendront les puissances administrantes qui sont actuellement membres de ce Comité et ne font pas partie du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. C'est une question qu'il faudrait également étudier, compte tenu des idées que nous venons d'exposer.

38. M. LICHTVELD (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation désire parler du projet de résolution relatif à la Guyane britannique [A/L.442 et Add.1].

39. La Guyane britannique est un territoire voisin et ami du Surinam, lequel est une des trois parties autonomes du Royaume des Pays-Bas. C'est pourquoi ma délégation s'intéresse tout spécialement au développement politique et au bien-être de ce pays et souhaite appuyer au maximum l'exercice de son droit à l'autodétermination. Il y a plusieurs années, le Surinam et les Antilles néerlandaises ont exercé ce droit; s'ils désiraient aujourd'hui modifier leur statut politique, il leur serait parfaitement loisible de le faire; nous pensons en effet que le droit à l'autonomie est un droit permanent et dynamique, et non un droit statique, lié à un moment donné ou prédéterminé. C'est pourquoi nous appuyons sans réserve le paragraphe 1 du projet de résolution qui va être mis aux voix. Ce paragraphe réaffirme un droit imprescriptible du peuple de la Guyane britannique, un droit qui appartient à tous les peuples du monde. Or, un élément intrinsèque de ce droit est le droit qu'a le peuple de déterminer lui-même quand, où et comment certains changements transitionnels doivent intervenir dans son statut. Le peuple, et lui seul, doit fixer la date de ces transitions, leur échelonnement ainsi que les modalités et la forme de son indépendance. Il est évident que cela ne peut et ne doit se faire — si tel est le but souhaité — que de concert avec la puissance administrante, s'il y en a une, chaque fois que cette puissance se montre passablement disposée à favoriser les transitions que réclame la population. A cet égard, les Membres des Nations Unies — n'y en aurait-il qu'un, ou seraient-ils tous d'accord — n'ont pas le droit de demander plus de célérité ou des changements immédiats, sans tenir compte des vœux des parties intéressées.

40. En ce qui concerne le cas dont traite le projet de résolution sur lequel nous allons voter, le peuple de la Guyane britannique et le Royaume-Uni sont les seuls auxquels il incombe de déterminer la cadence à laquelle seront appliquées les décisions prises de concert. C'est pourquoi le paragraphe 2, qui demande que l'on fixe sans délai de la date de l'indépendance pour nos amis de la Guyane britannique, nous paraît inacceptable. Nous voterons donc contre ce paragraphe. Il s'agit d'une question de principe, d'un corollaire de ce même droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, au cas où l'indépendance est le but souhaité, que nous appuyons avec la dernière énergie.

41. En conséquence, ma délégation sera obligée de s'abstenir lors du vote sur l'ensemble du projet de résolution. Le même principe nous guidera lors du vote des autres projets dont nous sommes saisis.

42. M. KING (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation demande que l'Assemblée vote sur les projets de résolution relatifs à Aden, aux îles Fidji, au Bassoutoland, au Betchouanaland et au Souaziland, à la Guyane britannique et au maintien en fonctions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/L.436 et Add.1, A/L.438 et Add.1, A/L.441 et Add.1 et Add.2, A/L.442 et A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2]. Je voudrais expliquer mon vote sur ces projets de résolution.

43. Le projet de résolution relatif à Aden [A/L.436] est pratiquement identique à celui que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a adopté le 19 juillet 1963; et les idées de ma délégation sur cette résolution sont pleinement exposées aux paragraphes 472 à 476 du chapitre V du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5446/Rev.1]. Ma délégation a également consacré à la question d'Aden une grande partie de la déclaration qu'elle a faite lors de la discussion générale en séance plénière, le 4 décembre 1963 [1273ème séance]; je ne pense pas qu'il soit besoin de redéfinir maintenant la position de mon gouvernement. Bref, ma délégation est opposée au projet de résolution parce qu'il reprend les conclusions et les recommandations du Sous-Comité d'Aden, conclusions et recommandations que mon gouvernement a jugées inacceptables. Ma délégation votera donc contre le projet de résolution.

44. Je passe maintenant au projet de résolution relatif aux îles Fidji [A/L.438 et Add.1]. Ce que ma délégation pense des progrès politiques et constitutionnels des îles Fidji est amplement indiqué au chapitre VII du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, en particulier aux paragraphes 105 à 109. Ma délégation reste naturellement fidèle aux idées qu'elle a exprimées et à l'attitude qu'elle a prise lors de la discussion de ce point au comité.

45. Le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis, et qui est à peu près identique à celui qu'avait adopté le Comité spécial, s'appuie sur une conception entièrement erronée de la situation qui règne aux îles Fidji et sur ce que désirent actuellement les Fidjiens. La Constitution actuelle, qui est entrée en vigueur cette année, a été adoptée avec le plein accord des représentants du peuple fidjien et elle prévoit déjà des élections libres et la mise en place d'institutions représentatives sur une base conforme aux vœux de la population.

46. Mon gouvernement a pour politique de s'acquitter, aux îles Fidji, de l'obligation que lui fait la Charte, de conduire ce territoire vers l'autonomie, en tenant compte des circonstances particulières à ce territoire et aux désirs exprimés par sa population. Au Comité spécial, ma délégation a exposé les circonstances particulières à ce territoire et a également précisé que mon gouvernement n'empêchera en aucune manière les îles Fidji d'accéder un jour à l'indépendance si tel est le vœu de la population. Mais la population a indiqué clairement que le problème de l'indépendance ne la préoccupait pas pour le moment. Conformément à la politique que je viens de rappeler, les pouvoirs passent à la population locale selon les circonstances et selon ses vœux, et les mesures intérimaires dans le sens de l'autonomie interne, mesures dont ma délégation a parlé en séance plénière au cours de la discussion générale, le 4 décembre 1963 [1273ème séance], marquent la dernière en date des étapes franchies dans cette direction.

47. De plus, depuis que le Comité spécial a adopté son projet de résolution sur les îles Fidji, le Gouvernement britannique a proposé de réunir une conférence, d'ici un an environ, en vue d'élaborer un nouveau système constitutionnel qui maintiendra une association continue avec le Royaume-Uni et qui favorisera de nouveaux progrès vers l'autonomie interne. Cette conférence examinera tous les aspects de la Constitution fidjienne que les représentants de la population de ces îles souhaiteront discuter, y compris la question du droit de vote et celle de la composition du Conseil législatif et du Conseil exécutif.

48. Mon gouvernement s'étant prononcé pour cette conférence, ma délégation s'abstiendra lors du vote sur le projet de résolution A/L.438 et Add.1. Il ne faut pourtant pas interpréter cette abstention comme signifiant que mon gouvernement a choisi telle ou telle solution pour la constitution des îles Fidji. Il appartiendra aux représentants de la population fidjienne de prendre eux-mêmes une décision à ce sujet, en consultation avec le Gouvernement britannique, et c'est précisément à cette fin que la conférence doit se réunir.

49. Quant au projet de résolution relatif au Bassoutoland, au Betchouanaland et au Souaziland [A/L.441 et Add.1 et 2], ma délégation a signalé dans son intervention dans la discussion générale, la semaine dernière, qu'une conférence constituante s'est tenue cette année au sujet du Souaziland et que le Gouvernement britannique a proposé une nouvelle constitution, qui tente de concilier les diverses thèses qui se sont fait jour à cette conférence. Les élections prévues en vertu des dispositions de la nouvelle Constitution auront lieu au premier semestre de 1964. Au Bassou-toland et au Betchoualand, la constitution a fait l'objet d'un examen local, et les représentants de tous les partis politiques ont pris part à ces consultations. Des propositions qui visent à remanier les deux constitutions sont actuellement débattues au Parlement du Bassoutoland et à celui du Betchoualand; le Gouvernement britannique pense recevoir bientôt les recommandations de ces deux Parlements.

50. Ces trois territoires sont actuellement plus ou moins proches de l'autonomie; une fois ce stade atteint, leur peuple disposera de moyens constitutionnels pour faire connaître ses vœux quant à son futur statut. Le Gouvernement britannique reconnaît que l'accession à l'indépendance est une aspiration naturelle et légitime du peuple de ces territoires. Il n'a nullement l'intention d'imposer une solution arrêtée d'avance et n'a aucun intérêt à agir ainsi. Comme dans d'autres territoires, il appartiendra aux habitants de chacun de ces trois territoires de décider en pleine connaissance de cause de la forme de statut définitif qui leur conviendrait le mieux. Si un de ces territoires souhaite demeurer associé au Royaume-Uni sous une force ou sous une autre, cette question fera l'objet de négociations.

51. Ainsi mon gouvernement fait tout le nécessaire pour favoriser le progrès politique et constitutionnel du Bassoutoland, du Betchoualand et du Souaziland, et n'entend nullement le retarder. Or, le projet de résolution ne tient pas compte de la situation qui règne actuellement dans les trois territoires ni des événements survenus au cours des derniers mois. C'est pourquoi ma délégation votera contre ce texte.

52. Je voudrais maintenant parler du projet de résolution relatif à la Guyane britannique [A/L.442 et Add.1]. Comme ma délégation l'a signalé au cours de son intervention dans la discussion générale, le 4 décembre 1963, les dirigeants des partis politiques de la Guyane britannique ont demandé à mon gouvernement de régler de sa propre autorité toutes les questions de constitution qui demeureraient pendantes et se sont engagés à accepter la décision que prendrait le Gouvernement britannique. En réponse à cette demande, mon gouvernement a proposé une solution dont le but est de créer un degré passable de confiance et de coopération entre les races. De nouvelles élections vont avoir lieu incessamment, après quoi le Gouvernement britannique réunira une nouvelle conférence pour résoudre toutes les questions de constitution qui continueraient à se poser et fixer une date pour l'indépendance. Comme il ne saurait être question de fixer cette date avant que ces diverses étapes ne soient franchies, ma délégation s'abstiendra lors du vote sur le projet de résolution relatif à la Guyane britannique. Toutefois, je voudrais souligner que le Royaume-Uni souhaite vivement que la Guyane britannique devienne indépendante le plus tôt possible et que notre objectif reste d'écarter les obstacles sur le chemin de l'indépendance et de faire voir le jour à une constitution qui ait l'appui de toutes les races.

53. Enfin, je voudrais expliquer la position de ma délégation au sujet du projet de résolution relatif à la reconduction du mandat du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2] ainsi que sur l'amendement que les Etats-Unis et l'Australie proposent [A/L.445 et Add.1] d'apporter à ce texte.

54. En de nombreuses occasions, ma délégation a exposé au Comité spécial sa position. Nous ne pouvons pas accepter l'intervention de l'Assemblée, de ses comités ou de ses sous-comités dans l'administration des territoires dont nous demeurons responsables. En particulier, les idées de ma délégation sur la question des missions de visite dans les territoires sous administration britannique ont été pleinement exposées dans l'intervention que ma délégation a faite au cours de la discussion générale, le 4 décembre 1963. Nous estimons en somme que ces missions interrompraient le processus normal du progrès politique et auraient pour effet de compliquer le dialogue constant qui se tient entre la puissance administrante et les dirigeants des territoires et retarderaient ainsi l'heure de l'indépendance au lieu de l'avancer.

55. Nous nous acquitterons de nos responsabilités pleinement et sans crainte, et les réalisations des quinze dernières années témoignent amplement du succès de notre politique à cet égard. L'accession de Zanzibar à l'indépendance hier, et celle du Kenya demain, en sont de nouvelles preuves.

56. Les termes du projet de résolution [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2] ne tiennent pas, aux yeux de ma délégation, suffisamment compte des progrès réalisés dans le passé et ne sont pas non plus en harmonie avec la position prise par mon gouvernement sur certaines questions fondamentales. En particulier, ma délégation ne saurait convenir que le cinquième alinéa du préambule s'applique à mon gouvernement. Ma délégation appuiera donc l'amendement des Etats-Unis d'Amérique et de l'Australie [A/L.445 et Add.1]. Mais l'adoption de cet amendement ne supprimera pas toutes les objections que ma délégation fait au projet de résolution; nous nous abstiendrons donc lors du vote sur l'ensemble du projet de résolution.

58. Tout d'abord, comme la délégation japonaise l'a dit bien souvent dans le passé, nous sommes fermement opposés au colonialisme, et nous espérons que l'anachronisme et l'injustice qu'il représente disparaîtront bientôt. Comme notre Ministre des affaires étrangères, M. Ohira, l'a dit dans la déclaration qu'il a faite à cette tribune le 20 septembre 1963, au début de la session:

"Le colonialisme existe toujours et doit être dénoncé comme étant contraire au progrès humain."
[1209ème séance, par. 18.]

Nous éprouvons des sentiments de vive sympathie pour les peuples qui subissent encore le joug colonial et nous sommes profondément solidaires de leurs aspirations à la liberté et à l'indépendance. Il faut, à notre avis, faire tous nos efforts pour les aider à atteindre leurs buts aussi rapidement que possible.

59. Fidèle à sa position fondamentale d'opposition au colonialisme, ma délégation a très soigneusement étudié les huit projets de résolution. Il nous semble, je dois le dire, que certains de ces textes, que je n'examinerai pas en détail, cherchent à aller trop loin et trop vite pour l'instant. Nous estimons qu'ils risquent de ralentir la décolonisation des territoires en cause au lieu de l'accélérer. Nous serons donc obligés de nous abstenir sur ces projets de résolution.

60. Je voudrais en particulier commenter brièvement le projet de résolution [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2] relatif à la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Le paragraphe 3 de ce texte nous cause quelque souci. Nous souscrivons entièrement à beaucoup d'éléments du rapport du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre [A/5446/Rev.1], mais il s'en trouve d'autres que nous ne pouvons pas approuver. Pour cette raison, nous ne pouvons pas nous rallier à l'approbation sans réserve exprimée au paragraphe 3 du rapport du Comité spécial.

61. De plus, certains passages du projet de résolution nous paraissent trop catégoriques ou trop vagues et nous ne pouvons pas y souscrire pleinement.

62. Sous réserve des observations que je viens de faire, ma délégation pense que, dans son ensemble, le projet de résolution s'efforce, de façon constructive, de trouver des solutions aux problèmes qui nous sont posés; nous voterons donc pour l'ensemble de ce dernier projet de résolution.

63. M. GONZALEZ (Costa Rica) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Mon pays votera pour le projet de résolution relatif à la question de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique [A/L.442 et Add.1]. Il désire ainsi affirmer sa politique anticolonialiste, d'autant plus qu'il s'agit d'une colonie située au cœur du continent latino-américain.

64. La délégation costaricienne voudrait déclarer très nettement qu'elle ne considère pas ce projet de résolution comme un obstacle au processus constitutionnel qui se déroule en Guyane britannique, mais au contraire comme un élément constructif de ce processus qui conduira le territoire, en temps voulu, vers la complète indépendance, dans des conditions qui permettront d'assurer le bien-être de la population grâce à des institutions démocratiques fermement établies.

65. M. HAY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais expliquer la position de ma délégation à l'égard du projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2. Je n'expliquerai pas notre vote sur les autres projets de résolution, car ma délégation a déjà fait connaître sa position à ce sujet au cours des débats du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre.

66. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2, ma délégation a bon nombre d'importantes réserves à faire. La première a trait à l'alinéa du préambule qui fait l'objet d'un amendement. Sans m'attarder sur ce point, je dirai simplement que, si cet amendement n'est pas adopté par l'Assemblée, nous serons obligés de nous abstenir lors du vote sur l'ensemble du projet. En effet, nous estimons que cet alinéa porte sur les responsabilités, le rôle et l'attitude des puissances administrantes, un jugement très sommaire qui, selon nous, ne correspond ni aux faits ni à l'esprit des débats du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre.

67. J'espère, toutefois, que l'amendement sera adopté et qu'en conséquence, notre réserve tombera. Si l'amendement est adopté, ma délégation votera pour l'ensemble du projet de résolution, car elle estime que, dans son esprit, ce texte est satisfaisant et répond aux vœux de l'Assemblée, comme c'était le cas des résolutions antérieures, qu'il est conforme à la Charte de façon générale et qu'il permettra à la coopération de se poursuivre entre les puissances administrantes et les autres membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Notre approbation s'accompagne cependant de certaines réserves. Tout d'abord, le paragraphe 3 nous invite à approuver dans sa totalité le rapport du Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1], comme l'a fait observer le représentant du Japon. Or, il y a dans le rapport du Comité spécial beaucoup de passages que nous approuvons, mais il y en a aussi beaucoup auxquels nous n'avons donné notre approbation ni au cours des débats du Comité ni au cours de ses votes. C'est pourquoi notre vote en faveur de l'ensemble du projet de résolution ne saurait être interprété comme une entière approbation du rapport du Comité spécial.

68. Le paragraphe 7 appelle de notre part une réserve, au sujet du statut des projets de résolution qu'adopte le Comité spécial. De l'avis de ma délégation, les résolutions du Comité spécial, pour importantes qu'elles soient, n'ont pas le même statut que celles de l'Assemblée générale, et ce serait une erreur que de mettre les résolutions du Comité sur le même plan que les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale, comme fait le paragraphe 7.

69. Nous avons, enfin, une réserve à faire au sujet du paragraphe 8, qui envisage que des groupes de visite pourraient se rendre dans les territoires qui sont sous administration des puissances intéressées. La position prise par ma délégation sur la question des groupes de visite a été clairement exposée au Comité des Vingt-Quatre. A notre avis, chaque visite éventuelle doit être considérée comme un cas d'espèces. Il ne serait pas prudent d'accepter ou de refuser indistinctement toutes les visites. Il y a des circonstances, particulières à chaque cas, que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre doit prendre en considération avant de recommander l'envoi d'une mission de visite. Selon ces circonstances, une telle décision pourra être sage ou inopportune. Un des facteurs à prendre en considération à propos des groupes de visite prévus dans le paragraphe 8 est l'attitude des autorités administrantes. De l'avis de ma délégation, il faut absolument, pour le bon fonctionnement du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, qu'une coopération s'établisse entre les membres qui ont des responsabilités administratives et ceux qui n'en ont pas. La coopération implique, par définition, des obligations réciproques. Les obligations des puissances administrantes sont clairement définies. Celles des autres pays le sont beaucoup moins, mais elles vont, de l'avis de ma délégation, jusqu'à des consultations suivies avec les puissances administrantes intéressées au sujet de toute question qui touche à l'administration d'un de leurs territoires. C'est un principe que l'Assemblée a admis dans le passé et qui est énoncé au paragraphe 6 de la résolution 1654 (XVI), par laquelle l'Assemblée générale a créé le Comité spécial. Par cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale:

"Autorise le Comité spécial à se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, lorsque cela pourrait être nécessaire pour lui permettre de s'acquitter efficacement de ses fonctions, en consultation avec les autorités compétentes".

Ma délégation considère que le paragraphe 6 de la résolution 1654 (XVI) est toujours applicable, et qu'au cas où les membres du Comité spécial jugeraient nécessaire de constituer un groupe de visite ils devraient, pour cela, entrer en consultation avec les autorités compétentes. Ce qui me confirme dans cette opinion, c'est que le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5446/Rev.1] traite au paragraphe 54 de son chapitre premier de ce problème particulier. Il est affirmé dans ce paragraphe que des consultations doivent avoir lieu avec les puissances administrantes et que la création d'un groupe de visite ne saurait impliquer une ingérence dans les affaires intérieures d'un territoire, non plus que l'intention de conférer au Comité spécial des responsabilités en matière d'administration, ces responsabilités incombant uniquement à la puissance administrante. En conséquence, ma délégation interprète le paragraphe 8 du projet de résolution [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2] comme ne portant pas atteinte à ce principe, antérieurement admis, que toute intention de créer un groupe de visite ou toute tentative en ce sens doit faire l'objet de consultations avec les autorités compétentes.

70. J'ai exposé dans les détails les réserves de ma délégation, mais je ne voudrais pas laisser l'impression que, selon nous, le Comité n'aurait pas dans l'ensemble joué un rôle utile et conforme aux résolutions de l'Assemblée générale, et qu'à condition de respecter les obligations de la coopération, obligations qui sont à la charge des deux parties associées, il ne continuerait pas à jouer ce rôle.

71. M. PALAR (Indonésie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation figurait parmi les auteurs des trois résolutions que l'Assemblée générale a adoptées sur la décolonisation, en 1960 [1514 (XV)], en 1961 [1654 (XVI)] et en 1962 [1810 (XVII)]. On pourrait se demander pourquoi nous ne nous sommes pas portés également co-auteurs de la quatrième résolution. En voici la raison. La déclaration que la délégation indonésienne a faite sur la question dont nous sommes saisis était presque exclusivement consacrée à la nécessité d'appliquer les résolutions sur la décolonisation aux petits et aux très petits territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance; or, nous regrettons vivement que cette idée n'ait pas été expressément formulée dans le projet de résolution sur la décolonisation [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2]. Cela ne veut pas dire que nous ne voterons pas pour le projet de résolution. En effet, au paragraphe 4 de ce projet, l'Assemblée générale:

"Prie le Comité spécial de continuer de rechercher les voies et moyens les meilleurs d'assurer l'application immédiate et intégrale de la Déclaration à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance et de rendre compte à l'Assemblée générale à sa dix-neuvième session au plus tard".

72. Les membres africains et asiatiques du Comité des Vingt-Quatre nous ont assuré que la question des petits et des très petits territoires recevrait évidemment du Comité toute l'attention qu'elle mérite. Ils y veilleront. C'est pourquoi nous pouvons appuyer sans réserve le projet de résolution.

73. Nous appuierons également, bien entendu, tous les autres projets de résolution dont la délégation indonésienne s'est portée coauteur. Toutefois, nous insistons tout particulièrement sur la nécessité d'adopter le projet relatif à la question d'Aden. Pour convaincre de cette nécessité les membres du Conseil, je vais donner lecture du télégramme que nous venons de recevoir du People's Socialist Party d'Aden, et qui est ainsi rédigé:

"Les Britanniques ont arrêté et incarcéré environ 500 membres du PSP et de l'ATUC. Lieu de détention inconnu. Les Britanniques ont arrêté Abdullah Asnage, président de l'Arab Labour Federation et du People's Socialist Party, ainsi que Abdo, Khlin, Souleiman, Mohammed Salem Ali, Fouad Ibrahim, Araf Khan et Saïd Sobhi, membres du Conseil présidentiel. Nous faisons appel à vous et à la conscience du monde pour obtenir leur libération. Nous demandons que la justice soit dûment rendue. Nous voulons l'abolition du régime policier et de l'état d'urgence. (Signé: People's Socialist Party.)"

74. Cela montre bien, je l'espère, que le projet relatif à la question d'Aden [A/L.436 et Add.1] devrait, autant que possible, bénéficier de l'appui de tous les Membres de l'Assemblée.

75. M. BOZOVIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je n'ai qu'un mot à dire au sujet du télégramme dont le représentant de l'Indonésie vient de vous donner lecture et dans lequel nous apprenons que 500 membres du People's Socialist Party ont été arrêtés à Aden. Je souhaite vivement que la délégation britannique nous donne quelques éclaircissements à ce sujet avant la fin de la présente session.

76. M. COULIBALY (Mali): Parlant au nom des auteurs, je ne ferai pas de commentaires sur les sept premiers projets de résolution dont nous sommes saisis. En effet, en dehors des réserves habituelles de la puissance administrante, ces projets n'ont fait l'objet d'aucune objection ni d'aucune réserve. Je vais donc exprimer brièvement le sentiment des auteurs sur le huitième projet de résolution [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2] auquel un amendement a été proposé [A/L.445 et Add.1], encore que ce projet, lui non plus, ne soulève aucune objection majeure en raison de la modération et de l'objectivité dont les auteurs ont fait preuve.

77. Les auteurs du projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2 ont tenu compte des différents sentiments exprimés sur le rapport du Comité spécial [A/5446/Rev.1] lors de la discussion générale. La préoccupation dominante qui se dégage de ce projet de résolution est la volonté de notre organisation de mettre rapidement fin au colonialisme, conformément aux dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV). Pour atteindre pacifiquement cet objectif, la coopération des puissances coloniales constitue un facteur déterminant. C'est pour cette raison que les auteurs du projet de résolution insistent particulièrement sur le peu de coopération dont les puissances coloniales ont fait preuve jusqu'ici.

78. En effet, trois ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, de nombreux pays restent encore sous la domination étrangère. Les auteurs pensent que, par un vote unanime, l'Assemblée générale invitera de nouveau les puissances coloniales à tout mettre en œuvre pour appliquer sans retard la résolution 1514 (XV).

79. C'est pour obtenir ce vote unanime que les auteurs ont dégagé le projet de résolution de tout facteur émotionnel, encore que le ressentiment qu'ils éprouvent à la suite de l'obstination de certaines puissances coloniales à maintenir leur domination sur d'autres peuples aurait pu les pousser à proposer un projet de résolution rédigé en des termes beaucoup plus dynamiques.

80. C'est compte tenu du même souci que les auteurs acceptent l'amendement proposé par la délégation des Etats-Unis et appuyé par la délégation de l'Australie [A/L.445 et Add.1]. Les auteurs du projet de résolution, en acceptant cet amendement, ont tenu à réaffirmer leur objectivité en faisant une distinction entre les attitudes des puissances coloniales. Ce souci se reflète d'ailleurs dans le paragraphe 5.

81. A la suite de certaines consultations, les auteurs se sont mis d'accord pour supprimer la dernière partie du paragraphe 2. Il s'agit du membre de phrase ainsi libellé: "ainsi que son programme de travail futur". Ce membre de phrase n'est pas indispensable si l'Assemblée approuve le rapport du Comité spécial dans son ensemble.

82. Je voudrais, au nom des membres du Comité spécial, remercier toutes les délégations qui ont exprimé leur satisfaction du travail accompli par le Comité spécial. Au nom des auteurs, je voudrais également remercier toutes les délégations qui ont exprimé leur soutien aux projets de résolution dont l'Assemblée générale est saisie. J'exprime l'espoir que les puissances coloniales tiendront compte du vote que notre Assemblée émettra tout à l'heure et qu'elles seront en mesure d'apporter, à l'avenir, leur coopération loyale au Comité, afin de lui permettre de s'acquitter de son mandat.

83. Si les Etats africains sentent plus que d'autres toutes les horreurs du colonialisme, il n'en demeure pas moins que le maintien de ce fléau constitue une menace réelle à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Nous pensons donc qu'après le vote unanime que nous souhaitons et qui aura lieu dans un moment, tous les Etats Membres de notre Organisation auront à cœur la libération des peuples encore sous domination étrangère et qu'au-delà des coalitions d'intérêts, ils œuvreront pour le respect de la justice et des dispositions fondamentales de la Charte.

84. On a beaucoup parlé des missions de visite et on a essayé d'y voir une ingérence du Comité spécial dans les attributions des puissances coloniales. Si je peux donner un apaisement à ces puissances sur cette question, je dirai que l'objectif des missions de visite est de prendre contact avec les populations intéressées afin de connaître leurs vues et de permettre ainsi au Comité spécial de faire des propositions à l'Assemblée générale quant aux voies et moyens les plus appropriés en ce qui concerne l'accession de ces territoires à l'indépendance. Il n'y a donc pas de dualité entre la compétence des puissances coloniales et les objectifs poursuivis par les missions et les groupes de visite.

85. Je pense que cet apaisement sera de nature à faire reconsidérer, par les puissances coloniales, la possibilité pour elles de coopérer avec les missions de visite et les groupes que le Comité spécial pourrait être amené à envoyer dans les territoires.

86. Sur la base de ces apaisements et compte tenu des réserves qui ont été exprimées tout à l'heure par certaines délégations, je pense que notre assemblée, unanime, apportera son soutien au projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2.

87. M. ROSSIDES (Chypre) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je n'interviens pas ici pour discourir au sujet du colonialisme. Je veux simplement rappeler que ma délégation a parrainé les trois résolutions précédemment adoptées par l'Assemblée à ce sujet: la résolution 1514 (XV), la résolution 1654 (XVI) et la résolution 1810 (XVII).

88. Ma délégation et mon pays se sont toujours tenus aux côtés de tous les peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté. Nous appuyons donc le projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2 ainsi que toutes les résolutions dont l'Assemblée générale est saisie au sujet de l'indépendance de différents pays.

89. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Je donne maintenant la parole au représentant du Royaume-Uni, sur un point d'ordre.

90. M. KING (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Permettez-moi, Monsieur le Président, de simplement signaler une erreur dans le projet de résolution relatif au Nyassaland [A/L.440 et Add.1 et 2]. Au paragraphe 1, il faut lire "6 juillet 1964" et non "5 juillet 1964". C'est une erreur qui provient d'une faute de frappe, sans doute commise par ma délégation à un moment donné. La date fixée pour l'indépendance du Nyassaland, d'accord avec M. Hastings Banda, est le 6 juillet 1964, et non le 5. J'espère que les auteurs du projet de résolution accepteront cette correction.

91. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous allons maintenant mettre séparément aux voix chacun des différents projets de résolution. J'invite l'Assemblée à se prononcer sur le projet relatif à Aden (A/L.436 et Add.1 et 2) et déposé par 20 pays.

Par 77 voix contre 10, avec 11 abstentions, le projet de résolution est adopté.

92. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous passons maintenant au projet relatif à Malte [A/L.437 et Add.1 et 2] et déposé par 27 Etats Membres.

93. Ce projet de résolution n'a pas soulevé d'objection; s'il n'y a pas d'opposition, je considérerai donc, vu la déclaration de la puissance administrante, que l'Assemblée souhaite adopter ce texte à l'unanimité.

Le projet de résolution est adopté à l'unanimité.

94. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous passons maintenant au projet relatif aux Fidsji [A/L.438 et Add.1] et déposé par 25 Etats Membres.

Par 78 voix contre zéro, avec 21 abstentions, le projet de résolution est adopté.

95. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous en venons maintenant au projet relatif à la Rhodésie du Nord [A/L.439 et Add.1] et déposé par 25 Etats Membres.

96. Ce projet de résolution n'a pas non plus suscité d'objection; s'il n'y a pas d'opposition, je considérerai donc, vu la déclaration de la puissance administrante, que l'Assemblée générale souhaite adopter ce texte à l'unanimité.

Le projet de résolution est adopté à l'unanimité.

97. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous passons maintenant au projet relatif au Nyassaland [A/L.440 et Add.1 et 2] et déposé par 26 Etats Membres.

98. Avant de mettre ce projet aux voix, je rappelle que le représentant du Royaume-Uni a précisé que le Nyassaland doit accéder à l'indépendance le 6 juillet et non le 5 juillet 1964 comme l'indique le paragraphe 1 du projet. S'il n'y a pas d'objection, je considérerai que l'Assemblée accepte cette rectification et que c'est "6 juillet" et non "5 juillet" qu'il convient de lire.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

99. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Etant donné que ce projet de résolution n'a pas, lui non plus, soulevé d'objection et que la puissance administrante a fait connaître son accord à son sujet, je considérerai, s'il n'y a pas d'opposition, que l'Assemblée souhaite l'adopter à l'unanimité.

Le projet de résolution est adopté à l'unanimité.

100. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous passerons maintenant au projet relatif au Bassoutoland, au Betchouanaland et au Souaziland [A/L.441 et Add.1 et 2] et déposé par 27 Etats Membres.

Par 78 voix contre 3, avec 16 abstentions, le projet de résolution est adopté.

101. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Passons maintenant au projet relatif à la Guyane britannique [A/L.442 et Add.1] et déposé par 16 Etats Membres.

Par 78 voix contre zéro, avec 21 abstentions, le projet de résolution est adopté.

102. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous passons à l'examen du projet relatif à la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2] et déposé par 33 Etats Membres.

103. Avant d'ouvrir le scrutin, je dois préciser que le représentant du Mali, au nom de tous les auteurs du projet de résolution, a accepté l'amendement déposé par la délégation des Etats-Unis [A/L.445], à laquelle s'était jointe la délégation australienne [A/L.445 et Add.1]. Cet amendement ayant été accepté par les auteurs du projet de résolution, il y a lieu, au cinquième alinéa du préambule, de remplacer les mots "des puissances administrantes" par "de certaines puissances administrantes".

104. Le texte espagnol étant correct, il n'y a donc lieu de modifier que le texte anglais et les autres textes où ce mot ne figure pas. Pour plus de clarté, je vais donner lecture du paragraphe entier, une fois modifié. Voici donc ce nouveau texte:

"Déplorant l'attitude négative de certaines puissances administrantes et leur refus partiel ou complet de coopérer avec le Comité spécial à l'application de la Déclaration".

105. Le deuxième point que je voudrais préciser, c'est que les auteurs du projet de résolution, comme l'a dit le représentant du Mali, pensent qu'il convient de supprimer la fin du paragraphe 2, c'est-à-dire les mots "ainsi que son programme de travail futur".

106. Les auteurs du projet de résolution l'ont donc amendé en supprimant les mots que je viens de lire. Nous allons voter maintenant sur le projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2, compte tenu du changement apporté au cinquième alinéa du préambule et de la suppression des mots "ainsi que son programme de travail futur", à la fin du paragraphe 2.

107. Le vote par appel nominal est demandé; mais, avant de passer au scrutin, je voudrais encore signaler à l'Assemblée que les incidences financières de la prolongation des travaux du Comité spécial en 1964 figurent dans le rapport de la Cinquième Commission [A/5639].

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par le Sierra Leone, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Sierra Leone, Somalie, Soudan, Suède, Syrie, Tanganyika, Thaïlande, Trinité et Tobago, Tunisie, Turquie, Ouganda, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, Haute-Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Argentine, Australie, Autriche, Bolivie, Brésil, Bulgarie, Birmanie, Burundi, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cambodge, Cameroun, Canada, Ceylan, Tchad, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Congo (Léopoldville), Costa Rica, Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, Danemark, République Dominicaine, Equateur, Ethiopie, Finlande, Ghana, Grèce, Guinée, Hongrie, Islande, Inde, Indonésie, Iran, Irak, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Côte-d'Ivoire, Jamaïque, Japon, Jordanie, Koweït, Laos, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaisie, Mali, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigéria, Norvège, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Pérou, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Sénégal.

Votent contre: Néant.

S'abstiennent: Afrique du Sud, Espagne, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Belgique, France.

Par 95 voix contre zéro, avec 6 abstentions, le projet de résolution, modifié, est adopté.

108. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): En vertu des projets de résolution adoptés cet après-midi et conformément à la note qui figure dans le projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2, nous ajouterons au dernier alinéa du préambule Aden, Malte, les îles Fidji, la Rhodésie du Nord, le Nyassaland, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland, le Souaziland et la Guyane britannique après les territoires sous administration portugaise.

109. Je donne maintenant la parole à ceux des représentants qui désirent expliquer leur vote.

110. M. JOOSTE (Afrique du Sud) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma déclaration sera très brève. Comme par le passé, la délégation sud-africaine s'est abstenue de participer à la discussion générale relative à la question dont l'Assemblée est saisie. Si je prends la parole cet après-midi, c'est pour expliquer pourquoi nous avons voté comme nous l'avons fait sur les deux résolutions présentées sous la cote A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2 et A/L.441 et Add.1 et 2.

111. Ma délégation déplore que, comme à ses trois sessions précédentes, l'Assemblée générale ait, cette fois encore, fait preuve de partialité en n'étudiant qu'un seul type de colonialisme. C'est ainsi qu'elle laisse délibérément de côté le cas des peuples qui étaient des nations indépendantes avant la seconde guerre mondiale et qui ont depuis été soumis à la domination coloniale.

112. La délégation sud-africaine n'a pas pu voter pour la principale résolution en raison de cette partialité et parce que dans cette résolution figurent des dispositions qui, selon nous, vont au-delà des obligations prévues par la Charte.

113. J'en viens maintenant à la résolution qui a trait aux territoires du Bassoutoland, du Betchouanaland et du Souaziland. Elle est le résultat d'un débat qui s'est déroulé cette année, au sujet de ces trois territoires, au Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre, débat au cours duquel, malgré les démentis du Gouvernement sud-africain, on a réitéré certaines accusations de façon à avoir un prétexte pour insérer dans le projet de résolution des dispositions hostiles et outrageantes à l'égard de l'Afrique du Sud. Par exemple, cette résolution se fait l'écho de l'accusation, adressée à mon Gouvernement, d'avoir l'intention d'annexer ces territoires.

114. Au sujet de cette allégation que le Gouvernement sud-africain désirerait annexer les territoires de la Haute Commission, permettez-moi de rappeler, une fois de plus, ce que notre premier ministre, M. Verwoerd, a encore dit le 3 septembre 1963:

"Je répète catégoriquement que nous n'avons pas recherché l'incorporation, parce que l'incorporation serait contraire à la politique de mon gouvernement à sa politique d'évolution séparée dont l'objectif est l'indépendance politique des nations bantoues."

Je crois pouvoir en rester là. De toute façon, il doit maintenant être évident pour les Membres de l'Assemblée que la répétition de cette accusation au paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la résolution, après le démenti opposé par mon gouvernement, rentre dans le cadre de la campagne politique à laquelle nous sommes maintenant accoutumés. Ceux qui connaissent les faits pourront témoigner des bonnes relations qui existent entre l'Afrique du Sud et ces territoires et des avantages considérables que ces relations présentent pour les habitants.

115. C'est pourquoi la délégation sud-africaine a voté contre la résolution.

116. M. ALAINI (Yémen): Ma délégation n'a pas été en mesure d'appuyer la résolution sur Aden, qui vient d'être mise aux voix, parce que nous croyons fermement que la libération réelle et totale de notre pays, maintenant sous occupation étrangère, ne sera obtenue que si on réalise l'unité fondamentale du Yémen dans ses frontières naturelles, unité qui rassemblera notre peuple divisé par le colonialisme. Nous sommes persuadés que seule cette unité de notre pays et de notre peuple pourra mettre véritablement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes. Cette unité, conforme aux aspirations naturelles de notre peuple tout entier, n'implique nullement le rattachement du Sud au Nord ou du Nord au Sud. Ces aspirations sont nationales et sont en faveur de la réalisation de l'unité du peuple yéménite. Elles émanent de toutes les catégories de la nation et proviennent de toutes les régions, occupées ou libres. La fragmentation de ce peuple le réduit à l'incapacité de se défendre et présente un handicap pour son développement et son progrès.

117. Le peuple du Yémen, dans la partie occupée du territoire, est totalement conscient de cette vérité. Ce sont les représentants du peuple du territoire occupé qui réclament l'union. Cela est clairement exprimé dans le rapport du Comité spécial, et plus particulièrement dans les conclusions qui font désormais partie de la résolution qui vient d'être votée. Notre peuple réalise que la division empêche l'émancipation réelle et maintient le colonialisme qui favorise et même protège la division.

118. Le régime progressiste qui a été instauré avec l'avènement de la République arabe du Yémen est le fruit des efforts conjugués des Yéménites qui habitent la partie occupée du territoire et de ceux qui vivent dans la partie du territoire placée sous le régime anachronique de l'Iman. En outre, nous n'avons pas jugé utile de voter contre une résolution qui a pour but de mettre fin à la colonisation. Le chemin tracé par cette résolution n'est pourtant pas le plus court, mais il est le seul possible dans les circonstances actuelles. Nous n'avons pas voulu essayer de le barrer par un vote négatif.

119. Nous voulons que la liquidation du colonialisme soit réalisée sans retard. Nous pouvons assurer la puissance coloniale occupante que ni la fragmentation, ni le démembrement de notre pays occupé, ni l'union fédérée de cet amalgame ne seront acceptés par le peuple occupé. Tous les pétitionnaires ont condamné la fédération factice qui a été créée par la puissance occupante sans le consentement du peuple. Cette vérité a été clairement enregistrée dans le rapport établi par le Comité spécial. Il est donc inutile que la puissance occupante poursuive avec insistance ses manœuvres qui consistent à maintenir une forme de gouvernement factice et totalement inacceptable; elle représente en effet l'autorité du colonialisme, dissimulée derrière un gouvernement fantôme.

120. Eclairée par la situation que je viens d'expliquer, ma délégation s'est trouvée devant le dilemme suivant: accepter le chemin tortueux prévu par la résolution, ou ne pas nous y associer, sans prendre de décision. Ma délégation sait parfaitement que la lutte de notre peuple en territoire occupé n'est pas terminée, car elle doit inévitablement passer par plusieurs phases. La confiance que nous portons à notre peuple est grande, et nous savons, comme lui, que sa libération réelle et totale doit passer par plusieurs stades.

121. C'est pour toutes ces raisons que ma délégation a préféré ne pas participer au vote sur la résolution qui vient d'être adoptée. Nous espérons néanmoins que cette résolution sera respectée dans son esprit, qui est celui de mettre réellement fin à la colonisation de la partie sud du Yémen ou, tout au moins, conduira à abrégier son existence, qui n'a été que trop longue.

122. M. ATTWOOD (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il n'entre pas dans mes intentions, en prenant la parole pour une explication de vote, de discuter toutes les résolutions que nous venons d'adopter. La position des Etats-Unis sur chacune de ces questions est consignée dans le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Nous l'avons également exposée à d'autres tribunes. Je désire simplement faire tout d'abord quelques observations sur le projet de résolution qui concerne les territoires de la Haute Commission. Il faut se garder d'interpréter l'abstention des Etats-Unis sur ce projet comme marquant un revirement d'opinion quant à l'emploi de l'expression "un acte d'agression" pour définir une situation qui ne s'est pas encore produite. Nos idées sur ce point sont, je crois, bien connues des Membres de l'Assemblée; elles demeurent inchangées.

123. Ma délégation s'est sentie obligée de s'abstenir sur la résolution relative à l'importante question de la situation en ce qui concerne la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Encore qu'il y ait dans la résolution certains autres points dont la rédaction n'emporte pas notre totale adhésion, nos principales objections concernent le paragraphe 3. Comme l'Assemblée le sait, la délégation des Etats-Unis n'a pas appuyé certaines des conclusions et des recommandations adoptées par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Nous ne pouvions donc pas approuver ce paragraphe; nous nous sommes donc abstenus sur l'ensemble de la résolution.

124. En conclusion, je tiens à dire aux auteurs combien ma délégation apprécie l'esprit positif et constructif dans lequel ils ont rédigé ces projets. Nous leur sommes également reconnaissants d'avoir accepté notre amendement. Que nous n'ayons pas pu voter pour tout ce que les auteurs avaient proposé ne signifie pas que nous ne soyons pas d'accord avec l'esprit qui les animait; nous sommes d'accord, et je crois qu'ils le savent. Qu'il me soit également permis de souligner que les Etats-Unis ont l'intention de persévérer dans leur détermination de travailler à la mise en œuvre des principes de la résolution 1514 (XV) dans la mesure où elle nous concerne, et d'appuyer sa réalisation partout où il conviendra.

125. M. HESSELLUND-JENSEN (Danemark) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais expliquer brièvement le vote des cinq pays nordiques: Danemark, Finlande, Islande, Norvège et Suède. On notera que nous avons tous voté pour le projet A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2, qui vient d'être adopté, car nous sommes d'accord avec les objectifs et la portée du texte proposé par le groupe afro-asiatique. Ces votes affirmatifs ne signifient pas toutefois que les pays nordiques donnent leur entière adhésion à tous les paragraphes, dont certains semblent quelque peu ambigus. Il ne nous semble pas, par exemple, que l'on ait assez tenu compte, au quatrième alinéa du préambule, des notables progrès accomplis en trois ans, depuis l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV). En ce qui concerne notre interprétation du paragraphe 7, nous ne perdons pas de vue que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre est un organe créé par l'Assemblée générale. A part cela, je n'entrerai pas dans les détails au moment où nos débats touchent à leur fin, mais bornerai mes observations aux paragraphes 3 et 8.

126. Pour les pays nordiques, il convient d'envisager l'approbation du rapport en fonction de l'attitude adoptée sur des points précis. Le paragraphe 3 ne saurait être interprété comme signifiant que nous adhérons à des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale que nous n'avons pas appuyées. Ce qui confirme notre interprétation du paragraphe 3, c'est qu'on vient nous soumettre aujourd'hui des résolutions précises, rédigées exactement dans les mêmes termes que celles qu'a adoptées le Comité des Vingt-Quatre.

127. D'autre part, il n'est pas inutile de parler de l'impasse que représente, quant aux groupes de visite, le paragraphe 8, dont le libellé nous paraît aller bien loin. Ces missions peuvent être utiles quand il s'agit de se procurer des renseignements objectifs sur un territoire en discussion. Mais, d'un autre côté, l'envoi de groupes de visite ne saurait être une panacée quand on traite d'affaires relatives aux territoires coloniaux. Il faut, dans chaque cas, envisager l'opportunité de créer des groupes en fonction de la possibilité d'aboutir à l'objectif que nous avons en vue.

128. M. ARCHIBALD (Trinité et Tobago) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation désire expliquer son vote sur le projet relatif à la question de la Guyane britannique. Elle a estimé nécessaire de s'abstenir sur cette résolution; car, dans les circonstances actuelles, fixer une date pour l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique n'aiderait en rien, de l'avis de ma délégation, à augmenter les chances de solution de ce très urgent problème. Qui plus est, nous nous demandons même si, dans les conditions actuelles, fixer la date de l'indépendance ne reviendrait pas à fixer la date de la guerre civile.

129. Trinité et Tobago s'est montrée opposée à ce que la Rhodésie du Sud devienne indépendante; elle ne peut pas non plus contribuer à fixer une date pour l'indépendance d'un pays dont la population n'a pas pu se mettre d'accord, sans contrainte, sur les conditions de l'indépendance.

130. Trinité et Tobago s'est efforcée de proposer une solution viable pour la Guyane britannique. Elle a échoué. La résolution que nous venons d'adopter ne tient pas compte, à notre avis, des réalités de la situation qui règne en Guyane britannique, c'est-à-dire de la nécessité inéluctable que les partis et la population de la Guyane britannique s'unissent pour le bien de leur pays.

131. M. CARSALES (Argentine) [traduit de l'espagnol]: La délégation argentine a voté pour tous les projets de résolution examinés cet après-midi. Néanmoins, nous estimons nécessaire d'apporter une petite précision au sujet du projet relatif à la question d'Aden.

132. Nous voudrions que l'Assemblée note que, si l'on avait voté séparément sur le paragraphe 5 du dispositif, la délégation argentine se serait abstenue, parce qu'elle considère, comme d'autres délégations latino-américaines l'ont déclaré au sein du Comité spécial, que le problème des bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux doit être résolu par les populations directement intéressées, une fois qu'elles auront obtenu leur indépendance, et qu'il n'appartient pas à l'Assemblée générale de préjuger leur décision.

133. Malgré cela et malgré certaines imperfections dans la rédaction de ce projet de résolution, la délégation argentine a voté en sa faveur, parce qu'elle considère que l'adoption de ce projet représente un pas en avant vers l'objectif final: la mise en œuvre intégrale de la résolution 1514 (XV), objectif que mon pays appuie entièrement.

134. M. JABRI (Syrie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a voté pour toutes les résolutions issues des délibérations du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, car nous croyons fermement au droit des pays coloniaux de faire usage de leur droit à l'autodétermination et de réaliser en fin de compte leur indépendance et leur autonomie.

135. Monsieur le Président, ma délégation est coauteur de la plupart des résolutions sur lesquelles nous avons voté, mais de nouveaux événements se sont produits. Ils ont rapport à la résolution que nous venons d'adopter sur Aden et nous obligent à faire ces quelques brèves observations supplémentaires. Nous sommes persuadés que vous aurez l'amabilité de nous le permettre.

136. A la suite des troubles qui ont eu lieu hier à Aden, ma délégation a appris de source sûre que les autorités britanniques y avaient arrêté 500 membres du People's Socialist Party et de l'Aden Trade Union Congress. Leur lieu de détention est inconnu. De plus, le président du People's Socialist Party et du Trade Union Congress, M. Abdullah Alasnage, a également été arrêté ainsi que de hauts responsables de ces deux organisations, M. A. F. Souleiman, M. Ali Fouad Ibrahim, M. Ashraf Khan et M. Saïd Sobhi, qui, il n'y a guère longtemps, s'est présenté devant le Comité des Vingt-Quatre en qualité de pétitionnaire d'Aden. Les autorités ont procédé à ces arrestations sous prétexte qu'un terroriste avait lancé une grenade dans la ville d'Aden. L'identité du terroriste n'est pas connue, et il n'est pas établi qu'il ait eu des liens avec le People's Socialist Party ou l'Aden Trade Union Congress.

137. Malgré cela, les autorités britanniques ont appliqué leurs brutales méthodes policières et ont arrêté arbitrairement les chefs éminents que j'ai cités il y a un instant. Ces actes brutaux de répression et l'arrestation de dirigeants politiques se produisent à un moment où, réunis ici en Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, nous venons d'inviter le Gouvernement britannique, aux termes du paragraphe 7 du dispositif de la résolution relatif à la question d'Aden:

"a) A abroger toutes les lois qui restreignent les libertés publiques;

"b) A libérer tous les prisonniers et détenus politiques et les personnes condamnées à la suite d'actes ayant une signification politique;

"c) A réadmettre dans le territoire les personnes qui ont été exilées ou qui sont interdites de séjour pour activités politiques;

"d) A cesser immédiatement toutes les actions répressives à l'égard de la population du territoire, en particulier les expéditions militaires et les bombardements de villages."

138. Ma délégation n'aurait pas choisi de prendre maintenant la parole si elle n'avait pas estimé essentiel d'appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur ces actes odieux que le Gouvernement britannique commet contre le peuple d'Aden. Dans ces circonstances, ma délégation n'est guère surprise — je suis sûr que les autres délégations ne le sont pas non plus — que le Royaume-Uni n'ait pas voulu permettre au Sous-Comité d'Aden du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre de visiter Aden et soit, en fait, allé très loin, sans aucun vergogne, pour empêcher tel ou tel membre du Comité d'entrer à Aden.

139. Il est évident que le Gouvernement britannique doit avoir bien des choses à vouloir cacher aux yeux et aux oreilles du monde. La nécessité d'user de l'oppression politique et de se livrer fréquemment à des arrestations massives injustifiées pour appuyer le gouvernement au pouvoir, ne peut signifier que ceci: en premier lieu, les Britanniques sont à Aden contre la volonté et le désir exprès de la population d'Aden; en second lieu, le gouvernement qu'ils ont instauré est un gouvernement fantoche, qui ne représente pas le peuple d'Aden; enfin, il semble évident que la création d'une fédération d'Aden est une invention purement britannique, qui ne peut tenir sans la réunion de cette partie du territoire avec sa métropole historique, la République arabe du Yémen.

140. Ma délégation tient à protester contre les actes iniques auxquels les autorités britanniques se livrent contre la population d'Aden, et demande la libération immédiate de tous les prisonniers politiques, ainsi que la cessation de ces actes illégaux à l'encontre du peuple pacifique d'Aden.

141. M. MIRANDA (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation n'a pas participé au vote sur la résolution [1654 (XVI)] qui a créé le Comité spécial sur la situation en ce qui concerne la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Les raisons pour lesquelles nous n'avons participé au vote en cette occasion ont été exposées à l'époque et figurent dans les archives. Je ne les répéterai pas maintenant.

142. Conséquents dans notre attitude, nous tenons à ce qu'il soit maintenant précisé au procès-verbal que nous n'avons pas participé au vote sur la résolution qui vient d'être adoptée et sur tous les autres projets de résolution précédemment votés cet après-midi.

143. M. LORIDAN (Belgique): La délégation belge aurait souhaité pouvoir voter pour le projet de résolution concernant le rapport du Comité spécial. Elle n'a pu le faire principalement en raison de la formulation du paragraphe 3 de ce projet. Ce paragraphe porte approbation, en effet, du rapport du Comité spécial. Or, il s'agit d'un rapport extrêmement volumineux, comme les représentants le savent — quelque 850 pages minéographiées — et il n'a pas été possible à la délégation belge d'approuver chacune des parties de ce rapport. Mais le paragraphe 3 va plus loin: on y invite les puissances administrantes à appliquer les conclusions et recommandations qui figurent dans le rapport. Or, au sujet de ces recommandations, il y a eu des votes séparés et, sur certaines d'entre elles, la délégation belge a dû s'abstenir, voire voter contre. Dans ces conditions, il lui semblait illogique de voter pour un projet de résolution qui faisait appel aux puissances administrantes pour qu'elles appliquent en bloc toutes les recommandations figurant dans le rapport du Comité spécial.

144. Telles sont les raisons qui ont obligé la délégation belge à s'abstenir lors du vote sur le projet de résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2.

145. M. GUDENUS (Autriche) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je désire expliquer le vote de la délégation autrichienne au sujet de la résolution qui vient d'être adoptée. La délégation autrichienne a voté pour cette résolution parce que nous sommes d'accord sur sa teneur d'une façon générale et, surtout, parce que nous appuyons le principe de l'autodétermination et de l'indépendance pour les peuples coloniaux. Je ne veux pas entrer dans certains détails du texte. Nous aurions parfois préféré un libellé légèrement différent. Toutefois, ma délégation souhaite souligner qu'elle s'est abstenue sur certaines des résolutions mentionnées au dernier alinéa du préambule de cette résolution, et que les raisons qui nous ont amenés à adopter cette attitude ont également déterminé notre attitude à l'égard du paragraphe 3 de cette résolution.

146. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous avons épuisé la liste des orateurs inscrits pour des explications de vote. Je donne maintenant la parole au représentant du Maroc, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

147. M. SIDI BABA (Maroc): Au début de cette séance, au moment où nous commençons à examiner les projets de résolution qui nous étaient soumis par les membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, le représentant de l'Algérie a fait une déclaration particulièrement importante, et à laquelle j'ai attaché une attention toute spéciale.

148. Je tiens tout d'abord à dire que j'approuve entièrement toutes les idées qu'il a émises en ce qui concerne la nécessité de mettre fin à toutes les formes de la domination coloniale. Mon pays, qui est l'un de ceux qui ont joué un rôle de premier plan en Afrique dans le domaine de la libération, est d'autant plus à l'aise pour dire, en son nom, que nous approuvons entièrement toutes les idées émises par le représentant de l'Algérie en ce qui concerne le problème colonial.

149. Le représentant de l'Algérie a, d'autre part, évoqué un certain nombre de principes, et plus particulièrement celui qui a trait au respect des frontières coloniales héritées des puissances administrantes. Je pense que ce principe est valable en soi. Mon pays a toujours respecté l'indépendance et l'intégrité territoriale de tous les Etats, et nous espérons que cela est la règle générale admise par tous les pays.

150. Mais il se trouve que ce principe du respect des frontières coloniales, qui demeure pour le moment un principe vague, est dans certaines circonstances utilisé en opposition à des accords qui lient les Etats, en opposition également à un droit international généralement admis. Nous espérons que ce principe, même s'il est un jour codifié, soit par une charte, soit par des accords entre Etats, ne sera pas utilisé pour détruire le sens des principes qui régissent les accords internationaux entre les Etats.

151. Je dois également dire que le devoir moral aussi bien que les obligations internationales de tous les Etats font que les accords qui lient les Etats et qui ont été librement signés par eux doivent être respectés dans la lettre aussi bien que dans l'esprit.

152. J'ajoute également que le colonialisme, en quittant certaines régions d'Afrique ou d'ailleurs, s'est contenté de ne pas laisser de frontières du tout. Il est tout à fait normal qu'entre Etats indépendants soient établies — c'est la moindre des choses — des frontières définitives qui puissent être la ligne de démarcation entre les différentes souverainetés, en attendant que nous puissions un jour réaliser la suppression de toutes ces frontières qui, je l'espère, seront provisoires.

153. C'est tout ce que j'ai à dire en ce qui concerne ce principe. Je répète que, si les circonstances actuelles n'avaient pas été évoquées, ma délégation aurait pu s'abstenir de parler de cette question en ce moment.

154. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): La parole est au représentant de l'Algérie, qui désire faire usage de son droit de réponse.

155. M. CHANDERLI (Algérie): Je suis très reconnaissant au Président d'avoir bien voulu me donner la parole dans l'exercice de mon droit de réponse. Je me serais très certainement passé de revenir devant vous en cette occasion.

156. Tout à l'heure ma délégation, dans une déclaration brève et de caractère très général, a été amenée, dans le cadre du point à l'ordre du jour qui nous concernait, à savoir la discussion sur le rapport du Comité spécial sur la Déclaration relative à l'accèsion des pays et des peuples coloniaux à l'indépendance, à aborder un certain nombre de questions, et plus particulièrement celles qui avaient été soulevées par d'autres délégations et qui avaient spécialement retenu notre attention.

157. C'est ainsi que j'ai été amené à faire quelques observations sur ce qui a été considéré comme les dangers de l'accèsion trop rapide à l'indépendance, et j'ai présenté quelques remarques à ce sujet.

158. J'ai été également appelé à parler de problèmes concernant les territoires et les questions frontalières qui pouvaient se poser. Je l'ai fait sans mentionner particulièrement une délégation ou une autre, simplement parce qu'une délégation, dans sa déclaration générale, avait elle-même pris l'initiative de soulever ce problème, et particulièrement de faire une allusion extrêmement claire à une guerre coloniale qui avait eu lieu à ses frontières. Cette allusion concernait très évidemment l'Algérie et la guerre d'Algérie, dont nous avons eu beaucoup à débattre ici pendant de nombreuses années.

159. Pour toutes ces raisons, j'ai cru devoir, uniquement sur le plan des principes, présenter également quelques observations. J'ajoute, pour qu'il en soit tenu compte, qu'à aucun moment je n'ai indiqué que je traitais, dans ces observations d'ordre général, de frontières issues du colonialisme, ou d'autre provenance. En vérité, si je devais vous imposer la lecture des termes exacts que j'ai employés, vous vous apercevriez que ma déclaration dans ce domaine aurait pu tout aussi bien s'appliquer — et je m'en excuse par avance auprès des représentants de l'Italie et de l'Autriche — à la situation qui a existé — et qui existe encore, je crois, mais dans des conditions relativement harmonieuses — dans ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler, d'une part, le Sud-Tyrol et, d'autre part, le Haut-Adige.

160. A aucun moment je n'ai spécifié quoi que ce soit, de manière à éviter, justement, qu'un droit de réponse soit utilisé à mon endroit, et je regrette que cela ait dû être fait. Il n'en reste pas moins que je voudrais dire au représentant du Maroc toute ma reconnaissance pour les commentaires trop flatteurs qu'il a bien voulu exprimer ici sur l'ensemble des idées incluses dans ma très brève déclaration.

161. Dans la mesure où il y aurait d'autres droits de réponse, ma délégation, d'ores et déjà, voudrait indiquer qu'elle n'a aucune intention d'y répondre.

162. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Je donne de nouveau la parole au représentant du Maroc, qui a demandé à exercer son droit de réponse.

163. M. SIDI BABA (Maroc): Je m'excuse, à ce stade du débat, de prendre une deuxième fois la parole sur cette question. J'ai dit et je répète que ma délégation approuve entièrement les idées qui ont été évoquées par le représentant de l'Algérie en ce qui concerne la nécessité de mettre fin à toutes les formes de domination coloniale. Je me suis volontairement abstenu de dire quoi que ce soit en ce qui concerne la question particulière qui touche actuellement un certain nombre de pays africains. J'ai tenu à me cantonner dans des règles et principes généraux, comme le représentant de l'Algérie a bien voulu le faire, lui aussi. J'ai voulu mentionner que, si les frontières coloniales héritées des anciennes puissances administrantes doivent être respectées, il faut également qu'on respecte les accords internationaux qui régissent les rapports entre les Etats ainsi que les accords signés librement entre Etats souverains dans leur action et dans leur comportement.

164. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Nous avons ainsi terminé l'examen du point 23 de l'ordre du jour de la dix-huitième session, y compris la question des territoires sous administration portugaise, qui avait été attribuée à la Quatrième Commission.

165. En approuvant les résolutions de l'Assemblée sur la Rhodésie du Sud et le Sud-Ouest africain, territoires qui figurent dans la résolution A/L.443 et Add.1 et 2, nous avons également terminé l'examen des points 55 et 75 de l'ordre du jour.

La séance est levée à 18 h 5.

2066 (XX). Question de l'île Maurice

L'Assemblée générale,

Ayant examiné la question de l'île Maurice et des autres îles qui composent le territoire de l'île Maurice,

Ayant étudié les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs au territoire de l'île Maurice¹⁶,

Rappelant sa résolution 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960 contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux,

Regrettant que la Puissance administrante n'ait pas appliqué complètement la résolution 1514 (XV) en ce qui concerne ce territoire,

Notant avec une profonde inquiétude que toute mesure prise par la Puissance administrante pour détacher certaines îles du territoire de l'île Maurice afin d'y établir une base militaire constituerait une violation de ladite déclaration et en particulier du paragraphe 6 de celle-ci,

1. Approuve les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs au territoire de l'île Maurice et fait siennes les conclusions et les recommandations du Comité spécial qui y figurent;

¹⁶ Ibid., dix-neuvième session, Annexes, annexe n° 8 (1^{re} partie) [A/5800/Rev.1], chap. XIV; ibid., vingtième session, Annexes, additif au point 23 de l'ordre du jour (A/6000/Rev.1), chap. XIII.

2. Réaffirme le droit inaliénable du peuple du territoire de l'île Maurice à la liberté et à l'indépendance, conformément à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale;

3. Invite le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord à prendre des mesures efficaces en vue de la mise en œuvre immédiate et complète de la résolution 1514 (XV);

4. Invite la Puissance administrante à ne prendre aucune mesure qui démembretrait le territoire de l'île Maurice et violerait son intégrité territoriale;

5. Invite en outre la Puissance administrante à faire rapport au Comité spécial et à l'Assemblée générale sur l'application de la présente résolution;

6. Prie le Comité spécial de maintenir à l'étude la question du territoire de l'île Maurice et de faire rapport à ce sujet à l'Assemblée générale lors de sa vingt et unième session.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration

sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

53. M. TARABANOV (Bulgarie): Il y a bientôt cinq ans que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, proclamant solennellement la nécessité d'une liquidation rapide et sans condition aucune du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et manifestations, a été adoptée. Dans une perspective historique, cinq années ne sont pas une période assez longue pour apprécier à sa juste valeur ce document historique. Dès maintenant, cependant, il est facile de comprendre le rôle important qu'il a joué aussi bien dans l'action entreprise par l'Organisation des Nations Unies que dans les luttes menées par les peuples coloniaux pour l'accélération du processus de liquidation du système colonialiste. Elaborée sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique^{3/}, appuyée avec enthousiasme par les pays socialistes et les pays afro-asiatiques Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la Déclaration s'est cependant heurtée à l'hostilité des Etats colonialistes et d'une partie de leurs alliés. Incapables d'empêcher son adoption, les forces du colonialisme et de l'impérialisme ont essayé de faire en sorte que la Déclaration reste lettre morte, allant jusqu'à cacher par tous les moyens son existence même aux peuples asservis.

54. Aujourd'hui, pourtant, alors que les mouvements de libération nationale dans les différentes parties du monde, à Aden et en Guyane britannique, dans les colonies portugaises et en Rhodésie du Sud, élèvent des revendications fondées sur la Déclaration et sur les résolutions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, les auteurs de ce document peuvent et doivent, à juste titre, être fiers de leur œuvre. Il a été démontré dans la pratique quotidienne que la Déclaration peut servir et qu'elle a servi la cause de la lutte des peuples pour leur libération.

55. Le colonialisme craque à toutes ses jointures, et de nouveaux chaînons se détachent chaque année du système colonialiste. Cependant, bien que l'on parle actuellement, dans le langage courant, des séquelles du colonialisme, la terre compte plus de 60 territoires dépendants peuplés de dizaines de millions d'êtres humains qui restent soumis aux souffrances et aux vexations du régime colonial et à son esclavage.

56. L'année qui vient de s'écouler a marqué un certain ralentissement dans le processus de décolonisation. Les forces les plus agressives du colonialisme et du racisme, en Afrique centrale et en Afrique du Sud, opposent une résistance farouche à ce processus de libération des peuples, afin de conserver à tout prix leur domination dans cette partie du monde. Les guerres coloniales criminelles menées par le Portugal en Angola et dans le Mozambique, le système inhumain d'apartheid imposé par la force en Afrique du Sud, le nouveau régime raciste instauré en Rhodésie du Sud ne sont que des manifestations nouvelles de la politique concertée des partenaires de ce qu'on appelle "l'alliance impie", dont le but est de dresser une barrière sur le chemin de la liberté au sud du Zambèze.

57. Avec l'aide économique et financière de l'Occident et les armes fournies par l'OTAN, en particulier par certains de ses membres, les forces du colonialisme essaient — et, dans une certaine mesure, y réussissent — d'ériger une forteresse de haine et d'exploitation coloniale dans cette partie de l'Afrique, forteresse qui doit garantir à l'avenir une exploitation sans scrupule des immenses richesses et du labeur de la population africaine par les monopoles étrangers.

58. Si, dans une certaine partie des territoires dépendants, le processus de décolonisation est retardé, c'est parce que les Etats colonialistes essaient, avec l'aide des monopoles financiers — et, dans certains cas, y réussissent —, de créer des conditions qui leur permettraient de continuer leur domination après la proclamation de l'indépendance.

59. La haine raciale allumée en Guyane britannique et le renversement du gouvernement de Cheddi Jagan, l'établissement d'un régime féodal et colonialiste en Arabie du Sud en sont des exemples frappants. D'un autre côté, on s'aperçoit que le retard dans le processus de décolonisation de ce que l'on appelle les petits territoires coloniaux est, dans la plupart des cas, imposé par certaines grandes puissances pour des raisons stratégiques. Convaincus que, dorénavant, ils ne peuvent plus compter sur des bases militaires installées par eux dans des pays nouvellement libérés ou même sur les territoires des grandes colonies du continent africain et des autres continents, certains pays occidentaux s'orientent de plus en plus vers une politique qui peut leur permettre de conserver leurs bases militaires dans certaines petites îles et même d'en installer de nouvelles à des endroits où ils espèrent pouvoir continuer à rester pour une longue période encore.

60. A cet égard, l'exemple le plus récent est celui de la nouvelle colonie anglaise dans l'océan Indien, détachée de l'archipel de l'île Maurice avec l'intention d'y installer une base militaire anglo-américaine. En outre, nombreux sont les cas — par exemple dans les Iles Vierges — où les puissances administrantes commencent à procéder à l'intégration directe des petits territoires aux métropoles.

61. Le retard apporté à la libération des peuples coloniaux ne peut que provoquer une très grande inquiétude chez tous les peuples qui s'intéressent au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales; ce retard peut causer des torts sérieux et faire planer de graves dangers sur le monde d'aujourd'hui.

62. En Afrique, les peuples nouvellement libérés ont un grand besoin de paix, mais d'une paix durable, afin de guérir les plaies provoquées par le colonialisme et afin de consolider leur souveraineté et leur indépendance.

63. Cependant, la politique criminelle des colonisateurs et des racistes entretient une tension constante qui, en fin de compte, peut mener à la guerre et à la catastrophe. Les forces et les ressources des peuples nouvellement libérés, tellement nécessaires à leur développement économique, seront, dans une telle éventualité, mobilisées pour faire face aux menaces racistes et néo-colonialistes venant du sud du continent africain. Or, la paix en danger en Afrique signifie que la paix et la sécurité internationales sont menacées partout. Dans le monde d'aujourd'hui, avec ses armes atomiques et nucléaires, avec ses fusées, la continuation du colonialisme et du racisme peut avoir des conséquences réellement dangereuses pour l'humanité entière.

64. De nombreuses bases militaires, maintenues sur les territoires coloniaux et utilisées principalement pour écraser les mouvements de libération nationale et exercer des pressions sur les pays nouvellement libérés en Afrique, en Asie et en Amérique du Sud, représentent un danger réel et imminent pour la paix. La dernière agression contre le Congo n'a-t-elle pas été perpétrée à partir de la base anglaise de l'île de l'Ascension? N'est-ce pas de la base américaine de l'île de Guam que des avions prennent leur vol pour participer à la guerre d'agression contre le peuple du Viet-Nam?

65. C'est pourquoi la voix des Nations Unies doit s'élever bien haut en faveur de la liquidation de toutes les bases militaires installées en territoires coloniaux.

66. Il y a cinq ans, l'Assemblée générale, exprimant la volonté de la plus grande partie de l'humanité, a proclamé solennellement que des mesures devaient être prises dans tous les territoires coloniaux afin d'accélérer le processus de la transmission de tous les pouvoirs à tous les peuples, afin que ces derniers puissent jouir pleinement de leur indépendance et de leur liberté. A une époque aussi dynamique que la nôtre, cinq années constituent une période relativement longue et suffisante pour permettre d'appliquer pleinement la Déclaration. Dans ces conditions, nous pouvons nous demander comment l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dont la pierre angulaire est le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, la défense des droits et de la liberté de l'homme ainsi que la préservation de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, peut tolérer, ne fût-ce qu'un jour de plus, la perpétuation du système colonialiste et, avec lui, de la discrimination raciale et de la ségrégation.

67. Nous nous associons aux délégations qui ont déclaré à cette tribune qu'il est grandement temps de considérer comme un crime envers l'humanité la continuation d'un système indigne et inhumain qui existe encore dans le monde.

68. La légalité de la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour la liberté et l'indépendance a été consacrée dans de nombreuses résolutions et décisions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et de l'Assemblée générale, ce qui signifie que les régimes coloniaux sont, dans les territoires respectifs, dorénavant considérés non seulement comme inhumains mais aussi comme illégaux. Si telle est l'opinion générale — et nous sommes certains qu'il en est ainsi — il est nécessaire d'agir en conséquence.

69. La délégation bulgare est d'avis non seulement que les dispositions contenues dans les résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies concernant la légalité de la lutte des peuples doivent maintenant être de nouveau confirmées, mais encore qu'il est nécessaire d'en tirer les conséquences qui s'imposent.

70. A juste titre, il faut donc avant tout que l'ONU apporte une aide efficace aux peuples coloniaux avec tous les moyens dont elle dispose. L'Organisation et les institutions internationales qui en dépendent, de même que chacun de leurs Membres, doivent apporter à ces peuples l'aide morale et matérielle dont ils ont tellement besoin pour rétablir leurs droits foulés.

71. Les Etats qui refusent de renoncer à leur politique de domination coloniale doivent être privés de toute aide et assistance, surtout de l'aide militaire qui leur est apportée par voie bilatérale ou par l'intermédiaire des alliances militaires, comme par exemple l'OTAN.

72. Contre les Etats et régimes dont la politique crée des dangers pour la paix et la sécurité des peuples, comme la République sud-africaine, le Portugal et l'actuel régime raciste de la Rhodésie du Sud, le Conseil de sécurité doit prendre en outre les mesures coercitives prévues par la Charte. Ces mesures et les décisions que l'Assemblée générale prendra maintenant doivent, d'après nous, assurer l'application intégrale de la Déclaration, et ce dans le plus bref délai.

73. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre poursuit ses travaux depuis plus de quatre ans. Nous aurions bien souhaité que la situation soit telle à l'heure actuelle que l'Assemblée générale puisse lui dire: "Vous avez terminé votre tâche, nous n'avons plus besoin de vous." Malheureusement, tel n'est pas le cas, et le mandat du Comité des Vingt-Quatre doit être de nouveau prolongé. Ce comité devra cependant être maintenant armé de moyens plus efficaces qui rendront son travail plus facile. L'expérience de l'année dernière et surtout la visite du Comité en Afrique ont suggéré certaines idées et fait penser à certaines méthodes qui peuvent garantir une plus grande efficacité dans son travail.

74. Ce qui importe le plus, c'est que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre soit en mesure d'établir un contact étroit avec les peuples des territoires dépendants et de préparer ses recommandations en coopération étroite avec eux. Dans ce sens, nous appuyons les propositions qui figurent à la section I du chapitre Ier du rapport du Comité [A/6000/Rev.1], ainsi que les propositions faites par son président, M. Sori Coulibaly.

75. Nous sommes profondément convaincus que, avec l'aide effective de tous les pays et peuples intéressés au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, les peuples coloniaux sortiront vainqueurs de la juste lutte qu'ils ont entreprise et mènent pour la liberté et l'indépendance contre le système colonial honteux, qui doit définitivement disparaître.

76. Le Gouvernement de la République populaire de Bulgarie et le peuple bulgare ont toujours fait preuve de solidarité envers les peuples soumis à l'esclavage colonial. La délégation de la République populaire de Bulgarie est autorisée à déclarer qu'à l'avenir aussi son gouvernement et son peuple sont prêts à apporter leur contribution pour le triomphe de la juste cause des peuples coloniaux et pour leur libération du joug colonial.

77. M. Taïeb SLIM (Tunisie): L'Assemblée générale examine aujourd'hui les travaux du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, tels qu'ils apparaissent dans les rapports du Comité pour les deux années écoulées [A/5800/Rev.1⁴ et A/6000/Rev.1].

78. La délégation tunisienne, qui a écouté avec la plus grande attention les interventions faites sur ce point par les éminents orateurs qui l'ont précédée, se félicite de l'intérêt suscité par cet important débat et aimerait se contenter de faire à ce stade de nos travaux quelques brèves remarques.

79. Mais, auparavant, elle tient à exprimer son appréciation et sa gratitude à l'éminent Président du Comité spécial, M. Sori Coulibaly, du Mali, pour le dévouement et la distinction avec lesquels il a su diriger les travaux du Comité. Elle aimerait également exprimer ses remerciements et sa vive appréciation au rapporteur, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, qui a travaillé avec une ardeur exemplaire pour nous présenter les documents de travail les plus complets sur les travaux du Comité pendant les deux dernières années.

80. Nos félicitations s'adressent également à nos deux éminents vice-présidents, M. Carlos Marfa Velázquez, de l'Uruguay, et M. Sonn Voeunsai, du Cambodge, pour la contribution très importante qu'ils ont apportée au Comité. Appelés par leurs gouvernements respectifs à d'autres fonctions dans d'autres capitales, nos deux distingués collègues nous ont maintenant quittés. Ils ont toutefois laissé dans nos mémoires le souvenir toujours vivant de diplomates dévoués à la tâche exaltante de la décolonisation pacifique.

81. La délégation tunisienne ferait montre d'un oubli impardonnable si elle ne rendait hommage à la collaboration très étroite et à l'extrême dévouement du secrétariat de notre comité, ainsi qu'à M. Chacko et à M. Dadzie. Elle tient à remercier particulièrement le Sous-Secrétaire, M. Amachree, et tous les fonctionnaires et interprètes qui nous ont constamment assistés dans la conduite de nos travaux.

82. En abordant l'examen du rapport du Comité spécial, nous tenons à rappeler que cinq années se sont écoulées depuis la proclamation, à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, de l'historique Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Depuis 1960, un nombre assez important de pays se sont libérés du colonialisme et sont venus se joindre à nous comme Etats souverains Membres de l'Organisation, à laquelle ils apportent une contribution de plus en plus appréciable dans tous les domaines, et enrichir la grande famille humaine de l'apport de leur génie et de leurs traditions. Ils ont apporté aux Nations Unies des idées nouvelles et un enthousiasme continu pour le renforcement des relations amicales entre les nations et pour le développement de la coopération internationale. Leur présence parmi nous, que nous saluons avec la plus grande satisfaction, œuvre pour la consolidation des principes de la Charte, de l'Organisation et l'épanouissement de son esprit d'universalité. Toutefois, nous sommes bien obligés de convenir que ces cinq années ont été assez dures pour d'autres millions d'êtres humains qui continuent à souffrir de l'oppression et de la domination étrangères.

83. En effet, si nous avons fait des progrès appréciables dans le processus d'émancipation humaine, il n'en reste pas moins vrai que certaines puissances administrantes — par réaction peut-être ou par dépit de voir leur grand empire d'antan s'amoinrir et s'amenuiser — ont un peu raidi leur position et ne montrent qu'un semblant de coopération envers l'Organisation. Dans ce domaine, loin de hâter le processus de décolonisation et de permettre ainsi une reconversion saine et bénéfique des liens de sujétion en rapports de coopération dans l'amitié et l'égalité, elles s'efforcent à imaginer toutes sortes d'obstacles pour retarder l'émancipation et la libération des peuples placés sous leur tutelle. Elles ignorent les injonctions pourtant impératives de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) et font fi des nombreuses résolutions adoptées sur ces problèmes. Il y a lieu de rappeler le paragraphe 5 de ladite Déclaration, qui dit d'une façon très précise, ne permettant aucune équivoque, ce qui suit:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

84. D'année en année l'Assemblée générale a adopté et réaffirmé toutes les résolutions pertinentes sur les différents territoires qui ont été examinés par le Comité spécial, faisant des appels de plus en plus urgents aux puissances administrantes pour hâter l'émancipation des peuples placés sous leur domination et appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV) dans les délais les plus brefs. A tous nos appels, les puissances coloniales semblent faire la sourde oreille, invoquant toutes sortes de difficultés qui ne sont en réalité qu'un prétexte pour sauvegarder les intérêts matériels de leurs colons et des monopoles économiques qu'ils ont installés dans leurs colonies. Il est regrettable que les colons anglais, portugais, sud-africains refusent d'abandonner cet esprit et cette mentalité colonialistes et qu'ils continuent à pratiquer une politique égoïste et aveugle, sans se préoccuper de l'avenir. Il est encore plus regrettable que les puissances coloniales qui les protègent n'arrivent pas non plus à se débarrasser de ce complexe de conquérant et continuent à confondre l'intérêt bien compris de leurs relations avec les peuples qu'ils ont assujettis par la force avec les intérêts de leurs nationaux et de leurs colons dans ces territoires. Cet état de choses n'a malheureusement que trop duré, et l'Organisation se doit de rappeler aux puissances administrantes de respecter leurs obligations envers la Charte.

M. Khampan (Laos), vice-président, prend la présidence.

85. Le Royaume-Uni, par exemple, s'est obstinément refusé à coopérer avec le Comité spécial pour faciliter la recherche d'une solution juste et satisfaisante au problème de la Rhodésie du Sud. Depuis 1962, le Comité a tracé la voie et indiqué les lignes générales qui pourraient servir de cadre à une solution à ce problème, rendu si complexe par la politique désastreuse pratiquée par la Puissance administrante depuis 1923. L'Assemblée générale confirma dès 1962 le point de vue du Comité et adopta une résolution par laquelle elle demandait au Royaume-Uni de ne pas procéder aux élections qui étaient prévues par la Constitution de décembre 1961, et d'abroger ou de suspendre cette constitution tout en prenant les mesures nécessaires pour la convocation d'une conférence constitutionnelle à laquelle participeraient tous les chefs nationalistes des partis politiques du territoire.

86. Nous avons à ce moment-là attiré l'attention de la Puissance administrante sur le fait que tout délai apporté à l'application de cette résolution ne pouvait qu'encourager les colons racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud à consolider leur pouvoir et leur autorité dans la colonie. Le Gouvernement britannique savait parfaitement bien que c'était la seule voie à suivre et que toute autre politique ne pouvait que créer les germes d'un conflit entre les Africains du Zimbabwe et la minorité de colons blancs. Il était évident alors que l'imposition de la Constitution de 1961 — Constitution rejetée déjà par la totalité des Africains rhodésiens — ouvrait le chemin à l'établissement d'un Etat copié sur celui de l'Afrique du Sud et précipitait une catastrophe en élargissant le fossé dangereux qui séparait les deux éléments de la population.

87. S'il persistait quelque doute dans l'esprit des responsables britanniques à ce sujet, l'exemple algérien était là pour le dissiper. Nous avons nous-mêmes, membres du Sous-Comité de la Rhodésie du Sud, prié les responsables britanniques, lors de conversations que nous avons eues avec eux à Londres, de suivre l'exemple de la France, qui, ayant à faire face à plus d'un million de colons français en Algérie, n'avait pas hésité à tenir en échec leur rébellion et à mater les agitateurs pour rétablir la situation et reconnaître aux Algériens leur droit à l'indépendance. Le courage et la clairvoyance de la France, ainsi que la détermination de son président, le général de Gaulle, qui leur ont valu toute notre reconnaissance et notre gratitude, pouvaient, à notre avis, indiquer la voie de la raison, de la sagesse, et aider les colonialistes anglais à se dégager de la confusion de la politique traditionnelle qu'ils suivaient en Rhodésie du Sud pour retrouver la solution positive et réaliste, la seule qui était de nature à sauvegarder leurs intérêts en Afrique.

88. Il est regrettable que la Puissance administrante n'ait pas jugé bon de choisir la voie de la fermeté

lorsque le Ministère de M. Whitehead était encore au pouvoir à Salisbury. Se dérochant à ses obligations envers l'Organisation sous le paravent des précédents constitutionnels et des traditions parlementaires, la Puissance administrante a cru bon, au contraire, de pratiquer envers le peuple dont elle assurait la tutelle une politique qui ne fit que renforcer l'autorité des extrémistes racistes en Rhodésie du Sud en les dotant de tous les moyens, militaires et autres, d'exercer le pouvoir. Rassurés par les propres déclarations du Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni, selon lesquelles la force ne serait pas utilisée contre eux au cas où ils déclareraient unilatéralement leur indépendance, les Blancs de Rhodésie se mirent en rébellion ouverte contre leurs propres tuteurs. La situation en Rhodésie du Sud se détériore dangereusement et constitue une véritable menace à la paix et à la sécurité dans toute la région méridionale de l'Afrique. La Puissance administrante doit en assumer toute la responsabilité devant l'Organisation.

89. En effet, même au point extrêmement dangereux où en est arrivée la situation en Rhodésie du Sud, à cause du défi lancé par Ian Smith, même devant cette agression caractérisée perpétrée par les usurpateurs du pouvoir contre les 4 millions d'Africains, la Puissance administrante hésite encore à prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour mater la rébellion et transférer les pouvoirs aux représentants authentiques du peuple du Zimbabwe. La Puissance administrante a pris, il est vrai, certaines sanctions économiques et financières. Il est toutefois évident que ces mesures n'auront qu'une efficacité relative tant qu'un embargo total et complet ne sera pas imposé et tant que ces mesures ne seront pas renforcées par une action militaire. Par ailleurs, même limité aux quelques sanctions annoncées par le Royaume-Uni, le boycottage proposé par celui-ci ne sera pas respecté puisque, comme nous le savons tous, les produits nécessaires au gouvernement rebelle d'Ian Smith seront acheminés par ses deux alliés, le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud.

90. Le New York Times du 5 décembre 1965 a publié une information de l'agence Reuter, de Londres, datée du 4 décembre 1965, qui explique bien comment les sanctions prises par l'Organisation contre la Rhodésie du Sud sont défaites par les grandes compagnies pétrolières:

"Un pétrolier de la British Petroleum Company — qui appartient plus qu'à moitié au Gouvernement britannique — est en route ce soir pour l'Afrique avec 12 000 tonnes de pétrole destiné à la colonie dissidente de Rhodésie.

"Le pétrolier arrivera à Beira, en Afrique-Orientale portugaise, dans 10 jours. Le pétrole sera conduit par oléoduc jusqu'à une raffinerie à Umtali, en Rhodésie, qui est la propriété conjointe de la British Petroleum Company et de six autres compagnies pétrolières.

"Cet envoi de pétrole en Rhodésie est le premier depuis que le premier ministre Ian Smith a déclaré l'indépendance, le 11 novembre. Le pétrole a été chargé dans l'Etat d'Abu Dhabi, dans le golfe Persique, qui n'a pas suivi la recommandation des Nations Unies d'imposer un embargo sur le pétrole à destination de la Rhodésie. Le Royaume-Uni a voté en faveur de la recommandation, mais n'a pas imposé d'embargo sur le pétrole.

"Un porte-parole de la compagnie pétrolière a dit que le pétrole d'Abu Dhabi était utilisé parce que l'Iran et la Libye appliquaient l'embargo*."

Voilà comment les sanctions sont respectées!

91. De l'avis de la délégation tunisienne, seule une action militaire engagée immédiatement pourrait ouvrir la voie à une solution satisfaisante de ce problème et ferait par là même l'économie d'une guérilla qui risque d'être autrement plus coûteuse.

92. Les derniers événements en Rhodésie ont prouvé de façon éclatante qu'un gouvernement formé par la minorité de colons racistes en Rhodésie du Sud a déjà créé une menace réelle contre l'indépendance et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays voisin: la Zambie.

93. L'Organisation ne peut rester impassible devant la situation explosive qui règne en Rhodésie du Sud; elle ne peut demeurer muette devant l'agression perpétrée par Ian Smith et son gouvernement raciste contre la sécurité de tout un peuple de 4 millions d'Africains dont les droits les plus sacrés sont foulés aux pieds. Elle doit intervenir pour arrêter cette agression et la menace qui en découle pour les autres pays voisins. L'Organisation se doit d'adopter des mesures énergiques pour mettre un terme au complot fomenté par les rebelles blancs de la Rhodésie du Sud, aidés et soutenus par leurs alliés portugais et sud-africains. L'Assemblée générale doit inviter la Puissance administrante à prendre les dispositions économiques et militaires nécessaires pour restituer au peuple zimbabwe tous ses droits inaliénables tels qu'ils sont reconnus par la Charte, et en particulier son droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, conformément à la résolution 1514 (XV).

94. J'ai parlé de la Rhodésie du Sud, qui est le cas le plus typique où la complaisance de la Puissance administrante a créé de toutes pièces une situation anormale qui constitue aujourd'hui une menace à la paix et à la sécurité en Afrique. Si cette situation existe aujourd'hui, c'est parce que le Royaume-Uni s'est refusé à accorder au Comité spécial et à l'Organisation une coopération effective en vue de hâter le processus de la décolonisation par des moyens pacifiques.

95. La même attitude négative a été observée par le Portugal en ce qui concerne les grands territoires africains qu'il continue à dominer. Malgré les condamnations successives de l'Organisation et malgré les nombreuses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, le Portugal continue à défier la conscience internationale et à exploiter de la façon la plus indigne et la plus honteuse les millions d'Africains de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise.

96. Nous constatons que dans la poursuite de son odieuse politique, le Portugal se trouve encouragé par la complaisance de ses partenaires commerciaux. Malgré les appels répétés de tous les Etats africains, les alliés du Portugal continuent de lui

fournir les investissements financiers et les équipements militaires qui lui permettent de poursuivre sa guerre et sa répression contre les nationalistes africains et de consolider sa puissance en Afrique pour faire échec aux mesures économiques décidées contre lui par les Nations Unies et par l'Organisation de l'unité africaine. Nous ne pouvons accepter cette attitude de la part de ces Etats qui, indirectement peut-être, ne font qu'aider la répression effroyable qui s'abat sur les Angolais et les habitants du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise, et renforcer le colonialisme portugais chez nous. Nous comprenons mal que cette attitude inamicale soit celle de certains membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité. Encore une fois, nous faisons appel aux Etats-Unis, au Royaume-Uni, à la France et à leurs alliés — l'Italie, la Belgique, le Japon — pour qu'ils mettent fin à cette assistance et à cette aide à ceux qui persistent à ignorer leurs obligations d'Etats Membres de l'Organisation et qui continuent à violer les droits inaliénables de millions d'Africains en Angola, au Mozambique et en Guinée dite portugaise, contrairement aux principes de la Charte.

97. La situation dans les autres territoires africains demeure aussi tragique. Au Sud-Ouest africain et en Afrique du Sud, nos frères africains continuent à souffrir la honte des lois racistes de la politique d'apartheid. Ce sont leurs droits les plus élémentaires d'êtres humains qui sont quotidiennement violés et méconnus. Cette situation révoltante et répugnante continue et réduit à l'état dégradant d'êtres inférieurs près de 14 millions d'Africains. La politique et la philosophie d'apartheid, fondées sur le concept de la supériorité d'une race, ont été universellement condamnées; mais nous sommes réduits à l'impuissance lorsqu'il s'agit de redresser cette situation, parce que les grandes puissances commerciales ont refusé jusqu'à maintenant d'appliquer des sanctions économiques totales, seules capables d'amener le gouvernement de Pretoria à renoncer à sa politique inhumaine d'apartheid. L'Organisation doit prendre d'urgence les mesures nécessaires pour persuader les partenaires commerciaux de l'Afrique du Sud de coopérer avec elle pour prendre toutes les mesures coercitives nécessaires, y compris la rupture des relations diplomatiques ou commerciales et l'embargo sur les armes, le pétrole et les produits pétroliers.

98. Dans d'autres territoires d'Afrique, comme les protectorats anglais, ou d'Asie, comme Aden et le Sud arabe, la Puissance administrante n'a pas réalisé non plus les progrès attendus pour hâter l'indépendance de ces pays. Le recours à la force et les mesures de répression sont encore trop souvent utilisés contre les nationalistes.

99. Un autre ensemble de problèmes concerne les îles et petits territoires éparpillés dans les océans et pour lesquels le Comité spécial doit trouver des solutions fondées sur l'intérêt des habitants et leur développement. En ce qui concerne des petits territoires et des îles encore sous domination étrangère, la délégation tunisienne estime qu'il y a un travail assez sérieux à entreprendre pour évaluer avec la Puissance administrante les meilleurs procédés et moyens qui permettront une libre consultation des habitants afin de déterminer leur avenir.

*Cité en anglais par l'orateur.

Une étude poussée doit comprendre tous les aspects humains, géographiques et économiques, afin d'assurer à ces peuples un développement social et culturel rapide. Les Nations Unies ont là un nouveau domaine où la coopération internationale doit être encouragée.

100. La délégation tunisienne estime que l'exemple donné par la Nouvelle-Zélande dans les îles Cook est extrêmement important et pourrait constituer une expérience et un précédent heureux. La présence d'un représentant des Nations Unies, M. Omar Adeel — à qui ma délégation se plaît à rendre ici un hommage bien mérité —, a donné à la coopération de la Puissance administrante avec les Nations Unies un sens nouveau et une direction nouvelle qui devraient inspirer d'autres administrations.

101. Enfin, d'autres territoires dont la souveraineté demeure contestée devraient être examinés par le Comité spécial pour hâter la recherche d'une solution satisfaisante aux problèmes qu'ils continuent de poser. Cette solution doit être recherchée dans le cadre des négociations entre les parties directement intéressées. Ceci est particulièrement important pour Gibraltar et les îles Malouines.

102. Nous avons noté avec satisfaction que le représentant de l'Espagne, dans la déclaration qu'il a faite hier [1389ème séance], a clairement affirmé que son pays était prêt à engager des négociations avec le Royaume-Uni sur le problème de Gibraltar. L'esprit de coopération manifesté par l'Espagne pour régler cette question mérite d'être encouragé par l'Assemblée. Ma délégation serait heureuse de le voir prévaloir aussi dans le cas d'autres territoires en Afrique, comme Ifni et le Sahara espagnol.

103. Telles sont les quelques remarques que ma délégation a cru bon de faire sur les territoires les plus importants dont l'examen a été entrepris par notre comité spécial.

104. Le bilan rapide des quatre années de travail du Comité spécial démontre que les progrès réalisés dans la liquidation du colonialisme sont encore loin d'être appréciables et continuent d'être freinés par le manque de coopération de la part des puissances administrantes, et particulièrement de celles dont les efforts tendent à renforcer le bastion des minorités dominantes en Afrique méridionale.

105. Les intérêts financiers considérables investis par les grandes puissances commerciales et par les alliés de l'Afrique du Sud, du Portugal et de la Rhodésie du Sud constituent de plus en plus un obstacle sérieux à la réalisation des aspirations légitimes des peuples colonisés et renforcent la résistance des dirigeants blancs à tout effort de décolonisation pacifique. Nous nous joignons à ceux qui ont déjà lancé un appel aux grandes puissances coloniales pour qu'elles renoncent à cette attitude négative envers les nationalistes africains et pour qu'elles abandonnent cette politique de complaisance envers les racistes et les colonialistes d'Afrique méridionale. Il est en effet évident que toutes les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité ont été ignorées par le Royaume-Uni, l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal. L'Assemblée générale devrait tenir compte de l'évolution des mouvements nationalistes dans tous les territoires encore sous domination étrangère. Une conscience nouvelle anime nos frères qui luttent pour leur indépendance.

106. Nous saluons les efforts de tous ceux qui s'organisent et luttent avec acharnement et détermination pour le triomphe de leurs droits. Les Nations Unies ont, à maintes reprises, reconnu le mérite de ceux qui luttent et ont admis le caractère juste de leur combat.

107. Aussi l'Assemblée générale devrait-elle rechercher tous les moyens propres à soutenir et renforcer les mouvements de libération nationale. Une aide directe concrète ne serait que l'illustration de la ferme volonté des Nations Unies de débarrasser l'humanité du colonialisme. Il est grand temps, pour les puissances coloniales, de prendre en considération les principes sacrés de la Charte. Nous leur adressons un appel pressant pour qu'elles coopèrent avec sincérité à l'application rapide de la résolution 1514 (XV) à chacun des territoires sous leur administration. Le refus d'une telle coopération nuirait au prestige de l'Organisation, forçant ceux qui luttent pour leur indépendance à recourir à toutes les solutions de désespoir, et les inciterait à ne compter que sur eux-mêmes.

108. La Tunisie croit fermement au triomphe de la raison et de la justice; mais, si les puissances coloniales continuent encore à défier l'Organisation en refusant d'appliquer ses résolutions pertinentes, il ne restera plus d'autre voie ouverte aux mouvements de libération que celle de la résistance armée pour la défense de leur dignité et de leur droit à l'autodétermination.

109. M. DE CASTRO (Philippines) [traduit de l'anglais]: La délégation des Philippines est heureuse de participer à cette discussion générale sur l'œuvre réalisée pendant les deux dernières années par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Ce débat permet à l'Organisation de s'arrêter un instant pour considérer ce qui a été fait jusqu'à présent et ce qui reste à faire. Nous devons pour ainsi dire faire un bilan et voir où nous en sommes. Nous devons nous demander: Que ferons-nous maintenant?

110. Quand les Membres fondateurs ont créé l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ils ont promis solennellement que, dans le monde entier, les peuples assujettis recouvreraient leurs droits fondamentaux à la liberté et à l'indépendance. En même temps, les puissances administrantes ont librement et solennellement accepté, comme un devoir sacré, l'obligation de travailler au maximum à améliorer la condition des habitants de ces territoires et, en particulier, de leur accorder progressivement l'autonomie, de tenir compte de leurs aspirations politiques et de les aider à développer peu à peu leurs libres institutions selon les conditions particulières à chaque territoire et aux peuples qui l'habitent ainsi que de leurs stades divers de développement.

111. La République des Philippines, ancienne colonie devenue une nation libre et souveraine peu après la seconde guerre mondiale, a été l'un des Membres fondateurs de l'Organisation. Elle a joué un rôle, à vrai dire modeste, en faveur de l'inclusion dans la Charte de la Déclaration sur les territoires non autonomes.

112. Quinze années plus tard, en 1960, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dans sa résolution 1514 (XV), a réaffirmé sa détermination de mettre fin à toutes les formes du colonialisme. Elle a déclaré en termes non équivoques que:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'humanité",

et que:

"des mesures immédiates seront prises... pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leur vœu librement exprimés...".

Les Philippines ont eu également l'honneur de figurer parmi les auteurs de cette résolution et d'appuyer son adoption.

113. Maintenant que la Charte a 20 ans et cette déclaration cinq ans, on est en droit de demander: Quel est le bilan à la date d'aujourd'hui? Combien de colonies ont obtenu la liberté et combien d'autres restent à libérer?

114. En 1946, il y avait 74 territoires, peuplés de 215 millions d'hommes, auxquels s'appliquait le chapitre XI de la Charte. Ils étaient de tailles différentes, s'échelonnant d'une centaine d'habitants pour la petite île de Pitcairn à plus de 70 millions aux Indes néerlandaises. Près de la moitié de l'effectif des hommes colonisés se trouvait sur le continent africain. Il y en avait un très grand nombre dans la région importante du littoral méditerranéen.

115. Depuis ce sombre début, avons-nous fait des progrès? Certainement. Voyons les chiffres.

116. Les territoires non autonomes ayant obtenu leur autonomie sous une forme ou sous une autre à la fin de 1954 étaient: la Guyane française, la Guadeloupe, la Martinique, la Réunion et Saint-Pierre et Miquelon, qui sont des départements d'outre-mer ou ont un statut analogue dans le cadre de la République française; l'Indonésie et les Etats d'Indochine, qui ont alors acquis leur indépendance; Porto Rico, qui est devenue un commonwealth associé aux Etats-Unis; le Groenland, qui s'est uni au royaume du Danemark sur un pied d'égalité avec les autres parties du royaume; les Antilles néerlandaises et Surinam, qui se sont associés au royaume des Pays-Bas.

117. Depuis 1955, les territoires sous mandat et les territoires non autonomes, surtout ceux d'Afrique, ont fait des progrès de plus en plus rapides vers l'indépendance. En 1956, le Maroc, la Tunisie et le Soudan sont devenus indépendants. Les anciens territoires français de l'Afrique occidentale et de l'Afrique équatoriale, Madagascar, l'archipel des Comores et la Côte française des Somalis étaient en train d'obtenir leur indépendance. La Côte-de-l'Or devenait l'Etat indépendant du Ghana. En 1958, l'ancienne Guinée française devenait indépendante sous le nom de République de Guinée.

118. En même temps, dans d'autres parties du monde, le mouvement des peuples dépendants vers l'indépendance ou l'autonomie s'accélérait également: la Fédération de Malaisie obtenait son indépendance en 1957 et, en 1959, l'Alaska et Hawaii obtenaient le statut d'Etat au sein des Etats-Unis d'Amérique.

119. Au cours de l'année 1960, il n'y eut pas moins de 18 pays nouveaux qui accédèrent à l'indépendance: 17 en Afrique et un dans le bassin méditerranéen. En 1961 et 1962, deux pays d'Afrique et deux pays des Caraïbes devinrent indépendants. Cette année, en 1965, deux autres sont devenus libres et ont été admis comme Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Les îles Cook sont devenues autonomes et elles ont le droit de choisir l'indépendance si leur peuple le désire. Enfin, il a été annoncé que la Guyane britannique deviendrait indépendante en 1966.

120. Ainsi, sur les 215 millions d'hommes qui n'étaient pas libres, il n'en reste environ que 25 millions à libérer. L'Organisation des Nations Unies peut se féliciter, à juste titre, des progrès considérables réalisés dans ce domaine.

121. Certes, la liste des territoires qui restent à libérer est encore longue; mais, sauf quelques-uns, à savoir la Rhodésie du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et les territoires sous administration portugaise, la grande majorité (et je n'entends pas minimiser leur importance) est constituée de petites îles ou de territoires peu peuplés. Ces petits territoires pourront à l'avenir être le principal objet des travaux du Comité spécial. Les modalités et méthodes qui ont réussi dans le cas des grands territoires à population indigène nombreuse ne conviendront peut-être pas pour eux. Il faudra sans doute que le Comité spécial traite le problème d'une façon nouvelle en tenant compte des conditions particulières à ces îles, sans jamais oublier que le but final est la liberté et l'indépendance ou l'autonomie, selon ce que voudront les populations.

122. J'ai dit que les trois questions principales qui se posent au Comité des Vingt-Quatre, comme à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, sont celles de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain et des territoires portugais. Ces trois cas constituent sans aucun doute aujourd'hui le problème majeur de la décolonisation. Ce qui complique encore les choses, c'est la présence dans ces pays de minorités racistes intransigeantes.

123. La position de mon gouvernement sur ces questions est parfaitement claire et bien connue. Il n'est pas nécessaire que j'abuse de la patience de l'Assemblée pour la définir à nouveau. Qu'il me suffise de dire que ma délégation appuiera toutes les mesures que l'Organisation des Nations Unies estimera nécessaire de prendre dans chacun de ces territoires pour y faire prévaloir les droits inaliénables de la population à la liberté, à l'indépendance et à la dignité humaine. Nous ne pouvons pas admettre que les puissances administrantes refusent d'appliquer les prescriptions de la Charte et les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale.

124. Permettez-moi de revenir au cas des petits territoires. Les problèmes qu'ils posent devront sans doute retenir particulièrement l'attention du Comité spécial à partir de maintenant. Ma délégation se permet par conséquent de suggérer que ce comité se fixe comme tâche particulière de mettre au point une méthode que les puissances administrantes pourraient appliquer pour que ces petits territoires avancent vers l'autonomie complète, l'indépendance et la liberté. Cette suggestion est conforme à la lettre et à l'esprit de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui garantit à tous les peuples le droit à l'autodétermination, grâce à laquelle ils peuvent déterminer librement leur statut politique et poursuivre librement leur développement économique, social et culturel.

125. Avant de conclure, permettez-moi de définir clairement la position de ma délégation au sujet de l'utilité des visites effectuées dans les territoires en question par des membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Jusqu'à présent, les puissances administrantes ont toujours refusé ces visites. Ma délégation y attache beaucoup d'importance et demande instamment aux puissances administrantes de reconsidérer leur position. Les informations fournies par les puissances administrantes et les dépositions de signataires de pétitions, verbales ou écrites, gagnent à être évaluées par l'observation directe.

126. Je l'ai dit au début de mon intervention, ma délégation est heureuse d'avoir cette occasion de participer à la discussion du point 23. Sous certaines réserves, exprimées au cours des discussions de la Quatrième Commission, au sujet de quelques conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial s'appliquant à quelques chapitres précis des rapports, ma délégation votera l'approbation des rapports du Comité spécial. Elle ajoute ses félicitations à celles, nombreuses, que le Comité a déjà reçues pour les travaux excellents, précieux et considérables qu'il nous a soumis. Ma délégation votera aussi tout projet de résolution visant à prolonger le mandat du Comité spécial.

127. Je voudrais dire un mot pour finir. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a fait beaucoup pour la libération des peuples assujettis. Mais elle ne peut pas relâcher ses efforts tant que le dernier territoire colonisé n'aura pas été libéré ou rendu autonome.

128. M. DACHTSEREN (République populaire mongole) [traduit du russe]: Il y a juste cinq ans, les Nations Unies adoptaient la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce document historique, qui exprimait l'ardente volonté de tous les peuples épris de liberté de mettre fin au honteux système colonial, a insufflé l'espoir aux peuples opprimés des colonies et les a inspirés dans la lutte qu'ils mènent pour se libérer de l'esclavage colonial.

129. Pendant les cinq années écoulées, la lutte des peuples coloniaux n'a cessé de s'intensifier et a revêtu différentes formes — de la formation de partis politiques au soulèvement armé contre des régimes coloniaux abhorrés. Voici plus de quatre ans que le peuple angolais mène une lutte courageuse contre les colonialistes portugais. A sa suite, les peuples du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise se sont soulevés. Le peuple de l'Arabie du Sud lutte tout aussi résolument pour libérer son pays des colonialistes britanniques. Et nous avons encore présente à l'esprit la longue lutte que le peuple algérien a dû soutenir avant de reconstituer la nation algérienne.

130. Grâce à l'intensification de la lutte des peuples coloniaux et à l'action de toutes les forces pacifiques au cours de ces cinq années, plusieurs pays, autrefois soumis à la domination coloniale, ont accédé à l'indépendance nationale et sont venus se joindre à la famille des nations souveraines; ces pays mènent désormais le combat aux côtés de toute l'humanité progressiste pour aider leurs frères à se libérer de la domination coloniale.

131. Les peuples ont désormais le désir passionné d'en finir au plus vite avec le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, car la survivance d'empires coloniaux est en flagrante contradiction avec la volonté et la conscience de l'humanité, avec les principes et les objectifs des Nations Unies. Il est donc naturel que dans le monde entier, tant à l'Organisation des Nations Unies qu'au-dehors, les forces de progrès déploient d'immenses efforts pour accélérer le processus de liquidation complète du système colonial et donner effet à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

132. A cet égard, nous nous devons de relever le rôle considérable que les jeunes Etats indépendants d'Afrique et d'Asie et les Etats socialistes ont joué et continuent à jouer dans la lutte générale contre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme. Les pays socialistes et les pays non alignés d'Asie et d'Afrique ont condamné et condamnent d'un commun accord l'impérialisme et le colonialisme, dont ils dénoncent les intrigues et les manœuvres de toutes sortes destinées à perpétuer les régimes coloniaux.

133. La Conférence des chefs d'Etats indépendants d'Afrique, tenue en 1963 à Addis-Abéba, a marqué une étape nouvelle dans la lutte des peuples contre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme. L'Organisation de l'unité africaine, qui a été créée à cette conférence, contribue efficacement à consolider l'indépendance politique et économique des peuples africains et joue un rôle important dans la progression des mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux et dépendants.

134. Comme nous le savons tous, la Conférence des chefs d'Etats indépendants d'Afrique qui s'est tenue à Addis-Abéba et les réunions africaines au sommet dont elle fut suivie, ainsi que la Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés qui a eu lieu pendant la période considérée, ont élaboré un programme d'action et indiqué des mesures concrètes propres à accélérer le processus de décolonisation et de libération des peuples coloniaux et dépendants du joug colonial et raciste. L'Organisation de l'unité africaine et tous les pays afro-asiatiques aident considérablement l'Organisation des Nations Unies à s'acquitter de la tâche qui lui a été confiée par la Charte et la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

135. Quand l'Assemblée générale a décidé, par la résolution 1907 (XVIII), de désigner l'année 1965 comme Année de la coopération internationale, de nombreux Etats Membres ont exprimé le vœu que cette année verrait la liquidation définitive et complète des vestiges du système colonial. Mais, hélas, des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains, et près de 60 territoires répartis dans les différentes parties du monde restent soumis aujourd'hui encore à l'esclavage colonial. Ainsi, l'espoir des peuples a été déçu et les dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'ont pas été appliquées. La raison de cette situation funeste, c'est que quelques puissances colonialistes et leurs alliés du bloc agressif de l'OTAN refusent obstinément de donner effet aux dispositions de la Déclaration et des diverses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité.

136. C'est ainsi que le Portugal agit sans tenir aucun compte des résolutions de l'ONU relatives aux colonies portugaises. Salazar lui-même a déclaré que le Portugal "est résolu à maintenir sa domination sur l'Angola et tous les autres territoires, sans se soucier des appels de l'ONU touchant l'octroi de l'indépendance à ces territoires".

137. A cette fin, les colonialistes portugais intensifient les opérations punitives destinées à réprimer la lutte légitime des peuples d'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise pour leur liberté et leur indépendance. Les atrocités et la cruauté des colonialistes portugais ne peuvent se comparer qu'aux méthodes les plus barbares du fascisme. Nul n'ignore qu'un pays comme le Portugal serait incapable, sans soutien extérieur, de conserver des possessions coloniales situées sur un autre continent et 10 fois plus étendues que son propre territoire. Le Portugal partage la responsabilité de tous les forfaits perpétrés par les colonialistes aux ordres de Salazar avec les puissances occidentales comme les Etats-Unis, la République fédérale d'Allemagne et autres qui, au mépris des nombreuses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, financent une guerre sanglante sur le continent africain et fournissent des armes à cet effet.

138. Quant à la situation dans les colonies britanniques d'Aden, d'Oman, de la Guyane britannique, du Betchouanaland, du Bassoutoland et du Souaziland, elle s'aggrave sans cesse. Le Gouvernement britannique, tout en promettant officiellement d'accorder l'indépendance à ces territoires, continue sous divers prétextes de les maintenir sous la domination coloniale. Dans son intervention du 1er décembre dernier devant l'Assemblée générale [1386ème séance], le représentant du Royaume-Uni a tenté de justifier par divers arguments d'ordre social et économique le retard apporté à l'octroi de l'indépendance à ces territoires. Je voudrais à cet égard citer la disposition pertinente de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Aux termes du paragraphe 3 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV):

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

139. Le racisme, qui est une forme particulière du colonialisme, demeure un danger pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

140. Le régime raciste d'Afrique du Sud, fort de l'aide économique et militaire des puissances occidentales, continue d'appliquer intensivement l'odieuse politique d'apartheid, étendant ce système de ségrégation raciale à un territoire limitrophe: le Sud-Ouest africain. La population autochtone du Sud-Ouest africain est ainsi soumise par les racistes de la République sud-africaine à une impitoyable oppression.

141. Les racistes sud-africains sont en train d'ourdir des plans criminels en vue de démembrer et d'annexer le territoire et d'y étendre le système de l'apartheid. Dans cette infâme entreprise d'asservissement de la population autochtone, les monopoles étrangers agissent la main dans la main avec le régime raciste de Verwoerd.

142. L'examen de la question du Sud-Ouest africain et l'analyse de l'activité des monopoles étrangers dans ce territoire, auxquels a récemment procédé le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre, ont pleinement confirmé ce que nous venons de dire.

143. En Rhodésie du Sud, la proclamation illégale par le régime raciste d'Ian Smith d'indépendance est un nouvel acte criminel commis par les racistes et leurs complices. Malgré les nombreuses mises en garde contre le danger que présenterait la création d'un nouvel Etat raciste sur le modèle de la République sud-africaine et malgré l'opinion pacifique mondiale qui réclame l'adoption des mesures nécessaires pour couper court à toute aventure de ce genre, les puissances occidentales, en particulier le Royaume-Uni, ont favorisé cette proclamation illégale de l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud. C'est ainsi qu'un nouveau foyer de tension est apparu au centre de l'Afrique.

144. La position du Gouvernement de la République populaire mongole sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud est claire. Dans sa déclaration du 16 novembre 1965, le gouvernement de mon pays a catégoriquement condamné cet acte criminel et déclaré qu'il "ne reconnaîtra pas l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud, proclamée illégalement par la dictature raciste de la minorité blanche aux dépens des intérêts du peuple du Zimbabwe" et qu'"il invite tous les Etats à prendre au plus tôt toutes les mesures nécessaires"^{5/}.

145. Dans plusieurs autres territoires sous tutelle, le comportement des puissances administrantes est loin d'être conforme aux dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, en particulier, transforment en bases militaires les îles du Pacifique placées sous leur tutelle; or, ces bases représentent une grave menace pour la paix et la sécurité des peuples d'Asie et d'Extrême-Orient.

146. Tout cela montre que les forces de progrès qui luttent pour éliminer aussi rapidement que possible le honteux système colonial doivent redoubler d'efforts, à la fois dans le cadre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et en dehors.

147. A côté des vestiges du colonialisme qui en

incarnent les anciennes formes classiques, le néo-colonialisme ne représente pas un moindre danger, car il est devenu pour les puissances impérialistes un moyen de maintenir les anciens régimes coloniaux et d'asservir les jeunes Etats indépendants qui manquent encore de force. Les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et la République fédérale d'Allemagne sont à l'avant-garde de ceux qui pratiquent une politique colonialiste. Les monopoles américains et ceux d'Allemagne occidentale occupent une position prépondérante dans de nombreux territoires non autonomes.

148. C'est ainsi que la revue United States News and World Report écrivait le 1er juin 1965: "Les grandes firmes américaines estiment que les entreprises à l'étranger sont d'un excellent rapport. C'est là un des principaux facteurs de la vie économique dans la seconde moitié du XXème siècle."

149. La République fédérale d'Allemagne ne se borne pas à étendre son influence économique dans les colonies africaines du Portugal, en République sud-africaine et dans le Sud-Ouest africain. Elle fournit des armes au Portugal et à l'Afrique du Sud, établit des bases militaires, y compris des bases pour le lancement de fusées en Afrique australe.

150. Parallèlement à cette expansion économique qui vise à perpétuer l'asservissement des pays coloniaux et des jeunes Etats indépendants, les colonialistes et leurs alliés néo-colonialistes, dans le dessein de maintenir leurs positions économiques et stratégiques, interviennent ouvertement dans les affaires intérieures d'Etats souverains qui se sont déjà libérés du régime colonial.

151. Les exemples les plus frappants sont à cet égard l'intervention des puissances impérialistes au Congo, avec la participation des Etats-Unis, de la Belgique et du Royaume-Uni, l'intervention armée des Etats-Unis d'Amérique dans les affaires intérieures de la République Dominicaine, l'agression américaine au Viet-Nam ainsi que les bombardements barbares auxquels est soumis le territoire de la République démocratique du Viet-Nam.

152. Il est clair que dans ces actions collectives des puissances impérialistes, qui ont pour seul but le maintien du colonialisme, le rôle principal revient aux impérialistes américains. La revue américaine de politique extérieure Foreign Affairs écrivait à ce sujet, dans son numéro d'octobre 1965: "Pour autant que les circonstances l'ont permis, nous avons encouragé l'ancienne puissance coloniale à demeurer sur place ou à revenir sur scène."

153. Les bases militaires des puissances impérialistes à l'étranger servent à protéger leurs positions économiques et politiques, elles servent aussi à écraser les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux. Les impérialistes américains et britanniques ont entouré la surface du globe d'un réseau de bases militaires à partir desquelles ils se livrent à l'agression ouverte, à l'intervention armée dans les affaires intérieures d'Etats souverains, à des opérations punitives contre les peuples des territoires non autonomes.

154. La plupart des bases militaires du Royaume-Uni sont situées dans ses possessions coloniales et dans ses anciennes colonies, qui ont récemment conquis l'indépendance nationale. Parlant devant l'Assemblée générale [1386ème séance], lord Caradon, représentant du Royaume-Uni, a dit que son pays n'avait besoin de bases que pour exécuter ses obligations touchant le maintien de la paix et à l'égard de ses amis pour leur venir en aide et honorer ses engagements à leur égard découlant des traités.

155. Si l'on songe aux circonstances dans lesquelles ces bases ont été utilisées, il est facile de déterminer leur véritable rôle. Chacun sait que le Royaume-Uni est venu en aide à ses alliés en mettant à leur disposition sa base de l'île de l'Ascension, pour faciliter l'intervention américano-belge au Congo.

156. Notre délégation estime que la lutte des peuples pour la suppression des bases étrangères et le retrait des forces armées étrangères sont inséparables de la lutte contre l'impérialisme, pour la libération nationale et la paix dans le monde entier.

157. Notre délégation partage pleinement l'opinion de ceux qui estiment que le moment est venu de prendre des mesures concrètes et effectives pour l'application inconditionnelle de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Notre délégation est d'avis que, tout en prenant les mesures les plus vigoureuses contre les puissances coloniales, il faut également condamner énergiquement l'activité de celles des puissances occidentales qui continuent, sans tenir compte des décisions de l'ONU, de fournir aux régimes coloniaux et racistes une aide politique, militaire et économique, leur comportement constituant le principal obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration des Nations Unies.

158. Il faut que l'Assemblée générale réaffirme le droit des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, reconnaisse la légitimité de la lutte que mènent ces peuples pour accéder à ce droit, invite tous les Etats à leur venir en aide.

159. L'Assemblée générale doit également adresser un avertissement sévère, tant aux puissances coloniales qu'aux puissances qui leur prêtent assistance, en déclarant que les unes et les autres violent de manière flagrante la Charte et la Déclaration de l'ONU et assument de ce fait une lourde responsabilité internationale devant l'ensemble des peuples.

160. Pour conclure, je voudrais dire quelques mots de l'activité du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre. Au cours de la période écoulée, le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre a accompli un travail considérable et utile qui mérite toute notre reconnaissance.

161. Le Comité a présenté à l'Assemblée générale un rapport substantiel qui abonde en éléments d'information concrets et qui reflète la situation réelle existant dans les territoires qu'il a étudiés.

162. La décision du Comité d'envoyer une mission de visite a été pleinement justifiée. Bien que le Comité n'ait pu se rendre directement dans les territoires coloniaux en raison du refus des puissances administrantes, il a pu établir, à l'occasion de ses travaux dans les capitales de trois Etats africains, des contacts étroits avec les peuples en lutte pour l'indépendance nationale.

163. Au cours de son voyage, le Comité a examiné les graves problèmes coloniaux que sont les questions de la Rhodésie du Sud, des territoires administrés par le Portugal et du Sud-Ouest africain, et il a divulgué de nombreux faits concrets qui révèlent l'action funeste des monopoles étrangers et le rôle des puissances occidentales membres du bloc militaire de l'OTAN dans la politique aventureuse des colonialistes portugais et du régime raciste de la République sud-africaine.

164. La session que le Comité a tenue en Afrique a donc marqué une nouvelle étape de son activité. C'est là une méthode de travail féconde à laquelle le Comité devra encore recourir à l'avenir.

165. Considérant le travail fécond accompli par le Comité au cours de ses quatre années d'existence et la tâche qui l'attend s'il doit poursuivre l'étude de la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration, la délégation mongole estime utile et souhaitable de proroger le mandat du Comité des Vingt-Quatre.

166. Le peuple mongol, qui a autrefois subi la domination féodale et coloniale, a toujours été aux côtés des peuples qui combattent pour la liberté et l'indépendance nationale.

167. Le peuple mongol et son gouvernement condamnent sévèrement, comme étant un crime très grave contre l'humanité, le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

168. La République populaire mongole est prête à appuyer toute mesure effective qui viserait à éliminer au plus tôt les vestiges du honteux système colonial; elle est prête, dans la mesure de ses moyens, à apporter sa contribution à cette entreprise.

169. M. LEKIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, les déclarations de nombreux signataires de pétitions et surtout ce qui se passe dans le centre et le sud de l'Afrique nous ont confirmé dans notre conviction que la communauté mondiale est en présence d'une situation grave dans le domaine de la décolonisation. Bien que des progrès aient été réalisés depuis 1963, nous sommes encore loin d'avoir atteint les buts fixés par la Charte et par la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce n'est pas seulement parce qu'un tiers du territoire de l'Afrique est encore soumis aux formes les plus brutales de l'exploitation et de l'oppression, contrairement à l'esprit de la Charte et aux exigences de la civilisation moderne. Il s'agit en fait de politiques qui mettent en jeu la vie de millions d'Africains ainsi que la paix et la sécurité de l'Afrique, donc la paix et la sécurité mondiales. Profitant de tous les avantages qu'offre aux tenants du racisme et de l'hégémonie la crise des relations internationales, les racistes de Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain et de l'Afrique du Sud, comme les forces colonialistes et néo-colonialistes en général, appliquent une politique qui aura sans doute de vastes conséquences. Profitant de ce que les nations éprises de paix sont occupées par des événements qui se produisent dans d'autres parties du monde et qui menacent directement la paix et la sécurité de l'humanité, les racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud ont réduit totalement à l'esclavage les quatre millions d'habitants de ce territoire. En cela, ils ont l'appui total des partisans de la théorie de l'Uebermensch en Afrique du Sud, lesquels, de leur côté, prennent des mesures pour enlever aux peuples du Sud-Ouest africain même le plus faible espoir de se libérer de la condition d'esclaves dans laquelle ils sont maintenus depuis plus de 40 ans par les racistes de l'Afrique du Sud.

170. Les colonialistes portugais s'apprêtent également à intensifier, dans des conditions nouvelles, la guerre coloniale qu'ils mènent contre les habitants des territoires placés sous leur domination et à leur imposer, par le fer et par le feu, les bienfaits de ce qu'ils appellent la civilisation portugaise.

171. Ce ne sont là, bien entendu, que les manifestations les plus spectaculaires de l'action coordonnée des forces du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme, qui s'exerce également dans d'autres territoires. Dans certains d'entre eux, on abroge la Constitution, on renvoie le gouvernement, on procède à l'état d'urgence, on procède par la force à des "consultations" et l'on prend des mesures propres à faire "accepter" des solutions, que les habitants rejettent pour la raison bien simple que ces solutions ne sont pas conformes à leurs aspirations et à leurs vœux.

172. Le fait que la crise des relations internationales a gêné la décolonisation prouve une fois de plus que la politique qui consiste à aggraver les tensions, à employer la force pour le règlement des différends internationaux et à ne pas hésiter à risquer la guerre a une influence défavorable sur la lutte pour la liberté, l'indépendance et l'égalité des droits des peuples, ainsi que sur l'établissement d'une paix durable dans le monde. Quels que soient les prétextes invoqués pour mener cette politique d'intensification des tensions et d'intervention extérieure, quelles que soient les raisons données pour la justifier, il n'en reste pas moins que ses protagonistes ne s'intéressent pas vraiment à la liberté et à l'émancipation des peuples et des Etats. En fait, ce qui est en jeu, ce sont des intérêts mesquins et égoïstes qui les poussent à poursuivre des buts précis dans les domaines politique, militaire, stratégique et économique en aggravant les causes existantes de conflit et en en créant de nouvelles.

173. Nous voyons se manifester maintenant une tendance qui vise à étendre les privilèges existants et à en extorquer de nouveaux, à imposer des relations internationales basées sur la domination et l'hégémonie et à empêcher, ou tout au moins à gêner, les progrès dans le monde. Considérée sous cet angle, la régression observée actuellement dans le domaine de la décolonisation est étroitement liée à la crise des relations internationales, elle est dans une large mesure la conséquence directe de cette crise.

174. La situation créée par les événements du Vietnam et d'autres parties du monde a sans aucun doute encouragé M. Smith à choisir précisément ce moment pour commettre un acte de trahison envers le Royaume-Uni et un crime contre les 4 millions d'Africains de Rhodésie du Sud. Inversement, l'existence du colonialisme, en tant que système de relations basé sur la domination et l'inégalité, convient aux protagonistes de la politique d'aggravation des relations et d'ingérence dans les affaires des autres peuples et des autres Etats.

175. Cette évolution dans le domaine de la décolonisation n'est pas due seulement au refus de quelques puissances coloniales de faire honneur à leurs obligations et de coopérer activement à l'élimination du colonialisme et à l'application des principes et prescriptions de la Charte. Les rapports du Comité spécial [A/5800/Rev.1 et A/6000/Rev.1] font nettement ressortir qu'une grande part de responsabilité, maintenant peut-être la plus grande, revient à des pays qui, tout en condamnant verbalement les actes des racistes et des colonialistes, leur donnent en réalité tout leur appui. Cet appui, nous le savons, ne se limite pas à un accroissement des relations commerciales et économiques. Il comporte aussi des fournitures d'armes, directes ou passant par des pays tiers.

176. Vu sous cet angle, le problème colonial n'est plus une affaire à régler seulement entre une puissance coloniale donnée et l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui personnifie la communauté mondiale. Les conditions ont changé et les méthodes aussi. Il y a maintenant davantage de pays directement intéressés à maintenir des avant-postes à partir desquels ils pourront exercer une influence sur les événements qui se déroulent dans les diverses parties du monde et menacer ainsi l'indépendance chèrement acquise des pays récemment émancipés. C'est pourquoi l'élimination du colonialisme doit être considérée aujourd'hui comme un problème de relations entre l'Organisation des Nations Unies et les Etats qui, sous un prétexte quelconque, idéologique, militaire ou économique, aident le colonialisme à se maintenir ou gênent son élimination.

177. Les pays africains, intéressés à la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme et à l'élimination de la discrimination raciale du sol de l'Afrique (car cette question, pour eux comme pour nous, met en jeu la paix et la sécurité), ont tenté d'achever le processus de la décolonisation par des moyens pacifiques. Les chefs d'Etat africains et les dirigeants politiques des pays encore colonisés ont, à maintes reprises, déclaré qu'ils étaient prêts à rechercher par la négociation des solutions qui garantiraient l'égalité de traitement et l'égalité des droits aux membres des autres races en Afrique.

178. Les racistes et ceux qui les soutiennent n'ont pas montré le même attachement à la paix et au principe du règlement pacifique des différends que les pays et les peuples africains. Ils n'ont pas pris la main que ces derniers leur tendaient et ils ont répondu à ce geste d'amitié et à cette offre de coopération par des mesures de répression brutale et par la guerre. Les tentatives faites pour rechercher par des moyens pacifiques les solutions qui garantiraient l'égalité de tous n'ont provoqué de la part des colonialistes que des actes qui violent les droits et la dignité humaine des Africains.

179. Il y a donc un affrontement entre les conceptions nouvelles et les conceptions anciennes, entre les idées progressistes et les idées réactionnaires, entre les sentiments humains et les sentiments inhumains, entre le droit et la force, entre la justice

et l'illégalité, entre l'amitié et la haine, entre la foi dans l'humanité et dans un avenir meilleur et la peur d'un avenir incertain. Il n'y a qu'une issue possible à cet affrontement, et c'est le triomphe de la justice sur le refus de la loi, la victoire du droit sur la force. Dans un conflit de cette nature, cette issue n'est jamais douteuse. La question est seulement de savoir si nous voulons faire ce qui est nécessaire (et ensemble nous pouvons le faire) pour mettre fin à ce conflit avec un minimum de souffrances et de sacrifices.

181. C'est pour des raisons évidentes que nous avons parlé longuement des faits dangereux qui se sont produits dans les colonies, faits qui témoignent du rôle précis que les colonialistes et néo-colonialistes ont fixé aux colonies dans le cadre d'une stratégie globale visant à préserver les privilèges existants, à en acquérir de nouveaux et à imposer, sous des apparences nouvelles, des formes de relations qui sont en réalité celles d'autrefois, basées sur la domination et sur la subordination.

182. Cependant, il existe ce qu'on appelle des petites colonies, c'est-à-dire celles dont la faible superficie, la population peu nombreuse et le sous-développement économique servent d'arguments pour justifier le maintien d'une domination étrangère. Ces facteurs compliquent probablement, dans certains cas, le processus d'émancipation de ces territoires, mais ils ne sont pas les seuls à donner au problème son véritable caractère. La plupart de ces territoires sont situés à une distance plus ou moins grande des côtes et des continents qui ont été récemment libérés ou qui luttent actuellement pour leur émancipation politique et économique. C'est pour cette raison que ces territoires intéressent particulièrement les puissances qui ne peuvent s'adapter aux changements qui ont eu lieu dans le monde et désirent conserver des positions à partir desquelles elles puissent entraver le développement de pays récemment émancipés et déclencher des actions visant à rétablir des sphères d'influence.

184. A ce sujet, je tiens à souligner que la variété des procédés et méthodes employés par les forces du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme pour atteindre leurs buts nous oblige à modifier constamment les modalités de l'action de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans le processus de décolonisation. Nous croyons qu'il est nécessaire d'adopter des méthodes de travail qui permettent à l'Organisation de jouer son rôle dans la phase actuelle de cette opération. Les Nations Unies doivent contrecarrer les actions des puissances coloniales, principalement les actions militaires qui empêchent d'atteindre l'un des buts fondamentaux de la Charte, à savoir le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, et qui imposent une lutte armée aux peuples coloniaux. Elles peuvent le faire en accordant leur appui politique, moral et matériel aux peuples coloniaux qui luttent pour leur libération.

185. D'autre part, pour obtenir une décolonisation pacifique là où c'est encore possible, l'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait s'engager directement et de bonne heure, en envoyant des missions itinérantes ou en affirmant la présence de l'Organisation par l'envoi d'observateurs ou de résidents, dans le seul but d'élaborer des programmes et d'accélérer l'application de mesures visant à transmettre le pouvoir à des représentants des populations et à garantir l'indépendance de celles-ci.

186. En dernière analyse, ce serait aussi l'intérêt bien compris des puissances coloniales, qui doivent se résigner à l'inévitable. Il faudrait qu'elles renoncent à se retrancher derrière la fiction juridique de leur compétence exclusive et qu'au moins dans la phase actuelle elles montrent de la bonne volonté ainsi que le désir d'aider à atteindre les buts et à appliquer les principes qui sont ceux de l'Organisation.

187. Profitant de l'expérience qu'il a acquise pendant son séjour d'un mois en Afrique, où il a accompli un travail considérable et précieux, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre pourrait, en adoptant des méthodes de travail appropriées et en les adaptant constamment aux conditions changeantes, insister encore davantage sur son rôle politique, sur l'action qu'on attend de lui. Cette action comporte l'initiative et la mise au point de mesures concrètes pour accélérer le processus de décolonisation. En plus du travail des sous-comités et des séances tenues à proximité des colonies (lesquelles ont prouvé leur utilité politique), il faudrait constituer des missions itinérantes ou désigner des membres individuels du Comité, et demander aux puissances administrantes de permettre à ces missions ou à ces membres de visiter des territoires encore coloniaux pour se rendre compte de la situation et s'entendre avec les puissances administrantes sur les mesures à prendre. Il serait utile également de tenir des sessions courtes mais fréquentes consacrées à l'étude de la situation dans certains territoires, uniquement en vue d'une action politique urgente à entreprendre soit par le Comité lui-même, soit, à la demande de celui-ci, par le Conseil de sécurité. Cela permettrait d'attirer en temps voulu l'attention de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et donc de la communauté internationale sur des problèmes qui mettent directement en danger la paix mondiale. Cela fournirait également un soutien moral et politique plus grand et permanent aux peuples qui combattent pour leur libération. Pour ces peuples, les manifestations de présence et de sollicitude constante de l'Organisation mondiale ont une importance exceptionnelle.

188. La relation étroite qui existe entre la crise des relations internationales — la guerre du Viet-Nam en particulier — et l'évolution négative de la décolonisation de l'Afrique, l'interdépendance et les répercussions réciproques de ces deux ordres de faits montrent clairement que la lutte pour la paix ne peut être dissociée de la lutte pour la liberté et l'égalité de tous les peuples. Cela doit déterminer, à notre avis, l'orientation et l'activité des forces de paix et de démocratie. Il faut que ces forces, particulièrement en ce moment, s'emploient énergiquement et de façon concertée à éliminer le danger immédiat pour la paix et la sécurité mondiales que présente la guerre du Viet-Nam. Cela facilitera toute action visant à prévenir des événements qui, si l'on ne prend pas à temps les mesures qui s'imposent, ont risque d'aboutir à des effusions de sang, non seulement en Afrique mais dans d'autres régions.

189. Le vingtième anniversaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies nous fournit une occasion favorable pour dresser un bilan et examiner ce qui a déjà été fait et ce qui reste à faire. A la lumière de cette analyse et de l'évolution la plus récente de la décolonisation, il faut prendre des mesures ayant pour objet de faire appliquer immédiatement la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. L'Assemblée générale devrait réaffirmer cette déclaration, exiger son application immédiate, fixer une date limite pour l'élimination du colonialisme partout dans le monde et sous toutes ses formes et inviter les puissances administrantes à coopérer pleinement à la mise en œuvre d'un programme à élaborer en coopération avec les représentants des peuples coloniaux et destiné à achever le processus de décolonisation dans un délai déterminé.

190. La délégation yougoslave donnera tout son appui, comme elle l'a fait dans le passé, à la lutte des peuples qui sont encore colonisés et aux efforts déployés par les forces de paix et de progrès pour l'élimination immédiate du colonialisme.

191. M. EASTMAN (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Quant l'Assemblée générale a adopté sa résolution historique 1514 (XV), on espérait que, par l'application de cette résolution, le monde se libérerait des derniers vestiges du colonialisme et éliminerait à jamais le système horrible de pillage, d'exploitation et de refus du droit fondamental qu'ont les peuples à choisir leur propre destin. Il est regrettable que nous soyons réunis ici pour discuter de l'octroi de la liberté et de l'indépendance à plus de 50 territoires éparpillés sur toute la surface du globe. Nous discutons encore du point de savoir si ces peuples ont le droit que nous leur avons déjà reconnu. Nous aurions cru que les puissances administrantes seraient maintenant convaincues que nous ne pouvons pas supporter plus longtemps le système du colonialisme et qu'elles auraient pris toutes les mesures nécessaires pour accorder la liberté à la population des territoires placés sous leur domination. Nous savons en effet que la forme la plus libérale du colonialisme ne se compare pas à la forme la moins élevée de liberté et d'indépendance. Aucun peuple ne peut réellement accomplir son destin sous une domination étrangère. Nous admettons qu'il existe des formes diverses de colonialisme, mais mon gouvernement réprovoque ce système sous quelque forme que ce soit.

192. Toutefois, la forme la plus diabolique est celle qui est employée par les gouvernements du Portugal et de l'Afrique du Sud. Nous n'avons pas l'intention de récapituler devant l'Assemblée les atrocités perpétrées sur les peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise par le régime de Salazar. Il est cependant extrêmement difficile d'oublier les souffrances, le génocide et l'oppression infligés aux populations de ces territoires par la domination portugaise. L'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité se sont prononcés sur cette question à maintes reprises et ont demandé au Portugal de reconnaître les droits fondamentaux des peuples placés sous son administration. Tout le monde connaît la réponse. Le Portugal n'hésite pas à se moquer de nos décisions et il a adopté des mesures encore plus énergiques pour continuer à opprimer la population de ses colonies.

193. L'Organisation des Nations Unies ne peut compter atteindre les objectifs qu'elle s'est fixés tant que des hommes souffriront dans le monde, parce que la paix et la sécurité seront toujours en danger s'il en est à qui l'on refuse le droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Le continent africain restera dans un état de tension, d'insécurité et d'agitation aussi longtemps que certains de nos frères n'auront pas la liberté. Si nous jouissons de la liberté et de l'indépendance dans notre propre pays, cela ne nous suffit pas. Cela ne nous suffira pas tant que le continent ne sera pas entièrement libre. Alors, notre propre indépendance nous paraîtra meilleure.

194. En ce qui concerne l'Afrique du Sud et sa politique d'apartheid dans le Sud-Ouest africain, mon gouvernement a clairement défini sa position. Nous nous bornerons à répéter que nous sommes fermement convaincus que l'Afrique du Sud a failli à son mandat dans le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain. Nous sommes opposés au partage de ce territoire; nous sommes également opposés à l'aliénation des terres telle qu'elle y est pratiquée.

195. Nous tenons à assurer à l'Assemblée que le gouvernement et le peuple du Libéria persisteront sans relâche dans leurs efforts pour obtenir que le peuple du Sud-Ouest africain puisse à nouveau vivre libre. Le gouvernement du Libéria condamne sans réserve les actes criminels perpétrés par le régime minoritaire de la Rhodésie du Sud. Il appelle toutes les nations éprises de paix à conjuguer leurs efforts avec les siens pour empêcher que cette autorité illégale se maintienne en Rhodésie du Sud.

196. En ce qui concerne les territoires de la Haute Commission, ceux du Bassoutoland, du Betchouanaland et du Swaziland, le Gouvernement du Libéria condamne toute tentative du Gouvernement sud-africain pour annexer ces trois territoires ou porter atteinte à leur intégrité territoriale. Toute action, directe ou indirecte, entreprise dans ce but par l'Afrique du

Sud doit être considérée par l'Assemblée générale comme agression.

197. Ma délégation approuve la résolution du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [voir A/5800/Rev.1, chap. VIII] demandant la réunion d'une assemblée constituante dans chacun des trois territoires, où il n'y en a pas eu, pour recueillir les avis de tous les groupes de population et prendre ensuite des dispositions démocratiques d'ordre constitutionnel conduisant à des élections générales basées sur le suffrage universel des adultes et à la réaffirmation du droit inaliénable du peuple de chacun de ces territoires à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

198. Il ressort des rapports qui nous sont présentés qu'au sujet de certains des territoires non encore libérés des différends territoriaux se sont élevés entre des Etats Membres des Nations Unies et que des négociations sont en cours ou vont commencer à ce sujet. Bien que ma délégation s'abstienne de prendre une position ferme sur cette question à la présente session, nous tenons à déclarer que, jusqu'à ce que la question des différends territoriaux puisse être définitivement réglée, nous considérons que tous les peuples ont le droit absolu de choisir leur propre destin. Nous demandons que, dans toute négociation, on prenne en considération les intérêts des habitants.

199. La délégation du Libéria salue avec joie l'annonce faite par le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, que la Guyane britannique accédera à l'indépendance sous le nom de Guyane le 26 mai 1966. Nous demandons au peuple de la Guyane tout entier de coopérer pour réaliser les conditions les plus favorables à son indépendance. Le gouvernement et le peuple du Libéria saisissent cette occasion pour adresser au peuple de la Guyane leurs meilleurs vœux de paix, d'harmonie, de progrès et de stabilité au moment de leur accession à l'indépendance.

200. Ma délégation est stupéfaite du refus de l'Australie de dire franchement si elle a l'intention d'accorder l'indépendance à la population de Nauru. En 1965, les dirigeants de Nauru ont déclaré à la mission itinérante et à la précédente session du Conseil de tutelle qu'ils désiraient accéder à l'indépendance en 1968. C'est une prétention légitime; c'est un droit. C'est pourquoi nous invitons le gouvernement de l'Australie à dire devant cette assemblée s'il reconnaît le droit du peuple de Nauru et, dans l'affirmative, à dire catégoriquement si ce peuple verra ses désirs se réaliser.

201. Pour conclure, je veux rappeler que les espoirs des peuples non encore libérés reposent sur l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Ce qu'ils demandent est simple: c'est d'être libres de s'occuper de leurs propres affaires; d'avoir droit à leur terre et à ses ressources naturelles; de gérer eux-mêmes leur commerce et leur industrie de sorte que le but des investissements et du travail soit le bien-être de tous et non l'enrichissement de quelques-uns. Le développement de l'Afrique, et d'ailleurs de toute autre région du monde, doit se faire au bénéfice de ses habitants et non au seul profit des capitalistes et des exploiters étrangers. En un mot, ils veulent vivre égaux aux autres hommes. Est-ce trop demander?

202. Enfin, je me permets de saisir cette occasion pour adresser les félicitations de ma délégation au Président et aux membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour les rapports contenus dans les documents A/5800/Rev.1 et A/6000/Rev.1. Connaissant les difficultés que le Comité spécial a rencontrées pour remplir efficacement son mandat conformément au paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la résolution 1956 (XVIII), nous le félicitons de tout cœur pour le travail qu'il a accompli.

203. Le PRESIDENT: Un certain nombre de représentants ayant demandé à exercer le droit de réponse, je vais leur donner successivement la parole.

204. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: En exerçant mon droit de réponse, je tiens à expliquer que si ma délégation n'a rien dit au cours de la discussion générale sur les sujets qui font l'objet du rapport du Comité spécial, c'est que nous en avons parlé longuement et fréquemment pendant les quatre années où nous avons été membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, et auparavant comme membre du Comité des Dix-Sept. Nous nous sommes efforcés alors de définir clairement nos vues sur les nombreux sujets traités dans ces rapports. En outre, nous avons donné le plus possible de renseignements, pour satisfaire entièrement le Comité, sur les régions dont celui-ci s'occupait et dont l'Australie est responsable.

205. Me référant au rapport dans son ensemble, je voudrais dire à cette séance plénière toute l'estime que nous éprouvons pour la dignité et la compétence du Président du Comité, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, et pour le travail considérable qu'a fourni notre collègue, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, le très distingué Rapporteur du Comité. Je voudrais aussi rendre hommage à l'efficacité dont ont toujours fait preuve M. Godfrey Amachree, M. Chacko et leurs collègues du Secrétariat, qui ont mis en forme les résultats des travaux du Comité spécial et qui, à vrai dire, nous ont fourni les moyens de réaliser ces travaux.

206. Au sujet d'un autre aspect des travaux du Comité, je voudrais rendre hommage également à M. Adeel qui, en remplissant d'une façon objective ses fonctions d'observateur et de rapporteur aux élections des îles Cook, a, j'en suis persuadé, fait grand honneur non seulement à lui-même mais aussi à son pays et à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

207. En préparant cette réponse, je me suis souvenu que les représentants de 50 nations s'étaient réunis à San Francisco, d'avril à juin 1945, et ils s'étaient mis d'accord sur la Charte des Nations Unies, qui est entrée en vigueur la même année et qui vraiment depuis cette date nous a éclairés et a servi de base à tous nos travaux.

208. Les Membres originels des Nations Unies, ceux qui ont signé et ratifié la Charte, étaient au nombre de 51, et mon pays, l'Australie, était l'un d'eux. Ce qui unissait ces pays, c'était avant tout un fond commun de souffrances, et aussi d'espoir et de volonté engendrés par ces souffrances.

209. C'est en partant de cette base et parce qu'ils se rendaient compte que leur condition humaine leur était commune qu'ils ont voulu travailler ensemble, sans considération d'idéologie politique, de race, de culture ou de situation géographique, à atteindre des objectifs qui étaient les mêmes pour tous. Je crois juste de rappeler que, dans les séances où la Charte a été conçue, mon pays, l'Australie, n'a pas joué un rôle obscur.

210. A ce sujet, et pour répondre en partie à certaines observations faites au cours de ce débat par les représentants du Ghana et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, je rappelle une phrase prononcée par le représentant de Ceylan dans un savant discours prononcé il y a deux ans devant la Quatrième Commission:

"Je manquerais à mon devoir si je n'ajoutais pas maintenant que le monde ainsi que tous les peuples coloniaux et ceux qui ne le sont plus sont redevables à l'Australie de l'initiative qu'elle a prise à la Conférence de San Francisco et qui a fait d'elle l'un des principaux auteurs de la Déclaration contenue dans l'article 73, déclaration qui, si on se réfère au passé, a fourni le mécanisme grâce auquel il a été possible d'émanciper de nombreux peuples coloniaux au cours des 17 dernières années^{6/}."

211. Moi, qui suis australien, je n'oublierai pas cette phrase. Je connais l'histoire de la Conférence de San Francisco, et je sais que cet hommage est mérité. Je demande à cette assemblée plénière de bien noter ces mots du représentant de Ceylan:

"... qui, si on se réfère au passé, a fourni le mécanisme grâce auquel il a été possible d'émanciper de nombreux peuples coloniaux au cours des 17 dernières années."

212. C'est avec une conscience aiguë des valeurs qui se dégageaient de leurs épreuves communes et tragiques que les pays qui ont rédigé la Charte, au nombre de 51, ont abordé les problèmes coloniaux de l'époque. Les éléments fondamentaux du colonialisme, au sens où l'on emploie généralement ce mot, existaient encore dans un certain nombre d'endroits où l'on pouvait les déceler. C'étaient sans doute essentiellement l'occupation par la force des terres d'autres peuples, l'exploitation, le refus de la liberté d'expression, le préjugé racial et la discrimination raciale. Mais, maintenant, je me demande jusqu'à quel point on peut encore déceler ces éléments dans certaines situations que nous qualifions de coloniales, peut-être même dans beaucoup d'entre elles.

213. Il est possible — et je crois, pour ma part, qu'il en est ainsi — que très souvent, quand nous parlons maintenant de situations coloniales, il ne s'agit pas de celles que nous avions en l'esprit à San Francisco; je crois plutôt que les choses sont rendues confuses, sinon même déformées par l'emploi de mots qui menacent de devenir nos maîtres.

214. Je crois, par exemple, que nous comprenons fort mal, du moins certains d'entre nous, le sens très élevé de leur responsabilité personnelle qui anime beaucoup de ceux auxquels a été confiée la tâche de guider, de faciliter de d'animer les phases essentielles du développement d'autres peuples, un sens des responsabilités puisé dans l'histoire, dans la connaissance des erreurs et des insuffisances du passé, dans les épreuves partagées en paix comme en guerre, dans le rejet des notions raciales, dans la lutte commune, dans nos efforts vers des buts communs ici à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dans les influences spirituelles réciproques qui s'exercent ici et ailleurs grâce aux moyens de communication dont dispose le monde à l'heure actuelle, dans le simple fait que nous nous connaissons les uns les autres et que nous connaissons nos problèmes et, surtout, dans ce sens très développé de la responsabilité de l'homme à l'égard de son prochain, sans considération de race ni de religion.

215. En ce qui concerne mes concitoyens, je ne puis que repousser les observations faites ici par les représentants du Ghana et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie au sujet de l'administration australienne en Nouvelle-Guinée. Je crois que ces derniers sont si occupés — et c'est compréhensible — par les problèmes de l'Afrique qu'ils n'ont pu acquérir une connaissance et une compréhension approfondies de notre partie du monde, qui est très éloignée de l'Afrique. Mais je ne veux pas m'étendre sur ce sujet. Je n'ai pas non plus l'intention de réfuter en détail ce qu'ils ont dit.

216. Je rappelle, cependant, que le représentant du Ghana a dit hier [1389ème séance] qu'en Papouasie et en Nouvelle-Guinée, au lieu de rapprocher les hommes les uns des autres, le Gouvernement australien introduit dans leur esprit des distinctions raciales et ethniques pour retarder l'acceptation de leur demande d'indépendance. C'est juste le contraire. J'ai expliqué patiemment, à maintes reprises, dans beaucoup d'organes des Nations Unies, et les représentants des populations indigènes l'ont expliqué aussi eux-mêmes, que la Papouasie et la Nouvelle-Guinée ne sont pas de petits territoires, comme notre collègue l'a dit hier; ils comptent deux millions d'indigènes, deux millions d'indigènes intelligents, qui cherchent leur voie et formeront l'une des nations de l'avenir.

217. Il y a, pour commencer, 700 langues différentes pour ces 2 millions d'habitants. Jusqu'à l'arrivée des Australiens, les populations de Papouasie et de Mélanésie étaient coupées les unes des autres par cette multiplicité des langues. Il n'y avait pas de communications. Ils étaient, d'autre part, séparés les uns des autres par des barrières naturelles si formidables que, même à l'heure actuelle, le pays n'a pas livré tous ses secrets géographiques, topographiques et humains, bien que nous ayons utilisé très largement les moyens de communication et de découverte les plus modernes, comme les avions et les hélicoptères. Ils étaient séparés aussi par des coutumes différentes et comme enfermés dans un millier au moins de groupements de tribus différents, exclusifs et mutuellement hostiles. Pour la plupart, ils ignoraient même l'existence des autres groupements, sauf de ceux qui étaient leurs voisins. Quand les Australiens arrivèrent dans ce pays, il n'était pas unifié, il n'existait pas un peuple unique, il n'existait aucun gouvernement pouvant prétendre exercer son pouvoir sur plus d'une portion infime de ce grand pays. La première tâche de mon peuple, et je me permets de dire que je peux en parler avec quelque autorité, car cela a fait partie de ma tâche personnelle il y a plusieurs années, fut de créer une entité nationale pour qu'elle se gouverne elle-même. Il n'y avait pas d'entité nationale en Nouvelle-Guinée, et notre tâche était d'en créer une. Le Gouvernement australien s'est attaché à cette œuvre avec une vigueur opiniâtre, en répandant l'instruction, les soins médicaux et en développant la conscience d'une identité commune au pays tout entier. Je dirai à un moment plus approprié comment nous nous y prenons.

218. Le représentant du Ghana a dit aussi: "Les ressources de la Nouvelle-Guinée sont exploitées impunément par le Gouvernement australien." [1389ème séance, par. 175.] Il devrait cependant savoir, et je regrette fort qu'il ne soit pas ici pour l'apprendre, que jamais dans l'histoire de ce qu'on appelle la colonisation autant d'argent n'a été dépensé par une métropole dans un territoire administré par elle, sans songer à en tirer quelque profit. Quel est le chiffre annuel? La subvention australienne à la Papouasie et à la Nouvelle-Guinée — sans intérêt, non remboursable, un véritable don — est cette année de quelque 30 millions de livres australiennes, c'est-à-dire de 70 à 80 millions de dollars. Encore faut-il y ajouter quelques millions supplémentaires inscrits au budget du Gouvernement australien lui-même, pour des matières telles que le développement de l'aviation civile. Le chiffre total annuel, qui a augmenté tous les ans depuis la guerre, approche de 100 millions de dollars. Voilà le pays que notre collègue prétend que nous exploitons!

219. Le représentant du Ghana a parlé aussi de problèmes fonciers en Nouvelle-Guinée. Je doute que, dans l'histoire de ce qu'on appelle la colonisation, la terre ait été nulle part aussi jalousement réservée pour le bien-être et l'usage de la population indigène. De la superficie totale de ces vastes terres, moins de 3 p. 100 ont été achetés aux indigènes, dont une bonne partie à des fins de colonisation agraire selon les méthodes modernes, dont bénéficient les populations indigènes elles-mêmes.

220. Mais laissons de côté ces questions de détail. J'y reviendrai plus tard et j'en parlerai d'une façon plus détaillée. J'ai quelque chose à dire, particulièrement aux représentants de la Tanzanie et du Ghana. Je le dis en pensant à la situation qui existe dans d'autres régions où nous cherchons à réaliser ce que nous croyons être bon et nécessaire (en fait, ce que nous croyons être le meilleur), et surtout en pensant à ce qui est le fond du problème de la Rhodésie du Sud qui retient tant notre attention. Je demande à l'Assemblée de bien comparer ce que je vais dire à ce qui a été dit ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, au sujet de la Rhodésie du Sud et d'autres pays coloniaux du monde. Mais je voudrais d'abord faire une courte digression pour souligner qu'après la récente déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance de ce malheureux pays de Rhodésie du Sud le parlement australien a été l'un des premiers du monde à annoncer et à appliquer les mesures nécessaires pour renforcer l'action entreprise par le Royaume-Uni et celles qui étaient réclamées par les Nations Unies elles-mêmes, à savoir le refus de reconnaître le gouvernement de Rhodésie du Sud, l'interdiction du commerce avec ce pays et l'application de mesures d'ordre monétaire. Tout ceci a été fait au parlement australien dans les quelques jours qui ont suivi la déclaration d'indépendance. Mais, pour en revenir à la comparaison que je veux faire avec la question essentielle qui se pose en Rhodésie du Sud et qui est celle du droit de vote et de la représentation de la majorité, voici ce que j'ai à dire. Il y a en Nouvelle-Guinée 2 millions d'indigènes et quelque 27 000 Australiens. Nous appliquons dans ce pays le suffrage universel. Le système électoral garantit une voix à chaque homme et à chaque femme, sur la base d'une liste électorale unique, sans distinction de race, de religion ou de couleur. Ce système a donné naissance à un parlement où la majorité est indigène.

221. Bref, la solution que nous avons recherchée et que nous recherchons encore à tous les problèmes en Rhodésie du Sud, qui vaut pour d'autres régions d'Afrique et pour d'autres parties du monde, est un fait accompli en Nouvelle-Guinée: le suffrage universel, une liste électorale unique et une majorité indigène élue.

222. Parlons aussi de toute la gamme des libertés dont mon pays, l'autorité administrante, a hérité: libération du besoin, libération de la peur et toutes autres libertés que l'humanité s'efforce de faire prévaloir. Elles existent en Papouasie et en Nouvelle-Guinée. Il n'y a pas de prisonniers politiques dans ces pays, ni en Australie même. Dans toute l'Australie métropolitaine et dans tous les territoires australiens, il n'y a pas un seul prisonnier politique. La liberté d'association, la liberté de réunion, la liberté de la presse et la liberté d'expression sont assurées. La discrimination raciale est bannie. Les partis politiques, les syndicats et toutes autres organisations indigènes échappent à tout contrôle et sont même encouragés. Dans notre pays, nous considérons ces choses comme normales. Or, la plupart des problèmes qui se posent à l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans le domaine colonial ne sont des problèmes que parce que ces libertés y sont refusées. Alors que nous avons à nous préoccuper de tant de régions où il existe des conflits, graves ou bénins, je fais remarquer à l'Assemblée que la paix règne dans les territoires australiens. Elle y règne partout. Il n'y a pas de conflit armé. Cette atmosphère de paix permet le progrès. Personne n'y meurt pour obtenir un droit qui lui a été refusé.

223. En conclusion, je dis très respectueusement à mes collègues de la Tanzanie et du Ghana, que ces libertés, le suffrage universel, la liste électorale unique, un parlement à majorité indigène montrent comment nous comprenons nos responsabilités en Nouvelle-Guinée. Nous en avons là-bas. Nous voulons nous en acquitter, nous en acquitter à la lettre. De même, nous avons des droits ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et ailleurs. Nous les protégerons.

224. M. DE MIRANDA (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: On a beaucoup parlé de mon pays au cours de ces débats. Bien que ma délégation ait écouté atten-tivement tous les orateurs et qu'elle ait attendu jusqu'à maintenant pour exercer son droit de réponse, nous n'avons rien découvert de nouveau dans ce qui a été dit. Tout ce que nous avons entendu ne constitue qu'une répétition de ce que nous entendons depuis un certain temps déjà.

225. Comme chacun sait, notre position a été définie très clairement à de nombreuses occasions, tant au point de vue juridique qu'au point de vue politique, dans tous les organes compétents des Nations Unies. Il ne semble pas nécessaire de la préciser à nouveau. C'est pourquoi je ne ferai pas perdre de temps à l'Assemblée en répétant ce que nous avons déjà dit.

226. Je veux cependant répondre à ceux qui nous critiquent que les opinions préconçues, les allégations sans fondement, l'altération des faits, les demi-vérités et les mensonges, même si on les répète souvent, n'arrivent pas à faire une vérité. En fait, ces répétitions ne servent qu'à souligner la nature irréaliste et artificielle des débats en ce qui concerne mon pays. Mais ce n'est point là l'objet de mon intervention. Si ma délégation vient maintenant à cette tribune, c'est seulement pour rectifier certaines affirmations précises faites au cours de ces débats. Je le ferai brièvement, sans aucun esprit de polémique.

227. A la 1389^{ème} séance plénière, la délégation de la Guinée, en portant contre nous certaines accusations dans son style habituel, a prétendu que l'espace aérien de son pays était constamment violé par des avions portugais. Cette allégation est aussi tendancieuse que sans fondement. Ma délégation la rejette et y voit une tentative faite pour justifier certaines activités illicites qui s'exercent dans la République de Guinée et dont nous sommes les victimes.

228. De même, à la 1387^{ème} séance, la délégation sénégalaise a parlé de ses plaintes au Conseil de sécurité contre le Portugal en ces termes:

"Lorsque le Sénégal s'est plaint au Conseil de sécurité en février 1965, le Portugal n'a pas contesté les faits relatifs aux incidents allégués, mais il a cherché à justifier les violations perpétrées." [1387^{ème} séance, par. 22.]

Cette déclaration n'est pas conforme à la réponse portugaise au Sénégal, comme on peut le constater dans les documents correspondants du Conseil de sécurité. Dans une autre phrase, la délégation du Sénégal dit que le Portugal "s'est contenté de tout réfuter" [ibid.].

229. Ma délégation n'arrive pas à comprendre ce que veut dire cette phrase puisque la délégation sénégalaise admet elle-même: 1) que nous avons exprimé le désir de maintenir des relations amicales avec le Sénégal; 2) que nous avons proposé une discussion avec participation du Sénégal. Ma délégation estime que ces deux faits démontrent par eux-mêmes que le Portugal ne s'est pas "contenté de tout réfuter". En fait, nous avons proposé qu'une enquête tripartite soit faite sur les allégations du Sénégal, mais celui-ci ne voulait pas d'une enquête impartiale; tout ce qu'il voulait, c'était une résolution, basée, bien entendu, sur ses propres allégations.

230. En raison de ce qui précède, je crois que je suis en droit de dire, en reprenant les propres termes de la délégation du Sénégal:

"Je laisse l'Assemblée juge de tant d'ambiguïté, de tant de cynisme, d'un tel manque de bon sens."
[Ibid.]

231. La délégation du Sénégal fait maintenant état de nouveaux incidents et elle cherche à nous en attribuer la responsabilité. Nous remarquons, et nous voudrions que l'Assemblée remarque, que le Sénégal fait preuve de beaucoup d'ardeur pour répandre ses allégations, tandis qu'il se dérobe à nos propositions de les faire examiner par une commission d'enquête impartiale. Nous notons aussi que le Sénégal déclare que "la question est ailleurs" [ibid., par. 23]. C'est tout à fait significatif, et ma délégation est entièrement de cet avis. Nous savons parfaitement que la question n'est pas dans ces prétendus incidents, mais dans les objectifs plus vastes du Sénégal. Si celui-ci invoque des incidents de frontière, c'est uniquement pour tenter de créer un climat favorable à la poursuite de ces objectifs.

232. Mais le Sénégal ne peut pas prétendre cacher la réalité. Le monde entier sait qu'il héberge, aide et encourage des bandes armées destinées à troubler l'ordre dans notre territoire. Je ne serais pas étonné que sa délégation revienne à cette tribune pour dire qu'elle continuera à donner son appui à ces bandes armées. On ne peut nier que le territoire portugais soit constamment violé par des perturbateurs armés venant du Sénégal. Alors que nous sommes toujours disposés à faire enquêter sur les allégations des Sénégalais, bien que nous les considérions comme non fondées, ceux-ci préfèrent les annoncer à cor et à cri. Alors que nous respectons soigneusement le territoire et l'espace aérien du Sénégal, nous devons signaler que ce pays n'agit pas de même pour notre territoire. Nous ne pouvons en conclure qu'une chose, c'est que les accusations que le Sénégal porte contre nous ne sont que des tentatives, d'ailleurs bien faibles, pour camoufler ses propres activités illicites et échapper aux responsabilités qu'il encourt.

233. M. EASTMAN (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je suis au regret de devoir faire appel à votre indulgence, Monsieur le Président, si je prolonge un peu cette séance plénière.

234. Le représentant de l'Australie, mon ami, je puis le dire, a essayé de convaincre l'Assemblée que les observations faites par les représentants de la Tanzanie et du Ghana étaient sans fondement. Je n'ai pas le temps d'exposer la vérité en détail, mais je peux parler brièvement de ce qu'il a dit.

235. Il doit y avoir longtemps que le représentant de l'Australie n'est allé en Nouvelle-Guinée. Moi, qui en reviens depuis peu, je peux lui dire que la discrimination raciale est pratiquée ouvertement en Nouvelle-Guinée, dans les écoles, le logement, les salaires, les services médicaux, pour ne citer que ces quelques exemples.

236. Il nous a dit aussi qu'il s'élevait contre l'affirmation que l'Australie exploitait impunément ce pays. Je me demande si l'on sait en Australie que, à Boggabilla, où l'on extrait l'or par millions, quand les indigènes revendiquent leur part, leurs redevances, leurs droits de propriétaires, on leur dit que tout ce qui se trouve au-dessus du sol appartient au peuple de la Nouvelle-Guinée, mais que tout ce qui est en dessous est la propriété de l'Australie ou, comme on dit d'habitude, de la Couronne. Il nous a parlé des millions que le Gouvernement australien dépense en Nouvelle-Guinée au bénéfice de la population. Il ne nous a rien dit du Rio Tinto ni de Burns Philp, une société de Nouvelle-Guinée (pour ne citer que quelques-uns des monopoles), ni des nombreux millions que ces monopoles emportent chaque jour du pays.

237. Le représentant de l'Australie a parlé aussi de la terre. Je dois lui dire que ce dont on se plaint le plus fréquemment en Nouvelle-Guinée, c'est de ce que les meilleures terres sont enlevées aux indigènes ou aliénées d'une façon ou d'une autre (je ne sais comment) et qu'elles appartiennent maintenant à des Australiens et à des Néo-Zélandais. Je voudrais que le représentant australien réfute le fait que, depuis plusieurs années, le peuple de Nauru demande à entrer en possession de son île, mais qu'on le lui refuse. On lui a dit à plusieurs reprises qu'il n'était pas propriétaire de l'île et que c'était l'Australie qui l'était. On lui a dit qu'il ne possédait que ce qui était à la surface de l'île. C'est à cela que pensaient mes amis, les représentants du Ghana et de la Tanzanie, quand ils ont dit qu'ils étaient mécontents de l'administration australienne en Nouvelle-Guinée, et, à beaucoup d'égards, je suis tout à fait d'accord avec eux.

238. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je crois qu'il arrive rarement à l'Organisation des Nations Unies que le représentant d'un pays s'estime obligé d'exercer le droit de réponse pour le compte d'autres pays. Quand j'ai exercé le mien il y a un moment, c'était au sujet d'observations faites par les représentants de la Tanzanie et du Ghana au cours de ces débats. Mon collègue et ami, M. Eastman, du Libéria, s'est chargé de les défendre.

239. Le représentant du Libéria a parlé de discrimination raciale en Nouvelle-Guinée et de certaines questions relatives à Nauru. Je répondrai à ce qu'il a dit au cours de la discussion en séance plénière du rapport du Conseil de tutelle et devant la Quatrième Commission, quand j'exposerai devant l'ensemble des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies — ce qui n'a pas encore été fait — tous les détails des derniers événements survenus en Nouvelle-Guinée et à Nauru.

240. M. Eastman a dit que la discrimination raciale était ouvertement pratiquée en Nouvelle-Guinée. M. Eastman, je l'admets, est allé là-bas récemment comme notre invité d'honneur et nous lui avons donné toutes les facilités possibles. Il est parfaitement exact qu'on peut trouver des preuves de discrimination raciale et de toute espèce de discrimination dans tous les pays du monde, si l'on en cherche. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est que la discrimination raciale était proscrite en Nouvelle-Guinée. Elle l'est effectivement. Ce que j'ai dit, et ce que j'ai voulu dire, c'est qu'en Nouvelle-Guinée tous les hommes sont libres devant la loi, sans considération de race, de religion ou de couleur. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est qu'en Nouvelle-Guinée tous les hommes et toutes les femmes, sans considération de race, de religion ou de couleur, ont le droit de vote et élisent les membres du parlement. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est que tous les hommes et toutes les femmes de Nouvelle-Guinée, sans considération de race, de religion ou de couleur, sont libres d'élever la voix contre tout abus, où qu'ils le découvrent, sans entrave, sans que cela soit contraire à la loi ou les expose à des persécutions quelconques.

241. Quant au problème de Nauru, il est compliqué. Nauru est une île du genre de celles dont beaucoup de représentants ont parlé en séance plénière et à la Quatrième Commission. Je n'ai pas l'intention de traiter maintenant ce sujet. Je le ferai un peu plus tard. Nauru est une île lointaine du Pacifique. Je rappelle à mon ami que, bien que je travaille à l'Organisation des Nations Unies depuis deux ans et demi et que je ne sois pas retourné dans ces territoires pendant cette période, je travaille dans ces territoires, et pour ces territoires, depuis 33 ans et que j'y retournerai très prochainement. Je les connais mieux que mon collègue du Libéria ne peut les connaître après une seule visite au cours de laquelle il était l'invité d'honneur de mon gouvernement.

242. Ce que je veux dire, c'est que Nauru est une île lointaine du Pacifique, si lointaine que, lors de ma dernière visite il y a trois ans, juste avant que je vienne ici, j'ai navigué pendant huit jours en partant de Nouvelle-Zélande, sans voir aucune terre, avant d'arriver à cette île. Elle n'a qu'une vingtaine de kilomètres de pourtour. La terre la plus proche est une île encore plus petite, située à quelque 280 kilomètres de là. Nauru a une seule ressource économique, le phosphate. Il n'en a pas d'autre. Les habitants sont au nombre de 2 600 et ils ont un niveau de vie plus élevé que celui de n'importe quel autre peuple du Pacifique; plus élevé je pense que celui de beaucoup de peuples représentés ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Grâce aux redevances payées pour le phosphate, Nauru a un revenu, à répartir entre les 2 600 habitants, qui s'élève à l'heure actuelle à environ un million et demi de livres sterling par an et qui est en augmentation. Nauru vient de terminer avec le Gouvernement australien une série de discussions qui ont eu pour résultat d'ouvrir une nouvelle étape de son avenir politique, quel qu'il puisse être. Il se pose à Nauru tous les problèmes que l'indépendance soulève pour de petites îles.

243. Cela dit, je me réserve le droit de répondre à mon ami et collègue quand la Quatrième Commission et l'Assemblée en séance plénière discuteront le rapport du Conseil de tutelle et le rapport de la mission itinérante des Nations Unies qui s'est rendue à Nauru, en Papouasie et en Nouvelle-Guinée au cours des derniers mois. Cette mission a eu toute l'aide que nous pouvions lui donner et, je l'ai dit, a été l'invitée d'honneur de mon gouvernement.

La séance est levée à 18 h 50.

CHAPITRES RELATIFS AUX TERRITOIRES N'AYANT PAS ETE EXAMINES SEPAREMENT

Rapport de la Quatrième Commission
Rapporteur : M. K. NATWAR SINGH (Inde)

1. A sa 159ème séance, le 22 septembre 1965, le Bureau a décidé de recommander à l'Assemblée générale l'inscription à l'ordre du jour d'une question intitulée : "Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux : rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". A la même séance, le Bureau a décidé de recommander à l'Assemblée générale de renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission tous les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial concernant les territoires déterminés.
2. A sa 1336ème séance plénière, le 24 septembre 1965, l'Assemblée générale a adopté les recommandations du Bureau, inscrit la question à son ordre du jour et renvoyé à la Quatrième Commission ceux des chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial qui intéressaient des territoires déterminés.
3. A sa 1517ème séance, le 28 septembre 1965, la Quatrième Commission a décidé d'examiner, en en faisant un seul point de son ordre du jour, les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial touchant les territoires qu'elle n'étudierait pas séparément. On trouvera ci-après la liste des territoires intéressés, avec l'indication des chapitres correspondants des rapports du Comité spécial :

Guyane britannique	(A/5800/Add.5, chapitre VII; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre IX)
Fernando Póo, Río Muni, Sahara espagnol et Ifni	(A/5800/Add.5, chapitre IX; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre X)
Gibraltar	(A/5800/Add.5, chapitre X; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XI)
Iles Fidji	(A/5800/Add.5, chapitre XIII; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XII)
Ile Maurice, îles Seychelles et Sainte-Hélène	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XIV; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XIII)
Iles Nioué et Tokélaou	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XV; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XIV)
Samoa américaines	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XVI; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XV)
Guam	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XVII; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XVI)
Territoire sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XVIII; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XVII)
Territoire sous tutelle de Nauru, Papua et Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée et îles Cocos (Keeling)	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XIX; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XVIII)
Nouvelles-Hébrides, îles Gilbert-et-Ellice, île Pitcairn et îles Salomon	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XX; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XIX)
Brunéi	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XXI; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XX)
Hong-kong	(A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XXII; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XXI)
Iles Falkland (Malvinas)	(A/5800/Add.7, chapitre XXIII; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XXII)
Bermudes, Bahamas, îles Turks et Caïques et îles Caïmanes	(A/5800/Add.7, chapitre XXIV; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XXIII)
Honduras britannique	(A/5800/Add.7, chapitre XXVI; A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XXV). /...

4. La Commission a examiné la question à ses 1549^{ème} à 1554^{ème} séances, du 8 au 11 novembre, à ses 1556^{ème} à 1560^{ème} séances, du 15 au 17 novembre, à ses 1566^{ème}, 1567^{ème} et 1570^{ème} séances, du 24 au 26 novembre, à ses 1576^{ème} à 1580^{ème} séances, les 6 et 7 décembre, et à sa 1583^{ème} séance, le 10 décembre.
5. A la 1549^{ème} séance, le 8 novembre, le Rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a présenté les chapitres des rapports du Comité intéressant cette question (voir liste ci-dessus).
6. La Quatrième Commission était également saisie de trois communications concernant Gibraltar, adressées au Secrétaire général :
- a) Lettre du représentant permanent de l'Espagne, en date du 30 août 1965 (A/5959);
 - b) Lettre du représentant permanent du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, en date du 27 octobre 1965 (A/6084);
 - c) Lettre du représentant permanent de l'Espagne, en date du 5 novembre 1965 (A/6094).
7. En rapport avec l'examen de cette question, la Commission a fait droit aux demandes d'audition suivantes :

Pétitionnaires	Territoires intéressés	Séance au cours de laquelle l'audition a été accordée
M. Felix A. Cummings, directeur des relations publiques et de l'information, People's Progressive Party de la Guyane britannique (A/C.4/655)	Guyane britannique	1548 ^{ème}
MM. Atanasie N'Dong Niyone, Adolfo Obiang Bike et Rafael Evita, Movimiento Nacional de Liberacion de la Guinea Ecuatorial (MNLGE) (A/C.4/L.657)	Guinée équatoriale (Fernando Póo et Río Muni)	1557 ^{ème}

8. A la 1549^{ème} séance, le 8 novembre, M. Felix A. Cummings a fait une déclaration concernant la situation en Guyane britannique et a répondu aux questions que lui ont posées des membres de la Commission.

9. A la 1557ème séance, le 16 novembre, M. Atanasie N'Dong Niyone a fait une déclaration concernant la Guinée équatoriale (Fernando Póo et Río Muni). A la même séance, MM. Atanasie N'Dong Niyone et Rafael Evita ont répondu aux questions que leur ont posées des membres de la Commission. Il a été décidé que le texte de la déclaration faite par M. N'Dong, à la 1557ème séance, serait distribué en tant que document de la Commission (A/C.4/659).

10. La discussion générale sur la question a eu lieu aux 1550ème à 1554ème séances, du 8 au 11 novembre, et aux 1556ème à 1560ème séances, du 15 au 17 novembre.

11. Il a été décidé de faire distribuer comme document de la Commission (A/C.4/658) le texte de la déclaration concernant la Guinée équatoriale (Fernando Póo et Río Muni), faite à la 1557ème séance, le 16 novembre, par M. Bonifacio Ondo Edu, président du Conseil de gouvernement de la Guinée équatoriale, qui parlait en sa qualité de membre de la délégation espagnole.

12. A ses 1556ème à 1560ème séances, du 15 au 17 novembre, à ses 1566ème, 1567ème et 1570ème séances, les 25 et 26 novembre, à ses 1576ème à 1580ème séances, les 6 et 7 décembre, et à sa 1583ème séance, le 10 décembre, la Commission a examiné les projets de résolution sur la question. Ces textes intéressaient les territoires ci-après :

- I. Iles Falkland (Malvinas)
- II. Ile Maurice
- III. Guinée équatoriale (Fernando Póo et Río Muni)
- IV. Iles Fidji
- V. Samoa américaines, Antigua, Bahamas, Barbade, Bermudes, îles Vierges britanniques, îles Caïmanes, îles Cocos (Keeling), Dominique, îles Gilbert-et-Ellice, Grenade, Guam, Montserrat, Nouvelles-Hébrides, Nioué, Papua, île Pitcairn, Sainte-Hélène, Saint-Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, Sainte-Lucie, Saint-Vincent, îles Seychelles, îles Salomon, îles Tokélaou, îles Turks et Caïques et îles Vierges américaines
- VI. Gibraltar
- VII. Guyane britannique
- VIII. Ifni et Sahara espagnol.

13. Les sections I à VIII ci-après rendent compte de la discussion à laquelle ces projets de résolution ont donné lieu et des modifications qui ont été apportées aux textes.

II. ILE MAURICE

20. A la 1566ème séance, le 24 novembre, les représentants de la République-Unie de Tanzanie et de l'Inde ont présenté un projet de résolution concernant l'île Maurice; la liste définitive des auteurs était la suivante : Algérie, Arabie Saoudite, Cameroun, Ceylan, Chypre, Dahomey, Ethiopie, Ghana, Inde, Irak, Jordanie, Kenya, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Mali, Maroc, Mauritanie, Népal, Niger, Nigéria, Ouganda, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Sierra Leone, Somalie, Soudan, Syrie, Togo, Tunisie, Yémen, Yougoslavie et Zambie (A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1).

21. La Commission a examiné le projet de résolution à ses 1566ème et 1570ème séances, les 24 et 26 novembre.

22. Le projet de résolution (A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1) a été adopté par la Commission à la 1570ème séance, le 26 novembre, par 77 voix contre zéro, avec 17 abstentions. Le vote a eu lieu par appel nominal et les voix se sont réparties comme suit :

Ont voté pour : Afghanistan, Algérie, Arabie Saoudite, Argentine, Birmanie, Brésil, Bulgarie, Cameroun, Ceylan, Chili, Chine, Chypre, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (République démocratique du), Costa Rica, Cuba, Dahomey, Danemark, Espagne, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Grèce, Guatemala, Guinée, Haïti, Honduras, Hongrie, Inde, Irak, Iran, Israël, Japon, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Libéria, Libye, Malaisie, Malawi, Mali, Maroc, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Niger, Nigéria, Ouganda, Pakistan, Panama, Pérou, Philippines, Pologne, République arabe unie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Roumanie, Rwanda, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Somalie, Soudan, Syrie, Tchad, Tchécoslovaquie, Thaïlande, Togo, Trinité et Tobago, Tunisie, Turquie, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yougoslavie, Zambie.

Ont voté contre : Néant.

Se sont abstenus : Afrique du Sud, Australie, Autriche, Belgique, Canada, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Finlande, France, Irlande, Italie, Jamaïque, Norvège, Nouvelle-Zélande, Pays-Bas, Portugal, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Suède.

23. Le texte du projet de résolution figure au paragraphe 50 du présent rapport en tant que projet de résolution II.

RECOMMANDATIONS DE LA QUATRIEME COMMISSION

50. La Quatrième Commission recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'adopter le projet de résolution ci-après :

PROJET DE RESOLUTION II

Question de l'île Maurice

L'Assemblée générale,

Ayant examiné la question de l'île Maurice et des autres îles qui composent le territoire de l'île Maurice,

Ayant étudié les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs au territoire de l'île Maurice^{1/},

Rappelant la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, en date du 14 décembre 1960,

Regrettant que la Puissance administrante n'ait pas appliqué complètement la résolution 1514 (XV) en ce qui concerne ce territoire,

Notant avec une profonde inquiétude que toute mesure prise par la Puissance administrante pour détacher certaines îles du territoire de l'île Maurice afin d'y établir une base militaire, constituerait une violation de la Déclaration figurant dans la résolution 1514 (XV), et en particulier du paragraphe 6,

1. Approuve les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs au territoire de l'île Maurice et fait siennes les conclusions et les recommandations du Comité spécial qui y figurent;

2. Réaffirme le droit inaliénable du peuple du territoire de l'île Maurice à la liberté et à l'indépendance, conformément à la résolution 1514 (XV);

3. Invite le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord à prendre des mesures efficaces en vue de la mise en oeuvre immédiate et complète de la résolution 1514 (XV);

^{1/} A/5800/Add.6, chapitre XIV, A/6000/Add.7, chapitre XIII.

4. Invite en outre la Puissance administrante à ne prendre aucune mesure qui démembrerait le territoire de l'île Maurice et violerait son intégrité territoriale;
5. Invite la Puissance administrante à faire rapport au Comité spécial et à l'Assemblée générale sur l'application de la présente résolution;
6. Prie le Comité spécial de maintenir à l'étude la question du territoire de l'île Maurice et de faire rapport à ce sujet à l'Assemblée générale, lors de sa vingt et unième session.

DISCUSSION GENERALE (suite)

43. M. SANGHO (Mali) dit que, pour son gouvernement, il importe avant tout de libérer complètement l'homme de toutes les formes de discrimination et d'exploitation. La délégation malienne réaffirme, en s'inspirant de l'Article 73 de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, sa conviction que tous les peuples ont les mêmes droits à la liberté pleine et entière, sans considération de race ni de couleur.

44. D'après le représentant du Mali, il ressort des études effectuées par le Comité spécial que la situation dans l'île Maurice, à Sainte-Hélène, dans les Seychelles, Guam, les îles du Pacifique et autres territoires présente des caractéristiques typiquement coloniales.

45. Dans l'île Maurice, par exemple, l'Assemblée législative, élue, il est vrai, au suffrage universel, n'exerce pas les prérogatives dévolues normalement à une assemblée souveraine et c'est à un conseil de gouvernement qu'il appartient de prendre les décisions qui sont ensuite soumises pour approbation au gouverneur qui représente la Puissance administrante. Tous les partis politiques ne partageant pas les vues du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni sur l'évolution future des institutions de l'île, il importe de donner à la population la possibilité de se prononcer clairement sur le régime qu'elle souhaite. Sur le plan économique et social, les progrès sont lents et la Puissance administrante ne fait aucun effort pour diversifier l'économie du territoire, laquelle dépend pour 90 p. 100 de l'industrie sucrière, alors que le territoire doit importer la plupart des vivres qu'il consomme. Le système d'enseignement doit être révisé de manière à assurer la scolarisation de tous les enfants et à accélérer la formation des cadres. Enfin, il importe d'abroger les lois discriminatoires et de favoriser la constitution d'organisations populaires telles que syndicats, mouvements de jeunesse, etc.

46. Le représentant du Mali constate ensuite que la situation politique en Guyane britannique reste préoccupante. Comme les observateurs du Commonwealth l'ont reconnu, l'attitude du gouvernement lors des élections de 1964 n'a pas été impartiale. Après les élections, le Gouverneur s'est servi de ses pouvoirs discrétionnaires pour écarter du pouvoir le parti ayant recueilli 45,8 p. 100 des suffrages au profit d'un parti n'en ayant recueilli que 40,5 p. 100. Cette décision, conforme à la politique britannique qui consiste à diviser pour régner en entretenant au besoin les antagonismes raciaux, a abouti à l'instauration de l'état d'urgence et à l'arrestation de tous les partisans de l'indépendance complète de la Guyane. M. Sangho a l'impression que le Gouverneur n'a jugé bon d'exercer ses pouvoirs discrétionnaires que lorsqu'il s'est aperçu que M. Jagan, chef du parti majoritaire, se prononçait pour la libération totale de son pays, le développement indépendant de l'économie et la lutte contre toutes les formes de discrimination et qu'il n'était ni anticommuniste ni anticastriste. Le représentant du Mali estime que la question de l'avenir constitutionnel de la Guyane ne saurait être réglée qu'en respectant la volonté de la majorité de la population. M. Sangho déplore que la Puissance administrante ait empêché le Comité de bons offices pour la Guyane créé par le Comité spécial de s'acquitter de sa tâche, et il espère que l'Assemblée générale prendra les mesures qui s'imposent pour venir en aide aux Guyanais opprimés.

47. En ce qui concerne Gibraltar, le Mali appuie le consensus proposé en 1964 par le Président du Comité spécial et adopté par ce comité (A/5800/Rev.1, chap. X, par. 309), et qui a été approuvé par le Royaume-Uni et l'Espagne.

48. M. Sangho estime qu'il appartient aux populations autochtones d'Irni de décider librement de leur statut futur.

49. Quant à Fernando Pô et au Rfo Muni, la délégation malienne estime que la naissance de l'Etat autonome de Guinée équatoriale constitue un fait positif, mais elle constate que le nouvel Etat demeure placé sous le joug colonial et que l'Espagne y détient toujours les attributs de la souveraineté. La Puissance administrante doit permettre aux populations de la Guinée équatoriale d'accéder dans un proche avenir à la liberté et à l'indépendance complète.

50. La délégation du Mali partage entièrement l'opinion du Comité spécial sur l'avenir des populations des îles du Pacifique et estime qu'il est du devoir des Nations Unies et de la Puissance administrante intéressée d'envisager les mesures propres à assurer l'émancipation rapide de ces îles.

51. La délégation malienne remarque que, dans de nombreux cas, la question de l'avenir des territoires non autonomes est compliquée par l'existence de bases militaires. Le Mali préconise le démantèlement de toutes ces bases qui constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité, dans la mesure où toutes les agressions qui se perpètrent actuellement avec le silence coupable de certaines puissances partent des bases établies sur des territoires coloniaux. Il demande aux puissances intéressées de supprimer leurs bases à Aden, à Guam, aux îles Vierges et dans les îles du Pacifique.

52. La délégation du Mali fait siennes les conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial et fait appel aux puissances administrantes pour qu'elles appliquent immédiatement les dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, pour qu'elles organisent, sous le contrôle de l'ONU, des consultations permettant aux populations de choisir la forme de gouvernement qui leur convient et de se prononcer sur leur association éventuelle avec d'autres pays et territoires, et enfin pour qu'elles hâtent le transfert du pouvoir aux populations autochtones, quels que soient leur nombre et leur degré de culture.

La séance est levée à 12 h 20.

DISCUSSION GENERALE ET EXAMEN DE PROJETS
DE RESOLUTION (suite) [A/C.4/L.802]

considérés sont examinés en bloc ne minimise en aucune façon l'importance de chacun.

45. En tant que membre du Comité spécial, la délégation tanzanienne n'a cessé de répéter que les dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale sont pleinement applicables à tous les territoires et à tous les peuples qui subissent encore le joug colonial et elle est heureuse que les conclusions contenues dans le rapport du Comité spécial et les recommandations de ce dernier reflètent et appuient son point de vue. Elle espère donc que ces conclusions et ces recommandations recevront l'appui le plus large possible des membres de la Commission. Ce serait là un moyen concret d'aider tous les peuples du monde qui luttent encore pour leur émancipation nationale contre les forces de la régression et de l'exploitation coloniales et cette initiative porterait son coup de grâce au colonialisme.

46. A cet égard, l'expérience a montré que certaines puissances coloniales interprètent à leur façon les principes de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et que les prétendues réformes constitutionnelles introduites dans certains territoires vont directement à l'encontre des principes qui sont à la base de la décolonisation. C'est le cas notamment au Papua et en Nouvelle-Guinée, où la Chambre d'assemblée créée par la Puissance administrante n'a aucun pouvoir législatif réel puisque ses décisions doivent être approuvées par les autorités coloniales. La liberté étant indivisible, et devant être inconditionnelle, les réformes constitutionnelles au Papua et en Nouvelle-Guinée ne sont en fait que des remaniements décidés par l'Australie pour des questions de commodité.

47. La situation est analogue dans les îles Vierges américaines, où, en vertu d'une loi promulguée par les Etats-Unis, les droits naturels de la population sont réduits à l'association avec les Etats-Unis. Le représentant de la puissance coloniale a dit que son gouvernement avait cherché à mettre au point pour le territoire un avenir qui prévoyait notamment l'envoi d'un représentant au Congrès des Etats-Unis. Il est évident, dans ces conditions, que la Puissance administrante a déjà prévu quel serait l'avenir du territoire.

48. Il est extrêmement important que la Commission suive de près l'évolution de la situation des petits territoires en raison de leur importance stratégique et militaire pour la mise en œuvre de la politique mondiale des puissances coloniales. Ainsi, l'île de Guam, qui subit l'occupation coloniale des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, est devenue une grande et dangereuse base militaire dont la puissance coloniale se sert actuellement pour poursuivre une guerre qui n'intéresse qu'elle. La presse a annoncé à plusieurs reprises, en effet, que des avions militaires américains décollaient d'aérodromes construits sur le territoire non autonome de Guam pour accomplir des missions militaires dans le cadre d'une guerre menée par les Etats-Unis. Si ces aérodromes étaient bombardés à titre de légitime défense, la population du territoire colonial de Guam se trouverait mêlée à une guerre simplement parce qu'elle se trouve sous la domination coloniale. On ne peut que se féliciter que le pays victime des bombardements américains ne soit pas

44. M. FOUM (République-Unie de Tanzanie) dit que, dans son examen des chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial dont elle est saisie, la Quatrième Commission doit se prononcer sur la question du colonialisme dans son ensemble. D'autre part, le fait que les territoires une nation agressive et n'ait pas décidé de bombarder en retour les populations opprimées du territoire de Guam.

49. Une situation analogue menace l'île Maurice et les Seychelles, au sujet desquelles on s'étonne d'apprendre que cinq ans après l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, certaines puissances coloniales pensent encore à créer de nouvelles colonies. Ainsi, le Times de Londres du 11 novembre 1965 et le New York Times de la même date ont annoncé que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni avait décidé de créer une nouvelle colonie, qui se composerait de l'archipel des Chagos, jusqu'ici rattaché à l'île Maurice, et des îles Aldabra, Farquhar et Desroches, précédemment rattachées aux Seychelles. Ces îles sont habitées par 1 384 personnes, et la création de la nouvelle colonie a pour objet de permettre l'installation de bases militaires et navales par les Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis.

50. Ce projet anglo-américain vise à renverser le cours de l'histoire; il va à l'encontre non seulement de la résolution 1514 (XV), mais encore d'autres résolutions adoptées par divers organes de l'ONU et concernant des problèmes coloniaux précis et l'application du principe de l'autodétermination, qui doit être considéré comme un principe général de droit international. Ce principe serait vidé de son sens s'il pouvait être tourné et si, par le paiement de compensations à la majorité des habitants d'une colonie une puissance coloniale pouvait garder à perpétuité une partie du territoire de cette colonie, habitée par une minorité. Le droit des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination ne peut aucunement faire l'objet de tractations financières, lesquelles sont particulièrement condamnables lorsqu'elles visent l'installation de bases étrangères dans un territoire colonial. A cet égard, la délégation tanzanienne rappelle que la deuxième Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés a affirmé dans sa déclaration du Caire, le 10 octobre 1964, que le maintien ou la création de bases militaires, ou le stationnement de troupes sur le territoire d'autres pays contre la volonté expresse desdits pays, constitue une violation flagrante de la souveraineté des Etats et une menace à la liberté et à la paix internationale. La Conférence a déclaré en outre qu'elle considérerait comme particulièrement inacceptable l'existence ou le maintien, dans des territoires dépendants, de bases pouvant servir à perpétuer le colonialisme ou à d'autres fins.

51. Il ne faut pas perdre de vue que la nature du colonialisme et de l'impérialisme demeure constante, et que seule leur tactique change. Les colonialistes recourent à toutes les manœuvres pour s'accrocher aux positions et aux privilèges qu'ils ont acquis dans le passé et pour empêcher les populations qui sont encore sous leur coupe de jouir de la liberté et de l'indépendance. L'une de ces manœuvres consiste à diviser pour régner. Ainsi, en Guyane britannique, le Royaume-Uni emploie toutes sortes de procédés pour retarder l'accession de la colonie à l'indépendance; il est vraiment très regrettable que des tensions raciales se soient manifestées et aient pu être mises à profit pour justifier les délais apportés à l'émancipation de ce territoire. Le peuple de la Guyane britannique a montré qu'il ne veut pas rester sous la domination étrangère, et la délégation tanzanienne espère que la communauté internationale l'aidera à accéder plus rapidement à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

52. D'un autre côté, il faut tenir compte des différences existant entre les divers territoires coloniaux. Parfois, le vrai problème consiste à rechercher un accord par la négociation entre deux ou plusieurs Etats. C'est pourquoi la délégation tanzanienne accueille avec satisfaction la suggestion des délégations latino-américaines d'inviter deux Etats Membres à entamer des pourparlers au sujet des îles Falkland ou Malouines.

53. Parfois également, la Puissance administrante se maintient solidement en place dans une colonie sous prétexte que l'économie de cette colonie ne lui permet pas d'exister en tant que nation indépendante. Ce prétexte est invoqué pour refuser à la population autochtone la jouissance des droits naturels qui lui sont reconnus par la Charte des Nations Unies et par la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. La délégation tanzanienne estime que les droits de ces peuples et de ces territoires à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance ne doivent pas être lésés par l'action des forces qui en refusent l'exercice à la population. En fait, c'est l'économie des colonies qui renforce celle des pays métropolitains car l'exploitation économique est l'essence du colonialisme. La délégation tanzanienne répète que la liberté est indivisible. Les puissances coloniales doivent d'abord fournir aux peuples des territoires considérés tout ce dont ils ont besoin pour exercer leurs droits à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Lorsque l'économie d'un territoire n'est pas assez solide, les membres libres de la communauté internationale doivent faire tout ce qui est en leur pouvoir pour apporter aux populations intéressées l'aide matérielle qui doit leur permettre de suivre la voie qu'elles ont choisie.

54. La délégation tanzanienne s'estime moralement tenue de réaffirmer le droit inaliénable de tous les peuples et de tous les territoires, grands ou petits, à l'autodétermination, à la liberté et à l'indépendance. Elle considère qu'il faut donner aux populations des territoires que la Commission examine actuellement, les moyens d'obtenir la jouissance de leurs droits naturels. La mise en place d'institutions qui provoquent ou encouragent les conflits raciaux ou l'identification ethnique est un obstacle à la prise de conscience nationale; il convient donc de l'éviter afin que les populations actuellement sous le joug colonial puissent accéder à la liberté démocratique. D'autre part, l'utilisation des territoires coloniaux à des fins militaires ou stratégiques nuit à leurs intérêts et à ceux de leurs habitants, et retarde leur accession à l'indépendance. C'est pourquoi les bases militaires doivent être éliminées.

55. La délégation tanzanienne est prête à se joindre à toutes les délégations qui se sont prononcées pour une solution fondée sur les principes que M. Fom a énoncés. Ceux qui luttent dans l'honneur pour l'émancipation doivent recevoir l'appui moral et matériel de tous ceux à qui la liberté est chère et à qui le système colonial et l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme font horreur.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

DISCUSSION GÉNÉRALE ET EXAMEN DE PROJETS DE RÉSOLUTION (suite) [A/C.4/L.802]

1. Mme MENESES DE ALBIZU CAMPOS (Cuba) rappelle que l'Assemblée générale a décidé de créer le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux parce que, un an après l'adoption de la Déclaration en question, aucune mesure, ou presque, n'avait été prise pour donner suite à ses dispositions; même, dans certaines régions, des mesures militaires ou de répression avaient été prises pour empêcher des peuples dépendants d'exercer leur droit à l'indépendance complète. Dans sa résolution 1654 (XVI), qui entérine cette décision, l'Assemblée générale a constaté que des actes visant à détruire l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale étaient encore perpétrés dans certains pays en voie de décolonisation, et a exprimé la conviction que tout retard dans l'application de la Déclaration pourrait constituer une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Il est affligeant de constater que cinq ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, les puissances coloniales essaient toujours d'entraver les efforts déployés par l'ONU en vue de la décolonisation; ces puissances n'ont cependant pas réussi à empêcher le Comité spécial de servir utilement la cause des populations opprimées.

2. Cuba et de nombreuses autres délégations s'inquiètent de la situation qui règne en Guyane dite britannique. Bien que la Guyane britannique se soit prononcée pour l'indépendance, dès 1953, sous la conduite du parti de M. Cheddi Jagan, et bien que ce parti ait remporté plusieurs élections successives, le territoire est toujours sous le régime colonial, des mesures de répression y sont appliquées, de nombreux patriotes éminents y sont emprisonnés, le parti majoritaire favorable à l'indépendance y est empêché de gouverner et un conflit racial y a été artificiellement créé. A vrai dire, les impérialistes ont tenté de transformer en guerre civile la lutte du peuple contre la domination étrangère. Washington et Londres ont mis au pouvoir, à la place du parti de M. Jagan, un gouvernement docile qu'ils ont créé de toutes pièces.

3. Plusieurs conférences ont eu lieu sans résultat à Londres et l'on continue de vouloir tromper ainsi l'opinion publique mondiale. La Puissance administrante persiste à ignorer les résolutions de l'ONU, tout comme elle l'a fait en Rhodésie du Sud où les colons colonialistes se sont retournés contre leurs propres maîtres. L'Assemblée générale a signalé à plusieurs reprises aux Puissances administrantes que, pour éviter une catastrophe, il convenait de fixer une date rapprochée pour l'indépendance. On ne résoudra pas le problème en créant des gouvernements dociles, avec la bénédiction des impérialistes. Cette bénédiction n'est pas seulement spirituelle: le Wall Street Journal a rapporté le 11 novembre 1965 que, pour cette année, les Etats-Unis envoyaient à la Guyane britannique 14 millions de dollars sous forme de prêts et de subventions, alors qu'ils n'avaient accordé au gouvernement de M. Jagan, en 1964, qu'une assistance de 200 000 dollars. Le même journal indique que la production des compagnies sucrières britanniques est supérieure de 50 p. 100 cette année à celle de l'année précédente, que les installations des compagnies d'aluminium pour l'exploitation de la bauxite sont en voie d'expansion et que la production de diamants a doublé par rapport à 1964.

4. Dans d'autres territoires, la résistance des colonialistes se poursuit également pour des raisons d'ordre économique, politique ou stratégique. Les projets d'installation de nouvelles bases militaires dans les territoires menacent de plus en plus la paix des peuples opprimés. Les bases militaires de tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance doivent être liquidées rapidement et sans condition, avant l'indépendance et non après. Cuba sait par expérience ce que signifie la présence sur un territoire d'une base militaire étrangère imposée à l'époque où les impérialistes s'y trouvaient. Ces bases sont aussi une menace constante pour les peuples voisins et pour leur indépendance. Selon le New York Times du 11 novembre 1965, le Royaume-Uni a enlevé aux îles Maurice et Seychelles une partie de leur territoire et en a fait un nouveau territoire où sera créée une base militaire. Le Times de Londres du même jour cite une déclaration du Secrétaire d'Etat du Royaume-Uni aux colonies selon lequel les îles pourraient être utilisées pour la construction d'installations de défense par le Royaume-Uni et les Etats-Unis. Le fait que des compensations seraient versées en échange des îles n'est pas de nature à rassurer la délégation cubaine. La résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale demande aux Etats de respecter l'intégrité du territoire national des peuples dépendants. La délégation cubaine ne peut accepter que l'on prétende que les îles en question ont été achetées; aucun Etat souverain ne permettrait l'aliénation d'une quelconque partie de son territoire.

5. Vu le principe de l'égalité des nations, grandes et petites, inscrit dans la Charte, il ne saurait être question de mettre en doute le droit d'un pays à l'indépendance, en invoquant la faiblesse de sa population et l'exiguïté de ses dimensions. Il ne saurait être question non plus de s'appuyer sur des arguments d'ordre économique pour montrer qu'un peuple n'est pas capable d'accéder à l'indépendance. Ces prétextes servent à perpétuer les bastions du colonialisme, sous le couvert de fédérations artificielles, d'association ou d'intégration avec d'autres Etats. Toute mesure constitutionnelle qui ne rend pas un peuple pleinement maître de son destin ou qui maintient un régime impérialiste déguisé en prétendue association est inadmissible.

cielles entre les dirigeants locaux et le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni; dans certains territoires, des consultations purement locales ont eu lieu en vue d'accord sur des propositions qui seraient discutées avec le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni. Dans un certain nombre de territoires, on a enregistré d'importantes modifications constitutionnelles, dont les détails sont consignés dans les rapports du Comité spécial. Dans plusieurs autres, des élections importantes ont eu lieu.

77. Ainsi, dans un nombre considérable de territoires, on a enregistré un progrès continu dans la voie de l'autonomie et de l'autodétermination et, dans chaque cas, le sens et la rapidité de ce progrès ont été déterminés en accord étroit et permanent avec l'opinion locale, exprimée par les partis politiques et les autres moyens d'expression que possède normalement une société démocratique libre.

78. Les territoires sur lesquels la Quatrième Commission a le plus fait porter son intérêt se divisent en deux groupes. Tout d'abord, il y a les territoires qui ont fait l'objet d'observations à propos de questions constitutionnelles et où l'on a noté récemment une évolution importante, sur laquelle il se peut que la Commission désire obtenir de plus amples précisions, à savoir l'île Maurice, les îles Fidji et la Guyane britannique. En second lieu, il y a un groupe de territoires — Gibraltar et les îles Falkland — à propos desquels le centre d'intérêt n'est pas dans les questions normales de progrès constitutionnel dont s'occupent généralement la Quatrième Commission et le Comité spécial, mais dans le fait que la souveraineté sur un territoire britannique est revendiquée par un autre pays.

79. M. Brown traitera d'abord des aspects constitutionnels de l'île Maurice, des îles Fidji, et de la Guyane britannique. Le rapport du Comité spécial sur l'île Maurice (A/6000/Rev.1, chap. XIII) a été terminé avant que ne s'achève la Conférence constitutionnelle de l'île Maurice, tenue à Londres en septembre. Tous les partis représentés à la législature de l'île Maurice étaient représentés à cette conférence. A la fin de la Conférence, le Secrétaire d'Etat aux colonies a annoncé que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni jugeait approprié que l'île Maurice aille de l'avant vers l'indépendance totale. Il sera procédé de la façon suivante: comme la Conférence n'a pu parvenir à un accord complet sur un nouveau système électoral, le secrétaire aux colonies doit nommer une commission chargée de faire des recommandations concernant le nouveau système et le découpage des circonscriptions électorales, afin de sauvegarder les intérêts de tous les groupes ethniques. Lorsque cette commission aura présenté son rapport, le Secrétaire aux colonies décidera du nouveau système électoral; des élections générales auront lieu et un nouveau gouvernement sera formé. L'indépendance sera accordée après six mois d'autonomie interne complète, si la nouvelle Assemblée législative adopte une résolution, à la majorité simple, demandant l'indépendance. Ce processus peut être terminé avant la fin de 1966. La nouvelle constitution, sur laquelle l'accord s'est fait à la Conférence, prévoira des garanties pour les intérêts des minorités, un chapitre sur les droits de l'homme, la nomination d'un

75. M. BROWN (Royaume-Uni) dit que, parmi la quarantaine de territoires dont s'occupe la Commission au titre du point 23 de l'ordre du jour, une vingtaine sont sous l'administration du Royaume-Uni.

76. Comme le montrent les rapports du Comité spécial pour 1964 et 1965, les deux dernières années ont été marquées par un progrès continu dans ces territoires. Un certain nombre sont devenus pleinement indépendants et sont maintenant membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Il y a eu une série de conférences constitutionnelles concernant certains des territoires; le progrès constitutionnel d'autres territoires a fait l'objet de consultations moins offiombudsman, et des dispositions établissant que les éléments principaux de la Constitution ne pourront être modifiés qu'avec l'accord des trois quarts au moins des membres de l'Assemblée législative.

80. Certaines questions ont été soulevées au sujet des plans du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni quant à certaines îles de l'océan Indien. Les faits sont les suivants. Les îles en question sont toutes petites, sont très dispersées dans l'océan Indien, et ont une population de moins de 1 500 habitants, laquelle, hormis quelques fonctionnaires et régisseurs de domaines, se compose de travailleurs originaires de l'île Maurice et des Seychelles, accompagnés de leur famille et employés dans les plantations de coprah, à l'extraction du guano et à la pêche aux tortues. Ces îles étaient inhabitées lors de leur acquisition par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni. Elles avaient été rattachées à l'île Maurice ou aux Seychelles pour de simples raisons de commodité administrative. Après consultation des gouvernements de l'île Maurice et des Seychelles, y compris les membres élus de ces derniers et avec leur accord, de nouvelles dispositions pour l'administration de ces îles considérées ont été prises le 8 novembre. Ces îles ne seront plus administrées par les gouvernements précités, mais par un commissaire. Une indemnisation appropriée sera versée non seulement aux Gouvernements de l'île Maurice et des Seychelles, mais aussi à toute personne privée ou entreprise commerciale dont les intérêts seront affectés. On prendra grand soin du bien-être des quelques habitants de ces îles et des dispositions adéquates à leur intention seront discutées avec les Gouvernements de l'île Maurice et des Seychelles. Il ne s'agit donc nullement du démembrement d'unités territoriales naturelles, mais d'une simple réorganisation administrative librement mise au point avec les gouvernements et les représentants élus des populations intéressées.

81. Les îles Fidji sont un autre territoire sur l'avenir duquel une importante conférence constitutionnelle a eu lieu depuis qu'a été terminé le rapport du Comité spécial. Les 18 membres non fonctionnaires du Conseil législatif des îles Fidji ont tous assisté à cette conférence, qui s'est tenue à Londres en juillet et août. Le but convenu de la conférence était d'établir un cadre constitutionnel permettant au territoire de progresser vers l'autonomie interne et maintenant un lien permanent avec le Royaume-Uni. La conférence a décidé que, pour la première fois, il devrait y avoir au Conseil législatif une majorité élue. Il n'y aura pas de membres non fonctionnaires nommés, et le nombre des membres fonctionnaires nommés ne dépassera pas quatre. La conférence a également décidé que tous les groupes minoritaires qui jusqu'ici ne possédaient pas le droit de vote seront électeurs et éligibles: cela concerne les habitants des îles Rotuma et de certaines autres îles du Pacifique, et la communauté chinoise. Les îles Fidji parviendront ainsi au suffrage universel des adultes, ce qui satisfera à l'un des points principaux mentionnés au cours du débat sur les îles Fidji qui a eu lieu au Comité spécial en 1964. Les habitants des îles Rotuma et des autres îles voteront sur les mêmes listes que les Fidjiens, et les autres avec le groupe européen. En raison des conséquences qu'aura l'octroi du droit de vote à ces groupes sur la représentation des trois communautés principales, il a été décidé que la proportion des membres européens de la législature serait réduite et passerait d'un chiffre égal au nombre des représentants des deux autres communautés au chiffre de 10. Les Fidjiens auront maintenant 14 sièges, une légère augmentation — aux dépens du groupe européen — compte tenu du fait que les habitants des îles Rotuma et des autres îles du Pacifique voteront maintenant eux. La représentation indienne demeure proportionnellement inchangée, à la fois globalement et en tant que fraction du nombre des représentants élus sur les listes de chaque communauté. Il a également été décidé qu'à l'avenir neuf membres du Conseil législatif seraient élus par toutes les communautés sans distinction. Enfin, la Constitution prévoira l'évolution de l'actuel système "des membres", selon lequel des membres du Conseil exécutif rendent compte devant le Conseil exécutif et la législature de l'activité de divers départements sans en être les chefs, vers un véritable système ministériel où les membres non fonctionnaires seront des ministres.

82. Les représentants indiens à la conférence n'ont pu accepter certaines de ces mesures, en particulier la nouvelle représentation des communautés ethniques à la législature et le maintien du système du vote par communauté pour certains des membres du Conseil législatif. Ils ont estimé également que l'autonomie interne complète devait être accordée immédiatement. Toutefois, après un long débat, il est apparu que les propositions indiennes n'étaient pas acceptées par certains des autres représentants et les décisions mentionnées ont été adoptées dans l'espoir qu'elles aideraient à créer, dans toute la mesure du possible, une situation acceptable pour toutes les principales communautés ethniques des îles Fidji. En particulier, on espère que l'institution du vote en commun pour l'élection de certains membres de la législature contribuera à éliminer les divisions politiques entre les différentes communautés des îles Fidji. Un passage sans transition à une liste électorale unique et l'abolition dès maintenant du vote par communauté auraient pu conduire au résultat opposé et accentuer les divisions politiques entre les différentes communautés ethniques. Cela aurait également été jugé totalement inacceptable par la communauté fidjienne.

83. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni espère que le nouveau système encouragera la coopération politique, ce qui devrait faciliter de nouveaux progrès vers une attitude nationale au lieu du particularisme des communautés. Cela est en parfait accord avec les objectifs des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Comité spécial relatives aux îles Fidji et constitue un grand pas en avant dans la bonne direction. Rien ne permet de prétendre que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni encourage ou exploite les divisions entre communautés ou assure une protection spéciale aux Européens, dont la situation n'est d'ailleurs guère en cause. Sa politique est d'assurer un progrès régulier vers l'unité et l'abolition de toute conscience raciale. Il faut bien reconnaître qu'en cherchant trop vite à transformer des attitudes profondément enracinées, on risquerait d'interrompre, plutôt que de favoriser, le processus visant à instaurer un climat de confiance réciproque et à instituer la coopération politique entre les communautés des îles Fidji.

84. Passant au problème de la Guyane britannique, M. Brown rappelle qu'une conférence constitutionnelle relative à ce territoire se tient en ce moment même à Londres. Elle a pour objet de régler les questions constitutionnelles en suspens et de fixer une date pour l'accession à l'indépendance, et l'on espère qu'elle mènera rapidement à bien ses travaux. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a publiquement déploré que l'un des deux principaux partis de la Guyane britannique, le People's Progressive Party, n'ait pas cru devoir participer à cette conférence. Bon nombre des idées défendues à la 1549^{ème} séance par le représentant du People's Progressive Party que le Comité spécial a récemment entendu comme pétitionnaire auraient été plus efficacement et plus opportunément soutenues devant la Conférence de Londres.

85. Le pétitionnaire et certains orateurs qui sont intervenus dans le débat ont parlé de l'état d'urgence en Guyane britannique et d'une douzaine de personnes qui ont été arrêtées et maintenues en détention préventive. M. Brown tient à préciser que les problèmes de sécurité intérieure relèvent de la compétence des ministres de la Guyane britannique, et non de la compétence du Royaume-Uni. Il appartient aux habitants de la Guyane britannique de régler entre eux ces problèmes et de créer les conditions de la confiance et de la compréhension.

86. On a parlé de l'opportunité d'une médiation des Nations Unies en Guyane britannique, sous une forme ou sous une autre, pour favoriser la réconciliation des deux principaux partis politiques. La délégation du Royaume-Uni comprend fort bien l'esprit dans lequel ces suggestions ont été faites. Il faut cependant tenir compte d'un certain nombre de circonstances qui semblent recommander une méthode opposée. La Guyane britannique a bénéficié au cours de l'année écoulée d'une plus grande stabilité qu'en d'autres périodes. Une conférence qui a pour objet de fixer la date de l'accession à l'indépendance est actuellement en cours. Toute intervention extérieure — et c'est ainsi que serait interprétée une proposition de médiation des Nations Unies — pourrait avoir les plus fâcheuses conséquences et même contribuer à aggraver les divisions raciales et politiques. La Commission internationale des juristes vient d'effectuer une étude complète des tensions raciales en Guyane britannique, et le gouvernement du territoire s'emploie actuellement à donner effet à ses recommandations. Au moment où la Guyane britannique est si proche de l'indépendance, une tentative extérieure de médiation serait certainement considérée dans le territoire comme dépourvue de toute justification. Les ministres de la Guyane britannique ont été consultés et leurs vues concordent généralement avec celles que M. Brown vient d'exposer. M. Burnham, premier ministre de la Guyane britannique, compte d'ailleurs venir à New York après la Conférence de Londres, et il serait certainement heureux d'avoir à cette occasion des conversations officieuses sur la situation actuelle avec les délégations intéressées.

87. En confiant aux Nations Unies une mission en Guyane britannique, on entraverait donc le progrès pacifique et rapide de ce territoire vers l'indépendance, au lieu de le faciliter. Comme le Secrétaire aux colonies du Royaume-Uni l'a dit en ouvrant la Conférence de Londres, l'avenir de la Guyane sera bientôt entre les mains de la population guyanaise et la solution de ses problèmes nationaux sera le résultat de ses propres efforts.

88. M. Brown passe ensuite au deuxième groupe de territoires, à propos desquels le problème dont s'occupe la Commission ne concerne pas tant le progrès constitutionnel vers l'indépendance et l'autodétermination qu'une situation résultant des revendications de souveraineté d'autres pays sur ces territoires — les îles Falkland et Gibraltar.

89. La délégation du Royaume-Uni a écouté attentivement les arguments mis en avant par le représentant de l'Argentine à l'appui de la revendication de son pays sur les îles Falkland. Elle n'a pas l'intention de présenter à ce sujet des arguments détaillés, vu que la Commission n'entend sans doute pas juger du fond de la question, mais tient à dire que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'accepte pas les arguments du représentant de l'Argentine et continue de n'avoir aucun doute quant à sa souveraineté sur ce territoire. On ne peut donc parler, en l'occurrence, d'une violation quelconque de l'intégrité territoriale de l'Argentine. Il y a, pourtant, une question importante à laquelle le représentant de l'Argentine n'a pas accordé suffisamment d'attention: les intérêts et aspirations (les deux étant inséparables) des habitants. Comme la délégation du Royaume-Uni en a fourni la preuve dans ses déclarations au Comité spécial, les habitants des îles Falkland en sont des habitants authentiques et permanents qui n'ont pas d'autre foyer. Ils ont montré, dans leurs messages au Comité spécial et dans la déclaration officielle de leurs représentants élus, qu'ils souhaitent entretenir avec l'Argentine des relations normales d'amitié, mais n'entendaient pas rompre leurs liens avec le Royaume-Uni. Il n'y a aucune raison de proposer qu'il ne soit pas tenu compte de leurs aspirations, et tel est pourtant le sens de quelques-unes des interventions qui ont eu lieu au cours du débat.

90. On a laissé entendre que la population n'entrerait pas en ligne de compte, en alléguant que les habitants ne faisaient que passer, qu'il n'y avait dans l'archipel ni naissances ni décès, que la population se composait d'habitants transplantés par le Royaume-Uni plutôt que d'habitants de souche autochtone, et que bon nombre d'entre eux étaient des employés de la Falkland Island Company. La population des Falkland ne doit donner lieu à aucun malentendu. Elle compte un peu plus de 2 000 habitants, dont 80 p. 100 sont nés dans l'archipel. Bon nombre d'entre eux pourraient prouver que leurs ancêtres étaient déjà établis dans les Falkland il y a plus d'un siècle. Certes, les habitants sont les descendants d'une communauté d'immigrants, mais on peut en dire autant de la population de l'Amérique du Nord et de l'Amérique du Sud, et même de celle de l'Europe et de l'Afrique. Il serait insensé de restreindre l'application du principe de l'autodétermination aux quelques personnes qui peuvent en toute certitude se prétendre les descendants d'autochtones. Rien dans la Charte ou dans la résolution 1514 (XV) n'autorise une limitation d'une telle portée. En tout cas, il est tout à fait faux de dire que la population des Falkland se compose de gens de passage et qu'aucune naissance et qu'aucun décès ne sont enregistrés dans l'archipel. Les taux de natalité et de mortalité sont publiés; ils sont légèrement supérieurs aux taux enregistrés au Royaume-Uni et cela seul contredit absolument la notion d'une espèce de garnison, sans racine dans le territoire et périodiquement remplacée ou relevée.

91. Les représentants du Venezuela et de l'Italie ont dit que le problème des Falkland était celui d'un territoire colonial plutôt que d'un peuple colonial, celui d'une terre plutôt que d'êtres humains. C'est là, à coup sûr, une façon de voir que la Quatrième Commission ne saurait approuver. Comme l'a dit le président Woodrow Wilson, les peuples ne sont pas des objets ou pions pouvant être troqués et passer d'une souveraineté à une autre. On a dit que le paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV) devait être interprété comme privant du bénéfice de l'autodétermination les habitants de territoires faisant l'objet d'une revendication territoriale de la part d'un autre pays. La délégation du Royaume-Uni et d'autres ont déjà montré de manière concluante, devant le Comité spécial, que ce paragraphe n'avait pas été conçu pour restreindre en quoi que ce soit la portée du principe de l'autodétermination. M. Brown se réfère à ce sujet aux paragraphes 94 à 98 et 146 à 151 du chapitre X du document A/5800/Rev.1, et au paragraphe 109 de l'annexe au chapitre XXIII du même document. Rien de ce qui a été dit au cours du présent débat n'est venu infirmer ces arguments.

92. Les intérêts et aspirations des habitants des îles Falkland sont au centre des préoccupations qui dictent au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni son attitude à l'égard de ce territoire. Le représentant de l'Argentine a soutenu que les intérêts de la population seraient mieux servis si la souveraineté sur ce territoire était transférée à l'Argentine. Cela peut se discuter, mais le fait capital est que le Gouvernement argentin ne peut en décider pour les habitants, pas plus que le Royaume-Uni ou l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est aux habitants eux-mêmes de juger où se trouve leur intérêt.

93. Le représentant de l'Argentine a parlé des recommandations du Comité spécial et de la communication que son gouvernement a adressée au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni pour suggérer que des conversations aient lieu conformément à ces recommandations. La position du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni à l'égard de ces recommandations est exposée en détail dans le rapport du Comité spécial pour 1964 (A/5800/Rev.1, chap. XXIII, par. 29 et 30). Comme l'avenir des habitants des îles Falkland ne peut être réglé sans eux, il s'ensuit que le problème de la souveraineté ne peut faire l'objet de négociations. Cependant, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est toujours prêt à étudier avec le Gouvernement argentin les moyens d'éviter que des dommages ne soient causés aux bonnes relations entre les deux pays. C'est pourquoi le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a répondu à l'invitation de l'Argentine en se déclarant prêt à engager des discussions par la voie diplomatique et a prié le Gouvernement argentin d'indiquer à cet effet des sujets de discussion appropriés, compte tenu des réserves du Royaume-Uni sur la souveraineté et sur la nécessité de respecter les aspirations et intérêts des habitants des îles Falkland. La délégation du Royaume-Uni espère que ces discussions auront lieu et qu'elles permettront d'améliorer les relations déjà cordiales entre les deux pays.

94. Le projet de résolution sur les îles Falkland (A/C.4/L.802) semble laisser entendre que la question de la souveraineté devrait faire l'objet de négociations. De plus, il ne tient aucun compte des vœux des habitants. C'est pourquoi la délégation du Royaume-Uni a des réserves à faire à son sujet. En outre, la résolution semble superflue. Il vaudrait mieux laisser le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et le Gouvernement argentin poursuivre des discussions entre eux. Le projet de résolution n'a pas de rôle essentiel ou utile à jouer dans ce processus et, s'il est mis aux voix, la délégation du Royaume-Uni s'abstiendra. M. Brown tient, par ailleurs, à relever l'emploi abusif qui est fait, dans ce projet de résolution, du mot "Malvinas". Un tel emploi n'est pas reconnu par la Puissance administrante — le Royaume-Uni — ni conforme à l'usage de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. M. Brown demande donc une fois de plus que le texte anglais du projet de résolution soit corrigé. L'emploi du terme "Malvinas" ne saurait affecter en aucun cas la souveraineté du Royaume-Uni sur ces îles.

95. Une grande partie de ce que M. Brown vient de dire vaut également pour Gibraltar. Comme sa délégation l'a déjà précisé, le Royaume-Uni n'a aucun doute quant à sa souveraineté sur Gibraltar. A la 1556ème séance, le représentant de l'Espagne a prétendu que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni répugnait à engager des pourparlers et cherchait à dissimuler son mauvais vouloir en prétextant que les restrictions frontalières, dont il s'est d'ailleurs efforcé de minimiser l'importance et les conséquences néfastes tant pour les habitants de Gibraltar que pour leurs amis et voisins espagnols, constituaient une contrainte. Afin de montrer la véritable nature des obstacles qui s'opposent aux négociations demandées par le consensus, M. Brown attire l'attention de la Commission sur une lettre que le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Espagne a adressée le 18 novembre 1964 à l'ambassadeur du Royaume-Uni à Madrid. Dans cette lettre, reproduite en annexe I au document A/AC.109/L.235, le Ministre déclarait:

"Faute d'une solution négociée, telle que la prévoit le consensus du Comité spécial [A/5800/Rev.1, chap. X, par. 209], le Gouvernement espagnol se verrait obligé, n'ayant d'autre choix pour défendre ses intérêts, de reconsidérer sa politique à l'égard de Gibraltar."

Vu les restrictions qu'on avait commencé à appliquer un mois plus tôt, le lendemain même du consensus, il est manifeste que les termes de cette lettre constituent une menace à laquelle aucun Etat ne saurait se soumettre. C'est cette menace et sa mise à exécution contre Gibraltar qui constituent le véritable obstacle aux négociations.

96. Le 16 octobre 1964, le Comité spécial a adopté un consensus relatif à Gibraltar, invitant le Royaume-Uni et l'Espagne à engager des négociations. Dans les 24 heures suivantes, le Gouvernement espagnol a commencé à imposer, le long de la frontière séparant l'Espagne de Gibraltar, toute une série de restrictions manifestement destinées à influencer sur la situation du territoire. Premièrement, tous les véhicules entrant à Gibraltar ou en sortant ont été soumis à des délais d'attente excessifs; de ce fait, le nombre de voitures de tourisme qui sont entrées à Gibraltar au cours des neuf premiers mois de 1965 a été de 5 153, contre 75 041 pour la période correspondante de 1964. Deuxièmement, les touristes ne sont plus autorisés à introduire en Espagne des articles provenant de Gibraltar sans acquitter des droits de douane excessivement élevés. Troisièmement, toutes les exportations espagnoles vers Gibraltar ont été interdites, à l'exception du poisson, des fruits et des légumes. Aussi bien les retards imposés aux touristes que les droits de douane excessifs qui frappent les importations constituent une violation des engagements contractés par les membres de l'Union internationale des organismes officiels de tourisme, dont fait partie le Ministère espagnol de l'information et du tourisme.

97. Depuis l'offre de négociations faite par l'Espagne le 18 novembre 1964, ces restrictions et ces atteintes au statu quo se sont encore accentuées, ainsi qu'on va le voir. Premièrement, quelque 1 000 personnes, dont la plupart étaient des ressortissants britanniques habitant dans les villes proches de Gibraltar, ont été obligées de quitter leurs foyers à très bref délai; certaines d'entre elles n'avaient jamais eu d'autre domicile. Deuxièmement, il a été interdit aux travailleurs espagnols, sur l'ordre de leur gouvernement, de dépenser à Gibraltar une partie quelconque de leurs salaires encaissés à Gibraltar pour l'achat de denrées alimentaires, etc., qu'ils consommeraient en Espagne. Troisièmement, certains passeports délivrés à Gibraltar n'ont pas été reconnus valables pour l'Espagne. En outre, le Gouvernement espagnol a manifesté son hostilité à l'égard de la population de Gibraltar en refusant l'entrée en Espagne à une certaine catégorie de personnes. Dans cette catégorie figurent les pétitionnaires qui ont été entendus par le Comité spécial et tous les autres membres élus du Conseil législatif de Gibraltar, certains journalistes et d'autres personnes. Tout cela n'a pas empêché le représentant de l'Espagne, au cours de son intervention devant la Commission, de chercher à minimiser la portée et l'effet de ces restrictions et de laisser entendre que seul le Royaume-Uni avait refusé d'appliquer le consensus. Il est bien évident qu'il n'en est rien.

98. Une importante question de principe est en jeu. Si l'on invite deux parties à un différend à rechercher par voie de négociations une solution pacifique, il est inadmissible que l'une d'entre elles s'efforce d'influencer le résultat de ces négociations en exerçant par avance des pressions de caractère politique ou économique. Les pressions exercées par l'Espagne ont commencé après que le consensus a été adopté par le Comité; autrement dit, le consensus tenait compte d'un ensemble de circonstances particulières que l'Espagne a modifiées de façon unilatérale dans les 24 heures qui ont suivi son adoption. Attendre du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni qu'il réponde, dans ces conditions, à des propositions de conversations équivaldrait à admettre qu'il est légitime de chercher à influencer, par la contrainte politique ou économique, la situation d'un territoire qui a fait l'objet d'un consensus — principe auquel ni l'Organisation des Nations Unies ni aucun de ses Membres ne saurait souscrire.

99. Il y a lieu aussi de considérer les effets pratiques des restrictions imposées par le Gouvernement espagnol. Du point de vue économique, les effets qu'elles ont sur Gibraltar et sur les villes espagnoles voisines sont graves. Elles constituent un véritable blocus économique, qui s'accompagne d'une campagne de dénigrement menée par la presse et la radio espagnoles et vise à porter préjudice à la population de Gibraltar et à influencer ainsi sur la situation d'une façon que l'Espagne estime conforme à ses intérêts. Le Gouvernement espagnol a prétendu qu'en adoptant ces mesures, il ne faisait qu'exercer les droits de souveraineté de l'Espagne sur son propre territoire, mais ceci n'a rien à voir avec la question. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'a jamais prétendu que le Gouvernement espagnol agissait de façon illégale en imposant ces restrictions. Il a simplement déclaré qu'elles constituaient une tentative pour influencer la situation et qu'elles étaient anormales.

100. Le représentant de l'Espagne a également laissé entendre que ces mesures visaient à réprimer la contrebande. Dans le passé, les représentants de l'Espagne sont allés jusqu'à prétendre que toute la vie économique de Gibraltar reposait sur la contrebande. Comme l'on sait, l'économie de Gibraltar repose surtout sur les dépenses faites par divers services du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, sur l'industrie touristique et sur le commerce d'entrepôt. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a, à maintes reprises, offert au Gouvernement espagnol la possibilité d'aborder la question de la contrebande et l'a engagé à fournir des preuves; si l'Espagne a des griefs fondés, le Royaume-Uni est toujours prêt à en discuter. Mais la faiblesse de ces accusations ressort à l'évidence du fait qu'aucune des communications adressées par le Gouvernement espagnol au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni depuis l'adoption du consensus ne fait la moindre allusion à la contrebande.

101. Pour toutes ces raisons, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni ne peut accepter de donner suite aux propositions de discussions tant que la situation ne sera pas redevenue normale. Cela ne signifie pas que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'ait pas l'intention d'accepter des pourparlers, comme en témoigne sa réaction favorable à la proposition de l'Argentine. Si le Gouvernement espagnol désire sincèrement engager des négociations, il doit rétablir la situation telle qu'elle était lorsque l'Organisation des Nations Unies les a suggérées. En attendant, M. Brown réaffirme que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni accepte, comme ses obligations le lui ordonnent, de défendre les intérêts de la population de Gibraltar et qu'il s'acquittera de cette obligation par tous les moyens nécessaires. La population de Gibraltar est la véritable communauté permanente de ce territoire et a les mêmes droits que toute autre population coloniale, où qu'elle se trouve. Le principe de l'auto-détermination s'applique autant à elle qu'à tout autre peuple. Les habitants ne désirent pas passer sous la souveraineté espagnole, car ils ne croient pas que ce soit là leur véritable intérêt et ils ne laisseront à personne le soin de décider pour eux ce qui est leur véritable intérêt.

102. En terminant, M. Brown s'élève de nouveau contre la conclusion selon laquelle ce serait le Royaume-Uni qui se serait refusé à négocier, et il réaffirme que son gouvernement est tout disposé à donner suite à des propositions de conversations dès que la situation le long de la frontière sera redevenue normale. Plus vite l'obstacle aux pourparlers sera éliminé, mieux cela vaudra pour tous les intéressés.

La séance est levée à 19 h 30.

EXAMEN DE PROJETS DE RESOLUTION (suite)
[A/C.4/L.806/REV.1 ET ADD.1, A/C.4/L.807 ET ADD.1 ET 2]

1. M. FOUM (République-Unie de Tanzanie), présentant le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1 concernant le territoire de l'île Maurice, dit que la discussion générale sur les petits territoires coloniaux a montré que les membres de la Commission se préoccupent tout autant de ces territoires que des autres.

2. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a déclaré que des plans ont été préparés en vue d'accorder l'indépendance au territoire de l'île Maurice au plus tard en 1966. C'est peut-être exact, mais ces plans ne se sont pas encore concrétisés et la situation reste confuse. C'est pourquoi, après avoir réaffirmé le droit inaliénable du peuple de l'île Maurice à la liberté et à l'indépendance, les auteurs du projet de résolution ont invité la Puissance administrante à prendre des mesures efficaces en vue de la mise en œuvre immédiate et complète de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. De sérieux doutes demeurent quant aux modalités d'octroi de l'indépendance. La liberté est indivisible et ce serait la nier que d'accorder l'indépendance tout en l'assortissant d'obligations ou de conditions qui auraient pour effet d'annuler cette indépendance.

3. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a fait état des droits qu'il possède dans certaines des îles du territoire et a parlé de partage des responsabilités administratives et autres. Le paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV) contient une déclaration très claire sur l'intégrité territoriale des territoires coloniaux et l'interprétation de ce paragraphe ne doit donner lieu à aucune équivoque ni à des querelles d'ordre juridique. La situation dans d'autres pays a montré que le maintien de bases étrangères est un des plus grands maux qui puissent frapper un peuple indépendant. La base que l'on envisage d'installer sur le territoire de l'île Maurice constituerait une menace à la liberté non seulement de ce territoire mais également des pays voisins d'Asie et d'Afrique. Du fait qu'elle servirait les intérêts stratégiques de la Puissance administrante et de ses alliés, elle entraînerait toute la région dans la guerre froide et introduirait des sous-marins nucléaires et des navires porteurs de missiles dans l'océan Indien, sacrifiant ainsi la neutralité de la région. Comme il est indiqué dans la Déclaration de la deuxième Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés qui s'est tenue au Caire en octobre 1964, le maintien ou la création possible de bases militaires étrangères et le stationnement de troupes étrangères sur les territoires d'autres pays contre la volonté expresse de ces pays sont une violation flagrante de la souveraineté des Etats et une menace à la liberté et à la paix internationales; en particulier l'existence ou l'établissement futur sur des territoires dépendants de bases qui pourraient être utilisées en vue du maintien du colonialisme sont indéfendables. Le fait de démembrer le territoire de l'île Maurice et de constituer une nouvelle entité coloniale où serait installée une base militaire aurait pour effet de créer un point de tension et serait préjudiciable à l'accession pacifique d'un territoire colonial et de son peuple à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

4. Les auteurs espèrent que la Commission saura apprécier comme il convient le projet de résolution et que celui-ci recevra le plus large appui.

*Reprise des débats de la 1560^{ème} séance.

5. M. NATWAR SINGH (Inde) s'associe, comme coauteur du projet de résolution, aux observations du représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie. La Quatrième Commission est saisie pour la première fois d'un projet de résolution sur l'île Maurice. La question a été examinée au printemps de 1964 par le Sous-Comité du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et par le Comité spécial lui-même en novembre 1964. L'île Maurice est prête pour l'indépendance et la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale doit lui être appliquée sans autre délai. Il a été tenu compte des mesures prises par la Puissance administrante au sujet de l'avenir constitutionnel du territoire. M. Natwar Singh signale en particulier le dernier alinéa du préambule du projet de résolution qui s'inspire du paragraphe 6 de la résolution 1514 (XV). Le paragraphe 4 du dispositif invite la Puissance administrante à ne prendre aucune mesure qui serait contraire à cette disposition. A aucun point de vue, militaire ou économique, le démembrement n'est souhaitable, et il est contraire aux dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV).

6. Lors d'une intervention récente au Parlement indien, le Premier Ministre de l'Inde a fait allusion à une nouvelle selon laquelle le Secrétaire d'Etat aux colonies du Royaume-Uni a déclaré que le Royaume-Uni disposerait d'un nouveau territoire dans l'océan Indien, le territoire britannique de l'océan Indien, dans lequel les gouvernements du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis pourraient construire des installations de caractère défensif, bien qu'aucun plan n'ait encore été élaboré. Quelques jours plus tard, la position de l'Inde sur cette question a été précisée devant le Parlement indien: l'Inde est hostile à l'idée qu'une puissance coloniale démembre un territoire à de telles fins et estime que cet acte serait contraire à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. L'Inde, qui a signé au Caire la Déclaration de la deuxième Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés, est fermement opposée à toute tentative de démembrement d'un territoire, quelle qu'en soit la raison, par une Puissance administrante.

7. M. Natwar Singh exprime l'espoir que la Commission appréciera le projet de résolution et l'appuiera largement.

8. M. ANDRE (Dahomey) présente au nom des auteurs le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 et 2 relatif à Fernando Pôo et Rfo Muni. Ce projet tient compte des déclarations qui ont été faites à la Commission et des récentes mesures administratives prises par la Puissance administrante. Il est essentiel que ce territoire soit totalement libéré et la Commission s'est accordée à reconnaître qu'il fallait trouver une solution. Le projet de résolution en propose une et M. André espère que la Commission l'adoptera à l'unanimité.

9. M. THIAM (Mali) souligne que le projet de résolution reconnaît le droit inaliénable du peuple de Fernando Pôo et de Rfo Muni à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance et demande à la Puissance administrante de fixer la date la plus rapprochée possible pour l'indépendance après consultation populaire au suffrage universel sous le contrôle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies; il invite le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux à suivre l'évolution de la situation et à faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale à sa vingt et unième session. Les auteurs du projet de résolution estiment qu'il conduira à un règlement du problème et que l'Espagne ne se contentera pas de demi-mesures. M. Thiam exprime l'espoir que le projet de résolution sera largement appuyé par la Commission.

Organisation des travaux de la Commission

1. Le PRÉSIDENT informe la Commission que plusieurs délégations ont suggéré qu'avant de poursuivre la discussion générale sur le Sud-Ouest africain, la Commission se prononce sur les trois projets de résolution dont elle est saisie et qui concernent respectivement l'île Maurice (A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1), Fernando Pô et le Rfo Muni (A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3), et les îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1). S'il n'y a pas d'objection, il considérera que la Commission désire procéder ainsi.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux — A/5800/Rev.1, chap. VII IX, X et XIII à XXVI; A/6000/Rev.1, chap. IX à XXV (suite*) [A/5959, A/6084, A/6094, A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1, L.807 et Add.1 à 3, L.808 et Add.1]

2. M. GIMENEZ MELO (Argentine) félicite les auteurs du projet de résolution A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1, relatif à l'île Maurice, de s'être montrés soucieux de sauvegarder les droits de la population du territoire et d'avoir tenu compte de ses aspirations à l'indépendance et du droit des habitants à conserver leur intégrité territoriale, reconnaissant ainsi un principe profondément enraciné dans la conscience des pays d'Amérique latine et consacré au paragraphe 6 de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. A l'égard du cinquième alinéa du préambule, M. Gimenez Melo a une objection à formuler: cet alinéa semble limiter la violation de la Déclaration, et notamment de son paragraphe 6, à l'établissement d'une base militaire. De l'avis de la délégation argentine, il peut y avoir violation de ce paragraphe 6 qu'il s'agisse ou non de bases militaires; par exemple, la violation peut résulter des activités d'une entreprise industrielle. Néanmoins, la délégation argentine votera en faveur du projet de résolution.

3. Quant au projet de résolution relatif aux îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1), la délégation argentine votera également en sa faveur, car il reflète fidèlement la situation dans le territoire, telle qu'elle a été analysée par le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

4. Quant au projet de résolution relatif à la Guinée équatoriale (A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3) la délégation argentine éprouve des préoccupations en ce qui concerne certains éléments du dispositif, en particulier le paragraphe 2, qui ne semblent pas en harmonie avec la situation réelle dans le territoire, ni avec les attributions que possède actuellement la Puissance administrante. Elle aurait également préféré que le projet de résolution rende hommage, d'une manière ou d'une autre, à l'Espagne pour la manière dont elle s'acquitte de sa tâche de décolonisation, avec cette sagesse politique dont elle a donné tant de preuves. Malgré ces objections, la délégation argentine votera également pour ce texte.

*Reprise des débats de la 1567^{ème} séance.

5. M. MELLBIN (Danemark) déclare que, de l'avis de sa délégation, le dernier alinéa du préambule du projet de résolution relatif aux îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1) ne devrait pas se borner à déclarer que les changements d'ordre constitutionnel envisagés par la Puissance administrante susciteraient des tendances séparatistes et feraient obstacle à l'intégration de l'ensemble de la population dans les domaines politique, économique et social. Sans doute, cette intégration est l'objectif final et les changements constitutionnels ne l'ont pas encore réalisée, mais on ne peut nier qu'un pas ait été fait dans cette direction. Le paragraphe 2 du dispositif réaffirme le droit du peuple des îles Fidji à la liberté et à l'indépendance. Or, à la Conférence constitutionnelle de Londres, les trois groupes principaux de la population ont reconnu que la question de l'indépendance ne se posait pas actuellement et M. Mellbin pense que, de façon générale, les membres de la Commission estiment eux aussi que l'indépendance n'est pas la solution unique et que la décision appartient à la population. Le paragraphe 4 du dispositif demande l'institution d'un système inconditionnel de représentation démocratique fondé sur le suffrage universel. La délégation danoise espère que ce système serait assorti des garanties voulues pour les groupes minoritaires. Sous ces réserves, la délégation danoise votera en faveur du texte proposé.

6. Quant au projet de résolution relatif à l'île Maurice (A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1), il est regrettable qu'aucune mention n'y soit faite du fait qu'une date a été fixée pour l'indépendance. D'autre part, la délégation danoise n'est pas convaincue que les mesures envisagées par la Puissance administrante, en complet accord avec le Gouvernement de l'île Maurice, en ce qui concerne certaines petites îles de l'océan Indien soient en contradiction avec la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Sous ces réserves, la délégation danoise votera en faveur du texte proposé.

7. M. DE PINIES (Espagne) regrette que le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3 ne tienne pas compte des déclarations faites devant la Commission par le Président du Conseil de gouvernement de la Guinée équatoriale, M. Odó Edú, et par les membres de nombreuses délégations, qui ont eu des paroles élogieuses pour la politique suivie par l'Espagne à l'égard de ce territoire. L'Espagne aborde le problème de la décolonisation dans un esprit de sincérité absolue, ainsi qu'il sied à un pays qui a sur son propre sol une question coloniale pour la solution de laquelle il espère pouvoir compter sur l'appui de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

8. Nul n'ignore que l'Espagne prépare le peuple de la Guinée équatoriale à décider librement de son avenir. Le thème de l'indépendance a été maintes fois traité, non pas seulement par le Président du Conseil de gouvernement de la Guinée équatoriale, mais aussi par les plus hautes autorités espagnoles. Dans ces conditions, demander de fixer une date pour l'indépendance est une exigence déplacée, puisque l'Espagne est disposée à accorder cette indépendance à tout moment. Le principe de l'autodétermination suppose que c'est au peuple de la Guinée équatoriale qu'il appartient de décider du moment à choisir. Le processus qui doit aboutir à l'indépendance est déjà très avancé et la population du territoire tient déjà son destin entre ses mains. M. Ondó Edú, président du gouvernement autonome, a déclaré qu'une étape de préparation à l'indépendance complète était nécessaire, mais qu'il fallait au territoire la paix, l'ordre et beaucoup de travail.

9. Si la délégation espagnole se prononçait au sujet de ce projet de résolution, elle enfreindrait le droit de la population du territoire à l'autodétermination. La délégation espagnole réserve donc sa position en ce qui concerne la portée et la signification du projet de résolution et ne participera pas au vote. Elle tient néanmoins à assurer la Commission que l'Espagne est toujours disposée à collaborer au développement du continent africain dans tout ce qui sert les intérêts véritables de ses habitants.

10. M. ORANTES LUNA (Guatemala) indique que sa délégation votera en faveur du projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3. Elle eût cependant préféré que l'on ne demande pas à la Puissance administrante de fixer la date la plus rapprochée possible pour l'indépendance après consultation populaire sous le contrôle des Nations Unies, car la Puissance administrante a déjà déclaré qu'elle était prête à accorder l'indépendance dès que la population du territoire la demanderait, et que c'est à la population qu'appartient l'initiative en ce domaine. Il eût, d'autre part, été juste de remercier l'Espagne de l'œuvre qu'elle a accomplie dans l'intérêt du territoire de la Guinée équatoriale confié à son administration.

11. M. DE CASTRO (Philippines) dit que sa délégation votera pour le projet de résolution relatif aux îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1), qui reprend les conclusions du Comité spécial et est empreint de l'esprit de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Le paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux demande que des mesures immédiates soient prises pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples des territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes. En rappelant les termes de ce paragraphe la résolution 1951 (XVIII) de l'Assemblée générale a invité la Puissance administrante à élaborer une nouvelle constitution prévoyant des élections libres selon le principe "à chacun une voix" et à prendre sans délai des mesures pour transférer tous les pouvoirs aux peuples du territoire. Or, le nombre de membres non fonctionnaires du Conseil législatif est demeuré inchangé et sa composition actuelle n'est certes pas représentative; quant aux membres désignés, ils n'ont pas de comptes à rendre à la population. Le paragraphe 4 du projet de résolution prie la Puissance administrante de prendre d'urgence des mesures pour abroger toutes les lois de caractère discriminatoire et pour instituer un système inconditionnel de représentation démocratique. Certaines objections ont été formulées au sujet de ce texte et il a été dit qu'il y avait aux îles Fidji plus d'Indiens que de Mélanésiens, mais ceux qu'on appelle "Indiens" habitent les îles depuis des générations, n'ont plus de foyer en Inde et doivent donc être considérés comme de vrais habitants des Fidji.

12. La délégation philippine votera également pour le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3, relatif à Fernando Pôo et au Rfo Muni. Elle aurait néanmoins apprécié un rappel de la loi fondamentale qui a accordé au territoire une certaine autonomie interne et a été librement acceptée par la population lors d'un plébiscite démocratique. Le territoire est donc engagé dans la voie de l'autodétermination et il possède un gouvernement provisoire qui, on peut légitimement l'espérer, conduira le territoire à l'indépendance complète. Cela étant, il était inutile de demander à la Puissance administrante de fixer "la date la plus rapprochée possible" pour l'indépendance.

13. Mme KONANTZ (Canada) dit que sa délégation ne pourra pas appuyer le projet de résolution relatif aux îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1), parce qu'il ne reconnaît pas que de nouveaux progrès ont été accomplis, dans le cadre de la nouvelle constitution, vers l'autonomie interne. Le projet de résolution ne tient pas compte du fait que, dans un pays comme les îles Fidji où diverses communautés ethniques cohabitent, il est essentiel que l'évolution constitutionnelle soit conforme aux vœux de la population; il ne tient pas non plus compte du désir qu'a la population de continuer pour l'instant son association avec la Puissance administrante. La délégation canadienne s'abstiendra donc au moment du vote.

14. M. BROWN (Royaume-Uni) tient à remercier les représentants de Ceylan et du Libéria pour l'esprit de modération et de sympathie dont ils ont fait preuve en présentant à la 1567ème séance le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1, relatif aux îles Fidji. La délégation du Royaume-Uni approuve sans réserve un grand nombre des observations alors formulées par le représentant de Ceylan au sujet de la nécessité de rompre les barrières entre les groupes. Elle ne peut cependant partager le point de vue selon lequel les changements constitutionnels qui doivent être inaugurés par la Puissance administrante provoqueraient des divisions dans la vie politique du territoire. Ce point de vue est reflété par le projet de résolution et, sur ce point, la délégation du Royaume-Uni est d'un avis complètement différent.

15. Dans sa déclaration de la 1558ème séance, M. Brown a indiqué les grandes lignes des changements constitutionnels annoncés: suffrage universel des adultes; conseil législatif comptant 36 membres élus et seulement 4 membres fonctionnaires; système ministériel. Quant à la représentation proportionnelle des groupes ethniques, les Fidjiens auront quelques sièges supplémentaires, les Européens en auront un peu moins, et le nombre de ceux dont disposent les Indiens demeurera inchangé. Il doit également y avoir un système de candidatures soumises à l'ensemble de l'électorat, selon lequel trois représentants de chaque groupe ethnique seront élus par l'ensemble des électeurs, ce qui constituera un progrès très important, destiné à favoriser l'apparition de dirigeants politiques représentant les intérêts de l'ensemble de la population et non plus seulement d'un groupe. C'est donc un pas dans la voie de l'intégration politique et de la disparition des barrières entre groupes.

16. Les modifications étant ainsi conformes aux principes et objectifs fondamentaux acceptés par tous, la question est de savoir quel est le rythme à adopter.

A cet égard, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a été guidé par les vœux des habitants, à quelque groupe qu'ils appartiennent. Aller plus vite que l'un des groupes principaux ne consent à le faire, ce serait s'exposer à un désastre et encourager les suspensions et divisions raciales que la politique britannique s'efforce précisément de faire disparaître.

17. Le sixième alinéa du préambule et le paragraphe 4 du dispositif du projet de résolution semblent donc mal conçus. Les changements constitutionnels qui doivent être introduits visent à rapprocher les groupes du territoire et il est contraire à la vraisemblance de prétendre qu'ils susciteront des tendances séparatistes. La première partie du paragraphe 4 fait allusion à l'existence de lois de caractère discriminatoire. Ces lois, telles qu'elles sont, sont en fait destinées à protéger les intérêts légitimes des diverses collectivités dans une situation où des craintes réciproques ne peuvent être dissipées que par la protection des lois. Ces craintes existent, et la protection des lois sera donc nécessaire jusqu'au moment où le développement de l'unité et de la coopération nationales, que la politique du Royaume-Uni a pour objet de favoriser, la rendront superflue. La deuxième partie de ce paragraphe semble réclamer l'abolition immédiate de tout système de vote par groupe et l'abandon du projet de la Puissance administrante relatif au système de candidatures soumises à l'ensemble de l'électorat. Cela reviendrait à imposer une révolution politique qui ne pourrait qu'accroître l'opposition et les suspensions entre les divers groupes raciaux. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'est pas disposé à le faire, et la délégation du Royaume-Uni ne pense pas que la Quatrième Commission ou l'Assemblée générale doivent le demander. Elle votera donc contre le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1.

18. Passant au projet de résolution relatif à l'île Maurice (A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1), M. Brown rappelle qu'il a décrit en détail, à la 1558ème séance, les résultats de la conférence constitutionnelle de Londres. Il a expliqué qu'il y aurait une commission électorale, des élections générales et six mois d'autonomie interne, au bout desquels, si la nouvelle assemblée demandait l'indépendance, celle-ci serait accordée. Tout ceci pourra probablement être accompli avant la fin de 1966. Or le projet de résolution regrette que la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale n'ait pas été complètement appliquée, comme si la perspective de l'indépendance ne s'ouvrirait pas à brève échéance pour le territoire. Une telle méconnaissance des réalités de la situation ne peut que diminuer l'autorité des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale, et la délégation du Royaume-Uni ne pourra donc voter en faveur du projet de résolution. Elle ne peut davantage approuver le passage du projet de résolution selon lequel toute mesure prise pour détacher certaines îles du territoire constituerait une violation de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Elle peut encore moins y voir une mesure qui démembrerait le territoire et violerait son intégrité territoriale. La question de l'intégrité territoriale de l'île Maurice, M. Brown le répète, ne se pose pas dans un tel contexte. La délégation du Royaume-Uni s'abstiendra donc au moment du vote sur ce projet de résolution.

19. La délégation du Royaume-Uni votera, en revanche, pour le projet de résolution sur Fernando Pôo et le Rio Muni (A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3), dont elle approuve l'esprit et les objectifs. M. Brown désire cependant formuler une réserve en ce qui concerne le "droit" à l'autodétermination mentionné dans ce texte et réaffirmer à ce propos l'opinion bien connue de sa délégation quant à la distinction à faire entre un "droit" et un "principe". En outre, de l'avis de sa délégation, la base de toute consultation populaire et de toute participation éventuelle de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à une consultation de cet ordre sont des questions qui relèvent de la Puissance administrante.

20. M. McCARTHY (Australie) dit que sa délégation rend hommage aux intentions du projet de résolution sur les îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1) qui cherche la solution des problèmes du territoire dans le principe de suffrage universel avec liste électorale unique, principe que, pour sa part, la délégation australienne approuve entièrement. Cependant, selon l'Article 73 de la Charte des Nations Unies, l'objectif recherché est le développement progressif des institutions politiques des territoires, "dans la mesure appropriée aux conditions particulières de chaque territoire et de ses populations". Or il y a, aux îles Fidji, 206 000 Indiens, 175 000 Mélanésien et 36 000 personnes appartenant à des ethnies diverses. Les Mélanésien ont conservé leurs qualités et leurs traditions, leur cohésion sociale. Les Indiens sont des immigrants qui ont commencé d'arriver il y a une quarantaine d'années. Ils considèrent les îles Fidji comme leur patrie; ils vivent en harmonie auprès des autochtones, mais non pas avec eux, car les deux groupes restent séparés, et cette séparation n'est pas le fait de la Puissance administrante.

21. Aussi la délégation australienne pense-t-elle, compte tenu des conditions particulières des îles Fidji, que l'application des résolutions mentionnées créerait précisément les difficultés que le cinquième alinéa du préambule vise à empêcher. Quant au sixième alinéa du préambule, loin de croire que les changements constitutionnels envisagés susciteraient des tendances séparatistes et feraient obstacle à l'intégration, la délégation australienne est persuadée qu'ils constituent un début qui pourrait graduellement aboutir à l'intégration des deux principaux groupes de la communauté fidjienne.

22. La pièce maîtresse du texte, à savoir le paragraphe 4 du dispositif, réclame un système inconditionnel de représentation démocratique fondé sur le principe "à chacun une voix". Ce principe est en lui-même excellent, mais les réalités de la situation actuelle sont telles qu'il vaut beaucoup mieux pour l'instant se contenter d'un début, d'une tête de pont qui sera élargie par la suite. Le Royaume-Uni cherche à frayer un chemin dans une situation extrêmement difficile, en s'efforçant de tenir compte des intérêts des deux principaux groupes du territoire, et non de l'intérêt exclusif de tel ou tel groupe. Le texte proposé ne paraissant pas opportun à la délégation australienne, elle se verra dans l'obligation de voter contre.

23. M. ZOHRAB (Nouvelle-Zélande) dit que sa délégation s'abstiendra au moment du vote sur le projet de résolution relatif aux îles Fidji (A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1). Bien qu'elle appuie pleinement l'idée fondamentale du projet, elle ne peut en effet partager les vues reflétées au sixième alinéa du préambule et au paragraphe 4 du dispositif.

24. Selon cet alinéa, les changements constitutionnels envisagés susciteraient des tendances séparatistes et feraient obstacle à l'intégration, ce qui ne semble pas exact. Les mesures proposées ne sont qu'un commencement, mais un commencement indiscutable. Les modifications du système électoral tendront à donner une législature reflétant plus fidèlement l'importance relative des trois principaux groupes ethniques; par ailleurs, le premier pas sera fait vers un vote ne suivant pas une formule purement communautaire. En outre, l'établissement d'un système ministériel, l'octroi du droit de vote aux groupes minoritaires et l'élaboration d'une Déclaration des droits sont autant de progrès sensibles.

25. D'autre part, abroger toutes les lois de caractère discriminatoire et instituer un système inconditionnel de représentation démocratique est un idéal auquel bien peu de membres de la Commission refuseraient de souscrire. Mais inviter la Puissance administrante, comme le fait le paragraphe 4 du dispositif, à prendre d'urgence de telles mesures, c'est ne pas tenir suffisamment compte de la situation existant actuellement aux îles Fidji. La notion de lois discriminatoires est odieuse, mais les lois en question, adoptées il y a de nombreuses années, ont visé à empêcher une aliénation excessive des terres au profit des éléments immigrants. Le principe "à chacun une voix" est lui aussi inattaquable mais, aux îles Fidji, la situation exige que l'on tienne particulièrement compte des intérêts de tous les groupes de la population. L'absence relative de violence raciale est à l'honneur des deux grands groupes ethniques, qui ont fait preuve de tolérance, mais les méthodes progressives adoptées par le Royaume-Uni n'ont pas été étrangères à cette modération.

26. Estimant qu'il faut éviter de compromettre un équilibre, encore fragile, de coopération entre les groupes ethniques, la délégation néo-zélandaise, bien qu'approuvant l'objet fondamental du projet de résolution, se verra forcée de s'abstenir au moment du vote.

27. M. GRINBERG (Bulgarie) dit que sa délégation approuve d'une manière générale les trois projets de résolution dont la Commission est saisie. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1, la délégation bulgare attache une importance particulière au dernier alinéa du préambule et au paragraphe 4 du dispositif. En effet, le peuple de l'île Maurice est inquiet de constater que la Puissance administrante envisage de détacher certaines îles du territoire afin d'y établir une base militaire; deux pétitions (A/AC.109/PET.420 et A/AC.109/PET.378/Add.1) adressées au Comité spécial faisaient état de ces craintes. Le Gouvernement bulgare se félicite que la deuxième Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés, tenue au Caire en octobre 1964, ait inclus dans sa Déclaration une condamnation du maintien ou de la création de bases dans les territoires non autonomes. La délégation bulgare appuie donc pleinement le dernier paragraphe du préambule et le paragraphe 4 du dispositif du projet de résolution concernant l'île Maurice.

28. M. FORTIN (Honduras) dit que sa délégation votera pour le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3, mais estime que le paragraphe 2 du dispositif n'était pas nécessaire.

29. M. MARIN VANEGAS (Colombie) pense que c'est au peuple de la Guinée équatoriale lui-même qu'il appartient de fixer la date de l'indépendance. La délégation colombienne demande qu'il soit procédé à un vote séparé sur le paragraphe 2 du dispositif du projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3. Elle votera en faveur des trois projets de résolution.

30. Le PRESIDENT met aux voix le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1.

A la demande de l'Inde, il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par la Somalie, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Somalie, Espagne, Soudan, Syrie, Thaïlande, Togo, Trinité et Tobago, Tunisie, Turquie, Ouganda, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yougoslavie, Zambie, Afghanistan, Algérie, Argentine, Brésil, Bulgarie, Birmanie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cameroun, Ceylan, Tchad, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (République démocratique du), Costa Rica, Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, Danemark, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Grèce, Guatemala, Guinée, Haïti, Honduras, Hongrie, Inde, Iran, Irak, Israël, Japon, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Libéria, Libye, Malawi, Malaisie, Mali, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Maroc, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Panama, Pérou, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone.

Votent contre: néant.

S'abstiennent: Afrique du Sud, Suède, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, États-Unis d'Amérique, Australie, Autriche, Belgique, Canada, Finlande, France, Irlande, Italie, Jamaïque, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Norvège, Portugal.

Par 77 voix contre zéro, avec 17 abstentions, le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1 est adopté.

36. M. DIAZ GONZALEZ (Venezuela) dit que sa délégation a voté pour le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.806/Rev.1 et Add.1 bien qu'elle ne soit pas entièrement satisfaite de la rédaction du cinquième alinéa du préambule, qu'elle considère comme n'étant pas complet. La délégation vénézuélienne estime, en effet, que le démembrement d'une partie d'un territoire en vue d'aménager une base militaire constitue non seulement une violation de la Déclaration figurant dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et notamment du paragraphe 6 de ladite Déclaration, mais également des principes consacrés par la Charte des Nations Unies.

37. En ce qui concerne le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3, la délégation vénézuélienne a voté en sa faveur parce qu'il reflète non seulement les préoccupations de ses auteurs, mais aussi de tous ceux qui luttent pour que le colonialisme disparaisse définitivement sous toutes les latitudes et sous toutes ses formes. Il est regrettable, cependant, qu'il n'ait pas été tenu compte des efforts constructifs déployés par l'Espagne dans le territoire en vue d'appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV) et de la coopération dont elle a fait preuve avec l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour la liquidation du colonialisme en Afrique. Pour ce qui est du paragraphe 2 du dispositif de ce projet, M. Díaz Gonzales rappelle que la Puissance administrante a dit à plusieurs reprises que la date de l'accession à l'indépendance serait fixée par la population elle-même; le Président du Conseil de gouvernement lui-même l'a confirmé devant la Commission. La délégation vénézuélienne estime donc que le paragraphe 2 ne limite en aucune façon la volonté du peuple de la Guinée équatoriale, qui est seul habilité à décider de son propre destin.

38. M. O'HARA (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) dit que sa délégation a voté contre le projet de résolution A/C.4/L.808 et Add.1 parce qu'elle estime que son texte manque de réalisme. Il se pose, en effet, aux îles Fidji, des problèmes bien particuliers qui ne peuvent être résolus par l'application automatique de résolutions et qui nécessitent non pas des solutions toutes faites, mais du tact, de l'ingéniosité et de la patience. La tâche de la Puissance administrante est d'apporter aux problèmes fondamentaux des solutions que puissent accepter tous les groupes du territoire. Il ne faut donc pas que la Quatrième Commission vienne compliquer sa tâche.

39. La délégation des Etats-Unis a voté en faveur du projet de résolution A/C.4/L.807 et Add.1 à 3 tout en estimant qu'on aurait dû prendre note des progrès déjà réalisés dans le territoire de la Guinée équatoriale. En ce qui concerne le paragraphe 2 du dispositif, la délégation des Etats-Unis estime que c'est bien à la population du territoire qu'il appartient de fixer la date de l'indépendance.

Rappelant également ses résolutions 1805 (XVII) du 14 décembre 1962 et 1899 (XVIII) du 13 novembre 1963, par lesquelles elle a confié des tâches concernant le Sud-Ouest africain au Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, ainsi que sa résolution 1970 (XVIII) du 16 décembre 1963 par laquelle elle a confié au Comité spécial des fonctions nouvelles au sujet des renseignements communiqués en vertu de l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte des Nations Unies, Ayant examiné les rapports établis par le Comité spécial pour les années 1964¹² et 1965¹³.

Notant avec un profond regret que, cinq ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, de nombreux territoires sont encore sous domination coloniale,

Déplorant l'attitude négative de certaines puissances coloniales, et en particulier l'attitude inadmissible des Gouvernements portugais et sud-africain, qui refusent de reconnaître aux peuples coloniaux le droit à l'indépendance,

Préoccupée par la politique des puissances coloniales qui font échec aux droits des peuples coloniaux en favorisant l'afflux systématique d'immigrants étrangers et en dispersant, déportant et transférant les autochtones,

Notant les mesures prises et envisagées par le Comité spécial au sujet de la liste des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration,

Déplorant également l'attitude de certains Etats qui continuent, malgré les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Comité spécial, à coopérer avec les Gouvernements portugais et sud-africain et même à leur apporter une assistance que ces deux gouvernements utilisent pour intensifier la répression contre les populations africaines opprimées,

Pleinement consciente du fait que la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid, ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale, constitue une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité,

Ayant adopté des résolutions au sujet de certains territoires examinés par le Comité spécial,

1. Réaffirme ses résolutions 1514 (XV), 1654 (XVI), 1810 (XVII) et 1956 (XVIII);

2. Prend note avec satisfaction du travail accompli par le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et le félicite des efforts qu'il a déployés pour mettre en œuvre la Déclaration;

3. Approuve les rapports du Comité spécial et invite à nouveau les puissances administrantes à appliquer les recommandations qui y figurent;

4. Regrette profondément le refus de certaines puissances coloniales de coopérer avec le Comité spécial et leur inobservation persistante des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale;

5. Fait appel aux puissances coloniales pour qu'elles mettent fin à leur politique qui viole les droits des peuples coloniaux par l'afflux systématique d'immigrants étrangers et par la dispersion, la déportation et le transfert des autochtones;

6. Demande au Comité spécial de poursuivre sa tâche et de continuer à rechercher les meilleurs moyens d'as-

2105 (XX). Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux

L'Assemblée générale,

Rappelant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux figurant dans sa résolution 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960, ainsi que ses résolutions 1654 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961, 1810 (XVII) du 17 décembre 1962 et 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963, ¹² Ibid., dix-neuvième session, Annexes, annexe n° 8 (1ère partie) [A/5800/Rev.1].

¹³ Ibid., vingtième session, Annexes, additif au point 23 de de l'ordre du jour (A/6000/Rev.1).

sur l'application immédiate et complète de la résolution 1514 (XV) à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance;

7. Approuve le programme de travail envisagé par le Comité spécial pour 1966, notamment la possibilité d'organiser une série de réunions en Afrique et l'envoi de groupes de visite dans les territoires, en particulier dans les régions de l'Atlantique, de l'océan Indien et du Pacifique;

8. Prie le Comité spécial de porter une attention particulière aux petits territoires et de recommander à l'Assemblée générale les moyens les plus appropriés, ainsi que les mesures à prendre, pour permettre éventuellement aux populations de ces territoires d'exercer pleinement leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance;

9. Prie le Comité spécial, chaque fois qu'il le jugera opportun, de recommander une date limite pour l'accession à l'indépendance de chaque territoire considéré, conformément au désir de la population;

10. Reconnait la légitimité de la lutte que les peuples sous domination coloniale mènent pour l'exercice de leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance et invite tous les Etats à apporter une aide matérielle et morale aux mouvements de libération nationale dans les territoires coloniaux;

11. Prie tous les Etats et les institutions internationales, y compris les institutions spécialisées des Nations Unies, de refuser toute assistance, quelle qu'elle soit, aux Gouvernements portugais et sud-africain tant qu'ils n'auront pas renoncé à leur politique de domination coloniale et de discrimination raciale;

12. Prie les puissances coloniales de démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles;

13. Demande au Comité spécial de porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité les faits nouveaux survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires qu'il examine, qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales, et de formuler des suggestions dont le Conseil pourrait s'inspirer en étudiant les mesures qu'il convient de prendre conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies;

14. Prie le Secrétaire général de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour favoriser une large diffusion de la Déclaration et faire largement connaître les travaux du Comité spécial, afin que l'opinion mondiale puisse être suffisamment informée de la grave menace à la paix que constituent le colonialisme et l'apartheid, et invite toutes les puissances administrantes à coopérer avec le Secrétaire général dans l'exécution de sa tâche;

15. Prie le Secrétaire général de continuer à fournir au Comité spécial tous les moyens et le personnel nécessaires à l'accomplissement de son mandat.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

1. Le PRESIDENT: Les membres de l'Assemblée se souviendront qu'il a été décidé d'examiner la question en séance plénière afin de permettre à l'Assemblée de discuter de cette question dans son ensemble. Tous les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial qui ont trait à des territoires particuliers ont été soumis à la Quatrième Commission. Jusqu'à présent, les rapports de la Quatrième Commission sur la Rhodésie du Sud [A/6041 et Add.1 et 2] et Aden [A/6029] ont été examinés en séance plénière comme questions urgentes. L'Assemblée générale examinera dans quelques jours les rapports de la Quatrième Commission sur d'autres territoires.

2. Pour le moment, l'Assemblée va entreprendre l'examen de la question dans son ensemble. Tous les problèmes qui se posent à propos de cette question peuvent être traités, mais il serait préférable pour la bonne marche des débats que les représentants qui désirent ne faire porter leurs observations que sur certains territoires particuliers expriment ces observations avant le vote sur chacun des projets de résolution intéressant des territoires donnés.

M. Natwar Singh (Inde), rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, présente les rapports de ce Comité et poursuit en ces termes:

3. M. Natwar SINGH (Inde) [Rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux]

*Reprise des débats de la 1375^{ème} séance.

(traduit de l'anglais): J'ai l'honneur, en tant que Rapporteur du Comité spécial, de présenter à l'Assemblée générale les rapports de ce Comité pour les années 1964 [A/5800/Rev.1]^{1/} et 1965 [A/6000/Rev.1].

4. Nous présentons ces rapports conformément au paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la résolution 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963 qui priait le Comité spécial de "continuer à rechercher les voies et les moyens les meilleurs d'assurer l'application immédiate et intégrale de la Déclaration à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance et de rendre compte à l'Assemblée générale, lors de sa dix-neuvième session au plus tard".

5. En 1965, le Comité spécial a continué de remplir son mandat dans l'esprit de la déclaration du Président de l'Assemblée lors de sa dix-neuvième session [1350^{ème} séance plénière], déclaration selon laquelle l'Assemblée générale devait noter, aux fins d'inscription au procès-verbal, que certains rapports traitant, inter alia, de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux lui avaient été présentés et que les organes dont le mandat n'était pas terminé, dont le Comité spécial, devaient poursuivre leur travail, compte tenu des limites budgétaires fixées pour 1965.

6. Les rapports pour les deux années écoulées comptent 3 500 pages miméographiées. Ils sont nécessairement longs car ils traitent de la situation de quelque soixante territoires et contiennent 2 études spéciales, l'une (de 255 pages) sur le Sud-Ouest Africain et l'autre (de 350 pages) sur les territoires administrés par le Portugal; en outre, c'est la première fois qu'un organe des Nations Unies a examiné en détail la situation des territoires non autonomes.

7. En effet, depuis les décisions prises par l'Assemblée à sa dix-huitième session, le Comité spécial a été le seul organe des Nations Unies, à part le Conseil de tutelle, qui ait été chargé par les Nations Unies de s'occuper des territoires non autonomes.

8. Vous vous souviendrez que l'Assemblée générale, à sa 1336^{ème} séance plénière, avait décidé que la question générale de l'application de la Déclaration devrait être examinée en séance plénière, les chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial se référant à des territoires particuliers devant être examinés par la Quatrième Commission. La Quatrième Commission a déjà présenté ses rapports sur la Rhodésie du Sud [A/6041 et Add.1 et 2] et sur Aden [A/6089]. Les rapports de la Quatrième Commission sur les autres territoires mentionnés dans les rapports du Comité spécial seront présentés sous peu à l'Assemblée.

^{1/} Voir Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, dix-neuvième session, Annexes, annexe No 8, 1^{ère} partie.

9. En 1964 et 1965, le Comité spécial a pu examiner tous les territoires figurant sur sa liste préliminaire, à l'exception de trois. Pour tous ces territoires, le Comité spécial a adopté des résolutions ou déposé des recommandations et conclusions qui figurent dans ses rapports. Ceux-ci contiennent également des renseignements sur les 3 territoires que le Comité spécial n'a pu examiner.

10. Le Comité spécial a continué d'étudier la liste des territoires auxquels la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux est applicable. Le 27 mai 1965, adoptant un rapport de son Groupe de travail [A/AC.109/L/203/Rev.1], le Comité spécial a décidé d'ajouter un territoire à sa liste: la Somalie française. Sous réserve des décisions que l'Assemblée générale pourrait prendre lors de la présente session pour l'application rapide de la Déclaration, le Comité spécial a l'intention de poursuivre l'étude de la liste des territoires auxquels la Déclaration est applicable.

11. Pendant les deux années écoulées, le Comité spécial a entrepris deux études spéciales de grande importance sur l'activité d'intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, dans certains de ces territoires. Le rapport du Comité spécial contenant ses recommandations et conclusions concernant les "incidences des activités de l'industrie minière et des autres sociétés internationales possédant des intérêts au Sud-Ouest Africain"^{2/}, a été préparé en 1964, conformément au paragraphe 8 de la résolution 1899 (XVIII) du 13 novembre 1963. La Quatrième Commission examine actuellement ce rapport.

12. Le Comité spécial, dans sa résolution sur les territoires administrés par le Portugal, qu'il a adoptée le 3 juillet 1964 [A/5800, chap. V, para. 352], a prié son Sous-Comité I "d'étudier les activités des intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, qui font obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration dans les territoires administrés par le Portugal". Cette étude et son examen par le Comité spécial [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. V, 2ème partie] seront également étudiés par la Quatrième Commission pendant la présente session.

13. En plus des 2 études déjà mentionnées, le Comité spécial a décidé, dans sa résolution du 22 avril 1965 sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud [ibid., chap. III, par. 292], d'étudier les incidences des activités des intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, dans ce territoire, ainsi que la façon dont ces intérêts opèrent, afin d'évaluer leur influence économique et politique. Les travaux préparatoires nécessaires à cette étude sont en cours et le Comité spécial espère présenter un rapport à l'Assemblée générale en 1966.

14. Je désirerais également attirer votre attention sur le rapport du Secrétaire général sur le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland [A/5958]. Ce rapport, ainsi que les recommandations du Comité spécial sur cette question [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. VIII] ont été examinés par la Quatrième Commission lors de la présente session. Le rapport de la Quatrième Commission [A/6106], contenant ses recommandations à l'Assemblée générale, sera présenté bientôt à l'Assemblée.

15. L'une des plus importantes activités du Comité spécial en 1965 a été sa visite en Afrique. Aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVII) du 27 novembre 1961 qui "autorise le Comité spécial à se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, lorsque cela pourrait être nécessaire pour lui permettre de s'acquitter efficacement de ses fonctions" et pour répondre aux invitations des Gouvernements de l'Ethiopie, de la République Unie de Tanzanie et de la Zambie, le Comité spécial a tenu 35 séances plénières à Lusaka, Dar es-Salam et Addis-Abeba en mai et juin 1965. Après avoir examiné en Afrique les points de son ordre du jour, il a adopté 7 résolutions [voir A/6000/Rev.1, chap. II].

16. L'Assemblée générale, par sa résolution 1970 (XVIII) du 16 décembre 1963, avait "décidé de dissoudre le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes" et avait confié ses fonctions au Comité spécial. Le Comité spécial a donc examiné, pendant les deux années dont nous nous occupons, "les renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes communiqués en vertu de l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte" [voir A/5800/Rev.1, chap. II et A/6000/Rev.1, chap. XXVI]. Ces rapports seront également examinés par la Quatrième Commission lors de la présente session.

17. L'Assemblée générale, par sa résolution 2005 (XIX) du 18 février 1965, avait autorisé "la surveillance par l'Organisation des Nations Unies des élections [devant] avoir lieu aux îles Cook au mois d'avril 1965" et avait autorisé le Secrétaire général "à nommer un représentant de l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui surveillera[it] des élections avec l'assistance des observateurs et du personnel requis et qui suivra[it] les débats que l'assemblée législative issue de ces élections consacra[it] à la constitution". Aux termes de cette résolution, le représentant de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a adressé ses rapports au Comité spécial et à l'Assemblée générale. La Quatrième Commission rendra compte sous peu à l'Assemblée générale de son examen des chapitres des rapports du Comité spécial qui concernent les îles Cook [A/5800/Rev.1, chap. XV et A/6000/Rev.1, chap. VIII], ainsi que des rapports du représentant des Nations Unies chargé de la surveillance des élections aux îles Cook [A/5962].

18. Aux termes de la résolution 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963, par laquelle l'Assemblée générale avait "invité le Comité spécial à porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité tous faits, survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires qu'il examine, qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales", le Comité spécial a attiré l'attention du Conseil de sécurité sur les conditions existant dans de nombreux territoires qu'il a examinés [voir A/5800/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 143 à 149 et A/6000/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 67 à 87].

19. Finalement, puis-je attirer votre attention sur les recommandations du Comité spécial sur ses travaux futurs [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 108 à 112]. Comme il y a encore de nombreux territoires où la Déclaration n'est pas encore appliquée, le Comité spécial conclut une nouvelle fois qu'il serait souhaitable que son mandat fût renouvelé.

^{2/} Ibid., annexe No 15, document A/5840.

20. Le Comité spécial a également recommandé que les moyens nécessaires à faciliter ses travaux fussent prévus, en particulier pour en couvrir les dépenses. En outre, il est possible, vu le travail important que sa récente visite en Afrique lui a permis d'accomplir, que le Comité spécial tienne d'autres réunions en Afrique l'année prochaine. Il recommande donc que les dispositions prises pour lui permettre de continuer son œuvre en 1966 comportent les moyens financiers nécessaires.

21. Le Comité spécial juge en outre que les puissances administrantes devraient à nouveau être priées de lui prêter leur entière coopération. Il recommande également à l'Assemblée générale d'insister auprès des puissances administrantes pour qu'elles facilitent la présence de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans le Sud-Ouest Africain et à Aden, ainsi que dans tout autre territoire où l'Assemblée générale le jugerait nécessaire et souhaitable.

22. Le Comité spécial juge nécessaire d'accroître les efforts tendant à répandre parmi les peuples coloniaux la connaissance de la Déclaration et des travaux du Comité spécial. Il estime qu'à cette fin l'Assemblée générale devrait inviter une fois encore les Etats Membres administrants à aider le Secrétaire général de façon plus efficace à diffuser des informations sur la Déclaration.

23. En ma qualité de Rapporteur du Comité, je voudrais en terminant remercier le Président du Comité, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, de l'aide qu'il m'a donnée dans la préparation des rapports. Le Vice-Président du Comité et les Présidents des Sous-Comités, M. Velázquez de l'Uruguay, Sonn Voeunoai et Huot Sambath du Cambodge et M. Gebre-Egzy d'Ethiopie, m'ont aussi très généreusement aidé et conseillé. Je désire également exprimer ma sincère gratitude aux Rapporteurs des divers Sous-Comités. Enfin, le Secrétaire général et tous les membres si compétents du secrétariat ont toujours prêté leur concours de bonne grâce au Comité et à moi-même.

24. Sans la coopération de toutes ces personnes, il n'aurait pas été possible au Comité ni à moi-même de présenter ces rapports, ni de s'acquitter du mandat que l'Assemblée générale avait confié au Comité.

25. M. COULIBALY (Mali): Par l'intermédiaire de son distingué rapporteur, M. Natwar Singh, le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, vient de présenter à l'Assemblée générale son quatrième rapport [A/6000/Rev.1]. Le rapporteur, M. Singh, mérite toutes nos félicitations car il a sacrifié ses heures de loisir pour pouvoir nous présenter un document de travail et de méditation fort utile.

26. Le volume et la substance de ce rapport prouvent que les membres du Comité spécial, loin de se laisser décourager par l'attitude souvent décevante de certaines puissances coloniales, sont au contraire décidés à continuer de harceler le colonialisme jusqu'à sa disparition complète.

27. En ma qualité de Président du Comité spécial, je tiens à renouveler ici mes remerciements à tous les membres de celui-ci pour le travail qu'ils ont accompli avec dévouement et conviction. Je voudrais, en particulier, rendre un hommage bien mérité à M. Velázquez, de l'Uruguay, qui a assumé avec distinction et droiture la vice-présidence du Comité. Il est aujourd'hui absent parce qu'il a été appelé à d'autres fonctions par son gouvernement; mais il a laissé au Comité le souvenir d'un juriste éminent et d'un ardent défenseur du droit des peuples opprimés.

28. Je suis heureux d'adresser également au Secrétaire général, U Thant, mes remerciements pour la compréhension et l'intérêt qu'il a toujours témoignés à l'égard du travail du Comité spécial. Mes remerciements vont aussi au secrétariat du Comité, notamment au Sous-Secrétaire, M. Amachree, à M. Chacko et M. Dadzie, ainsi qu'aux interprètes et à tous les fonctionnaires qui ont assisté le Comité avec beaucoup de dévouement et de compétence.

29. Il y a maintenant cinq ans que l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 1514 (XV) contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Il y a quatre ans que le Comité spécial étudie l'application de cette déclaration. Le bilan de ces quatre années de travail du Comité n'est certainement pas négatif; mais il révèle l'obstination aveugle des puissances coloniales. En effet, parmi les 67 territoires dont la situation a été examinée par le Comité depuis sa création, neuf seulement ont accédé à l'indépendance et sont maintenant Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Par son action, le Comité a attiré l'attention de la communauté internationale sur les grands territoires coloniaux où la répression sauvage, entreprise par les forces colonialistes contre les mouvements de libération nationale, constitue une menace réelle à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Le travail du Comité a permis également de porter à l'attention des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies des petits territoires coloniaux, généralement des îles éparpillées dans la mer des Caraïbes, dans l'océan Atlantique, dans l'océan Indien et dans l'océan Pacifique, sur les côtes du golfe Persique et dans la mer d'Oman. L'examen de la situation de ces petites îles caractérisées par leur faible peuplement et leur superficie réduite, pose à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de nouveaux problèmes dans le domaine de la décolonisation.

30. Il est évident que le processus de décolonisation de ces petites îles doit être considéré avec beaucoup de courage et de prudence. L'existence de ces petits territoires et la nécessité de sauvegarder les intérêts des populations qui les habitent donnent au problème de la décolonisation de nouvelles dimensions. Le sort des populations coloniales de ces petites îles ne peut trouver de solutions appropriées que dans le cadre d'une coopération loyale entre les puissances administrantes, d'une part, l'Organisation des Nations Unies et les peuples intéressés, d'autre part. La méthode de coopération inaugurée par la Nouvelle-Zélande en ce qui concerne les îles Cook pourrait servir d'exemple pour d'autres petites îles et inciter certaines puissances coloniales à abandonner leurs réserves à l'égard de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en matière de décolonisation. L'objectif à atteindre devrait être de permettre aux populations de ces îles de déterminer librement leur avenir, sans aucune contrainte ni pression provenant de la puissance administrante ou des Etats voisins. Des témoignages dignes de foi ont révélé que les populations de certains petits territoires ignoraient encore l'existence de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Compte tenu de l'expérience acquise pendant les quatre années de session du Comité spécial, je reste convaincu que le problème de la décolonisation, pour les petits territoires, doit être examiné avec un sens profond des responsabilités. Les puissances administrantes devraient permettre aux Nations Unies d'envoyer des missions de visite afin que les populations intéressées soient non seulement informées de leur droit à l'autodétermination, mais mises effectivement en mesure d'exercer ce droit. A notre avis, la possibilité, pour ces petits territoires, de s'unir librement à des Etats indépendants voisins, devrait être encouragée partout où les bases d'une telle union existent.

31. J'ai dit, il y a un instant, que le bilan des quatre années de travail du Comité spécial n'était pas négatif. Je voudrais cependant souligner que le processus de décolonisation a été dangereusement freiné en ce qui concerne les grands territoires tels que l'Angola, le Mozambique, le Sud-Ouest africain, la Guinée dite portugaise, la Rhodésie du Sud et le Sud arabe (Aden et les Protectorats d'Aden).

32. En ce qui concerne ces territoires, il n'est plus nécessaire de faire des études pour déterminer s'ils doivent accéder à l'indépendance immédiatement ou comment ils doivent y accéder. Les peuples de ces territoires sont mobilisés pour la conquête de leur indépendance, et l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit simplement les aider de façon concrète. La volonté des puissances coloniales de maintenir ces territoires sous leur domination constitue une menace permanente à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

33. Ce sentiment a été maintes fois exprimé par le Comité spécial. Tout récemment encore, à l'issue de son voyage en Afrique, le Comité a adopté, le 18 juin 1965, à Addis-Abéba une résolution au sujet de la situation dans les territoires suivants: Rhodésie du Sud, territoires sous administration portugaise, Sud-Ouest africain, Bassoutoland, Betchouanaland et Souaziland. Les paragraphes 1 et 2 de cette résolution étaient ainsi rédigés:

"Le Comité spécial

"...

"1. Attire l'attention de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité sur la situation explosive qui existe dans cette région d'Afrique à cause du comportement intolérable des Gouvernements du Portugal, de l'Afrique du Sud, et du régime minoritaire des colons de la Rhodésie du Sud;

"2. Recommande à l'Assemblée générale et au Conseil de sécurité de prendre, chacun dans le cadre de leurs compétences respectives, les mesures concrètes prévues par la Charte et destinées:

"a) A assurer le respect des droits des populations africaines de la région, en particulier leurs droits à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance et à mettre fin aux activités dangereuses des Gouvernements du Portugal, de l'Afrique du Sud et du régime minoritaire des colons de la Rhodésie du Sud;

"b) A renforcer la confiance que les peuples sous domination coloniale placent en l'Organisation des Nations Unies." [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. II, par. 463.]

34. Malheureusement, les appels du Comité spécial n'ont pas été pris en considération par les puissances administrantes, en l'occurrence le Royaume-Uni, le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud. Malgré les efforts du Comité spécial, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a continué à minimiser la situation en Rhodésie du Sud et à manifester une complaisance coupable à l'égard des colons blancs. Et, depuis 20 jours, les colons ont proclamé unilatéralement l'indépendance du territoire parce que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni leur a donné l'assurance qu'il n'utilisera pas la force contre eux. Smith et sa clique n'attendaient pas, de la part du Royaume-Uni, un plus grand encouragement pour commettre leur folie.

35. Aujourd'hui, c'est le peuple du Zimbabwe qui est soumis à la tyrannie de racistes comme Smith, c'est le peuple de Zambie qui est menacé de sabotage économique par les colons de Rhodésie, et enfin, c'est tout le continent africain qui court le risque d'un conflit armé. Tout cela du fait que la Puissance administrante, le Royaume-Uni, et les Nations Unies n'ont pas su prendre à temps leurs responsabilités. Aujourd'hui, le Gouvernement du Portugal est encouragé par l'absence de sanctions énergiques contre les colons de Rhodésie. L'Afrique du Sud, de son côté, renforce sa répression contre les populations du Sud-Ouest africain.

36. Nous pensons que pour arrêter l'aggravation de la situation explosive qui règne dans la partie de l'Afrique soumise à la domination coloniale, les Nations Unies doivent reviser leur méthode d'approche du problème colonial. La situation créée par le colonialisme en Afrique est extrêmement grave et, pour y faire face efficacement, l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité ne doivent plus se contenter de réaffirmer platoniquement le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. L'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité ne doivent pas se contenter non plus de rappeler aux puissances coloniales sous forme d'appel leurs obligations découlant du Chapitre XI de la Charte. Nous pensons que tout cela a été suffisamment affirmé et réaffirmé dans la Charte de l'Organisation, dans la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

37. Les événements qui se déroulent actuellement en Rhodésie du Sud, à Aden, dans les territoires portugais et au Sud-Ouest africain, démontrent, de façon évidente, que la persistance du régime colonial menace sérieusement et effectivement la paix et la sécurité internationales. L'ONU doit donc se préparer à faire face à la situation grave ainsi créée et ne pas se contenter de paraphraser ses résolutions antérieures. Les colonialistes qui violent les droits de l'homme en Afrique du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain, en Angola, au Mozambique, en Rhodésie du Sud, en Guinée dite portugaise, à Aden et ailleurs, ont fait tellement preuve de mauvaise foi et ont méprisé avec un tel cynisme les résolutions des Nations Unies, qu'il n'est plus permis d'hésiter à employer contre eux les moyens les plus énergiques. Le colonialisme constituant désormais une menace réelle à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit procéder à une modification de sa tactique à l'égard des puissances coloniales, et cela dans le sens d'une orientation plus ferme. Nous pensons que cela est dans l'intérêt de l'Organisation, car elle y gagnerait en prestige et en soutien de la part du tiers monde.

38. J'ai dit que le continent africain court actuellement le risque d'un conflit armé. C'est là une réalité qu'il ne convient pas de sous-estimer car ce conflit pourrait dépasser le cadre du continent africain. Le Royaume-Uni a suspendu le Gouvernement de la Rhodésie du Sud et il a considéré ce gouvernement comme étant en état de rébellion; mais il a refusé d'envoyer des forces dans le territoire pour assurer la protection du peuple rhodésien contre les abus des colons rebelles. Pourtant, ce même Royaume-Uni a envoyé récemment des forces à Aden pour déposer un gouvernement légal qui, au surplus, jouissait de l'estime populaire. Le Royaume-Uni a envoyé également des troupes en Guyane britannique pour aboutir à la déposition d'un gouvernement accusé de communisme. Mais, en Rhodésie du Sud, malgré l'affront que les colons rebelles ont fait subir à la Couronne britannique en déposant et en séquestrant presque le Gouverneur, M. Humphrey Gibbs, représentant de la Reine, le gouvernement travailliste de Londres fait comme Ponce Pilate, c'est-à-dire qu'il regarde et laisse faire les colons. Tout au plus, pour tromper l'opinion internationale, le Gouvernement britannique s'est-il hâté d'envoyer son Ministre des affaires étrangères pour demander au Conseil de sécurité d'envisager contre les colons de Rhodésie des sanctions économiques dont l'efficacité est des plus aléatoires.

39. Le fait que le Royaume-Uni trahisse les populations africaines de Rhodésie du Sud n'est guère surprenant pour ceux qui ont suivi de près l'évolution du colonialisme britannique. La tentative faite aujourd'hui en Rhodésie et qui consiste à laisser pourrir la situation, dans la perspective que les colons se tireront d'affaire et continueront à gouverner ce territoire, n'est qu'une récidive. En effet, dans toutes ses colonies de peuplement, le Royaume-Uni a sacrifié les populations africaines au profit des colons blancs. Ce fut le cas pour les colonies anglaises du Cap, du Natal, de l'Orange et du Transvaal, dont les populations africaines sont soumises aujourd'hui à l'odieuse politique de l'apartheid, érigée en système de gouvernement par la clique de Verwoerd.

40. Mais ce qui s'est passé en 1910 pour ces anciennes colonies britanniques ne pourra pas se passer en 1965 pour la Rhodésie du Sud. En effet, dans trois jours, les Ministres des affaires étrangères des gouvernements indépendants d'Afrique se réuniront à Addis-Abéba et prendront les mesures nécessaires pour assumer les responsabilités historiques qui leur incombent désormais par le fait que le Royaume-Uni a choisi la voie qui consiste à sacrifier 4 millions d'Africains pour sauvegarder les intérêts illégitimes de 220 000 colons blancs, sujets britanniques. Quels qu'en soient le prix et les sacrifices, le colonialisme disparaîtra du continent africain. J'ai parfois entendu ici des personnes recommander avec cynisme de la patience aux Africains pour que vive le régime colonial. Je ne peux m'empêcher de comparer ces "philosophes" à des personnes qui, au lieu d'aider à arrêter un assassin ou un malfaiteur, conseillent plutôt à la victime d'accepter et de subir avec bonne humeur les crimes et les abus du malfaiteur.

41. J'ai été surpris également d'entendre dire ici que le colonialisme relevait de la compétence interne des puissances coloniales. Mais, en droit, qui dit compétence interne introduit la notion de l'Etat. Est-ce que ces personnes sont convaincues que l'Angola, le Mozambique et la Guinée Bissau, par exemple, font partie de l'Etat portugais? Je ne le pense pas. Par ailleurs, je voudrais demander à ces personnes qui veulent résoudre le problème colonial sous le seul angle juridique, ce qu'elles font du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes. Je voudrais que ces personnes nous expliquent quels sont le contenu et la portée du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes.

42. Les principes philosophiques et moraux qui ont été avancés pendant les siècles précédents pour justifier le colonialisme apparaissent maintenant sous leur aspect le plus hideux et le plus détestable. Le contenu du colonialisme se ramène à une conception principale, c'est-à-dire la prétendue supériorité d'une race ou d'un peuple et son prétendu droit de dominer et d'exploiter d'autres peuples. Ceux qui soutiennent le Gouvernement du Portugal et celui de l'Afrique du Sud et qui commercent avec eux sont complices de tous les crimes commis par ces deux gouvernements. Les gouvernements qui entretiennent des relations avec ces deux pays le font uniquement pour des intérêts égoïstes, pour assurer la prospérité de certaines sociétés de type capitaliste et monopoliste; mais que ces gouvernements sachent que chaque franc, chaque livre ou chaque dollar de bénéfice réalisé dans les conditions actuelles en Angola, au Mozambique, au Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie et en Afrique du Sud est taché du sang d'un Africain affamé, privé de liberté, torturé ou assassiné froidement par un colon blanc qui veut garder ce qu'il a arraché par la force et la violence.

43. Le colonialisme est un crime qu'il faut combattre tout comme l'humanité a combattu l'esclavage et le nazisme. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit être sinon le fer de lance de la bataille contre le colonialisme et l'apartheid, tout au moins un protecteur sûr des peuples opprimés. C'est pourquoi nous pensons que les tâches futures du Comité spécial de décolonisation ne devraient plus consister à voter de nouvelles résolutions. Le Comité spécial devra être en mesure de prendre contact directement avec les populations sous domination coloniale et de connaître de la façon la plus objective leurs vues quant à la manière d'accéder à l'indépendance et quant à la date de cette accession. Sur la base des sondages d'opinions effectués auprès des dirigeants des mouvements de libération nationale, le Comité spécial devra soumettre à l'Assemblée générale et éventuellement au Conseil de sécurité un rapport comportant essentiellement des recommandations en ce qui concerne la date d'accession à l'indépendance pour chaque territoire ainsi que les mesures à prendre pour parvenir à cette fin. Une fois que l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité auront approuvé les recommandations du Comité spécial, il leur appartiendra de prendre, dans le cadre de leurs compétences respectives, les dispositions nécessaires pour l'aboutissement de ces recommandations.

44. Les puissances coloniales qui refuseraient alors d'appliquer les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité devraient être considérées comme des agresseurs. Je sais que le mot "agression" soulève beaucoup de controverses au sein de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, mais je n'hésite pas à l'utiliser car je ne peux qualifier autrement un gouvernement qui impose sa domination à d'autres peuples par la force et par la violence.

45. A notre avis, l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit être une organisation révolutionnaire afin de s'adapter aux nouvelles dimensions de ses responsabilités, faute de quoi le monde connaîtra de nouvelles tragédies.

46. Tels sont les commentaires qu'au nom du Gouvernement de la République du Mali je voulais faire à la suite de l'examen du rapport du Comité spécial.

47. Maintenant, avec la permission du Président, je voudrais, avant de quitter cette tribune, adresser mes vifs remerciements aux Gouvernements de l'Ethiopie, de la Tanzanie et de la Zambie, qui ont invité le Comité à se réunir dans leurs capitales respectives pendant les mois de mai et juin 1965. Ce voyage a été très utile car il a permis aux membres du Comité de mieux comprendre la lutte des populations opprimées et de mieux saisir les incidences du régime colonial sur la paix et la sécurité internationales.

48. Grâce à ce voyage, le Comité spécial a pu apprécier la légitimité de la lutte menée par les peuples sous domination coloniale. C'est cela qui a déterminé également le Comité à lancer un appel à tous les Etats afin qu'ils apportent aux combattants de la liberté une aide matérielle et morale. Et nous souhaitons que cet appel soit entendu et suivi d'effet.

49. M. AZYMOV (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Nous avons abordé l'examen de l'un des points les plus importants de l'ordre du jour de la vingtième session de l'Assemblée générale de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, intitulé "Rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux" [A/6000/Rev.1].

50. Il y aura cinq ans cette année, l'Assemblée générale, à sa quinzième session, adoptait cette Déclaration historique. Du point de vue de l'histoire, cinq années représentent une période relativement brève. Et c'est justement au cours de cette période que le colonialisme s'est vu contraint de reculer sur tout le front.

51. Mais si l'on songe que pendant ces cinq années, des dizaines de millions d'hommes et de femmes, sur cette terre, ont été maintenus dans un état de servitude coloniale et qu'ils continuent de l'être, il est facile de comprendre quelle souffrance et quel fardeau cette période a représenté pour eux.

52. Près de cinq ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, nous avons le devoir de dire à ces millions d'opprimés ce qui a été fait pratiquement, pour rapprocher le jour de leur libération, de leur dire si le moment est proche où les justes principes affirmés dans la Déclaration de l'ONU auront définitivement triomphé. Oui, l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a été un événement d'une immense portée politique, elle a été un grand appui moral pour le mouvement de libération nationale des peuples, un coup mortel porté au colonialisme.

53. La Déclaration a solennellement proclamé la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a déclaré, dans ce document, que "la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales". Donc, en adoptant la Déclaration, l'Organisation des Nations Unies a reconnu comme étant légitime et juste la lutte des peuples pour leur liberté et leur indépendance, et comme étant criminelle et dépourvue de tout fondement légitime la politique impérialiste et colonialiste d'oppression et d'asservissement des peuples coloniaux.

54. Comme il fallait s'y attendre, l'application des dispositions de la Déclaration s'est heurtée à la résistance obstinée des colonialistes qui ont choisi de méconnaître et de saboter les résolutions anti-colonialistes de l'Assemblée générale, du Conseil de sécurité et du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. C'est une des raisons pour lesquelles la libération de tout territoire colonial est d'abord le résultat d'une lutte opiniâtre de la population contre les colonialistes. Dans cette lutte, on voit se renforcer encore l'unité de toutes les forces anticoloniales, s'affermir leur détermination d'imposer l'élimination universelle du colonialisme et du racisme.

55. Les résolutions de la Conférence de chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement des pays africains tenue à Addis-Abéba en mai 1963 et de la Conférence des Etats non alignés tenue au Caire en 1964 expriment avec force la volonté des peuples d'Asie, d'Afrique et de l'Amérique latine d'en finir une fois pour toutes et par tous les moyens avec les odieux régimes coloniaux et racistes.

56. Depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration, il a été mis fin dans plusieurs territoires au régime d'administration coloniale ou de tutelle. De nouveaux Etats indépendants ont ainsi vu le jour, à la place d'anciennes possessions coloniales. Mais ces succès ne nous autorisent nullement à nous contenter de ce qui a été obtenu. Plus de 85 territoires groupant une population de quelque 37 millions d'habitants continuent à subir le joug colonial. Et ce chiffre est en fait de 50 millions, si l'on y ajoute la population africaine soumise à la domination des colons racistes de la République sud-africaine.

57. Il est d'autant plus urgent de redoubler d'efforts pour faire appliquer la Déclaration que l'on observe ces derniers temps une tendance des colonialistes et des néo-colonialistes à passer à l'attaque ouverte non seulement contre le mouvement de libération nationale dans tel ou tel territoire, mais aussi contre les jeunes Etats indépendants, afin de leur imposer leur volonté, la volonté impérialiste. C'est ce que montre, en particulier, la résolution de la Chambre des représentants des Etats-Unis, où l'on tente d'affirmer les "droits" de ce pays à recourir à la force armée pour intervenir dans les affaires intérieures de n'importe quel pays de l'Amérique latine.

58. L'ingérence armée dans les affaires du Congo, les bombardements barbares de la République démocratique du Viet-Nam, l'intervention militaire dans la République Dominicaine, les opérations punitives du Royaume-Uni en Arabie du Sud et à Oman, toutes ces entreprises ne sont pas autre chose que des actes agressifs des puissances impérialistes contre le mouvement national de libération ou contre des Etats indépendants. Encouragés par ces mesures, les racistes de la République sud-africaine et de la Rhodésie du Sud ont relevé la tête. Les colonialistes ont perpétré un nouveau crime contre les peuples d'Afrique en proclamant l'"indépendance" en Rhodésie du Sud. Avec l'appui du bloc militaire de l'OTAN, les Gouvernements de la Rhodésie du Sud, de la République sud-africaine et du Portugal mettent sur pied une alliance militaire et politique que l'on qualifie en Afrique d'alliance "diabolique" ou "impie". Le but de cette alliance, c'est de perpétuer à jamais un système esclavagiste en Afrique australe et de dresser un barrage contre les mouvements révolutionnaires de libération des peuples.

59. La situation dans les territoires sous domination portugaise se caractérise par une tension particulièrement aiguë. Voici plusieurs années que le Portugal conduit de sanglantes guerres coloniales en Angola, au Mozambique et dans la Guinée dite portugaise. Les colonialistes portugais ont envoyé de puissantes forces régulières dans ces territoires. Ils ont à l'heure actuelle la plus forte armée de tous les pays situés au sud du Sahara, avec des effectifs supérieurs à 80 000 hommes. Ces troupes sont équipées du matériel le plus moderne que le Portugal reçoit de ses alliés de l'OTAN.

60. Par la terreur et par des représailles massives, les bourreaux portugais tentent de briser la résistance des habitants de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise qui se sont soulevés pour la liberté. Rien qu'en Angola, plus de 100 000 Africains ont été exterminés en quatre ans de guerre et 350 000 personnes, fuyant la répression, ont abandonné leurs foyers et émigré dans les pays voisins.

61. L'Assemblée générale, le Conseil de sécurité et le Comité des Vingt-Quatre ont à différentes sessions examiné à maintes reprises la situation dans les territoires portugais. C'est ainsi qu'ont été adoptées des résolutions et des décisions invitant le Portugal à mettre fin à la répression, à retirer ses forces armées et à prendre des mesures immédiates pour appliquer la Déclaration à l'égard de ces territoires.

62. Mais tous ces appels et toutes ces injonctions restent sans effet. Le Gouvernement Salazar continue de s'obstiner aveuglément dans sa politique colonialiste. Qui plus est, il déclare qu'il défendra ces territoires, en d'autres termes, sa domination coloniale, "jusqu'à la limite de ses ressources humaines et matérielles".

63. Bien entendu, les colonialistes portugais n'oseraient jamais pratiquer une politique à ce point cynique et cruelle s'ils ne bénéficiaient du soutien du bloc militaire de l'OTAN dont le Portugal est membre. Les insurgés de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise ont maintes fois saisi entre les mains des bourreaux portugais des fusils d'Allemagne occidentale, des mitrailleuses italiennes ou des bazookas anglais, ils ont abattu des avions américains. Cela représente tout un arsenal de l'OTAN. Pour mener ces guerres coloniales en Afrique, le Portugal, d'après une dépêche du correspondant de l'Agence Associated Press à Lisbonne, dépense quelque 150 millions de dollars par an. D'où le Portugal tient-il ces ressources?

64. "Sans l'aide financière et militaire de ses alliés de l'OTAN", a déclaré M. Eduardo Mondlane, Président du Front de libération du Mozambique, à une séance du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, "le Portugal ne pourrait pas tenir un mois, obligé qu'il est de faire la guerre en Angola, au Mozambique et en Guinée".

65. Outre les importantes quantités d'armes à feu déjà fournies, la République fédérale d'Allemagne a acheté 60 avions au Canada afin de les livrer au Portugal. De même, la République fédérale d'Allemagne a consenti au régime de Salazar, en 1963 et en 1964, des prêts très importants. Des instructeurs d'Allemagne occidentale, aux côtés de leurs collègues de l'OTAN venus d'autres pays, enseignent aux troupes portugaises les méthodes de lutte à employer contre ceux qui combattent pour la libération des peuples.

66. Ces faits et d'autres encore montrent que les membres de l'OTAN violent de manière flagrante les nombreuses résolutions de l'ONU demandant que l'on cesse de fournir des armes au Portugal. Par une résolution en date du 18 décembre 1962, l'Assemblée générale, à sa dix-septième session, priait "tous les Etats Membres de refuser au Portugal tout appui ou toute assistance qu'il pourrait employer à des fins de répression contre le peuple angolais et, en particulier de mettre fin à l'approvisionnement du Portugal en armes". Cette résolution est restée lettre morte. A sa vingtième session, l'Assemblée générale doit enfin exiger fermement que les pays de l'OTAN se soumettent à la volonté de l'ONU, à la volonté de la majorité des peuples du monde.

67. C'est une cruelle ironie que certaines institutions spécialisées des Nations Unies continuent aussi d'apporter au Portugal une aide financière et économique. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, par sa résolution du 10 juin 1965, a fait tout particulièrement appel à ces institutions en leur demandant "de s'abstenir d'accorder au Portugal toute assistance financière, économique ou technique, tant que ce gouvernement ne renoncera pas à sa politique coloniale qui constitue une violation flagrante des dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies". Qui ne comprend pas, dans ces conditions, qu'il faut mettre immédiatement fin à l'aide fournie au Portugal par ces institutions spécialisées?

68. En apportant au Portugal une aide financière et économique importante, les pays de l'OTAN poursuivent leurs objectifs intéressés. En échange de cette aide, le Portugal a livré à l'encan au capital international les richesses de ses territoires coloniaux. Les deux tiers des capitaux investis au Portugal et dans les colonies portugaises se trouvent directement ou indirectement sous le contrôle de monopoles étrangers. La banque britannique Midland Bank, les groupes américains Morgan et Rockefeller, la Société générale de Belgique, firme franco-belge, ont profondément pénétré par tous les pores de l'économie des colonies portugaises. Par exemple, l'industrie angolaise du diamant est monopolisée par l'Angola Diamond, société groupant des capitaux américains, britanniques et belges. Cette société possède un droit exclusif touchant la prospection et l'exploitation du diamant sur le territoire angolais. Depuis 1960, les quantités annuelles de diamants extraites par cette compagnie ont été supérieures à un million de carats, ce qui représente des bénéfices de plus de 100 millions d'escudos.

69. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre lors des réunions qu'il a tenues en Afrique, et, à son tour, le Conseil de sécurité ont de nouveau accordé une grande attention au problème des territoires administrés par le Portugal et ils ont de nouveau demandé à tous les Etats, notamment aux alliés militaires du Portugal dans le cadre de l'OTAN de s'abstenir de fournir des armes et munitions ainsi que toutes autres formes d'assistance à ce pays.

70. La délégation soviétique appuie cet appel et estime, pour sa part, que le temps des paroles et des résolutions est depuis longtemps révolu vis-à-vis des colonialistes portugais. Le moment d'agir est maintenant venu. L'Union soviétique préconise l'adoption des mesures les plus regoureuses et les plus radicales contre le colonialisme portugais, de façon à le contraindre à quitter à jamais la terre africaine.

71. La situation se complique chaque jour davantage en Rhodésie du Sud. Aujourd'hui, la presse occidentale elle-même reconnaît de plus en plus fréquemment que la situation dans ce pays porte en germe un "drame sanglant". En faisant de la Rhodésie du Sud un Etat "indépendant" à l'usage des Blancs, le colonialisme, comme le Gouvernement soviétique l'a souligné dans sa déclaration, a ouvertement lancé un défi au peuple de ce pays qui mène depuis de longues années une lutte courageuse pour sa liberté et son indépendance, un défi aux peuples d'Afrique et du monde entier.

73. Chacun se rend compte aujourd'hui que les racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud n'auraient pas osé mettre à exécution leurs plans criminels s'ils n'avaient pu agir en collusion avec les colonialistes, qui ont permis au régime raciste de Salisbury de se renforcer au cours des dernières années sur le plan économique et militaire. Ce forfait n'aurait pu être accompli sans la bénédiction des gouvernements des Etats membres de l'OTAN, avant tout du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, qui veulent créer un nouveau foyer de racisme, cette fois-ci en Rhodésie du Sud, et faire ainsi obstacle au mouvement national de libération des peuples africains.

74. Conformément à sa position de principe touchant l'élimination du colonialisme, le Gouvernement soviétique a condamné résolument ce nouveau crime perpétré contre les peuples d'Afrique et a déclaré qu'il ne reconnaissait pas le régime raciste qui a usurpé le pouvoir en Rhodésie du Sud. Le Gouvernement soviétique appuie sans réserve les résolutions adoptées par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale au sujet de la situation en Rhodésie du Sud et les appliquera sans défaillance.

75. Fidèle à sa politique d'appui constant aux mouvements nationaux de libération des peuples, le Gouvernement soviétique se déclare entièrement solidaire du peuple du Zimbabwe; il affirme à nouveau son désir de coopérer avec les pays africains et de les aider par tous les moyens dans la lutte légitime qu'ils mènent pour conquérir une indépendance nationale véritable.

76. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, auquel incombe l'entière responsabilité de la situation qui s'est créée, ne cherche qu'en apparence à calmer le raciste Smith. La résolution que le Conseil de sécurité a adoptée au sujet de la Rhodésie du Sud ne sera fructueuse que si elle permet d'intensifier la lutte menée pour l'indépendance véritable de la Rhodésie du Sud et la liberté du peuple zimbabwe.

77. On peut voir un exemple classique des manœuvres de cette puissance coloniale dans le comportement du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni à l'égard de ses possessions dans la péninsule arabique. Durant près de 130 années d'hégémonie dans cette région, le Royaume-Uni a utilisé le vaste arsenal des tactiques colonialistes pour garder sous sa coupe les peuples d'Aden, de l'Arabie du Sud, de l'Oman et des îles Bahrein. Le Royaume-Uni a imposé séparément à chaque sultanat et à chaque cheikat des accords colonialistes de protectorat, puis il a mis sur pied tant bien que mal la trop célèbre Fédération d'Arabie du Sud. Les années passaient, les méthodes changeaient, mais le but demeurait le même: garder la mainmise sur les gisements pétroliers du Proche-Orient, conserver les bases militaires.

78. Or les peuples de cette région ne veulent pas du maintien de la domination britannique sur la péninsule arabique. Le sol brûle sous les pas des colonialistes: des combats acharnés se déroulent en Arabie du Sud et à Oman; des troubles éclatent à Bahrein, des explosions se font entendre à Aden. Le Royaume-Uni mène des opérations de représailles contre la population de ces régions. Les soldats et les officiers britanniques brûlent des villages pacifiques en y lançant des bombes au napalm, ils mitraillent du haut de leurs avions des habitants pacifiques, ils torturent les patriotes.

79. A l'heure actuelle, les colonialistes britanniques cherchent à imposer leurs plans en visant à créer un Etat unitaire en Arabie du Sud. Conformément à ces plans, non seulement le Royaume-Uni n'a pas l'intention de quitter la région et supprimer ses bases militaires, mais il compte au contraire renforcer encore davantage ses positions dans la péninsule.

80. L'Assemblée générale avait, en 1963 déjà, adopté une résolution [1949 (XVIII)] dans laquelle elle exigeait catégoriquement que le Royaume-Uni supprime sa base militaire d'Aden et permette au peuple de l'Arabie du Sud d'exercer son droit de libre détermination. Jusqu'ici ces exigences n'ont pas été suivies d'effet. Non seulement le Royaume-Uni méconnaît la résolution que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée en 1963 au sujet d'Aden, mais il n'a même pas autorisé les représentants du Sous-Comité d'Aden à se rendre dans ce territoire.

81. L'Assemblée générale doit prendre des mesures efficaces pour que le Royaume-Uni applique enfin les résolutions des Nations Unies.

82. Les problèmes relatifs à l'apartheid et à la discrimination raciale dans la République sud-africaine font l'objet d'un point distinct de l'ordre du jour. Pour le moment nous ne parlerons que de l'annexion, par la République sud-africaine, du Sud-Ouest africain, qui compte 1 million d'habitants. Les racistes de l'Afrique du Sud ont instauré, dans ce pays, un régime à l'image et à l'exemple de la République sud-africaine. Les Africains, qui constituent 90 p. 100 de la population du Sud-Ouest africain, sont parqués dans des réserves dont la superficie représente un quart du territoire. Ils manquent d'eau, de logements, de terres arables et de pâturages. En fait, les zones attribuées aux Africains ne sont autre chose que des camps de concentration. Comme le disait un Africain éminent: "Ce sont des cimetières peuplés de vivants".

83. Pour la délégation soviétique, il ne fait pas de doute que la responsabilité de la situation qui existe dans le Sud-Ouest africain incombe à la fois à la République sud-africaine et aux puissances impérialistes. Jugez-en vous-mêmes: dans le Sud-Ouest africain les monopoles étrangers, notamment les monopoles britanniques, américains et belges, sont entièrement libres d'agir à leur guise.

84. Voyons par exemple quels sont les investissements britanniques dans le Sud-Ouest africain. Sur les cinquante principales sociétés industrielles, commerciales et de transports maritimes du Royaume-Uni, 27 au moins ont des filiales en Afrique du Sud et dans le Sud-Ouest africain. Les précisions suivantes donnent une idée des bénéfices de ces sociétés. D'après les comptes de la société Consolidated Mines of South West Africa, le capital initial de cette société ne dépassait pas 4 millions et demi de livres sterling; or pour 1959 seulement, les bénéfices nets se sont montés à près de 11 millions de livres sterling.

85. C'est dans la domination des monopoles étrangers qu'il faut rechercher les motifs de l'intérêt que portent les puissances occidentales au maintien de la situation actuelle dans la République sud-africaine et dans le Sud-Ouest africain.

86. La question du Sud-Ouest africain a maintes fois été examinée à l'ONU. A sa dix-huitième session, le 13 novembre 1963, l'Assemblée générale a adopté une résolution [1899 (XVIII)] dans laquelle elle a réaffirmé le droit inaliénable du peuple du Sud-Ouest africain à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Dans cette résolution, l'Assemblée générale déclarait que "toute tentative d'annexion d'une partie ou de la totalité du Territoire du Sud-Ouest africain" constituerait "un acte d'agression".

87. Pendant la série de réunions qu'il a tenues en Afrique, le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre a adopté, le 17 juin 1965, une résolution [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. IV, par. 285] où il a réaffirmé le droit du peuple du Sud-Ouest africain à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance et a recommandé à l'Assemblée générale et au Conseil de sécurité de prendre les dispositions appropriées pour sauvegarder la souveraineté du peuple du Sud-Ouest africain ainsi que l'intégrité du Territoire et de prendre à cette fin les mesures concrètes et adéquates nécessaires en coopération avec l'Organisation de l'unité africaine.

88. La délégation soviétique appuie cette recommandation et estime que l'heure est venue de mettre au point ces dispositions de manière à envisager les mesures de coercition que prévoit la Charte des Nations Unies.

89. La délégation soviétique tient à appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur le danger extrêmement grave que créent pour la paix les bases militaires établies dans les territoires coloniaux. Ces bases militaires des puissances coloniales sont dirigées contre les mouvements nationaux de libération, comme le montrent d'abondants témoignages. On sait par exemple que la base militaire aérienne du Royaume-Uni située dans l'île de l'Ascension a été utilisée par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et la Belgique pour exécuter au Congo la honteuse "opération de Stanleyville".

90. C'est ainsi que des aérodromes d'Aden on voit s'envoler des avions vers les monts du Radfan, vers les sultanats d'El-Haushabi et d'El-Fadli ainsi que vers d'autres régions où les troupes britanniques et leurs fantoches luttent contre le mouvement national de libération du sud de la péninsule Arabique. Aden, centre des forces armées britanniques au Proche-Orient, est utilisé pour réprimer les mouvements nationaux de libération dans de nombreuses régions du monde. C'est d'Aden que des troupes ont été envoyées au Kenya, à Zanzibar, en Ouganda et dans d'autres régions.

91. La République sud-africaine a été transformée en un bastion militaire dirigé contre les mouvements de libération en Afrique. Les Etats-Unis et la République fédérale d'Allemagne ont déployé, à cet égard, une activité particulièrement intense. A l'aide de ces Etats, on construit des bases militaires aériennes, des voies de communication militaires stratégiques ainsi que des polygones d'essai pour de nouveaux types d'armes.

92. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, dans sa résolution du 17 juin 1965, a demandé au Gouvernement de la République sud-africaine de retirer sans délai toutes les bases et autres installations militaires situées sur le Territoire du Sud-Ouest africain et de s'abstenir d'utiliser le Territoire comme base de concentration d'armes ou de forces armées.

93. La délégation soviétique espère que l'Assemblée générale fera siennes cette résolution et invitera les puissances occidentales à l'observer scrupuleusement.

94. L'Organisation des Nations Unies agirait d'une manière tout à fait justifiée si elle exigeait résoluement des colonialistes et de leurs alliés qu'ils suppriment toutes leurs bases militaires et retirent les troupes étrangères des territoires coloniaux.

95. La délégation soviétique juge indispensable d'appeler également l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur la subsistance d'une forme masquée de colonialisme — le régime de tutelle — qui prive les peuples de la Nouvelle-Guinée, du Papua, de Nauru et des Iles du Pacifique de la possibilité d'exercer leur droit à la libre détermination et à l'indépendance. Qui plus est, les événements ont montré que les Etats-Unis cherchent à annexer les Iles du Pacifique. L'Organisation des Nations Unies se doit de faire obstacle à ces plans d'annexion.

96. Pour conclure, la délégation soviétique voudrait formuler quelques considérations générales sur l'activité du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. De l'avis de la délégation soviétique, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et son Président, M. Coulibaly, ont accompli une œuvre fort utile: ils ont permis de démasquer la politique des puissances impérialistes et les activités des monopoles capitalistes dans les colonies, facilitant ainsi l'élaboration de toute une série de mesures concrètes en vue de l'application de la Déclaration.

97. Il convient de noter tout particulièrement l'expérience très utile acquise par le Comité spécial lors de la série de réunions qu'il a tenues en Afrique, à proximité immédiate des territoires coloniaux. Il ne fait pas de doute que les séances que le Comité a tenues dans les capitales de la Zambie, de la Tanzanie et de l'Ethiopie ont insufflé une vie nouvelle aux activités du Comité et ont aidé à intensifier ses travaux.

98. Cette série de réunions a porté tout particulièrement sur les questions les plus urgentes et d'actualité brûlante, celles de la lutte contre le colonialisme: la situation en Rhodésie du Sud, dans les colonies portugaises, dans le Sud-Ouest africain, au Bassoutoland, au Souaziland et au Betchouanaland. De nombreux dirigeants d'organisations nationales et patriotiques de ces territoires sont montés à la tribune du Comité pour y faire des déclarations. C'est ainsi que le monde a pu apprendre des faits nouveaux sur les crimes des colonialistes en Afrique, et que l'on a pu noter le rôle prépondérant que jouent les Etats-Unis dans la politique des puissances colonialistes. Les activités criminelles et dangereuses de l'OTAN, ce bloc militaire dirigé contre le mouvement de libération africain, ont fait l'objet d'une condamnation générale.

99. Les membres du Comité et les représentants des mouvements nationalistes et patriotiques des colonies ont révélé les motifs véritables de la survie du colonialisme sur le sol africain. Aux côtés des puissances colonialistes on a vu, au banc des accusés, les monopoles impérialistes, les Etats membres du bloc militaire de l'OTAN qui accordent une aide militaire et autre aux colonialistes portugais et aux racistes de l'Afrique du Sud. On a condamné très sévèrement l'alliance "diabolique" des ennemis de l'Afrique — les gouvernements de la République sud-africaine, du Portugal et de la Rhodésie du Sud.

100. La délégation soviétique estime que la décision prise par le Comité de tenir une série de réunions en Afrique a porté ses fruits. Elle a permis de renforcer la cohésion et l'union des pays qui préconisent la suppression, dans les plus brefs délais, des régimes coloniaux.

101. Un aspect positif du travail du Comité, en Afrique, est qu'il a pu se mettre directement en contact avec l'Organisation de l'unité africaine. Nous pensons qu'à l'avenir ces liens devraient être renforcés par tous les moyens. Ces contacts ouvrent de vastes perspectives à la coopération entre le Comité spécial et l'Organisation de l'unité africaine dans la lutte pour la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration. On est parfaitement fondé à croire qu'à l'avenir le Comité devrait se réunir régulièrement en dehors du siège.

102. La délégation soviétique estime que l'Assemblée a le devoir de réaffirmer une fois de plus que la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour leur libération est légitime et que l'Assemblée devrait engager tous les Etats à leur prêter, dans cette lutte, l'aide morale et tous les types d'aide dont ils ont besoin. Il faut répondre à l'appel de M. Kenneth Kaunda, le Président de la Zambie, qui a dit: "Trêve de paroles, passons à l'action!"

103. On doit aussi entretenir, autour des colonialistes, un climat de réprobation et d'opposition générales. Il y aurait intérêt à ce que l'Organisation des Nations Unies déclare, une fois de plus, que la persistance du colonialisme, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, de même que le régime d'apartheid et de discrimination raciale, constituent un crime contre l'humanité et la civilisation.

104. De l'avis de la délégation soviétique, il faut maintenir en fonction le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, qui devrait devenir encore plus actif et plus énergique. Le Comité doit faire preuve d'une fermeté et d'une persévérance plus grandes lors de l'élaboration de mesures concrètes tendant à assurer dans les plus brefs délais la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration. Le Comité pourrait s'adresser au Conseil de sécurité pour lui proposer l'adoption de mesures efficaces destinées à couper court aux tentatives que font les colonialistes pour réprimer par la force les mouvements des peuples de territoires coloniaux qui luttent pour conquérir leur liberté et leur indépendance.

105. Il serait utile notamment qu'à l'exemple du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, le Conseil de sécurité tienne plusieurs réunions en Afrique, à proximité immédiate des territoires qui subissent encore le joug colonial.

106. Le Comité devrait jouer un rôle beaucoup plus grand dans l'exécution des décisions qu'il adopte. Il faudrait tout d'abord que le Comité fasse porter son attention sur les grands territoires coloniaux. Le Gouvernement soviétique estime en effet que les peuples de ces territoires supportent actuellement la plus lourde part du fardeau de la lutte politique et militaire menée contre les colonialistes et qu'il faut leur prêter en premier lieu une aide immédiate. On ne doit pas oublier que les opérations militaires entreprises par les colonialistes contre les patriotes de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise et de l'Arabie du Sud créent une menace réelle à la paix et à la sécurité du monde entier.

107. De plus, le Gouvernement soviétique considère que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre doit continuer à s'occuper des petits territoires coloniaux qui ne figurent pas encore tous à l'ordre du jour du Comité et ne sont donc pas examinés par celui-ci. Tous les peuples, grands et petits, ont droit à la liberté et le Comité comme l'Assemblée générale ont pour tâche d'aider à assurer l'exercice de ce droit par tous les peuples coloniaux — sans exception. En outre, de grands efforts doivent être déployés pour élaborer des mesures visant à garantir aux populations autochtones l'exercice réel et sans entraves de leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, lors du règlement du statut des petits territoires coloniaux, afin de contrecarrer les machinations des puissances coloniales qui entendent annexer ces territoires.

108. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre ne peut se désintéresser non plus la lutte contre les nouvelles formes du colonialisme — l'ensemble des mesures militaires, politiques et économiques que prennent les colonialistes pour conserver leur emprise sur les peuples qui se sont déjà libérés. La Conférence de Genève de l'ONU sur le commerce et le développement a mis en lumière le degré d'acuité que revêtent ces problèmes dans le monde. L'Union soviétique appuie pleinement le mouvement irrésistible des peuples en faveur d'une indépendance économique véritable et du renforcement de leur indépendance politique. Ce mouvement doit recevoir l'appui sans réserve de tous ceux qui défendent la liberté des peuples contre l'op-pression. Dans cette lutte l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit prendre la place qui lui revient.

109. L'année 1965 est celle qui a marqué le vingtième anniversaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous manquerions à notre devoir devant l'histoire et devant tous les peuples, devant les peuples du monde entier si nous n'apportions une contribution nouvelle et importante à l'élimination immédiate des régimes coloniaux. Il ne saurait non plus y avoir de doute que la fin inéluctable et définitive du régime colonialiste approche sur notre planète.

110. Nous autres, habitants du grand pays des Soviets, avons la conviction que les plans agressifs des colonialistes, des néo-colonialistes et des impérialistes sont irrémédiablement voués à l'échec; nous sommes persuadés que les peuples du monde sont à même d'éliminer sans tarder les régimes coloniaux, quelles que soient les formes sous lesquelles ceux-ci se présentent. La conviction des citoyens soviétiques repose sur le fait que la cause de la liberté des peuples est défendue aujourd'hui par les forces les plus puissantes du monde — par les pays socialistes et les Etats pacifiques d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine, qui poursuivent une politique anticolonialiste et anti-impérialiste et qui forment, avec les pays socialistes, le front puissant et invincible de la libération.

111. Le PRESIDENT: Je demande une fois de plus aux représentants qui désirent prendre la parole de bien vouloir s'inscrire sur la liste des orateurs, qu'il pourrait être opportun de clore demain 1er décembre à 17 heures.

La séance est levée à 16 h 55.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

27. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de donner la parole au premier orateur inscrit, je voudrais avertir les membres de l'Assemblée que la liste des orateurs sera close aujourd'hui à 18 heures.

28. Lord CARADON (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Au moment où le débat ouvert à cette session sur le colonialisme touche à sa fin, il n'est peut-être pas inutile de se demander jusqu'à quel point le colonialisme lui-même a pris fin. Nous nous réjouissons tous du long chemin parcouru et sommes heureux de constater que la fin du colonialisme est maintenant en vue. Il est des gens qui jugent assez objectivement les choses pour dire que l'ère du colonialisme a apporté aux peuples colonisés certaines compensations et certains avantages. Cela est vrai en ce qui concerne le maintien de l'ordre, le développement économique, l'expérience des méthodes démocratiques, l'éducation. Mais nous reconnaissons tous que ces compensations et ces avantages, si réels soient-ils, ne sauraient en aucun cas servir de prétexte à un pays, à un peuple ou à une race pour perpétuer sa domination sur un autre pays, un autre peuple ou une autre race.

29. C'est devenu un lieu commun de dire qu'un bon gouvernement imposé à un peuple ne saurait remplacer un gouvernement choisi par lui et il est universellement reconnu que chaque nation doit être libre de façonner son propre destin. Oui, chaque nation doit être libre de forger elle-même sa destinée, même si la route de l'indépendance est dure et pénible. Et de peur que certaines des vieilles nations ne soient tentées d'afficher une supériorité lorsqu'elles assistent aux premiers tâtonnements des nations nouvelles, il est peut-être bon de nous rappeler que, parmi ces nations anciennes, il en est très peu s'il en est qui aient poursuivi leur marche vers l'unité nationale et aient pu réaliser cette unité sans passer par de dures épreuves, de longues luttes et d'amers conflits.

30. Mais, bien que l'ère du colonialisme soit heureusement presque close, un autre mal, né en partie du colonialisme, subsiste encore aujourd'hui. Peut-être ne fait-il que commencer. C'est le risque de conflits raciaux. Ce risque, nous le voyons apparaître dans de nombreuses parties du monde, en particulier en Afrique du Sud. A coup sûr l'une des tâches majeures qui s'imposent à notre génération est de faire à temps un suprême effort pour que soient adoptées en Afrique du Sud des mesures de justice permettant d'éviter et de prévenir les conflits raciaux.

31. Mais il n'entre pas dans mes intentions d'examiner ici aujourd'hui la situation de l'Afrique du Sud avec ses problèmes et ses dangers. Nous avons déjà eu et nous aurons encore l'occasion de le faire. Ces problèmes, à mon avis, ne sont pas essentiellement des problèmes coloniaux. Ils sont plus graves et plus dangereux que ceux-ci. Ce sont des problèmes raciaux et ce serait une grave erreur que de ne pas les reconnaître et de ne pas les traiter comme tels.

32. Ce dont je veux parler aujourd'hui, c'est de questions strictement coloniales: comment les quelque 50 territoires coloniaux qui subsistent çà et là dans le monde, peuvent-ils mettre fin à leur condition actuelle et repartir sur de nouvelles bases et comment cette opération pourra-t-elle se faire rapidement dans la paix, dans l'ordre et dans l'espoir en l'avenir?

33. Cet effort concerne au premier chef mon pays. Car si nous écartons du présent débat la question des territoires d'Afrique du Sud et aussi la question des pays qui sont dominés par d'autres mais qui ne sont pas encore reconnus ici comme colonies, il ne reste plus dans le monde que cinquante territoires coloniaux et 31 de ceux-ci sont administrés par mon pays. Nous envisageons de réduire ce nombre de quatre unités au moins au cours de l'année prochaine, car le Betchoualand, le Bassoutoland, la Guinée britannique et l'île Maurice doivent, au cours de cette période, accéder à l'indépendance, bientôt suivis dans cette voie par le Souaziland et l'Arabie du Sud.

34. Puis-je me permettre de rappeler, au sujet de ces trente et un territoires, trois faits principaux.

35. Le premier, c'est que la plupart d'entre eux sont petits par la superficie et par la population. La population totale de tous les territoires encore sous administration britannique ne dépasse pas 9 millions, dont la moitié est répartie sur 29 territoires. Nous avons déjà parcouru la plus grande partie du chemin que nous nous sommes tracé et nous sommes heureux et fiers, nous qui appartenons au Commonwealth, de pouvoir dire que sur les 750 millions d'hommes que compte, au total, ce Commonwealth, la proportion de ceux qui vivent dans des territoires non autonomes et dépendants ne dépasse guère un pour cent.

36. Le second fait, c'est que chacun de ces trente et un territoires est différent des autres. Des îles Cayman dans la mer des Caraïbes aux îles Salomon dans le Pacifique et d'Aden au Bassoutoland, ils présentent la plus grande variété imaginable par leurs caractères géographiques, leurs ressources ou leur manque de ressources, et leurs besoins. Ils ont chacun des caractères et des besoins différents mais ils ont les mêmes titres à notre compréhension et à notre sollicitude. On ne peut pas régler leur sort en bloc par une mesure générale faisant fi des particularités.

37. Le troisième fait concernant ces territoires, c'est que, en évoluant vers une condition nouvelle et librement choisie, chacun d'eux se heurte à une difficulté particulière, distincte et propre à lui. La difficulté peut venir des dimensions du territoire. Beaucoup d'entre eux sont trop petits pour se tirer d'affaire tout seuls dans le monde. Ou bien elle est provoquée par l'éloignement des marchés et l'insuffisance des voies de communication. Dans d'autres cas la difficulté provient du manque de ressources qui ne leur permet pas de subsister par eux-mêmes. D'autres fois, il s'agit de faire vivre ensemble au sein d'une même communauté des gens d'origine, de religions ou de races différentes. Chaque cas a son problème. Et la solution n'est pas aisée. S'il en était autrement, tous ces territoires dispersés ne seraient plus des colonies à l'heure actuelle.

38. J'ai déjà dit que, étant donné la diversité des conditions et des problèmes, on ne peut régler en bloc le sort de ces pays par quelque mesure générale faisant fi des particularités. Il n'y a pas une solution unique. Il n'y a pas de consigne unique, pas de mot de passe unique qui puisse faire obtenir la clé du problème dans chaque cas particulier. Il est vain d'espérer renverser les obstacles physiques en réclamant à cor et à cri l'indépendance immédiate. Il y a néanmoins certains principes de base à appliquer sur lesquels, je pense, nous pourrions tous nous mettre d'accord. Quels sont-ils?

39. D'abord les vœux et les intérêts du peuple doivent l'emporter sur toute autre considération. C'est là un principe absolu dont nous devons faire notre règle. La voix du peuple doit être entendue et respectée. Lorsqu'il y a désaccord au sein du peuple lui-même, on doit négocier patiemment, inlassablement, concilier, dialoguer. Le principe de la consultation est pour nous de la plus haute importance. Nous ne devons pas chercher à imposer — pas même chercher à imposer à la minorité la volonté de la majorité. Les minorités elles aussi doivent être consultées. Nous avons envers elles des obligations, des obligations spéciales qui nous font un devoir de défendre de notre mieux leurs justes revendications et leurs intérêts essentiels.

40. Nous avons appliqué en toute bonne foi ces principes et ces méthodes; pourtant je sais que nous avons été parfois critiqués et que nos intentions et nos motifs ont été parfois mal interprétés. Il y a des gens qui appellent impatiemment de leurs vœux l'indépendance immédiate sans vouloir tenir compte des difficultés spéciales, des divergences et des désaccords particuliers qui subsistent. Il en est d'autres qui disent que tous ces peuples doivent tout de suite, bon gré mal gré, et quelles qu'en soient les conséquences, faire le plongeon dans les eaux de l'indépendance. Et l'on vote des motions sans nuances, on brise les liens, on répudie les obligations, on méconnaît les droits des minorités, on oublie les impératifs économiques. Advienne que pourra. Que tout sombre pourvu que la théorie reste intacte et que la thèse triomphe.

41. J'espère que pareille insensibilité, pareille arrogance ne sauraient prévaloir désormais. Et j'ose croire que l'on se rendra compte de plus en plus que la solution des problèmes coloniaux qui restent encore à résoudre ne peut être ni dictée ni imposée par voie autoritaire mais doit être recherchée en se référant aux vœux et aux besoins de la population elle-même. Ce sont les intérêts de celle-ci qui doivent prévaloir. La politique et la méthode à adopter — et ici je prie instamment l'Assemblée de m'écouter — doivent être fondées sur deux principes vitaux, la consultation et le consentement.

42. Ce sont là les deux buts inséparables que nous poursuivons et que nous continuerons à poursuivre. Consulter les populations. Agir avec leur consentement. Ces deux obligations sont fondamentales. Nous nous y conformerons sans nous en écarter. Agir autrement serait renier nos responsabilités et nos obligations.

43. Je répète une fois de plus que nous sommes fiers d'avoir transformé un empire formé d'Etats dépendants en une communauté de peuples libres. Mais nous ne sommes pas disposés à clore ce chapitre en sacrifiant honteusement les intérêts de certains peuples, si petits et si lointains soient-ils, et en passant outre à leurs vœux. En appliquant les principes de consultation et de consentement, nous avons en moins de vingt ans conduit à l'indépendance vingt-six nations dont la population représente plus du cinquième de la population du monde. Nous sommes résolus à mener cette tâche à son terme, et à suivre jusqu'au bout les voies de la consultation et du consentement.

44. Quelques-uns d'entre nous se rappellent le remarquable discours prononcé ici même l'année dernière par M. Walter Lippman, discours dans lequel il évoquait

"le principe moderne et révolutionnaire selon lequel le pouvoir légitime est issu de la volonté du peuple, laquelle implique le droit de choisir et l'aptitude à faire un choix"^{2/}.

45. Nous faisons nôtre ce principe révolutionnaire. Nous voulons que tous les peuples que nous sommes encore chargés de diriger aient le droit de choisir, car où il n'y a pas de choix, il n'y a pas de liberté. Nous voulons que leur avenir soit orienté et modelé d'après leur propre choix et leur propre consentement.

46. Il y a peut-être des gens qui doutent de notre sincérité, qui croient que nous voulons continuer à dominer les territoires coloniaux qui nous restent. Notre passé dément ces accusations. Les territoires coloniaux qui nous restent ne sont pas pour nous, croyez-moi, un avantage matériel. Ils sont plutôt, financièrement parlant, une lourde charge. D'un point de vue étroitement égoïste, notre intérêt serait de rompre dès demain tous nos liens avec eux. Mais nous nous refusons à ce parjure. Nous voulons les voir libres, et libres de choisir leur destinée. Nous ne manquerons pas de tenir compte de leurs vœux et de leurs intérêts.

47. Nous voulons que leur accession à la liberté résulte de leur volonté exprimée — non pas de la volonté d'une minorité ou d'un parti ou même d'une majorité —, mais de la volonté — dans la mesure où c'est humainement possible — de la population tout entière.

48. Je ne puis espérer traiter aujourd'hui toutes les questions soulevées dans les rapports du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5800/Rev.13/ et A/6000/Rev.1], mais permettez-moi de prendre quelques exemples pour vous montrer comment nous mettons en pratique ces principes de consultation et de consentement.

49. Je parlerai d'abord de l'Arabie du Sud. Nous nous consacrons là-bas à une tâche peu commune: aider les populations de cette région à réaliser l'opération complexe qui consiste à fondre une vingtaine de petits Etats en un seul Etat unifié et indépendant. Le but n'est pas douteux. Il a été proclamé et confirmé par les représentants de tous les Etats intéressés. Mais sa poursuite a présenté et présente encore des difficultés particulières. La principale est que l'Etat d'Aden, avec une population de deux cent cinquante mille personnes a une économie urbaine et commerciale alors que les autres Etats de l'Arabie du Sud ont une population clairsemée d'un million d'hommes vivant dans un régime d'économie tribale, pastorale et agricole. Unifier tant d'intérêts divers est une tâche qui ne peut être réussie que par des méthodes de conciliation, de coopération et de consultation; de tels efforts ont malheureusement, j'ai le regret de le dire, été retardés et provisoirement contrecarrés par des actes de violence inspirés du dehors.

50. Néanmoins, les consultations se poursuivent faisant suite à des conférences, à des visites à Aden par le Secrétaire d'Etat pour les colonies et à des négociations compliquées portant sur des problèmes constitutionnels. Nous avons pris mainte et mainte initiative dans chacune de ces voies. Et nous avons bien précisé, chaque fois, que le but proclamé par tous les représentants des Etats intéressés, qui est d'accéder à l'indépendance en 1968 au plus tard, a notre complet appui. On ne saurait trouver meilleur exemple du fait qu'un règlement et une solution doivent être trouvés non par la force ou la violence mais par l'élaboration d'un plan d'accès à l'indépendance établi en consultation avec les intéressés et avec leur accord.

51. Le deuxième exemple que je citerai sera celui de la Guyane britannique. Il s'agit ici de créer un Etat indépendant d'une population de 638 000 habitants, dont la moitié est d'origine indienne, un tiers d'origine africaine, le reste étant un métissage d'Européens, de Chinois et d'Indiens d'Amérique. Les principales difficultés et les principaux dangers ont pour origine les divisions politiques et raciales qui, à plusieurs reprises déjà, ont provoqué des explosions de violence. Ici encore, à la faveur d'une série de conférences, des efforts ont été accomplis, en consultation avec les représentants élus de la population, afin de trouver une base acceptable pour un accès rapide à l'indépendance. Et à la conférence, qui vient de s'achever à Londres, des décisions finales ont été prises non seulement sur la forme de la Constitution — qui comprendra des dispositions spéciales pour la protection des minorités, ainsi qu'une Déclaration des droits et une solennelle déclaration d'intention visant à mettre un terme aux dissensions communales —, mais aussi sur la date où sera célébrée l'indépendance de la nouvelle nation guyanaise qui est fixée au 26 mai de l'année prochaine.

52. Mon troisième exemple sera celui des îles Fidji qui ont une population d'un peu moins de 500 000 habitants. Cette population est composée pour une moitié d'Indiens et pour un peu plus de 40 p. 100 de Fidjiens. Le problème particulier des îles Fidji est posé par les doutes, les appréhensions et la méfiance que chacune des deux communautés nourrit à l'égard de l'autre, chacune voulant être assurée qu'elle ne sera pas dominée par l'autre.

53. L'été dernier a eu lieu à Londres une conférence où toutes les parties de la population fidjienne étaient représentées. Tous les représentants se sont trouvés d'accord pour estimer que le premier objectif est de faire de nouveaux progrès dans la voie de l'autonomie interne. Une déclaration des droits comprenant des garanties contre les discriminations raciales arbitraires a été adoptée. L'élaboration de la Constitution a fait aussi quelques progrès et l'on s'est mis d'accord sur le principe d'une majorité non officielle au Conseil législatif, sur un système ministériel et sur quelques ajustements concernant l'équilibre de la représentation des communautés au sein du Conseil législatif. Les Indiens insistaient pour que l'on adopte dès maintenant le principe de la liste électorale commune. Les Fidjiens et les Européens souhaitaient le maintien de listes électorales par communautés. L'accord n'ayant pu se faire, le Royaume-Uni a présenté un système nouveau d'élections "transversales" selon lequel, pour la première fois, neuf conseillers législatifs seront élus par les électeurs des trois listes communautaires.

54. Les îles Fidji offrent un nouvel exemple du fait que, sans consultations et sans consentement préalables, on ne peut espérer faire des progrès utiles, dans l'ordre et la paix. Faire fi des vœux de l'une quelconque des différentes communautés et chercher à imposer une solution serait détruire l'espoir d'arriver entre les races à l'entente et à la coopération dont dépendent, c'est bien évident, la prospérité et l'unité futures des îles Fidji.

55. Je voudrais maintenant aborder deux questions qui ont été mentionnées spécialement au Comité des Vingt-Quatre et à la Quatrième Commission.

56. La première de ces questions est celle des revendications territoriales à l'égard de quelques-uns des territoires sur lesquels s'exerce notre souveraineté — par exemple les îles Falkland et Gibraltar. Nous sommes toujours prêts à discuter ces questions dans un esprit amical et constructif mais sans renoncer à nos principes de consultation et de consentement. Il ne peut être question de négocier ces problèmes de souveraineté et de signer, en dehors d'eux et par-dessus leur tête, des traités engageant l'avenir de peuples entiers. Les populations de ces territoires ne doivent pas être trahies ou devenir un objet de troc. Leurs vœux et leurs intérêts priment tout et nous ferons notre devoir pour les protéger.

3/ Voir Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, dix-neuvième session, Annexes, Annexe No 8, 1ère partie.

57. La deuxième question est celle des bases. Nous n'avons plus, nulle part dans le monde, besoin de bases pour assurer la défense de nos intérêts impériaux. Nous n'en avons besoin que pour nous acquitter des obligations que nous imposent le maintien de la paix, l'aide à nos amis et les engagements contractés envers eux par des traités. Ici encore, nous appliquons les principes de la consultation et du consentement. C'est l'avis déclaré de mon gouvernement que l'existence d'aucune base n'est justifiée, ni militairement ni moralement, si elle n'est approuvée par la population du territoire sur lequel elle se trouve. Nous mettons ces principes en pratique en Arabie du Sud par exemple, où nous avons déjà déclaré que le sort à réserver aux installations britanniques de défense est une affaire à négocier entre nous et le gouvernement du nouvel Etat au moment de l'indépendance.

58. Je reviens à la proposition dont j'ai parlé. J'ai, pour ma part, passé plus de trente ans de ma vie à travailler avec les peuples coloniaux, sur la base de la consultation et du consentement, pour les faire avancer sur la voie de l'autogouvernement et de l'indépendance. En Arabie, en Afrique et aux Antilles, ma carrière a été consacrée à cette œuvre. Je peux apporter ici mon témoignage personnel sur les méthodes de consultation que nous avons suivies et je suis fier de dire que tous les pays dans lesquels j'ai servi sont aujourd'hui indépendants.

59. Mon pays, plus que tout autre, a l'expérience des processus d'affranchissement et de libération. Ceux qui ont œuvré avec nous en Asie, en Afrique et ailleurs dans le monde savent que je dis la vérité. Ceux qui nous critiquent sont surtout ceux qui ne savent rien de ces méthodes ou qui les connaissent mal. Certains d'entre eux préconisent pour les autres des élections libres, la liberté d'association, la liberté de parole, mais ils ne semblent pas pressés d'instaurer dans leurs propres pays des pratiques aussi radicales. Quelques-uns sont des experts, non pas en matière d'affranchissement et de libération, mais en matière de répression et de totalitarisme. Nous ne voulons pas leur chercher querelle mais nous n'avons pas la moindre envie de les imiter. Nous ne pouvons, quant à nous, enseigner que ce que nous savons. Nous continuerons à suivre les méthodes dans lesquelles nous avons foi. Nous n'abandonnerons pas les populations qui comptent sur nous. Nous continuerons à appliquer les principes de consultation et de consentement.

60. Sans doute commettrons-nous des erreurs comme nous en avons déjà commises. Sans doute serons-nous l'objet de critiques, parfois justifiées, mais parfois inspirées seulement par la malveillance et même par la méchanceté. Mais ce qui importe, c'est l'intention et les résultats pratiques. Les résultats pratiques sont bien connus. Quant à l'intention, ce que nous voulons, c'est de faire pour le 1 p. 100 qui reste ce que nous avons fait pour les 99 p. 100 qui sont déjà libres — c'est-à-dire traiter les problèmes de ces populations avec équité et avec courage, en respectant toujours leurs vœux et leurs intérêts. Nous serons heureux de participer à toute discussion, à tout débat public. Nous continuerons à expliquer et à justifier nos actions et notre politique. En même temps, nous agissons avec confiance; nous irons de l'avant, sachant que nos intentions sont pures et que nos méthodes ont été éprouvées et jugées acceptables, efficaces et bénéfiques par ceux dont le jugement nous importe, à savoir les peuples des pays intéressés.

61. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Quiconque aura écouté l'allocution que vient de prononcer le représentant du Royaume-Uni aura été tenté de croire à sa sincérité. Pourtant je voudrais rappeler aux membres de cette Assemblée que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est celui-là même qui a livré 13 millions d'Africains à la minorité raciste d'Afrique du Sud. Je me demande si c'est là ce que le représentant du Royaume-Uni entend par "consultation". Ce même gouvernement abandonne en ce moment 4 millions de nos frères africains à une minorité composée d'une poignée de racistes. Je me demande si c'est là ce que notre collègue appelle méthode de "consultation". Mais je ne veux pas m'écarter de ce que j'avais l'intention de dire à cette Assemblée.

62. Le fait que celle-ci soit appelée une fois de plus à examiner la question du colonialisme projette une ombre immense et lourde sur notre Organisation. Car l'adoption en 1960 de la résolution 1514 (XV) où figurait la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, avait fait naître dans certains milieux, le grand espoir que le hideux colonialisme allait bientôt disparaître autour de nous et qu'il ne serait plus dans notre histoire qu'un amer souvenir. Voilà l'espoir qui s'élevait il y a cinq ans. Mais il est évident que nous prenions nos désirs pour des réalités et que nos espoirs étaient illusoires.

63. Je dis qu'ils se sont révélés illusoires parce que les faits se sont chargés, hélas, de nous l'apprendre. Illusoires, ils l'étaient en effet, puisque, depuis plusieurs semaines, à cette Quatrième Commission, les orateurs qui se sont succédés, les plaintes qui ont été exprimées, les documents qui ont été présentés, ont tous montré que le fléau du colonialisme existe toujours, qu'il affecte des millions d'hommes qui en sont directement victimes et qu'il défie l'ensemble de l'humanité puisque celle-ci l'a condamné et est bien résolu à le détruire par tous les moyens.

64. Comme je viens de le dire, le colonialisme, l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme est un défi à l'humanité civilisée et une menace pour la paix et la sécurité internationales. Ma délégation et, avec elle, tout le peuple africain, est convaincue de ce fait parce que c'est en Afrique que les forces de l'impérialisme international ont déchaîné, et, ensemble, continuent à déchaîner leur fureur agressive pour étouffer, coloniser, exploiter les Africains et les ressources naturelles de l'Afrique.

65. Il y a à peine quelques semaines, l'atmosphère dans cette salle était électrisée alors que nous condamnions cette minorité de rebelles qui a usurpé le territoire de la Rhodésie du Sud, en se fondant — notons bien ceci — sur l'infâme Constitution de 1961 élaborée par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni "après consultations", va-t-on sans doute nous dire. Pendant des années, nous avons à maintes reprises demandé au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni d'abroger cette Constitution réactionnaire et discriminatoire et chaque fois ce gouvernement nous a répondu avec hauteur que cette affaire ne nous concernait pas. Il se trouve que la question de la Rhodésie du Sud nous concernait et nous concerne toujours, non pas simplement parce que c'est un problème africain mais aussi parce qu'il s'agit d'une population qui fait partie intégrante de la communauté humaine et qui subit l'oppression coloniale. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a préparé et mis en application la Constitution discriminatoire de 1961. Smith et sa bande de hors-la-loi s'en sont emparé et ont bâti sur elle leur déclaration dite d'indépendance. Pour ma délégation, pour tous les peuples épris de liberté, le problème de la Rhodésie du Sud sous sa forme actuelle, c'est la continuation du colonialisme et le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni en porte la responsabilité.

66. Lorsque, il y a quelques semaines, nous sommes venus protester devant cette Assemblée contre les pratiques du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni à l'égard de la Rhodésie du Sud, c'est parce que nous savions ce qui allait se passer. Nous avons expliqué que les sanctions économiques étaient une mesure inefficace. Nous avons exposé à cette Assemblée les brutalités qui se déclencheraient si nous ne prenions contre Smith d'autres mesures que les fameuses sanctions économiques.

67. La suite des événements nous a donné raison. Depuis la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance, nous avons vu comment Smith et sa bande ont donné libre cours aux formes les plus primitives de répression à l'égard de notre peuple en Rhodésie du Sud. Nous avons appris que des gens sans défense sont abattus dans les rues simplement parce qu'ils désapprouvent cette bande de racistes. Ce qui est plus surprenant, c'est que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni ait commencé à employer, devant cette Assemblée et devant d'autres organes des Nations Unies, le mot "si". Ses représentants disent maintenant, par exemple, que les sanctions n'auront d'effet que si tout le monde, que si tous les Etats coopèrent. Nous savions bien que l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal ne coopéreraient pas. Nous savions que quelques autres gouvernements ne coopéreraient pas non plus. C'est pourquoi nous avons déclaré catégoriquement devant cette Assemblée que les sanctions économiques seraient sans effet. Nous le répétons aujourd'hui en termes catégoriques. Ma délégation a éprouvé une vive déception en apprenant que le Gouvernement espagnol, alors même que la résolution du Conseil de sécurité était votée, a passé une commande de minerai de fer à la minorité raciste de Rhodésie du Sud. Nous adressons un appel au Gouvernement et au peuple espagnols pour qu'ils renoncent à cela, car leur attitude constitue un encouragement ouvert à la rébellion raciste. Ma délégation, toutefois, se réserve le droit de présenter un autre projet de résolution sur la Rhodésie du Sud, étant donné ce qui se passe dans ce malheureux pays. Nous espérons que cette résolution recevra un large appui de tous les membres de l'Assemblée.

68. La question de la Rhodésie du Sud ne s'arrête pas là; elle est nettement liée à la question de la répression colonialiste en Angola, au Mozambique et au Sud-Ouest africain, ainsi qu'en Afrique du Sud où les Africains sont victimes des fameuses mesures d'apartheid prises par le régime de Pretoria. Chacun sait aujourd'hui que les forces de réaction et de répression ont usurpé le pouvoir dans ces pays et mènent une action agressive et répressive contre la résistance héroïque des Africains.

69. Je me sens tenu de déclarer ici, comme ma délégation l'a souligné au sein d'autres organismes, que, si ces régimes minoritaires racistes et réactionnaires peuvent durer et poursuivre leur action contre la population africaine, c'est seulement parce qu'ils bénéficient du soutien actif des grandes puissances occidentales.

70. Lorsque le Comité des Vingt-Quatre s'est rendu en Afrique dans le courant de cette année-ci, les plaignants qu'il a entendus et qui lui ont exposé la situation qui règne dans les colonies portugaises ont témoigné du fait que les colonialistes portugais utilisaient pour mener leur guerre d'agression contre les populations africaines une quantité considérable d'armes fournies par certains pays occidentaux.

71. Le Portugal, à notre connaissance, n'a pas à se défendre contre quiconque en Europe. Son seul ennemi, c'est sa politique de massacre brutal des populations africaines, suite du colonialisme. C'est pourquoi, si les puissances occidentales livrent au Portugal des armes de l'OTAN pour qu'il puisse se défendre contre son ennemi, cet ennemi était sa propre politique colonialiste, il en résulte que ces armes sont utilisées effectivement contre les populations africaines. Ainsi peut-on dire que les pays qui fournissent ces armes les utilisent, avec le Portugal, contre nos frères africains. Il est évident que le Portugal est l'un des pays les plus arriérés et les plus pauvres d'Europe. Chacun sait qu'il dépend pour une large part des riches ressources des territoires soumis à l'heure actuelle à son régime colonial. Nous sommes convaincus que le Portugal ne peut continuer sa politique d'agression que grâce à l'appui de ses alliés occidentaux. Ce qui est le plus choquant c'est que si ces pays occidentaux sont prêts à coopérer avec le Portugal et à l'encourager, c'est en raison des capitaux énormes qu'ils ont investis dans ses territoires en vertu des privilèges que ce pays leur a consentis au titre de sa législation coloniale.

72. La délégation de la République-Unie de Tanzanie appuie sans réserve la lutte héroïque que mènent les peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise contre les colonialistes portugais et ceux qui les soutiennent. Nous sommes convaincus qu'ils se battent pour la justice et pour l'honneur et qu'ils servent le noble idéal des peuples africains qui veulent libérer leur continent de la néfaste exploitation colonialiste.

73. Au cours de son voyage en Afrique, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a constaté que la cause de ces peuples était juste et, dans diverses résolutions, il a moralement reconnu que, puisque ces luttes sont menées pour une bonne cause, elles devraient avoir l'appui moral et matériel de tous ceux qui sont attachés à la liberté et recevoir une aide de leur part sous quelque forme que ce soit. Notre délégation estime que, puisque ce sont des luttes contre le colonialisme et l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme et qu'elles visent en fait à réaliser et à promouvoir les principes contenus dans la résolution 1514 (XV) — qui contient la Déclaration — elles défendent les principes fondamentaux de la Charte et, à ce titre et de ce fait, elles doivent être soutenues avec éclat.

74. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, il apparaît au grand jour que les forces de la réaction internationale en Afrique du Sud ont fait un pacte avec le diable pour perpétuer l'exploitation coloniale. Donc, puisque j'ai exprimé nos vues sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud et sur celle des colonies portugaises, je dois dire aussi ce que nous pensons de la situation dans le Sud-Ouest africain. Et, à ce propos, je voudrais dire au représentant du Japon que s'il est exact, comme il nous l'a dit il y a quelques jours, que le Japon ait retiré tous ses investissements du Sud-Ouest africain, son pays a fait là un geste que nous autres Africains apprécions et nous espérons qu'il en fera de même à l'égard de l'Afrique du Sud.

75. L'abondance même des écrits et publications qui ont paru sur la question du Sud-Ouest africain montre que, s'il est bien vrai que ce territoire est, selon l'expression du Times dans un de ses éditoriaux un "mandat dérobé" soumis à la loi de l'apartheid sud-africain, il y a aussi, là-bas, d'autres forces internationales en jeu. Ces forces sont constituées par le gigantesque consortium financier qui groupe un certain nombre de sociétés des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni et d'autres pays occidentaux. Les faits cités devant la Quatrième Commission ont montré que les activités de ces sociétés, conformes aux lois d'apartheid de l'Afrique du Sud, sont nuisibles aux intérêts nationaux de la population africaine du Sud-Ouest africain. Certes, nous n'avons pas été surpris lorsque le représentant des Etats-Unis a essayé d'éluder la question en mettant en cause le communisme et en essayant de démontrer que le rapport dont je parle est imprégné de dogme communiste. Nous savons aussi que, ici, aux Etats-Unis, le meilleur moyen de combattre un homme est de le qualifier de communiste. Mais nous sommes, je crois, à l'Assemblée générale et, ici, ce sont des faits qu'il faut fournir.

76. Ma délégation estime que les activités de ces monopoles financiers étrangers sont non seulement contraires aux intérêts de la population africaine de ce territoire, mais qu'elles retardent effectivement l'heure où cette population pourra exercer son droit légitime à la liberté et à l'indépendance. En outre, les semeurs d'apartheid d'Afrique du Sud, outre qu'ils y ont installé un puissant appareil militaire, sont assurés de la coopération active de ces mêmes puissances occidentales qui se disent nos amis.

77. Faut-il en déduire que ces puissances dont l'influence est grande sont prêtes à sacrifier les grands principes énoncés dans la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) pour mieux servir leurs propres intérêts économiques dans ces territoires?

78. Le rapport du Comité spécial sur la situation dans ces régions est clair et pertinent. Les forces agressives d'oppression coloniale représentées en Rhodésie du Sud par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et la bande de hors-la-loi de Ian Smith, au Mozambique, en Angola, en Guinée dite portugaise, par les Portugais, dans le Sud-Ouest africain, par les semeurs d'apartheid, soutenus tous par l'active coopération des grandes puissances occidentales, agissent donc en violation des diverses résolutions de cette Organisation et en violation de la Charte, entretenant ainsi une tension qui constitue une menace pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

79. Si j'ai parlé longuement de la situation en Afrique, c'est seulement parce que ces régions sont très proches de nous, parce que la lutte qui s'y déroule est un aspect de la grande lutte pour la libération complète de l'Afrique et que nous tous, individuellement et collectivement, en tant que membres de l'Organisation de l'unité africaine, sommes résolus à poursuivre cette lutte jusqu'au bout. Là-dessus, aucun compromis n'est possible. Mais cela ne veut pas dire que nous nous désintéressons du colonialisme dans les autres parties du monde.

80. Ma délégation estime que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux est un document important et que les principes qu'il pose définissent les aspirations profondes des peuples épris de liberté vers le développement et les progrès de l'humanité et leur hostilité aux forces réactionnaires du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et en tout lieu. C'est pourquoi ma délégation s'étonne de constater qu'aujourd'hui, cinq ans après l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV), et bien que plusieurs autres résolutions aient été adoptées depuis lors, les puissances coloniales restent retranschées avec arrogance dans leurs anciennes positions et continuent à jouir de privilèges usurpés au détriment des peuples dépendants.

81. Pour la même raison, nous regrettons que le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis persiste à maintenir sous sa domination coloniale les Iles Vierges. Ce gouvernement nous a informés qu'il avait déjà préparé les voies de l'avenir pour ces Iles. Nous voulons bien le croire; mais ce que nous savons en tout cas, c'est que précisément dans un avenir ainsi préparé, nous trouvons matière à inquiétude. Le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis peut-il nous montrer ce qu'il y a de changé dans la situation des Iles Vierges? Jusqu'à quel point les principes de la Charte et les dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) ont-elles été appliquées?

M. Ramani (Malaisie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

82. De même, et toujours à ce propos, nous constatons que le colonialisme sévit encore dans ces territoires lointains mais importants de Papouasie et de Nouvelle-Guinée qui sont soumis à l'administration coloniale du Gouvernement de l'Australie. Sourdes aux nombreux appels qui leur ont été adressés, les autorités australiennes n'ont fait aucun effort pour se conformer aux principes de la Déclaration et leur attitude vis-à-vis de l'octroi de l'indépendance est restée passive. Dans les territoires de Papouasie et de Nouvelle-Guinée, les pratiques coloniales sont toujours en vigueur et l'on voit les maîtres coloniaux étouffer les droits légitimes du peuple colonisé. En outre, nous avons appris la nouvelle inquiétante que les colonisateurs sont à l'heure actuelle en train d'exproprier des terres et d'autres richesses dans ces territoires. Par exemple, dans certaines régions de la Nouvelle-Guinée, ils se sont appropriés des terres pour l'exploitation forestière, à des prix dérisoires. Il en est de même de terrains destinés à l'exploitation minière, dont ils ont pratiquement dépossédé les autochtones. Cette Assemblée doit se prononcer sur ces pratiques abominables. Je dis "abominables" parce que nous autres Africains savons d'amère expérience comment les bienfaits de ce que l'on appelle la mission civilisatrice se retournent finalement contre la population indigène.

83. Nous avons vu paraître devant la Quatrième Commission nombre de plaignants qui, tous, nous ont dit combien de gens dans les colonies ont été dépouillés de leurs terres par l'effet de telles pratiques. Pourtant ces pratiques ont cours encore aujourd'hui et il est fort probable qu'elles conduiront en Nouvelle-Guinée aux mêmes résultats que dans d'autres territoires, tels que le Sud-Ouest africain, les colonies portugaises et autres. Nous savons que c'est par de telles pratiques que les colonisateurs aboutissent à créer, pour la population indigène, des problèmes tels que celui de la minorité régnante en Rhodésie du Sud.

84. Ma délégation condamne sans réserve ces pratiques malhonnêtes du Gouvernement australien. Devant de tels actes, cette Assemblée ne doit pas rester muette. Ma délégation pense que le premier tort fut peut-être de confier ces territoires sous tutelle à un pays comme l'Australie; en vérité, nous pensons qu'il faut dès maintenant les soustraire à l'administration australienne. Après tout, si un gouvernement comme celui de l'Australie administre de cette manière des territoires qui lui ont été confiés par les Nations Unies, c'est aux Nations Unies maintenant de les lui reprendre. Ma délégation est sûre que les peuples de la Nouvelle-Guinée, de l'île Nauru et des autres territoires sont capables aujourd'hui de se gouverner eux-mêmes.

85. La seule erreur terrible que nous commettons aux Nations Unies est d'attendre que la puissance administrante nous dise que tel et tel pays peut accéder à l'indépendance; nous oublions en effet que les puissances coloniales cherchent toujours à prolonger leur pouvoir aussi longtemps qu'elles le peuvent et que cela peut leur être profitable. Nous faisons appel aux Nations Unies pour qu'elles envoient une nouvelle — et dernière — commission qui proposera des dates précises pour l'accession à l'indépendance, dans les plus brefs délais, de ces territoires sous tutelle. Ces dates en effet devraient être fixées par les Nations Unies et non par la puissance administrante. Il est choquant, en vérité, de constater que, depuis que le système de tutelle a été institué et que certains territoires ont été, en vertu de ce système, confiés à l'Australie, aucun d'eux n'est devenu indépendant. Je le répète: aucun d'eux, jusqu'à présent, n'est devenu indépendant. Plus longtemps nous laisserons ces peuples à la merci de la puissance administrante, plus longtemps ils seront livrés, eux et leurs territoires, à l'exploitation impitoyable des colonisateurs. Que les populations autochtones des territoires sous mandat sachent bien que nous autres, citoyens de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, sommes de cœur avec eux dans leur lutte et que nous serons avec eux jusqu'à ce qu'ils aient recouvré leur indépendance.

86. Nous avons déjà dit, et nous tenons à le répéter, que la nature du colonialisme ne change pas; c'est seulement la tactique des colonialistes qui change quand ils essaient de prolonger la vie de leur système condamné et moribond.

87. Ce sont là des facteurs qui sont longuement analysés dans le rapport que nous discutons en ce moment. Ce sont eux qui portent ma délégation à penser qu'il est grand temps que cette Organisation envisage des mesures plus concrètes pour amener les forces colonialistes à s'incliner devant les justes et légitimes aspirations des peuples coloniaux.

88. Je dis qu'il est grand temps, parce que nous constatons que dans plusieurs de ces colonies — en particulier dans celles que l'on appelle aujourd'hui "petites" colonies — les puissances colonialistes ont installé des bases militaires pour servir leur stratégie militaire globale. Nous le demandons: pourquoi les forces colonialistes installent-elles des bases militaires dans ces territoires? On en a donné deux explications: d'une part, on nous dit que ces bases sont destinées à être utilisées contre de prétendus terroristes et agitateurs; je suppose que c'est la raison invoquée dans le cas d'Aden. Une autre explication est celle que j'ai déjà donnée moi-même, à savoir que ces bases sont destinées à servir la stratégie militaire globale des puissances coloniales.

89. C'est pourquoi, si cet appareil militaire est utilisé, en ce moment sur un plan local, c'est l'aveu patent qu'il est là pour perpétuer l'injustice actuelle, c'est-à-dire pour empêcher les gens de réaliser leur désir légitime de liberté et d'indépendance. Nous ne pouvons accepter ni laisser dire que les héroïques nationalistes qui combattent pour leur indépendance sont des terroristes. Aux yeux de ma délégation, ce sont les forces colonialistes et tout leur attirail de guerre et de massacre qui sèment la terreur. Ce sont elles qui ont usurpé et colonisé les terres, déniaient aux gens leurs droits naturels, les intimidant par leur puissance militaire agressive et, d'une façon générale, terrorisant les peuples coloniaux. Et ainsi, comme l'expérience l'a montré, l'emploi de la force militaire, ou de la force sous quelque forme que ce soit, appelle l'emploi de la force par les peuples colonisés qui veulent se libérer.

90. C'est pourquoi le fait colonial qui a été condamné comme étant une honte pour l'humanité constitue une menace pour la paix et la sécurité internationales. Or ce fait colonial existe. Il existe dans les colonies occupées par le Portugal où une guerre d'agression est menée contre les peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise.

91. Je crois que je ne ferai qu'accomplir le devoir qui m'incombe, du fait que mon pays fait partie intégrante des forces anticolonialistes, si je dis que nous devons appeler l'attention du Conseil de sécurité sur ces faits et le prier de faire ce qu'il faut pour éliminer ces menaces à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

92. A propos du second point, à savoir que le maintien ou l'installation de bases militaires sert à des fins de stratégie militaire globale, je voudrais rappeler la Déclaration faite l'an dernier au Caire par les pays non engagés. En voici un passage:

"La Conférence considère la présence actuelle ou l'établissement ultérieur de bases militaires étrangères ou le stationnement de troupes étrangères sur le territoire d'autres pays contre la volonté expresse de ceux-ci, comme une violation flagrante de la souveraineté des Etats et comme une menace à la liberté et à la paix internationales.

Elle estime également que l'existence ou l'installation future dans des territoires non autonomes de bases qui pourraient être utilisées pour maintenir le colonialisme ou à d'autres fins est particulièrement injustifiable^{4/}."

93. Cette déclaration a été faite parce que nos peuples sont tous résolus à défendre les nobles idéaux de liberté et d'indépendance pour le progrès et le développement humains. Elle a été faite parce que nous savons que le maintien ou l'installation de ces bases est contraire à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

94. Nous voudrions adresser un nouvel appel aux Gouvernements du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis pour qu'ils renoncent à installer une base militaire sur certaines îles qui font à l'heure actuelle partie des îles Maurice.

95. Notre allocution a été longue parce que le problème colonial est encore une question brûlante dans le monde. Le colonialisme est, à l'heure actuelle, en mauvaise posture. Je pense aux événements qui se sont déroulés dans les territoires portugais et à la cruauté avec laquelle des hommes sont tués tous les jours en Rhodésie du Sud et dans le Sud-Ouest africain. La situation de ces pays est, en vérité, un cauchemar pour tous les hommes qui, dans tous les pays du monde, sont attachés aux idéaux de liberté et d'indépendance. Ma délégation espère que, au cours de cette vingtième session de l'Assemblée, nous verrons celle-ci adopter quelques mesures plus positives contre le colonialisme. Enfin, ma délégation espère que d'ici peu cette Organisation aura fait en sorte que chaque homme sur notre planète puisse respirer l'air de la liberté.

96. M. KULAGA (Pologne) [traduit de l'anglais]: Cette année, notre examen des problèmes que pose la colonisation a commencé sous de sombres auspices. La question de la Rhodésie du Sud a éclaté brusquement lorsque nous avons vu ce qui paraissait inimaginable — l'instauration d'un régime fasciste des plus rétrogrades — devenir une affreuse réalité. Cet événement a soulevé une tempête de protestations et de demandes exigeant qu'à l'acte de Ian Smith il soit répondu par une riposte sévère, rapide et efficace. Il a concentré l'attention du monde entier sur la menace persistante que le colonialisme fait peser sur les droits des hommes et des peuples, sur la menace persistante qu'il constitue pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

97. Il y a cinq ans, presque jour pour jour, l'Assemblée votait une résolution qui devait rapidement prendre place parmi les textes les plus remarquables dus à l'initiative des Nations Unies. La résolution 1514 (XV), la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, doit l'importance qu'elle s'est acquise au fait qu'elle répondait aux aspirations des peuples encore dépendants, qu'elle reflétait la juste cause et la lutte active de ces peuples pour leur indépendance et qu'elle y faisait écho. Constituant le plus grand dénominateur commun des appuis que les peuples dépendants peuvent trouver auprès de tous les éléments progressistes de l'humanité, cette Déclaration, en même temps, favorisait et encourageait la lutte de ces peuples. On en trouvera maintes preuves dans les rapports du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/5800/Rev.1 et A/6000/Rev.1], dans les nombreuses déclarations faites par des plaignants aux réunions tenues par ce Comité en Afrique et dans les dépositions de plaignants devant la Quatrième Commission. A bien des égards, cette Déclaration est devenue la Magna Carta des peuples dépendants.

98. Ces cinq années ont vu accéder à l'indépendance un certain nombre d'Etats que nous avons été heureux d'accueillir dans cette Assemblée comme Membres majeurs de notre Organisation. Elles ont vu s'intensifier la lutte pour l'indépendance dans la plupart des territoires sous domination coloniale. Le "désir passionné de liberté de tous les peuples dépendants", pour citer les termes mêmes du troisième paragraphe du préambule de la Déclaration, s'est manifesté avec plus de force que jamais.

99. Pourtant c'est précisément à ce moment que la menace latente qui couvait en Rhodésie du Sud a éclaté. Nous n'avons pas l'intention de rouvrir cette question, si ce n'est, pour souligner une fois de plus que notre délégation en a ressenti profondément le choc et qu'elle condamne sans réserve ce foyer de racisme, d'asservissement et d'exploitation que le régime de Salisbury a allumé en Rhodésie du Sud. Nous avons déjà connu sous l'occupation par l'Allemagne nazie les théories du Herrenvolk — la supériorité raciale — et nous ne pouvons qu'éprouver une vive inquiétude en voyant cet Herrenvolk tenter de s'installer sur un nouveau domaine, du Cap au Zambèze.

100. Mon gouvernement a dénoncé l'acte criminel accompli par le régime de la minorité de colons en Rhodésie du Sud et il a donné son appui le plus complet à la position juste prise sur cette question par l'Organisation de l'unité africaine et aux résolutions adoptées par les Nations Unies. Nous avons également proclamé notre totale solidarité envers les 4 millions de Rhodésiens dans la juste lutte qu'ils mènent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance et avons joint notre voix à toutes celles qui se sont élevées pour exiger l'abrogation de la législation raciste de la Rhodésie et la formation d'un gouvernement représentatif de la population de ce pays.

101. Après une longue évolution — marquée par l'application progressive, par la minorité de colons de Salisbury, de leurs plans de suprématie raciale, par la coupable indulgence montrée par les Britanniques malgré les résolutions des Nations Unies appuyées totalement par la Pologne et malgré les avertissements donnés à temps par les Etats africains et assorties de propositions pertinentes — voilà qu'une nouvelle structure d'apartheid essaie maintenant de s'implanter en Rhodésie du Sud. Un bloc raciste a pris forme dans le Sud de l'Afrique. Son armature économique et militaire est constituée, avec l'appui ouvert ou déguisé de certaines puissances occidentales, par la République sud-africaine qui lui fournit aussi les mobiles "idéologiques". La population autochtone africaine d'Afrique du Sud et du Sud-Ouest africain, des colonies portugaises et de Rhodésie du Sud constitue une sorte de réserve de main-d'œuvre esclavagiste. Tout ceci se passe dans l'harmonie complète — pas trop ouvertement affirmée, bien sûr, pour des raisons faciles à comprendre — des intérêts entremêlés de l'Afrique du Sud, du Portugal et de certaines puissances occidentales de l'OTAN, qui, de ce fait, portent une lourde part de responsabilité dans la menace envers la paix qui va s'aggravant en Afrique du Sud.

102. Une étude attentive de tous les rapports, consciencieux et fort utiles, présentés à l'Assemblée par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, montre clairement les formes multiples que prend le colonialisme, les tactiques variées dont il use, l'élasticité qu'il déploie pour s'adapter aux situations nouvelles dans ce que j'appellerai la guerre d'usure qu'il mène contre les vœux des peuples dépendants, et contre les buts et objectifs définis dans la Déclaration des Nations Unies sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

103. Cette lutte destinée à contenir ou même à refouler — pour reprendre ici certains termes employés pour définir des politiques qui ont déjà fait faillite — les forces anticolonialistes, cette lutte, dis-je, peut prendre la forme d'un rejet pur et simple des principes des Nations Unies comme c'est le cas dans le Sud-Ouest africain et dans les colonies portugaises. Elle peut prendre la forme d'une intervention militaire comme à Aden. Elle peut aussi prendre un aspect plus subtil en faisant préparer l'indépendance par des autorités qui ne sont pas représentatives de la population. Elle s'implante toujours en s'assurant sur les peuples dépendants une emprise économique aussi forte que possible tout en réduisant au strict minimum leur progrès en matière de bien-être social et d'éducation. Dans bien des cas, elle s'accompagne de l'installation de bases militaires et d'efforts pour intégrer ces bases à la structure du pays colonisé, de manière à les faire apparaître comme un élément indispensable du développement futur du pays quand il sera parvenu à l'indépendance.

104. Mais dans tous les cas, le dénominateur commun est le même: on va toujours à l'encontre des dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, on crée les conditions propres à maintenir en sujétion, directement ou indirectement, les peuples dépendants.

105. Ma délégation voudrait évoquer certaines de ces manifestations du colonialisme depuis le vote de la Déclaration. Nous voudrions pour commencer nous référer aux paragraphes suivants de cette Déclaration (résolution 1514 (XV)):

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises ... pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés ..."

et

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'éducation ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

106. C'est un fait que, dans la plupart des résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée et par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, il a fallu inclure une disposition déplorant la non-application de la Déclaration dans les territoires visés. Je voudrais citer ici la résolution 2023 (XX) sur Aden, le projet de résolution sur le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland [voir A/6106, par. 11], ainsi que les projets de résolution sur l'île Maurice [voir A/6160, par. 50, projet de résolution II] et sur les îles Fidji [ibid., projet de résolution IV].

107. Si nous prenons maintenant quelques exemples concrets, voici ce que nous constatons: à Aden, la situation évolue nettement vers la création d'une structure politique qui aurait pour effet d'accorder l'indépendance en confiant le pouvoir à des autorités non représentatives de la population, après des délais qui permettraient de marquer ces autorités du sceau de la respectabilité. La chose a été dite au cours du débat auquel la question d'Aden a donné lieu. La résolution adoptée par l'Assemblée fait état de cette tendance, au paragraphe 4 du dispositif dont je crois inutile de vous donner lecture une nouvelle fois.

108. La situation au Betchouanaland, au Bassoutoland et au Souaziland fait apparaître une tendance analogue, comme on peut s'en rendre compte d'après les témoignages apportés devant le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, en particulier lors de ses réunions en Afrique.

109. En Guinée, l'octroi de l'indépendance est depuis des années remis à plus tard en vertu du principe "diviser pour régner".

110. Les autorités d'Afrique du Sud elles-mêmes, comme il apparaît dans le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, essaient à l'heure actuelle de calquer leur action sur ces tendances en mobilisant des chefs de tribu ou de villages pour soutenir une politique contraire aux intérêts de l'ensemble de la population du Sud-Ouest de l'Afrique.

111. Ces plans visant à instituer une indépendance que j'appellerai de type "indaba" semblent désormais constituer le schéma exemplaire sur lequel les puissances coloniales, depuis le vote de la Déclaration, règlent leur action: schéma qui va à l'encontre de la résolution 1514 (XV), et que les Nations Unies doivent condamner et corriger.

112. Et je ne parle pas, bien entendu, des colonies portugaises et du Sud-Ouest africain, où la seule perspective offerte aux populations est l'annexion pure et simple et l'asservissement au sein des structures politiques et sociales créées par le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud.

113. Un autre problème d'importance capitale pour les peuples dépendants est la tendance croissante des puissances administrantes à convertir en bases militaires un certain nombre de territoires dépendants. Cette question a déjà été soulevée par le représentant de la Tanzanie.

114. Guam, Aden et l'île de l'Ascension sont par exemple des bases militaires. Les plaintes et les rapports dont la Quatrième Commission a été saisie, les débats qui s'y sont déroulés indiquent que l'on installe ou que l'on envisage d'installer des bases dans bien d'autres territoires: aux îles Seychelles, dans l'archipel Tchagos, aux îles Aldabra, aux îles Farquhar, à l'île Desroches et dans le Sud-Ouest africain.

115. Est-il besoin de rappeler, dans cette enceinte, l'usage que l'on fait de l'île de Guam? Est-il besoin de mentionner le rôle que joue cette île dans la guerre d'agression menée contre le peuple vietnamien? Est-ce besoin de rappeler le rôle joué par la base de l'île de l'Ascension? Nous avons déjà adopté une résolution [2023 (XX)] condamnant la base d'Aden comme constituant un obstacle important à l'autodétermination des populations de l'Arabie du Sud et une menace à la paix et à la sécurité de cette région. Faut-il rappeler que le Chapitre XI de la Charte fait aux puissances administrantes l'obligation sacrée de favoriser la prospérité des habitants de ces territoires et, à cette fin, d'affermir la paix et la sécurité internationales?

116. Le maintien et l'utilisation des bases existantes, comme l'installation de bases nouvelles met en cause, en ce qui concerne les peuples dépendants, une série de principes absolument essentiels. Tout d'abord, ces bases sont un empêchement sérieux à l'accès de ces peuples à l'indépendance puisqu'elles constituent un puissant moyen de pression contre eux, par leur existence même et par la puissance virtuelle de répression qu'elles représentent. Deuxièmement, elles faussent la structure économique du territoire sur lequel elles sont situées en soumettant celui-ci aux besoins de la base et en créant par là-même des déséquilibres durables dans la vie économique ultérieure du territoire, et en préparant les esprits au maintien de la base pour des raisons qualifiées d'économiques. Troisièmement, elles mettent les peuples dépendants en première ligne en cas de conflit, étant donné que les bases installées sur leurs territoires auraient toutes chances de recevoir des coups terribles en cas de guerre. Ainsi, les peuples dépendants sont exposés à de graves dangers virtuels sans qu'ils aient rien à dire à cet égard et sans qu'ils aient été le moins du monde consultés. Quatrièmement, posséder des bases dans des territoires dépendants, surtout dans des îles isolées où ne peut s'exercer la pression de l'opinion publique, est un moyen, pour certains pays, d'atteindre des buts stratégiques tout en faisant échec à la résistance croissante des peuples à la course aux armements et en particulier à la présence de bases militaires sur leur territoire.

117. Une autre conséquence grave de l'existence de ces bases est la menace qu'elles font peser sur l'intégrité territoriale. Ceci est confirmé par les projets de partition des îles Seychelles et des îles Maurice — projets condamnés par la Quatrième Commission [voir A/6160, par. 50, projet de résolution II]. C'est là un exemple vivant du mépris dans lequel certaines puissances tiennent la notion d'autodétermination et du peu de cas qu'elles font de l'injonction impérative contenue dans le paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV), à savoir que l'intégrité territoriale du territoire d'un peuple dépendant doit être respectée, chaque fois qu'entrent en jeu les intérêts stratégiques de ces puissances.

118. Tous ces éléments réunis montrent à quel point l'existence de bases dans les territoires non autonomes est contraire à la Charte et à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ils montrent dans quel cercle vicieux ces territoires se trouvent entraînés: de l'installation d'une base, avec l'influence directe qu'elle permet d'exercer sur l'évolution de la population du territoire et sur la création d'une économie axée sur cette base, à une autodétermination conçue comme le terme d'un processus qui se déroule selon le schéma et dans le cadre voulus par l'autorité administrante. Et l'on ne saurait être surpris si des îles sur lesquelles sont installées des bases stratégiques se laissent persuader "de choisir" l'association avec l'autorité administrante.

119. A ce stade de la lutte des Nations Unies contre le colonialisme, nous nous sommes, à juste titre, consacrés surtout aux problèmes les plus importants que posent les dernières colonies d'Afrique et d'Arabie du Sud. C'est notre souci primordial et cela continuera à l'être tant que le Sud-Ouest africain et les colonies portugaises resteront soumises aux conditions de la servitude coloniale, tant que 4 millions de Zimbabwe en Rhodésie du Sud et bien d'autres millions de Sud-Africains soumis au régime cruel de l'apartheid n'exerceront pas les droits qui sont les leurs et tant que le colonialisme continuera à refuser la liberté véritable aux peuples de l'Arabie du Sud et autres territoires non autonomes.

120. Nous ne devons donc, en aucun cas, relâcher nos efforts. Nous devons poursuivre notre campagne pour aider ces peuples dans leur lutte pour l'indépendance. En même temps, la tactique nouvelle adoptée par les puissances colonisatrices depuis cinq ans, c'est-à-dire depuis le vote de la Déclaration, demande — c'est l'avis de ma délégation — à être étudiée de près.

121. Ce néo-colonialisme appelle de la part des Nations Unies une réaction appropriée. D'abord et avant tout, il y a la question de la légitimité de la lutte des peuples non autonomes pour l'indépendance. Nous devons être reconnaissants au Comité des Vingt-Quatre d'avoir, si je puis dire, codifié cette disposition essentielle, comblant ainsi le vide qui existait entre le processus de décolonisation et l'action des Nations Unies dans ce domaine. L'Assemblée doit maintenant bien préciser que la lutte des peuples non autonomes pour l'indépendance est une lutte légitime, qu'elle est parfaitement conforme à l'esprit de la Charte et de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Une déclaration nette de l'Assemblée générale dans ce sens, est une nécessité à la fois juridique et politique. Le principe de la légitimité de la lutte d'un peuple colonial pour l'indépendance implique la reconnaissance de la légitimité de l'action de chacun des participants à cette lutte, qui ont droit, par conséquent, à l'assistance morale et matérielle de tous les Etats et des Nations Unies. Les mesures répressives contre le mouvement de libération nationale dans son ensemble et contre les individus qui y prennent part doivent, en conséquence, être considérées comme contraires aux dispositions de la Déclaration.

122. Le principe de l'accès démocratique et libre des peuples non autonomes à une vie indépendante doit être la pierre angulaire de l'application de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV). Dans ce principe, nous incluons la notion de consultation du peuple tout entier, si heureusement résumée dans la formule "un homme, un suffrage" et la notion de suffrage librement exprimé en dehors de toute contrainte, deux notions que nous jugeons contenues dans le paragraphe 5 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV).

123. Le principe essentiel de l'indépendance économique a été reconnu par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et nous approuvons hautement les premiers rapports de ce Comité sur l'influence des monopoles étrangers dans les territoires non autonomes. Etant donné que l'examen de ces rapports est inscrit à l'ordre du jour de la Quatrième Commission, ma délégation ne veut pas aborder ici le fond de ce problème. Nous voulons simplement montrer la valeur de ces documents, utiles surtout parce qu'ils illustrent le rapport directement proportionnel qui existe entre les intérêts économiques coloniaux et la domination coloniale. Il est donc de la plus haute importance que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre poursuive et élargisse son œuvre dans ce domaine, conformément aux termes du huitième paragraphe du préambule de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale.

124. Les mesures sur lesquelles j'ai appelé l'attention et les nombreuses autres qui ont été proposées au cours de nos débats — je pense en particulier aux suggestions émises par les représentants du Mali, de l'URSS et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie — sont des mesures qu'il convient de prendre au point où en sont arrivés nos efforts, depuis le vote de la Déclaration, en vue de supprimer radicalement les dernières forteresses du colonialisme. Nous serions heureux de voir toutes ces mesures codifiées.

125. J'en arrive à ma conclusion que je voudrais consacrer au Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Nous tenons à exprimer à ses membres nos très sincères félicitations pour le dévouement, la compétence et la conscience avec lesquels ils se sont acquittés de leur tâche. Nous félicitons en particulier le Président du Comité, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, le bureau du Comité et ses sous-comités. Nous sommes convaincus que le Comité continuera, comme il l'a fait jusqu'ici, à être à la pointe du combat des Nations Unies pour la suppression immédiate et définitive du colonialisme. Nous espérons que, pour cette action, le Comité tiendra compte de tous les éléments nouveaux qui se sont manifestés depuis le vote de la Déclaration.

126. M. PARTHASARATHI (Inde) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'Assemblée générale discute en ce moment les rapports du Comité spécial pour les années 1964 et 1965. Ces rapports représentent 3 500 pages et ma délégation a suivi avec un grand intérêt les débats auxquels ils ont donné lieu, tant à la Quatrième Commission qu'en séance plénière. Ayant nous-mêmes subi la domination coloniale, nous ne pouvons qu'être profondément soucieux de l'avenir des peuples et territoires qui n'ont pas encore acquis l'indépendance.

127. Il y a cinq ans que l'Assemblée générale a adopté la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. L'année suivante, l'Assemblée générale créait le Comité spécial. La délégation de l'Inde a été étroitement associée aux travaux du Comité des Dix-Sept et à ceux du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Je voudrais profiter de l'occasion qui m'est offerte aujourd'hui pour rendre un hommage particulier au Président du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, dont le dévouement à la cause de la décolonisation est digne de tous les éloges. Il est heureux pour le Comité d'avoir, pour présider ses délibérations, un homme d'une telle énergie, d'une telle patience, d'une telle courtoisie et d'une telle bonne volonté.

128. Les rapports du Comité portent sur une soixantaine de territoires et contiennent deux études spéciales, l'une sur le Sud-Ouest africain et l'autre sur les territoires portugais. C'est la première fois qu'un organe des Nations Unies entreprend une étude détaillée de la situation dans tous les territoires non autonomes. Ces rapports spéciaux sont tous deux extrêmement utiles car ils révèlent les conditions effroyables qui règnent dans le Sud-Ouest africain et dans les colonies portugaises.

129. Depuis la création du Comité spécial, plusieurs pays en Afrique et ailleurs ont accédé à l'indépendance. Mais le noyau le plus dur du colonialisme et du racisme demeure retranché en Rhodésie du Sud, en Angola, au Mozambique et dans la Guinée dite portugaise, enfin en Afrique du Sud et du Sud-Ouest. La moitié sud de l'Afrique est la dernière citadelle du colonialisme et du racisme dans ce continent, et l'Assemblée générale doit faire face aux problèmes résultant de cette situation. Ma délégation souhaite ardemment que ces territoires accèdent à l'indépendance et à la liberté par des voies pacifiques. Mais ceci n'est guère probable. La politique déclarée des régimes du Portugal, de la Rhodésie et de l'Afrique du Sud va à l'encontre de l'esprit de la Charte, de la Déclaration des droits de l'homme, de la Déclaration sur la décolonisation et d'autres résolutions de l'Assemblée générale.

130. Non seulement ma délégation est l'une de celles qui ont présenté les résolutions pertinentes sur l'Afrique du Sud, la Rhodésie du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et les colonies portugaises, mais mon pays a pris des mesures contre le colonialisme portugais et applique les dispositions des résolutions en ce qui concerne l'Afrique du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et la Rhodésie du Sud. Malheureusement, il y a encore certains membres de cette Assemblée qui continuent à aider, directement ou indirectement, ces régimes racistes d'oppression. Si elle n'avait pu compter sur cette assistance, il est peu probable que la faction menée par Smith eût osé usurper le pouvoir en Rhodésie du Sud.

131. Si la situation dans la partie sud de l'Afrique est sombre et dangereuse, ma délégation note que dans d'autres parties du monde, le processus de décolonisation se poursuit dans la bonne voie, quoiqu'à lentement. A cet égard, ma délégation est heureuse de la décision prise à la Conférence constitutionnelle pour la Guyane britannique, tenue à Londres, et selon laquelle la Guyane britannique deviendrait indépendante le 26 mai 1966. Il est regrettable que la puissance administrante n'ait pu créer les conditions qui auraient permis à l'un des partis importants de Guyane britannique d'assister à la Conférence constitutionnelle. Comme l'a déjà dit ma délégation, la Guyane britannique aurait pu accéder beaucoup plus tôt à l'indépendance si la puissance administrante avait adopté une politique plus éclairée. Quoi qu'il en soit, ma délégation espère ardemment que le peuple de la Guyane britannique saura surmonter ses dissensions et évoluer vers l'unité nationale, le progrès et la prospérité. Toutefois, ma délégation voudrait ici faire une mise en garde: si la puissance administrante devait retarder ou entraver l'accès à l'indépendance totale de la Guyane britannique, les conséquences d'une telle attitude pourraient être graves.

132. La situation aux îles Fidji où, sous un prétexte ou sous un autre, la puissance administrante répugne à se dessaisir de son pouvoir, inquiète beaucoup les Nations Unies. Cette inquiétude a déjà été exprimée par la Quatrième Commission qui a adopté un projet de résolution à ce sujet la semaine dernière [voir A/6160, par. 50, projet de résolution IV]. Il est regrettable que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni se persuade que, dans la seconde moitié du XXème siècle, il doit commencer par créer des conditions qui, comme le montre clairement la résolution adoptée par la Quatrième Commission, aboutissent à fomentier des tendances séparatistes et à retarder la marche des îles Fidji vers la qualité de nation et l'indépendance. Il est bien connu que le colonialisme a toujours entraîné dans son sillage la discrimination raciale et la dissension entre communautés différentes.

133. Ma délégation ne veut pas s'étendre longuement sur cette question étant donné que le représentant de Ceylan, en présentant le projet de résolution à la Quatrième Commission [1567ème séance], a exposé la cause du peuple des îles Fidji avec beaucoup de clarté et d'éloquence. Je voudrais seulement faire appel au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni pour qu'il agisse aux îles Fidji comme il l'a fait à l'île Maurice, c'est-à-dire qu'il fixe dès maintenant une date pour l'accès à l'indépendance sur la base d'institutions démocratiques et d'élections où serait appliqué, sans restrictions, le principe "un homme, un suffrage". Toutefois, ma délégation regrette que certains pays, qui eux-mêmes sont nés d'une fusion de races, essaient d'attirer l'attention sur les différences raciales et ethniques plutôt que sur la nationalité commune.

134. Je passe maintenant — et je le fais avec plaisir — à la question des îles Cook. La Nouvelle-Zélande, naguère puissance administrante, a toujours eu une position d'avant-garde en matière coloniale. Ce qu'elle a fait dans le domaine de la décolonisation est digne d'éloges. La Nouvelle-Zélande a été la seule puissance administrante à voter la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, qui contient la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. C'est aussi à l'honneur du Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande d'avoir toujours cherché à édifier des sociétés multiraciales d'où soient bannies la discrimination raciale et les différends fondés sur les caractères ethniques. Un autre exemple de la politique progressive du Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande est l'accession des îles Cook à l'autonomie complète.

135. La délégation de la Nouvelle-Zélande a coopéré avec le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et avec l'Assemblée générale et a invité les Nations Unies à observer le déroulement des élections aux îles Cook ainsi que les débats de l'Assemblée législative issue de ces élections.

136. A cet égard, ma délégation tient à rendre un hommage bien mérité à M. Azeel qui, en tant que représentant des Nations Unies aux îles Cook, s'est acquitté avec compétence et impartialité d'une tâche difficile et lourde de responsabilités.

137. L'évolution de la situation aux îles Cook et le fait que leur indépendance ait été acquise dans l'esprit de l'Article 73 de la Charte, nous donne espoir que les populations de ce territoire ont choisi et choisiront toujours leur destinée en toute liberté, sans intervention extérieure.

138. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et ses sous-comités ont fait œuvre de pionniers en allant jusque dans les plus petites îles étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration. Les conclusions et les recommandations présentées par le Comité spécial ont une grande importance, car les puissances administrantes pourront s'en inspirer dans l'accomplissement des devoirs qui leur incombent pour appliquer la Déclaration. Il est regrettable toutefois que certaines puissances administrantes n'aient pas donné l'entière coopération que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et les Nations Unies attendaient d'elles en tant qu'Etats Membres.

139. La preuve indubitable a été faite — et ceci est apparu clairement dans le cas des îles Cook — que des missions itinérantes des Nations Unies peuvent être d'un grand secours aux peuples de ces territoires et aux puissances administrantes en les aidant à atteindre les objectifs fixés dans la résolution 1514 (XV). Il faut donc espérer que les autres puissances administrantes donneront à toutes les missions que le Comité spécial et l'Assemblée générale jugeraient utile et nécessaire d'envoyer sur place, toutes les facilités voulues pour accomplir leur tâche. On a prétendu que l'envoi de ces missions des Nations Unies dans les territoires non autonomes équivaldrait à une ingérence dans les affaires intérieures de la puissance administrante. Cette thèse a été rejetée par l'Assemblée générale. Qui plus est, les Nations Unies ont certains devoirs envers les peuples non autonomes, et les puissances administrantes ont l'obligation de coopérer avec les Nations Unies de toutes les manières possibles.

140. A propos des travaux du Comité spécial, ma délégation voudrait mentionner l'œuvre importante accomplie par ce Comité au cours du voyage qu'il a fait en Afrique, en mai et juin 1965, pour répondre à l'invitation des Gouvernements d'Ethiopie, de la République-Unie de Tanzanie et de la Zambie. Ce voyage a permis aux Nations Unies de reprendre contact directement avec des peuples d'Afrique sous administration coloniale et de mieux connaître leur condition actuelle et leurs aspirations. L'œuvre accomplie par le Comité spécial en Afrique aura montré plus clairement combien les Nations Unies s'intéressent au sort des peuples dépendants et aura permis d'accélérer pour de nombreux pays le passage de la sujétion à la liberté.

141. L'Inde a toujours été à l'avant-garde de la lutte contre le colonialisme, à la fois aux Nations Unies et ailleurs. Si nous nous reportons à 1945 et si nous regardons autour de nous, nous constatons les succès étonnants obtenus dans cette lutte contre le colonialisme et l'impérialisme. Mais notre Organisation ne peut s'endormir sur ses lauriers. Beaucoup a été fait, mais il reste beaucoup plus à faire en Angola, au Mozambique, dans le Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie, à Aden et dans bien d'autres territoires qui ne sont pas encore indépendants.

142. L'Inde est passionnément vouée à la noble tâche qui consiste à extirper radicalement le colonialisme et le racisme. Tant que colonialisme et racisme existeront, il ne pourra pas y avoir de paix véritable, de progrès véritable ni de compréhension véritable entre les peuples. L'Inde donnera toujours son appui total à tous les peuples en lutte pour leur liberté et leur indépendance.

143. Je n'ai pas essayé de traiter en détail toutes les questions que font apparaître les rapports du Comité spécial, car ma délégation a déjà eu l'occasion d'exprimer ses vues à la fois au Comité des Vingt-Quatre et à la Quatrième Commission. Elle se réserve le droit d'intervenir au cours du débat quand le projet de résolution portant sur ce point viendra en discussion.

144. M. BUSNIAK (Tchécoslovaquie) [traduit du russe]: Comme plusieurs délégations qui sont intervenues avant nous l'ont déjà souligné, cinq ans ont passé depuis que l'ONU a adopté la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce faisant, notre Organisation a apporté son appui à la lutte des peuples coloniaux qui combattent pour l'indépendance et en a élargi la portée. Du même coup, elle a souligné la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

145. A l'époque où la Déclaration a été adoptée, des transformations révolutionnaires s'étaient opérées dans le monde à la suite de la seconde guerre mondiale et la désagrégation du système colonial était déjà fort avancée. En adoptant la Déclaration et en y soulignant la nécessité d'éliminer rapidement le système colonial, notre Organisation a montré avec une insistance particulière qu'il s'agissait là d'un aspect capital de ce processus révolutionnaire. Ce document mémorable a été un grand appui moral et un grand encouragement moral pour les peuples coloniaux qui luttent pour conquérir leur indépendance.

146. C'est bien cette lutte des peuples opprimés, activement soutenue par toutes les forces de progrès, qui a conduit le système colonial à son stade actuel de désagrégation. Depuis qu'a été adoptée la Déclaration, la Tchécoslovaquie, Etat socialiste qui ignore, interdit et condamne toute forme d'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme, a fait plus que manifester son entière compréhension et son entière sympathie au mouvement de libération des territoires coloniaux: elle a apporté à ce mouvement, dans la mesure de ses moyens, toute l'aide possible.

147. On ne peut nier que le colonialisme, au cours des cinq dernières années, s'est vu contraint de reculer et d'abandonner ses anciennes positions. Néanmoins, nous continuons à nous heurter à une triste réalité: le colonialisme, sous ses formes les plus brutales qui plus est, subsiste sur une superficie d'environ 6 millions de kilomètres carrés où vit une population de plus de 40 millions d'habitants. Ce fait est d'autant plus tragique qu'il nous faut le constater 20 ans après la création de notre Organisation qui a pour tâche essentielle de favoriser le progrès de la coopération pacifique internationale sur la base de l'égalité de tous les peuples.

148. Il pourrait sembler à première vue qu'il ne subsiste que quelques colonies. De quoi devons-nous alors nous inquiéter? De ce que le colonialisme existe encore, qu'il est encore là, dans ses formes brutales, violant impudemment les droits de l'homme les plus élémentaires. Les bastions que conserve le colonialisme font dangereusement obstacle à l'établissement de régimes stables dans d'immenses territoires, surtout en Afrique, mais aussi en Asie et en Amérique latine. Ils sont une grave menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et ils ne peuvent que susciter les appréhensions de tous les peuples épris de paix. Tout cela met en lumière l'urgence d'une décolonisation complète et rapide. Que l'on manque à cette tâche, et les objectifs fondamentaux de la Charte des Nations Unies, de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme resteront lettre morte.

149. Les colonialistes ne reculent devant aucun crime. C'est ce que montrent à l'évidence des faits comme l'assassinat en 1960 du grand patriote congolais et africain, Patrice Lumumba, ou la création en Afrique d'un nouvel Etat raciste sur le territoire de la Rhodésie du Sud. C'est tout simplement tourner en dérision les principes de la Déclaration, au moment où l'on s'apprête à en célébrer le cinquième anniversaire, que de créer un deuxième Etat raciste sur le sol africain. Il est parfaitement clair, comme on l'a déjà souligné ici, que les Etats impérialistes et coloniaux sont en train de mettre sur pied en Afrique australe une coalition groupant la Rhodésie du Sud, la République sud-africaine et les colonies portugaises, dans le dessein, non seulement d'implanter le colonialisme et le racisme dans cette partie de l'Afrique et de les y renforcer, mais aussi de créer une place forte d'où ils opéreront contre les Etats indépendants d'Afrique. En fin de compte, ce n'est pas à une tentative isolée que nous avons affaire, mais à une vaste contre-offensive de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme dans différentes régions du monde.

150. Là où les impérialistes et les colonialistes ne disposent pas d'autres moyens, ils n'hésitent pas à recourir à la violence, sous ses formes les plus brutales, et aux guerres coloniales. Hélas, les exemples ne manquent pas!

151. Les colonialistes britanniques conduisent des guerres coloniales à Aden et en Oman, les colonialistes portugais mènent de cruelles guerres coloniales en Angola, au Mozambique et dans la Guinée dite portugaise. Les Etats-Unis n'hésitent pas à utiliser le territoire colonial de Guam pour effectuer des raids barbares contre le Viet-Nam.

152. Les impérialistes et les colonialistes n'hésitent même pas à intervenir dans les affaires intérieures des Etats indépendants, comme on a pu le voir au Congo, dans la République Dominicaine, à Cuba et ailleurs.

153. On entend souvent dire, et cette opinion a été exprimée au cours de la présente session, que l'existence de bases militaires est un problème que les peuples des pays coloniaux ne doivent résoudre qu'après leur accession à l'indépendance. Nous ne pouvons accepter ce point de vue et nous le rejetons avec force. L'exemple de la base américaine de Guantanamo, à Cuba, montre clairement que même un Etat indépendant peut se voir imposer, contre son gré, la présence d'une base militaire étrangère sur son territoire souverain. Et ce n'est pas là un exemple isolé. Les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux, outre qu'elles sont l'instrument redoutable dont se sert le colonialisme pour s'y maintenir et s'y renforcer, sont une menace pour la paix et la sécurité internationales. C'est donc aussi sous cet angle que notre Organisation doit envisager la question de l'existence de ces bases, et elle doit exiger une fois de plus leur suppression immédiate.

154. On entend souvent les colonialistes et leurs amis dire que les puissances coloniales sont obligées de recourir à la violence armée dans les colonies, parce qu'elles y sont forcées par les "rebelles" et les "complotteurs" qui perturbent l'ordre public. Il est inutile de démontrer la faiblesse de cet argument. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance prévoit un processus de décolonisation pacifique réalisant le droit des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Elle demande aux puissances coloniales d'octroyer volontairement et le plus rapidement possible l'indépendance complète aux pays et aux peuples encore dépendants. Mais que doivent faire les peuples coloniaux dans les cas fréquents où les puissances coloniales refusent obstinément de s'acquitter de leurs obligations et s'opposent par tous les moyens à l'accession à l'indépendance? Dans ce cas, forts de leur droit de légitime défense, de leur droit de résister à l'agression coloniale, ces peuples ont le droit absolu de recourir à toutes les formes de lutte pour leur libération, y compris à la lutte armée. Le devoir sacré des Membres des Nations Unies et de l'Organisation elle-même est d'apporter un appui total à leur juste combat pour la libération nationale.

155. Il ressort du présent débat que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'est pas appliquée de manière satisfaisante. Quelles en sont les raisons?

156. Cinq années d'expérience ont clairement montré que, si la Déclaration n'est pas appliquée de manière satisfaisante, cela ne tient nullement au fait que les peuples des territoires en cause ne seraient pas "prêts" pour l'indépendance ou qu'ils seraient "indifférents" à l'exercice du droit à l'autodétermination, comme voudraient le faire croire les colonialistes et leurs alliés. Ces arguments, et autres raisonnements analogues, ne sont qu'un paravent bien transparent derrière lequel se dissimule la politique colonialiste, un paravent qui ne trompe plus personne aujourd'hui.

157. Ce que les cinq dernières années ont montré de manière irréfutable, bien que ce fut là un fait connu avant l'adoption de la Déclaration, c'est que le principal obstacle qui empêche de mener la décolonisation à son terme — donc la principale raison pour laquelle la Déclaration de 1960 n'a pu être appliquée de manière satisfaisante — consiste dans les intérêts politiques, économiques et financiers d'Etats impérialistes comme les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, le Royaume-Uni, la République fédérale d'Allemagne et d'autres encore, ainsi que dans ceux des monopoles internationaux qui exploitent les richesses des territoires coloniaux. Il suffit de citer quelques noms: la Consolidated Diamond Mines of South West Africa et la Tsumeb Corporation au Sud-Ouest africain; l'Angola Diamond Company, la Mozambique Gulf Oil et la Mozambique Pan American Oil en Angola et au Mozambique; la British Petroleum en Oman et la Pan American Hadraman Oil Company en Oman et à Aden; la Demeraza Bauxite Company, filiale de l'Aluminium Ltd., en Guyane britannique; la Barns Philip et l'Australia New Guinea Corporation Ltd., en Nouvelle-Guinée, etc. Ce qui explique les énormes bénéfices de ces monopoles, c'est justement le système colonial qui leur octroie la prérogative de pouvoir piller les richesses naturelles et la discrimination raciale qui leur donne la possibilité d'exploiter cruellement la main-d'œuvre locale affectée aux travaux les plus pénibles pour les salaires les plus bas. En outre, ces bénéfices fabuleux ne sont possibles qu'avec un régime foncier qui permet aux planteurs européens d'accaparer les terres les plus fertiles et les plus vastes.

158. Ce système d'exploitation économique des colonies fonctionne avec l'appui total de l'alliance militaire et politique de l'OTAN. A l'ONU et ailleurs, bien des faits ont été cités qui prouvent que le Portugal ne pourrait mener une guerre aussi longue et coûteuse dans ses colonies d'Afrique s'il ne continuait de bénéficier de l'aide économique, financière et militaire des Etats impérialistes — Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Royaume-Uni, République fédérale d'Allemagne, etc. — en d'autres termes des Etats de l'OTAN. Sans cette aide, la République sud-africaine ne pourrait appliquer sa politique d'apartheid et de terreur effrénée à l'égard de la population africaine de ce pays et du Sud-Ouest africain. Sans cette aide, un deuxième Etat raciste, la Rhodésie du Sud, n'aurait jamais pu voir le jour sur le sol africain.

159. Comme l'a souligné la déclaration finale de la Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés tenue au Caire en octobre 1964:

"L'impérialisme, le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme sont des causes essentielles de la tension et des conflits internationaux parce qu'ils compromettent la paix et la sécurité mondiales 5/."

160. La République socialiste tchécoslovaque approuve sans réserve ce jugement porté par la Conférence du Caire. Quant à l'attitude de la Tchécoslovaquie à l'égard du colonialisme, c'est un fait bien connu que la République socialiste tchécoslovaque condamne l'existence du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations et que, aux côtés de toutes les forces anticolonialistes, elle ne ménage ni ne ménagera aucun effort pour déjouer la provocation colonialiste et éliminer le plus rapidement possible les vestiges du honteux système colonial.

161. La délégation tchécoslovaque partage sans réserve les vues exprimées au cours du présent débat par plusieurs délégations qui ont déclaré nécessaire, étant donné qu'il s'agit de prendre des mesures propres à éliminer aussi rapidement que possible les vestiges du colonialisme, que l'Organisation des Nations Unies ait recours à des moyens plus énergiques parmi ceux dont elle dispose. Si l'on tardait à le faire, on aboutirait fatalement à des situations dont les néo-colonialistes et tous ceux qui les aident à reculer le moment où il sera définitivement mis fin au honteux système colonial porteraient l'entière responsabilité.

162. S'agissant de l'activité du Comité spécial des Nations Unies chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, la délégation tchécoslovaque estime que ce Comité, malgré les difficultés d'ordre interne et externe qu'il a dû surmonter et qui ont nui à son efficacité, a fait œuvre utile. Incontestablement, le principal obstacle tient au fait que les colonialistes continuent de s'opposer à toute coopération effective avec ce Comité.

163. Ce que nous apprécions dans l'activité du Comité, ce sont notamment les séances qu'il a tenues en Afrique et qui ont donné une nouvelle impulsion à ses travaux. A notre avis, le Comité devrait à l'avenir tenir d'autres séances dans des régions proches des territoires dont il a à s'occuper.

164. Nous estimons également que le Comité doit à l'avenir demander plus instamment à l'Assemblée générale et au Conseil de sécurité qu'ils aient recours, pour hâter la liquidation du système colonial, aux moyens et aux mesures les plus énergiques dont dispose notre Organisation.

165. Notre Organisation doit prendre des mesures propres à assurer l'application immédiate et inconditionnelle de la Déclaration de 1960.

166. L'Assemblée générale doit réaffirmer le droit des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance sans égard à l'importance de la population et au niveau de développement et, ce faisant, la population de chaque territoire doit être assurée de pouvoir choisir en toute liberté son propre avenir, cette liberté s'exerçant en dehors de toute discrimination nationale et raciale et de toute pression extérieure.

167. L'Assemblée générale doit exiger qu'il soit immédiatement mis fin à toutes les mesures de répression et à toutes les opérations militaires dirigées contre les peuples qui luttent pour la liberté; en même temps, elle doit exiger la suppression de toutes les bases étrangères, ainsi que le retrait de toutes les troupes coloniales et de tout le personnel militaire étranger. Tout en condamnant l'activité des monopoles internationaux, il faut exiger l'abrogation des accords et concessions qui limitent, directement ou indirectement, la souveraineté des futurs Etats indépendants. Les mesures adoptées doivent comprendre notamment l'interdiction de toute aide aux colonialistes, en particulier de l'aide militaire fournie directement ou par l'intermédiaire de blocs militaires. L'Assemblée générale doit inviter les Etats Membres à aider par tous les moyens les peuples des territoires non autonomes dans leur lutte pour la conquête de la liberté et de l'indépendance.

168. Nous estimons également qu'il convient de rappeler avec force l'obligation qui incombe aux puissances administrantes et à l'Organisation des Nations

Unies de diffuser plus largement les renseignements relatifs à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et à l'activité du Comité des Vingt-Quatre.

169. Dans un esprit d'entière solidarité avec les peuples coloniaux, la délégation tchécoslovaque appuiera toutes mesures qui permettront à notre Organisation de franchir la dernière étape et d'achever sans retard le processus de décolonisation, afin de donner à tous les peuples la possibilité de jouir pleinement de la liberté et d'exercer pleinement leur souveraineté sur leur territoire et afin d'écarter définitivement, une fois pour toutes, la menace que l'existence du colonialisme représente pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

170. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Il n'y a plus d'orateurs inscrits pour cet après-midi. J'ai reçu deux demandes de membres de l'Assemblée qui désirent exercer leur droit de réponse. Je donne d'abord la parole au représentant de la République argentine.

171. M. JIMENEZ MELO (Argentine) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Au cours de son intervention de cet après-midi au sujet des îles Malouines, le représentant du Royaume-Uni est revenu une fois de plus sur les arguments connus qui ne facilitent pas l'ouverture, entre mon pays et le sien, des négociations bilatérales que le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre et la Quatrième Commission ont recommandées dans le projet de résolution approuvé ces jours derniers [A/6160, par. 50, projet de résolution I], en vue de résoudre le problème de la souveraineté des îles Malouines par les moyens pacifiques que spécifie la Charte des Nations Unies.

172. Ma délégation le répète: elle ne saurait accepter que l'on invoque l'autodétermination dans le cas des 2 000 Anglais qui habitent les îles Malouines, pour avaliser le coup de force qui a expulsé la population argentine aborigène et qui, à la fois, fait obstacle à la décolonisation de ce territoire, décolonisation qu'impose la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et que régit le paragraphe 6 du dispositif de cette résolution.

173. Comme nous l'avons démontré à diverses reprises, la question de la population des îles Malouines revêt des caractères différents de ceux que présentent les problèmes de même nature, propres aux territoires où il existe une population autochtone possédant le droit inaliénable à la libre détermination.

174. Enfin, il y a lieu de rappeler ce que ma délégation a maintes fois exprimé, à savoir que mon pays est disposé à tenir compte tout spécialement des intérêts des habitants des îles Malouines dans les négociations qu'il espère pouvoir engager et poursuivre avec le Royaume-Uni et auxquelles il s'apprête dans le plus large esprit de conciliation.

175. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Espagne qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

176. M. DE PINIES (Espagne) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Sans préjudice de la réponse que nous ferons, quand nous aurons pris connaissance du texte exact, à une allusion qui concerne très directement mon pays — je parle de la question de Gibraltar, évoquée par le représentant du Royaume-Uni, et à cet égard, je réserve les droits de ma délégation — je voudrais dès à présent répondre à l'appel que le représentant de Tanzanie adressait à mon gouvernement.

177. Que ce représentant n'ait pas la moindre inquiétude. Le 26 novembre de cette année, le communiqué suivant a été publié:

"Le Ministère espagnol des affaires étrangères a démenti une nouvelle diffusée par plusieurs agences et organes d'information de l'étranger, d'après laquelle une entreprise espagnole aurait acheté 20 000 tonnes d'acier provenant de Rhodésie. Le Ministère a ajouté qu'aucune transaction de cet ordre n'a été effectuée, bien qu'avant la déclaration d'indépendance de la Rhodésie, des négociations auraient pu avoir lieu entre des sociétés espagnoles et des sociétés de Rhodésie en vue d'arriver à un accord de ce genre. Le Gouvernement espagnol n'a accordé aucune licence d'importation pour une opération de ce genre."

La séance est levée à 17 h 55.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

1. Le PRESIDENT: La liste des orateurs est maintenant close. Vingt-sept orateurs sont inscrits pour prendre part à la discussion. Je propose de tenir une séance plénière lundi 6 décembre 1965 pour terminer la discussion générale de cette question. J'espère que le projet de résolution de caractère général que plusieurs représentants, à ce que je crois savoir, sont en train de mettre au point sera distribué prochainement et pourra être examiné lundi.

2. M. ALJUBOURI (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: Lorsque la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux fut adoptée il y a près de cinq ans, le 14 décembre 1960, elle avait pour but de mettre fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. La Déclaration affirmait que la domination coloniale était contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et aux droits fondamentaux de l'homme et qu'elle constituait un obstacle sérieux à la coopération et à la fraternité internationales.

3. Un an plus tard, le 27 novembre 1961, pour tenir compte des observations de trente-huit Etats d'Asie et d'Afrique, selon lesquelles, sauf quelques exceptions, les dispositions de la Déclaration n'avaient pas été pleinement appliquées, l'Assemblée générale créa un Comité spécial de 17 membres, chargé d'étudier les progrès réalisés dans la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration et de faire les recommandations nécessaires à ce sujet.

4. A sa dix-septième session, l'Assemblée générale a décidé [résolution 1810 (XVII)] de porter à vingt-quatre le nombre des membres du Comité spécial et elle a invité le Comité ainsi remanié: 1) à continuer de rechercher les voies et moyens les mieux appropriés en vue de l'application rapide et intégrale de la Déclaration à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance; 2) à proposer des mesures concrètes en vue de l'application intégrale de la Déclaration; 3) à présenter un rapport contenant ses suggestions et ses recommandations sur l'ensemble des territoires mentionnés au paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration; 4) à informer le Conseil de sécurité de tous faits survenus dans ces territoires qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales.

5. Le mandat du Comité spécial a été encore élargi quand l'Assemblée a décidé [résolution 1970 (XVIII)] de dissoudre le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes et de transférer ses fonctions au Comité spécial, ce dernier devenant ainsi le seul organe des Nations Unies chargé de traiter les problèmes coloniaux.

6. Cinq ans se sont maintenant écoulés depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et nous constatons cependant que beaucoup de territoires sont encore soumis à la domination coloniale. Le colonialisme, bien qu'il recule dans certaines régions par suite des efforts résolus et de la lutte constante des peuples assujettis, résiste encore obstinément pour conserver ses privilèges et ses avantages dans d'autres régions du monde, bafouant ainsi la Charte des Nations Unies, méprisant les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité et méconnaissant les recommandations du Comité spécial.

7. L'Assemblée générale a souvent demandé aux puissances administrantes de hâter le processus de la décolonisation et de coopérer pleinement avec le Comité spécial pour l'accomplissement des missions qui lui étaient confiées. Quelques-unes des puissances coloniales n'ont pas toujours fait preuve vis-à-vis du Comité de bonne volonté ni d'esprit de coopération. En fait, à maintes occasions, les puissances administrantes ont refusé, non seulement d'appliquer les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Comité spécial concernant les territoires placés sous leur administration, mais aussi d'autoriser des missions itinérantes à recueillir sur place les renseignements nécessaires et à interroger des éléments représentatifs de la population du pays qui faisait l'objet de l'enquête. A ce sujet, il faut rappeler que le Comité spécial avait été autorisé, pour s'acquitter pleinement de ses missions, à se réunir en tout autre lieu que le Siège de l'Organisation "lorsque cela pourrait lui être nécessaire pour lui permettre de s'acquitter efficacement de ses fonctions, en consultation avec les autorités compétentes" [résolution 1654 (XVI)].

8. L'utilité de ces missions itinérantes a été nettement démontrée quand le Comité spécial a tenu environ 38 séances en Afrique en mai et juin 1965. Pendant qu'il était sur le continent africain, le Comité a pu entendre les habitants de beaucoup de territoires coloniaux ayant présenté des pétitions (Angola, Mozambique, Guinée portugaise, Rhodésie du Sud et les trois territoires de la Haute Commission), donnant ainsi un soutien moral et une raison d'espérer aux nombreux peuples qui souffrent encore sous domination étrangère. Se trouvant à proximité immédiate des territoires coloniaux, le Comité a pu se faire une idée plus précise des souffrances des peuples assujettis et apprécier par lui-même l'ampleur des problèmes qui se posent. Le Comité peut estimer nécessaire de tenir à nouveau l'année prochaine quelques réunions hors du siège de l'Organisation. Ma délégation approuve toutes les mesures qui seraient prises dans ce but. Elle tient aussi à renouveler les appels qu'elle a déjà lancés aux puissances administrantes pour que celles-ci autorisent des missions itinérantes à visiter les territoires placés sous leur administration et pour qu'elles leur accordent l'aide et la coopération nécessaires à l'accomplissement de leur tâche. Ma délégation est persuadée qu'en coopérant avec le Comité spécial, les puissances administrantes en tireront en fait un bénéfice pour elles-mêmes parce que le Comité jouit de la confiance des peuples coloniaux et qu'il peut par conséquent rendre des services inestimables en aidant à atteindre les objectifs fixés par la Déclaration d'une manière pacifique et ordonnée.

9. La lenteur du processus de la décolonisation ne doit pas faire mésestimer l'œuvre du Comité ni l'aide qu'il a apportée à beaucoup de peuples coloniaux. Bien que le mérite d'avoir obtenu l'indépendance revienne en premier lieu à la volonté des peuples assujettis, à leur lutte et à leur sacrifice, le Comité peut prétendre avoir pris une petite part à l'émancipation de certains territoires. Les Etats indépendants de la Zambie, du Malawi et du Kenya, par exemple, sont des pays auxquels le Comité a consacré son attention et a accordé son soutien moral. Le cas des îles Cook illustre bien le genre d'assistance que l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et plus particulièrement le Comité spécial, peuvent donner dans ce domaine.

10. Il reste néanmoins beaucoup de régions où le colonialisme continue à se cramponner obstinément aux territoires placés sous son administration, en défiant toutes les normes admises de décence et de moralité. Nous ne pouvons pas ne pas citer les cas de la Rhodésie du Sud, des territoires portugais, du Sud-Ouest africain, de l'Arabie du Sud et d'Oman. Il y a aussi beaucoup de petits territoires où la solution des problèmes coloniaux exigera toute l'habileté et toute l'imagination du Comité spécial. Le rôle que celui-ci peut jouer pour conduire tous ces territoires vers l'indépendance et la liberté ne saurait être trop mis en valeur.

11. A ce sujet, ma délégation tient à souligner que les puissances coloniales ont le devoir, à la fois moral et juridique, de coopérer totalement avec lui pour trouver des solutions pacifiques aux problèmes qui subsistent. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance. Elle spécifie que "le manque de préparation l'insuffisance d'instruction et l'absence d'une économie viable ne peuvent faire obstacle à l'indépendance. Elle spécifie que "le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance" [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Le Comité spécial peut donc jouer un rôle très important, en coopération avec les autres organes des Nations Unies, et contribuer ainsi à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

12. C'est pour ces raisons que nous croyons fermement qu'il faut maintenir en fonctions le Comité spécial pour qu'il puisse achever de remplir les nobles missions qui lui sont confiées. En outre, il doit pouvoir tenir autant de séances qu'il est nécessaire à proximité des territoires coloniaux (puisque'il lui est souvent impossible de siéger à l'intérieur même de ces territoires) pour qu'il ait la possibilité de s'acquitter de ses tâches aussi complètement et aussi objectivement que possible.

13. M. MALICK FALL (Sénégal): La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, dont le texte constitue la fameuse résolution 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960, tend, si l'on n'y prend garde, à devenir une pièce de musée que tout le monde admire, mais que chacun évite avec soin de consacrer par un acte de foi digne des responsables que nous sommes. Je suis même enclin à me demander si des délégations comme celles du Portugal ou de l'Afrique du Sud, par exemple, ont jamais pénétré le sens profond du préambule et du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV). Sinon, comment comprendre que nous en soyons, aujourd'hui encore, à redéfinir la tâche normalement dévolue aux puissances coloniales? Comment comprendre qu'il faille, cinq ans après la Déclaration, gaspiller un temps précieux à élaborer, à défendre, à adopter des résolutions qui, toutes sans exception, se heurtent à la cécité morale d'Etats dont le cheval de bataille est précisément de brandir le panache de la civilisation chrétienne? On demeure confondu devant ce qui se passe sous nos yeux d'atrocités, de barbarie, quand on songe à la portée des idées contenues dans la Déclaration.

14. Je voudrais profiter de l'occasion pour citer quelques paragraphes de cette déclaration dont tout le monde parle mais que personne ne suit avec l'attention désirée:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales (par. 1).

"Tous les peuples ont le droit de libre détermination; en vertu de ce droit, ils déterminent librement leur statut politique et poursuivent librement leur développement économique, social et culturel (par. 2).

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète, et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée (par. 4).

"Tous les Etats doivent observer fidèlement et strictement les dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies, de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et de la présente Déclaration sur la base de l'égalité, de la non-ingérence dans les affaires intérieures des Etats et du respect des droits souverains et de l'intégrité territoriale de tous les peuples (par. 7)."

15. Se peut-il dès lors qu'il y ait une nation, une seule, qui ose se lever ici et bafouer ce monument qui rend digne et respectable notre Organisation? Se peut-il qu'il y ait une délégation, une seule, qui ne ne fasse — officiellement du moins — sienne cette déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux? Apparemment non. Même les puissances administrantes qui ne l'ont pas votée reconnaissent que la Déclaration correspond à l'idéal que nous poursuivons tous ici. Et pourtant, des foyers de tension se sont embrasés de par le monde. Et pourtant, sept puissances, Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, subjuguent encore une soixantaine de territoires dont le droit à l'autodétermination est plus ou moins contesté, l'indépendance plus ou moins reportée sine die, si elle n'est purement et simplement refusée.

16. Mais si les barrières n'étaient que juridiques, si elles n'étaient que formelles, nous en serions à présent à des querelles d'opportunité. Hélas, le sang coule un peu partout; les affrontements ont atteint des proportions catastrophiques; de véritables guerres se nouent et se propagent; des populations entières sont réduites à l'esclavage. L'Afrique, mon continent, supporte actuellement l'un des plus lourds tributs qu'on ait payé à la liberté.

17. Voici la Rhodésie du Sud, qui vient de basculer dans le giron des racistes, et ce malgré nos cris d'alarme, malgré nos démarches, malgré l'action concertée de tous les Etats africains. Si l'on nous avait suivis, nous n'en serions pas là. Quatre millions de Noirs ne seraient pas la pâture de 200 000 surexcités, minés par des théories historiquement condamnées il y a seulement 20 ans. Nous l'avions dit: ce ne sont pas des sanctions économiques, par nature inapplicables, qui amèneront Ian Smith et ses acolytes à résipiscence. Des brutes de cette espèce ne font pas volontiers le voyage à Canossa. Et c'est pourquoi l'Organisation de l'unité africaine se réunira demain à Addis-Abéba. Elle tirera, elle, des faits leurs conséquences extrêmes.

18. Mais voici le Portugal, fidèle à lui-même, louchant à contre-courant des événements, à contre-courant de l'histoire. Il voit partout des provinces d'outre-mer; il s'empêtre dans ses cauchemars, dans ses idées médiévales; il crie famine; il crôle sous le poids de la misère intérieure. Le Portugal, Messieurs, se désagrège. Et pourtant, le Portugal rêve encore, rêve à de blanches caravelles, à de l'or partout, rêve à des épices, rêve au bois d'ébène. Si encore il se confinait dans ses anachronismes, nous aurions pitié, sans plus. Mais, et vous le savez, ce pays sous-développé — je ne dis pas: en voie de développement — ce Portugal, donc, s'est mis dans la tête de conserver, contre toute raison, un immense empire colonial dont il compte bien tirer de quoi nourrir sa population misérable. Ne disposant ni de cadres techniques, ni de moyens financiers, ni même d'imagination, il a bradé les territoires aux grandes sociétés industrielles et commerciales, se contentant de rentes viagères et, à l'occasion, de défolements répressifs et sanglants.

19. C'est ici le lieu de noter qu'à lui seul le régime de Salazar ne tiendrait pas un jour de plus en Afrique. Tout le monde en convient. Mais quelles sont donc les éminences grises qui donnent et l'armement et l'équipement, et les subsides? De quelle nationalité sont-ils, les pilotes qui entraînent la soldatesque portugaise? De quelles origines les fusils, les mitrailleuses, les bazookas, les canons, les munitions? Il faudra bien une réponse plus satisfaisante que les dérobades dont on nous rebat les oreilles. Le Portugal a des alliés, directs ou indirects, en Guinée, en Angola, au Mozambique, aux îles du Cap-Vert.

20. Mon propre pays, dont le pacifisme est connu, n'a pas été épargné par la furie meurtrière des bandes portugaises aux abois. Le 7 mai 1965, notre représentant permanent a déclaré, dans une lettre adressée au Président du Conseil de sécurité^{1/}, que les autorités portugaises avaient à diverses reprises violé l'espace aérien et le territoire sénégalais, que ces violations allaient se multipliant et que des villages sénégalais et des récoltes avaient été incendiés. Depuis l'adoption de la résolution du Conseil de sécurité concernant la plainte du Sénégal — résolution [178 (1963)] datée du 24 avril 1963 — le Gouvernement sénégalais avait eu à déplorer 13 violations de son territoire, dont certaines avaient été portées à l'attention du Conseil de sécurité en 1965. Devant les actes des autorités portugaises, le Sénégal demandait que le Conseil de sécurité soit convoqué pour inviter à nouveau le Portugal à mettre un terme aux violations du territoire national sénégalais.

21. Comme on le sait, le Conseil a examiné la question au cours de cinq séances échelonnées entre le 12 et le 19 mai 1965. On se souviendra qu'ouvrant le débat, le représentant du Sénégal a déclaré devant le Conseil [1205ème séance] qu'au cours des deux années écoulées depuis le bombardement d'un village sénégalais par quatre avions portugais, il y avait eu 16 violations de l'espace aérien et du territoire sénégalais par les autorités portugaises. Ces 16 nouvelles violations avaient été perpétrées malgré la résolution du 24 avril 1963 du Conseil de sécurité, où le Conseil déplorait les incursions des forces militaires portugaises en territoire sénégalais, ainsi que l'incident survenu au village de Bouniak. C'est ainsi que des soldats portugais, des unités portugaises, avaient franchi la frontière sénégalaise sept fois, tiré des coups de feu sur deux villages près de la frontière, et attaqué ou envahi deux autres villages. A cinq reprises, les avions portugais avaient survolé des villages sénégalais. On avait trouvé sur les lieux où ces incidents étaient survenus des balles, des cartouches, des bombes lacrymogènes et des grenades à main.

^{1/} Voir Documents officiels du Conseil de sécurité, vingtième année, Supplément d'avril, mai et juin 1965, document S/6338.

Le représentant du Sénégal a également déclaré qu'en plus de ces pièces à conviction, le Gouvernement sénégalais pouvait étayer ses allégations par d'autres griefs: entrepôts de céréales et cases incendies; deux soldats et un agent de renseignements portugais avaient été arrêtés.

22. Lorsque le Sénégal s'est plaint au Conseil de sécurité, en février 1965; le Portugal n'a pas contesté les faits relatifs aux incidents allégués, mais il a cherché à justifier les violations perpétrées. Le Sénégal demandait au Conseil de sécurité de condamner le Portugal pour la série de nouvelles violations du territoire national et de l'inviter immédiatement à respecter scrupuleusement la souveraineté du Sénégal ainsi que l'intégrité de son territoire et de son espace aérien. On sait que le Portugal, malgré les preuves matérielles administrées, s'est contenté de tout réfuter, prétendant même qu'il désirait entretenir avec mon pays des relations amicales. Nous constatons qu'il souhaitait une table ronde avec la participation de nos autorités. Le Portugal, en même temps, accusait le Sénégal de servir de base aux troupes nationalistes guinéennes. Je laisse l'Assemblée juge de tant d'ambiguïté, de tant de cynisme, d'un tel manque de bon sens. Comment concevoir, en effet, que le Portugal, qui refuse d'appliquer les résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, qui refuse une table ronde avec les combattants de la Guinée, du Mozambique et de l'Angola, vienne nous proposer à nous, Sénégalais, des négociations pour mettre fin à ses propres provocations? Du reste, la question n'est pas là: elle est ailleurs. Elle est dans la mise en œuvre des résolutions, notamment du Conseil de sécurité: 24 avril 1963 [173 (1963)], 19 mai 1965 [204 (1965)], en ce qui concerne le différend sénégaloportugais.

23. Mais la question est ailleurs en ce qui concerne l'ensemble des autres problèmes. Elle se trouve dans la résolution [218 (1965)] du 23 novembre 1965.

24. Et de nous demander: qu'attend donc Salazar pour mettre un terme à son refus persistant de prendre les mesures nécessaires en vue d'appliquer les recommandations et les décisions que l'on sait? Par exemple, qu'attend-il pour reconnaître immédiatement le droit des peuples administrés par le Portugal à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance? Qu'attend-il pour cesser immédiatement tous actes de répression et pour retirer toutes les forces militaires et autres qu'il emploie actuellement à ces fins? Qu'attend-il pour promulguer une amnistie politique inconditionnelle et pour établir une situation qui permette le fonctionnement des partis politiques? Qu'attend-il pour engager les négociations sur la base de la reconnaissance du droit à l'autodétermination avec les représentants qualifiés des partis politiques existant à l'intérieur ou à l'extérieur du territoire? Mais qu'attend-il donc pour accorder, immédiatement après l'indépendance, à tous les territoires qu'il administre contrairement aux aspirations des populations, la liberté de choix? Qu'attend le Portugal? Simplement d'être bouté hors d'Afrique. Mais qu'il soit assuré qu'il ne perd rien à attendre. Il sera balayé comme fêtu de paille et confiné dans ses limites géographiques naturelles, c'est-à-dire ses limites européennes.

25. Et voici l'Afrique du Sud provisoirement occupée; car, à la dimension de l'histoire, il s'agit d'un fait divers, d'une éclipse malheureuse mais nécessairement éphémère, même si les maîtres de l'heure sont armés jusqu'aux dents, même s'ils nient tout bonnement tout dénominateur commun avec les propriétaires du sol car, pour eux, il n'y a d'hommes que les Blancs, pour eux il n'y a de demi-hommes que les Métis, pour eux il n'y a d'esclaves que les Noirs. Un monde concentrationnaire a surgi dans la partie de notre continent la plus bénie de la nature. Des Hitlériens rescapés des purges européennes y distillent le venin du racisme; des affairistes déshumanisés y amoncellent des fortunes sur l'échine des Noirs. Ici des bêtes de somme, là-bas des dompteurs; ici des esclaves, là-bas des seigneurs; une terre qui se fend, qui prodigue des richesses pour les uns et qui ensevelit ses propres fils.

26. Je voudrais ici me permettre d'ouvrir une parenthèse. "Bien que l'ère du colonialisme soit heureusement presque close, un autre mal, né en partie du colonialisme, subsiste encore aujourd'hui. Peut-être ne fait-il que commencer. C'est le risque de conflits raciaux. Ce risque, nous le voyons apparaître dans de nombreuses parties du monde, en particulier en Afrique du Sud." [1386ème séance, par. 30.] Ainsi parlait hier, à cette même tribune, le représentant du Royaume-Uni. Je voudrais très respectueusement prendre acte d'une telle déclaration. Cependant, il me plaît de dire que les solutions justes sont connues et archiconnues.

27. Etablissez partout, Messieurs, des gouvernements issus de la majorité des populations. Eduquez ces populations et ramenez-les vers l'univers des hommes. Retirez les armes meurtrières que vous avez mises entre des mains irresponsables. Faites comprendre clairement que vous n'appuierez plus jamais les Etats qui ont tourné le dos à nos noirs. Osez avoir recours aux moyens extrêmes pour réduire les bastions du racisme. Croyez vous-mêmes qu'un homme en vaut un autre, quels que soient sa couleur, ses conceptions philosophiques, ses coutumes, son pays. Ne tolérez pas en Afrique, par exemple, ce qui serait banni dans vos propres patries. Que tous, ici ou ailleurs, et voilà qu'un grand pas sera fait vers la réduction des conflits raciaux qui, du reste, se révèlent souvent n'être que les épiphénomènes des contradictions économiques. Rendez à César ce qui appartient à César et rendez l'Afrique à elle-même. Je me permets maintenant de fermer cette parenthèse.

28. Le Comité spécial avait du pain amer sur la planche, quoique je n'aie pas mentionné le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland, le Souaziland ni le Sud-Ouest africain, proies fragiles, points de mire de Pretoria. Je n'ai pas mentionné non plus le Rio Muni, Fernando Poo, Ifni, le Sahara espagnol, Gibraltar, et que sais-je encore? Nous nous sommes arrêtés à l'Afrique.

29. Nous voici loin des généreux principes de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. C'est que, en effet, l'histoire nous enseigne que les puissances coloniales, à quelques exceptions près, n'ont adhéré que du bout des lèvres au grand mouvement d'émancipation qui a secoué et marqué les temps que nous vivons. Peu de puissances coloniales ont décolonisé sous l'empire de la raison. Beaucoup l'ont fait à contrecœur, sous la pression des événements. D'autres même demeurent imperméables à toute idée d'autodétermination ou d'indépendance et, croyons-nous, à la limite d'une question de vie ou de mort pour les moins nanties et les plus frustrés d'entre elles. D'autres, enfin, non seulement pratiquent l'apartheid mais nourrissent des idées aberrantes de tutelle sans fin ou d'annexion pure et simple.

30. Il était bon que les objectifs contre nature, comme ceux que nous venons d'évoquer, fussent stigmatisés, qu'un terme fût mis à leur prolifération, que le droit fût exposé et appliqué. Rien d'autre que cela ne constituait la mission confiée au Comité spécial, lequel disposait, comme première arme, de la persuasion, et, comme ultime recours, de la coercition qu'il avait la possibilité de recommander au Conseil de sécurité, de préférence par l'entremise de l'Assemblée générale.

31. Pour plus de précisions, rappelons que le mandat du Comité spécial a été nettement défini par la résolution 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963, ainsi que par d'autres résolutions pertinentes ultérieurement adoptées. C'est dire que les Etats Membres qui ont fait acte d'indiscipline et de non-coopération méritent, outre les reproches, des sanctions appropriées. Le Comité spécial, entre autres consignes, avait celle d'agir avec célérité et efficacité, en tenant compte du sabotage alors prévisible de certaines puissances coloniales, d'autant plus que de sérieuses inquiétudes se manifestaient dans quelques territoires où la violation de la Charte était évidente, évidente aussi la collusion de certaines forces rétrogrades.

32. Le rapport qui nous est soumis [A/6000/Rev.1] montre que nos mandants se sont acquittés de leur mission avec bonheur et avec honneur. Soixante-quatorze séances de travail ont été tenues en 1965, sans compter toutes les autres réunions des sous-comités. La situation a été examinée dans plusieurs territoires, dont la Rhodésie du Sud, Aden, les territoires sous administration portugaise, le Sud-Ouest africain, le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland, le Souaziland, les îles Cook, la Guyane britannique. Et ce n'est pas tout. D'autres territoires ont été également l'objet d'examen minutieux, surtout en ce qui concerne les incidences des activités d'intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, qui font obstacle à la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution du 14 décembre 1960.

33. Est-ce à dire que tant d'efforts aient abouti à des résultats spectaculaires? Que non pas. Nos délibérations en témoignent, car la décolonisation est une œuvre de longue haleine; comme toutes les maladies, la colonisation vient au galop mais elle s'en va au pas. D'où tant d'espoirs déçus par la mauvaise volonté, la lente progression dans l'évolution constitutionnelle, l'aggravation de la situation en quelques points névralgiques du globe, les contradictions parfois fatales aux mouvements de libération nationale.

34. Retenons, cependant, que nous n'avons pas le droit de dresser ici un procès-verbal de carence; tout au contraire, tout ce qui était humainement possible a été, selon nous, accompli. Ma délégation est particulièrement heureuse de constater que le Comité spécial, après avoir fait tout son devoir, a pris l'initiative louable de dégager l'étape future et de montrer la voie à suivre. Nous ne lui marchanderons pas notre sincère appui. Quant à son vœu de conserver sa composition actuelle, nous devons à la vérité de dire que, sans mettre en cause l'efficacité d'une équipe homogène et expérimentée, nous pensons sincèrement qu'un peu de sang neuf ne nuit généralement pas aux organismes les plus rodés, précisément parce que rodés et prisonniers de leurs habitudes, fussent-elles, comme c'est le cas aujourd'hui, des plus respectables.

35. Après le bref tour d'horizon que je viens de faire, et après avoir parcouru le volumineux et si intéressant rapport du Comité spécial, je me surprends à me demander de quoi demain sera fait. Les nuages continuent de s'accumuler à l'horizon; les rêves d'intégration politico-économiques hantent certains Etats colonisateurs; les libertés élémentaires de la personne humaine demeurent supprimées; les affres de la guerre tourmentent des réfugiés par dizaines de milliers; nos territoires nationaux, nos espaces aériens sont violés, en dépit de nos protestations et de nos accusations; des exécutions sommaires sont perpétrées; les barbelés électrifiés et les bombes au napalm sont apparues sur des terres qui étaient faites pour la réconciliation des hommes.

36. Ma délégation est particulièrement préoccupée par l'avenir des pays encore placés sous domination étrangère; mais elle espère. Elle espère que tôt ou tard nous vivrons ensemble la victoire du bon droit, acquise par les voies pacifiques du dialogue. Ma délégation espère que les puissances administrantes, jalouses de leur indépendance et de leur intégrité territoriale, réaliseront un jour très prochain que, ni l'entêtement aveugle, ni les professions de foi à résonance bassement mercantile, ni la prétendue défense de la civilisation occidentale, ni la politique dit de développement séparé, ne saurait en endiguer la vague d'indépendance qui, fatalement, balayera les derniers vestiges des inégalités, de l'exploitation et du racisme.

37. En tout cas, si les voies et moyens actuellement utilisés s'avéraient inefficaces, qu'il soit entendu que l'Afrique, elle, n'a pas encore épuisé la gamme des ripostes dont elle dispose. L'Afrique n'aura de cesse que le jour où le dernier soldat du colonialisme aura déposé les armes. Ce sera alors, croyez-moi, le triomphe des idéaux au nom desquels nous sommes réunis dans cette enceinte.

38. M. DMITROUK (République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie) [traduit du russe]: Cinq années se sont écoulées depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux par l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies. Aujourd'hui, nous avons plaisir à constater que ce document a joué, et continue de jouer, un rôle très important dans la lutte des forces de paix et de progrès contre les forces de guerre et de la réaction en vue d'assurer la liberté et l'indépendance des pays et des peuples et d'éliminer complètement le colonialisme.

39. Au cours des cinq années qui se sont écoulées, le mouvement de libération nationale a remporté d'énormes succès. Les peuples de 17 pays d'Asie, d'Afrique, d'Amérique latine et d'Océanie se sont libérés du joug colonial et se sont engagés dans la voie du développement indépendant.

40. On a plaisir à noter qu'un grand nombre des pays qui se sont libérés au cours de cette période ont réalisé des progrès considérables dans la voie du développement économique, politique et culturel. Ils ont ainsi accédé à un niveau plus élevé du progrès social. Cela montre bien toute la justesse des idées et des principes proclamés dans la Déclaration; cela montre aussi que le mouvement de libération nationale va s'élargissant et s'approfondissant inexorablement, nous rapprochant de l'effondrement inéluctable du système colonial de l'impérialisme.

41. Mais la conscience de l'humanité ne pourra trouver la paix tant qu'il subsistera une seule colonie, un seul peuple asservi par l'impérialisme. En attendant, les régimes coloniaux continuent de dominer quelque 60 territoires et 40 millions de personnes se trouvent toujours sous le joug colonial.

42. Le maintien de la domination coloniale constitue une violation flagrante de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux qui proclame que tous les pouvoirs doivent être transférés aux populations des colonies afin de leur permettre de jouir pleinement de leur indépendance et de leurs libertés.

43. Cependant, le Royaume-Uni, le Portugal, l'Australie, l'Espagne et les autres puissances coloniales cherchent par tous les moyens à s'opposer à la mise en œuvre des principes de la Déclaration. Considérant leurs colonies comme des sources de matières premières à bon marché, comme des débouchés pour écouler leurs produits, comme des centres d'investissements, comme des points d'appui militaires et stratégiques, ils continuent d'exploiter les populations et à tirer de leur travail d'énormes bénéfices. Les monopoles internationaux, qui bénéficient de l'appui de leurs gouvernements respectifs, sont les principaux coupables du maintien de la domination et de l'asservissement colonial.

44. Les monopoles accordent une importance particulière à leurs possessions d'Afrique australe, c'est-à-dire de République sud-africaine, de Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain, d'Angola, du Mozambique, etc. Ils tirent des bénéfices fabuleux de l'extraction de l'or, du diamant, de l'uranium, du cuivre, du zinc, du plomb, du chrome, du manganèse et d'autres minéraux. Ainsi, les bénéfices nets — après prélèvement des impôts — de l'Anglo-American Corporation of South Africa, société minière anglo-américaine, se sont élevés en 1964 à 13,8 millions de livres sterling contre 11,9 millions en 1963. Les revenus nets de la société diamantifère De Beers Consolidated Mines sont passés de 25 millions de livres sterling en 1963 à 34,8 millions de livres sterling en 1964 et ceux de la société minière anglaise Rio Tinto Zinc ont représenté en 1964 près de 9 millions de livres sterling, soit une augmentation de 38 p. 100 par rapport à 1963. Les bénéfices de la société minière anglo-américaine Rhodesian Selection Trust se sont élevés pour l'exercice qui s'est terminé au 30 juin 1964 à 17,4 millions de livres sterling, soit 3,8 millions de plus que l'exercice précédent. Selon le Times de Londres du 30 septembre 1964, les monopoles ont "pompé" plus de 15 millions de livres sterling de bénéfices nets uniquement de la Rhodésie du Sud. La situation est analogue dans les autres colonies.

45. Les monopoles étrangers s'efforcent par tous les moyens de maintenir et de perpétuer leur mainmise sur cette région du monde aussi bien que sur les autres. Ils influencent directement la politique des gouvernements des puissances coloniales qu'ils contrôlent. Pour confirmer ce que j'avance, je citerai quelques exemples.

46. Le Président de l'Anglo-American Corporation of South Africa et de la De Beers Consolidated Mines, dont il a déjà été question, M. H. Oppenheimer, dans une déclaration publiée dans le Times de Londres le 4 juin 1964, chantait les louanges du régime raciste d'Ian Smith, affirmant que celui-ci cherchait à atteindre des "objectifs tout à fait raisonnables". M. Oppenheimer tient des propos tout aussi enthousiastes sur les racistes sud-africains. C'est ainsi, que prenant la parole le 24 juin 1964 à Pietermaritzburg, en Afrique du Sud, il déclarait que le mouvement mondial contre la politique d'apartheid de la République sud-africaine constituait "une menace à la paix" et il cherchait à apeurer les puissances occidentales en affirmant que si ce mouvement devait réussir, il déclencherait "la révolution et la guerre". Il faut dire que les gouvernements des puissances occidentales font preuve d'indulgence à l'égard de la politique d'apartheid, qu'ils continuent à maintenir une étroite coopération avec le régime raciste de Verwoerd, qu'ils ne tiennent pas compte des décisions des Nations Unies sur la question de l'apartheid et qu'ils refusent d'appliquer contre l'Afrique du Sud des sanctions efficaces qui, si elles étaient mises en œuvre, obligeraient les racistes de l'Afrique du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Sud à capituler.

47. Les exemples que je viens de donner montrent bien que les grands monopoles impérialistes, dont l'action et la politique bénéficient de l'appui et des encouragements des gouvernements des puissances occidentales, font obstacle à la décolonisation des peuples et des pays. A ce propos, je voudrais rappeler une fois de plus qu'aussi longtemps que les leviers économiques et les richesses naturelles des peuples non autonomes se trouvent aux mains des colonialistes, agissant par l'intermédiaire de leurs monopoles, toutes déclarations qu'ils pourront faire sur la liberté, l'indépendance et le progrès social resteront lettre morte.

48. En plus, de leurs "intérêts" économiques égoïstes, les puissances coloniales poursuivent des objectifs politiques, militaires et stratégiques tout aussi égoïstes. Elles ont installé sur le territoire de nombreuses colonies des points d'appui militaires et stratégiques pour lutter contre le mouvement de libération nationale. L'existence de ces bases militaires constitue une menace grave contre la paix et la sécurité des peuples.

49. C'est à partir de ces bases que sont organisées des agressions contre les Etats et les peuples pacifiques qui luttent pour la liberté et l'indépendance. C'est ainsi que la base militaire d'Aden est utilisée par les colonialistes anglais pour écraser la lutte de libération en Arabie du Sud, ainsi que pour entreprendre des agressions contre la République arabe du Yémen. L'aviation américaine basée à Guam porte presque quotidiennement la mort et la destruction au peuple du Viet-Nam.

50. Les puissances coloniales cherchent à étendre le réseau de leurs bases militaires contre la volonté des peuples. Tout récemment, le 10 novembre dernier, le Gouvernement britannique a fait connaître son intention d'installer des bases militaires mixtes anglo-américaines dans l'archipel Tchagos, administrativement rattaché à l'île Maurice, ainsi que sur certaines des îles Seychelles.

51. Parlant de l'importance que ces bases présentent pour les Etats-Unis et la Grande-Bretagne, le Times de Londres écrivait dès le 20 avril 1965:

"Des sous-marins nucléaires, dotés de fusées Polaris, dont le rayon d'action serait de 2 500 miles au moins, pourraient, en jouant le rôle d'une artillerie lourde de longue portée, protéger les approches de l'Inde, du Viet-Nam, de la Malaisie ou même toute la région du CENTO, au nord du golfe Persique."

52. Obéissant à leurs intérêts économiques, militaires et stratégiques égoïstes, les colonialistes cherchent à écraser le mouvement irrésistible des peuples des pays coloniaux et non autonomes vers la liberté et l'indépendance. Pour ce faire, ils emploient la force brutale, la répression, la terreur, etc., n'hésitant pas à créer des situations qui constituent une lourde menace contre la paix et la sécurité internationales.

53. Cela est vrai en Angola, au Mozambique, en Guinée dite portugaise où les colonialistes portugais mènent de sales guerres coloniales contre les populations autochtones. Le sang des combattants populaires coule dans les colonies anglaises d'Aden et d'Oman. La terreur et la répression règnent en Rhodésie du Sud, dans le Sud-Ouest africain et d'autres colonies.

54. Dans leur lutte contre le mouvement de libération nationale, les puissances coloniales unissent leurs efforts. Le principal centre de coordination en est le bloc militaire d'agression de l'OTAN, incarnation du colonialisme collectif moderne.

55. Les Etats-Unis, le Royaume-Uni, l'Allemagne occidentale apportent une aide économique et militaire importante au Portugal pour que ce pays puisse poursuivre ses sales guerres coloniales en Angola, au Mozambique et en Guinée dite portugaise. Tout homme de bon sens comprend que, sans l'aide de ces puissances, le Portugal aurait perdu depuis longtemps ses colonies. C'est pourquoi le Portugal n'est pas seul à porter la responsabilité de chaque victime angolaise, mozambiquaise et guinéenne qui tombe sous les balles ou les bombes ennemies.

56. Grâce à la complaisance de certaines puissances occidentales, le régime raciste de Smith a transformé la Rhodésie du Sud en une geôle pour la population autochtone; il a illégalement proclamé "l'indépendance", ce qui revient, en fait, à créer sur le continent africain un deuxième Etat raciste à l'image de la République sud-africaine.

58. Ainsi ceux qui font l'apologie du colonialisme affirment que l'apport de capitaux étrangers dans les pays coloniaux et les pays qui ont emprunté la voie d'un développement indépendant exerce un effet favorable sur le développement économique. En fait, l'importation par les monopoles de capitaux dans ces pays constitue une sorte de pillage et a un effet paralysant. On a calculé qu'entre 1875 et 1912 le Royaume-Uni a exporté 2 milliards de livres sterling et a retiré dans le même temps des capitaux placés à l'étranger 3,3 milliards de livres sterling. Selon l'Annual Abstract of Statistics, annuaire anglais, pendant la période 1958-1962, les investissements anglais à l'étranger ont rapporté plus de 3,5 milliards de livres sterling.

59. Les pays en voie de développement subissent de lourdes pertes du fait de termes de l'échange défavorables. Les monopoles internationaux imposent leurs prix pour les matières premières qu'ils importent de ces pays et pour les produits finis qu'ils y exportent. Ils fixent, sans justification aucune, des prix extrêmement bas pour les matières premières et des prix extrêmement élevés, des prix de monopole, pour les articles manufacturés. Il s'ensuit que les pays d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine perdent annuellement de 14 à 16 milliards de dollars.

60. Le pillage monstrueux des pays dont l'économie dépend des monopoles internationaux les maintient dans un état de retard économique, social et culturel. Un grand nombre de faits viennent réfuter la thèse non fondée des "bienfaits" que les colonialistes apporteraient aux colonies et aux pays qui dépendent économiquement d'eux.

61. Les représentants officiels des puissances occidentales parlent beaucoup de l'aide économique que celles-ci fournissent aux colonies et aux pays en voie de développement. Mais aucune publicité, aucune belle parole ne saurait dissimuler le fait que cette prétendue aide ne compense pas, ne serait-ce même que dans une faible mesure, les richesses que les puissances coloniales ont volées à ces pays.

62. Le Premier Ministre du Kenya, M. Jomo Kenyatta, a parfaitement raison de dire, ainsi qu'il l'a fait le 21 juin 1964, que l'"aide" anglaise n'est jamais que l'intérêt versé pour le "sang que l'on nous a sucé". Ses paroles s'appliquent aussi bien à toute l'"aide" apportée par les puissances occidentales.

63. De plus, cette aide est plus que compensée par le revenu des placements effectués par les puissances occidentales dans les pays en voie de développement et par des termes de l'échange défavorables. Ainsi, l'"aide" britannique aux pays en voie de développement s'élève à 150 millions de livres sterling par an et le revenu des investissements dans les pays d'Asie, d'Afrique, d'Amérique latine et d'Océanie s'est élevé en 1963, selon le Times du 2 avril 1965, à 290,5 millions de livres sterling, soit 140,5 millions de livres sterling de plus que cette prétendue aide.

64. Les pays occidentaux utilisent cette aide pour s'attacher les colonies et les nouveaux pays en voie de développement et les réduire dans un état de dépendance complète. C'est l'une des principales méthodes du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme contemporain.

65. A l'heure où les colonialistes éprouvent des difficultés de plus en plus grandes à arriver à leurs fins en recourant à la violence pure et simple, ils cherchent à mettre au point de nouveaux moyens, de nouvelles méthodes. C'est ainsi que l'on entend souvent les théoriciens de l'impérialisme en appeler aux leurs pour qu'ils s'adaptent à une situation changeante.

66. Se faisant l'interprète de ce genre d'aspirations, un des théoriciens du néo-colonialisme américain, "spécialiste" de l'Afrique, M. Vernon McKay, dans son livre intitulé Africa in World Politics publié en 1963 dit franchement: "Nous devons nous adapter à cet esprit révolutionnaire qui règne en Asie et en Afrique; autant que possible, nous devons le considérer avec sympathie et compréhension. Si nous n'y parvenons pas, notre système de sécurité internationale commencera, au cours de la décennie à venir, à s'effondrer partout dans le monde 2/."

67. Il semble que ce soit le sort des blocs militaires d'agression qui préoccupe surtout l'auteur de ce célèbre ouvrage. Utilisant des méthodes plus souples de lutte contre le mouvement de libération nationale, les colonialistes n'hésitent pas aussi à écraser ce mouvement par des moyens militaires comme ils le font au Viet-Nam, au Congo, en République Dominicaine.

68. S'agissant de l'élimination du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, on ne saurait passer sous silence la menace de plus en plus grande que le néo-colonialisme de l'Allemagne de l'Ouest représente pour les pays qui viennent d'accéder à l'indépendance, ainsi que pour les peuples qui luttent pour leur libération nationale.

69. Ne possédant pas de colonies en propre, la République fédérale d'Allemagne a réussi à s'infiltrer dans ces pays sur les plans économique, politique et militaire en y exportant des capitaux, en développant les échanges commerciaux, en leur accordant une "aide" économique et militaire et en utilisant les autres méthodes employées par les néo-colonialistes.

70. L'expansion économique de l'Allemagne de l'Ouest est particulièrement notable en Afrique. L'Allemagne fédérale participe directement à la lutte contre le mouvement de libération nationale des peuples des colonies. Non seulement elle apporte son aide économique au Portugal et à la République sud-africaine, mais elle leur fournit des armements, les aidant ainsi à mettre en œuvre leur monstrueuse politique coloniale.

71. Les peuples des pays coloniaux et non autonomes luttent pour obtenir une indépendance et une liberté authentiques. L'heure qui marque la fin du colonialisme a sonné. Ni la force brutale, ni les méthodes subtiles du néo-colonialisme n'aideront les colonialistes à s'opposer à l'effondrement du colonialisme. Le mouvement de libération nationale des peuples est irrésistible et aucune force ne réussira à l'arrêter et à le faire revenir en arrière.

72. La délégation de la RSS de Biélorussie a étudié attentivement les rapports [A/5800/Rev.1 et A/6000/Rev.1] du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

73. A notre avis, le Comité a accompli une œuvre importante et utile. Nous notons avec satisfaction qu'il a examiné la situation dans la grande majorité des territoires coloniaux. C'est également avec satisfaction que nous constatons qu'il a abordé l'examen des activités des monopoles internationaux. Il a étudié leur activité dans le Sud-Ouest africain, en Angola, au Mozambique et, l'année prochaine, il a l'intention de le faire pour la Rhodésie du Sud. Nous considérons avec faveur les résolutions que le Comité a adoptées sur la situation dans les colonies.

74. Mais on ne peut se reposer sur ses lauriers. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a le devoir de contribuer à éliminer sans tarder les régimes coloniaux. L'Assemblée générale doit exiger des puissances coloniales qu'elles mettent en œuvre immédiatement la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et elle doit les prévenir en termes catégoriques que le fait de maintenir leur domination coloniale sur les territoires qu'elles administrent ne saurait être considéré autrement que comme un crime contre l'humanité.

75. Il convient de déclarer en termes clairs et non équivoques que la lutte que les peuples des territoires coloniaux mènent pour conquérir leur liberté et leur indépendance est juste et légitime et d'adresser un appel à tous les Etats pour qu'ils apportent leur aide et leur assistance morale et matérielle aux peuples qui luttent pour affirmer leurs droits.

76. L'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies doit exiger des puissances coloniales qu'elles mettent fin immédiatement à toutes activités militaires et à tout acte de répression contre les peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance et qu'elles retirent toutes leurs forces armées du territoire des colonies et y suppriment leurs bases militaires.

77. La situation dans certains territoires coloniaux est une menace pour la paix et elle devrait par conséquent être examinée par le Conseil de sécurité, lequel doit prendre des mesures énergiques, jusqu'à l'adoption de sanctions obligatoires afin de contraindre les puissances occidentales à mettre fin aux activités militaires et à la répression contre les populations des colonies.

2/ Vernon McKay, Africa in World Politics (New York, Harper et Rowe, 1960), p. 425.

78. Selon la délégation de la RSS de Biélorussie, le Comité spécial doit redoubler d'attention lorsqu'il examine la mise en œuvre, par les puissances coloniales, des décisions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité relatives à l'octroi de l'indépendance aux diverses colonies.

79. Pour ce qui est de la RSS de Biélorussie, je tiens à déclarer que, fidèle aux principes léninistes sur la politique des nationalités, elle a toujours appuyé et continuera d'appuyer la cause des peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance.

80. M. ABU BAKAR (Singapour) [traduit de l'anglais]: La question de l'indépendance et du colonialisme se rapporte à celle de l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme. L'histoire nous parle des grands empires qui ont existé autrefois, non seulement en Asie, mais aussi dans des pays méditerranéens et plus tard en Europe où des empires immenses ont été fondés et maintenus par la force des armes. Presque tous ces empires ont été détruits aussi par la force des armes.

81. Dans l'antiquité, l'histoire nous cite l'empire chinois, l'empire égyptien, l'empire romain et beaucoup de grands empires de ce genre. Plus récemment, il y a eu les empires fondés par le Royaume-Uni, par la France, par l'Allemagne, par l'Espagne, par le Portugal, par la Belgique, par les Pays-Bas, par le Japon et par quelques autres pays moins connus. La plupart se sont écroulés parce qu'ils avaient été créés et maintenus par la force des armes de la métropole. Ils n'ont pas tous disparu et la plupart de ceux qui subsistent encore sont de création relativement récente.

82. Au cours des deux ou trois derniers siècles, et surtout juste avant le début et au commencement du siècle dernier, il y eut une compétition serrée entre les pays européens pour s'emparer de grandes étendues de terrain en Asie, en Amérique du Sud et en Afrique. D'abord, ils ont agi effrontément, prétendant qu'ils venaient pour faire du commerce, mais ils avaient en réalité des intentions politiques. Les puissances se sont taillé des territoires aussi grands que possible, sans se soucier de savoir si, en agissant ainsi, elles démembraient un pays ou elles divisaient un peuple. Elles ne s'occupaient que du butin et des richesses à piller. Elles opprimaient les populations pour en tirer le plus possible de biens à expédier dans la métropole. Quand un territoire était riche, mais peu peuplé, elles y amenaient des hommes d'autres pays.

83. Dans certains cas, quand ceux-ci n'étaient pas disposés à émigrer volontairement, elles employaient la force. C'est ce qu'on a appelé l'esclavage. La preuve en est encore visible. Dans d'autres cas, quand la population ne voulait pas aider les envahisseurs à piller le pays, ces derniers n'avaient aucune pitié et beaucoup de malheureux peuples ont été décimés.

84. De tous les colonialistes, les Britanniques, bien entendu, avaient l'empire le plus vaste. On disait que le soleil ne s'y couchait jamais. Mais cet empire était trop vaste pour être gouverné de Londres et, comme dans l'ancien empire romain, la centralisation montra finalement son point faible. Le mécanisme d'exploitation commença finalement à donner des signes de décrépitude. Il est assez étrange que le premier maillon de la chaîne ait été rompu au cours d'un thé à Boston. Il en résulta la création des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, issus du colonialisme britannique.

85. Depuis que ce vent révolutionnaire a soufflé pour la première fois, les peuples n'ont cessé d'aspirer à la liberté. Leurs aspirations ont été réprimées temporairement à maintes reprises mais la flamme de l'indépendance et de la liberté ne pouvait pas être éteinte. Cette flamme a continué à embraser le cœur des hommes dans la grande lutte qu'ils ont menée pour leur libération. L'un après l'autre, les pays ont conquis leur indépendance, certains assez facilement, d'autres après de durs combats et de grandes effusions de sang. La moralité à tirer de ces événements est qu'un pays ne reçoit pas son indépendance sur un plateau doré. Il faut faire pression sur les colonialistes. Il faut combattre pour la liberté. C'est le seul moyen pour un pays de l'obtenir. On n'a rien pour rien.

86. La seule exception est peut-être constituée par le comportement de la Nouvelle-Zélande vis-à-vis des îles Cook, territoire sous mandat. La Nouvelle-Zélande a fait tout son possible pour aider l'Organisation des Nations Unies à permettre à la population de ces îles d'obtenir son indépendance d'une manière ordonnée.

87. Parmi tant de puissances coloniales, seule la Nouvelle-Zélande a réellement coopéré avec l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Dans tous les autres cas, chaque fois que l'Organisation a voulu aider les peuples des territoires non autonomes à obtenir leur indépendance par l'intermédiaire des puissances coloniales, ces puissances, l'une après l'autre, ont dit que c'était à elles de s'en occuper et qu'elles ne voulaient pas partager leurs responsabilités administratives. Ce n'est là qu'un subterfuge juridique pour remettre à plus tard le droit légitime d'un peuple à recouvrer sa liberté.

88. J'ai parlé jusqu'ici en termes généraux du colonialisme, des puissances coloniales et des efforts de l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour aider les peuples malheureux à obtenir leur indépendance. Je pourrais continuer longtemps en citant le cas de puissances coloniales comme la Grande-Bretagne, la France, la Belgique, les Pays-Bas, le Portugal, l'Allemagne et le Japon, qui ont toujours appliqué ouvertement la politique qui consiste à diviser pour régner. Cette politique a toujours été efficace et ce n'est que depuis la fin de la dernière guerre, en 1945, que le vent de la révolution est réellement devenu un tempête et que l'homme ne veut plus transiger avec sa dignité. Cet état d'esprit nouveau s'est renforcé d'année en année, malgré la répression exercée par les puissances colonialistes, de sorte que nous n'avons plus maintenant que quelques territoires qui ne soient pas encore indépendants. Cependant, même à ce stade avancé de la décolonisation, il subsiste des problèmes comme ceux qui se posent non seulement en Rhodésie du Sud mais dans les autres territoires coloniaux qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance.

89. Dans le cas de la Rhodésie du Sud, nous sommes de cœur, bien entendu, avec les Africains qui, au moment même où nous siégeons dans cette Assemblée des Nations Unies, sont persécutés et tués par centaines. Le gouvernement illégal d'Ian Smith a non seulement pris le pouvoir par une déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance, par un acte de rébellion contre la Grande-Bretagne, mais il a aussi refusé d'accorder le droit de vote aux quatre millions d'Africains de son pays.

90. J'ai déjà dit, quand j'ai parlé de la question de la Rhodésie du Sud le mois dernier, que le Gouvernement de Singapour ne reconnaissait pas celui de la Rhodésie du Sud. Nous maintenons cette attitude. Nous avons également annoncé hier que Singapour interdisait immédiatement tout commerce avec la Rhodésie du Sud et qu'en outre nous ne considérons plus la Rhodésie du Sud comme faisant partie de la zone sterling en ce qui concerne le contrôle des changes. De plus, nous partageons les vues exprimées par l'Organisation de l'unité africaine qui siège actuellement à Addis-Abéba et nous l'aiderons dans toutes les mesures qu'elle prendra pour assurer l'arrivée au pouvoir d'un gouvernement de majorité en Rhodésie du Sud.

91. Je veux saisir cette occasion pour redire une fois de plus que Singapour est disposée à faire tout son possible, même s'il est bien tard, pour aider le Gouvernement britannique à rétablir son autorité constitutionnelle sur la Rhodésie du Sud, si la Grande-Bretagne désire le faire. Nous avons appris ce matin que le Premier ministre britannique prenait des mesures économiques plus strictes contre la Rhodésie du Sud. Cependant, depuis ce qui s'est passé récemment au Conseil de sécurité, où nous avons entendu nos frères africains adresser des reproches au représentant de la Grande-Bretagne à ce Conseil et lui rappeler que les événements qui s'étaient produits étaient ceux qu'ils avaient prédits, nous ne sommes pas convaincus que la Grande-Bretagne ait pris des mesures adéquates pour empêcher le gouvernement illégal d'Ian Smith de s'emparer du pouvoir au moyen d'une déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance. Avant même que le gouvernement d'Ian Smith fasse ce geste, le Gouvernement britannique a pris peur et a déclaré qu'il n'emploierait pas la force au cas où ce gouvernement prendrait le pouvoir d'une façon illégale. C'était sûrement pour celui-ci une invitation à aller de l'avant et à s'emparer du pouvoir.

92. Nous voyons tout de suite par là comment les Britanniques traitent différemment leurs peuples coloniaux. Les Rhodésiens blancs sont de la famille et il ne faut donc pas employer la force contre eux. Le représentant du Ghana a déjà exposé ce point assez longuement devant le Conseil de sécurité et je ne veux pas y insister davantage, sauf pour dire qu'il faut que nous appuyions tout ce que feront les gouvernements nationalistes africains pour défendre les droits fondamentaux de l'écrasante majorité africaine de la Rhodésie du Sud.

93. Depuis que le Gouvernement d'Ian Smith a pris le pouvoir d'une façon illégale, M. Harold Wilson a fait preuve d'une grande énergie et d'une grande résolution en prenant des sanctions contre la Rhodésie du Sud. Cependant, M. Wilson lui-même sait sûrement que les sanctions sont tout à fait inefficaces. On l'a vu en 1936, quand la Société des Nations en a appliqué à l'Italie pour son agression contre l'Ethiopie. Il y a trop d'échappatoires à l'application des sanctions et celles-ci ne sont jamais réellement effectives, car les trafiquants peuvent toujours tourner les règlements et les lois. De même que les sanctions se sont révélées inefficaces contre l'Italie en 1936, elles le seront en 1965 dans le cas de la Rhodésie du Sud. Bien entendu, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni le sait. Nous sommes heureux, certes, que les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, par la voix de leur Ambassadeur, M. Goldberg, aient déclaré en termes non équivoques qu'ils allaient prendre des mesures énergiques pour aider la Grande-Bretagne à appliquer ses sanctions contre la Rhodésie du Sud. L'Ambassadeur des Etats-Unis a déclaré que son pays n'aiderait la Rhodésie du Sud ni financièrement ni en commerçant avec elle. Mais que découvrons-nous si nous analysons ces déclarations politiques pompeuses? Que leur effet pratique est nul. On se demande pourquoi monsieur Goldberg les a faites alors qu'il sait fort bien, sans aucun doute, qu'elles ne sont guère que des paroles retentissantes et menaçantes. Une fois de plus, la Grande-Bretagne s'est montrée très habile en obtenant l'aide de son ancienne colonie.

94. On ne peut parler du colonialisme sans mentionner le malheureux peuple du Viet-Nam du Sud. Ce pays s'était à peine libéré du colonialisme français qu'il fut plongé dans une guerre civile qui aboutit à son partage. Depuis que les Français ont quitté le pays, le Viet-Nam du Sud se trouve aux prises avec des difficultés incessantes. Quand nous croyions que ses efforts pour rétablir son équilibre allaient être couronnés de succès, le président Ngo-Dinh-Diem a été assassiné. Ce crime a marqué un tournant dans l'histoire de ce malheureux pays parce que, depuis lors, la situation s'est dégradée sous l'effet d'une lutte brutale entre deux blocs puissants. Ils prétendent tous deux agir au nom de la liberté. Nous savons cependant que ce qui se passe là-bas n'est pas conforme à la justice. Que les communistes réussissent à s'implanter dans le Sud ou que les Sud-Vietnamiens et les Américains puissent les en empêcher, une chose est claire: le petit peuple du Viet-Nam du Sud est bombardé, chassé de ses terres, de ses maisons, de tout ce qui lui est cher. Il est illusoire de bombarder les Nord-Vietnamiens dans l'espoir de les amener à une table de conférence. Aucun peuple tant soit peu fier et conscient de sa dignité ne peut accepter une telle invitation. Il faut que les Européens comprennent la mentalité asiatique. Juger les autres d'après soi-même n'est pas le meilleur moyen de les comprendre, surtout quand on veut les réduire à merci par des bombardements. Ici même aux Etats-Unis des critiques se sont élevées au cours des derniers mois contre ces bombardements.

95. La violence au Viet-Nam du Sud est telle qu'il y a des centaines de milliers de réfugiés qui souffrent, alors qu'ils sont innocents. Nous avons déjà le problème des réfugiés de Palestine que, depuis près de dix-huit ans, nous sommes incapables de résoudre. Nous en aurons bientôt un autre au Viet-Nam du Sud.

96. Les colonialistes possèdent des bases dans beaucoup de pays pour maintenir leur domination.

Il faut examiner cette question aussi clairement que possible pour nous en faire une idée exacte. Hier, le représentant du Royaume-Uni a dit:

"Nous n'avons plus nulle part dans le monde besoin de bases pour assurer la défense de nos intérêts impériaux. Nous n'en avons besoin que pour nous acquitter des obligations que nous imposent le maintien de la paix, l'aide à nos amis et les engagements contractés envers eux par des traités. Ici encore, nous appliquons les principes de la consultation et du consentement. C'est l'avis déclaré de mon gouvernement que l'existence d'aucune base n'est justifiée, ni militairement ni moralement, si elle n'est approuvée par la population du territoire sur lequel elle se trouve. Nous mettons ces principes en pratique dans l'Arabie du Sud, par exemple, où nous avons déjà déclaré que le sort à réserver aux installations britanniques de défense est une affaire à négocier entre nous et le gouvernement du nouvel Etat au moment de l'indépendance."
[1386ème séance, par. 57.]

97. Ma délégation approuve cette déclaration sans aucune réticence. Il s'agit d'un sujet très délicat et les paroles très nettes de la délégation britannique nous sont fort agréables. Tout le monde sait que Singapour est opposée aux bases étrangères. Celles-ci menacent les racines mêmes de l'indépendance; elles nuisent également à la paix et à la sécurité de la région et il faut, par conséquent, examiner la question sous tous ses aspects.

98. Nous avons une grande base britannique à Singapour et mon gouvernement a déjà dit à plusieurs reprises qu'il ne fallait pas y toucher. Nous avons conclu nous-mêmes un accord avec les Britanniques et ils sont là avec notre consentement. Notre ligne de conduite est conforme à la décision prise à la Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés qui s'est tenue au Caire en octobre 1964. Voici cette décision:

"La Conférence considère la présence actuelle ou l'établissement ultérieur de bases militaires étrangères ou le stationnement de troupes étrangères sur le territoire d'autres pays contre la volonté expresse de ceux-ci comme une violation flagrante de la souveraineté des Etats et comme une menace à la liberté et à la paix internationale. Elle estime également que l'existence ou l'installation future dans des territoires non autonomes de bases qui pourraient être utilisées pour maintenir le colonialisme ou à d'autres fins est particulièrement injustifiable 3/."

99. En principe, les bases militaires étrangères sont détestables. Elles constituent une menace et un moyen de pression contre les petits pays. Quand il en est ainsi, des accords doivent être conclus pour que, quand une base est enfin remise au gouvernement du pays sur le territoire duquel elle est située, aucun vide ne soit créé et aucun problème ne soit soulevé par ce changement. L'affaire est très claire: aucune base étrangère ne doit subsister contre la volonté expresse de la population sur le territoire duquel elle est située.

100. Je voudrais parler d'une autre question qui résulte directement du colonialisme: la situation économique si grave de l'Asie et l'Afrique à l'heure actuelle. Quand les pays de ces continents étaient des colonies, leurs produits étaient destinés à alimenter les usines des puissances coloniales. Aucune industrie n'était autorisée dans les territoires coloniaux, car ceux-ci devaient servir de marchés pour les produits de leur maître. Nous avons encore à supporter les conséquences de cette politique coloniale. Les très grands efforts qu'ont faits les territoires anciennement coloniaux, après avoir obtenu leur indépendance, pour produire des marchandises dans leur propre pays témoignent du caractère néfaste de cette politique. Dans ce domaine aussi, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, par l'intermédiaire de ses diverses institutions spécialisées, fait beaucoup pour aider ces pays à se suffire à eux-mêmes.

101. En ce qui concerne Singapour, nous sommes favorisés. Notre Etat insulaire ne couvre que 560 kilomètres carrés et il a une population de près de 2 millions d'habitants. Comme il n'a pas de ressources naturelles, il avait bien fallu l'autoriser, quoique dans une mesure limitée, à avoir de petites industries. Celles-ci ont constitué une base suffisante pour nous permettre une véritable industrialisation et grâce à notre dur labeur et à notre persévérance, nous y avons réussi dans le court espace de temps de quatre ans et demi. Nous y avons même si bien réussi que nos anciens maîtres ont fixé un contingent pour l'exportation de nos cotonnades vers le Royaume-Uni.

102. Je voudrais revenir maintenant à la politique de "diviser pour régner", en ce qui concerne particulièrement la Malaisie et Singapour. Nos deux territoires forment un tout indivisible; cependant, quand l'indépendance a été octroyée à la Malaisie en 1957, Singapour en fut exclue, surtout à cause de sa base militaire. Nos liens d'amitié et de parenté étaient pourtant trop forts pour qu'on puisse nous maintenir séparés et c'est pourquoi, en septembre 1963, nous nous sommes unis à la Fédération de Malaisie et avons enfin obtenu notre complète indépendance. Toutefois les germes du colonialisme et des intérêts privés étaient trop solidement enracinés, de sorte que, le 9 août de cette année, nous avons dû, avec beaucoup de tristesse, nous séparer de la Malaisie. Nous l'avons fait dans des conditions très amicales, comme on l'a vu à l'Assemblée générale quand le représentant de la Malaisie a patronné l'admission de Singapour à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Nous l'avons remercié à ce moment-là et nous le remercions à nouveau. Notre amitié est réelle et, bien que nous ne puissions pas être unis maintenant, nous espérons que dans les dix années qui viennent nos deux Etats fusionneront à nouveau. Singapour veut être l'amie de tous ses voisins en Asie, surtout de la Malaisie, mais aussi de l'Indonésie.

103. Je voudrais parler enfin de l'excellent rapport présenté par le Comité spécial. Il faut en féliciter particulièrement le président et le rapporteur du Comité, ainsi que tous ses membres qui ont consacré énormément de temps et de travail à sa préparation. Il y a cependant une note discordante. Je veux parler de la lettre au Secrétaire général du 20 septembre 1965, par laquelle le représentant permanent du Cambodge à l'Organisation des Nations Unies a annoncé, conformément aux instructions de son gouvernement, que le Cambodge avait décidé de se retirer du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Les raisons invoquées par le Gouvernement du Cambodge sont: "...dictées par la constatation de l'inefficacité de toutes les recommandations déposées par ledit Comité sur la situation des peuples africains qui, malgré les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies et du Conseil de sécurité, n'ont pu se libérer de la sujétion coloniale. Il apparaît, d'autre part, ainsi que le soulignait notre chef d'Etat, Son Altesse Royale le prince Norodom Sihanouk, que l'Organisation des Nations Unies est tragiquement impuissante à imposer les règles les plus élémentaires du droit international aux grandes puissances qui maintiennent ou qui étendent leur domination politique et économique sur d'autres pays et sur d'autres peuples." [A/5983.] Il va de soi que nous regrettons beaucoup la décision annoncée par le représentant permanent du Cambodge.

104. Je voudrais maintenant faire une proposition à l'Assemblée. Tout projet sérieux doit comporter une date d'achèvement. Dans le cas qui nous occupe, je recommande à l'Assemblée d'examiner la possibilité de fixer un délai à la libération de tous les pays coloniaux de toutes formes et manifestations du colonialisme. Je propose un délai de cinq ans à partir d'aujourd'hui. L'expiration de ce délai coïnciderait avec le vingt-cinquième anniversaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et avec le dixième anniversaire de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Comme gage de son sérieux et de sa sincérité, Singapour se déclare disposée à assumer toute responsabilité que l'Assemblée voudra bien lui confier. Mon pays sait ce que c'est que d'être une colonie et désire sincèrement œuvrer pour la liberté d'autres peuples moins favorisés.

105. Avant de conclure, je voudrais recommander à l'Assemblée d'examiner la proposition suivante: si les moyens actuels du Comité spécial sont insuffisants ou si on estime qu'il est inefficace en quoi que ce soit, il faut prendre immédiatement des mesures, non seulement pour renforcer ses moyens si c'est nécessaire, mais aussi pour le revivifier de telle sorte qu'il puisse cette fois, sans aucun doute et dans le nouveau délai fixé, remplir sa mission complètement et parfaitement. Je me permets aussi de suggérer que cette proposition soit insérée dans toute résolution sur le colonialisme qui sera adoptée à la vingtième session de l'Assemblée générale, de façon que, quand nous nous réunirons dans cinq ans, cette question ait disparu de l'ordre du jour.

106. M. BOSCO (Italie): En prenant aujourd'hui la parole sur le point 23 de l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée générale, je désire tout d'abord exprimer les remerciements de la délégation italienne à M. Sori Coulibaly, qui a dirigé avec beaucoup d'intelligence et de sagesse les travaux du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux au cours des deux dernières années. Je désire également adresser des remerciements particuliers aux deux Vice-Présidents, M. Velázquez et M. Huot Sambath, ainsi qu'au Rapporteur, M. Natwar Singh, et à tous ceux qui ont contribué, par leurs efforts, au succès des travaux de ce comité.

107. L'Italie, qui a participé aux travaux du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et à la fructueuse mission qu'il a accomplie en Afrique, est heureuse d'avoir contribué au progrès de la décolonisation en offrant sa part d'idées et d'initiatives pour la réalisation des principes et des objectifs des Nations Unies dans ce domaine.

108. En l'année 1965, nous ne célébrons pas seulement le vingtième anniversaire de la fondation des Nations Unies, mais aussi le cinquième anniversaire de l'adoption par l'Assemblée générale de la résolution 1514 (XV), intitulée Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette importante déclaration, adoptée sans aucun vote contraire, a marqué une étape décisive dans l'histoire des relations internationales, car elle a codifié et inclus parmi les normes fondamentales du droit international le principe de l'égalité de droits des peuples et de leur droit à accéder à l'indépendance politique sans discrimination d'aucune sorte.

109. L'histoire a démontré que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'était pas une conception abstraite, et encore moins une théorie destinée à renverser l'ordre préexistant. En effet, nous avons tous pu constater avec satisfaction que, dans ces dernières années, plusieurs pays ont atteint leur indépendance d'une manière ordonnée et pacifique. Ils sont entrés dans la communauté des peuples libres et ils ont apporté aux Nations Unies des idées et des énergies nouvelles, ainsi qu'un enthousiasme renouvelé pour les idées qui favorisent le développement de relations amicales entre les nations. Il ne fait aucun doute que ceci représente un résultat positif de la politique de décolonisation, mais il me semble que cette politique doit encore être complétée sous deux aspects différents, notamment sous l'aspect politique et sous l'aspect économique et social.

110. Il faut constater que, même du point de vue politique, le processus de la décolonisation est encore inachevé. Dans une vaste région de l'Afrique existent encore des situations statiques qui ne semblent pas favorables aux aspirations à la liberté et à l'indépendance qui triomphent aujourd'hui dans le monde. Dans d'autres parties du monde, il y a des territoires où une évolution complète vers l'autodétermination et l'indépendance n'a pas encore eu lieu, bien que des développements prometteurs aient déjà été constatés.

111. L'Assemblée générale connaît bien ces problèmes et je ne crois pas qu'il soit nécessaire, à ce stade, de les exposer à nouveau dans leurs détails. Je saisis toutefois cette occasion pour confirmer l'adhésion du Gouvernement italien aux résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée générale et aux décisions prises par le Conseil de sécurité au sujet de certains territoires dont la situation préoccupe profondément la conscience des peuples. Je me réfère aux territoires africains qui n'ont pas encore été mis en mesure d'exercer librement leur droit à l'indépendance, et en particulier à ceux d'entre eux, comme le Sud-Ouest africain, où l'on applique la politique de l'apartheid, qui est incompatible avec les principes de la Charte et qui a été sévèrement condamnée par l'opinion publique mondiale.

112. Quant à la Rhodésie du Sud, après avoir déclaré ici, il y a quelques jours [1368ème séance], que la délégation italienne déplorait l'intolérable régime de privilège créé par l'initiative unilatérale d'une minorité insensible jusqu'ici aux appels des Nations Unies, je désire assurer l'Assemblée que mon gouvernement a immédiatement donné suite aux décisions adoptées par le Conseil de sécurité.

113. Pour ce qui est des territoires sous administration portugaise en Afrique, je tiens à réaffirmer que nous sommes favorables au libre choix des populations intéressées et que, partant, nous souhaitons une solution appropriée et conforme aux principes visés dans la résolution 1514 (XV) sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

114. En ce qui concerne les autres territoires qui sont encore sous le régime colonial, je voudrais adresser, au nom du Gouvernement italien, mes salutations les plus vives à trois pays qui sont à la veille de devenir indépendants: la Guyane britannique, le Betchouanaland et le Bassoutoland.

115. Je voudrais aussi attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur un problème qui a déjà été soulevé dans le passé et qui, au cours de cette session, a fait l'objet d'observations de la part de plusieurs délégations, y compris la délégation italienne, à la Quatrième Commission. Je me réfère au problème des "petits territoires" sous régime colonial, au sujet desquels les Nations Unies devraient formuler, à notre avis, une doctrine quant à leur avenir constitutionnel. L'étude de ce problème, soulevé aussi par le Secrétaire général dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel à l'Assemblée générale [A/6001/Add.1], devrait, tout en s'inspirant du principe de l'indépendance, prévoir la possibilité de grouper les petits territoires afin d'éviter une fragmentation excessive de la communauté internationale. L'examen préliminaire de cette question et des incidences politiques, économiques et constitutionnelles qu'elle soulève, pourrait être confié au Comité des Vingt-Quatre, car il est de sa compétence d'examiner toute question politique relative à la décolonisation.

116. En réalité, le problème de la décolonisation, qui a fait de grands progrès dans le domaine politique, se présente aujourd'hui sous une forme différente: celle de l'indépendance économique et financière des pays en question. Ce problème doit être résolu dans le cadre des principes de la solidarité internationale, qui sont à la base des relations entre les membres de la communauté internationale. Il s'agit, en fait, de dépasser le stade qui a été défini par le terme — inapproprié, peut-être, mais certainement significatif — de "néo-colonialisme"; il s'agit de "libérer du besoin" les pays qui ont récemment acquis l'indépendance et tous les peuples en voie de développement, ce qui constitue l'un des buts essentiels des Nations Unies. C'est pourquoi il faut rationaliser les formes d'assistance et améliorer le niveau actuel de l'aide économique aux pays en voie de développement. Il deviendra toujours plus difficile d'empêcher, à l'avenir, le recours à la violence soit à l'intérieur des Etats, soit dans les relations internationales, si l'on ne réussit pas à renverser la tendance actuelle qui fait que le fossé existant entre les pays industrialisés et les pays en voie de développement s'approfondit de plus en plus.

117. Il faudrait donc intensifier les efforts des Nations Unies pour réaliser une politique d'assistance toujours plus concrète, efficace et constructive, qui fasse disparaître partout le spectre de la faim et de la misère. La tâche à confier aux Nations Unies est difficile et complexe; mais elle est néanmoins essentielle pour le prestige et pour l'existence même de l'Organisation, car le maintien de la paix ne peut être assuré si l'on ne parvient pas à favoriser le progrès économique et à instaurer de meilleures conditions de vie. Il faut donc poursuivre la décolonisation non seulement jusqu'à ce que le colonialisme politique ait disparu, mais aussi jusqu'à ce que le colonialisme économique ait cessé d'exister. Le jour où cet objectif aura été atteint, le monde sera plus proche de la paix que si tous les stocks d'armes nucléaires étaient détruits.

118. Le renforcement de la sécurité internationale dû au relèvement du niveau de vie des peuples qui sont encore soumis aux fléaux de la faim, de la misère et des épidémies permettra d'arriver plus facilement à la conclusion d'accords sur le désarmement, qui pourront permettre de consacrer des ressources toujours plus considérables aux peuples en voie de développement.

119. C'est pour ces raisons que la délégation italienne recommande instamment à tous les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies d'intensifier tous leurs efforts afin que la décolonisation économique suive de près la décolonisation politique et que l'indépendance des nouveaux pays soit une réalité effective et fructueuse pour le bien-être de la société humaine tout entière.

120. M. CARRANCO AVILA (Mexique) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Par la Déclaration qui figure dans la résolution 1514 (XV), l'Assemblée générale réaffirmait sa conviction que tous les peuples ont un droit inaliénable à la liberté absolue, à l'exercice de leur souveraineté et à l'intégrité de leur territoire national, et elle reconnaissait que cette aspiration à la liberté est commune aux peuples de tous les territoires non autonomes.

121. Le Mexique, du haut de cette tribune, a soutenu depuis des années que la persistance de noyaux humains considérables, toujours privés du droit fondamental à l'autodétermination politique, ne peut que peser lourdement et d'une manière inquiétante sur les destins, de plus en plus solidaires, de tous les Etats, et particulièrement engager la responsabilité morale des Nations Unies. Aucune considération juridique, aucun argument fondé sur des contingences politiques ne pourront persuader les peuples, qui se sentent aptes à exercer leur droit à la souveraineté, qu'ils doivent renoncer à leurs aspirations ou accepter que la réalisation en soit différée.

122. Tout comme par le passé, nous restons fermement partisans de la liquidation du système colonial et nous croyons, à plus forte raison, que, dans ce processus d'une importance incalculable, dont dépendent le bien-être et le bonheur de millions d'êtres humains, l'Assemblée générale a pour devoir d'agir sans perdre de vue que l'indépendance, outre qu'elle constitue une fin en soi, est le moyen qui doit permettre aux peuples, grâce à l'exercice de la souveraineté, d'élever leur niveau politique, économique et social.

123. Pour accomplir cette œuvre immense, avec ordre et efficacité, un effort authentique est indispensable en vue d'assurer, conformément à la volonté librement exprimée par les peuples dépendants et avec la coopération sincère des Autorités administrantes, l'accession à bref délai des colonies et territoires sous tutelle à la vie indépendante, en tant qu'Etats souverains, capables de forger leur propre destin en toute liberté et de veiller à leur intégrité et à leur évolution future.

124. Les volumineux rapports que le Comité spécial chargé d'examiner la situation quant à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et peuples coloniaux a consacrés aux travaux réalisés en 1964 et en 1965 nous présentent une étude portant sur quelque 60 territoires. Il y est tenu compte des derniers événements et des conditions particulières à chacun de ces territoires, l'objet étant d'y mettre pratiquement en vigueur la résolution 1514 (XV) et d'éviter les situations chaotiques, grâce à des mesures, règlements ou procédés à rechercher qui permettraient d'éliminer effectivement, dans chaque cas, le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

125. La délégation du Mexique constate que des résultats encourageants ont été obtenus dans plusieurs territoires qui sont devenus, ces deux dernières années, Membres de notre Organisation, ainsi que dans certains autres qui sont sur le point d'accéder à la souveraineté et à l'indépendance. Mais nous partageons également les préoccupations du Comité lui-même lorsqu'il observe que la décolonisation n'avance pas, dans certaines régions, à un rythme satisfaisant.

126. La délégation du Mexique croit en outre opportun, et indispensable, de rappeler l'inquiétude qu'elle a manifestée à l'égard des méthodes que devait appliquer le Comité spécial: au cours de la dix-huitième session, le représentant du Mexique, qui participait au débat général sur cette question, demandait à l'Assemblée (1210ème séance, par. 119) de se préoccuper des problèmes dont le Comité était saisi et de lui suggérer de nouvelles orientations pour ses activités. Maintenant que la Quatrième Commission a examiné, par une étude attentive et détaillée, certains chapitres des rapports du Comité, nous pouvons constater avec satisfaction que les nouvelles méthodes, auxquelles la délégation du Mexique attachait une importance considérable — à savoir la négociation directe et les bons offices —, sont régulièrement employées. Dans le cas des territoires dont l'avenir semble particulièrement sombre — territoires considérés comme Etats viables, mais dont les Puissances administrantes contestent la condition et se montrent obstinément réfractaires à l'opinion mondiale, le Comité reçoit des rapports utiles à l'information du Conseil de sécurité.

127. Le Comité peut être satisfait de son activité passée, mais la délégation du Mexique estime qu'il ne peut s'arrêter en un chemin qui sera long et difficile. Nous espérons que, dans ses travaux futurs, le Comité spécial gardera présente à l'esprit la résolution 1541 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et poursuivra l'examen, entamé déjà, de la liste des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration, ainsi que du problème important que le Secrétaire général consignait dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel pour 1964^{4/}. Il s'agit de l'avenir des petits territoires, ainsi dits, qui tombent sous le coup du paragraphe 5 de la Déclaration, lequel stipule: "... Des mesures immédiates seront prises ... pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires sans aucune condition ni réserve ..."; il est précisé, néanmoins, que ce transfert doit se faire conformément aux vœux librement exprimés de ces peuples afin de "... leur permettre de jouir d'une liberté et d'une indépendance complètes".

128. A ce problème, délicat par lui-même, s'en ajoute un autre, non moins important. Il s'agit, on l'a dit, de celui que posent les enclaves d'empires en territoires étrangers. Ces enclaves sont les résidus des grands systèmes impériaux et elles affectent jusqu'à l'unité nationale ou l'intégrité territoriale de tel ou tel Etat.

129. La délégation du Mexique fait confiance, une fois de plus, à l'Assemblée générale pour donner les directives qui permettront au Comité spécial de mener à bien ses tâches futures.

La séance est levée à 15 h 25.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

107. M. BHUIYA (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: C'est avec des sentiments mêlés que ma délégation a étudié le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation coloniale. Certes nous nous réjouissons de voir que le mouvement historique de décolonisation se poursuit sans interruption vers ce but qu'est l'existence d'un monde libéré de toute trace de colonialisme, mais nous devons constater que ce but n'est pas encore atteint. Au Pakistan, nous ressentons de l'impatience à voir le rythme auquel se fait cette décolonisation.

108. Nous savons que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a joué un rôle important dans ce mouvement. Nous avons soutenu les efforts des Nations Unies, et nous avons contribué de toutes nos forces à cette action. Mais le fait de savoir qu'il y a, aujourd'hui encore, des territoires et des peuples qui attendent leur liberté complète pèse lourdement sur notre conscience. Le Pakistan a demandé à maintes reprises que ce processus de décolonisation soit accéléré et que l'Organisation des Nations Unies y joue un rôle des plus actifs. En conscience, nous sommes contraints d'exprimer notre mécontentement à constater que beaucoup de choses n'ont pas été faites qui pouvaient l'être, que de nombreuses mesures qui auraient pu être adoptées ou bien ne l'ont pas été au moment où il aurait fallu, ou bien ne l'ont pas été dans l'esprit qui aurait dû présider à leur adoption.

109. Sans cesse, devant cette Assemblée ou en dehors d'elle, le Pakistan a affirmé que la responsabilité de la communauté internationale ne cessera que le jour où les peuples en état de dépendance auront été libérés. Les puissances coloniales ont engagé dans ces pays des intérêts qu'elles trouvent difficile d'abandonner de bonne grâce. C'est pourquoi, très souvent, elles ont recours à toutes sortes de manœuvres pour conserver l'essentiel de leur domination tout en abandonnant l'apparence du pouvoir. On a nommé ce phénomène, d'une manière imagée, le néo-colonialisme. Nous nous réjouissons de savoir que l'existence de ces regrets réactionnaires d'un statu quo qui disparaît est en général connue des peuples dont les intérêts sont en jeu. Nous sommes prêts à lutter aux côtés de ces peuples pour, nous y opposer. Le néo-colonialisme n'est pas seulement l'ennemi des peuples qui viennent d'accéder à l'indépendance. C'est l'ennemi de tous les peuples aimant la liberté.

110. Le Pakistan veut faire en sorte que le mal qu'entraînerait cette méprisable conspiration soit épargné aux peuples encore privés de liberté. C'est pour cette raison que non seulement nous avons insisté pour que leur situation de dépendance cesse aussi rapidement que possible, mais encore pour que leur liberté, une fois obtenue, soit authentique. Nous ne voudrions pas que ces malheureux peuples passassent d'un état dans lequel ils sont ouvertement dominés à un autre dans lequel ils seront insidieusement exploités. L'étude du rapport a fait naître en nous l'appréhension qu'il pourrait en être ainsi, quelque improbable que cette possibilité paraisse aujourd'hui. Il nous semble donc nécessaire d'en tenir compte dans nos débats sur la situation coloniale. Si nous ne nous occupons pas de ces tendances tout de suite, avant qu'elles aient pris le temps de s'affirmer, nous risquons de nous trouver devant des situations fort graves dans toutes les parties du monde. Une bonne méthode pour éviter cet écueil consiste, à notre avis, à accueillir avec scepticisme l'excuse habituelle présentée par les puissances coloniales, affirmant que tel territoire n'est pas prêt pour l'indépendance. Nous devons insister pour que, dans les quelques années qui viennent, toute trace de présence coloniale disparaisse complètement. Le représentant de Singapour, parlant hier de cet état de choses [1387ème séance], a suggéré de fixer une limite de temps. Le Pakistan approuverait lui aussi l'adoption d'une telle limite.

111. En ce qui concerne le Sud-Ouest africain et les autres bastions du colonialisme en Afrique, la position de ma délégation est claire et sans ambiguïté. Nous souhaitons que les Nations Unies, en tant qu'organisation, mettent en jeu les moyens de pression dont elles disposent, et prennent au besoin des mesures de coercition de nature extrême, pour mettre fin à cette situation intolérable. Nous estimons que l'état de choses qui règne dans ces territoires représente une agression permanente contre les peuples autochtones. De plus, à notre avis, cette agression constitue une menace grave pour la paix et la sécurité internationales car, à moins que l'on n'y porte rapidement remède, les peuples qui en sont victimes n'ont d'autre recours que la lutte armée et massive. Nous comprendrions parfaitement les raisons d'une telle lutte si elle devait éclater demain. C'est pourquoi nous avons insisté, et nous insistons encore, pour que l'Organisation des Nations Unies se montre à la hauteur de ses responsabilités et fournisse le remède aux peuples africains victimes de cette situation, les amenant à l'indépendance en application du principe fondamental de l'autodétermination.

112. La domination politique prend ses racines dans l'exploitation économique du peuple. Notre étude de la situation dans de nombreux territoires sous tutelle nous a donné des raisons de penser que les ressources naturelles de ces territoires étaient exploitées à un rythme alarmant. Nous ne croyons pas que le régime de tutelle ait été créé pour satisfaire la cupidité des puissances coloniales.

113. Conformément à la résolution 1803 (XVII) de l'Assemblée générale sur la souveraineté permanente sur les ressources naturelles, les propriétaires légitimes des richesses naturelles des territoires sous tutelle en sont les habitants. Nous sommes inquiets du rythme auquel ces richesses s'épuisent. La situation de dépendance dans laquelle se trouve un peuple ne donne à aucune puissance le droit de s'approprier ses ressources. Le fait même qu'à l'heure actuelle ces peuples soient incapables de se lever pour réclamer ce qui leur appartient impose à la communauté internationale l'obligation de sauvegarder leurs droits. Nous ne pouvons nous contenter de la situation actuelle de nombreux territoires. Le rapport du Comité spécial a eu le grand mérite d'attirer notre attention sur ce point.

114. Au vu de la situation révélée par le rapport, la délégation du Pakistan a présenté quelques propositions au cours des débats de la Quatrième Commission. Nous avons demandé que dans les renseignements relatifs à chacun des territoires sous tutelle figurent les statistiques portant sur l'exploitation des ressources naturelles et sur l'importance des avantages qu'en tirent effectivement les habitants de ces territoires. Nous avons clairement exposé que nous soutiendrons les demandes d'un peuple actuellement en état de dépendance et dépouillé de ses richesses si, à une époque quelconque, il demandait qu'on lui restituât ses richesses naturelles. Que l'on soit sûr que le Pakistan soutiendra ces réclamations sans réserve, et qu'il insistera pour qu'une indemnité convenable soit rapidement versée, y compris des dédommagements pour les torts précédemment subis. Nous pensons que ces demandes d'indemnisation devraient porter sur toute spoliation de ressources, et ne pas être nécessairement limitées à l'internationalisation des avoirs.

115. M. MOD (Hongrie): Il y a cinq ans — ou cinq sessions de l'Assemblée générale, si nous mesurons le temps au chronomètre des Nations Unies — se produisait dans le travail de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et dans la détermination de sa tâche le changement décisif grâce auquel l'Organisation s'est transformée d'un office chargé d'enregistrer les activités des puissances coloniales en un facteur international prenant une part active à la lutte contre ces activités.

116. L'histoire de l'adoption de la résolution 1514 (XV), les débats sur les résolutions adoptées depuis lors et sur leur application, tout cela montre que l'alliance des forces qui, au sein de l'Organisation, luttent contre le colonialisme est solide, parce qu'elle repose sur une base commune de principes. Elle gagne en vigueur d'année en année et étend sa lutte contre toutes les formes du colonialisme.

117. La lutte contre le colonialisme est une sphère d'activité où l'Organisation des Nations Unies a pu obtenir relativement de bons résultats. C'est précisément en considération de ce succès qu'il y a lieu de rappeler ce que le Ministre des affaires étrangères de mon pays, lors de la discussion générale de cette année, a précisé en ces termes:

"Depuis l'adoption, en 1960, de la Déclaration sur la liquidation du système colonial, on a maintes et maintes fois affirmé dans cette salle que tous les territoires coloniaux devraient avoir recouvré leur indépendance et leur souveraineté au moment de la vingtième session. Or, quelle est la situation actuelle? Non seulement on n'a pas liquidé toutes les survivances de l'ère coloniale, mais on a porté la guerre — une guerre coloniale par excellence — dans la péninsule indochinoise." [1350ème séance, par. 3.]

118. Il est un fait incontestable — et la preuve la plus simple en est que le nombre des Membres de l'ONU augmente d'année en année — que l'étendue géographique du colonialisme va diminuant. Malheureusement, on ne saurait en dire autant de tous ses autres aspects. Pendant les cinq années de luttes anticolonialistes et en ce qui concerne les différentes formes, ouvertes et déguisées, du colonialisme, les Nations Unies ont amassé une quantité importante d'expériences dont l'analyse est l'une des conditions premières de la détermination des tâches ultérieures.

119. La première et la plus générale des questions auxquelles nous cherchons une réponse a été posée par le passage précité du discours du Ministre des affaires étrangères de la République populaire hongroise. La question pourrait être formulée d'une autre façon aussi: pourquoi, tout comme pour la question du désarmement, la lutte contre le colonialisme n'obtient-elle que des résultats partiels tandis qu'elle marque le pas autour des principaux objectifs?

120. Je voudrais essayer de répondre d'abord sur la base d'une analyse des différentes formes du colonialisme. Je commencerai par examiner la situation actuelle en ce qui concerne la forme dite classique de la colonisation. Nous pouvons examiner par exemple la situation soit en Angola ou au Mozambique, soit à Aden ou dans n'importe quelle autre colonie anglaise. Tous les éléments répugnants et révoltants de la colonisation classique y existent invariablement.

121. Voici quelques faits concernant les colonies portugaises: 99 p. 100 de la population autochtone est analphabète; dans certaines régions, la mortalité infantile atteint 60 p. 100; en Angola, 3,3 p. 100 seulement des enfants africains d'âge scolaire fréquentent l'école, et les cultivateurs de coton — dont le nombre est d'environ un million — ont un revenu moyen de 11,17 dollars par an et par personne. Un spécialiste occidental des plus qualifiés, bien au courant de la situation dans les colonies portugaises, a ceci à dire à ce sujet:

"... Le motif de la politique du Portugal en Afrique est resté à peu près le même: la conception de l'Africain comme pupille de l'Etat dont les pouvoirs tribaux et les valeurs doivent être remplacés par le pouvoir et les valeurs du Portugal; l'emploi sans discernement et même abusif des travailleurs africains; une indifférence apparente pour le bien-être physique et social des populations africaines; une indifférence égale pour leurs besoins dans le domaine de l'enseignement; l'exploitation de l'agriculture africaine et la promotion de l'agriculture des propriétaires blancs au détriment des droits fonciers et des intérêts des Africains; l'encouragement de l'immigration blanche, et la répression de l'insatisfaction africaine, réelle ou imaginaire, par l'emprisonnement, l'exil, les coups, la torture et même le meurtre. Ceci s'est fait dans le passé, se fait maintenant et les Portugais aimeraient le faire dans l'avenir^{2/}."

122. A la question de savoir pourquoi le Portugal veut continuer à régner par la force sur ses colonies africaines, une réponse partielle est donnée par le correspondant en Angola du Washington Post dans le numéro du 11 novembre 1965:

"On dit que le Portugal dépense jusqu'à 100 millions de dollars par an pour continuer la répression des rebelles dans ses colonies africaines. Mais cela semble payer ... Le Portugal, à l'aide d'une gestion rusée, a transformé une colonie dont les exportations consistaient en huile de baleine depuis 55 ans en une abondante source d'argent et en un débouché de réserves pour les produits portugais."

^{2/} James Duffy, Portugal's African Territories: Present Realities, New York, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 1962, p. 12.

123. Comme il ressort des débats du Comité spécial, les bénéfices commerciaux que le Portugal tire de ses colonies sont estimés à 150 millions de dollars par an. Selon le New York Times du 23 août 1965, "la guerre en Afrique s'est avérée une véritable bénédiction économique pour le Portugal métropolitain". Et qu'il me soit permis de citer une autre constatation dans le même sens: "Nous n'aimons pas y penser, mais la guerre a profité à l'économie et assuré à certains une grande prospérité." Cette dernière constatation a été faite par James Reston à propos de l'agression américaine au Viet-Nam du Sud, dans le New York Times du 24 novembre 1965.

124. Le motif essentiel des colonisateurs est donc resté le bénéfice matériel et l'exploitation des populations autochtones. Dans le monde actuel, cependant, un pays colonisateur ne peut et ne veut plus accomplir cette tâche à lui seul. Les intérêts des monopoles et des Etats s'entrelacent tellement qu'ils forment une brousse impénétrable de l'exploitation.

125. Pour éviter d'être accusé de parti pris, je vais maintenant citer un exemple relatif au Sud-Ouest africain. Dans son rapport appuyé d'un long répertoire de renseignements, le Comité spécial a constaté que le capital étranger occupait une place dominante dans l'économie du Sud-Ouest africain, que les compagnies étrangères n'avaient pas intérêt à ce que l'économie du territoire fût équilibrée et que les compagnies internationales soutenaient la politique annexionniste du Gouvernement sud-africain. Le rapport du Comité spécial précise que ces monopoles internationaux se préoccupent avant tout du profit et que, par conséquent, les bénéfices passent à l'étranger et ne sont pas investis là où ils ont été réalisés. Le paragraphe 172 du rapport indique que les sociétés minières et les établissements industriels appartiennent à des groupes financiers des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni et de l'Afrique du Sud. Le Comité spécial constate enfin:

"De l'étude qui précède, on peut conclure que les activités des sociétés internationales au Sud-Ouest africain sont un des principaux obstacles à l'évolution du pays vers l'indépendance^{3/}."

126. Dans les colonies portugaises également, l'industrie, les transports et l'exploitation minière appartiennent à des groupes financiers des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni, de la Belgique et du Portugal. Ces derniers temps, la participation du capital privé d'Allemagne de l'Ouest aussi monte en flèche.

127. Ces activités sont mises en lumière par les quelques chiffres suivants. Selon les données publiées dans le numéro d'août 1964 de Survey of Current Business^{4/}, le capital privé américain a réalisé et rapatrié, en 1963, 5,1 p. 100 de bénéfices sur ses investissements dans les pays du Marché commun européen, et 10,6 p. 100 sur ses investissements en Amérique du Sud; selon les renseignements fournis par le numéro du 9 mars 1963 de France Observateur, les chiffres correspondants allaient de 20 p. 100 à 45 p. 100 pour l'Afrique méridionale.

128. Bien entendu, les groupes de capitaux d'Afrique du Sud ne se tiennent pas non plus à l'écart de l'exploitation des colonies portugaises. En conséquence, les deux gouvernements ont déjà entamé des négociations sur l'extraction et l'achat du pétrole angolais. Selon le Johannesburg Star du 1er août 1964:

"Si le bloc afro-asiatique réussissait à couper l'approvisionnement en pétrole de l'Afrique du Sud, qui est pour celle-ci d'une importance vitale, l'Angola pourrait la sauver... En cas d'embargo total, l'Angola pourrait fournir à l'industrie et à la défense sud-africaines suffisamment de pétrole pour leur permettre de survivre."

129. Il est notoire que le travail forcé est également répandu dans les colonies portugaises. En conséquence, les populations autochtones du Mozambique sont contraintes de travailler comme esclaves non seulement dans les colonies portugaises mais aussi dans le pays voisin de l'Afrique du Sud. Selon les renseignements fournis par le Front de libération du Mozambique, le Portugal envoie chaque année 100 000 ouvriers du Mozambique aux mines d'or du Transvaal. En échange, 45 p. 100 des produits du Transvaal sont transportés à travers Lourenço Marques. Comme les pétitionnaires l'ont relaté, l'Afrique du Sud paie au Gouvernement portugais 6 dollars par ouvrier et la moitié du salaire de chaque forçat pour les quatre premiers mois. Environ 200 000 autres ouvriers du Mozambique sont employés comme ouvriers industriels ou agricoles et comme domestiques en Afrique du Sud et en Rhodésie du Sud.

130. Des quelques exemples cités ci-dessus, on peut déjà conclure qu'un groupe de pays occidentaux a un intérêt, que l'on peut évaluer à plusieurs milliards, à ce que le statu quo ne change pas dans les territoires coloniaux. C'est dans ce but qu'ils s'unissent dans ce qui est connu, de par le monde, sous le nom d'Alliance impie. Sous quelque angle que nous examinons la question, nous rencontrons toujours le même groupe de pays, qui était à l'origine, à l'époque de la colonisation classique, le groupe des puissances coloniales, et qui, aujourd'hui, peut être symbolisé très brièvement par le nom de l'OTAN. En effet, il s'agit aujourd'hui d'une activité colonisatrice collective, plus précisément de l'activité colonisatrice de l'OTAN.

131. Dans cet empire commun de plusieurs milliards de dollars, des intérêts communs s'attachent au statu quo, et pour cette raison des efforts communs sont faits pour le maintenir. Comme le journal ouest-allemand Frankfurter Allgemeine l'écrivait:

"En dernière analyse, les Etats occidentaux doivent être en mesure de défendre leurs intérêts économiques et leurs investissements en Afrique."

Et en fait ils font tout pour les défendre.

132. Selon une information du New York Times du 3 mai 1965, l'Allemagne de l'Ouest a vendu au Portugal un grand nombre de fusils automatiques et 60 avions F-86 achetés au Canada. Le Gouvernement canadien ayant élevé une protestation, Bonn lui a répondu en ces termes, d'après le Tagesspiegel, de Berlin-Ouest, en date du 17 février 1965:

"L'opinion prévaut à Bonn qu'il ne pourrait y avoir d'objection à la vente des avions, puisque le Portugal, tout comme la République fédérale d'Allemagne et le Canada, est un Etat membre de l'OTAN."

133. Pour compléter le tableau, citons encore une opinion portugaise tirée du journal Der Kurier-Der Tag, de Berlin-Ouest, en date du 18 février 1965:

"On a reçu du Ministère des affaires étrangères du Portugal l'information que l'Angola n'était pas une colonie mais faisait partie du Portugal. Le gouvernement ne pourrait donc pas accepter des règlements qui limiteraient l'utilisation des avions de combat à réaction."

134. Voilà ce que vaut la promesse des puissances occidentales selon laquelle leurs livraisons d'armes au Portugal ne seront pas utilisées contre les peuples d'Afrique.

135. La coopération militaire a aussi continué de se renforcer entre l'Afrique du Sud, la Rhodésie du Sud et le Portugal. Des négociations systématiques se poursuivent en la matière, et nombre de sources occidentales se réfèrent à l'existence d'un accord militaire secret. Les armes fournies au Portugal font d'ailleurs parfois un détour étonnant avant de parvenir à destination. Selon l'information déjà citée du Washington Post, par exemple, "l'équipement se compose, pour la plupart, de vieux excédents américains achetés au Brésil".

136. Voilà les faits. Mais leur importance dépasse de loin les frontières géographiques. Ils prouvent, par la force d'une logique irréfutable, que les principaux auteurs des guerres dites locales sont les puissances coloniales qui, en vue de consolider leurs intérêts matériels et leur pouvoir, ne se gênent pas pour livrer les pays éloignés aux flammes de la guerre et mettre en danger la paix et la sécurité internationales. C'est ce que le Portugal fait en Angola, le Royaume-Uni en Arabie du Sud, et c'est aussi ce que le Royaume-Uni, du fait de son indécision apparente, a rendu possible en Rhodésie du Sud. A vrai dire, c'est en conséquence de cette politique que les Etats-Unis, comme nouvelle puissance colonisatrice, sont entrés en scène au Viet-Nam du Sud, pour ne pas parler de l'Amérique latine.

137. La colonisation, poursuivie à l'aide de la force brute de la puissance militairement plus forte, a produit d'étranges excès au cours des temps. On peut citer, par exemple, le fait que le colonisateur ou l'ex-colonisateur revendique un droit aux ressources naturelles, à la terre labourée ou à l'usine bâtie grâce à la sueur et au sang des peuples coloniaux. Un autre exemple est l'idée absolument fausse que les colons blancs en Afrique méridionale ont plus de droits, aussi bien quantitativement que qualitativement, que les populations autochtones. C'est de cette idée fausse (qui, dans l'intérêt de l'humanité, doit être extirpée le plus tôt possible) qu'a procédé la présomption, le soi-disant droit, que la puissance en question peut, quand et où cela lui plaît, intervenir dans les affaires intérieures d'autres pays. Et pour cette raison même, ce qui se passe au Sud-Est asiatique est une guerre coloniale par excellence.

138. Cette prétention illégitime du "propriétaire" colonisateur peut seule expliquer l'attitude que les Etats-Unis ont adoptée à la récente Conférence tenue à Rio de Janeiro^{5/} et que le New York Herald Tribune du 23 novembre 1965 décrivait, succinctement et pertinemment, de la façon suivante: "Nous disons à l'Organisation des Etats américains: combattez le communisme ou nous intervenons." Là comme au Sud-Est asiatique, nous nous heurtons à la manière de voir qui fait qu'une puissance prend toutes les autres pour ses propres colonies.

139. La vérité fondamentale est que, pour la liquidation du système colonial, la question de l'admissibilité de l'intervention dans les affaires intérieures des Etats est d'une grande actualité. Or, cette question, sur la proposition de l'Union soviétique, a été inscrite à l'ordre du jour [voir A/5977]. En vue de la liquidation de toutes les formes du colonialisme, il est nécessaire que l'Assemblée générale déclare, selon les termes du paragraphe 1 du projet de déclaration présenté par l'URSS [A/C.1/L.343], "que chaque Etat souverain, chaque peuple, a un droit inaliénable à la liberté et à l'indépendance et à la protection de sa souveraineté, et que ce droit doit être pleinement protégé".

140. Il s'agit là, en substance, du fait que certaines puissances essaient d'empêcher militairement et à l'échelle mondiale la liquidation du système colonial ainsi que le progrès social. On pouvait lire, dans un éditorial du New York Times du 3 juillet 1965:

"Les Etats-Unis aussi ont une réputation, qu'ils ont parfois méritée, de défenseurs du statu quo, du capitalisme tel que nous l'interprétons, de la démocratie sous sa forme bien de chez nous, de l'opposition aux réformes sociales qui viennent de la gauche, et de l'acceptation complaisante des coups d'Etat venant de la droite."

141. Cette attitude des Etats-Unis, qu'on la prenne comme un tout ou dans les détails, est diamétralement opposée non seulement à la Charte des Nations Unies, mais aussi aux principes fondamentaux de la lutte anticolonialiste, en vertu desquels les Nations Unies reconnaissent la légitimité de toutes les formes du combat que mènent les peuples coloniaux pour leur indépendance nationale.

142. Je pense qu'il est déjà possible d'essayer de définir la place qui revient au colonialisme dans la politique "globale".

143. Premièrement, le colonialisme a pour objet de procurer à bon marché des matières premières et des ressources en êtres humains.

144. Deuxièmement, le colonialisme vise à fournir à certains des "porte-avions" virtuels, pour qu'ils s'en servent comme l'ont fait la Belgique, le Royaume-Uni et les Etats-Unis avec l'île de l'Ascension, comme le Royaume-Uni le fait à Aden ou encore quand il installe une base militaire sur l'île Maurice, ou de la manière dont les Etats-Unis utilisent l'île de Guam comme base d'attaque pour les avions B-52 contre le Viet-Nam. Ces exemples, et d'autres que je m'abstendrai de mentionner, ont une caractéristique commune, à savoir que le colonisateur agit soit au mépris des vigoureuses protestations de la population, soit sans même consulter cette dernière.

145. Troisièmement, les colonisateurs tournent les notions d'intervention et de non-intervention, ce qui rappelle le manteau de la fable. C'est ainsi que la population de Porto Rico est devenue partie des Etats-Unis sans s'en apercevoir; c'est ainsi que le Royaume-Uni est intervenu en Guyane britannique parce que le gouvernement élu par le peuple ne convenait pas au vrai colonisateur, à savoir les Etats-Unis; c'est ainsi que le Royaume-Uni, encore, est intervenu à Aden, parce que, là-bas, c'est à lui que le gouvernement ne plaisait pas; par contre, en Rhodésie du Sud, le Royaume-Uni n'intervient pas, parce que la poignée de colons racistes et fascistes plaît à l'Alliance impie.

146. Avec le temps, l'activité des colonisateurs a subi certains changements. A l'heure actuelle, alors que la lutte se poursuit pour la liquidation complète du colonialisme, celui-ci, tout en maintenant ses formes classiques, s'est enrichi d'éléments nouveaux. Les puissances coloniales, qui avaient lutté les unes contre les autres, ont formé depuis lors l'Alliance impie des colonisateurs, poursuivant des objectifs communs, utilisant des moyens collectifs et ayant une autorité militaire collective: l'OTAN. A la présence physique s'est ajoutée — ou substituée — l'oppression économique par l'intermédiaire des monopoles internationaux. La discrimination raciale, qui est l'une des armes de la répression au service de la société capitaliste, remplit de nouveau, comme elle le faisait à l'époque hitlérienne, un rôle important, avec l'aide des colons blancs et de la politique d'apartheid. Le réseau de bases militaires enveloppant le globe entier, de Guam jusqu'à Gibraltar, est appelé à soutenir et maintenir le vieux système qui craque de toutes parts. Lorsque cela ne suffit pas, on procède au changement de gouvernement par la violence, on recourt à l'intervention militaire ou à la "guerre locale", comme cela s'est passé ou se passe encore en Guyane, à Aden, au Viet-Nam, en Angola ou en République Dominicaine; ou bien on recourt au sabotage des mesures effectives, comme dans le cas de la Rhodésie du Sud.

147. Voilà donc quelques caractéristiques du système colonial actuel. Que la méthode soit ancienne ou nouvelle, elle s'inspire toujours des mêmes motifs. Les faits le prouvent, en dépit de toutes les tentatives faites pour jeter de la poudre aux yeux du monde.

148. Il est facile de comprendre, après tout ce que je viens de dire, que ma délégation est en faveur de l'adoption d'une résolution condamnant toutes les formes du colonialisme et faisant un devoir aux Nations Unies de lutter contre elles.

149. Dans la situation actuelle, cependant, nous jugeons qu'il est particulièrement important d'attirer brièvement l'attention de l'Assemblée sur deux aspects de la question.

150. Le premier se rapporte au travail du Conseil de sécurité. Au cours de ces quelques dernières années, le gros du travail du Conseil lui a été imposé par les tensions internationales dues à l'opposition manifestée à la liquidation du système colonial. Dans les résolutions qu'elle a adoptées sur les questions de l'Afrique du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain, des colonies portugaises, de la Rhodésie du Sud et d'Aden, l'Assemblée générale constate formellement que la situation qui règne dans ces territoires est une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. On peut en dire autant des bases militaires installées sur des territoires qui sont encore réduits par la violence à l'état de colonies, comme par exemple Aden ou Guam. Il serait donc bon que l'Assemblée générale recommande au Conseil de sécurité de s'occuper le plus tôt possible de cette question en général, étant donné que le maintien même du colonialisme constitue une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

151. L'autre aspect de la question a trait à l'une des activités les plus importantes de l'Assemblée générale: la protection des droits de l'homme. Les Nations Unies se fondent sur l'égalité souveraine des Etats Membres. Nous avons déjà reconnu que tout peuple, en tant que tel, a droit à l'indépendance nationale; mais nous n'avons pas, jusqu'ici, agi de façon assez conséquente pour assurer la protection des droits de l'homme sur les territoires coloniaux. En 1960, la Belgique commettait une agression au Congo en prétextant la nécessité de défendre les droits de ses ressortissants. On pourrait citer de nombreux autres exemples analogues qui montrent que les puissances occidentales commettent toute une série d'actes d'agression en prétextant de la nécessité de défendre les droits de leurs ressortissants à l'étranger. Mais, en même temps, les puissances coloniales foulent aux pieds, dans leurs propres colonies, les dispositions les plus élémentaires des déclarations et conventions adoptées par les Nations Unies sur les droits de l'homme. Pour ne citer qu'un exemple, l'encre n'a pas encore séché sur le texte final des premiers articles du projet de convention internationale sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale qu'on en enfonce déjà, en Afrique, les dispositions pertinentes. En effet, les alinéas b et d de l'article 2 [A/C.3/L.1239] disposent que:

"Chaque Etat partie s'engage à ne pas encourager, défendre ou appuyer la discrimination raciale pratiquée par une personne ou une organisation quelconque;

"Chaque Etat partie doit, par tous les moyens appropriés, y compris, si les circonstances l'exigent, des mesures législatives, interdire la discrimination raciale pratiquée par des personnes, des groupes ou des organisations et y mettre fin."

152. Comme je viens de le démontrer, les sociétés capitalistes monopolisatrices des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni, de la Belgique, de l'Allemagne de l'Ouest et du Portugal foulent aux pieds toutes ces dispositions. Les Nations Unies doivent contraindre les gouvernements en cause à faire respecter ces dispositions par leurs groupes financiers aussi, car elles les concernent également. On ne peut parler de réaliser les idéaux de la dignité humaine, de la liberté individuelle ou des droits de l'homme tant qu'ils ne seront pas mis également au service des populations autochtones des territoires colonisés.

Il n'est pas tolérable que les sublimes principes de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme soient réduits à une rhétorique de propagande.

153. En terminant, je tiens à présenter au Comité spécial les félicitations de ma délégation pour le bon travail qu'il a accompli, et en particulier pour le succès des réunions qu'il a tenues en Afrique et pour les résolutions pertinentes et pleines de bon sens qu'il a adoptées.

154. M. BATCHI (Congo-Brazzaville): L'Organisation des Nations Unies vient de célébrer, tout récemment encore, son vingtième anniversaire, sans doute dans une certaine liesse, encore que les obligations contenues dans la Charte — cette charte qui est une œuvre à laquelle tous les peuples du monde ont apporté leur contribution — continuent d'être bafouées. L'Organisation des Nations Unies glisse lentement mais sûrement vers les mêmes profondeurs que la Société des Nations, cette organisation défunte qui a été incapable d'assumer ses hautes fonctions de garante de la liberté des peuples, de la paix et de la sécurité internationales.

156. Aujourd'hui, tous les peuples d'Afrique s'inquiètent de la tournure des événements qui viennent de se produire, ce qui risque de détourner l'Organisation de ses responsabilités devant les ambitions de certains de ses Etats Membres dont les agissements deviennent contraires aux principes auxquels ils ont solennellement souscrit en ratifiant la Charte des Nations Unies. Les contradictions qui font échec à l'application des principes énoncés dans la Charte émanent tout d'abord des puissances qui manipulent l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour satisfaire leurs ambitions sanguinaires. Parmi ces puissances figure le Royaume-Uni, dont les doctrinaires des épopées coloniales comptent parmi les plus érudits que l'humanité ait connus. Le souvenir des grandes conquêtes de la colonisation britannique anime encore les esprits des dirigeants de Londres, qui rêvent de donner à leur puissance en voie d'effondrement une physionomie nouvelle.

157. En effet, le meilleur tableau de la colonisation britannique, la meilleure définition de l'orientation nouvelle de la politique coloniale de Londres, style XX^e siècle, nous ont été donnés ici par l'éminent représentant du Royaume-Uni en des termes très éloquents. Le Royaume-Uni, pour répondre aux recommandations de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, se félicite d'endosser encore la responsabilité de plus de 31 territoires non autonomes sur les quelque 67 qui ont été inventoriés. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni est fier de porter à la connaissance de l'Assemblée générale les mesures prises par son gouvernement afin de conduire les peuples qu'il subjugue encore à l'indépendance suivant, nous dit-il, un noble principe de la Grande-Bretagne: le principe du consentement du gouverné, ce principe étant le plus révolutionnaire — il voulait dire le plus démocratique en matière de décolonisation.

158. De telles déclarations à l'Assemblée générale font douter de la bonne foi des Anglais et de la volonté du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de consentir aux exigences d'un phénomène irréversible: la libération et l'octroi de l'indépendance aux peuples sous domination étrangère, principe inscrit en lettres d'or dans la Charte de l'Organisation.

159. Ma délégation a été très choquée par les paroles du représentant du Royaume-Uni et tient à déclarer que l'action du Royaume-Uni en matière de décolonisation est la plus confuse qui soit, parce que dépourvue de programme. Ainsi, la déclaration de lord Caradon [1386^e séance] ne saurait convaincre personne, en tout cas pas dans cette salle, si ce n'est lui-même et son gouvernement.

160. Par ces révélations du représentant du Royaume-Uni, l'opinion africaine aux Nations Unies a été informée à la source même, ce qui lui a permis de mieux saisir la politique que cette puissance entend suivre en se gardant d'exécuter les recommandations de la Déclaration, qui font l'objet du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/6000/Rev.1] actuellement en discussion.

161. Dès lors, nous pouvons comprendre comment, avec minutie, défiant la communauté internationale, le Royaume-Uni a préparé la Rhodésie à proclamer son indépendance, après l'Afrique du Sud, qui est aussi un "produit britannique". Le consentement des gouvernés ayant correspondu aux intérêts de la Puissance administrante, ces deux pays, à des dates différentes, ont accédé à l'indépendance sans coup férir. Londres se réjouit d'avoir ainsi accompli sa mission civilisatrice.

162. La responsabilité du Royaume-Uni, dans ce qu'on appelle en jargon diplomatique la "déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance de la Rhodésie", est illimitée. Le meilleur appui de Smith et des autres 230 000 cow-boys rhodésiens d'origine européenne se trouve avant tout à Londres et notamment au Parlement britannique, où des voix ne cessent de s'élever pour invectiver le gouvernement Wilson en ce qui concerne l'embargo contre la Rhodésie, donnant ainsi la meilleure preuve que les sanctions économiques préconisées par Londres — et que le chef de la diplomatie britannique s'est employé à grand fracas à étaler au Conseil de sécurité pour le convaincre — ne sont que du "bluff à l'anglaise". Le Royaume-Uni est le seul à s'honorer d'avoir atteint son objectif dans sa politique rhodésienne. Les préparatifs remontent à 1923 pour s'achever en 1961, date de la Constitution accordant l'exercice du pouvoir à la minorité raciste du capitaine Smith.

163. Par conséquent, la visite de M. Stewart à New York ne s'inscrit que dans le cadre des tournées habituelles qu'un homme d'affaires doit effectuer pour s'entretenir avec ses partenaires et donner toute assurance à ces derniers que le chiffre d'affaires des compagnies étrangères installées en Rhodésie ne sera pour autant perturbé, malgré la déclaration d'indépendance des autorités investies par la Constitution de 1961, constitution elle-même renouvée le 11 novembre 1965.

164. Un autre argument avancé par le Royaume-Uni et qui porte sur la non-utilisation des mesures militaires pour réduire la rébellion, si celle-ci constitue réellement un affront à la Couronne, est qu'Ian Smith est un héros de la dernière guerre et que, par conséquent, les troupes britanniques ne peuvent pas être utilisées pour s'opposer à d'autres troupes britanniques, celles basées en Rhodésie. En termes plus clairs, le Royaume-Uni reconnaît de facto le gouvernement Smith et les problèmes entre les différentes communautés rhodésiennes relèvent "des affaires intérieures de la Rhodésie". Voilà l'application littérale du principe du consentement des gouvernés tel qu'il nous a été expliqué par le représentant du Royaume-Uni, ce pays, pourtant, au noble passé démocratique.

165. Tout en se gardant de faire allusion à l'organisation des armées de la seconde guerre mondiale, les pays coloniaux, en tout cas, se souviendront très certainement que les troupes d'outre-mer ont joué un rôle digne d'éloges dans la liquidation du fascisme et du nazisme en Europe, une Europe déchirée par une guerre atroce dont certains épisodes émouvants demeurent encore dans les mémoires des mêmes puissances qui, hier victimes et implorant l'aide des soldats africains, préparent à présent l'opinion internationale à d'autres rêves d'hégémonie militaire et économique, faisant ainsi courir à l'humanité le risque d'une autre conflagration, plus effroyable puisque atomique.

166. Pour une cause qui n'était pas la leur — et ici je ne fais pas de distinction entre les troupes coloniales —, les contingents africains ont sauvé, grâce à leurs armées respectives, ce qui hier encore s'appelait dans la littérature coloniale "la mère patrie". Les anciens combattants, parmi lesquels plusieurs blessés de guerre même s'ils n'ont pas, comme Smith, piloté d'avions militaires, témoignent bien de leur valeur aux combats, surtout quand on pense que, très souvent, ces soldats luttent dans des conditions de climat impossibles, servant de chair à canon aux armées hitlériennes et autres.

167. La contribution de l'Afrique à la paix honore ce continent contre lequel l'Occident, aujourd'hui, braque ses mitraillettes les plus meurtrières en récompense des services rendus à la libération d'une Europe ensanglantée.

168. Ainsi, en signe de reconnaissance à l'Afrique, Londres a offert le cadeau rhodésien, qui a été envoyé au moment même de la célébration du cinquième anniversaire de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, adoptée par l'Assemblée générale le 14 décembre 1960 [résolution 1514 (XV)].

169. L'OTAN, où figurent la plupart des puissances colonialistes et impérialistes, constitue une force contre le progrès, notamment le progrès des pays d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine. Dans le cadre du présent débat, il est à déplorer que les pays mem-bres de l'OTAN s'évertuent encore à subjuguer plus de 67 territoires non autonomes représentant environ 45 millions d'habitants.

170. Une analyse, aussi brève soit-elle, permet de déterminer que, dans l'histoire des peuples, chaque membre de l'OTAN a été directement ou indirectement à l'origine d'un conflit armé, en Europe, surtout, et même ailleurs. Cette union des agresseurs donne évidemment une situation géographique précise des foyers d'agression dans le monde. Si le lieu géométrique de toutes ces agressions est constitué par l'océan qui a donné son nom à ladite organisation, on peut comparer l'OTAN à un monstre hideux, aux élucubrations humanitaires et "altruistes", mais dont les tentacules sèment la mort et le désordre en Afrique, en Amérique latine et en Asie.

171. Dès lors, on comprend plus aisément le rôle des bases militaires installées dans les régions stratégiques: Guam, Aden, Ascension, Gibraltar et autres. Il est évident que chacune de ces bases a déjà joué son rôle soit pour des entreprises communes ou individuelles, soit pour des opérations dites humanitaires du genre de l'exploit anglo-américano-belge de Stanleyville, de la suspension de la Constitution en Guyane britannique et à Aden, ou de la guerre coloniale au Viet-Nam.

172. Fidèle à la tradition anti-impérialiste du pays que j'ai l'honneur de représenter, ma délégation tient à réaffirmer devant toutes les autres délégations directement intéressées d'Asie et d'Amérique latine que le Congo (Brazzaville) soutient et soutiendra tous les mouvements de libération, où qu'ils aient lieu. Mais une vue d'ensemble de la situation en ce qui concerne les territoires non autonomes nous montre que, parmi les territoires recensés et figurant dans le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, ceux d'Afrique comptent malheureusement pour une très grosse part et que, par conséquent, la résolution sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux revêt une importance particulière pour l'intégrité de ce continent.

173. Les délégations du Mali et de la Tanzanie ont défini très clairement la politique à appliquer aux territoires petits tant du point de vue de l'étendue que de celui de l'importance démographique. Ma délégation voudrait s'associer aux paroles des représentants de ces deux délégations à propos des petits territoires, tout en faisant également siennes les remarques et conclusions du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre ayant trait à l'avenir de ces territoires.

174. A ce stade de la discussion sur les territoires non autonomes, tournons-nous vers l'Afrique où, après la Rhodésie, au sujet de laquelle j'ai déjà donné il y a un instant le point de vue de ma délégation, les territoires sous administration portugaise et le Sud-Ouest africain sont le point de mire de la presse internationale, et où des événements sanglants endeuillent ce continent, alors qu'aux Nations Unies on disserte sur le principe de l'autodétermination des peuples, volontairement accepté par le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud, qui s'arrogent le privilège d'appartenir à l'Organisation.

175. Quant au Portugal, ce petit territoire de 90 000 kilomètres carrés, sans doute l'un des plus pauvres d'Europe, en tout cas le plus pauvre des pays membres de l'OTAN, il contrôle encore en Afrique un vaste empire colonial de 2 110 000 kilomètres carrés et de plus de 12 millions d'habitants. Ses provinces dites portugaises de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée Bissau contribuent pour plus de 80 p. 100 à son économie.

176. Cette situation anachronique, à cette étape de l'histoire des Nations Unies, inquiète au plus haut point les Africains en général, en particulier ceux dont les frontières voisinent avec les territoires sous administration portugaise. Et comment ne pas s'alarmer quand on pense que qui dit "Portugal" dit "OTAN", et qu'"OTAN" fait immédiatement songer à une agression et à une menace dangereuse pour la paix en Afrique?

177. De ces territoires, deux: l'Angola et le Mozambique, sont situés dans une région qui passe pour être une chasse gardée et où les derniers soubresauts de l'impérialisme entraînent parfois des situations complexes, dangereuses pour l'indépendance et la sécurité des pays souverains limitrophes.

178. Les richesses considérables qui inondent cette partie du continent africain aiguissent les visées tentaculaires des milieux économiques capitalistes et monopolistes qui sont choqués de constater que l'Afrique pourrait, grâce à une utilisation plus rationnelle de ses propres richesses, par ses propres moyens, se soustraire à l'exploitation à laquelle se livrent les sociétés internationales implantées dans ces régions.

179. Dans tous les pays d'une région allant du golfe de Guinée au canal de Mozambique, l'action des monopoles étrangers, le rôle prépondérant des compagnies minières internationales constituent le principal obstacle à l'indépendance des pays qui s'y trouvent.

180. Le Portugal, assuré du soutien militaire de ses partenaires de l'OTAN, n'a cessé de défier l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la rendant ainsi inapte à appliquer les mesures prévues par la Charte pour faire face à de telles situations. Le comportement du Portugal, en violation flagrante de la Charte, ne saurait être interprété autrement qu'une agression contre l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ce qui implique nécessairement la prise de sanctions, comme il est indiqué au Chapitre VII de la Charte. La moindre de ces mesures, en tout cas, de l'avis de ma délégation, pourrait consister par exemple en l'exclusion du Portugal de l'ONU. Le Portugal, doté de moyens économiques très réduits, pays dont les principales ressources sont le vin et le liège, consacre plus de 200 millions de dollars pour entretenir un corps expéditionnaire en Angola, au Mozambique et en Guinée dite portugaise. Aux yeux du monde entier, il semble qu'une telle aventure dépasse les possibilités réelles d'un pays incapable de résoudre les graves problèmes relatifs au développement de son propre territoire. Toutes ces constatations nous obligent donc à admettre que sans l'aide militaire et financière de ses partenaires de l'OTAN, le Portugal aurait été contraint à appliquer les résolutions que les Nations Unies ne cessent d'adopter et qui ont trait aux territoires dont il assume encore l'administration.

181. Il y a plus: l'existence d'une triple alliance militaire dans cette partie du continent africain avec comme partenaires réels le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et la Rhodésie révèle la situation explosive que ces forces aux visées expansionnistes s'efforcent de faire régner sous le fallacieux prétexte de l'anti-communisme, tout en préparant et perpétrant le génocide.

182. Les déclarations des représentants des Etats-Unis et du Royaume-Uni dénotent la complicité de ces Etats dans leur soutien de la politique rétrograde du Portugal et de ses deux alliés, et nul n'ignore à présent que les programmes de Smith, Salazar et Verwoerd, dans cette partie méridionale du continent, visent: premièrement, l'expropriation systématique des territoires aux mains des Africains; deuxièmement, l'extermination des populations autochtones, comme cela s'est produit d'ailleurs dans certaines parties devenues aujourd'hui les plus développées du monde sur le plan économique; troisièmement, l'implantation de compagnies minières très prospères, à gestion et administration extérieures au continent.

183. En ce qui concerne la situation dans le Sud-Ouest africain, ma délégation déplore l'inefficacité des Nations Unies qu'indique l'abondance des résolutions adoptées, et se prononce pour une solution concrète devant mener immédiatement le peuple zimbabwe à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté internationale.

184. Etant donné la prudence des puissances dont les intérêts économiques dans le Sud-Ouest africain semblent le seul obstacle aux mesures préconisées par les Nations Unies pour la libération complète de ce territoire, il importe que les Nations Unies fassent preuve de plus de réalisme devant la situation qui y existe. Les mesures à prendre consisteraient en: 1) la suppression du Mandat pour le Sud-Ouest africain; 2) l'élaboration d'une constitution tenant compte des aspirations et des désirs profonds des populations du territoire dans leur ensemble; 3) l'installation d'un gouvernement de transition; 4) l'organisation d'élections sur la base du suffrage universel, en vue de l'établissement définitif des institutions dont le Sud-Ouest africain sera doté; 5) la fixation de la date de l'indépendance de ce territoire.

185. La délégation du Congo (Brazzaville) rend hommage au Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour le précieux travail qu'il a réalisé, conformément au mandat qui lui avait été confié par l'Assemblée générale. Les conclusions de son rapport sur chacun des territoires visés par la résolution 1514 (XV) constituent une base de solution à tous les problèmes relatifs à l'indépendance de ces territoires.

186. L'Assemblée générale, en examinant le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, devrait sans trop tarder concevoir une politique nouvelle de décolonisation pour faire admettre les principes de la Charte par les puissances ayant encore sous leur administration un certain nombre de territoires.

187. Dans l'ensemble, il appartient à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de créer une commission spéciale qui serait chargée de fixer la date de l'accession à l'indépendance des territoires qui font l'objet de la présente discussion.

188. Avant de terminer, ma délégation voudrait lancer un vibrant appel à l'Organisation des Nations Unies et au Conseil de sécurité pour les inviter à sortir de leur immobilisme fatal. Selon un article, daté du 24 novembre 1965, paru dans le Monde du 25 novembre:

"Trois jours seulement après leur échec dans l'affaire rhodésienne, les Africains viennent d'en subir un second, au Conseil de sécurité, sur la question des sanctions économiques contre le Portugal."

Nous lisons plus loin dans le même journal:

"Les Africains ne doivent compter que sur eux-mêmes. Il faut reconnaître en revanche qu'en refusant de voter toute mesure de sanction contre le Portugal, y compris l'embargo sur les envois d'armes, les puissances occidentales ont agi pour une fois avec plus de franchise qu'elles n'ont l'habitude de le faire. Leur vote d'hier" — il s'agit évidemment du vote sur les territoires sous administration portugaise — "caractérise fort bien l'état d'esprit qui règne en Occident au sujet des derniers problèmes de décolonisation qui se posent toujours en Afrique. Il se peut qu'on sympathise avec les demandes africaines, qu'on condamne le principe de l'apartheid et le régime de M. Ian Smith, qu'on trouve ridicule que le Portugal, pauvre et arriéré, soit le seul pays à s'obstiner à vouloir conserver des colonies en Afrique ... il n'en reste pas moins que l'immense majorité des Américains et des Européens ne sont pas du tout désireux de voir leurs pays engagés dans des opérations aussi compliquées et délicates que le seraient un boycottage économique du Portugal ou un blocus de la Rhodésie, opérations qui poseraient l'une et l'autre d'innombrables problèmes juridiques, économiques et politiques.

"La politique menée depuis plusieurs années à l'ONU par les pays africains en vue de contraindre les pays occidentaux à prendre des mesures contre "les vestiges du colonialisme" en Afrique — parce qu'ils n'étaient pas en mesure de le faire eux-mêmes — n'a pas donné de résultats positifs. Certes, ils peuvent se vanter d'avoir obtenu certains succès contre le colonialisme français ou anglais ...

"En revanche, contre les dictatures du type portugais ou sud-africain, l'ONU se révèle impuissante. Pour achever la décolonisation de leur continent, les Africains ne devront compter dorénavant que sur leurs propres forces. Telle est la conclusion qu'il leur faut tirer du double échec qu'ils viennent de subir à l'occasion des votes de samedi dernier sur la question rhodésienne et d'hier mardi sur les colonies portugaises."

189. C'est pour cette raison que ma délégation invite tous les pays épris de liberté et de paix à apporter une aide très efficace aux Etats africains afin de mettre en application les décisions qui sont en train d'être prises à Addis-Abéba à l'heure où nous nous égosillons dans cette salle.

La séance est levée à 18 h 15.

Président: M. Amintore FANFANI (Italie).

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

1. Le PRÉSIDENT: Je voudrais attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée sur le rapport de la Cinquième Commission [A/6134] qui concerne les incidences financières des recommandations du Comité spécial telles qu'elles apparaissent au paragraphe 109 du chapitre premier du rapport du Comité [A/6000/Rev.1].

2. M. MAGHERU (Roumanie): Il y a 20 ans, les participants au cinquième Congrès panafricain déclaraient:

"Nous sommes décidés à être libres... Nous allons obliger le monde à écouter la relation de notre condition. Nous allons lutter en employant tous les moyens dont nous disposons pour la liberté, pour la démocratie et pour l'amélioration sociale 1/."

3. Cette déclaration fut suivie d'actions courageuses et les peuples d'Afrique, de même que ceux des autres continents qui ont accédé à l'indépendance avec l'appui de toutes les forces anticolonialistes, ont mis fin au joug colonial, faisant de la sorte entrevoir le moment où, dans un proche avenir, le colonialisme sera complètement aboli.

4. L'Organisation des Nations Unies s'est située du côté des peuples colonisés en adoptant, il y a cinq ans, la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. L'activité ultérieure de l'Organisation et l'adoption de recommandations ayant trait à l'application de la Déclaration ont provoqué un grand écho parmi les peuples des colonies, qui y ont trouvé un appui dans leur lutte pour l'abolition de la domination étrangère.

5. Cinq ans ont passé, disions-nous, depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cependant, près de 50 millions d'hommes continuent à vivre dans un grand nombre de territoires dépendants. La situation actuelle de ces territoires confirme une fois de plus les méfaits de la domination coloniale, qui prive les peuples dépendants de leurs droits les plus élémentaires.

6. L'exploitation des richesses naturelles et des ressources humaines des territoires coloniaux, l'application d'une législation discriminatoire, les mesures répressives prises contre ceux qui luttent pour la libération nationale, les guerres menées contre les peuples qui demandent l'octroi de leurs droits légitimes, tout cela entrave encore leur progrès économique, politique, social et culturel, et ce sont autant d'éléments de profonde inquiétude pour la communauté internationale.

7. La situation de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise, de la Rhodésie du Sud, d'Aden et du Sud-Ouest africain fait depuis plusieurs années l'objet des principales discussions au sein de l'Organisation, tant à l'Assemblée générale qu'au Conseil de sécurité. La détérioration continue de la situation de ces territoires a engendré des dangers réels pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

8. En ce qui concerne les petits territoires habités par des populations peu nombreuses, le fait que les puissances administrantes n'appliquent pas les dispositions de la Déclaration sur la décolonisation constitue également un danger en germe qui peut donner lieu à des complications internationales. Au cours de cette année, certaines puissances coloniales ont rendu publiques leurs intentions de renforcer leurs positions dans ces territoires, pour pouvoir les utiliser tout particulièrement à des fins stratégiques. Par exemple, M. Cooper, membre de la Chambre des communes britannique, a exprimé les idées suivantes, qui ne sont certes pas isolées:

"Nos bases de l'Extrême-Orient sont vulnérables... De concert avec les Etats-Unis, l'Australie et la Nouvelle-Zélande, il faudrait créer une ou des bases réelles qui ne soient pas vulnérables et dont nous ne puissions être rejetés. De telles bases devraient probablement se situer dans le nord de l'Australie ou de la Nouvelle-Zélande, ou dans toutes autres fies en régions qu'on estimerait appropriées 2/."

9. Les nouvelles tentatives s'ajoutent aux arrangements déjà existants pour l'utilisation des petits territoires coloniaux à des fins stratégiques. Il nous suffit de donner deux exemples. Conformément à la déclaration du 11 février 1965, faite par le Secrétaire d'Etat aux colonies du Royaume-Uni, les Etats-Unis ont le droit de maintenir des bases aériennes et navales dans les sept territoires anglais suivants de la région des Antilles: Antigua, Barbade, Sainte-Lucie, îles Turques et Caïques, Bermudes, Bahamas et la Guyane dite anglaise. Tout récemment, l'Assemblée générale a été saisie du problème de la constitution de bases à l'île Maurice.

10. L'existence de bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux est, pour les populations de ces territoires, un sérieux obstacle à la libre expression de leur volonté concernant leur statut politique. Les plans qui envisagent la création de nouvelles bases dressent des obstacles supplémentaires à la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et engendrent de nouveaux dangers pour la souveraineté des pays déjà indépendants.

11. Le refus des puissances administrantes de prendre des mesures immédiates pour transmettre le pouvoir aux populations des colonies s'explique également par le désir de ces puissances coloniales de continuer l'exploitation des richesses de leurs colonies. Le Sous-Comité I du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, qui a étudié les incidences de l'activité des compagnies étrangères dans les territoires se trouvant sous administration portugaise, est arrivé à la conclusion suivante:

"b) Les intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, appuient directement ou indirectement le colonialisme portugais, qui leur permet d'exploiter les ressources humaines et naturelles de ces territoires et d'en tirer bénéfice;

"c) Les intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, qui exercent leur activité dans les territoires administrés par le Portugal en Afrique, ainsi que le Gouvernement portugais, portent la responsabilité des souffrances de la population de ces territoires." [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. V (2ème partie), par. 275.]

12. Le Comité spécial est arrivé à une conclusion similaire en ce qui concerne l'étude portant sur l'activité des monopoles étrangers au Sud-Ouest africain. L'étude, ainsi qu'il ressort du rapport du Comité à ce sujet, "nous permet de conclure que l'activité des compagnies internationales dans le Sud-Ouest africain constitue l'un des principaux obstacles à l'acheminement du pays vers l'indépendance"^{3/}.

13. L'ensemble de ces intérêts complexes des puissances coloniales est à la base de l'appui que ces puissances s'accordent mutuellement pour maintenir leurs positions dans les territoires coloniaux.

14. Dans l'étude intitulée "L'ascension et la chute du colonialisme occidental", on montrait que:

"Il est maintenant absolument évident que le colonialisme approche à pas rapides de sa fin. Quelques problèmes doivent encore être résolus, notamment ceux soulevés par les colonies qui ont été sous la domination des colons blancs. Mais il est peu probable que les colonies encore existantes, peut-être même les colonies portugaises d'outre-mer, survivent à la fin de cette décennie^{4/}."

15. En effet, l'écroulement du système colonial est arrivé à son dernier stade. Les peuples rejettent la domination coloniale sur les territoires où la résistance des colonialistes se manifeste de la manière la plus acharnée.

16. Il nous est possible, à cette étape, d'avoir une vue d'ensemble des caractéristiques et de la situation des territoires dépendants. Les principaux centres de la résistance à la décolonisation se trouvent, en premier lieu, en Afrique, où un bastion de la domination raciste blanche est en voie d'être institué. Une sorte de cordon sanitaire à domination européenne, comprenant les colonies portugaises de l'Angola et du Mozambique, a été complété par l'instauration du régime raciste de la Rhodésie du Sud, auquel le Royaume-Uni a livré graduellement tout le pouvoir, y compris les forces armées.

17. Le régime de l'Afrique du Sud, promoteur de l'apartheid, donne tout son appui à cette barrière colonialiste sur le continent africain et en constitue même le noyau.

18. Ce n'est pas un hasard que ces pays sont riches en gisements de minerais précieux: or, diamants et autres, qui trouvent leurs principaux acheteurs à Londres et à New York.

19. Ce bastion de fanatiques blancs bien armés constitue une véritable menace pour les pays africains libres. Cette menace est actuelle et est clairement visée par les dispositions du Chapitre VII de la Charte. L'expérience des 30 dernières années nous apprend que ces centres de résistance raciste mènent tôt ou tard à l'agression. Mais là n'est pas le seul danger pour les pays africains libres. Les colonies anglaises, portugaises et autres, parsemées sur les côtes africaines, constituent des avant-postes des colonialistes qui complètent le bastion sud-africain.

20. En second lieu, les colonies d'Arabie du Sud, des Antilles, et la Guyane britannique, ainsi que les îles du Pacifique, de l'océan Indien et de l'Atlantique, constituent des bases, des ports d'attache qui enserreraient tous les continents et complètent les bases que les pays impérialistes ont réussi à obtenir, à une époque troublée, sur le territoire des pays indépendants. L'histoire de ces dernières années a prouvé que ces bases constituent aussi des points d'appui pour des actes d'agression impérialiste contre les pays indépendants, telle l'agression des Etats-Unis contre l'Etat libre du Viet-Nam.

21. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit intervenir d'une manière ferme et efficace pour appuyer les peuples qui continuent d'être privés du droit sacré de disposer de leur sort. Partant de cette notion, la délégation roumaine estime que le présent débat pourrait aboutir à l'élaboration de certaines recommandations qui viendraient soutenir la lutte menée par les peuples colonisés.

^{3/} Voir Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, dix-neuvième session, Annexes, annexe No 15, document A/5480, par. 176.

^{4/} S. C. Easton, The Rise and Fall of Western Colonialism, New York, Frederick A. Praeger, 1964.

22. Il faudra que l'Assemblée générale formule des recommandations qui correspondent à la volonté librement exprimée de la population de chaque territoire ou y souscrive. A cet effet, il faudra de nouveau recommander aux puissances coloniales de créer des conditions qui permettent aux populations des territoires colonisés d'exprimer librement leur volonté.

23. La délégation roumaine est également d'avis qu'il faut examiner avec toute l'attention qui s'impose la suggestion faite au cours de la présente session par le représentant de la République du Mali [1385ème séance] au sujet de l'opportunité d'établir des relations directes entre le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et les populations des territoires colonisés. D'ailleurs, des propositions similaires ont été présentées par d'autres délégations.

24. Le second point, qui devrait être examiné dans le cadre de ce débat, est l'urgence de l'application des dispositions de la Déclaration. La résolution [1514 (XV)] adoptée en 1960 et les résolutions ultérieures de l'Assemblée générale, de même que d'importants documents adoptés dans d'autres conférences internationales, par exemple les réunions de l'Organisation de l'unité africaine et la Conférence du Caire des pays non alignés tenue en octobre 1964, ont souligné l'urgence de l'abolition du système colonial. Il est évident que les Nations Unies, qui examinent chaque année le stade atteint dans la mise en vigueur de la Déclaration, devront préciser plus explicitement le terme "urgent", lui donnant une acception plus concrète.

25. De même, nous considérons que la préoccupation de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à l'égard des cadres nationaux des territoires dépendants devrait être plus intense. Nous nous référons à la nécessité de se préoccuper davantage de la sauvegarde des dirigeants et des membres du mouvement de la libération nationale, qui pourront devenir demain les chefs et les cadres des nouveaux Etats indépendants.

26. Au fond, si l'ONU a demandé aux puissances administrantes de prendre des mesures pour transmettre immédiatement le pouvoir aux populations des territoires coloniaux, et si ces puissances font tout ce qui est en leur pouvoir pour entraver l'activité des mouvements nationaux et usent de représailles à l'égard des leaders de ces mouvements, il n'est guère possible que cette organisation ne prenne promptement position contre des agissements qui mènent, non à l'octroi du droit des peuples à décider de leur sort, mais au maintien des régimes coloniaux. Ecarter de la vie politique les chefs des populations des territoires coloniaux et attirer et soutenir certains éléments qui, en fait, ne représentent pas ces populations mais sont prêts à défendre les intérêts des puissances coloniales, cela constitue des violations des dispositions de la Déclaration de 1960 et crée une source grave de conflits et d'inquiétudes dans ces territoires.

27. L'abolition du système colonial a été, depuis longtemps, considérée comme une tâche importante et urgente. A la session actuelle, l'Assemblée générale devra, de l'avis de ma délégation, donner une nouvelle impulsion à ce processus dont la signification historique est évidente. La lutte pour l'abolition de la domination coloniale trouve son complément naturel dans les efforts déployés aujourd'hui par la plupart des peuples pour asseoir leur indépendance politique sur de solides bases économiques, pour progresser et pour élever leur niveau de vie.

28. Le lien étroit et indissoluble qui existe entre les deux étapes du même processus met en lumière la nécessité d'octroyer une indépendance politique réelle qui permette aux nouveaux pays souverains de s'occuper, sans entrave, de l'accomplissement des tâches complexes que leur impose la réalisation du progrès économique et social.

29. Les limites que certaines puissances coloniales imposent aux pays indépendants, avant ou au moment de transmettre le pouvoir aux peuples coloniaux, constituent une violation de la Déclaration sur le colonialisme et de la Charte des Nations Unies, et influencent d'une manière négative la réalisation des objectifs que les nouveaux pays doivent atteindre après s'être vu octroyer l'indépendance. Par exemple, la création de bases militaires, ou la signature d'accords inéquitables avant l'indépendance afin de pouvoir maintenir les bases militaires déjà existantes, l'octroi de concessions pour l'exploitation des ressources naturelles de ces pays par les monopoles étrangers, créant des obligations dès avant l'indépendance, constituent autant d'entraves à l'indépendance même et au privilège de la souveraineté nationale.

30. Il est du devoir de l'Organisation de se prononcer fermement et d'une manière conséquente contre toute tentative faite pour enfreindre le droit des peuples à jouir des conditions optimums pour transformer leur indépendance politique en indépendance complète. L'Organisation doit aussi prendre des mesures efficaces pour déterminer quelles puissances bénéficient, directement ou indirectement, de l'exploitation des territoires coloniaux, et pour appliquer les recommandations du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale.

31. La tâche de l'Assemblée générale ne saurait être menée à bonne fin sans l'activité du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Le travail déjà accompli par les membres de ce comité, sous l'autorité compétente de son Président, laisse présager des résultats encore meilleurs pour l'avenir. C'est pourquoi la délégation roumaine se prononce pour la prolongation du mandat du Comité des Vingt-Quatre.

32. C'est pour l'Organisation un point d'honneur que de rechercher les moyens les meilleurs pour aider les peuples coloniaux à mettre fin, une fois pour toutes et le plus tôt possible, au honteux système colonial, tare de la civilisation de notre siècle. Nous devons nous rendre compte que l'Organisation faillirait à sa tâche et compromettrait gravement son prestige si elle ne prenait pas des mesures urgentes dans ce sens.

33. Les peuples, quant à eux, continueront, nous le savons tous, leur lutte pour la liberté, l'indépendance et la pleine souveraineté et obtiendront la reconnaissance de leurs droits légitimes malgré et contre l'opposition acharnée des puissances coloniales et des monopoles.

34. Faisons en sorte qu'une fois encore l'Organisation des Nations Unies se situe du côté du droit et du progrès. Le Gouvernement et le peuple roumains, notre délégation tient à le déclarer du haut de cette tribune, ne failliront pas à leur devoir et seront fidèles au profond sentiment de solidarité et de justice qui les attache à la noble lutte des peuples coloniaux.

35. La délégation de la République socialiste de Roumanie se prononcera pour l'adoption de mesures efficaces qui puissent aboutir à la mise en œuvre, sans retard, des dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, qui a été adoptée il y a cinq ans par l'Assemblée générale.

37. Le tableau qu'offre aujourd'hui la lutte de libération nationale des peuples nous convainc de la fin imminente du régime abhorré de la subjugation coloniale. Mais, les faits patents de la situation qui règne actuellement dans les nombreux territoires dépendants d'Afrique et d'autres continents, les répressions féroces des puissances coloniales contre les peuples soulevés de ces territoires, ainsi que les informations importantes du rapport du Comité spécial [A/6000/Rev.1] sont un témoignage de l'acharnement avec lequel les impérialistes et les colonialistes se cramponnent à ce régime hideux de domination et d'exploitation étrangères. Le rapport nous révèle, en particulier, les difficultés auxquelles s'est heurté le Comité spécial dans l'accomplissement de sa tâche par suite de l'attitude d'obstruction et des manœuvres diverses des puissances administrantes.

38. Tout cela met en évidence l'importance de la tâche incombant aux Etats Membres qui ont à cœur la cause de l'indépendance des peuples et de la paix mondiale, l'ampleur des efforts à déployer contre les visées des puissances impérialistes — en premier lieu contre les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, principaux responsables dans ce domaine —, en vue d'apporter une contribution efficace à la lutte héroïque pour l'indépendance que mènent les peuples qui subissent encore le joug odieux du colonialisme.

39. La lutte des peuples contre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme, qui jouit de la solidarité et de l'appui de toute l'humanité progressiste, domine aujourd'hui la scène mondiale. L'un des événements les plus récents qui a soulevé une vague d'indignation parmi les peuples d'Afrique et des autres continents est la situation créée en Rhodésie du Sud, avec la proclamation arbitraire de la prétendue indépendance de ce territoire par la minorité de colons blancs, encouragée et appuyée par l'impérialisme britannique et par les autres puissances coloniales.

40. Ce nouveau pas constitue un autre acte colonialiste, une attaque grave contre le peuple africain de la Rhodésie du Sud, une menace sérieuse contre les peuples d'Afrique et un défi aux pays et aux peuples épris de paix du monde entier. Le but des impérialistes britanniques et des autres impérialistes qui ont de grands intérêts en Rhodésie du Sud est de transformer ce pays en une tête de pont colonialiste contre les peuples africains luttant pour leur libération, et contre les Etats indépendants d'Afrique.

41. Après avoir échoué dans ces tentatives bien connues visant à créer la prétendue Fédération de l'Afrique centrale ou d'imposer à la Rhodésie du Sud la Constitution, de triste renommée, visant à assurer la domination de 200 000 colons blancs sur le peuple zimbabwe de 4 millions, les colonialistes britanniques, en collusion avec leurs suppôts blancs de ce territoire africain, ont eu recours à la dernière tactique frauduleuse: la proclamation unilatérale, par les autorités racistes d'Ian Smith, de la prétendue indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud.

42. A ce nouveau crime contre le peuple zimbabwe sont mêlées diverses puissances impérialistes et colonialistes avec, en tête, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, qui sont la plus grande puissance colonialiste et raciste, le pire ennemi de la liberté des peuples d'Afrique et du monde entier et qui ont de grands intérêts en Rhodésie du Sud, où les monopoles américains se sont infiltrés depuis longtemps et d'où ils tirent des bénéfices importants. Naturellement, les propos démagogiques des Etats-Unis à l'égard de la situation en Rhodésie du Sud ne trompent personne. Tout le monde sait comment les Etats-Unis soutiennent les racistes blancs de la Rhodésie du Sud et le Gouvernement britannique.

43. Le peuple africain de la Rhodésie du Sud connaît bien ses ennemis séculaires, les impérialistes et les colonialistes; il n'attend pas le salut de leur part et ne se fait pas d'illusions quant à leurs déclarations fallacieuses sur les sanctions contre le régime raciste d'Ian Smith.

44. Nous estimons aussi que ni les impérialistes ni leurs forces armées, sous n'importe quelle étiquette qu'elles se présentent, fût-ce même sous le nom de "forces des Nations Unies", ne peuvent aider à la libération des peuples subissant la servitude coloniale. L'expérience même de la période toute récente, y compris le cas d'un autre pays africain, le Congo (Léopoldville), nous prouve que de telles forces ne servent que d'instrument de suppression de la lutte de libération des peuples, et cela en vue de perpétuer le régime honteux du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme.

45. Nous avons la conviction que le peuple zimbabwe, comptant en premier lieu sur ses propres forces et sur la solidarité active des peuples d'Afrique et des autres continents, affrontera résolument la nouvelle situation, infligera des coups irrésistibles à la clique d'Ian Smith et à tous les colonialistes qui l'appuient et sortira vainqueur de sa juste lutte pour l'indépendance.

46. Le peuple albanais et son gouvernement, qui ont toujours suivi avec sympathie et qui ont soutenu sans réserve la juste lutte pour l'indépendance du peuple de la Rhodésie du Sud, ont fermement condamné les plans et les intrigues des puissances colonialistes et de leurs suppôts, les racistes blancs de ce territoire africain. Ils ont protesté énergiquement et avec indignation contre la proclamation unilatérale de la prétendue indépendance par une poignée de racistes blancs encouragés et soutenus principalement par le Gouvernement britannique, qui porte la responsabilité première du régime de persécution et de terreur fascistes qui sévit depuis des années contre le vaillant peuple zimbabwe.

47. Dans sa déclaration du 16 novembre 1965 sur cette question, dont le texte a été distribué aux Etats Membres de l'Organisation, le Gouvernement albanais s'exprimait notamment en ces termes:

"Le Gouvernement de la République populaire d'Albanie condamne avec la plus grande énergie cet acte arbitraire et de provocation du groupe raciste d'Ian Smith et des impérialistes anglais qui cherchent ainsi à perpétuer le joug colonialiste sur la malheureuse population africaine de la Rhodésie du Sud (Zimbabwe) 5/."

48. Nous exprimons encore une fois notre confiance nébranlable en la juste cause du peuple zimbabwe. Nous exprimons la conviction que toutes les tentatives des colonialistes en Rhodésie du Sud sont vouées à l'échec et que la dernière manœuvre frauduleuse consistant à proclamer une fausse indépendance ne fera que susciter une résistance encore plus résolue du peuple zimbabwe et accélérera ainsi la fin inéluctable de la domination colonialiste en Rhodésie du Sud.

49. Pendant qu'il met en œuvre, sous le masque des colons blancs de la Rhodésie du Sud, le complot colonialiste ourdi de longue date contre le peuple zimbabwe, le Gouvernement britannique n'hésite pas à mener directement une répression des plus féroces contre le mouvement de libération du peuple d'Aden et des Protectorats, et du peuple d'Oman.

50. Le Royaume-Uni, foulant aux pieds les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale, se lance dans une campagne de terreur et dans des opérations militaires dans le territoire d'Aden et des Protectorats d'Aden, bombardant les populations civiles pacifiques et forçant des dizaines de milliers de personnes à se réfugier au Yémen. La base militaire d'Aden, qui est de plus en plus renforcée, est un instrument de la politique britannique d'agression et menace gravement la paix dans cette région. La récente suspension de la Constitution d'Aden et le renversement du gouvernement nationaliste ont créé une situation explosive qui risque d'embraser toute la région de l'Arabie du Sud.

51. Les colonialistes britanniques mènent en même temps contre les combattants de la liberté et contre le peuple d'Oman tout entier une politique de répression féroce et de violation des droits civiques les plus élémentaires. Le rapport du Comité spécial de l'Oman 6/ fait état d'arrestations, d'emprisonnements en masse et de tortures des patriotes omanais. D'autre part, les villages et la population rurale subissent les attaques de la Royal Air Force ainsi que les opérations punitives des forces armées et des mercenaires du Royaume-Uni. Toutes ces mesures de répression et de terreur ont créé dans le pays une situation intolérable.

52. Dans ces conditions, il incombe aux Etats Membres pacifiques d'exiger l'adoption, par l'Organisation, de mesures susceptibles de contribuer à la lutte des peuples d'Aden et d'Oman pour contraindre le Royaume-Uni à mettre fin à sa politique d'agression et à sa domination coloniale dans cette région.

53. Les colonialistes portugais mènent une guerre sauvage d'extermination contre les peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise, persistant toujours dans leur refus délibéré de mettre en application les mesures préconisées dans les nombreuses résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Le Portugal ne cesse de nourrir son rêve insensé de s'annexer ces trois colonies qu'il considère, ni plus ni moins, comme des provinces portugaises, des prolongements du territoire portugais.

54. En dépit des appels lancés par l'Organisation, les puissances impérialistes ne cessent de faire bénéficier les colonialistes portugais de leur assistance militaire, économique et financière et de leur appui politique et moral. Encouragé et soutenu par ses alliés, le Portugal s'obstine dans son refus de reconnaître le droit à l'indépendance des peuples de ses colonies. Les troupes portugaises sont équipées des armes les plus modernes, fournies par les Etats-Unis et d'autres alliés, qu'elles utilisent pour massacrer et exterminer les populations africaines se trouvant sous leur domination. Les engagements entre les forces patriotes et les forces colonialistes portugaises deviennent de plus en plus fréquents. Fuyant la répression barbare des colonialistes portugais, des milliers de familles africaines ont quitté leurs foyers pour se réfugier dans les pays limitrophes.

55. Il convient de souligner que les puissances impérialistes, en fournissant leur assistance au Portugal, n'agissent pas seulement en tant que défenseurs du système colonialiste, comme tel; elles sont aussi directement intéressées à protéger, dans les colonies portugaises, les bénéfices énormes que leurs monopoles retirent des richesses de ces colonies où ils ont investi des capitaux très supérieurs à ceux des colonialistes portugais.

56. Les Nations Unies se doivent, en vertu de la Charte, de prendre leurs responsabilités pour adopter les mesures qui s'imposent en vue d'apporter une contribution réelle à la lutte de libération des populations africaines sous domination portugaise. Les Etats attachés à la cause de la liberté et de la paix doivent faire face à une épreuve grave dans le cas des colonies portugaises. Les Nations Unies doivent en particulier exiger des puissances impérialistes qu'elles respectent les résolutions leur enjoignant de cesser toute assistance au Portugal et d'adopter les mesures appropriées, nettes et radicales, susceptibles de contribuer efficacement à contraindre le Portugal à quitter sans retard les territoires africains.

57. Depuis déjà 20 ans, les Etats pacifiques s'efforcent de faire pression sur le Gouvernement raciste de l'Afrique du Sud, dans le but de l'amener à renoncer à sa politique d'apartheid et de domination coloniale sur les peuples africains. En dépit de dizaines de résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, le Gouvernement de Pretoria, ne tenant aucun compte de l'opinion publique mondiale, s'obstine dans sa politique criminelle de ségrégation raciale contre la population de couleur de l'Afrique du Sud et redouble d'efforts en vue d'annexer le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain et même les trois territoires du Bassoutoland, du Betchouanaland et du Souaziland.

58. Il est bien connu de tous que le Gouvernement sud-africain est encouragé et soutenu dans sa politique raciste et dans ses visées colonialistes par d'autres puissances impérialistes. Les derniers événements de la Rhodésie du Sud, œuvre commune des impérialistes et des colonialistes, ont encouragé davantage le gouvernement de Verwoerd, qui cherche à tirer parti de la nouvelle situation ainsi créée dans la région. La collusion entre ce gouvernement et les Etats-Unis, le Royaume-Uni, l'Allemagne de l'Ouest, en particulier, est de notoriété publique. Ces puissances fournissent leur assistance au Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud dans le dessein de sauvegarder les bénéfices de leurs monopoles dans ce pays et de continuer de s'en servir comme bases pour leurs plans d'agression, ce qui constitue une menace directe à la paix en Afrique et dans le monde.

59. Le cas de l'Afrique du Sud est parmi les exemples typiques qui montrent où se trouve la source de la survivance du système colonialiste et raciste, et dans quel sens doivent être déployés les efforts et la lutte pour l'élimination totale et définitive de ce régime abhorré d'oppression et d'exploitation des peuples.

60. Nous avons parlé plus haut, à propos de quelques pays coloniaux, de la coopération et de la communauté d'intérêts qui existent entre les puissances colonialistes, préoccupées comme elles le sont de sauvegarder leurs possessions coloniales tant pour les bénéfices énormes qu'elles tirent des territoires dépendants que dans le but de se servir de ceux-ci comme base pour leurs plans agressifs.

61. Sans aucun doute, c'est grâce à leur solidarité et surtout à l'appui et à l'aide fournis par les Etats-Unis, première puissance impérialiste et colonialiste, que le colonialisme a pu se maintenir en vie jusqu'à présent. Les Etats-Unis représentent aujourd'hui le principal bastion du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme. Ils encouragent et aident les anciens colonialistes à maintenir leurs possessions coloniales, tout en s'évertuant à les supplanter et à élargir leur domination dans toutes les régions du globe. Les Etats-Unis, qui représentent l'impérialisme le plus agressif, recourent, dans ce but, à tous les moyens, y compris l'emploi de la force armée.

62. Ils maintiennent sous leur joug colonial nombre de territoires étrangers, tels que Porto Rico, Guam, les îles Vierges. Il convient de rappeler à cette occasion que malgré les demandes réitérées tendant à l'examen de la question de Porto Rico, le Comité spécial, sous la pression des Etats-Unis et en butte à diverses manœuvres de leur part, a remis cet examen d'une session à l'autre, ce qui ne peut manquer de porter préjudice aux droits légitimes du peuple de Porto Rico à la liberté et à l'indépendance de ce pays.

63. Ayant occupé par la force des armes des régions comme le Congo (Léopoldville), la Corée du Sud, Taiwan et d'autres territoires, les impérialistes américains ont transformé ceux-ci en de véritables colonies. Un cas typique qui illustre leur politique d'agression et de conquête est celui du Viet-Nam, où les agresseurs américains mènent une guerre barbare contre l'héroïque peuple vietnamien qui lutte pour ses droits à la libre détermination et à l'indépendance.

64. En un moment où la lutte de libération nationale a pris un essor sans précédent, les Etats-Unis et d'autres puissances impérialistes, conscients de la difficulté de réduire actuellement les peuples à une subjugation ouverte et directe, ont recours à une nouvelle forme plus voilée de domination et d'exploitation étrangères, à savoir le néo-colonialisme. Certainement, dans cette nouvelle forme d'exploitation des peuples, les Etats-Unis sont le principal concurrent. L'impérialisme américain est devenu aujourd'hui l'ennemi primordial des peuples qui luttent pour la liberté et l'indépendance.

65. Sous les coups foudroyants des mouvements de libération nationale, le régime colonial est en état de désagrégation irrémédiable et approche inéluctablement de sa fin. Mais le colonialisme n'est pas liquidé, comme le prétendent les avocats de l'impérialisme. Des dizaines de territoires et des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains sont encore sous la domination coloniale dans diverses régions du globe; Les impérialistes américains et autres continuent d'exercer leur oppression sanglante et de piller les richesses des peuples dépendants.

66. Nous ne pouvons accepter, par ailleurs, le point de vue de ceux qui, sous prétexte d'un danger de guerre et d'une prétendue évolution qu'aurait subi l'impérialisme qui, selon eux, serait devenu raisonnable et pacifique, s'opposent à la lutte des peuples dépendants et préconisent leur capitulation devant l'impérialisme et le colonialisme.

67. Nous avons maintes fois soutenu ici aux Nations Unies — et nous le maintenons — que la lutte de libération nationale des peuples revêt un caractère juste, irréprochable. Cette lutte est imposée par les impérialistes et les colonialistes qui ne veulent pas renoncer à leurs intérêts égoïstes et criminels, à leurs privilèges découlant de l'exploitation féroce des peuples sous leur domination. Les impérialistes et les colonialistes n'abandonnent pas volontiers leurs positions; ils n'octroient pas l'indépendance par suite des demandes et des prières qui leur sont adressées.

68. Un exemple frappant dans ce sens, pour nous, représentants aux Nations Unies, est fourni par la position profondément négative constamment adoptée par les colonialistes à l'égard de centaines de résolutions de l'Organisation sur le colonialisme et la discrimination raciale. Cet exemple, et surtout les guerres de répression et d'agression que mènent les impérialistes contre les peuples épris de paix, constituent la meilleure réponse à ceux qui s'opposent à notre point de vue.

69. Comme nous venons de le souligner, l'indépendance n'est pas offerte par les colonialistes; elle est conquise par la lutte sous toutes ses formes que mènent les peuples asservis, jouissant de la solidarité et de l'appui des peuples et des nations progressistes du monde entier. La lutte des peuples pour l'indépendance est une lutte de légitime défense, elle est sacrée. Des chefs d'Etat d'Afrique et d'Asie, en particulier, qui ont connus les colonialistes par leur propre expérience, ont rejeté publiquement les prétentions de ceux qui préconisent la coexistence pacifique entre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme, d'une part, et les peuples colonisés et dépendants, d'autre part.

70. Il importe de souligner en même temps que, contrairement aux prétentions que je viens de mentionner plus haut, la lutte des peuples pour l'indépendance, et les victoires remportées dans ce domaine, servent directement la cause de la paix. Chaque victoire remportée par les peuples dans leur lutte pour l'indépendance nationale est un coup porté aux forces de guerre impérialistes et, partant, un apport en faveur de la paix.

71. Les grandes victoires successives, en particulier, remportées depuis la seconde guerre mondiale par les peuples d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine qui ont accédé à l'indépendance ont porté des coups sévères aux fondements de la domination de l'impérialisme et du colonialisme et les ont sérieusement affaiblis. Les peuples qui ont secoué le joug étranger sont devenus les éléments d'une force progressive, résolument engagée dans la grande œuvre d'édification d'un monde meilleur où tous les peuples seront libres et maîtres de leur destin.

72. Mais que font les Nations Unies en matière de décolonisation, et quel devrait être leur rôle en ce domaine? Vouloir en juger par le grand nombre d'anciennes colonies qui ont accédé à l'indépendance au cours des 20 dernières années, et attribuer aux Nations Unies la responsabilité des changements intervenus dans le monde au cours de cette période en ce qui concerne la décolonisation, serait commettre une grave erreur. Il y a lieu de réaffirmer d'emblée le fait indéniable que les victoires remportées dans ce domaine sont dues à l'action et à la lutte des peuples coloniaux eux-mêmes, jouissant de la solidarité et de l'appui de tous les peuples et de toutes les nations épris de paix et de liberté. Il serait illogique et absurde de minimiser l'importance de ce facteur primordial qu'est la lutte de libération nationale des peuples. Ceux qui soutiennent une thèse inverse visent des objectifs contraires aux aspirations des peuples opprimés.

73. Par ailleurs, nul ne peut nier le fait que des efforts ont été déployés au sein des Nations Unies pour appuyer les peuples coloniaux et les aider à se libérer du joug colonial. De nombreux pays pacifiques se sont efforcés d'apporter, par l'entremise des Nations Unies, une contribution efficace aux peuples opprimés pour qu'il soit mis fin à leurs souffrances le plus tôt possible. Mais les Nations Unies n'ont pas été en mesure d'accomplir cette tâche à cause de l'attitude obstructionniste des puissances colonialistes et surtout à cause de l'influence néfaste que les Etats-Unis exercent sur l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui est manipulée par cette puissance impérialiste qui s'efforce par tous les moyens d'employer l'Organisation comme un instrument au service de sa politique d'hégémonie et d'agression.

74. Certes, les Etats Membres pacifiques se doivent de ne pas relâcher leurs efforts. Il leur incombe de consolider leur coopération afin de mener une action concertée plus efficace pour libérer en premier lieu l'Organisation de l'emprise des Etats-Unis, cause principale de tous ses défauts et méfaits, et qui, non seulement a gravement affaibli son autorité, mais l'a en même temps rendue incapable de remplir, conformément à la Charte, les tâches afférentes aux grands problèmes de notre époque.

75. En ce qui concerne proprement le problème de la décolonisation, nous estimons que l'ère des informations et des résolutions, qui depuis 20 ans se répètent sans aucun résultat, est d'ores et déjà dépassée. Les Etats Membres attachés à la cause de la liberté et de l'indépendance des peuples doivent agir en conséquence, compte tenu de la situation existante, et exiger l'adoption par l'Assemblée générale de mesures énergiques, nettes et radicales, en prévoyant de très courts délais pour leur mise en œuvre et, le cas échéant, l'application des sanctions prévues au Chapitre VII de la Charte contre les puissances colonialistes réfractaires qui s'obstinent à maintenir leur système odieux de domination colonialiste des peuples, source de souffrances et de guerres d'agression. C'est là l'unique voie susceptible d'apporter une aide réelle à la lutte des peuples pour l'indépendance nationale.

76. L'adoption et la mise en application de telles mesures non seulement serviront la cause des peuples dépendants et la paix, mais constitueront aussi un pas important en faveur de la sauvegarde et de la consolidation de l'Organisation. La délégation albanaise est prête à appuyer toutes mesures susceptibles d'atteindre ces objectifs.

M. Nyankiye (Burundi), vice-président, prend la présidence.

77. M. ACHKAR (Guinée): Il y a cinq ans, l'Assemblée générale adoptait l'historique Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, sous la poussée irrésistible des forces de paix et de progrès coalisées à cette occasion pour imposer aux forces rétrogrades de l'impérialisme ce monument à la liberté par l'autodétermination, cette véritable charte des peuples opprimés et méprisés, la charte des peuples prolétaires. Un vent nouveau balayait alors les enceintes de l'Assemblée, les habitudes périmées, les préjugés, le comportement archaïque et insufflait à nos efforts communs, une vigueur et une détermination sans précédent, en vue de mettre fin à l'aventure coloniale, qui s'affirmait de plus en plus comme une source permanente de frictions et de conflits de nature à mettre en danger la paix et la sécurité internationales.

78. L'aube de la liberté pour tous les peuples, sans distinction de race, de couleur ou de religion, pointait au firmament universel alors que les chefs responsables, les dirigeants engagés des peuples récemment surgis de la nuit de l'esclavage colonial se succédaient à cette même tribune pour affirmer les revendications de leurs frères toujours ployés sous le joug féroce du colonialisme portugais, anglais, espagnol, français, belge et hollandais. Ces dirigeants et ces responsables engagés réitéraient la volonté de paix, de progrès et de fraternité de leurs peuples.

79. Chaque année, l'Assemblée dresse le bilan des résultats obtenus sur le chemin de la réalisation des objectifs de la résolution 1514 (XV) en examinant les rapports soumis par le comité anticolonialiste créé conformément à la résolution: Comité des Dix-Sept naguère, aujourd'hui Comité des Vingt-Quatre. L'Assemblée a envers ce comité, dirigé avec tant de talent et de lucidité par mon frère malien, M. Sory Coulibaly, une dette de reconnaissance au nom des pays dont ce comité n'a cessé de défendre la cause, et aussi au nom de tous les hommes conscients du fait que le maintien du colonialisme empêche le développement de la coopération économique internationale, entra le développement social, culturel et économique des peuples dépendants et va à l'encontre de l'idéal de paix universelle des Nations Unies. Ce sont les mots mêmes de la résolution 1514 (XV).

80. Cette année encore le Comité ne s'est pas départi de sa déjà longue et, devrais-je ajouter, heureuse tradition, qui consiste à exposer clairement et sans ambages ses vues sur l'avenir — si j'ose employer ce mot — du colonialisme et les dangers de toutes sortes qu'il recèle. Et cela, il l'a fait malgré les protestations de plus en plus surnoises et du frein, aujourd'hui peu puissant, des forces réactionnaires représentées par certains de ses membres qui réclament sans cesse des compromis avec les colonialistes parce qu'ils se sont eux-mêmes compromis en s'associant à la besogne méprisante du Portugal, de l'Afrique du Sud, du Royaume-Uni et d'autres puissances accrochées aux mythes dépassés et absurdes, leurs doigts crochus toujours enfoncés dans le flanc des peuples de l'Afrique méridionale dont ils veulent faire des remparts pour préserver leurs privilèges abusifs et leurs propriétés mal acquises et démesurées.

81. On voit dès lors la nécessité de rendre un vibrant hommage à la majorité anticolonialiste du Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour ses efforts remarquables au cours des deux dernières années et en particulier pour les initiatives et les innovations qui ont marqué ses récentes réunions à New York et, surtout, celles qu'il a tenues dans le continent africain. Car pour l'Afrique, la liquidation du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes, y compris le colonialisme économique et culturel, ou néocolonialisme, l'intervention directe et indirecte dans les affaires de jeunes Etats indépendants souvent victimes d'efforts de subversion par procuration, constitue la condition sine qua non d'un développement rapide et pacifique dans la stabilité et la responsabilité internationales. Le voyage effectué dans ce continent a été un facteur positif tout à la fois pour les peuples colonisés et pour l'ONU. Aux premiers, ce voyage a donné la mesure du grand intérêt que les Nations Unies portent à leur cause, qui est un préalable à la réalisation des objectifs de l'Organisation. A la seconde, il a permis d'affirmer son caractère sérieux en la grandissant aux yeux des peuples africains sérieusement ébranlés par la carence de nos organes principaux lorsqu'il s'agit d'aider à extirper du continent les mercenaires de Salazar à Bissau, à Luanda et à Lorenzo Marques, ceux du Royaume-Uni à Salisbury, ceux de Pretoria à Windhoek, etc.

82. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux proclamait sans ambages, dans son paragraphe 5:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance" — cette disposition s'appliquait naturellement à ce que le Royaume-Uni avait qualifié à l'époque de "cas particulier de la Rhodésie", depuis lors entrée en rébellion contre la communauté internationale et le Royaume-Uni — "pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

83. Cinq ans après l'adoption de cette déclaration, qui honore ses auteurs et ceux qui l'ont votée, 85 pays d'une population totale de près de 50 millions d'habitants sont encore ployés sous le joug de la domination étrangère. Il est vrai que le plus grand nombre de ces pays est constitué par ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler des petits pays, des fies pour la plupart, et des enclaves plus ou moins économiquement viables prises séparément et souvent proies faciles du néo-colonialisme, ce dernier stade de l'impérialisme — comme l'appelle le Président Kwame Nkrumah — toujours impatient de revenir sur les lieux de ses crimes sous le couvert d'une assistance dite technique ou financière ou à la faveur d'une base militaire dite défensive.

84. Bien sûr, le gros des effectifs des masses soumise à l'arbitraire colonial se trouve encore dans les importants territoires de l'Afrique méridionale, où les forces nazies et fascistes, chassées d'Europe après la seconde guerre mondiale, se sont réfugiées et prétendent défendre je ne sais quelle civilisation blanche et chrétienne au détriment des droits les plus élémentaires des populations autochtones, par des procédés qui ne font honneur ni à la chrétienté ni à la race blanche.

85. Ces impérialistes et colonialistes impénitents de Lisbonne, de Salisbury et de Pretoria sont soutenus par des alliances militaires comme l'OTAN, ou des alliances économiques, et tiennent encore sous leurs bottes sanglantes la Guinée dite portugaise, l'Angola, le Mozambique et d'autres dépendances, où le sang n'a cessé de couler depuis que Salazar et ses conquistadores se sont installés dans une sale guerre coloniale du plus pur style français de triste mémoire; ils tiennent sous leurs bottes sanglantes la Rhodésie du Sud, ce péché capital du Royaume-Uni, où 250 000 colons sont pris de transes et de convulsions racistes contre 4 millions de nos frères. Ils tiennent sous leurs bottes sanglantes le Sud-Ouest africain, ce territoire au statut international que les néo-nazis de Pretoria s'efforcent, avec arrogance et le plus grand mépris pour les droits de la communauté internationale, d'annexer à l'empire de l'apartheid. Voilà ce qu'il reste encore à libérer, cinq ans après l'adoption par l'Assemblée générale de la résolution 1514 (XV).

86. Au sujet du premier groupe de pays à libérer, à savoir les petites entités territoriales, la délégation guinéenne estime que nous devons aborder leur cas avec un profond sens de nos responsabilités et dans le souci permanent des intérêts majeurs de leurs populations. En effet, s'il est impérieux de libérer ces peuples en assurant le libre exercice de leur droit à l'autodétermination, il n'en est pas moins vital d'éviter de les lancer dans des aventures qui ne pourraient aboutir qu'à la perpétuation du colonialisme déguisé et internationalement reconnu, sinon garanti. C'est pourquoi nous considérons essentiel pour l'Organisation des Nations Unies d'user de toute son expérience et de sa solidarité désintéressée pour aider les pays en question à faire les choix les plus conformes à leur désir de liberté et de progrès, en utilisant toutes les ressources et méthodes stipulées dans la résolution 1541 (XV), et notamment au principe VI, qui vont de l'indépendance pure et simple à la libre association à un Etat indépendant ou à l'intégration à un Etat indépendant.

87. Il ne faut pas nourrir de faux scrupules quand il s'agit d'assurer l'avenir des peuples. En fait, la réalisation d'ensembles unitaires ou fédérés répond à notre souci de stabilité et d'équilibre international. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre se doit de se pencher très sérieusement et sans passion sur le cas de ces pays. Nous estimons que la résolution 1541 (XV), dont j'aimerais rappeler certains principes, est une source d'inspiration pour le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et qu'elle pourrait largement aider les populations des petits territoires à exercer leur droit de libre détermination.

88. Je voudrais citer, tout d'abord, le principe VII, relatif à la libre association auquel je viens de faire allusion; le texte de ce principe est ainsi conçu:

"a) La libre association doit résulter d'un choix libre et volontaire des populations du territoire en question, exprimé selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées. Elle doit respecter l'individualité et les caractéristiques culturelles du territoire et de ses populations, et conserver aux populations du territoire qui s'associe à un Etat indépendant la liberté de modifier le statut de ce territoire en exprimant leur volonté par des moyens démocratiques et selon des méthodes constitutionnelles.

"b) Le territoire associé doit avoir le droit de déterminer sa constitution intérieure, sans ingérence extérieure, conformément aux méthodes constitutionnelles régulières et aux vœux librement exprimés de ses populations. Cela n'exclut pas les consultations que pourraient appeler ou exiger les clauses de la libre association."

A notre avis, c'est un principe de cette nature qui a inspiré récemment l'association prévue entre la Nouvelle-Zélande et les îles Cook.

89. Le principe VIII est le suivant:

"L'intégration à un Etat indépendant doit se faire sur la base de l'égalité complète entre le peuple du territoire antérieurement non autonome et celui de l'Etat indépendant auquel il s'intègre. Les deux peuples doivent avoir, sans distinction ni discrimination, un statut et des droits de citoyenneté égaux ainsi que des garanties égales pour ce qui est des libertés et droits fondamentaux; ils doivent tous deux avoir des droits égaux et des possibilités égales de représentation et de participation effective, à tous les échelons, dans les organes exécutifs, législatifs et judiciaires de l'Etat."

90. Enfin, selon le principe IX, l'intégration devra se faire dans les conditions suivantes:

"a) Le territoire intégré devra avoir atteint un stade avancé d'autonomie, avec des institutions politiques libres, de telle sorte que ses populations aient la capacité de choisir en pleine connaissance de cause, selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées;

"b) L'intégration doit résulter du désir librement exprimé des populations du territoire, pleinement conscientes du changement de leur statut, la consultation se faisant selon des méthodes démocratiques et largement diffusées, impartialement appliquées et fondées sur le suffrage universel des adultes. L'Organisation des Nations Unies pourra, quand elle le jugera nécessaire, contrôler l'application de ces méthodes."

91. De l'avis de la délégation guinéenne, il y a là des principes qui devraient largement aider le Comité des Vingt-Quatre dans sa recherche en vue d'assister les populations des petits territoires à exercer leur droit à l'autodétermination. Car nous concevons très mal qu'un rocher, par exemple, puisse accéder à l'indépendance et vivre par ses propres moyens à moins, naturellement, qu'il ne survive grâce à une base militaire ou grâce à des subsides qui vident de son contenu la souveraineté à laquelle nous voulons entièrement souscrire et pour laquelle nous voulons une caution des Nations Unies, une caution qui ne se borne pas à accorder ici un fauteuil, une hampe servant à hisser un drapeau, mais la caution d'une indépendance véritable qui pourrait s'avérer viable.

92. Par conséquent, nous estimons que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre doit largement tenir compte de ces principes et nous faire les recommandations qui s'imposent dans le cas de ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler les petits territoires. Les recommandations qui nous sont déjà soumises recueillent notre adhésion entière.

93. S'agissant du deuxième groupe de pays qui relèvent de la prétendue souveraineté du Portugal, du Royaume-Uni et de l'Afrique du Sud, pour ne citer que ceux-là, nous ne nous répéterons pas. Le cas de ces pays relève désormais de la question de la menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

94. Déjà, dans les colonies portugaises, les armes ont remplacé le dialogue faute d'interlocuteurs, face aux revendications légitimes des populations asservies. La guerre fait rage dans ces pays, en attendant qu'elle s'étende à la Rhodésie et au Sud-Ouest africain si, par manque de conviction et de détermination, la communauté internationale ne réussit pas à sortir ces deux territoires des griffes acérées et sanglantes de l'impérialisme anglais et sud-africain.

95. S'agissant plus particulièrement de la Guinée dite portugaise, pays où le PAIGC (parti africain de l'indépendance de la Guinée et du Cap-Vert) inflige chaque jour des coups mortels aux mercenaires portugais, mon pays accorde la plus grande attention aux agissements de Salazar et de ses tortionnaires et observe à leur égard la plus grande vigilance. Comment donc goûter aux fruits de l'indépendance quand nos frères que le hasard de l'histoire coloniale a séparés de nous, des frères parlant la même langue, ayant les mêmes coutumes, la même histoire, sont traqués et pourchassés chaque jour? Comment rester insensibles quand nos villages sont constamment réveillés en sursaut, quand, à l'aube, nos populations doivent accueillir des femmes, des enfants, des vieillards harcelés et poursuivis parce que leurs frères et leurs maris sont dans le maquis et n'ont pas répondu à l'appel du gendarme portugais?

96. Chaque jour des Africains tombent, tués par les armes fournies au Portugal par l'Organisation du Traité de l'Atlantique nord, l'OTAN. Chaque jour, les paisibles populations des villages africains sont bombardées par des avions fournis au Portugal par des pays membres de l'OTAN. L'espace aérien de mon pays est constamment violé par les avions portugais. La République de Guinée a pris les mesures qui s'imposent, en vertu de notre droit de légitime défense, devant de tels actes de piraterie internationale. Pourquoi, en vertu de la défense de je ne sais quel monde libre, ces membres de l'OTAN acceptent-ils de se faire les complices de crimes odieux en Angola, au Mozambique, en Guinée dite portugaise? Nous disons tout haut pour qu'on nous entende très bien: vers vous, pays membres de l'OTAN, nous pointons des doigts accusateurs; des millions de doigts africains vous désignent et vous accusent. De petites mains de bébés tués par vos armes vous accusent et vous désignent. Des doigts crispés de vieillards vous désignent et vous maudissent dans leur agonie. Des doigts de femmes, se cachant le visage devant le crime et le viol, vous désignent. Les mains des nationalistes, dans leurs dernières convulsions, vous désignent et vous accusent.

97. Et quels sont ces pays de l'OTAN? J'ai ici un article de presse qui est révélateur à cet égard et dont je voudrais citer en anglais quelques passages. Il est extrait d'un journal londonien, The Daily Telegraph, du 16 novembre 1965, et intitulé "Rhodesia, Headache for Salazar" (La Rhodésie, migraine pour Salazar).

"Il semble que les divergences qu'il a avec la Grande-Bretagne gênent considérablement M. Salazar. L'ambassade britannique de Lisbonne a la tâche difficile de maintenir avec le Portugal de bonnes relations tout en adhérant aux résolutions des Nations Unies visant à mettre fin au pouvoir portugais à l'étranger.

"Nous n'aurions jamais pensé jadis à acheter quoi que ce soit, sinon un navire de guerre, à la Grande-Bretagne" a dit M. Salazar. Il a ajouté: "Le Portugal achète maintenant quatre frégates et quatre sous-marins à la France. Il s'agit là d'une commande représentant un certain nombre de millions de livres sterling; d'autres suivront."

"Je crois savoir que la Grande-Bretagne a perdu cette commande en vertu d'une disposition contenue dans les résolutions des Nations Unies aux termes de laquelle les frégates ne pouvaient pas être utilisées dans les eaux africaines. Elles auraient été fournies avec des munitions au seul titre d'exercices dans le cadre de l'OTAN. Pour les mêmes raisons, le Portugal est dans l'impossibilité d'acheter des avions militaires britanniques.

"...

"La Grande-Bretagne est toujours le meilleur client du Portugal pour les biens de consommation, mais, sur le plan général des exportations, elle ne vient plus qu'au second rang, après l'Allemagne qui, elle aussi, fournit sans réserve des armes au Portugal*."

98. Des membres de cette alliance, et notamment l'Angleterre impérialiste, s'inclinent devant les décisions librement prises au Conseil de sécurité; d'autres puissances de cette même alliance, dont la France et la République fédérale d'Allemagne, remplacent le Royaume-Uni dans la tâche qui consiste à fournir des armes de toutes sortes au Gouvernement portugais en vue d'écraser la révolution africaine. La politique coloniale du Gouvernement de Lisbonne ne se limite pas aux seuls territoires asservis par le Portugal; elle s'intègre dans une stratégie créée à dessein pour saper les bases de l'indépendance de l'Afrique, contre la dignité africaine, le progrès et la stabilité du continent africain.

99. La situation qui existe aujourd'hui au Sud-Ouest africain et en Rhodésie mérite une attention particulière de la part de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, car elle est le résultat du refus portugais de décoloniser. En d'autres termes, le premier criminel dans cette affaire est bien le Portugal. Dans cette partie de l'Afrique méridionale et à l'instar de la République Sud-africaine, un régime bâti sur la suprématie raciale est né, ce qui a aggravé dangereusement la situation et met en cause la stabilité et la paix mondiales.

100. Récemment, le Conseil de sécurité a été saisi de la question de la Rhodésie, après ce qu'on a appelé pompeusement la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance faite par les dirigeants et responsables de ce pays. Les décisions prises à l'issue de ces assises ne semblent pas pour l'instant avoir changé le cours de l'évolution catastrophique de ce pays vers un conflit armé entre les races, conflit qui est le monstre des temps modernes. L'Afrique, quant à elle, a pris ses responsabilités: responsabilités politiques, diplomatiques, économiques et militaires. Elle ne faillira pas à son devoir malgré les prophètes de malheur en mal de sujets de dissertation dans leur presse aveuglée par la suffisance d'une pensée déformée par je ne sais quel complexe de supériorité culturelle, sinon raciale.

101. Il reste au Royaume-Uni à prendre ses responsabilités, responsabilités que lui imposent son entêtement de naguère et son refus de collaboration avec l'ONU, sinon sa complicité de fait avec les aventuriers de Salisbury.

102. Quant au Sud-Ouest africain, nous devons constater que les délibérations de la Cour de La Haye n'en finissent plus de traîner. Quoi qu'il en soit, nous restons vigilants pour que, dès que sera rendu public le jugement de la Cour, le Conseil de sécurité, ou peut-être une session extraordinaire de l'Assemblée générale, s'en saisisse pour en tirer les conclusions appropriées et appliquer les recommandations qui s'imposent.

* Cité en anglais par l'orateur.

103. Pour l'instant, nous sommes saisis des recommandations du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et de la Quatrième Commission sur chacune et sur l'ensemble de ces questions. Il va de soi que nous appuyons fermement toutes ces recommandations en attendant que nous convainquions les membres du Conseil de sécurité de la nécessité de comprendre que le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes est l'un des plus grands dangers menaçant la paix et la sécurité internationales et que plus tôt nous y mettrons fin, par tous les moyens, plus tôt nous assurerons le maintien de la paix, la survie et la consolidation des Nations Unies pour une coopération internationale féconde et fraternelle.

104. Il reste maintenant à ma délégation à inviter l'ONU à réévaluer son action en matière de décolonisation. C'est que nous pensons qu'il est opportun de revoir le mandat du Comité des Vingt-Quatre — qui, pour le moment, ne comprend que 23 membres en raison du retrait volontaire du Cambodge pour des motifs au demeurant fort justifiés et, qui lui font honneur — en tenant compte des formes spectaculaires et tragiques que revêt l'aventure coloniale dans ses derniers soubresauts.

105. On sait que le Comité spécial, lors de ses réunions en Afrique, a défendu la juste cause du combat pour la décolonisation et déclaré dans ses résolutions qu'à cause de la justesse et de la légitimité de ce combat, cette lutte devait recevoir un appui moral et matériel de tous les Etats du monde.

106. La République de Guinée est d'avis que puisque ce combat est fonction de l'obstination des colonialistes agresseurs et est dirigé contre l'exploitation de l'homme, qu'il vise à appliquer les principes de notre Charte et de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV), il doit être soutenu avec vigueur par toute la communauté internationale.

107. Dans le domaine de la décolonisation, il ne s'agit plus d'adopter des résolutions, fortes ou faibles; il s'agit maintenant de demander à ceux qui sont les gardiens conscients de la paix et de la sécurité internationales: Ferez-vous appliquer la Déclaration historique contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) que vous avez adoptée le 14 décembre 1960? Comment et quand?

108. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre devrait répondre à ces questions en limitant désormais ses décisions à la définition des voies et moyens pratiques à utiliser pour que tous les territoires encore dépendants accèdent à l'indépendance. Pour ce faire, ma délégation considère qu'il est impératif que l'Assemblée générale fixe l'année 1967 comme date ultime de l'élimination du colonialisme dans le monde. Au-delà de cette date, il conviendra de considérer toute puissance coloniale en état d'agression contre le ou les territoires qu'elle occupe encore, d'agression contre l'ONU et contre l'humanité. Le Conseil de sécurité devra alors en tirer les conséquences voulues, conformément aux dispositions pertinentes du Chapitre VII de la Charte.

109. L'Organisation faillirait à son devoir sacré si elle ne trouvait une solution rapide aux crises coloniales. Il y va de son prestige. Il y va aussi de sa survie et de son crédit, qui ont subi récemment des coups dangereux. Il y va encore de la vie de millions d'êtres humains qui souffrent, qui espèrent et qui ont les regards tournés vers nous afin que nous les aidions à sortir de la nuit hantée du colonialisme. Le continent africain, pour sa part, n'a ni la volonté ni le droit d'attendre encore longtemps la fin dénuée de toute gloire de l'hydre coloniale, qui hypothèque tout son devenir.

110. Faisons ce que nous avons considéré juste et indispensable il y a cinq ans en proclamant notre Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Faisons-le maintenant, car le temps en cette matière est notre ennemi. Plus le temps passe plus violente sera la lutte et plus sanglante la mise à mort du colonialisme.

111. M. CHEVTCHENKO (République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine) [traduit du russe]: Dans quelques jours nous célébrerons le cinquième anniversaire de l'adoption, par notre Organisation, de la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Toute l'humanité progressiste a accueilli avec de grandes espérances l'adoption de ce document si important de notre époque qui reconnaît le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination, à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

112. Au cours des dernières années, le monde a connu de profondes transformations; on a vu apparaître, sur la carte, de nouveaux Etats dont les peuples ont conquis leur liberté au cours d'une lutte héroïque.

113. L'admission, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, de plusieurs dizaines de jeunes Etats indépendants a créé une nouvelle ambiance pour les travaux de notre Organisation, on a pu constater, pour employer une expression imagée, un certain "rajeunissement" de l'ONU. Celle-ci est devenue plus universelle, plus représentative et son autorité s'est accrue.

114. La période de cinq ans qui s'est écoulée depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration offrait suffisamment de temps pour mettre les principes qu'elle proclamait en application. Or la liquidation du colonialisme s'effectue beaucoup trop lentement — on peut dire qu'elle se fait à pas de tortue; nous n'avons donc pas lieu de chanter des hymnes de victoire en frappant des cymbales.

115. A notre ère cosmique, où l'homme, se libérant de l'attraction terrestre, s'est élevé dans l'espace extra-atmosphérique, on ne saurait accepter que, sur terre, les hommes demeurent rivés par les chaînes de l'esclavage, on ne saurait se résigner à l'oppression, à la dégradation et à l'exploitation de l'homme par l'homme.

116. Il est désormais difficile de trouver au monde un homme qui aille jusqu'à défendre ouvertement les régimes coloniaux. Même les colonialistes les plus acharnés ne se hasardent plus à agir de la sorte. Néanmoins le colonialisme subsiste en Afrique où l'on compte encore près de 20 colonies, protectorats et autres territoires dépendants où vivent, plus exactement, où végètent environ 20 millions d'êtres humains. On trouve aussi des colonies et des territoires dépendants dans d'autres régions du monde où les hommes n'ont encore jamais vu briller le soleil de la liberté.

117. Le devoir le plus sacré de notre Organisation est d'en finir immédiatement avec ces vestiges du passé, d'effacer cette souillure de notre planète. Les considérations et les arguments qu'avancent les représentants des puissances colonialistes, à savoir que certains peuples ne sont pas encore "prêts pour l'indépendance" sont dénués de tout fondement. Les puissances colonialistes avaient suffisamment de temps pour préparer leurs colonies et, d'ailleurs, pour se préparer elles-mêmes à ce processus inéluctable.

118. La déclaration que le représentant du Royaume-Uni a faite le 1er décembre dernier dans cette salle, à la 1386ème séance, a particulièrement retenu l'attention de la déclaration ukrainienne. A notre avis, cette déclaration est très caractéristique; elle jette la lumière sur la façon dont les puissances colonialistes entendent mettre en œuvre cette déclaration universellement connue ou plutôt sur la façon dont elles cherchent à l'éluder.

119. Dans la mesure de ses moyens, le représentant du Royaume-Uni a tenté ici de défendre la politique colonialiste de son gouvernement, en présentant son pays sous un jour favorable, celui de défenseur de la liberté, et en essayant de le faire passer pour le champion de la liberté et de l'indépendance des peuples. L'intervention de ce représentant met en évidence une donnée irréfutable: 31 territoires où vivent des millions d'êtres humains subissent encore la domination coloniale du Royaume-Uni.

120. Devant ce fait, il est difficile pour quiconque de croire que le Gouvernement britannique a le désir sincère d'appliquer réellement la Déclaration. C'est en vain que le représentant du Royaume-Uni a essayé de nous prouver que les colonies sont un fardeau pour son pays. Il a dit, et je cite: "D'un point de vue étroitement égoïste, notre intérêt serait de rompre dès demain tous nos liens avec eux. Mais nous nous refusons à ce parjure." [A/PC.1386, par. 46.]

121. Nous serions en droit de demander au représentant du Royaume-Uni de quelles obligations il s'agit. Nous avons déjà été témoins de la manière dont le Royaume-Uni s'est acquitté de "ses obligations" envers le peuple de la Rhodésie du Sud. Il a purement et simplement livré les 4 millions d'habitants de ce territoire à la merci de ce raciste invétéré, Ian Smith.

122. Nous n'agissons qu'avec l'assentiment du peuple, qu'en consultation avec lui, a dit le représentant du Royaume-Uni. Mais de quelles "consultations" peut-il s'agir quand on voit le rôle actif qu'y tiennent le canon et les mitrailleuses, les tanks et les avions britanniques? Nous songeons avant tout aux opérations militaires que mène le Royaume-Uni contre le mouvement national de libération en Arabie du Sud, à Oman et dans d'autres régions du monde.

123. Non, ce n'est pas ce genre "d'obligations et de consultations" qu'attendent de vous les peuples qui subissent encore la domination coloniale. Tout ceci va à l'encontre de la Déclaration que nous avons adoptée.

124. Dans cette Déclaration, il est dit sans équivoque que "le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance".

125. La Déclaration souligne aussi que dans tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance "des mesures immédiates seront prises... pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes" [par. 5].

126. La vie montre que les colonialistes ne font pas don de l'indépendance, mais que les peuples la conquièrent au cours d'une lutte acharnée où ils utilisent aussi bien les armes que d'autres moyens et méthodes. Il faut donc chercher les raisons du maintien du joug colonial dans les conditions et les facteurs qui freinent l'essor du mouvement national de libération, qui font obstacle à sa victoire.

127. La lutte nationale de libération des peuples est rendue beaucoup plus difficile du fait que ceux-ci se trouvent aujourd'hui aux prises non pas avec une seule puissance coloniale mais très souvent avec toute une alliance d'États impérialistes qui, dans un but de rapine, unissent leurs efforts pour prolonger l'agonie du colonialisme.

128. Les impérialistes utilisent leur supériorité, ils ne reculent devant rien pour conserver leur emprise sur des régions qui présentent pour eux un intérêt particulier sur le plan économique, militaire et stratégique.

129. Prenons l'exemple des colonies du Portugal. On a déjà fait valoir ici que le Portugal, pays faible et arriéré, disposant d'un potentiel militaire et industriel négligeable, n'aurait pu, sans une aide étrangère, maintenir sa domination sur ses colonies africaines dont la superficie est plus de vingt fois supérieure à la sienne et la population une fois et demie plus nombreuse que la sienne.

130. Si le Portugal jette un défi insolent à toute la communauté mondiale, c'est avant tout parce qu'il se sent soutenu par certains États membres de l'OTAN. Nul n'ignore en effet que les recettes publiques du Portugal et son arsenal militaire sont alimentés par les États membres de l'OTAN, que les armes employées contre les patriotes qui se soulèvent dans ses colonies viennent, pour une très large part, de l'OTAN.

131. En échange de cette aide, le Gouvernement Salazar donne aux monopoles étrangers, notamment aux monopoles des pays membres de l'OTAN, le droit de drainer les richesses des "provinces portugaises" d'Afrique. C'est ainsi que l'extraction des diamants de l'Angola et leur vente sont le monopole de la société Diamang, filiale de l'Anglo-American Diamond Corporation. L'extraction du minerai de fer, et, en partie, celle du manganèse et de l'or, en Angola, a été cédée à Krupp en échange de ses livraisons d'armements militaires.

132. Les renseignements qui figurent dans le rapport du Comité spécial, les déclarations des pétitionnaires et les articles publiés dans la presse mondiale font ressortir clairement l'arbitraire colonialiste, le pillage éhonté et le banditisme effréné qui caractérisent toute l'histoire de la prétendue mission civilisatrice du Portugal.

133. En 500 ans de domination, le Portugal a apporté aux peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise et à d'autres peuples des malheurs sans nombre: la misère, la faim, l'ignorance, le travail forcé et une exploitation cruelle; il a retardé le développement de ces peuples d'au moins cent ans.

134. L'oppression et le genre de régime colonial qu'ils subissent sont sans précédent dans l'histoire contemporaine. Le nom des colonialistes portugais est désormais maudit dans toute l'Afrique, il est devenu le symbole du colonialisme le plus barbare et le plus exécrationnel.

135. Ces dernières années, le Portugal mène une guerre criminelle contre les peuples de ses colonies. L'armée portugaise, la plus importante et la plus puissante du continent africain, se livre à des opérations militaires contre les patriotes et la population pacifique. Le Portugal dépense chaque année 100 millions pour cette guerre — 100 millions — tout en retirant de ses colonies une somme cinq fois supérieure par an. Il se crée une situation vraiment tragique: on oblige des gens à payer leur propre extermination. Or, pour le Portugal et pour les puissances occidentales qui lui fournissent des armes, cette guerre est une affaire profitable, qui procure aux monopoles des bénéfices fabuleux.

136. Nous considérons que le moment est venu d'appliquer, à l'égard des colonialistes portugais, les mesures les plus énergiques et les plus efficaces pour les contraindre à mettre en œuvre les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité et à accorder aux peuples de ces territoires une liberté et une indépendance véritables.

137. La situation est assez semblable dans le Sud-Ouest africain. Là aussi le gouvernement raciste de Verwoerd, encouragé et soutenu par les Etats occidentaux, en premier lieu par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et le Royaume-Uni, cherche à perpétuer le régime colonial dans ce territoire.

138. La question du Sud-Ouest africain figure à l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée générale depuis vingt ans, mais la situation dans ce territoire, loin de s'améliorer, s'aggrave chaque année. L'examen de la situation dans le Sud-Ouest africain à la Quatrième Commission, à la présente session, a montré qu'en dépit des résolutions et des recommandations de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, les racistes sud-africains continuent à y pratiquer la monstrueuse politique d'apartheid et à y implanter un régime raciste médiéval. La politique des racistes blancs vise à exterminer la population autochtone ou bien à la transformer en esclaves éternels des colons blancs.

139. Il ressort du rapport du Comité spécial que les monopoles étrangers jouent un rôle particulièrement funeste dans l'asservissement et l'oppression de la population autochtone de l'Afrique du Sud et du Sud-Ouest africain.

140. Quelles sont ces sociétés et de quels gouvernements elles relèvent? Le rapport que je viens de citer apporte à cette question une réponse très nette. Ce sont, avant tout, les monopoles du Royaume-Uni, ceux des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, de la République sud-africaine et d'autres Etats occidentaux. Certains de ces monopoles sont par exemple "purement" américains. D'autres, uniquement britanniques, les troisièmes mixtes; les uns disposent de capitaux considérables, d'autres de capitaux moins élevés, mais ils ont tous le même objectif: le pillage éhonté des richesses nationales du Sud-Ouest africain et de sa population, l'obtention, par l'exploitation la plus cruelle de la population autochtone, de bénéfices fabuleux.

141. La délégation ukrainienne estime que le moment est venu de mettre un terme immédiatement et pour toujours aux activités de ces monopoles étrangers dans le Sud-Ouest africain. La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux doit être appliquée dans les plus brefs délais à l'égard du Sud-Ouest africain et toutes les mesures, même les plus énergiques, que prendront les Etats et les peuples ne sauront manquer de recueillir l'approbation de l'histoire.

142. La situation qui règne dans ce qu'on est convenu d'appeler "les petits territoires coloniaux" ne peut manquer non plus de susciter de vives inquiétudes. On sait que les dispositions de la Déclaration s'appliquent dans la même mesure à tous les territoires coloniaux, grands ou petits, que tous les peuples ont un droit égal à la liberté et à l'indépendance, qu'ils ont le droit de décider eux-mêmes de leur organisation interne.

143. Nous considérons que lorsqu'il s'agit de liquider le colonialisme il ne saurait y avoir de petits ou de grands problèmes, de petits ou de grands territoires. Tous les peuples coloniaux sans exception doivent obtenir la liberté et l'indépendance, quelle que soit leur superficie ou l'importance numérique de la population du territoire colonial, quel que soit le degré de développement ou de retard de tel ou tel territoire.

144. La question du statut gouvernemental futur d'un territoire, de sa structure gouvernementale et des voies qu'empruntera son développement doit être réglée par le peuple lui-même, sans la moindre pression extérieure.

145. Pour que les populations des petits territoires coloniaux puissent faire connaître leurs vœux librement et sans entraves, il est indispensable que l'on donne une liberté d'action complète et sans limites à tous les partis ou organisations démocratiques de ces territoires. On doit garantir à tous les éléments démocratiques la liberté de réunion et d'association, la liberté de parole, la liberté de la presse, etc. Tous les prisonniers politiques doivent être libérés sans délai. Sans l'application de ces mesures, les déclarations des représentants de certaines puissances coloniales qui affirment que leurs gouvernements sont prêts à mettre en œuvre la Déclaration restent entièrement vides de sens.

146. Cependant là aussi les puissances coloniales, avançant divers arguments tels que "le manque de préparation", "le manque de capacité" ou "l'économie non viable" refusent d'accorder l'indépendance aux petits territoires coloniaux. Utilisant ces territoires pour y établir des bases militaires, les impérialistes ont, en fait, transformé bon nombre d'entre eux en des bases militaires et en des points d'appui du colonialisme; non seulement ils élèvent ainsi de sérieux obstacles à l'indépendance de ces colonies mais ils créent encore un danger extrêmement grave pour beaucoup d'Etats souverains voisins.

147. Pour ainsi dire à toutes les sessions de l'Assemblée nous revenons à des questions que nous avons déjà examinées à des sessions antérieures et nous adoptons toujours de nouvelles résolutions.

148. On dit que la répétition est la meilleure méthode d'enseignement. Il semblerait pourtant que d'aucuns cherchent à réfuter cette vérité universellement connue. Ou bien nous ne cherchons pas à faire comprendre cette vérité de façon suffisamment claire et précise à ceux auxquels nous nous adressons ou bien nos interlocuteurs, je songe aux colonialistes, refusent consciemment et délibérément de reconnaître cette vérité première, dont l'essence est que nous vivons dans la deuxième moitié du XX^{ème} siècle et non au Moyen-Âge.

149. La délégation ukrainienne pense que le temps des admonestations et des vœux pieux est révolu. L'Assemblée générale doit exiger résolument et sans équivoque des puissances colonialistes qu'elles appliquent les décisions contenues dans la Déclaration historique, qu'elles octroient sans délai la liberté et l'indépendance à tous les peuples, grands et petits, à tous les territoires, grands et petits.

150. A notre avis, l'Assemblée générale doit à la présente session tracer de nouvelles voies et élaborer de nouveaux principes en vue de la liquidation du colonialisme. Tous les Etats qui préconisent la liquidation du colonialisme doivent prendre les mesures les plus énergiques et les plus efficaces pour s'assurer que la Déclaration soit appliquée immédiatement et partout.

151. Les peuples du monde qui gémissent encore sous le joug colonial attendent de notre Organisation des mesures décisives et concrètes.

152. La délégation de la République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine déclare résolument et en pleine conscience de ses responsabilités qu'elle appuiera les mesures efficaces destinées à liquider une fois pour toutes ce honteux legs du passé qu'est le colonialisme. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a le devoir d'aider les peuples des colonies par tous les moyens et d'effacer ainsi de notre planète l'opprobre du colonialisme.

153. M. GBEHO (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: C'est avec un sentiment de responsabilité solennelle envers tous les peuples coloniaux que la délégation du Ghana participe à ce débat sur les rapports du Comité spécial relatifs à la période 1964-1965 [A/5800/Rev.12/ et A/600/Rev.1]. Nous désirons donc exprimer d'abord nos sincères remerciements à tous les membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour leur remarquable travail. A ce sujet, nous ne saurions trop rendre hommage aux services inappréciables de M. Coulibaly, du Mali, sous l'experte direction de qui le Comité spécial a tant fait en si peu de temps pour les peuples assujettis du monde entier.

154. Bien que des progrès aient pu être enregistrés dans le problème de la décolonisation, il n'en demeure pas moins qu'un grand nombre de territoires, comprenant des millions d'hommes, attendent encore leur libération et que, par conséquent, l'engagement pris par les Nations Unies de faire progresser la décolonisation est loin d'être rempli. Cette tâche est actuellement rendu plus rude encore par l'intransigeance de certaines puissances coloniales, telles l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal, et par le fait que ces puissances récalcitrantes continuent de recevoir un soutien matériel et moral de leurs alliés, dont certains sont, paradoxalement, Membres fondateurs de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Le problème de la libération des colonies qui existent encore a donc pris un caractère d'urgence et d'immenses proportions, et les Nations Unies doivent tendre leurs efforts pour relever le défi que représente cette intransigeance.

155. Depuis la création des Nations Unies, il y a environ vingt ans, les Etats Membres ont toujours proclamé leur foi dans la Charte de l'Organisation, mais, dans l'application des principes énoncés par celle-ci, certains de ces Etats ont agi en complète contradiction avec ce qu'ils avaient passionnément affirmé à l'Assemblée. Nous qui faisons partie du monde afro-asiatique, nous n'avons pas le moindre doute maintenant quant à la duplicité de ces puissances, et nous sommes convaincus qu'elles ne protestent de leur attachement aux nobles idéaux de la Charte que pour mieux faire passer à la ronde, derrière la scène, le calice empoisonné. Un exemple classique de ce que j'avance nous est fourni par le cas de la Rhodésie du Sud, qui a plongé l'Afrique et le monde dans une crise aux conséquences imprévisibles.

156. Il y a environ cinq ans, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni envoya ses représentants ici pour convaincre l'Assemblée qu'il serait sage d'adopter la Constitution de 1961 qu'il négociait à cette époque pour son territoire de la Rhodésie du Sud. Bien qu'il fût alors clair à nous tous que les principes démocratiques seraient violés par la promulgation de cette Constitution et que le sort de millions d'Africains serait remis aux mains d'une minorité blanche raciste et avide, appliquant des méthodes fascistes impitoyables, et bien que nous eussions plaidé très fermement contre cette Constitution de la Rhodésie du Sud, le Gouvernement britannique négligea nos arguments et décida de la sanctionner. Le temps a montré depuis combien nous avions raison, mais malheureusement la situation ne s'est en aucune façon améliorée.

157. Cette année, les pays africains ont de nouveau montré de la façon la plus nette, individuellement et collectivement, l'injustice qui serait commise si la Rhodésie du Sud était livrée à Ian Smith et à sa minorité raciste, et nous avons fait tous nos efforts pour convaincre la Grande-Bretagne de ne pas tolérer une déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance. Une nouvelle fois, nos supplications et nos arguments ne furent pas entendus et la Grande-Bretagne est restée impassible tandis que les criminels racistes s'emparaient du pouvoir et tournaient en dérision l'autorité de Sa Majesté en Rhodésie du Sud. Aujourd'hui, quatre millions d'Africains, en Rhodésie du Sud, sont à la merci d'une minorité raciste ivre de pouvoir et dont les antécédents sordides, qu'il s'agisse de discrimination raciale, d'intolérance fasciste ou de brutalités policières, défilent la description.

158. Depuis cette déclaration illégale, des hommes et des femmes ont été tués dans les rues, des gens sans défense ont été jetés en prison, et des soldats sud-africains et des spécialistes de l'apartheid ont été introduits en Rhodésie du Sud pour accroître l'autorité d'Ian Smith sur les populations autochtones de ce territoire.

159. La délégation du Ghana ne peut cependant admettre que la Grande-Bretagne n'a plus désormais de responsabilités en Rhodésie du Sud. Il se peut que les Blancs de Rhodésie du Sud soient les cousins du peuple britannique, mais nous estimons que si la Grande-Bretagne veut conserver sa dignité et un minimum d'influence aux Nations Unies et dans le monde afro-asiatique, elle doit immédiatement mettre fin à la situation intolérable qui règne en Rhodésie du Sud. Nous ne sommes pas des bellicistes et nous détestons voir verser le sang inutilement, mais quand une situation monstrueuse comme celle où se trouve maintenant la Rhodésie du Sud crève les yeux du monde entier et continue de dresser une barrière devant le droit et l'indépendance des hommes, il est certain que la Grande-Bretagne ne peut se dérober à l'emploi de la force pour rétablir une situation normale. A ce sujet, ma délégation est de tout cœur d'accord avec l'archevêque de Cantorbery, qui a déclaré récemment à Oxford:

"Dans notre monde moderne, je pense que l'emploi de la force n'est légitime que dans un dessein de justice et d'ordre et que de telles occasions se présentent quelquefois. Le maintien de la loi et de l'ordre a requis et requiert encore l'emploi de la force, bien qu'il ne faille jamais avoir recours à celle-ci avec ressentiment. Je pense qu'un Etat ou un groupe d'Etats est en droit d'utiliser la force pour maintenir la loi et l'ordre lorsqu'il existe une chance réelle que la force assure la loi et l'ordre."

160. Si je me suis attardé sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud, c'est parce que le Ghana réagit fortement contre le crime qui y est commis actuellement avec la connivence secrète du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni. Au moment où la Grande-Bretagne a suggéré l'application de sanctions économiques à la Rhodésie du Sud, elle savait bien que des pays comme le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud ne prendraient pas part à cette action. Elle n'en a pas moins émis cette suggestion avant de faire volte-face pour nous dire que des difficultés seraient éprouvées s'il n'y avait pas coopération de la part de tous les Etats.

161. Nous croyons que des sanctions économiques ne seraient efficaces que si elles étaient appliquées immédiatement et énergiquement à la Rhodésie du Sud. L'affirmation de la Grande-Bretagne est à coup sûr hypocrite et fait injure à l'intelligence britannique. Le Royaume-Uni prétendra-t-il maintenant qu'il ignorait cette circonstance quand il menaçait la Rhodésie du Sud de sanctions économiques l'année dernière? Prétendra-t-il maintenant qu'il ignorait que l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal ne participeraient à aucune sorte de sanctions contre la Rhodésie du Sud? La Grande-Bretagne n'a pas agi loyalement envers la communauté internationale et seul le renversement immédiat de la situation en Rhodésie du Sud lui rendra son prestige, surtout aux yeux de la communauté africaine. Nous devons rappeler à la Grande-Bretagne que si elle manque à ce devoir, elle affaiblira elle-même l'édifice du Commonwealth qu'elle a construit et elle en hâtera la désintégration.

162. Ce qui s'est passé en Rhodésie du Sud n'est qu'une partie du vaste plan de l'"alliance impie" de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal visant à créer et à entretenir en Afrique méridionale une puissante hégémonie raciale au service de leurs intérêts égoïstes. Nous autres Africains, nous ne pouvons accepter cela et nous continuerons à lutter au coude à coude contre ces racistes. Un gouvernement qui se fonde sur les principes de l'apartheid ne pourra jamais être reconnu par nous. Il va sans dire, par conséquent, que le régime Verwoerd en Afrique du Sud ne peut s'attendre à ce que nous le reconnaissons ni à ce que nous coopérons avec lui tant que la majorité de la population sera privée de ses droits humains élémentaires et considérée en République sud-africaine comme n'étant bonne qu'à abattre des arbres et tirer de l'eau.

163. La menace d'apartheid en Afrique est beaucoup plus grave que la plupart des Etats Membres ne l'imaginent, car elle n'est pas limitée à cette république immorale. Aujourd'hui, les racistes, en collaboration avec le Portugal et les alliés de l'OTAN, déploient leurs efforts diaboliques pour étendre ce régime au Sud-Ouest africain, au Betchouanaland, au Bassoutoland, au Souaziland, à l'Angola, au Mozambique et à la Guinée dite portugaise. Les rapports du Comité spécial sont formels à cet égard et ont été confirmés par les pétitionnaires qui ont été entendus par la Quatrième Commission. C'est là assurément une situation intolérable, parce qu'elle est en contradiction avec les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies, qu'elle outrepassse le mandat des puissances métropolitaines et qu'elle ne signifie rien d'autre que la souffrance et la misère pour des millions d'individus qui attendent de l'Organisation des Nations Unies protection et liberté.

164. Puisqu'il en est ainsi, pourquoi nous montrons-nous pusillanimes devant des situations qui exigent que nous agissions avec fermeté? Est-il vraiment normal que les Nations Unies ne soient capables d'agir qu'en cas de crise? Ce n'est pas pour cela que de petits pays, tels, du moins, le Ghana, ont décidé d'adhérer aux Nations Unies. Nous lançons donc un appel aux pays occidentaux qui suivent aveuglément leurs maîtres financiers en perpétrant l'injustice raciale pour qu'ils s'abstiennent d'apporter un soutien aussi immoral à des méthodes pernicieuses. Les faits de domination dans ces colonies sont clairs et tous les efforts des Etats Membres doivent être mobilisés pour faire face à chaque situation.

165. Le Comité spécial a indiqué clairement^{8/} que l'intérêt des compagnies étrangères dans le Sud-Ouest africain est une entrave à l'indépendance du peuple de ce territoire. Bien que l'Afrique du Sud, le Royaume-Uni, les Etats-Unis et l'Allemagne occidentale réalisent chaque année d'énormes bénéfices au Sud-Ouest africain, le peuple africain de ce territoire colonial n'a aucune possibilité de profiter, grâce aux richesses de son propre pays, d'un niveau de vie plus élevé, ni d'améliorations en matière sociale et d'éducation. La plupart des habitants connaissent la faim ou parviennent tout juste à survivre. En guise de sympathie, les recommandations extravagantes de la Commission Odendaal sont mises en application pour les maintenir dans leur condition inférieure. Ils doivent être répartis dans des réserves tandis que l'étranger s'engraisse sur leurs ressources. Cela ne devrait pas exister. C'est immoral et contraire aux principes humanitaires.

166. Il ne fait pas de doute qu'une grossière erreur a été commise sur le plan international quand le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain a été confié à l'Afrique du Sud, pays qui ajoute l'apartheid aux nombreux autres problèmes difficiles à résoudre de notre monde. De même, les territoires de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise n'auraient pas dû être laissés aux mains du Portugal, parce que ce pays a une politique coloniale à courte vue et opposée au progrès. Ma délégation estime que les Nations Unies ont l'obligation de faire en sorte que ces territoires soient libérés immédiatement, conformément aux dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la résolution 1514 (XV).

167. Ce qui se passe dans les territoires sous administration portugaise constitue une menace pour la paix. Il n'y a été fait aucun progrès politique, économique, social ou culturel, et le respect des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales de tous y est totalement inconnu. Nous proposons donc que ces territoires ne soient plus désormais administrés par le Portugal, puisque ce pays n'a pas respecté toutes les dispositions du Chapitre XII de la Charte concernant le régime international de tutelle.

168. Si ma délégation a parlé longuement des problèmes coloniaux qui intéressent l'Afrique, c'est simplement parce que, en tant qu'Africains, nous ne pouvons faire autrement. Il ne faudrait pas cependant que l'on croie que nous ne portons pas notre attention sur des problèmes semblables qui se posent dans les territoires plus petits du Pacifique et des Caraïbes. Nous n'avons pas cessé de mettre en lumière les méfaits du colonialisme dans ces territoires chaque fois que ceux-ci ont fait l'objet d'un examen approfondi, et nous continuerons de condamner la politique de domination coloniale jusqu'à ce que ces territoires soient libres eux aussi.

169. La délégation du Ghana salue avec une grande satisfaction l'annonce que le 26 mai 1966 sera la date de l'indépendance de la Guyane britannique. Nous estimons toutefois que le Gouvernement britannique serait bien avisé d'empêcher ses autorités en Guyane britannique de se livrer à de nouveaux actes capables d'exacerber les différends dans ce territoire et, par là, de retarder l'indépendance.

170. Tout le poids de la tâche consistant à unir les différentes communautés raciales appelées à former une nationalité repose sur les épaules des Guyanais eux-mêmes. Nous espérons que M. Burnham et le Dr Jagan oublieront leurs divergences et travailleront ensemble en harmonie pour le bien de leur nation. A ce sujet, nous appuyons la proposition de conférence des divers partis politiques de Guyane britannique à l'effet de trouver une solution à leurs différends pour permettre à la Guyane de commencer son existence indépendante dans un calme et une harmonie qui donneront plus de prix à sa présence dans la communauté internationale.

171. Au sujet des îles Cook, le Comité spécial a établi un rapport [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. VIII] qui, pendant longtemps, fera honneur, non seulement aux Nations Unies, mais aussi à un digne fils d'Afrique qui s'est acquitté avec distinction de la délicate et onéreuse mission qui lui avait été confiée, j'ai nommé M. Omar Adeel, du Soudan. Nous ne pouvons méconnaître non plus le fait que le Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande a fait un geste bienvenu, sans précédent dans l'histoire coloniale, en invitant les Nations Unies à veiller sur les élections dans les îles Cook. Ma délégation désire exprimer la satisfaction que ce geste lui inspire. Nous espérons que les autres puissances coloniales s'inspireront de l'exemple marqué de l'esprit de progrès donné par le Gouvernement de la Nouvelle-Zélande.

172. Tout en reconnaissant ces actes louables, nous ne pouvons nous empêcher de remarquer que, bien qu'il puisse être décrit comme une mesure d'autodétermination, le statut constitutionnel actuel des îles Cook ne peut être considéré comme répondant à toutes les conditions de la résolution 1514 (XV). Ainsi que l'ambassadeur de Nouvelle-Zélande l'a lui-même qualifié, le statut actuel des îles Cook n'est "ni chair ni poisson". La Constitution des îles Cook n'est pas parfaite et l'association libre avec la Nouvelle-Zélande n'est pas établie entièrement sur la base de l'égalité. Nous reconnaissons cependant que les habitants des îles Cook conservent le droit de changer à l'avenir leur statut actuel. Nous espérons aussi qu'il n'y aura pas ultérieurement de difficultés dans l'éventualité — mentionnée par M. Albert Henry, Premier Ministre des îles Cook, au Comité des Vingt-Quatre — où ils décideraient de devenir totalement indépendants après avoir accompli un certain progrès économique. A cet égard, nous croyons que les Nations Unies devraient se tenir prêtes à offrir leurs services et leurs conseils aux habitants des îles Cook si ceux-ci devaient en manifester le désir.

173. Très souvent, le sort des populations assujetties vivant sur de petits territoires comme les îles Vierges, la Papouasie, la Nouvelle-Guinée et les îles Fidji tend à rester ignoré du fait de leur isolement par rapport aux zones principales d'activité. Mais il ne devrait pas en être ainsi. En réalité, les puissances métropolitaines responsables de ces territoires sont aussi imperméables les unes que les autres aux idées de progrès et ce sont les mêmes monopoles capitalistes internationaux qui exploitent les ressources limitées des territoires en question. Aussi longtemps que ceux-ci resteront des colonies, les Nations Unies devront leur accorder une attention suffisante. Nous ne pouvons accepter l'argument des Etats-Unis selon lequel la question des îles Vierges n'est pas du ressort des Nations Unies.

174. Ma délégation voudrait inviter le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis à revoir sa position sur la question des îles Vierges. Il nous paraît invraisemblable qu'en notre vingtième siècle, les descendants des auteurs de la Déclaration d'Indépendance américaine persévèrent dans une politique coloniale archaïque. Il a été question du désir de favoriser le progrès économique dans ces îles avant de leur accorder l'indépendance, mais le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis lui-même est le premier à se rendre compte que cet argument n'est pas valable. Les problèmes économiques des îles Vierges peuvent être résolus par le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis en quelques mois s'il le désire, mais au lieu de cela, l'autodétermination et l'indépendance sont refusées aux populations de ces îles.

175. La Papouasie et la Nouvelle-Guinée connaissent des difficultés semblables, à cela près que le Gouvernement australien est encore plus intransigeant dans son refus d'accorder aux populations de ces îles leurs droits inaliénables. Au lieu d'unir ces populations, on introduit dans leurs esprits des divergences raciales et ethniques afin de retarder le moment où leur seront accordées la liberté et l'indépendance qu'elles réclament. Entre temps, les ressources de la Nouvelle-Guinée sont exploitées impunément par le Gouvernement australien, ce qui lui est d'autant plus facile que la plupart des gens n'ont pas facilement connaissance de ces actes détestables.

176. Récemment, le Gouvernement australien a promulgué des lois extravagantes qui admettent que les indigènes de ces îles peuvent vivre sur leur propre territoire, mais selon lesquelles les ressources de ce territoire appartiennent au Gouvernement australien et non pas aux habitants. Je dois dire que cette sorte de logique est difficile à comprendre. Les Nations Unies devraient donc intervenir dans cette situation et aider à libérer ces populations le plus rapidement possible, et en tout cas avant que ce pillage, n'aille trop loin.

177. La constitution préparée par la Grande-Bretagne pour le peuple des îles Fidji dans l'intention d'y susciter des différences raciales dans ce territoire est déplorable et devrait être désapprouvée par l'Assemblée. Cette dérogation au principe du suffrage universel pour des raisons raciales ne créera pas l'atmosphère de paix et d'harmonie que les Fidjiens désirent et les plongera avant peu dans les ténèbres d'un conflit racial où ils risquent de rester à jamais. Les paroles équivoques prononcées par l'ambassadeur de Ceylan sur cette question lorsqu'il présenta le projet de résolution sur les îles Fidji à la Quatrième Commission voici quelques jours [1567ème séance] ont été si éloquentes que je n'ai rien à y ajouter. Son analyse de la constitution a dévoilé les intentions secrètes du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni dans ce territoire et je ne veux pas faire perdre davantage de temps à l'Assemblée en répétant ses paroles. Ma délégation tient simplement à déclarer que nous appuyons sans réserve l'analyse si claire faite par le représentant de Ceylan.

178. Avant de conclure, qu'il me soit permis d'exprimer une fois de plus notre opposition à la pratique de l'établissement de bases militaires dans les territoires dépendants. Si nous regardons attentivement la liste des territoires encore assujettis, il apparaît clairement que c'est dans ceux où se trouvent des bases ou des installations militaires que des méthodes coloniales sont pratiquées et que la paix et la sécurité sont mises en danger. A Aden, au Sud-Ouest africain, en Angola, en Mozambique, en Afrique du Sud et dans de nombreux autres territoires, ce misérable état de choses ne pourra prendre fin tant que les puissances étrangères maintiendront des bases et des installations contre la volonté des populations. Ma délégation appuie donc les conclusions du Comité spécial déplorant le maintien de ces bases et s'associe à la Déclaration des gouvernements des pays non alignés, formulée au Caire en octobre 1964 et dans laquelle il est dit:

"Notant avec inquiétude que les bases militaires étrangères constituent, dans la pratique, un moyen de pression contre les nations et freinent leur émancipation et leur développement selon leurs concepts idéologiques, politiques, économiques et culturels propres, la Conférence déclare accorder son appui sans réserve aux pays qui s'efforcent d'obtenir l'évacuation de bases étrangères installées sur leur territoire et elle invite tous les Etats qui ont des troupes et des bases dans d'autres pays à les en retirer sans délai^{9/}."

Telle est l'opinion du monde non aligné, à laquelle nous sommes fiers de nous associer.

179. Voilà environ 20 ans que l'Assemblée discute du problème du colonialisme. Le nombre des territoires coloniaux, dont le nôtre, qui ont accédé à l'indépendance au cours de la dernière décennie fait honneur à l'excellent travail accompli par les Etats Membres des Nations Unies. Mais la lutte est loin d'être terminée, étant donné la farouche opposition à laquelle se heurte maintenant l'Organisation. Notre tâche est peut-être encore plus difficile maintenant qu'auparavant. C'est pourquoi la délégation du Ghana invite tous les Etats Membres à venir au secours des peuples coloniaux. Nous ne doutons pas que vous, les descendants de ceux qui ont combattu pour les nobles principes de la Grande Charte et de la Déclaration d'Indépendance américaine, vous saurez vous montrer dignes de la réputation de vos ancêtres en vous joignant à nous pour mener une lutte implacable contre le colonialisme et l'impérialisme.

180. M. EL-KONY (République arabe unie) [traduit de l'anglais]: La présente session de l'Assemblée générale n'est pas une simple réunion annuelle des représentants des Nations Unies. Elle marque la fin des deux premières décennies de l'Organisation; elle marque aussi la fin d'une période de cinq années depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. En de telles occasions, il est particulièrement indiqué de se demander si l'Organisation répond aux espérances placées en elle, met en œuvre et traduit dans la réalité les résolutions qu'elle a adoptées, et si ses Membres remplissent fidèlement les obligations qu'ils ont contractées selon la Charte. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a pris une place de plus en plus grande dans les esprits et les cœurs de millions d'hommes en Asie, en Afrique et en Amérique latine du fait de ses grands efforts en faveur de la décolonisation. Ces efforts se sont concrétisés dans l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux qui en a été le couronnement.

^{9/} Voir document A/5763, sect. VIII.

Par cette Déclaration, les peuples du monde ont, dans leur immense majorité, affirmé par la voix de leurs représentants aux Nations Unies leur détermination de mettre fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations et d'aider les peuples qui subissent encore le joug colonial à se débarrasser des vestiges du colonialisme.

181. L'adoption de cette historique Déclaration a fait naître l'espoir chez des millions d'individus privés de leurs droits fondamentaux, privés du droit de vivre comme des êtres humains. Par cette Déclaration, l'Assemblée générale a renouvelé aux millions d'hommes qui n'avaient pas encore retrouvé leur droit naturel à l'autodétermination et à la souveraineté nationale l'assurance que l'Organisation se préoccupait de leurs aspirations et était déterminée à mettre fin au problème colonial, qui a causé et cause encore des souffrances humaines et qui fait obstacle à une compréhension vraiment internationale et aux relations amicales entre les nations.

182. Aujourd'hui, au stade de développement et de réalisations, d'instruction et de compréhension où l'homme est parvenu, des millions d'êtres sont encore soumis à l'humiliation, à la servitude et à des atrocités qui rappellent l'âge des ténèbres.

183. Il est exact que, depuis la création des Nations Unies, des millions d'hommes ont recouvré leur liberté et leur indépendance, mais il est non moins exact que des millions d'autres sont encore sous la domination coloniale malgré tout ce qui a été dit et fait, malgré toutes les résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée. On continue de noter dans les manifestations du colonialisme des signes qui ne laissent pas de nous causer un profond regret et une profonde inquiétude. Le précieux rapport qui nous a été soumis par le Comité spécial en fait clairement état. D'après ce rapport, nous constatons avec regret que certaines puissances coloniales continuent de refuser à coopérer avec les Nations Unies, dont elle ne reconnaissent même pas l'autorité. D'autres, qui sont des Membres fondateurs des Nations Unies, ne reconnaissent pas le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination, droit qui fait l'objet d'une des dispositions fondamentales de la Charte.

184. Il est d'autre part des Etats qui refusent de mettre en application les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et de laisser les missions itinérantes pénétrer dans les territoires qu'ils administrent. Ils recourent en général à toutes sortes d'arguments juridiques pour fuir leurs obligations et échapper au contrôle des Nations Unies. Je me permets de dire à ces Etats que l'administration des territoires dépendants n'est plus du ressort exclusif des puissances administrantes. Elle est l'affaire de la communauté internationale tout entière. Les Nations Unies ont l'obligation et le devoir de veiller à ce que les dispositions de la Charte, ainsi que celles de la Déclaration, soient respectées et appliquées comme il convient, que l'administration soit exercée de façon à favoriser le plus possible le bien-être des habitants des territoires dépendants et que ces habitants soient protégés contre les abus. Sinon, le principe de l'obligation internationale de rendre compte de sa gestion restera lettre morte.

185. L'intention des auteurs de la résolution 1654 (XVI) était de faire du Comité spécial un organisme d'action et non un club de discussion. Comment le Comité spécial pourrait-il remplir sa mission historique et sa noble tâche sans la coopération des puissances administrantes?

186. Contrairement à ce qui avait été fait précédemment dans l'histoire des organisations internationales, les auteurs de la Charte des Nations Unies ont conçu le problème de la paix et de la sécurité internationales d'une manière positive et constructive. Ils l'ont envisagé non pas sous un aspect négatif, mais sous l'aspect positif de la création de conditions de stabilité favorables à la paix et à la sécurité. Parmi les plus importantes de ces conditions figure l'exercice de droits égaux par tous les peuples et tous les pays, grands et petits, l'émancipation des peuples dépendants et leur droit de prendre place avec dignité dans la communauté des nations. C'est ce qu'a confirmé la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, où il est dit:

"L'Assemblée générale,

"...

"Consciente des conflits croissants qu'entraîne le fait de refuser la liberté à ces peuples ou d'y faire obstacle, qui constituent une grave menace à la paix mondiale,

"...

"Déclare ce qui suit:

"1. La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères ... compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales."

187. Il faut qu'il y ait coopération entre le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale à l'effet de mettre fin au colonialisme, c'est essentiel. Nous exprimons l'espoir que les membres du Conseil de sécurité, et notamment les membres permanents, prêteront aide et assistance au Comité spécial dans l'exécution de sa noble tâche. Il est inquiétant de constater l'attitude des puissances administrantes qui refusent d'appliquer les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale. Le Conseil de sécurité pourrait être d'une grande utilité à cet égard.

188. Je n'ai pas l'intention de faire perdre du temps à l'Assemblée en traitant de tous les problèmes et de tous les points soulevés dans les rapports du Comité spécial. Ma délégation a eu l'occasion d'exprimer, au sein de la Quatrième Commission, son opinion sur ces problèmes, spécialement sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud qui est d'une importance extrême pour les Africains et le monde entier. Je voudrais toutefois faire quelques remarques générales.

189. Premièrement, certaines puissances coloniales tentent, par des actes unilatéraux ou des traités imposés, de donner un statut nominal à leurs colonies afin de se dérober aux responsabilités qui leur incombent en vertu de la Charte. Nous pensons fermement que les dispositions de la Charte et la Déclaration s'appliquent à tous les cas où le peuple ne jouit pas de son entière indépendance, n'a pas pleine souveraineté et n'exerce pas entièrement l'autorité sur ses affaires. Les traités imposés qui limitent et restreignent la souveraineté d'un peuple le laissent sous un véritable statut colonial. Nous connaissons bien, dans notre partie du monde, ce genre de traités, tels que les traités consultatifs et les traités de protection imposés aux peuples d'Oman, de Mascate et des protectorats d'Aden et du golfe Persique.

190. Deuxièmement, il est inquiétant de voir que les puissances coloniales s'attachent de plus en plus à établir et maintenir des bases militaires dans les territoires dépendants. Nous estimons que le maintien de ces bases militaires constitue une menace pour la paix et la sécurité internationales ainsi qu'une menace pour la liberté des peuples. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a déclaré:

"Nous n'avons plus, nulle part dans le monde, besoin de bases pour assurer la défense de nos intérêts impériaux. Nous n'en avons besoin que pour nous acquitter des obligations que nous impose le maintien de la paix et l'aide à nos amis." [1386ème séance, par. 57.]

191. Les faits contredisent cette déclaration. On nous demande de reconnaître que ces bases sont maintenues avec le consentement des peuples intéressés. Mais les événements ont montré qu'elles servent à réprimer les mouvements de libération et à briser la résistance des peuples qui luttent pour leur indépendance. Les opérations militaires brutales menées contre les populations d'Aden et d'Oman en sont une preuve manifeste. Les événements ont également montré que ces bases ne sont utilisées que dans des desseins agressifs contre des Etats indépendants. L'agression commise par les forces du Royaume-Uni contre mon pays en 1956 et l'agression contre la République du Yémen le prouvent clairement.

192. En conséquence, les puissances coloniales devraient être invitées à liquider leurs bases militaires dans les territoires dépendants.

193. Troisièmement, le but principal des puissances coloniales administrant les territoires dépendants est toujours d'augmenter leurs propres avantages économiques. L'exploitation des ressources naturelles de ces territoires reste le principal objectif des puissances coloniales. Comme l'a déclaré un des dirigeants des puissances coloniales:

"Les nations européennes ont voulu posséder des colonies pour les trois raisons suivantes:

"1. Créer des débouchés pour les produits manufacturés de la métropole.

"2. Avoir accès aux matières premières de ces colonies.

"3. Disposer d'un champ d'investissement pour leurs capitaux excédentaires."

194. Les rapports du Comité spécial sur l'industrie minière et les investissements étrangers dans les territoires sous administration portugaise [A/6000/Rev.1, chap. 3] et dans le Sud-Ouest africain^{10/} démontrent de façon indiscutable que cette politique a toujours cours.

^{10/} Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, dix-neuvième session, Annexes, annexe No 15, document A/5840.

195. A ce sujet, nous estimons que la politique et les méthodes de ceux qui tirent profit de l'exploitation des peuples de la partie méridionale de l'Afrique, c'est-à-dire de l'Angola, du Mozambique, du Sud-Ouest africain et de la Rhodésie du Sud, sont les boucliers qui protègent le régime colonialiste et d'apartheid, car les puissances qui ont des colonies dans cette partie de l'Afrique ne peuvent résister aux puissants courants des aspirations humaines et de l'opinion mondiale que grâce à la protection des puissances qui ont des intérêts financiers en Afrique méridionale.

196. Quatrièmement, certaines puissances coloniales tentent d'accorder l'indépendance à des conditions, assorties de traités imposés, ayant pour but de perpétuer leur domination, ce qui est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Le désir des peuples doit être respecté. Les peuples ont le droit absolu de décider de leur destin.

197. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni a déclaré que la politique de son gouvernement en ce qui concerne ses territoires coloniaux était fondée sur deux principes: la consultation et le consentement. Il est permis de se demander si la population africaine de l'Afrique du Sud avait été consultée en 1910 quand le Royaume-Uni remit l'Afrique du Sud aux colons étrangers; si la population africaine de la Rhodésie du Sud a approuvé les constitutions de 1923 et de 1961; si la population arabe de Palestine avait été consultée sur son sort futur quand le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a remis son territoire à des aventuriers et des colons; si la population d'Aden et des protectorats avait été consultée sur la Fédération dite d'Arabie du Sud ou l'avait approuvée; si les populations d'Oman et de Mascate avaient approuvé les traités illégaux et créateurs d'illégalités qui leur ont été imposés.

198. Telles sont nos remarques d'ordre général sur le rapport du Comité spécial chargé de suivre l'application de la Déclaration. Nous espérons que les puissances qui refusent de coopérer avec le Comité spécial écouteront la voix de la raison. Nous espérons aussi que le Conseil de sécurité prendra des mesures efficaces pour aider le Comité dans sa noble tâche.

199. En conclusion, permettez-moi de rendre hommage aux membres du Comité spécial et à son Président, M. Coulibaly, pour le précieux rapport qu'ils nous ont soumis.

200. M. COMAY (Israël) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il y a seulement une génération, tous les atlas scolaires représentaient la majeure partie de l'Afrique et de l'Asie, ainsi que des îles de l'océan Pacifique, de l'océan Indien, de l'océan Atlantique et de la région des Caraïbes sous les différentes couleurs des grands empires coloniaux. Au cours des deux décennies qui se sont écoulées depuis la guerre, ces couleurs ont presque disparu de la carte du monde. Une des transformations les plus spectaculaires dont l'histoire de l'humanité a été le témoin est sur le point de s'achever. Aujourd'hui, plus de 90 p. cent des peuples du monde vivent, indépendants, dans des Etats souverains.

201. Les Nations Unies ont joué un rôle influent dans ce processus de décolonisation, ainsi qu'en témoignent la résolution 1514 (XV) de 1960, désormais historique, l'œuvre importante accomplie par le Comité des Vingt-

Quatre et les pressions anticoloniales constamment exercées au sein de l'Organisation par les Etats Membres nouvellement libérés de la domination coloniale.

202. Reconnaissons aussi, en toute justice, le rôle joué volontairement par presque toutes les puissances coloniales elles-mêmes. En particulier, les deux principales puissances intéressées, la Grande-Bretagne et la France, ont reconnu le fait que le régime colonial était périmé et moralement indéfendable et ont poursuivi une politique destinée à transférer, dans l'ordre et la liberté, le pouvoir aux peuples assujettis. Dans sa remarquable déclaration, faite du haut de cette tribune mercredi dernier [1386ème séance], lord Caradon a insisté sur les principes de consultation et de consentement grâce à l'application desquels son pays a, en moins de 20 ans, fait accéder à l'indépendance vingt-six nations habitées par le cinquième de la population du globe. Nous sommes heureux qu'il nous ait donné l'assurance que les mêmes principes seront appliqués pour décider de l'avenir des trente et une colonies qui sont encore sous l'autorité britannique — tout en prenant acte de ses commentaires sur les problèmes particuliers qui se posent lorsqu'il s'agit d'acheminer vers l'indépendance de petites unités territoriales disséminées et non économiquement viables. Ma délégation ne doute pas que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre étudiera séparément chaque cas selon les besoins et les vœux des habitants, sans perdre de vue l'objectif général qui reste de liquider dans le plus bref délai possible les vestiges de la domination coloniale.

203. Mon gouvernement et mon peuple ont soutenu de tout cœur la lutte contre le colonialisme. Le principe de l'indépendance nationale ravive nos souvenirs les plus vénérables remontant par-delà des milliers d'années à la période de l'Ancien Testament, alors que nos ancêtres luttaient pour leur indépendance contre les grands empires coloniaux de l'époque. Maintenant que nous vivons de nouveau en hommes libres, nous éprouvons une grande satisfaction à maintenir d'étroits liens d'amitié et de coopération pratique avec tant de nouveaux Etats Membres. Ceux qui dirigent ces Etats ont à guider le destin de populations qui, au sortir de la domination étrangère, étaient accablées par la pauvreté, la maladie, l'ignorance et leur retard économique. L'indépendance politique n'est pas suffisante en soi; elle est l'instrument qui sert à développer le bien-être et le progrès. Israël est heureux de pouvoir faire partager à ces Etats frères sa propre expérience de l'édification d'une nation.

204. Lorsque la résolution 1514 (XV) a été adoptée, elle n'exigeait pas seulement que cesse la domination étrangère, mais aussi qu'il soit mis fin à toutes les pratiques de ségrégation et de discrimination. C'est là un but que le peuple d'Israël considère avec une profonde émotion, née de notre propre expérience amère en tant que victimes de telles pratiques au cours de l'histoire. Nous rejetons tous les concepts de supériorité ou d'infériorité raciale et nous croyons que le statut politique et social des individus et des nations ainsi que leurs possibilités économiques n'ont rien à voir avec la race ou la couleur. Cette conviction passionnée continuera de guider notre politique et nos prises de position comme ce fut le cas, tout récemment, à l'égard de la Rhodésie du Sud.

205. Alors que nous approchons de la fin de l'ère coloniale, nous n'avons nullement à oublier les injustices du passé. Mais appliquons-nous à édifier un avenir meilleur, où toutes les nations vivront dans la liberté et l'égalité et, par-dessus tout, dans la paix.

206. M. ALARCON QUESADA (Cuba) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Dans huit jours seulement, nous célébrerons le cinquième anniversaire de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [résolution 1514 (XV)], qui proclamait solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Il est certain que, depuis lors, de nombreux pays ont obtenu la liberté et l'indépendance, grâce surtout aux efforts au sacrifice de leurs peuples. Mais des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains endurent encore le joug colonial en Amérique latine, en Afrique et en Asie.

207. Il y a quatre ans que l'Assemblée générale a créé le Comité spécial [résolution 1654 (XVI)] dénommé aujourd'hui Comité des Vingt-Quatre, chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. La délégation de Cuba se plaît à rendre hommage au travail accompli par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, dont les rapports sont soumis à notre examen, et, en particulier, à son Président, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, et à son Rapporteur, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde. En manifestant notre reconnaissance au Comité des Vingt-Quatre, nous croyons devoir signaler aussi le travail de sabotage et de résistance auquel se sont livrés, au sein de ce Comité, les représentants des Etats colonialistes de tous les continents.

208. Au travail constructif du Comité spécial s'opposent la survivance destructrice du colonialisme et les efforts tenaces et souvent conjugués des puissances colonialistes pour maintenir leur régime de domination et d'exploitation, en violation de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette tentative que fait pour survivre un système en désintégration se caractérise par l'acharnement à combattre par tous les moyens les mouvements nationaux de libération. L'emploi de la force militaire dans ce vain effort des colonialistes crée des zones de conflits internationaux qui menacent la paix et la sécurité du monde. Non seulement l'impérialisme ignore ainsi la Charte et la Déclaration, mais il va aussi, dans son défi aux Nations Unies, jusqu'à créer de nouveaux territoires coloniaux dans le dessein immédiat d'y établir des bases militaires. Ces bases, qui apparaissent dans de nombreux territoires, font obstacle au mouvement de libération des peuples.

209. Les études du Comité des Vingt-Quatre sur les agissements des intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, dans les territoires portugais et au Sud-Ouest africain, ainsi que les informations fournies en cette matière par les délégations et pétitionnaires, montrent comment ces intérêts constituent l'obstacle principal dans la lutte des peuples pour leur indépendance, en empêchant la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration. Ces études et informations font apparaître comment se manifeste sur le plan économique l'internationale impérialiste et comment les intérêts économiques communs conduisent les puissances coloniales à des alliances militaires et à des ententes politiques dirigées spécialement contre les peuples dépendants.

210. Un des cas les plus détestables de ce genre est l'alliance dite "impie", dans la partie méridionale de l'Afrique, qui a enregistré un succès éphémère avec la déclaration d'indépendance proclamée par le régime usurpateur et raciste de Rhodésie du Sud devant la passivité éloquente de l'autorité administrante. Cette alliance impie est l'instrument des puissances occidentales qui, organisées dans l'OTAN et dirigées par les Etats-Unis, ont aujourd'hui la prétention de consolider un bastion colonialiste dans le sud du continent africain.

211. Au sujet de la situation alarmante qui règne en Rhodésie du Sud, le Ministre des relations extérieures de Cuba, le Dr. Raúl Roa García, a fait la déclaration suivante:

"La solution véritable et durable au conflit ainsi créé serait l'indépendance du peuple noir, opprimé et spolié, de la Rhodésie du Sud; le Gouvernement cubain reconnaît pleinement le droit inaliénable de ce peuple de la conquérir par la force des armes, de même qu'il encourage et entérine, les mesures solidaires que prennent les Etats africains en ce sens.

"Le Gouvernement révolutionnaire cubain réitère son refus total de reconnaître le régime raciste mis en place par la minorité blanche sous la direction d'Ian Smith et se déclare résolu à apporter au peuple subjugué, exploité et victime de discrimination de la Rhodésie du Sud l'aide nécessaire, sous quelque forme que ce soit, dont il aura besoin pour combattre l'impérialisme et ses agents." [A/6112.]

212. Tandis que l'internationale impérialiste développe en Afrique sa manœuvre centrée sur la Rhodésie du Sud, elle en exécute une autre avec quelques variantes en Amérique, plus précisément en Guyane dite britannique, où elle abat par la violence le parti indépendant majoritaire pour remettre le pouvoir, à la veille de l'indépendance, à des groupes dévoués à ses ordres.

213. Les colonialistes manifestent leur indifférence de la grave responsabilité qui leur incombe envers tous les peuples du monde en s'obstinant à perpétuer le régime d'exploitation et d'humiliation qu'ils font subir à des millions d'hommes à seule fin d'obtenir des avantages économiques faciles, mais rouges de sang. Les fructueuses sessions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre en Afrique, qui doivent, pense notre délégation, se répéter sur ce continent, ont abouti à la recommandation d'apporter une aide non seulement morale mais aussi matérielle à la lutte des peuples pour leur liberté et leur indépendance. En ce cinquième anniversaire de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, il est encourageant de noter, d'une part, combien s'est renforcé le sentiment que les Nations Unies ont le devoir d'aider les mouvements de libération de tous les peuples qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance et, d'autre part, comme l'immense majorité des Etats Membres des Nations Unies se montre déterminée à contribuer, dans toute la mesure possible, à la libération rapide et inconditionnelle des peuples assujettis.

214. Il est également encourageant, en présence de la résistance des colonialistes, de voir une organisation régionale de première importance comme l'Organisation de l'unité africaine serrer les rangs dans sa ferme détermination de débarrasser, rapidement et totalement, son continent de toute zone coloniale.

215. Cet exemple contraste avec l'indifférence manifestée par certains Etats américains envers le cas irritant de Porto Rico, qui est toujours sous le régime colonial d'un membre permanent du Conseil de sécurité. L'attitude de l'Organisation de l'unité africaine contribuera sans nul doute à accélérer le processus de décolonisation établi par la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Cette attitude réaffirme en fait le droit que la Charte, la Déclaration et les résolutions des Nations Unies reconnaissent aux peuples des territoires sous tutelle, des territoires non autonomes et de tous les autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, à jouir de leur pleine souveraineté.

216. Il est, dans le processus de décolonisation, un autre facteur encourageant et décisif qui n'est pas l'œuvre de l'Assemblée, à savoir le soulèvement des peuples, dans l'exercice de leur droit inaliénable et imprescriptible à la liberté et à l'indépendance — de ces peuples que l'on a privés de tous les moyens pacifiques de résoudre le problème de la domination coloniale reposant sur la force des intérêts économiques et la puissance militaire impérialiste. Ce soulèvement se produit aujourd'hui parmi les peuples de territoires comme l'Angola, le Mozambique et la Guinée dite portugaise, et l'on en entendra bientôt parler en Rhodésie du Sud, en Afrique occidentale et dans d'autres territoires si les puissances coloniales persistent dans leur grossière erreur de croire que, contrairement à maints exemples historiques, il est possible de maintenir indéfiniment les hommes dans la servitude.

217. Non seulement la Charte, la Déclaration et les résolutions des Nations Unies mais aussi le soulèvement des peuples condamnent l'obstination à maintenir le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, avec ses séquelles de ségrégation et de discrimination raciale, comme un crime contre l'humanité. C'est pourquoi les Nations Unies reconnaissent la légitimité de la lutte des peuples contre le colonialisme. Mais l'Organisation n'exerce pas encore l'action plus efficace qui la hausserait au niveau de l'effort héroïque poursuivi par les peuples pour obtenir leur liberté et leur indépendance. Il appartient spécialement au Conseil de sécurité, responsable du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, d'utiliser toutes les ressources qui lui offre la Charte pour débarrasser le monde des zones coloniales où la situation s'aggrave, accroissant ainsi la menace qu'elles font peser sur la paix et la sécurité internationales.

218. Voilà déjà trois ans que dure la guerre coloniale en Angola. On peut qualifier de déjà ancienne la guerre libératrice en Guinée dite portugaise, et de nombreux patriotes ont perdu la vie dans la lutte armée en Mozambique ainsi que dans celle que mènent contre l'agression les populations d'Aden et d'Oman. Il est du devoir non seulement des Nations Unies mais aussi de toutes les organisations et institutions internationales intéressées de prêter assistance aux peuples coloniaux et dépendants qui endurent l'action répressive ou militaire des puissances coloniales. Rien ne justifie que des Etats quelconques, et spécialement des Etats Membres des Nations Unies, apportent une aide, surtout militaire, directement ou indirectement, aux puissances qui persistent à maintenir des peuples sous le régime colonial inhumain et dégradant et qui vont jusqu'à pratiquer ouvertement le génocide en déchaînant des guerres coloniales. Devant ce tableau, où la force brutale, disposant des armes les plus modernes, massacre les peuples qui ne se résignent pas à être exploités et humiliés, il serait inadmissible que des institutions internationales, y compris des institutions des Nations Unies, contribuent à renforcer des gouvernements qui ne renoncent pas encore à la politique coloniale et qui n'hésitent pas à attenter à l'unité nationale et à l'intégrité territoriale des peuples coloniaux et dépendants.

219. Les puissances coloniales ne sont pas sûres de pouvoir maintenir leur régime pendant longtemps encore, et cela fait plusieurs années qu'elles intensifient leur politique néo-colonialiste afin de prolonger leur exploitation. C'est dans le même dessein qu'elles imposent maintenant des bases militaires et des accords qui lient militairement et économiquement les peuples, même après leur accession à l'indépendance.

220. Que le Président veuille bien me permettre de citer un extrait de ce que Cuba a exprimé sur le néo-colonialisme devant le second séminaire économique de la Solidarité Afro-Asiatique par la voix du Commandant Ernesto Guevara:

"Le néo-colonialisme s'est développé d'abord en Amérique du Sud, sur tout un continent, et on le voit aujourd'hui se manifester de plus en plus en Afrique et en Asie. Sa pénétration et son développement prennent des formes diverses: une de celles-ci est la brutalité que nous avons connue au Congo; la force brutale sans ménagement ni dissimulation d'aucune sorte est son arme extrême. Une autre de ces formes est plus subtile: c'est la pénétration dans les pays qui se libèrent politiquement, les liens avec les bourgeoisies autochtones naissantes, le développement d'une classe bourgeoise parasite étroitement alliée aux intérêts métropolitains. La manœuvre prend appui sur un certain bien-être ou une élévation provisoire du niveau de vie des populations résultant de ce que, dans beaucoup de pays très arriérés, le simple passage des relations féodales aux relations capitalistes se traduit par un progrès, nonobstant les conséquences néfastes qui en découlent à la longue pour les travailleurs."

221. Les bases militaires doivent être liquidées dans les territoires coloniaux et dépendants avant même l'indépendance, immédiatement. Le peuple cubain est témoin de ce que signifie la présence sur son territoire d'une base militaire établie par une puissance coloniale quand Cuba n'était pas encore libre de façonner son propre destin. Aujourd'hui encore, cette base entretenue par les Etats-Unis constitue une menace pour notre république et un point de départ pour les opérations de l'ennemi étranger qui cherche à saper le régime que le peuple cubain s'est donné en exerçant son droit de libre détermination et de souveraineté.

222. Il appartient à l'Organisation des Nations Unies de veiller à ce que les territoires coloniaux et dépendants ne soient pas dépouillés de leurs ressources naturelles et à ce que leur soient rendues celles qui leur ont été arrachées. Nous affirmons en outre que les peuples ont le droit d'exiger d'être indemnisés de l'exploitation et des autres dommages subis par eux-mêmes et leurs territoires du fait de la présence coloniale. Nous ajouterons que toute mesure prise par une puissance coloniale pour limiter, directement ou indirectement, l'exercice de la souveraineté par les peuples assujettis est nulle et sans valeur.

223. Il convient de faire spécialement remarquer, compte tenu de certains événements récents, que toute tentative de proclamation d'indépendance aux fins de remettre le gouvernement aux mains d'autorités ne représentant pas la majorité de la population est contraire à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

224. Ardue est la tâche que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre doit accomplir pour venir à bout de la confusion juridique que les colonialistes ont créée par précaution, même au sein des Nations Unies, pour prolonger leur domination. Nous voyons ainsi un cas où un territoire est soumis au contrôle exécutif, législatif et judiciaire de la puissance impériale; où le peuple n'a pas de pouvoirs en matière de citoyenneté, d'affaires étrangères, de défense, d'émigration et d'immigration, de commerce extérieur, de monnaie, de postes, de radiocommunications et de télévision, de transport aérien et maritime; un cas où le peuple n'est pas maître de son économie et est même contraint de servir dans les armées de la puissance impériale; un cas où le peuple est traité comme un objet par la législation et la jurisprudence impériales et dans les déclarations des représentants les plus haut placés du pouvoir colonial. Et, cependant, dissimulant les informations dignes de foi et travestissant la réalité, on prétend, jusque devant les Nations Unies, présenter ce peuple comme ayant son propre gouvernement. Je veux parler, naturellement, du cas anglo-saxon de Porto Rico.

225. Le paragraphe 65 du rapport [A/6000/Rev.1] du Comité des Vingt-Quatre se réfère à la lettre du 1er octobre 1965 adressée à ce Comité par le Ministre des relations extérieures de Cuba. Cette lettre mentionnait le communiqué final de la Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés, tenue au Caire en octobre 1964, et demandait que la question de Porto Rico fût comprise dans le programme du Comité spécial. Elle a été distribuée comme document du Comité [A/AC.109/144]. Comme l'on pouvait s'y attendre, la puissance coloniale intéressée a fait objection à la distribution de cette lettre, en se réclamant de la résolution 748 (VIII) de l'Assemblée générale. C'est-à-dire que la puissance coloniale s'est opposée à la distribution d'une lettre ayant pour but de confier au Comité spécial l'étude du cas de Porto Rico.

226. Il y a lieu de rappeler que les Etats-Unis se sont opposés à l'adoption d'une résolution anticoloniale à la neuvième Conférence internationale américaine qui s'est tenue à Bogota (Colombie) en 1948, de crainte que l'étude des problèmes coloniaux en Amérique ne révèle clairement leur occupation illégale de Porto Rico depuis 1898. La résolution en question fut néanmoins adoptée.

227. L'abstention des Etats-Unis n'a pas empêché la constitution de la Commission américaine des territoires dépendants, qui a tenu deux sessions à La Havane. Les Etats-Unis tentèrent de saboter la création de cette Commission et finalement ne prirent pas part à ses séances, où fut étudié le problème colonial en Amérique. Les Etats-Unis s'opposèrent également à cette étude, alors que la résolution 748 (VIII) n'existait pas encore. Maintenant, ils vont jusqu'à s'opposer à la distribution d'une lettre adressée par un Etat Membre à un organe des Nations Unies, et cela malgré l'adoption, il y a cinq ans, de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale.

228. A l'objection formulée par le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis, ma délégation tient à opposer à son tour ses propres objections. En premier lieu, nous devons expliquer ici que la résolution 748 (VIII) a été adoptée sans que l'Assemblée eût une connaissance réelle et approfondie de la situation régnant à Porto Rico. Les Etats-Unis, puissance coloniale administrante, ont déclaré qu'ils avaient organisé à Porto Rico un référendum par lequel le peuple avait choisi librement son destin. Ils ont omis de préciser un simple détail: ce référendum n'offrait pas l'option en faveur de l'indépendance. Ils ont omis un autre détail: c'est que le nombre de personnes qui votèrent contre le régime néo-colonial porto-ricain et de celles qui s'abstinrent représente au total 60 p. 100 de l'électorat de cette nation. Ils ont omis de dire que, à ce moment-là, les geôles de Porto Rico étaient pleines de patriotes emprisonnés à cause de leur lutte pour la libération nationale. Ils ont omis aussi, et ils omettent encore, de dire que, lorsque l'Assemblée générale a adopté cette résolution, la moitié de ses membres actuels ne pouvaient participer à ses débats, pour la simple raison qu'ils étaient encore soumis au régime colonial et que la résolution 1514 (XV) n'avait pas encore été adoptée. Et les Etats-Unis ne disent pas maintenant, quand ils s'opposent à la distribution de la lettre de Cuba, qu'en ce moment précis, leur gouvernement constitue ce qu'ils nomment la "Commission du statut", laquelle est composée en majorité de représentants du pouvoir colonial et de ses partis satellites de l'île et a pour objet d'étudier le statut légal de Porto Rico.

229. Au nom de ma délégation, je demande: Comment le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis peut-il dire que le cas de Porto Rico est clos et que l'Assemblée n'a pas à en discuter, alors qu'il constitue dans le même temps une Commission du statut pour Porto Rico? Il n'appartient pas à la puissance coloniale de déterminer le statut de sa colonie. C'est aux Nations Unies, c'est à l'opinion publique mondiale, c'est à tous les peuples qu'il appartient de faire en sorte que soit appliquée également dans cette île sœur la résolution qui veut que l'indépendance soit accordée à tous les peuples.

230. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant des Etats-Unis pour une motion d'ordre.

231. M. DICKINSON (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Porto Rico est un "commonwealth" autonome associé aux Etats-Unis, ainsi que l'a reconnu la résolution 748 (VIII) de l'Assemblée générale adoptée le 27 novembre 1953. Ce n'est une colonie en aucun sens du terme. Il est donc absolument inadmissible que l'Assemblée discute de Porto Rico à l'occasion de ce débat sur la décolonisation. Je vous serais reconnaissant, Monsieur le Président, de bien vouloir prier l'orateur de borner ses observations à la question inscrite à l'ordre du jour.

232. Le PRESIDENT: Je prie le représentant de Cuba de continuer son discours.

233. M. ALARCON QUESADA (Cuba) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Après cette interruption, après cette motion de désordre, je reprends la parole pour préciser, avant tout, que je me réfère au paragraphe 65 du rapport du Comité spécial [A/6000/Rev.1]. Je pense que tous les représentants l'ont en main et qu'ils auront constaté que je n'ai rien dit qui soit étranger à ce paragraphe.

234. Tout cela illustre une fois de plus l'arrogance des puissances colonialistes, leur cynisme et leurs machinations tortueuses qui les poussent jusqu'à prétendre se dérober aux travaux des Nations Unies et à saboter l'Organisation, violant ainsi les engagements qu'elles ont contractés en signant la Charte.

235. On se demandera peut-être quel intérêt spécial peut avoir Cuba en cette affaire et pour quelle raison particulière a été rédigée la lettre mentionnée au paragraphe 65 du rapport en question. Nous répondrons que Cuba est particulièrement intéressée à l'affaire, et qu'il s'agit même de plus que cela: d'un engagement historique de notre peuple, d'un engagement presque constitutionnel. La République de Cuba est née de l'action du parti révolutionnaire cubain, qui a été constitué, comme il est stipulé à l'article premier de ses statuts, "pour obtenir, grâce aux efforts concertés de tous les hommes de bonne volonté, l'indépendance complète de l'île de Cuba et pour favoriser et aider la libération de Porto Rico". C'est José Martí, notre héros national, qui a rédigé ces principes d'action.

236. Le paragraphe 65 du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre mentionne, comme nous l'avons dit, la Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés qui s'est tenue au Caire en octobre 1964, Conférence qui a appelé l'attention du Comité spécial sur le cas de Porto Rico. Cette Conférence était constituée, je le répète, par les représentants de 47 Etats, soit environ la moitié des Etats Membres des Nations Unies.

237. Pour conclure, la délégation de Cuba tient à déclarer qu'elle appuiera toute initiative prise sur la question qui nous occupe et qui refléterait la position indiquée dans cette déclaration. Elle se réserve le droit d'intervenir de nouveau si elle le juge nécessaire.

238. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant des Etats-Unis pour une motion d'ordre.

239. M. DICKINSON (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Bien que l'orateur semble avoir terminé ses observations, je voudrais répéter que la question qu'il a soulevée ne figure pas à l'ordre du jour du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et qu'elle n'est pas actuellement soumise à l'examen de l'Assemblée. Le paragraphe 65 du chapitre I du document A/6000/Rev.1 a trait à la distribution d'une lettre et aux objections formulées alors par ma délégation. C'est tout ce que l'on trouve dans ce paragraphe 65. Lors de la discussion et de l'adoption de ce paragraphe, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a pris soin de ne pas procéder à l'examen de la question de Porto Rico. Il s'y est refusé et il est en fait indiqué au paragraphe 65 que:

"Faute de temps, le Comité spécial n'a pu examiner la demande contenue dans le document A/AC.109/144."

240. Cela signifie que le Comité ne s'est pas occupé de la question. Il s'est contenté de faire distribuer la lettre et de prendre acte de la protestation de ma délégation. Il ne s'est pas saisi de l'affaire et il ne s'est même pas demandé s'il devait l'examiner.

241. Il résulte de ces faits que la question que le dernier orateur a voulu discuter ne peut faire actuellement l'objet d'un débat à l'Assemblée, à l'ordre du jour de laquelle elle n'est pas inscrite.

242. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Espagne, qui a demandé à exercer son droit de réponse.

243. M. AZNAR (Espagne) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Il a été fait plusieurs fois allusion à mon pays du haut de cette tribune au cours du présent débat. De même, divers territoires qui nous intéressent directement et qui sont en voie de décolonisation ont été mentionnés. C'est pourquoi, usant de son droit de réponse, ma délégation désire faire certaines observations et répondre à ces interventions.

244. Pendant près de trois semaines, en cette vingtième session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, la Quatrième Commission a examiné les travaux accomplis par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre au cours des années 1964 et 1965.

245. Ces jours-ci, l'Assemblée examine non seulement le résultat des études effectuées par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre pendant les années en question, mais aussi les opinions et décisions que ses travaux ont motivées au sein de la Quatrième Commission. La dix-neuvième session n'ayant pu le faire, c'est à cette vingtième session de l'Assemblée générale qu'il échoit d'exprimer ses félicitations et d'apporter ses encouragements au Comité spécial.

246. L'Espagne, qui a suivi de près les efforts du Comité spécial pour engager la décolonisation dans une juste voie et qui, en certaines occasions, a pris part à ses délibérations, ne pouvait rester silencieuse en ce moment sans tomber dans le grave péché d'indifférence politique, beaucoup plus grave parfois que celui d'ingratitude.

247. Peu de fois dans le passé, vingt-quatre délégations, agissant au nom de tous, ont été placées devant une responsabilité si lourde, à savoir mettre fin dans l'ordre, la justice et la paix à une doctrine politique qui a pris naissance voilà des siècles dans la guerre et la conquête. La façon dont le Comité spécial s'est acquitté de sa tâche, sous l'experte présidence de M. Coulibaly et avec la remarquable collaboration de MM. Sonn et Velázquez — et je les cite spécialement parce qu'ils ne se trouvent plus parmi nous — mérite toutes nos félicitations. C'est pour moi un plaisir de féliciter publiquement ici le Comité spécial au nom de mon pays.

248. L'Espagne est directement intéressée à la décolonisation. J'irai même jusqu'à affirmer que le problème principal soumis en ce moment par mon pays à l'Organisation a trait essentiellement à cette évolution, parce que l'histoire nous a placés dans une situation que je me permettrai de qualifier d'unique. Si, d'une part, l'Espagne possède des territoires compris dans la liste des territoires non autonomes, d'autre part, elle subit une situation coloniale sur son propre sol. Cette réalité ressort clairement du rapport du Comité spécial [A/6000/Rev.1] que vient d'examiner la Quatrième Commission et dont est maintenant saisie l'Assemblée générale.

249. Je ne veux pas entrer dans des détails ni faire perdre du temps en traitant de questions amplement discutées déjà en d'autres temps et d'autres lieux. Je veux seulement parler de la conduite politique qu'une situation aussi singulière impose à l'Espagne. Je pense que le rapport du Comité spécial et l'examen qu'en a fait la Quatrième Commission ont donné sur cette conduite des éclaircissements suffisants.

250. La présence d'un drapeau étranger flottant sur le sol de notre patrie, avec toutes les conséquences que cela implique, a amené le peuple espagnol à placer tout ses espoirs dans la justice du processus de décolonisation dès l'instant où nous a touchés le message qu'il comportait.

251. A ces espoirs, le Gouvernement espagnol a adapté son attitude modérée, en tout point conforme à l'honnêteté. Nous n'avons rien demandé et ne demandons rien que nous ne soyons disposés à donner. Nous n'avons pas voulu que soient annulées d'un trait de plume des réalités historiques, pour mauvaises qu'aient été leurs origines, vu qu'il s'en est dégagé des éléments positifs et des intérêts privés qui ne doivent pas être éliminés sans que l'on ait tenté de les assainir et de les mettre au service de relations futures de coopération et de compréhension entre les peuples. Nous avons collaboré loyalement avec le Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour que celui-ci puisse examiner chaque cas et chaque territoire en connaissance de cause.

252. Quel a été le résultat de ce comportement politique de l'Espagne? A ce jour, il n'en est qu'un de visible: la naissance de la Guinée Equatoriale, dont nous avons connu ici le Président du Conseil, qui a d'autre part été entendu par la Quatrième Commission. Nous voyons ainsi que l'Espagne a commencé d'exécuter l'ordre de décolonisation. Or, que fait-on d'un autre côté pour l'Espagne?

253. Dans son intervention du 1er décembre [1386ème séance], le représentant du Royaume-Uni a parlé de Gibraltar. Il a exposé de façon non équivoque la politique future de son gouvernement relativement au Rocher, et il l'a fait en des termes tels que j'ai préféré ne pas exercer immédiatement mon droit de réponse. Une déclaration d'intention comme celle qui a été faite par le Royaume-Uni, si contraire à l'esprit de la Charte et d'un caractère si impérialiste, méritait, plus qu'une réaction polémique de ma part, une petite réflexion que je me permettrai de qualifier de philosophique.

254. Les faits sont, dois-je préciser, les suivants: en 1704, la Grande-Bretagne a conquis par la force une parcelle de territoire espagnol. En 1713, elle a signé avec l'Espagne un traité par lequel les deux pays fixaient le statut du territoire où fut établie une base militaire britannique qui a servi de point d'appui à l'expansion impériale et coloniale anglaise. La population espagnole expulsée de Gibraltar fut remplacée par une autre que la Grande-Bretagne y amena et a continué d'y amener. Ces premiers pas ayant été faits, la Grande-Bretagne a qualifié Gibraltar — la base de Gibraltar et la population importée qui vit à l'ombre de la base — de "colonie de la Couronne". Quand a commencé le processus de décolonisation, le Royaume-Uni déclara que le Rocher était un territoire non autonome et invoqua le droit à l'autodétermination pour sa population. Après deux années d'étude, le Comité spécial a décidé que le problème de Gibraltar devait être résolu par le moyen de négociations hispano-britanniques tenant compte des intérêts des habitants actuels du Rocher.

255. L'Espagne a toujours été prête à négocier et à respecter ces intérêts. En revanche, le Royaume-Uni s'est refusé à une négociation en invoquant des prétextes divers. Maintenant, il affirme que la base militaire de Gibraltar est au service de la paix et des engagements militaires britanniques. Et il dit plus encore, à savoir que l'Angleterre est disposée à maintenir la base en faisant intervenir la "consultation et le consentement" de la population civile que le Gouvernement britannique y a installée.

256. Quand il s'agissait de conserver un empire, on justifiait l'existence de bases contre la volonté des pays où elles étaient établies en invoquant purement et simplement les besoins de l'empire. Aujourd'hui, on tente de la justifier en falsifiant le principe d'autodétermination, ce qui a été mis en évidence au cours des longs et minutieux débats du Comité des Vingt-Quatre.

257. Voilà ce que la Grande-Bretagne prétend faire à l'égard de l'Espagne. Je me demande si les Nations Unies toléreront sans réagir que se poursuive une politique qui contraste à ce point avec le comportement correct de l'Espagne.

258. Une crise de confiance en notre Organisation ne peut naître que de ce que l'on a deux poids et deux mesures pour régler les mêmes problèmes. Pour mon pays, Gibraltar est la pierre de touche, car, quand nous parlons de Gibraltar comme d'une colonie établie sur notre sol, nous n'exagérons pas.

259. Pour qu'aucun doute ne puisse subsister quant à la politique suivie en cette affaire à l'égard de mon pays pendant deux siècles et demi, je me suis permis, en cette occasion solennelle, de soumettre officiellement à l'Assemblée une série de documents sur Gibraltar que mon gouvernement a adressés au Parlement espagnol.

260. J'ai fait parvenir un exemplaire de ces documents au Secrétaire général des Nations Unies et un autre au Président de l'Assemblée afin qu'il soit pris acte officiellement du désir du gouvernement de mon pays de porter cette série de documents à la connaissance de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

261. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Australie, qui désire exercer son droit de réponse.

262. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: A cette heure tardive, je désire simplement réserver le droit de ma délégation de répondre lors d'une prochaine séance à certaines observations formulées au cours de ce débat au sujet de l'administration par l'Australie du Papua et de la Nouvelle-Guinée.

La séance est levée à 18 h 35.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration

sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

53. M. TARABANOV (Bulgarie): Il y a bientôt cinq ans que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, proclamant solennellement la nécessité d'une liquidation rapide et sans condition aucune du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et manifestations, a été adoptée. Dans une perspective historique, cinq années ne sont pas une période assez longue pour apprécier à sa juste valeur ce document historique. Dès maintenant, cependant, il est facile de comprendre le rôle important qu'il a joué aussi bien dans l'action entreprise par l'Organisation des Nations Unies que dans les luttes menées par les peuples coloniaux pour l'accélération du processus de liquidation du système colonialiste. Elaborée sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique^{3/}, appuyée avec enthousiasme par les pays socialistes et les pays afro-asiatiques Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la Déclaration s'est cependant heurtée à l'hostilité des Etats colonialistes et d'une partie de leurs alliés. Incapables d'empêcher son adoption, les forces du colonialisme et de l'impérialisme ont essayé de faire en sorte que la Déclaration reste lettre morte, allant jusqu'à cacher par tous les moyens son existence même aux peuples asservis.

54. Aujourd'hui, pourtant, alors que les mouvements de libération nationale dans les différentes parties du monde, à Aden et en Guyane britannique, dans les colonies portugaises et en Rhodésie du Sud, élèvent des revendications fondées sur la Déclaration et sur les résolutions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, les auteurs de ce document peuvent et doivent, à juste titre, être fiers de leur œuvre. Il a été démontré dans la pratique quotidienne que la Déclaration peut servir et qu'elle a servi la cause de la lutte des peuples pour leur libération.

55. Le colonialisme craque à toutes ses jointures, et de nouveaux chaînons se détachent chaque année du système colonialiste. Cependant, bien que l'on parle actuellement, dans le langage courant, des séquelles du colonialisme, la terre compte plus de 60 territoires dépendants peuplés de dizaines de millions d'êtres humains qui restent soumis aux souffrances et aux vexations du régime colonial et à son esclavage.

56. L'année qui vient de s'écouler a marqué un certain ralentissement dans le processus de décolonisation. Les forces les plus agressives du colonialisme et du racisme, en Afrique centrale et en Afrique du Sud, opposent une résistance farouche à ce processus de libération des peuples, afin de conserver à tout prix leur domination dans cette partie du monde. Les guerres coloniales criminelles menées par le Portugal en Angola et dans le Mozambique, le système inhumain d'apartheid imposé par la force en Afrique du Sud, le nouveau régime raciste instauré en Rhodésie du Sud ne sont que des manifestations nouvelles de la politique concertée des partenaires de ce qu'on appelle "l'alliance impie", dont le but est de dresser une barrière sur le chemin de la liberté au sud du Zambèze.

57. Avec l'aide économique et financière de l'Occident et les armes fournies par l'OTAN, en particulier par certains de ses membres, les forces du colonialisme essaient — et, dans une certaine mesure, y réussissent — d'ériger une forteresse de haine et d'exploitation coloniale dans cette partie de l'Afrique, forteresse qui doit garantir à l'avenir une exploitation sans scrupule des immenses richesses et du labeur de la population africaine par les monopoles étrangers.

58. Si, dans une certaine partie des territoires dépendants, le processus de décolonisation est retardé, c'est parce que les Etats colonialistes essaient, avec l'aide des monopoles financiers — et, dans certains cas, y réussissent —, de créer des conditions qui leur permettraient de continuer leur domination après la proclamation de l'indépendance.

59. La haine raciale allumée en Guyane britannique et le renversement du gouvernement de Cheddi Jagan, l'établissement d'un régime féodal et colonialiste en Arabie du Sud en sont des exemples frappants. D'un autre côté, on s'aperçoit que le retard dans le processus de décolonisation de ce que l'on appelle les petits territoires coloniaux est, dans la plupart des cas, imposé par certaines grandes puissances pour des raisons stratégiques. Convaincus que, dorénavant, ils ne peuvent plus compter sur des bases militaires installées par eux dans des pays nouvellement libérés ou même sur les territoires des grandes colonies du continent africain et des autres continents, certains pays occidentaux s'orientent de plus en plus vers une politique qui peut leur permettre de conserver leurs bases militaires dans certaines petites îles et même d'en installer de nouvelles à des endroits où ils espèrent pouvoir continuer à rester pour une longue période encore.

60. A cet égard, l'exemple le plus récent est celui de la nouvelle colonie anglaise dans l'océan Indien, détachée de l'archipel de l'île Maurice avec l'intention d'y installer une base militaire anglo-américaine. En outre, nombreux sont les cas — par exemple dans les Iles Vierges — où les puissances administrantes commencent à procéder à l'intégration directe des petits territoires aux métropoles.

61. Le retard apporté à la libération des peuples coloniaux ne peut que provoquer une très grande inquiétude chez tous les peuples qui s'intéressent au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales; ce retard peut causer des torts sérieux et faire planer de graves dangers sur le monde d'aujourd'hui.

62. En Afrique, les peuples nouvellement libérés ont un grand besoin de paix, mais d'une paix durable, afin de guérir les plaies provoquées par le colonialisme et afin de consolider leur souveraineté et leur indépendance.

63. Cependant, la politique criminelle des colonisateurs et des racistes entretient une tension constante qui, en fin de compte, peut mener à la guerre et à la catastrophe. Les forces et les ressources des peuples nouvellement libérés, tellement nécessaires à leur développement économique, seront, dans une telle éventualité, mobilisées pour faire face aux menaces racistes et néo-colonialistes venant du sud du continent africain. Or, la paix en danger en Afrique signifie que la paix et la sécurité internationales sont menacées partout. Dans le monde d'aujourd'hui, avec ses armes atomiques et nucléaires, avec ses fusées, la continuation du colonialisme et du racisme peut avoir des conséquences réellement dangereuses pour l'humanité entière.

^{3/} Ibid., point 87 de l'ordre du jour, document A/4501.

64. De nombreuses bases militaires, maintenues sur les territoires coloniaux et utilisées principalement pour écraser les mouvements de libération nationale et exercer des pressions sur les pays nouvellement libérés en Afrique, en Asie et en Amérique du Sud, représentent un danger réel et imminent pour la paix. La dernière agression contre le Congo n'a-t-elle pas été perpétrée à partir de la base anglaise de l'île de l'Ascension? N'est-ce pas de la base américaine de l'île de Guam que des avions prennent leur vol pour participer à la guerre d'agression contre le peuple du Viet-Nam?

65. C'est pourquoi la voix des Nations Unies doit s'élever bien haut en faveur de la liquidation de toutes les bases militaires installées en territoires coloniaux.

66. Il y a cinq ans, l'Assemblée générale, exprimant la volonté de la plus grande partie de l'humanité, a proclamé solennellement que des mesures devaient être prises dans tous les territoires coloniaux afin d'accélérer le processus de la transmission de tous les pouvoirs à tous les peuples, afin que ces derniers puissent jouir pleinement de leur indépendance et de leur liberté. A une époque aussi dynamique que la nôtre, cinq années constituent une période relativement longue et suffisante pour permettre d'appliquer pleinement la Déclaration. Dans ces conditions, nous pouvons nous demander comment l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dont la pierre angulaire est le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes, la défense des droits et de la liberté de l'homme ainsi que la préservation de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, peut tolérer, ne fût-ce qu'un jour de plus, la perpétuation du système colonialiste et, avec lui, de la discrimination raciale et de la ségrégation.

67. Nous nous associons aux délégations qui ont déclaré à cette tribune qu'il est grandement temps de considérer comme un crime envers l'humanité la continuation d'un système indigne et inhumain qui existe encore dans le monde.

68. La légalité de la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour la liberté et l'indépendance a été consacrée dans de nombreuses résolutions et décisions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et de l'Assemblée générale, ce qui signifie que les régimes coloniaux sont, dans les territoires respectifs, dorénavant considérés non seulement comme inhumains mais aussi comme illégaux. Si telle est l'opinion générale — et nous sommes certains qu'il en est ainsi — il est nécessaire d'agir en conséquence.

69. La délégation bulgare est d'avis non seulement que les dispositions contenues dans les résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies concernant la légalité de la lutte des peuples doivent maintenant être de nouveau confirmées, mais encore qu'il est nécessaire d'en tirer les conséquences qui s'imposent.

70. A juste titre, il faut donc avant tout que l'ONU apporte une aide efficace aux peuples coloniaux avec tous les moyens dont elle dispose. L'Organisation et les institutions internationales qui en dépendent, de même que chacun de leurs Membres, doivent apporter à ces peuples l'aide morale et matérielle dont ils ont tellement besoin pour rétablir leurs droits foulés.

71. Les Etats qui refusent de renoncer à leur politique de domination coloniale doivent être privés de toute aide et assistance, surtout de l'aide militaire qui leur est apportée par voie bilatérale ou par l'intermédiaire des alliances militaires, comme par exemple l'OTAN.

72. Contre les Etats et régimes dont la politique crée des dangers pour la paix et la sécurité des peuples, comme la République sud-africaine, le Portugal et l'actuel régime raciste de la Rhodésie du Sud, le Conseil de sécurité doit prendre en outre les mesures coercitives prévues par la Charte. Ces mesures et les décisions que l'Assemblée générale prendra maintenant doivent, d'après nous, assurer l'application intégrale de la Déclaration, et ce dans le plus bref délai.

73. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre poursuit ses travaux depuis plus de quatre ans. Nous aurions bien souhaité que la situation soit telle à l'heure actuelle que l'Assemblée générale puisse lui dire: "Vous avez terminé votre tâche, nous n'avons plus besoin de vous." Malheureusement, tel n'est pas le cas, et le mandat du Comité des Vingt-Quatre doit être de nouveau prolongé. Ce comité devra cependant être maintenant armé de moyens plus efficaces qui rendront son travail plus facile. L'expérience de l'année dernière et surtout la visite du Comité en Afrique ont suggéré certaines idées et fait penser à certaines méthodes qui peuvent garantir une plus grande efficacité dans son travail.

74. Ce qui importe le plus, c'est que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre soit en mesure d'établir un contact étroit avec les peuples des territoires dépendants et de préparer ses recommandations en coopération étroite avec eux. Dans ce sens, nous appuyons les propositions qui figurent à la section I du chapitre Ier du rapport du Comité [A/6000/Rev.1], ainsi que les propositions faites par son président, M. Sori Coulibaly.

75. Nous sommes profondément convaincus que, avec l'aide effective de tous les pays et peuples intéressés au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, les peuples coloniaux sortiront vainqueurs de la juste lutte qu'ils ont entreprise et mènent pour la liberté et l'indépendance contre le système colonial honteux, qui doit définitivement disparaître.

76. Le Gouvernement de la République populaire de Bulgarie et le peuple bulgare ont toujours fait preuve de solidarité envers les peuples soumis à l'esclavage colonial. La délégation de la République populaire de Bulgarie est autorisée à déclarer qu'à l'avenir aussi son gouvernement et son peuple sont prêts à apporter leur contribution pour le triomphe de la juste cause des peuples coloniaux et pour leur libération du joug colonial.

77. M. Taïeb SLIM (Tunisie): L'Assemblée générale examine aujourd'hui les travaux du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, tels qu'ils apparaissent dans les rapports du Comité pour les deux années écoulées [A/5800/Rev.1⁴ et A/6000/Rev.1].

78. La délégation tunisienne, qui a écouté avec la plus grande attention les interventions faites sur ce point par les éminents orateurs qui l'ont précédée, se félicite de l'intérêt suscité par cet important débat et aimerait se contenter de faire à ce stade de nos travaux quelques brèves remarques.

79. Mais, auparavant, elle tient à exprimer son appréciation et sa gratitude à l'éminent Président du Comité spécial, M. Sori Coulibaly, du Mali, pour le dévouement et la distinction avec lesquels il a su diriger les travaux du Comité. Elle aimerait également exprimer ses remerciements et sa vive appréciation au rapporteur, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, qui a travaillé avec une ardeur exemplaire pour nous présenter les documents de travail les plus complets sur les travaux du Comité pendant les deux dernières années.

80. Nos félicitations s'adressent également à nos deux éminents vice-présidents, M. Carlos Marfa Velázquez, de l'Uruguay, et M. Sonn Voeunsai, du Cambodge, pour la contribution très importante qu'ils ont apportée au Comité. Appelés par leurs gouvernements respectifs à d'autres fonctions dans d'autres capitales, nos deux distingués collègues nous ont maintenant quittés. Ils ont toutefois laissé dans nos mémoires le souvenir toujours vivant de diplomates dévoués à la tâche exaltante de la décolonisation pacifique.

81. La délégation tunisienne ferait montre d'un oubli impardonnable si elle ne rendait hommage à la collaboration très étroite et à l'extrême dévouement du secrétariat de notre comité, ainsi qu'à M. Chacko et à M. Dadzie. Elle tient à remercier particulièrement le Sous-Secrétaire, M. Amachree, et tous les fonctionnaires et interprètes qui nous ont constamment assistés dans la conduite de nos travaux.

82. En abordant l'examen du rapport du Comité spécial, nous tenons à rappeler que cinq années se sont écoulées depuis la proclamation, à la quinzième session de l'Assemblée générale, de l'historique Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Depuis 1960, un nombre assez important de pays se sont libérés du colonialisme et sont venus se joindre à nous comme Etats souverains Membres de l'Organisation, à laquelle ils apportent une contribution de plus en plus appréciable dans tous les domaines, et enrichir la grande famille humaine de l'apport de leur génie et de leurs traditions. Ils ont apporté aux Nations Unies des idées nouvelles et un enthousiasme continu pour le renforcement des relations amicales entre les nations et pour le développement de la coopération internationale. Leur présence parmi nous, que nous saluons avec la plus grande satisfaction, œuvre pour la consolidation des principes de la Charte, de l'Organisation et l'épanouissement de son esprit d'universalité. Toutefois, nous sommes bien obligés de convenir que ces cinq années ont été assez dures pour d'autres millions d'êtres humains qui continuent à souffrir de l'oppression et de la domination étrangères.

83. En effet, si nous avons fait des progrès appréciables dans le processus d'émancipation humaine, il n'en reste pas moins vrai que certaines puissances administrantes — par réaction peut-être ou par dépit de voir leur grand empire d'antan s'amoinrir et s'amenuiser — ont un peu raidi leur position et ne montrent qu'un semblant de coopération envers l'Organisation. Dans ce domaine, loin de hâter le processus de décolonisation et de permettre ainsi une reconversion saine et bénéfique des liens de sujétion en rapports de coopération dans l'amitié et l'égalité, elles s'évertuent à imaginer toutes sortes d'obstacles pour retarder l'émancipation et la libération des peuples placés sous leur tutelle. Elles ignorent les injonctions pourtant impératives de la Déclaration contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) et font fi des nombreuses résolutions adoptées sur ces problèmes. Il y a lieu de rappeler le paragraphe 5 de ladite Déclaration, qui dit d'une façon très précise, ne permettant aucune équivoque, ce qui suit:

"Des mesures immédiates seront prises dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes."

84. D'année en année l'Assemblée générale a adopté et réaffirmé toutes les résolutions pertinentes sur les différents territoires qui ont été examinés par le Comité spécial, faisant des appels de plus en plus urgents aux puissances administrantes pour hâter l'émancipation des peuples placés sous leur domination et appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV) dans les délais les plus brefs. A tous nos appels, les puissances coloniales semblent faire la sourde oreille, invoquant toutes sortes de difficultés qui ne sont en réalité qu'un prétexte pour sauvegarder les intérêts matériels de leurs colons et des monopoles économiques qu'ils ont installés dans leurs colonies. Il est regrettable que les colons anglais, portugais, sud-africains refusent d'abandonner cet esprit et cette mentalité colonialistes et qu'ils continuent à pratiquer une politique égoïste et aveugle, sans se préoccuper de l'avenir. Il est encore plus regrettable que les puissances coloniales qui les protègent n'arrivent pas non plus à se débarrasser de ce complexe de conquérant et continuent à confondre l'intérêt bien compris de leurs relations avec les peuples qu'ils ont assujettis par la force avec les intérêts de leurs nationaux et de leurs colons dans ces territoires. Cet état de choses n'a malheureusement que trop duré, et l'Organisation se doit de rappeler aux puissances administrantes de respecter leurs obligations envers la Charte.

M. Khampan (Laos), vice-président, prend la présidence.

85. Le Royaume-Uni, par exemple, s'est obstinément refusé à coopérer avec le Comité spécial pour faciliter la recherche d'une solution juste et satisfaisante au problème de la Rhodésie du Sud. Depuis 1962, le Comité a tracé la voie et indiqué les lignes générales qui pourraient servir de cadre à une solution à ce problème, rendu si complexe par la politique désastreuse pratiquée par la Puissance administrante depuis 1923. L'Assemblée générale confirma dès 1962 le point de vue du Comité et adopta une résolution par laquelle elle demandait au Royaume-Uni de ne pas procéder aux élections qui étaient prévues par la Constitution de décembre 1961, et d'abroger ou de suspendre cette constitution tout en prenant les mesures nécessaires pour la convocation d'une conférence constitutionnelle à laquelle participeraient tous les chefs nationalistes des partis politiques du territoire.

86. Nous avons à ce moment-là attiré l'attention de la Puissance administrante sur le fait que tout délai apporté à l'application de cette résolution ne pouvait qu'encourager les colons racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud à consolider leur pouvoir et leur autorité dans la colonie. Le Gouvernement britannique savait parfaitement bien que c'était la seule voie à suivre et que toute autre politique ne pouvait que créer les germes d'un conflit entre les Africains du Zimbabwe et la minorité de colons blancs. Il était évident alors que l'imposition de la Constitution de 1961 — Constitution rejetée déjà par la totalité des Africains rhodésiens — ouvrait le chemin à l'établissement d'un Etat copié sur celui de l'Afrique du Sud et précipitait une catastrophe en élargissant le fossé dangereux qui séparait les deux éléments de la population.

87. S'il persistait quelque doute dans l'esprit des responsables britanniques à ce sujet, l'exemple algérien était là pour le dissiper. Nous avons nous-mêmes, membres du Sous-Comité de la Rhodésie du Sud, prié les responsables britanniques, lors de conversations que nous avons eues avec eux à Londres, de suivre l'exemple de la France, qui, ayant à faire face à plus d'un million de colons français en Algérie, n'avait pas hésité à tenir en échec leur rébellion et à mater les agitateurs pour rétablir la situation et reconnaître aux Algériens leur droit à l'indépendance. Le courage et la clairvoyance de la France, ainsi que la détermination de son président, le général de Gaulle, qui leur ont valu toute notre reconnaissance et notre gratitude, pouvaient, à notre avis, indiquer la voie de la raison, de la sagesse, et aider les colonialistes anglais à se dégager de la confusion de la politique traditionnelle qu'ils suivaient en Rhodésie du Sud pour retrouver la solution positive et réaliste, la seule qui était de nature à sauvegarder leurs intérêts en Afrique.

88. Il est regrettable que la Puissance administrante n'ait pas jugé bon de choisir la voie de la fermeté

lorsque le Ministère de M. Whitehead était encore au pouvoir à Salisbury. Se dérochant à ses obligations envers l'Organisation sous le paravent des précédents constitutionnels et des traditions parlementaires, la Puissance administrante a cru bon, au contraire, de pratiquer envers le peuple dont elle assurait la tutelle une politique qui ne fit que renforcer l'autorité des extrémistes racistes en Rhodésie du Sud en les dotant de tous les moyens, militaires et autres, d'exercer le pouvoir. Rassurés par les propres déclarations du Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni, selon lesquelles la force ne serait pas utilisée contre eux au cas où ils déclareraient unilatéralement leur indépendance, les Blancs de Rhodésie se mirent en rébellion ouverte contre leurs propres tuteurs. La situation en Rhodésie du Sud se détériore dangereusement et constitue une véritable menace à la paix et à la sécurité dans toute la région méridionale de l'Afrique. La Puissance administrante doit en assumer toute la responsabilité devant l'Organisation.

89. En effet, même au point extrêmement dangereux où en est arrivée la situation en Rhodésie du Sud, à cause du défi lancé par Ian Smith, même devant cette agression caractérisée perpétrée par les usurpateurs du pouvoir contre les 4 millions d'Africains, la Puissance administrante hésite encore à prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour mater la rébellion et transférer les pouvoirs aux représentants authentiques du peuple du Zimbabwe. La Puissance administrante a pris, il est vrai, certaines sanctions économiques et financières. Il est toutefois évident que ces mesures n'auront qu'une efficacité relative tant qu'un embargo total et complet ne sera pas imposé et tant que ces mesures ne seront pas renforcées par une action militaire. Par ailleurs, même limité aux quelques sanctions annoncées par le Royaume-Uni, le boycottage proposé par celui-ci ne sera pas respecté puisque, comme nous le savons tous, les produits nécessaires au gouvernement rebelle d'Ian Smith seront acheminés par ses deux alliés, le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud.

90. Le New York Times du 5 décembre 1965 a publié une information de l'agence Reuter, de Londres, datée du 4 décembre 1965, qui explique bien comment les sanctions prises par l'Organisation contre la Rhodésie du Sud sont défaites par les grandes compagnies pétrolières:

"Un pétrolier de la British Petroleum Company — qui appartient plus qu'à moitié au Gouvernement britannique — est en route ce soir pour l'Afrique avec 12 000 tonnes de pétrole destiné à la colonie dissidente de Rhodésie.

"Le pétrolier arrivera à Beira, en Afrique-Orientale portugaise, dans 10 jours. Le pétrole sera conduit par oléoduc jusqu'à une raffinerie à Umtali, en Rhodésie, qui est la propriété conjointe de la British Petroleum Company et de six autres compagnies pétrolières.

"Cet envoi de pétrole en Rhodésie est le premier depuis que le premier ministre Ian Smith a déclaré l'indépendance, le 11 novembre. Le pétrole a été chargé dans l'Etat d'Abu Dhabi, dans le golfe Persique, qui n'a pas suivi la recommandation des Nations Unies d'imposer un embargo sur le pétrole à destination de la Rhodésie. Le Royaume-Uni a voté en faveur de la recommandation, mais n'a pas imposé d'embargo sur le pétrole.

"Un porte-parole de la compagnie pétrolière a dit que le pétrole d'Abu Dhabi était utilisé parce que l'Iran et la Libye appliquaient l'embargo*."

Voilà comment les sanctions sont respectées!

91. De l'avis de la délégation tunisienne, seule une action militaire engagée immédiatement pourrait ouvrir la voie à une solution satisfaisante de ce problème et ferait par là même l'économie d'une guérilla qui risque d'être autrement plus coûteuse.

92. Les derniers événements en Rhodésie ont prouvé de façon éclatante qu'un gouvernement formé par la minorité de colons racistes en Rhodésie du Sud a déjà créé une menace réelle contre l'indépendance et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays voisin: la Zambie.

93. L'Organisation ne peut rester impassible devant la situation explosive qui règne en Rhodésie du Sud; elle ne peut demeurer muette devant l'agression perpétrée par Ian Smith et son gouvernement raciste contre la sécurité de tout un peuple de 4 millions d'Africains dont les droits les plus sacrés sont foulés aux pieds. Elle doit intervenir pour arrêter cette agression et la menace qui en découle pour les autres pays voisins. L'Organisation se doit d'adopter des mesures énergiques pour mettre un terme au complot fomenté par les rebelles blancs de la Rhodésie du Sud, aidés et soutenus par leurs alliés portugais et sud-africains. L'Assemblée générale doit inviter la Puissance administrante à prendre les dispositions économiques et militaires nécessaires pour restituer au peuple zimbabwe tous ses droits inaliénables tels qu'ils sont reconnus par la Charte, et en particulier son droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, conformément à la résolution 1514 (XV).

94. J'ai parlé de la Rhodésie du Sud, qui est le cas le plus typique où la complaisance de la Puissance administrante a créé de toutes pièces une situation anormale qui constitue aujourd'hui une menace à la paix et à la sécurité en Afrique. Si cette situation existe aujourd'hui, c'est parce que le Royaume-Uni s'est refusé à accorder au Comité spécial et à l'Organisation une coopération effective en vue de hâter le processus de la décolonisation par des moyens pacifiques.

95. La même attitude négative a été observée par le Portugal en ce qui concerne les grands territoires africains qu'il continue à dominer. Malgré les condamnations successives de l'Organisation et malgré les nombreuses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, le Portugal continue à défier la conscience internationale et à exploiter de la façon la plus indigne et la plus honteuse les millions d'Africains de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise.

96. Nous constatons que dans la poursuite de son odieuse politique, le Portugal se trouve encouragé par la complaisance de ses partenaires commerciaux. Malgré les appels répétés de tous les Etats africains, les alliés du Portugal continuent de lui

fournir les investissements financiers et les équipements militaires qui lui permettent de poursuivre sa guerre et sa répression contre les nationalistes africains et de consolider sa puissance en Afrique pour faire échec aux mesures économiques décidées contre lui par les Nations Unies et par l'Organisation de l'unité africaine. Nous ne pouvons accepter cette attitude de la part de ces Etats qui, indirectement peut-être, ne font qu'aider la répression effroyable qui s'abat sur les Angolais et les habitants du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise, et renforcer le colonialisme portugais chez nous. Nous comprenons mal que cette attitude inamicale soit celle de certains membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité. Encore une fois, nous faisons appel aux Etats-Unis, au Royaume-Uni, à la France et à leurs alliés — l'Italie, la Belgique, le Japon — pour qu'ils mettent fin à cette assistance et à cette aide à ceux qui persistent à ignorer leurs obligations d'Etats Membres de l'Organisation et qui continuent à violer les droits inaliénables de millions d'Africains en Angola, au Mozambique et en Guinée dite portugaise, contrairement aux principes de la Charte.

97. La situation dans les autres territoires africains demeure aussi tragique. Au Sud-Ouest africain et en Afrique du Sud, nos frères africains continuent à souffrir la honte des lois racistes de la politique d'apartheid. Ce sont leurs droits les plus élémentaires d'êtres humains qui sont quotidiennement violés et méconnus. Cette situation révoltante et répugnante continue et réduit à l'état dégradant d'êtres inférieurs près de 14 millions d'Africains. La politique et la philosophie d'apartheid, fondées sur le concept de la supériorité d'une race, ont été universellement condamnées; mais nous sommes réduits à l'impuissance lorsqu'il s'agit de redresser cette situation, parce que les grandes puissances commerciales ont refusé jusqu'à maintenant d'appliquer des sanctions économiques totales, seules capables d'amener le gouvernement de Pretoria à renoncer à sa politique inhumaine d'apartheid. L'Organisation doit prendre d'urgence les mesures nécessaires pour persuader les partenaires commerciaux de l'Afrique du Sud de coopérer avec elle pour prendre toutes les mesures coercitives nécessaires, y compris la rupture des relations diplomatiques ou commerciales et l'embargo sur les armes, le pétrole et les produits pétroliers.

98. Dans d'autres territoires d'Afrique, comme les protectorats anglais, ou d'Asie, comme Aden et le Sud arabe, la Puissance administrante n'a pas réalisé non plus les progrès attendus pour hâter l'indépendance de ces pays. Le recours à la force et les mesures de répression sont encore trop souvent utilisés contre les nationalistes.

99. Un autre ensemble de problèmes concerne les îles et petits territoires éparpillés dans les océans et pour lesquels le Comité spécial doit trouver des solutions fondées sur l'intérêt des habitants et leur développement. En ce qui concerne des petits territoires et des îles encore sous domination étrangère, la délégation tunisienne estime qu'il y a un travail assez sérieux à entreprendre pour évaluer avec la Puissance administrante les meilleurs procédés et moyens qui permettront une libre consultation des habitants afin de déterminer leur avenir.

*Cité en anglais par l'orateur.

Une étude poussée doit comprendre tous les aspects humains, géographiques et économiques, afin d'assurer à ces peuples un développement social et culturel rapide. Les Nations Unies ont là un nouveau domaine où la coopération internationale doit être encouragée.

100. La délégation tunisienne estime que l'exemple donné par la Nouvelle-Zélande dans les îles Cook est extrêmement important et pourrait constituer une expérience et un précédent heureux. La présence d'un représentant des Nations Unies, M. Omar Adeel — à qui ma délégation se plaît à rendre ici un hommage bien mérité —, a donné à la coopération de la Puissance administrante avec les Nations Unies un sens nouveau et une direction nouvelle qui devraient inspirer d'autres administrations.

101. Enfin, d'autres territoires dont la souveraineté demeure contestée devraient être examinés par le Comité spécial pour hâter la recherche d'une solution satisfaisante aux problèmes qu'ils continuent de poser. Cette solution doit être recherchée dans le cadre des négociations entre les parties directement intéressées. Ceci est particulièrement important pour Gibraltar et les îles Malouines.

102. Nous avons noté avec satisfaction que le représentant de l'Espagne, dans la déclaration qu'il a faite hier [1389ème séance], a clairement affirmé que son pays était prêt à engager des négociations avec le Royaume-Uni sur le problème de Gibraltar. L'esprit de coopération manifesté par l'Espagne pour régler cette question mérite d'être encouragé par l'Assemblée. Ma délégation serait heureuse de le voir prévaloir aussi dans le cas d'autres territoires en Afrique, comme Ifni et le Sahara espagnol.

103. Telles sont les quelques remarques que ma délégation a cru bon de faire sur les territoires les plus importants dont l'examen a été entrepris par notre comité spécial.

104. Le bilan rapide des quatre années de travail du Comité spécial démontre que les progrès réalisés dans la liquidation du colonialisme sont encore loin d'être appréciables et continuent d'être freinés par le manque de coopération de la part des puissances administrantes, et particulièrement de celles dont les efforts tendent à renforcer le bastion des minorités dominantes en Afrique méridionale.

105. Les intérêts financiers considérables investis par les grandes puissances commerciales et par les alliés de l'Afrique du Sud, du Portugal et de la Rhodésie du Sud constituent de plus en plus un obstacle sérieux à la réalisation des aspirations légitimes des peuples colonisés et renforcent la résistance des dirigeants blancs à tout effort de décolonisation pacifique. Nous nous joignons à ceux qui ont déjà lancé un appel aux grandes puissances coloniales pour qu'elles renoncent à cette attitude négative envers les nationalistes africains et pour qu'elles abandonnent cette politique de complaisance envers les racistes et les colonialistes d'Afrique méridionale. Il est en effet évident que toutes les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité ont été ignorées par le Royaume-Uni, l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal. L'Assemblée générale devrait tenir compte de l'évolution des mouvements nationalistes dans tous les territoires encore sous domination étrangère. Une conscience nouvelle anime nos frères qui luttent pour leur indépendance.

106. Nous saluons les efforts de tous ceux qui s'organisent et luttent avec acharnement et détermination pour le triomphe de leurs droits. Les Nations Unies ont, à maintes reprises, reconnu le mérite de ceux qui luttent et ont admis le caractère juste de leur combat.

107. Aussi l'Assemblée générale devrait-elle rechercher tous les moyens propres à soutenir et renforcer les mouvements de libération nationale. Une aide directe concrète ne serait que l'illustration de la ferme volonté des Nations Unies de débarrasser l'humanité du colonialisme. Il est grand temps, pour les puissances coloniales, de prendre en considération les principes sacrés de la Charte. Nous leur adressons un appel pressant pour qu'elles coopèrent avec sincérité à l'application rapide de la résolution 1514 (XV) à chacun des territoires sous leur administration. Le refus d'une telle coopération nuirait au prestige de l'Organisation, forçant ceux qui luttent pour leur indépendance à recourir à toutes les solutions de désespoir, et les inciterait à ne compter que sur eux-mêmes.

108. La Tunisie croit fermement au triomphe de la raison et de la justice; mais, si les puissances coloniales continuent encore à défier l'Organisation en refusant d'appliquer ses résolutions pertinentes, il ne restera plus d'autre voie ouverte aux mouvements de libération que celle de la résistance armée pour la défense de leur dignité et de leur droit à l'autodétermination.

109. M. DE CASTRO (Philippines) [traduit de l'anglais]: La délégation des Philippines est heureuse de participer à cette discussion générale sur l'œuvre réalisée pendant les deux dernières années par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Ce débat permet à l'Organisation de s'arrêter un instant pour considérer ce qui a été fait jusqu'à présent et ce qui reste à faire. Nous devons pour ainsi dire faire un bilan et voir où nous en sommes. Nous devons nous demander: Que ferons-nous maintenant?

110. Quand les Membres fondateurs ont créé l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ils ont promis solennellement que, dans le monde entier, les peuples assujettis recouvreraient leurs droits fondamentaux à la liberté et à l'indépendance. En même temps, les puissances administrantes ont librement et solennellement accepté, comme un devoir sacré, l'obligation de travailler au maximum à améliorer la condition des habitants de ces territoires et, en particulier, de leur accorder progressivement l'autonomie, de tenir compte de leurs aspirations politiques et de les aider à développer peu à peu leurs libres institutions selon les conditions particulières à chaque territoire et aux peuples qui l'habitent ainsi que de leurs stades divers de développement.

111. La République des Philippines, ancienne colonie devenue une nation libre et souveraine peu après la seconde guerre mondiale, a été l'un des Membres fondateurs de l'Organisation. Elle a joué un rôle, à vrai dire modeste, en faveur de l'inclusion dans la Charte de la Déclaration sur les territoires non autonomes.

112. Quinze années plus tard, en 1960, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dans sa résolution 1514 (XV), a réaffirmé sa détermination de mettre fin à toutes les formes du colonialisme. Elle a déclaré en termes non équivoques que:

"La sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'humanité",

et que:

"des mesures immédiates seront prises... pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leur vœu librement exprimés...".

Les Philippines ont eu également l'honneur de figurer parmi les auteurs de cette résolution et d'appuyer son adoption.

113. Maintenant que la Charte a 20 ans et cette déclaration cinq ans, on est en droit de demander: Quel est le bilan à la date d'aujourd'hui? Combien de colonies ont obtenu la liberté et combien d'autres restent à libérer?

114. En 1946, il y avait 74 territoires, peuplés de 215 millions d'hommes, auxquels s'appliquait le chapitre XI de la Charte. Ils étaient de tailles différentes, s'échelonnant d'une centaine d'habitants pour la petite île de Pitcairn à plus de 70 millions aux Indes néerlandaises. Près de la moitié de l'effectif des hommes colonisés se trouvait sur le continent africain. Il y en avait un très grand nombre dans la région importante du littoral méditerranéen.

115. Depuis ce sombre début, avons-nous fait des progrès? Certainement. Voyons les chiffres.

116. Les territoires non autonomes ayant obtenu leur autonomie sous une forme ou sous une autre à la fin de 1954 étaient: la Guyane française, la Guadeloupe, la Martinique, la Réunion et Saint-Pierre et Miquelon, qui sont des départements d'outre-mer ou ont un statut analogue dans le cadre de la République française; l'Indonésie et les Etats d'Indochine, qui ont alors acquis leur indépendance; Porto Rico, qui est devenue un commonwealth associé aux Etats-Unis; le Groenland, qui s'est uni au royaume du Danemark sur un pied d'égalité avec les autres parties du royaume; les Antilles néerlandaises et Surinam, qui se sont associés au royaume des Pays-Bas.

117. Depuis 1955, les territoires sous mandat et les territoires non autonomes, surtout ceux d'Afrique, ont fait des progrès de plus en plus rapides vers l'indépendance. En 1956, le Maroc, la Tunisie et le Soudan sont devenus indépendants. Les anciens territoires français de l'Afrique occidentale et de l'Afrique équatoriale, Madagascar, l'archipel des Comores et la Côte française des Somalis étaient en train d'obtenir leur indépendance. La Côte-de-l'Or devenait l'Etat indépendant du Ghana. En 1958, l'ancienne Guinée française devenait indépendante sous le nom de République de Guinée.

118. En même temps, dans d'autres parties du monde, le mouvement des peuples dépendants vers l'indépendance ou l'autonomie s'accélérait également: la Fédération de Malaisie obtenait son indépendance en 1957 et, en 1959, l'Alaska et Hawaii obtenaient le statut d'Etat au sein des Etats-Unis d'Amérique.

119. Au cours de l'année 1960, il n'y eut pas moins de 18 pays nouveaux qui accédèrent à l'indépendance: 17 en Afrique et un dans le bassin méditerranéen. En 1961 et 1962, deux pays d'Afrique et deux pays des Caraïbes devinrent indépendants. Cette année, en 1965, deux autres sont devenus libres et ont été admis comme Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Les îles Cook sont devenues autonomes et elles ont le droit de choisir l'indépendance si leur peuple le désire. Enfin, il a été annoncé que la Guyane britannique deviendrait indépendante en 1966.

120. Ainsi, sur les 215 millions d'hommes qui n'étaient pas libres, il n'en reste environ que 25 millions à libérer. L'Organisation des Nations Unies peut se féliciter, à juste titre, des progrès considérables réalisés dans ce domaine.

121. Certes, la liste des territoires qui restent à libérer est encore longue; mais, sauf quelques-uns, à savoir la Rhodésie du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et les territoires sous administration portugaise, la grande majorité (et je n'entends pas minimiser leur importance) est constituée de petites îles ou de territoires peu peuplés. Ces petits territoires pourront à l'avenir être le principal objet des travaux du Comité spécial. Les modalités et méthodes qui ont réussi dans le cas des grands territoires à population indigène nombreuse ne conviendront peut-être pas pour eux. Il faudra sans doute que le Comité spécial traite le problème d'une façon nouvelle en tenant compte des conditions particulières à ces îles, sans jamais oublier que le but final est la liberté et l'indépendance ou l'autonomie, selon ce que voudront les populations.

122. J'ai dit que les trois questions principales qui se posent au Comité des Vingt-Quatre, comme à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, sont celles de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain et des territoires portugais. Ces trois cas constituent sans aucun doute aujourd'hui le problème majeur de la décolonisation. Ce qui complique encore les choses, c'est la présence dans ces pays de minorités racistes intransigeantes.

123. La position de mon gouvernement sur ces questions est parfaitement claire et bien connue. Il n'est pas nécessaire que j'abuse de la patience de l'Assemblée pour la définir à nouveau. Qu'il me suffise de dire que ma délégation appuiera toutes les mesures que l'Organisation des Nations Unies estimera nécessaire de prendre dans chacun de ces territoires pour y faire prévaloir les droits inaliénables de la population à la liberté, à l'indépendance et à la dignité humaine. Nous ne pouvons pas admettre que les puissances administrantes refusent d'appliquer les prescriptions de la Charte et les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale.

124. Permettez-moi de revenir au cas des petits territoires. Les problèmes qu'ils posent devront sans doute retenir particulièrement l'attention du Comité spécial à partir de maintenant. Ma délégation se permet par conséquent de suggérer que ce comité se fixe comme tâche particulière de mettre au point une méthode que les puissances administrantes pourraient appliquer pour que ces petits territoires avancent vers l'autonomie complète, l'indépendance et la liberté. Cette suggestion est conforme à la lettre et à l'esprit de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui garantit à tous les peuples le droit à l'autodétermination, grâce à laquelle ils peuvent déterminer librement leur statut politique et poursuivre librement leur développement économique, social et culturel.

125. Avant de conclure, permettez-moi de définir clairement la position de ma délégation au sujet de l'utilité des visites effectuées dans les territoires en question par des membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Jusqu'à présent, les puissances administrantes ont toujours refusé ces visites. Ma délégation y attache beaucoup d'importance et demande instamment aux puissances administrantes de reconsidérer leur position. Les informations fournies par les puissances administrantes et les dépositions de signataires de pétitions, verbales ou écrites, gagnent à être évaluées par l'observation directe.

126. Je l'ai dit au début de mon intervention, ma délégation est heureuse d'avoir cette occasion de participer à la discussion du point 23. Sous certaines réserves, exprimées au cours des discussions de la Quatrième Commission, au sujet de quelques conclusions et recommandations du Comité spécial s'appliquant à quelques chapitres précis des rapports, ma délégation votera l'approbation des rapports du Comité spécial. Elle ajoute ses félicitations à celles, nombreuses, que le Comité a déjà reçues pour les travaux excellents, précieux et considérables qu'il nous a soumis. Ma délégation votera aussi tout projet de résolution visant à prolonger le mandat du Comité spécial.

127. Je voudrais dire un mot pour finir. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a fait beaucoup pour la libération des peuples assujettis. Mais elle ne peut pas relâcher ses efforts tant que le dernier territoire colonisé n'aura pas été libéré ou rendu autonome.

128. M. DACHTSEREN (République populaire mongole) [traduit du russe]: Il y a juste cinq ans, les Nations Unies adoptaient la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce document historique, qui exprimait l'ardente volonté de tous les peuples épris de liberté de mettre fin au honteux système colonial, a insufflé l'espoir aux peuples opprimés des colonies et les a inspirés dans la lutte qu'ils mènent pour se libérer de l'esclavage colonial.

129. Pendant les cinq années écoulées, la lutte des peuples coloniaux n'a cessé de s'intensifier et a revêtu différentes formes — de la formation de partis politiques au soulèvement armé contre des régimes coloniaux abhorrés. Voici plus de quatre ans que le peuple angolais mène une lutte courageuse contre les colonialistes portugais. A sa suite, les peuples du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise se sont soulevés. Le peuple de l'Arabie du Sud lutte tout aussi résolument pour libérer son pays des colonialistes britanniques. Et nous avons encore présente à l'esprit la longue lutte que le peuple algérien a dû soutenir avant de reconstituer la nation algérienne.

130. Grâce à l'intensification de la lutte des peuples coloniaux et à l'action de toutes les forces pacifiques au cours de ces cinq années, plusieurs pays, autrefois soumis à la domination coloniale, ont accédé à l'indépendance nationale et sont venus se joindre à la famille des nations souveraines; ces pays mènent désormais le combat aux côtés de toute l'humanité progressiste pour aider leurs frères à se libérer de la domination coloniale.

131. Les peuples ont désormais le désir passionné d'en finir au plus vite avec le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, car la survivance d'empires coloniaux est en flagrante contradiction avec la volonté et la conscience de l'humanité, avec les principes et les objectifs des Nations Unies. Il est donc naturel que dans le monde entier, tant à l'Organisation des Nations Unies qu'au-dehors, les forces de progrès déploient d'immenses efforts pour accélérer le processus de liquidation complète du système colonial et donner effet à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

132. A cet égard, nous nous devons de relever le rôle considérable que les jeunes Etats indépendants d'Afrique et d'Asie et les Etats socialistes ont joué et continuent à jouer dans la lutte générale contre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme. Les pays socialistes et les pays non alignés d'Asie et d'Afrique ont condamné et condamnent d'un commun accord l'impérialisme et le colonialisme, dont ils dénoncent les intrigues et les manœuvres de toutes sortes destinées à perpétuer les régimes coloniaux.

133. La Conférence des chefs d'Etats indépendants d'Afrique, tenue en 1963 à Addis-Abéba, a marqué une étape nouvelle dans la lutte des peuples contre l'impérialisme et le colonialisme. L'Organisation de l'unité africaine, qui a été créée à cette conférence, contribue efficacement à consolider l'indépendance politique et économique des peuples africains et joue un rôle important dans la progression des mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux et dépendants.

134. Comme nous le savons tous, la Conférence des chefs d'Etats indépendants d'Afrique qui s'est tenue à Addis-Abéba et les réunions africaines au sommet dont elle fut suivie, ainsi que la Conférence des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des pays non alignés qui a eu lieu pendant la période considérée, ont élaboré un programme d'action et indiqué des mesures concrètes propres à accélérer le processus de décolonisation et de libération des peuples coloniaux et dépendants du joug colonial et raciste. L'Organisation de l'unité africaine et tous les pays afro-asiatiques aident considérablement l'Organisation des Nations Unies à s'acquitter de la tâche qui lui a été confiée par la Charte et la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

135. Quand l'Assemblée générale a décidé, par la résolution 1907 (XVIII), de désigner l'année 1965 comme Année de la coopération internationale, de nombreux Etats Membres ont exprimé le vœu que cette année verrait la liquidation définitive et complète des vestiges du système colonial. Mais, hélas, des dizaines de millions d'êtres humains, et près de 60 territoires répartis dans les différentes parties du monde restent soumis aujourd'hui encore à l'esclavage colonial. Ainsi, l'espoir des peuples a été déçu et les dispositions de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'ont pas été appliquées. La raison de cette situation funeste, c'est que quelques puissances colonialistes et leurs alliés du bloc agressif de l'OTAN refusent obstinément de donner effet aux dispositions de la Déclaration et des diverses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité.

136. C'est ainsi que le Portugal agit sans tenir aucun compte des résolutions de l'ONU relatives aux colonies portugaises. Salazar lui-même a déclaré que le Portugal "est résolu à maintenir sa domination sur l'Angola et tous les autres territoires, sans se soucier des appels de l'ONU touchant l'octroi de l'indépendance à ces territoires".

137. A cette fin, les colonialistes portugais intensifient les opérations punitives destinées à réprimer la lutte légitime des peuples d'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise pour leur liberté et leur indépendance. Les atrocités et la cruauté des colonialistes portugais ne peuvent se comparer qu'aux méthodes les plus barbares du fascisme. Nul n'ignore qu'un pays comme le Portugal serait incapable, sans soutien extérieur, de conserver des possessions coloniales situées sur un autre continent et 10 fois plus étendues que son propre territoire. Le Portugal partage la responsabilité de tous les forfaits perpétrés par les colonialistes aux ordres de Salazar avec les puissances occidentales comme les Etats-Unis, la République fédérale d'Allemagne et autres qui, au mépris des nombreuses résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, financent une guerre sanglante sur le continent africain et fournissent des armes à cet effet.

138. Quant à la situation dans les colonies britanniques d'Aden, d'Oman, de la Guyane britannique, du Betchouanaland, du Bassoutoland et du Souaziland, elle s'aggrave sans cesse. Le Gouvernement britannique, tout en promettant officiellement d'accorder l'indépendance à ces territoires, continue sous divers prétextes de les maintenir sous la domination coloniale. Dans son intervention du 1er décembre dernier devant l'Assemblée générale [1386ème séance], le représentant du Royaume-Uni a tenté de justifier par divers arguments d'ordre social et économique le retard apporté à l'octroi de l'indépendance à ces territoires. Je voudrais à cet égard citer la disposition pertinente de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Aux termes du paragraphe 3 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV):

"Le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

139. Le racisme, qui est une forme particulière du colonialisme, demeure un danger pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

140. Le régime raciste d'Afrique du Sud, fort de l'aide économique et militaire des puissances occidentales, continue d'appliquer intensivement l'odieuse politique d'apartheid, étendant ce système de ségrégation raciale à un territoire limitrophe: le Sud-Ouest africain. La population autochtone du Sud-Ouest africain est ainsi soumise par les racistes de la République sud-africaine à une impitoyable oppression.

141. Les racistes sud-africains sont en train d'ourdir des plans criminels en vue de démembrer et d'annexer le territoire et d'y étendre le système de l'apartheid. Dans cette infâme entreprise d'asservissement de la population autochtone, les monopoles étrangers agissent la main dans la main avec le régime raciste de Verwoerd.

142. L'examen de la question du Sud-Ouest africain et l'analyse de l'activité des monopoles étrangers dans ce territoire, auxquels a récemment procédé le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre, ont pleinement confirmé ce que nous venons de dire.

143. En Rhodésie du Sud, la proclamation illégale par le régime raciste d'Ian Smith d'indépendance est un nouvel acte criminel commis par les racistes et leurs complices. Malgré les nombreuses mises en garde contre le danger que présenterait la création d'un nouvel Etat raciste sur le modèle de la République sud-africaine et malgré l'opinion pacifique mondiale qui réclame l'adoption des mesures nécessaires pour couper court à toute aventure de ce genre, les puissances occidentales, en particulier le Royaume-Uni, ont favorisé cette proclamation illégale de l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud. C'est ainsi qu'un nouveau foyer de tension est apparu au centre de l'Afrique.

144. La position du Gouvernement de la République populaire mongole sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud est claire. Dans sa déclaration du 16 novembre 1965, le gouvernement de mon pays a catégoriquement condamné cet acte criminel et déclaré qu'il "ne reconnaîtra pas l'indépendance de la Rhodésie du Sud, proclamée illégalement par la dictature raciste de la minorité blanche aux dépens des intérêts du peuple du Zimbabwe" et qu'"il invite tous les Etats à prendre au plus tôt toutes les mesures nécessaires"^{5/}.

145. Dans plusieurs autres territoires sous tutelle, le comportement des puissances administrantes est loin d'être conforme aux dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, en particulier, transforment en bases militaires les îles du Pacifique placées sous leur tutelle; or, ces bases représentent une grave menace pour la paix et la sécurité des peuples d'Asie et d'Extrême-Orient.

146. Tout cela montre que les forces de progrès qui luttent pour éliminer aussi rapidement que possible le honteux système colonial doivent redoubler d'efforts, à la fois dans le cadre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et en dehors.

147. A côté des vestiges du colonialisme qui en

^{5/} Documents officiels du Conseil de sécurité, vingtième année, Supplément d'octobre, novembre et décembre 1965, document S/6943.

incarnent les anciennes formes classiques, le néo-colonialisme ne représente pas un moindre danger, car il est devenu pour les puissances impérialistes un moyen de maintenir les anciens régimes coloniaux et d'asservir les jeunes Etats indépendants qui manquent encore de force. Les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et la République fédérale d'Allemagne sont à l'avant-garde de ceux qui pratiquent une politique colonialiste. Les monopoles américains et ceux d'Allemagne occidentale occupent une position prépondérante dans de nombreux territoires non autonomes.

148. C'est ainsi que la revue United States News and World Report écrivait le 1er juin 1965: "Les grandes firmes américaines estiment que les entreprises à l'étranger sont d'un excellent rapport. C'est là un des principaux facteurs de la vie économique dans la seconde moitié du XXème siècle."

149. La République fédérale d'Allemagne ne se borne pas à étendre son influence économique dans les colonies africaines du Portugal, en République sud-africaine et dans le Sud-Ouest africain. Elle fournit des armes au Portugal et à l'Afrique du Sud, établit des bases militaires, y compris des bases pour le lancement de fusées en Afrique australe.

150. Parallèlement à cette expansion économique qui vise à perpétuer l'asservissement des pays coloniaux et des jeunes Etats indépendants, les colonialistes et leurs alliés néo-colonialistes, dans le dessein de maintenir leurs positions économiques et stratégiques, interviennent ouvertement dans les affaires intérieures d'Etats souverains qui se sont déjà libérés du régime colonial.

151. Les exemples les plus frappants sont à cet égard l'intervention des puissances impérialistes au Congo, avec la participation des Etats-Unis, de la Belgique et du Royaume-Uni, l'intervention armée des Etats-Unis d'Amérique dans les affaires intérieures de la République Dominicaine, l'agression américaine au Viet-Nam ainsi que les bombardements barbares auxquels est soumis le territoire de la République démocratique du Viet-Nam.

152. Il est clair que dans ces actions collectives des puissances impérialistes, qui ont pour seul but le maintien du colonialisme, le rôle principal revient aux impérialistes américains. La revue américaine de politique extérieure Foreign Affairs écrivait à ce sujet, dans son numéro d'octobre 1965: "Pour autant que les circonstances l'ont permis, nous avons encouragé l'ancienne puissance coloniale à demeurer sur place ou à revenir sur scène."

153. Les bases militaires des puissances impérialistes à l'étranger servent à protéger leurs positions économiques et politiques, elles servent aussi à écraser les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux. Les impérialistes américains et britanniques ont entouré la surface du globe d'un réseau de bases militaires à partir desquelles ils se livrent à l'agression ouverte, à l'intervention armée dans les affaires intérieures d'Etats souverains, à des opérations punitives contre les peuples des territoires non autonomes.

154. La plupart des bases militaires du Royaume-Uni sont situées dans ses possessions coloniales et dans ses anciennes colonies, qui ont récemment conquis l'indépendance nationale. Parlant devant l'Assemblée générale [1386ème séance], lord Caradon, représentant du Royaume-Uni, a dit que son pays n'avait besoin de bases que pour exécuter ses obligations touchant le maintien de la paix et à l'égard de ses amis pour leur venir en aide et honorer ses engagements à leur égard découlant des traités.

155. Si l'on songe aux circonstances dans lesquelles ces bases ont été utilisées, il est facile de déterminer leur véritable rôle. Chacun sait que le Royaume-Uni est venu en aide à ses alliés en mettant à leur disposition sa base de l'île de l'Ascension, pour faciliter l'intervention américano-belge au Congo.

156. Notre délégation estime que la lutte des peuples pour la suppression des bases étrangères et le retrait des forces armées étrangères sont inséparables de la lutte contre l'impérialisme, pour la libération nationale et la paix dans le monde entier.

157. Notre délégation partage pleinement l'opinion de ceux qui estiment que le moment est venu de prendre des mesures concrètes et effectives pour l'application inconditionnelle de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Notre délégation est d'avis que, tout en prenant les mesures les plus vigoureuses contre les puissances coloniales, il faut également condamner énergiquement l'activité de celles des puissances occidentales qui continuent, sans tenir compte des décisions de l'ONU, de fournir aux régimes coloniaux et racistes une aide politique, militaire et économique, leur comportement constituant le principal obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration des Nations Unies.

158. Il faut que l'Assemblée générale réaffirme le droit des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, reconnaisse la légitimité de la lutte que mènent ces peuples pour accéder à ce droit, invite tous les Etats à leur venir en aide.

159. L'Assemblée générale doit également adresser un avertissement sévère, tant aux puissances coloniales qu'aux puissances qui leur prêtent assistance, en déclarant que les unes et les autres violent de manière flagrante la Charte et la Déclaration de l'ONU et assument de ce fait une lourde responsabilité internationale devant l'ensemble des peuples.

160. Pour conclure, je voudrais dire quelques mots de l'activité du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre. Au cours de la période écoulée, le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre a accompli un travail considérable et utile qui mérite toute notre reconnaissance.

161. Le Comité a présenté à l'Assemblée générale un rapport substantiel qui abonde en éléments d'information concrets et qui reflète la situation réelle existant dans les territoires qu'il a étudiés.

162. La décision du Comité d'envoyer une mission de visite a été pleinement justifiée. Bien que le Comité n'ait pu se rendre directement dans les territoires coloniaux en raison du refus des puissances administrantes, il a pu établir, à l'occasion de ses travaux dans les capitales de trois Etats africains, des contacts étroits avec les peuples en lutte pour l'indépendance nationale.

163. Au cours de son voyage, le Comité a examiné les graves problèmes coloniaux que sont les questions de la Rhodésie du Sud, des territoires administrés par le Portugal et du Sud-Ouest africain, et il a divulgué de nombreux faits concrets qui révèlent l'action funeste des monopoles étrangers et le rôle des puissances occidentales membres du bloc militaire de l'OTAN dans la politique aventureuse des colonialistes portugais et du régime raciste de la République sud-africaine.

164. La session que le Comité a tenue en Afrique a donc marqué une nouvelle étape de son activité. C'est là une méthode de travail féconde à laquelle le Comité devra encore recourir à l'avenir.

165. Considérant le travail fécond accompli par le Comité au cours de ses quatre années d'existence et la tâche qui l'attend s'il doit poursuivre l'étude de la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration, la délégation mongole estime utile et souhaitable de proroger le mandat du Comité des Vingt-Quatre.

166. Le peuple mongol, qui a autrefois subi la domination féodale et coloniale, a toujours été aux côtés des peuples qui combattent pour la liberté et l'indépendance nationale.

167. Le peuple mongol et son gouvernement condamnent sévèrement, comme étant un crime très grave contre l'humanité, le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

168. La République populaire mongole est prête à appuyer toute mesure effective qui viserait à éliminer au plus tôt les vestiges du honteux système colonial; elle est prête, dans la mesure de ses moyens, à apporter sa contribution à cette entreprise.

169. M. LEKIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, les déclarations de nombreux signataires de pétitions et surtout ce qui se passe dans le centre et le sud de l'Afrique nous ont confirmé dans notre conviction que la communauté mondiale est en présence d'une situation grave dans le domaine de la décolonisation. Bien que des progrès aient été réalisés depuis 1963, nous sommes encore loin d'avoir atteint les buts fixés par la Charte et par la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce n'est pas seulement parce qu'un tiers du territoire de l'Afrique est encore soumis aux formes les plus brutales de l'exploitation et de l'oppression, contrairement à l'esprit de la Charte et aux exigences de la civilisation moderne. Il s'agit en fait de politiques qui mettent en jeu la vie de millions d'Africains ainsi que la paix et la sécurité de l'Afrique, donc la paix et la sécurité mondiales. Profitant de tous les avantages qu'offre aux tenants du racisme et de l'hégémonie la crise des relations internationales, les racistes de Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain et de l'Afrique du Sud, comme les forces colonialistes et néo-colonialistes en général, appliquent une politique qui aura sans doute de vastes conséquences. Profitant de ce que les nations éprises de paix sont occupées par des événements qui se produisent dans d'autres parties du monde et qui menacent directement la paix et la sécurité de l'humanité, les racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud ont réduit totalement à l'esclavage les quatre millions d'habitants de ce territoire. En cela, ils ont l'appui total des partisans de la théorie de l'Uebermensch en Afrique du Sud, lesquels, de leur côté, prennent des mesures pour enlever aux peuples du Sud-Ouest africain même le plus faible espoir de se libérer de la condition d'esclaves dans laquelle ils sont maintenus depuis plus de 40 ans par les racistes de l'Afrique du Sud.

170. Les colonialistes portugais s'apprêtent également à intensifier, dans des conditions nouvelles, la guerre coloniale qu'ils mènent contre les habitants des territoires placés sous leur domination et à leur imposer, par le fer et par le feu, les bienfaits de ce qu'ils appellent la civilisation portugaise.

171. Ce ne sont là, bien entendu, que les manifestations les plus spectaculaires de l'action coordonnée des forces du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme, qui s'exerce également dans d'autres territoires. Dans certains d'entre eux, on abroge la Constitution, on renvoie le gouvernement, on procède à des "consultations" et l'on prend des mesures propres à faire "accepter" des solutions, que les habitants rejettent pour la raison bien simple que ces solutions ne sont pas conformes à leurs aspirations et à leurs vœux.

172. Le fait que la crise des relations internationales a gêné la décolonisation prouve une fois de plus que la politique qui consiste à aggraver les tensions, à employer la force pour le règlement des différends internationaux et à ne pas hésiter à risquer la guerre a une influence défavorable sur la lutte pour la liberté, l'indépendance et l'égalité des droits des peuples, ainsi que sur l'établissement d'une paix durable dans le monde. Quels que soient les prétextes invoqués pour mener cette politique d'intensification des tensions et d'intervention extérieure, quelles que soient les raisons données pour la justifier, il n'en reste pas moins que ses protagonistes ne s'intéressent pas vraiment à la liberté et à l'émancipation des peuples et des Etats. En fait, ce qui est en jeu, ce sont des intérêts mesquins et égoïstes qui les poussent à poursuivre des buts précis dans les domaines politique, militaire, stratégique et économique en aggravant les causes existantes de conflit et en en créant de nouvelles.

173. Nous voyons se manifester maintenant une tendance qui vise à étendre les privilèges existants et à en extorquer de nouveaux, à imposer des relations internationales basées sur la domination et l'hégémonie et à empêcher, ou tout au moins à gêner, les progrès dans le monde. Considérée sous cet angle, la régression observée actuellement dans le domaine de la décolonisation est étroitement liée à la crise des relations internationales, elle est dans une large mesure la conséquence directe de cette crise.

174. La situation créée par les événements du Vietnam et d'autres parties du monde a sans aucun doute encouragé M. Smith à choisir précisément ce moment pour commettre un acte de trahison envers le Royaume-Uni et un crime contre les 4 millions d'Africains de Rhodésie du Sud. Inversement, l'existence du colonialisme, en tant que système de relations basé sur la domination et l'inégalité, convient aux protagonistes de la politique d'aggravation des relations et d'ingérence dans les affaires des autres peuples et des autres Etats.

175. Cette évolution dans le domaine de la décolonisation n'est pas due seulement au refus de quelques puissances coloniales de faire honneur à leurs obligations et de coopérer activement à l'élimination du colonialisme et à l'application des principes et prescriptions de la Charte. Les rapports du Comité spécial [A/5800/Rev.1 et A/6000/Rev.1] font nettement ressortir qu'une grande part de responsabilité, maintenant peut-être la plus grande, revient à des pays qui, tout en condamnant verbalement les actes des racistes et des colonialistes, leur donnent en réalité tout leur appui. Cet appui, nous le savons, ne se limite pas à un accroissement des relations commerciales et économiques. Il comporte aussi des fournitures d'armes, directes ou passant par des pays tiers.

176. Vu sous cet angle, le problème colonial n'est plus une affaire à régler seulement entre une puissance coloniale donnée et l'Organisation des Nations Unies qui personnifie la communauté mondiale. Les conditions ont changé et les méthodes aussi. Il y a maintenant davantage de pays directement intéressés à maintenir des avant-postes à partir desquels ils pourront exercer une influence sur les événements qui se déroulent dans les diverses parties du monde et menacer ainsi l'indépendance chèrement acquise des pays récemment émancipés. C'est pourquoi l'élimination du colonialisme doit être considérée aujourd'hui comme un problème de relations entre l'Organisation des Nations Unies et les Etats qui, sous un prétexte quelconque, idéologique, militaire ou économique, aident le colonialisme à se maintenir ou gênent son élimination.

177. Les pays africains, intéressés à la liquidation immédiate du colonialisme et à l'élimination de la discrimination raciale du sol de l'Afrique (car cette question, pour eux comme pour nous, met en jeu la paix et la sécurité), ont tenté d'achever le processus de la décolonisation par des moyens pacifiques. Les chefs d'Etat africains et les dirigeants politiques des pays encore colonisés ont, à maintes reprises, déclaré qu'ils étaient prêts à rechercher par la négociation des solutions qui garantiraient l'égalité de traitement et l'égalité des droits aux membres des autres races en Afrique.

178. Les racistes et ceux qui les soutiennent n'ont pas montré le même attachement à la paix et au principe du règlement pacifique des différends que les pays et les peuples africains. Ils n'ont pas pris la main que ces derniers leur tendaient et ils ont répondu à ce geste d'amitié et à cette offre de coopération par des mesures de répression brutale et par la guerre. Les tentatives faites pour rechercher par des moyens pacifiques les solutions qui garantiraient l'égalité de tous n'ont provoqué de la part des colonialistes que des actes qui violent les droits et la dignité humaine des Africains.

179. Il y a donc un affrontement entre les conceptions nouvelles et les conceptions anciennes, entre les idées progressistes et les idées réactionnaires, entre les sentiments humains et les sentiments inhumains, entre le droit et la force, entre la justice

et l'illégalité, entre l'amitié et la haine, entre la foi dans l'humanité et dans un avenir meilleur et la peur d'un avenir incertain. Il n'y a qu'une issue possible à cet affrontement, et c'est le triomphe de la justice sur le refus de la loi, la victoire du droit sur la force. Dans un conflit de cette nature, cette issue n'est jamais douteuse. La question est seulement de savoir si nous voulons faire ce qui est nécessaire (et ensemble nous pouvons le faire) pour mettre fin à ce conflit avec un minimum de souffrances et de sacrifices.

181. C'est pour des raisons évidentes que nous avons parlé longuement des faits dangereux qui se sont produits dans les colonies, faits qui témoignent du rôle précis que les colonialistes et néo-colonialistes ont fixé aux colonies dans le cadre d'une stratégie globale visant à préserver les privilèges existants, à en acquérir de nouveaux et à imposer, sous des apparences nouvelles, des formes de relations qui sont en réalité celles d'autrefois, basées sur la domination et sur la subordination.

182. Cependant, il existe ce qu'on appelle des petites colonies, c'est-à-dire celles dont la faible superficie, la population peu nombreuse et le sous-développement économique servent d'arguments pour justifier le maintien d'une domination étrangère. Ces facteurs compliquent probablement, dans certains cas, le processus d'émancipation de ces territoires, mais ils ne sont pas les seuls à donner au problème son véritable caractère. La plupart de ces territoires sont situés à une distance plus ou moins grande des côtes et des continents qui ont été récemment libérés ou qui luttent actuellement pour leur émancipation politique et économique. C'est pour cette raison que ces territoires intéressent particulièrement les puissances qui ne peuvent s'adapter aux changements qui ont eu lieu dans le monde et désirent conserver des positions à partir desquelles elles puissent entraver le développement de pays récemment émancipés et déclencher des actions visant à rétablir des sphères d'influence.

184. A ce sujet, je tiens à souligner que la variété des procédés et méthodes employés par les forces du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme pour atteindre leurs buts nous oblige à modifier constamment les modalités de l'action de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans le processus de décolonisation. Nous croyons qu'il est nécessaire d'adopter des méthodes de travail qui permettent à l'Organisation de jouer son rôle dans la phase actuelle de cette opération. Les Nations Unies doivent contrecarrer les actions des puissances coloniales, principalement les actions militaires qui empêchent d'atteindre l'un des buts fondamentaux de la Charte, à savoir le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, et qui imposent une lutte armée aux peuples coloniaux. Elles peuvent le faire en accordant leur appui politique, moral et matériel aux peuples coloniaux qui luttent pour leur libération.

185. D'autre part, pour obtenir une décolonisation pacifique là où c'est encore possible, l'Organisation des Nations Unies devrait s'engager directement et de bonne heure, en envoyant des missions itinérantes ou en affirmant la présence de l'Organisation par l'envoi d'observateurs ou de résidents, dans le seul but d'élaborer des programmes et d'accélérer l'application de mesures visant à transmettre le pouvoir à des représentants des populations et à garantir l'indépendance de celles-ci.

186. En dernière analyse, ce serait aussi l'intérêt bien compris des puissances coloniales, qui doivent se résigner à l'inévitable. Il faudrait qu'elles renoncent à se retrancher derrière la fiction juridique de leur compétence exclusive et qu'au moins dans la phase actuelle elles montrent de la bonne volonté ainsi que le désir d'aider à atteindre les buts et à appliquer les principes qui sont ceux de l'Organisation.

187. Profitant de l'expérience qu'il a acquise pendant son séjour d'un mois en Afrique, où il a accompli un travail considérable et précieux, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre pourrait, en adoptant des méthodes de travail appropriées et en les adaptant constamment aux conditions changeantes, insister encore davantage sur son rôle politique, sur l'action qu'on attend de lui. Cette action comporte l'initiative et la mise au point de mesures concrètes pour accélérer le processus de décolonisation. En plus du travail des sous-comités et des séances tenues à proximité des colonies (lesquelles ont prouvé leur utilité politique), il faudrait constituer des missions itinérantes ou désigner des membres individuels du Comité, et demander aux puissances administrantes de permettre à ces missions ou à ces membres de visiter des territoires encore coloniaux pour se rendre compte de la situation et s'entendre avec les puissances administrantes sur les mesures à prendre. Il serait utile également de tenir des sessions courtes mais fréquentes consacrées à l'étude de la situation dans certains territoires, uniquement en vue d'une action politique urgente à entreprendre soit par le Comité lui-même, soit, à la demande de celui-ci, par le Conseil de sécurité. Cela permettrait d'attirer en temps voulu l'attention de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et donc de la communauté internationale sur des problèmes qui mettent directement en danger la paix mondiale. Cela fournirait également un soutien moral et politique plus grand et permanent aux peuples qui combattent pour leur libération. Pour ces peuples, les manifestations de présence et de sollicitude constante de l'Organisation mondiale ont une importance exceptionnelle.

188. La relation étroite qui existe entre la crise des relations internationales — la guerre du Viet-Nam en particulier — et l'évolution négative de la décolonisation de l'Afrique, l'interdépendance et les répercussions réciproques de ces deux ordres de faits montrent clairement que la lutte pour la paix ne peut être dissociée de la lutte pour la liberté et l'égalité de tous les peuples. Cela doit déterminer, à notre avis, l'orientation et l'activité des forces de paix et de démocratie. Il faut que ces forces, particulièrement en ce moment, s'emploient énergiquement et de façon concertée à éliminer le danger immédiat pour la paix et la sécurité mondiales que présente la guerre du Viet-Nam. Cela facilitera toute action visant à prévenir des événements qui, si l'on ne prend pas à temps les mesures qui s'imposent, ont risque d'aboutir à des effusions de sang, non seulement en Afrique mais dans d'autres régions.

189. Le vingtième anniversaire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies nous fournit une occasion favorable pour dresser un bilan et examiner ce qui a déjà été fait et ce qui reste à faire. À la lumière de cette analyse et de l'évolution la plus récente de la décolonisation, il faut prendre des mesures ayant pour objet de faire appliquer immédiatement la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. L'Assemblée générale devrait réaffirmer cette déclaration, exiger son application immédiate, fixer une date limite pour l'élimination du colonialisme partout dans le monde et sous toutes ses formes et inviter les puissances administrantes à coopérer pleinement à la mise en œuvre d'un programme à élaborer en coopération avec les représentants des peuples coloniaux et destiné à achever le processus de décolonisation dans un délai déterminé.

190. La délégation yougoslave donnera tout son appui, comme elle l'a fait dans le passé, à la lutte des peuples qui sont encore colonisés et aux efforts déployés par les forces de paix et de progrès pour l'élimination immédiate du colonialisme.

191. M. EASTMAN (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Quant l'Assemblée générale a adopté sa résolution historique 1514 (XV), on espérait que, par l'application de cette résolution, le monde se libérerait des derniers vestiges du colonialisme et éliminerait à jamais le système horrible de pillage, d'exploitation et de refus du droit fondamental qu'ont les peuples à choisir leur propre destin. Il est regrettable que nous soyons réunis ici pour discuter de l'octroi de la liberté et de l'indépendance à plus de 50 territoires éparpillés sur toute la surface du globe. Nous discutons encore du point de savoir si ces peuples ont le droit que nous leur avons déjà reconnu. Nous aurions cru que les puissances administrantes seraient maintenant convaincues que nous ne pouvons pas supporter plus longtemps le système du colonialisme et qu'elles auraient pris toutes les mesures nécessaires pour accorder la liberté à la population des territoires placés sous leur domination. Nous savons en effet que la forme la plus libérale du colonialisme ne se compare pas à la forme la moins élevée de liberté et d'indépendance. Aucun peuple ne peut réellement accomplir son destin sous une domination étrangère. Nous admettons qu'il existe des formes diverses de colonialisme, mais mon gouvernement réprovoque ce système sous quelque forme que ce soit.

192. Toutefois, la forme la plus diabolique est celle qui est employée par les gouvernements du Portugal et de l'Afrique du Sud. Nous n'avons pas l'intention de récapituler devant l'Assemblée les atrocités perpétrées sur les peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise par le régime de Salazar. Il est cependant extrêmement difficile d'oublier les souffrances, le génocide et l'oppression infligés aux populations de ces territoires par la domination portugaise. L'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité se sont prononcés sur cette question à maintes reprises et ont demandé au Portugal de reconnaître les droits fondamentaux des peuples placés sous son administration. Tout le monde connaît la réponse. Le Portugal n'hésite pas à se moquer de nos décisions et il a adopté des mesures encore plus énergiques pour continuer à opprimer la population de ses colonies.

193. L'Organisation des Nations Unies ne peut compter atteindre les objectifs qu'elle s'est fixés tant que des hommes souffriront dans le monde, parce que la paix et la sécurité seront toujours en danger s'il en est à qui l'on refuse le droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Le continent africain restera dans un état de tension, d'insécurité et d'agitation aussi longtemps que certains de nos frères n'auront pas la liberté. Si nous jouissons de la liberté et de l'indépendance dans notre propre pays, cela ne nous suffit pas. Cela ne nous suffira pas tant que le continent ne sera pas entièrement libre. Alors, notre propre indépendance nous paraîtra meilleure.

194. En ce qui concerne l'Afrique du Sud et sa politique d'apartheid dans le Sud-Ouest africain, mon gouvernement a clairement défini sa position. Nous nous bornerons à répéter que nous sommes fermement convaincus que l'Afrique du Sud a failli à son mandat dans le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain. Nous sommes opposés au partage de ce territoire; nous sommes également opposés à l'aliénation des terres telle qu'elle y est pratiquée.

195. Nous tenons à assurer à l'Assemblée que le gouvernement et le peuple du Libéria persisteront sans relâche dans leurs efforts pour obtenir que le peuple du Sud-Ouest africain puisse à nouveau vivre libre. Le gouvernement du Libéria condamne sans réserve les actes criminels perpétrés par le régime minoritaire de la Rhodésie du Sud. Il appelle toutes les nations éprises de paix à conjuguer leurs efforts avec les siens pour empêcher que cette autorité illégale se maintienne en Rhodésie du Sud.

196. En ce qui concerne les territoires de la Haute Commission, ceux du Bassoutoland, du Betchouanaland et du Swaziland, le Gouvernement du Libéria condamne toute tentative du Gouvernement sud-africain pour annexer ces trois territoires ou porter atteinte à leur intégrité territoriale. Toute action, directe ou indirecte, entreprise dans ce but par l'Afrique du

Sud doit être considérée par l'Assemblée générale comme agression.

197. Ma délégation approuve la résolution du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [voir A/5800/Rev.1, chap. VIII] demandant la réunion d'une assemblée constituante dans chacun des trois territoires, où il n'y en a pas eu, pour recueillir les avis de tous les groupes de population et prendre ensuite des dispositions démocratiques d'ordre constitutionnel conduisant à des élections générales basées sur le suffrage universel des adultes et à la réaffirmation du droit inaliénable du peuple de chacun de ces territoires à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

198. Il ressort des rapports qui nous sont présentés qu'au sujet de certains des territoires non encore libérés des différends territoriaux se sont élevés entre des Etats Membres des Nations Unies et que des négociations sont en cours ou vont commencer à ce sujet. Bien que ma délégation s'abstienne de prendre une position ferme sur cette question à la présente session, nous tenons à déclarer que, jusqu'à ce que la question des différends territoriaux puisse être définitivement réglée, nous considérons que tous les peuples ont le droit absolu de choisir leur propre destin. Nous demandons que, dans toute négociation, on prenne en considération les intérêts des habitants.

199. La délégation du Libéria salue avec joie l'annonce faite par le gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, que la Guyane britannique accédera à l'indépendance sous le nom de Guyane le 26 mai 1966. Nous demandons au peuple de la Guyane tout entier de coopérer pour réaliser les conditions les plus favorables à son indépendance. Le gouvernement et le peuple du Libéria saisissent cette occasion pour adresser au peuple de la Guyane leurs meilleurs vœux de paix, d'harmonie, de progrès et de stabilité au moment de leur accession à l'indépendance.

200. Ma délégation est stupéfaite du refus de l'Australie de dire franchement si elle a l'intention d'accorder l'indépendance à la population de Nauru. En 1965, les dirigeants de Nauru ont déclaré à la mission itinérante et à la précédente session du Conseil de tutelle qu'ils désiraient accéder à l'indépendance en 1968. C'est une prétention légitime; c'est un droit. C'est pourquoi nous invitons le gouvernement de l'Australie à dire devant cette assemblée s'il reconnaît le droit du peuple de Nauru et, dans l'affirmative, à dire catégoriquement si ce peuple verra ses désirs se réaliser.

201. Pour conclure, je veux rappeler que les espoirs des peuples non encore libérés reposent sur l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Ce qu'ils demandent est simple: c'est d'être libres de s'occuper de leurs propres affaires; d'avoir droit à leur terre et à ses ressources naturelles; de gérer eux-mêmes leur commerce et leur industrie de sorte que le but des investissements et du travail soit le bien-être de tous et non l'enrichissement de quelques-uns. Le développement de l'Afrique, et d'ailleurs de toute autre région du monde, doit se faire au bénéfice de ses habitants et non au seul profit des capitalistes et des exploiters étrangers. En un mot, ils veulent vivre égaux aux autres hommes. Est-ce trop demander?

202. Enfin, je me permets de saisir cette occasion pour adresser les félicitations de ma délégation au Président et aux membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour les rapports contenus dans les documents A/5800/Rev.1 et A/6000/Rev.1. Connaissant les difficultés que le Comité spécial a rencontrées pour remplir efficacement son mandat conformément au paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la résolution 1956 (XVIII), nous le félicitons de tout cœur pour le travail qu'il a accompli.

203. Le PRESIDENT: Un certain nombre de représentants ayant demandé à exercer le droit de réponse, je vais leur donner successivement la parole.

204. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: En exerçant mon droit de réponse, je tiens à expliquer que si ma délégation n'a rien dit au cours de la discussion générale sur les sujets qui font l'objet du rapport du Comité spécial, c'est que nous en avons parlé longuement et fréquemment pendant les quatre années où nous avons été membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, et auparavant comme membre du Comité des Dix-Sept. Nous nous sommes efforcés alors de définir clairement nos vues sur les nombreux sujets traités dans ces rapports. En outre, nous avons donné le plus possible de renseignements, pour satisfaire entièrement le Comité, sur les régions dont celui-ci s'occupait et dont l'Australie est responsable.

205. Me référant au rapport dans son ensemble, je voudrais dire à cette séance plénière toute l'estime que nous éprouvons pour la dignité et la compétence du Président du Comité, M. Coulibaly, du Mali, et pour le travail considérable qu'a fourni notre collègue, M. Natwar Singh, de l'Inde, le très distingué Rapporteur du Comité. Je voudrais aussi rendre hommage à l'efficacité dont ont toujours fait preuve M. Godfrey Amachree, M. Chacko et leurs collègues du Secrétariat, qui ont mis en forme les résultats des travaux du Comité spécial et qui, à vrai dire, nous ont fourni les moyens de réaliser ces travaux.

206. Au sujet d'un autre aspect des travaux du Comité, je voudrais rendre hommage également à M. Adeel qui, en remplissant d'une façon objective ses fonctions d'observateur et de rapporteur aux élections des îles Cook, a, j'en suis persuadé, fait grand honneur non seulement à lui-même mais aussi à son pays et à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

207. En préparant cette réponse, je me suis souvenu que les représentants de 50 nations s'étaient réunis à San Francisco, d'avril à juin 1945, et ils s'étaient mis d'accord sur la Charte des Nations Unies, qui est entrée en vigueur la même année et qui vraiment depuis cette date nous a éclairés et a servi de base à tous nos travaux.

208. Les Membres originels des Nations Unies, ceux qui ont signé et ratifié la Charte, étaient au nombre de 51, et mon pays, l'Australie, était l'un d'eux. Ce qui unissait ces pays, c'était avant tout un fond commun de souffrances, et aussi d'espoir et de volonté engendrés par ces souffrances.

209. C'est en partant de cette base et parce qu'ils se rendaient compte que leur condition humaine leur était commune qu'ils ont voulu travailler ensemble, sans considération d'idéologie politique, de race, de culture ou de situation géographique, à atteindre des objectifs qui étaient les mêmes pour tous. Je crois juste de rappeler que, dans les séances où la Charte a été conçue, mon pays, l'Australie, n'a pas joué un rôle obscur.

210. A ce sujet, et pour répondre en partie à certaines observations faites au cours de ce débat par les représentants du Ghana et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, je rappelle une phrase prononcée par le représentant de Ceylan dans un savant discours prononcé il y a deux ans devant la Quatrième Commission:

"Je manquerais à mon devoir si je n'ajoutais pas maintenant que le monde ainsi que tous les peuples coloniaux et ceux qui ne le sont plus sont redevables à l'Australie de l'initiative qu'elle a prise à la Conférence de San Francisco et qui a fait d'elle l'un des principaux auteurs de la Déclaration contenue dans l'article 73, déclaration qui, si on se réfère au passé, a fourni le mécanisme grâce auquel il a été possible d'émanciper de nombreux peuples coloniaux au cours des 17 dernières années^{6/}."

211. Moi, qui suis australien, je n'oublierai pas cette phrase. Je connais l'histoire de la Conférence de San Francisco, et je sais que cet hommage est mérité. Je demande à cette assemblée plénière de bien noter ces mots du représentant de Ceylan:

"... qui, si on se réfère au passé, a fourni le mécanisme grâce auquel il a été possible d'émanciper de nombreux peuples coloniaux au cours des 17 dernières années."

212. C'est avec une conscience aiguë des valeurs qui se dégageaient de leurs épreuves communes et tragiques que les pays qui ont rédigé la Charte, au nombre de 51, ont abordé les problèmes coloniaux de l'époque. Les éléments fondamentaux du colonialisme, au sens où l'on emploie généralement ce mot, existaient encore dans un certain nombre d'endroits où l'on pouvait les déceler. C'étaient sans doute essentiellement l'occupation par la force des terres d'autres peuples, l'exploitation, le refus de la liberté d'expression, le préjugé racial et la discrimination raciale. Mais, maintenant, je me demande jusqu'à quel point on peut encore déceler ces éléments dans certaines situations que nous qualifions de coloniales, peut-être même dans beaucoup d'entre elles.

213. Il est possible — et je crois, pour ma part, qu'il en est ainsi — que très souvent, quand nous parlons maintenant de situations coloniales, il ne s'agit pas de celles que nous avions en l'esprit à San Francisco; je crois plutôt que les choses sont rendues confuses, sinon même déformées par l'emploi de mots qui menacent de devenir nos maîtres.

214. Je crois, par exemple, que nous comprenons fort mal, du moins certains d'entre nous, le sens très élevé de leur responsabilité personnelle qui anime

beaucoup de ceux auxquels a été confiée la tâche de guider, de faciliter de d'animer les phases essentielles du développement d'autres peuples, un sens des responsabilités puisé dans l'histoire, dans la connaissance des erreurs et des insuffisances du passé, dans les épreuves partagées en paix comme en guerre, dans le rejet des notions raciales, dans la lutte commune, dans nos efforts vers des buts communs ici à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, dans les influences spirituelles réciproques qui s'exercent ici et ailleurs grâce aux moyens de communication dont dispose le monde à l'heure actuelle, dans le simple fait que nous nous connaissons les uns les autres et que nous connaissons nos problèmes et, surtout, dans ce sens très développé de la responsabilité de l'homme à l'égard de son prochain, sans considération de race ni de religion.

215. En ce qui concerne mes concitoyens, je ne puis que repousser les observations faites ici par les représentants du Ghana et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie au sujet de l'administration australienne en Nouvelle-Guinée. Je crois que ces derniers sont si occupés — et c'est compréhensible — par les problèmes de l'Afrique qu'ils n'ont pu acquérir une connaissance et une compréhension approfondies de notre partie du monde, qui est très éloignée de l'Afrique. Mais je ne veux pas m'étendre sur ce sujet. Je n'ai pas non plus l'intention de réfuter en détail ce qu'ils ont dit.

216. Je rappelle, cependant, que le représentant du Ghana a dit hier [1389ème séance] qu'en Papouasie et en Nouvelle-Guinée, au lieu de rapprocher les hommes les uns des autres, le Gouvernement australien introduit dans leur esprit des distinctions raciales et ethniques pour retarder l'acceptation de leur demande d'indépendance. C'est juste le contraire. J'ai expliqué patiemment, à maintes reprises, dans beaucoup d'organes des Nations Unies, et les représentants des populations indigènes l'ont expliqué aussi eux-mêmes, que la Papouasie et la Nouvelle-Guinée ne sont pas de petits territoires, comme notre collègue l'a dit hier; ils comptent deux millions d'indigènes, deux millions d'indigènes intelligents, qui cherchent leur voie et formeront l'une des nations de l'avenir.

217. Il y a, pour commencer, 700 langues différentes pour ces 2 millions d'habitants. Jusqu'à l'arrivée des Australiens, les populations de Papouasie et de Mélanésie étaient coupées les unes des autres par cette multiplicité des langues. Il n'y avait pas de communications. Ils étaient, d'autre part, séparés les uns des autres par des barrières naturelles si formidables que, même à l'heure actuelle, le pays n'a pas livré tous ses secrets géographiques, topographiques et humains, bien que nous ayons utilisé très largement les moyens de communication et de découverte les plus modernes, comme les avions et les hélicoptères. Ils étaient séparés aussi par des coutumes différentes et comme enfermés dans un millier au moins de groupements de tribus différents, exclusifs et mutuellement hostiles. Pour la plupart, ils ignoraient même l'existence des autres groupements, sauf de ceux qui étaient leurs voisins. Quand les Australiens arrivèrent dans ce pays, il n'était pas unifié, il n'existait pas un peuple unique, il n'existait aucun gouvernement pouvant prétendre exercer son pouvoir sur plus d'une portion infime de ce grand pays. La première tâche de mon peuple, et je me permets de dire que je peux en parler avec quelque autorité, car cela a fait partie de ma tâche personnelle il y a plusieurs années, fut de créer une entité nationale pour qu'elle se gouverne elle-même. Il n'y avait pas d'entité nationale en Nouvelle-Guinée, et notre tâche était d'en créer une. Le Gouvernement australien s'est attaché à cette œuvre avec une vigueur opiniâtre, en répandant l'instruction, les soins médicaux et en développant la conscience d'une identité commune au pays tout entier. Je dirai à un moment plus approprié comment nous nous y prenons.

218. Le représentant du Ghana a dit aussi: "Les ressources de la Nouvelle-Guinée sont exploitées impunément par le Gouvernement australien." [1389ème séance, par. 175.] Il devrait cependant savoir, et je regrette fort qu'il ne soit pas ici pour l'apprendre, que jamais dans l'histoire de ce qu'on appelle la colonisation autant d'argent n'a été dépensé par une métropole dans un territoire administré par elle, sans songer à en tirer quelque profit. Quel est le chiffre annuel? La subvention australienne à la Papouasie et à la Nouvelle-Guinée — sans intérêt, non remboursable, un véritable don — est cette année de quelque 30 millions de livres australiennes, c'est-à-dire de 70 à 80 millions de dollars. Encore faut-il y ajouter quelques millions supplémentaires inscrits au budget du Gouvernement australien lui-même, pour des matières telles que le développement de l'aviation civile. Le chiffre total annuel, qui a augmenté tous les ans depuis la guerre, approche de 100 millions de dollars. Voilà le pays que notre collègue prétend que nous exploitons!

219. Le représentant du Ghana a parlé aussi de problèmes fonciers en Nouvelle-Guinée. Je doute que, dans l'histoire de ce qu'on appelle la colonisation, la terre ait été nulle part aussi jalousement réservée pour le bien-être et l'usage de la population indigène. De la superficie totale de ces vastes terres, moins de 3 p. 100 ont été achetés aux indigènes, dont une bonne partie à des fins de colonisation agraire selon les méthodes modernes, dont bénéficient les populations indigènes elles-mêmes.

220. Mais laissons de côté ces questions de détail. J'y reviendrai plus tard et j'en parlerai d'une façon plus détaillée. J'ai quelque chose à dire, particulièrement aux représentants de la Tanzanie et du Ghana. Je le dis en pensant à la situation qui existe dans d'autres régions où nous cherchons à réaliser ce que nous croyons être bon et nécessaire (en fait, ce que nous croyons être le meilleur), et surtout en pensant à ce qui est le fond du problème de la Rhodésie du Sud qui retient tant notre attention. Je demande à l'Assemblée de bien comparer ce que je vais dire à ce qui a été dit ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, au sujet de la Rhodésie du Sud et d'autres pays coloniaux du monde. Mais je voudrais d'abord faire une courte digression pour souligner qu'après la récente déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance de ce malheureux pays de Rhodésie du Sud le parlement australien a été l'un des premiers du monde à annoncer et à appliquer les mesures

nécessaires pour renforcer l'action entreprise par le Royaume-Uni et celles qui étaient réclamées par les Nations Unies elles-mêmes, à savoir le refus de reconnaître le gouvernement de Rhodésie du Sud, l'interdiction du commerce avec ce pays et l'application de mesures d'ordre monétaire. Tout ceci a été fait au parlement australien dans les quelques jours qui ont suivi la déclaration d'indépendance. Mais, pour en revenir à la comparaison que je veux faire avec la question essentielle qui se pose en Rhodésie du Sud et qui est celle du droit de vote et de la représentation de la majorité, voici ce que j'ai à dire. Il y a en Nouvelle-Guinée 2 millions d'indigènes et quelque 27 000 Australiens. Nous appliquons dans ce pays le suffrage universel. Le système électoral garantit une voix à chaque homme et à chaque femme, sur la base d'une liste électorale unique, sans distinction de race, de religion ou de couleur. Ce système a donné naissance à un parlement où la majorité est indigène.

221. Bref, la solution que nous avons recherchée et que nous recherchons encore à tous les problèmes en Rhodésie du Sud, qui vaut pour d'autres régions d'Afrique et pour d'autres parties du monde, est un fait accompli en Nouvelle-Guinée: le suffrage universel, une liste électorale unique et une majorité indigène élue.

222. Parlons aussi de toute la gamme des libertés dont mon pays, l'autorité administrante, a hérité: libération du besoin, libération de la peur et toutes autres libertés que l'humanité s'efforce de faire prévaloir. Elles existent en Papouasie et en Nouvelle-Guinée. Il n'y a pas de prisonniers politiques dans ces pays, ni en Australie même. Dans toute l'Australie métropolitaine et dans tous les territoires australiens, il n'y a pas un seul prisonnier politique. La liberté d'association, la liberté de réunion, la liberté de la presse et la liberté d'expression sont assurées. La discrimination raciale est bannie. Les partis politiques, les syndicats et toutes autres organisations indigènes échappent à tout contrôle et sont même encouragés. Dans notre pays, nous considérons ces choses comme normales. Or, la plupart des problèmes qui se posent à l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans le domaine colonial ne sont des problèmes que parce que ces libertés y sont refusées. Alors que nous avons à nous préoccuper de tant de régions où il existe des conflits, graves ou bénins, je fais remarquer à l'Assemblée que la paix règne dans les territoires australiens. Elle y règne partout. Il n'y a pas de conflit armé. Cette atmosphère de paix permet le progrès. Personne n'y meurt pour obtenir un droit qui lui a été refusé.

223. En conclusion, je dis très respectueusement à mes collègues de la Tanzanie et du Ghana, que ces libertés, le suffrage universel, la liste électorale unique, un parlement à majorité indigène montrent comment nous comprenons nos responsabilités en Nouvelle-Guinée. Nous en avons là-bas. Nous voulons nous en acquitter, nous en acquitter à la lettre. De même, nous avons des droits ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, et ailleurs. Nous les protégerons.

224. M. DE MIRANDA (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: On a beaucoup parlé de mon pays au cours de ces débats. Bien que ma délégation ait écouté atten-tivement tous les orateurs et qu'elle ait attendu jusqu'à maintenant pour exercer son droit de réponse, nous n'avons rien découvert de nouveau dans ce qui a été dit. Tout ce que nous avons entendu ne constitue qu'une répétition de ce que nous entendons depuis un certain temps déjà.

225. Comme chacun sait, notre position a été définie très clairement à de nombreuses occasions, tant au point de vue juridique qu'au point de vue politique, dans tous les organes compétents des Nations Unies. Il ne semble pas nécessaire de la préciser à nouveau. C'est pourquoi je ne ferai pas perdre de temps à l'Assemblée en répétant ce que nous avons déjà dit.

226. Je veux cependant répondre à ceux qui nous critiquent que les opinions préconçues, les allégations sans fondement, l'altération des faits, les demi-vérités et les mensonges, même si on les répète souvent, n'arrivent pas à faire une vérité. En fait, ces répétitions ne servent qu'à souligner la nature irréaliste et artificielle des débats en ce qui concerne mon pays. Mais ce n'est point là l'objet de mon intervention. Si ma délégation vient maintenant à cette tribune, c'est seulement pour rectifier certaines affirmations précises faites au cours de ces débats. Je le ferai brièvement, sans aucun esprit de polémique.

227. A la 1389^{ème} séance plénière, la délégation de la Guinée, en portant contre nous certaines accusations dans son style habituel, a prétendu que l'espace aérien de son pays était constamment violé par des avions portugais. Cette allégation est aussi tendancieuse que sans fondement. Ma délégation la rejette et y voit une tentative faite pour justifier certaines activités illicites qui s'exercent dans la République de Guinée et dont nous sommes les victimes.

228. De même, à la 1387^{ème} séance, la délégation sénégalaise a parlé de ses plaintes au Conseil de sécurité contre le Portugal en ces termes:

"Lorsque le Sénégal s'est plaint au Conseil de sécurité en février 1965, le Portugal n'a pas contesté les faits relatifs aux incidents allégués, mais il a cherché à justifier les violations perpétrées." [1387^{ème} séance, par. 22.]

Cette déclaration n'est pas conforme à la réponse portugaise au Sénégal, comme on peut le constater dans les documents correspondants du Conseil de sécurité. Dans une autre phrase, la délégation du Sénégal dit que le Portugal "s'est contenté de tout réfuter" [ibid.].

229. Ma délégation n'arrive pas à comprendre ce que veut dire cette phrase puisque la délégation sénégalaise admet elle-même: 1) que nous avons exprimé le désir de maintenir des relations amicales avec le Sénégal; 2) que nous avons proposé une discussion avec participation du Sénégal. Ma délégation estime que ces deux faits démontrent par eux-mêmes que le Portugal ne s'est pas "contenté de tout réfuter". En fait, nous avons proposé qu'une enquête tripartite soit faite sur les allégations du Sénégal, mais celui-ci ne voulait pas d'une enquête impartiale; tout ce qu'il voulait, c'était une résolution, basée, bien entendu, sur ses propres allégations.

230. En raison de ce qui précède, je crois que je suis en droit de dire, en reprenant les propres termes de la délégation du Sénégal:

"Je laisse l'Assemblée juge de tant d'ambiguïté, de tant de cynisme, d'un tel manque de bon sens."
[Ibid.]

231. La délégation du Sénégal fait maintenant état de nouveaux incidents et elle cherche à nous en attribuer la responsabilité. Nous remarquons, et nous voudrions que l'Assemblée remarque, que le Sénégal fait preuve de beaucoup d'ardeur pour répandre ses allégations, tandis qu'il se dérobe à nos propositions de les faire examiner par une commission d'enquête impartiale. Nous notons aussi que le Sénégal déclare que "la question est ailleurs" [ibid., par. 23]. C'est tout à fait significatif, et ma délégation est entièrement de cet avis. Nous savons parfaitement que la question n'est pas dans ces prétendus incidents, mais dans les objectifs plus vastes du Sénégal. Si celui-ci invoque des incidents de frontière, c'est uniquement pour tenter de créer un climat favorable à la poursuite de ces objectifs.

232. Mais le Sénégal ne peut pas prétendre cacher la réalité. Le monde entier sait qu'il héberge, aide et encourage des bandes armées destinées à troubler l'ordre dans notre territoire. Je ne serais pas étonné que sa délégation revienne à cette tribune pour dire qu'elle continuera à donner son appui à ces bandes armées. On ne peut nier que le territoire portugais soit constamment violé par des perturbateurs armés venant du Sénégal. Alors que nous sommes toujours disposés à faire enquêter sur les allégations des Sénégalais, bien que nous les considérons comme non fondées, ceux-ci préfèrent les annoncer à cor et à cri. Alors que nous respectons soigneusement le territoire et l'espace aérien du Sénégal, nous devons signaler que ce pays n'agit pas de même pour notre territoire. Nous ne pouvons en conclure qu'une chose, c'est que les accusations que le Sénégal porte contre nous ne sont que des tentatives, d'ailleurs bien faibles, pour camoufler ses propres activités illicites et échapper aux responsabilités qu'il encourt.

233. M. EASTMAN (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je suis au regret de devoir faire appel à votre indulgence, Monsieur le Président, si je prolonge un peu cette séance plénière.

234. Le représentant de l'Australie, mon ami, je puis le dire, a essayé de convaincre l'Assemblée que les observations faites par les représentants de la Tanzanie et du Ghana étaient sans fondement. Je n'ai pas le temps d'exposer la vérité en détail, mais je peux parler brièvement de ce qu'il a dit.

235. Il doit y avoir longtemps que le représentant de l'Australie n'est allé en Nouvelle-Guinée. Moi, qui en reviens depuis peu, je peux lui dire que la discrimination raciale est pratiquée ouvertement en Nouvelle-Guinée, dans les écoles, le logement, les salaires, les services médicaux, pour ne citer que ces quelques exemples.

236. Il nous a dit aussi qu'il s'élevait contre l'affirmation que l'Australie exploitait impunément ce pays. Je me demande si l'on sait en Australie que, à Boggabilla, où l'on extrait l'or par millions, quand les indigènes revendiquent leur part, leurs redevances, leurs droits de propriétaires, on leur dit que tout ce qui se trouve au-dessus du sol appartient au peuple de la Nouvelle-Guinée, mais que tout ce qui est en dessous est la propriété de l'Australie ou, comme on dit d'habitude, de la Couronne. Il nous a parlé des millions que le Gouvernement australien dépense en Nouvelle-Guinée au bénéfice de la population. Il ne nous a rien dit du Rio Tinto ni de Burns Philp, une société de Nouvelle-Guinée (pour ne citer que quelques-uns des monopoles), ni des nombreux millions que ces monopoles emportent chaque jour du pays.

237. Le représentant de l'Australie a parlé aussi de la terre. Je dois lui dire que ce dont on se plaint le plus fréquemment en Nouvelle-Guinée, c'est de ce que les meilleures terres sont enlevées aux indigènes ou aliénées d'une façon ou d'une autre (je ne sais comment) et qu'elles appartiennent maintenant à des Australiens et à des Néo-Zélandais. Je voudrais que le représentant australien réfute le fait que, depuis plusieurs années, le peuple de Nauru demande à entrer en possession de son île, mais qu'on le lui refuse. On lui a dit à plusieurs reprises qu'il n'était pas propriétaire de l'île et que c'était l'Australie qui l'était. On lui a dit qu'il ne possédait que ce qui était à la surface de l'île. C'est à cela que pensaient mes amis, les représentants du Ghana et de la Tanzanie, quand ils ont dit qu'ils étaient mécontents de l'administration australienne en Nouvelle-Guinée, et, à beaucoup d'égards, je suis tout à fait d'accord avec eux.

238. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je crois qu'il arrive rarement à l'Organisation des Nations Unies que le représentant d'un pays s'estime obligé d'exercer le droit de réponse pour le compte d'autres pays. Quand j'ai exercé le mien il y a un moment, c'était au sujet d'observations faites par les représentants de la Tanzanie et du Ghana au cours de ces débats. Mon collègue et ami, M. Eastman, du Libéria, s'est chargé de les défendre.

239. Le représentant du Libéria a parlé de discrimination raciale en Nouvelle-Guinée et de certaines questions relatives à Nauru. Je répondrai à ce qu'il a dit au cours de la discussion en séance plénière du rapport du Conseil de tutelle et devant la Quatrième Commission, quand j'exposerai devant l'ensemble des Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies — ce qui n'a pas encore été fait — tous les détails des derniers événements survenus en Nouvelle-Guinée et à Nauru.

240. M. Eastman a dit que la discrimination raciale était ouvertement pratiquée en Nouvelle-Guinée. M. Eastman, je l'admets, est allé là-bas récemment comme notre invité d'honneur et nous lui avons donné toutes les facilités possibles. Il est parfaitement exact qu'on peut trouver des preuves de discrimination raciale et de toute espèce de discrimination dans tous les pays du monde, si l'on en cherche. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est que la discrimination raciale était proscrite en Nouvelle-Guinée. Elle l'est effectivement. Ce que j'ai dit, et ce que j'ai voulu dire, c'est qu'en Nouvelle-Guinée tous les hommes sont libres devant la loi, sans considération de race, de religion ou de couleur. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est qu'en Nouvelle-Guinée tous les hommes et toutes les femmes, sans considération de race, de religion ou de couleur, ont le droit de vote et élisent les membres du parlement. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est que tous les hommes et toutes les femmes de Nouvelle-Guinée, sans considération de race, de religion ou de couleur, sont libres d'élever la voix contre tout abus, où qu'ils le découvrent, sans entrave, sans que cela soit contraire à la loi ou les expose à des persécutions quelconques.

241. Quant au problème de Nauru, il est compliqué. Nauru est une île du genre de celles dont beaucoup de représentants ont parlé en séance plénière et à la Quatrième Commission. Je n'ai pas l'intention de traiter maintenant ce sujet. Je le ferai un peu plus tard. Nauru est une île lointaine du Pacifique. Je rappelle à mon ami que, bien que je travaille à l'Organisation des Nations Unies depuis deux ans et demi et que je ne sois pas retourné dans ces territoires pendant cette période, je travaille dans ces territoires, et pour ces territoires, depuis 33 ans et que j'y retournerai très prochainement. Je les connais mieux que mon collègue du Libéria ne peut les connaître après une seule visite au cours de laquelle il était l'invité d'honneur de mon gouvernement.

242. Ce que je veux dire, c'est que Nauru est une île lointaine du Pacifique, si lointaine que, lors de ma dernière visite il y a trois ans, juste avant que je vienne ici, j'ai navigué pendant huit jours en partant de Nouvelle-Zélande, sans voir aucune terre, avant d'arriver à cette île. Elle n'a qu'une vingtaine de kilomètres de pourtour. La terre la plus proche est une île encore plus petite, située à quelque 280 kilomètres de là. Nauru a une seule ressource économique, le phosphate. Il n'en a pas d'autre. Les habitants sont au nombre de 2 600 et ils ont un niveau de vie plus élevé que celui de n'importe quel autre peuple du Pacifique; plus élevé je pense que celui de beaucoup de peuples représentés ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Grâce aux redevances payées pour le phosphate, Nauru a un revenu, à répartir entre les 2 600 habitants, qui s'élève à l'heure actuelle à environ un million et demi de livres sterling par an et qui est en augmentation. Nauru vient de terminer avec le Gouvernement australien une série de discussions qui ont eu pour résultat d'ouvrir une nouvelle étape de son avenir politique, quel qu'il puisse être. Il se pose à Nauru tous les problèmes que l'indépendance soulève pour de petites îles.

243. Cela dit, je me réserve le droit de répondre à mon ami et collègue quand la Quatrième Commission et l'Assemblée en séance plénière discuteront le rapport du Conseil de tutelle et le rapport de la mission itinérante des Nations Unies qui s'est rendue à Nauru, en Papouasie et en Nouvelle-Guinée au cours des derniers mois. Cette mission a eu toute l'aide que nous pouvions lui donner et, je l'ai dit, a été l'invitée d'honneur de mon gouvernement.

La séance est levée à 18 h 50.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapports du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

1. Le PRESIDENT: Nous poursuivons l'examen du point 23 de l'ordre du jour. Je signale à l'Assemblée que la Nigéria s'est jointe aux auteurs du projet de résolution commun [A/L.476/Rev.1].

2. Le document A/L.478 contient une motion présentée par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique. C'est elle que je soumets d'abord à l'Assemblée. Elle est ainsi conçue:

"L'Assemblée générale estime que le projet de résolution distribué sous la cote A/L.476/Rev.1 contient des recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales; le paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte est en conséquence applicable."

3. Miss BROOKS (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais seulement demander une précision: à la fin de la séance de vendredi [1400^{ème} séance], je crois que nous avons été saisis d'une motion du représentant du Mali relative à la procédure à adopter pour le vote sur ce projet de résolution. J'aimerais savoir où en est la situation en ce qui concerne la motion du représentant du Mali.

4. M. COULIBALY (Mali): On se rappellera qu'au cours de notre réunion de vendredi après-midi [1400^{ème} séance], en présentant le projet de résolution des 19 puissances [A/L.476 et Add.1], j'ai conclu par une motion de procédure relative au vote, par laquelle j'ai proposé que le projet de résolution fasse l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple. J'ai déposé cette motion en présentant le projet de résolution parce que nous avons assisté, la semaine dernière, à des manœuvres tendant à interpréter de façon abusive la Charte des Nations Unies et le règlement intérieur de l'Assemblée générale.

5. Si le besoin s'en fait sentir, j'exprimerai le point de vue de ma délégation sur la motion du représentant des Etats-Unis d'Amérique [A/L.478]. J'ai d'ailleurs été très surpris de constater que cette motion figure à l'ordre du jour de la séance comme un point distinct. Il est vrai que, dans cette maison, on acquiert chaque jour de l'expérience; mais je dois avouer que c'est la première fois que je vois une motion figurer à l'ordre du jour d'une séance comme un point spécial. Je pensais, en effet, que la motion des Etats-Unis était liée à la question plus générale que nous discutons actuellement. Mais, à ce stade — et sans préjuger le point de vue de ma délégation sur le fond de la motion du représentant des Etats-Unis — je voudrais rappeler que ma motion a été enregistrée avant la sienne. Par voie de conséquence, et conformément au règlement intérieur de l'Assemblée générale, ma motion a la priorité, c'est-à-dire que les membres de l'Assemblée doivent se prononcer par priorité sur ma motion, qui a été déposée avant celle du représentant des Etats-Unis.

6. Avant de quitter la tribune, je voudrais réfuter certains arguments avancés par le représentant des Etats-Unis lorsqu'il a présenté sa motion [1400^{ème} séance]. Le représentant des Etats-Unis a dit que certains paragraphes de notre projet de résolution constituaient des recommandations touchant la paix et la sécurité internationales. Or, nulle part dans notre projet, je ne vois de recommandations, au sens généralement admis par la Charte, qui soient adressées au Conseil de sécurité. Je ne pense pas que le fait d'attirer l'attention du Conseil de sécurité puisse constituer une recommandation relative au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales au sens de l'Article 18 de la Charte. Le projet de résolution ne recommande rien au Conseil de sécurité, mais se borne à attirer l'attention du Conseil sur une situation. Les auteurs du projet de résolution sont très conscients du fait que c'est au Conseil de sécurité qu'il appartient de prendre des mesures en ce qui concerne le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Ils se sont donc abstenus de faire des recommandations.

7. Par conséquent, en demandant que le projet de résolution soit adopté à la majorité des deux tiers, on a voulu exploiter de façon abusive le règlement intérieur de l'Assemblée générale. D'ailleurs, puisque les orateurs qui ont proposé cela se sont réclamés du droit, je ne pense pas qu'il soit juste de prendre, dans un texte, un paragraphe donné, de le sortir de son contexte et de le présenter dans un autre contexte afin de pouvoir lui donner une signification juridique autre que celle qu'il a dans le contexte où il a été présenté.

8. Le projet de résolution que nous avons soumis traite du problème de la décolonisation, c'est-à-dire du droit des peuples à l'autodétermination, et les différentes parties de ce projet doivent être comprises et acceptées dans ce contexte.

9. Revenant sur la question de procédure, je rappelle que ma motion a été déposée avant celle de la délégation des Etats-Unis et que, à ce titre, elle a la priorité. Lorsque j'ai présenté le projet de résolution, j'ai terminé ainsi:

"En ce qui concerne la procédure de vote, je propose, au nom des auteurs, que le projet de résolution des 19 puissances fasse l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple, comme ce fut le cas ce matin pour le projet de résolution sur l'Oman [A/6168, par. 13]."
[1400ème séance, par. 114.]

10. Il s'agit donc bien d'une motion de procédure, comme je viens de le dire, et cette motion a été déposée avant celle du représentant des Etats-Unis. Je pense donc que, conformément à la pratique et au règlement intérieur, l'Assemblée générale devra d'abord se prononcer sur ma motion.

11. M. GOLDBERG (Etats-Unis) [traduit de l'anglais]: Vendredi dernier [1400ème séance], lorsque j'ai présenté la motion A/L.478 dont vient de parler le représentant du Mali, j'ai accepté volontiers, à la demande des représentants du Ghana et du Mali, d'en différer jusqu'à aujourd'hui l'examen afin que l'Assemblée puisse étudier cette importante question quand toutes les délégations seraient présentes et pourraient participer au vote. Si j'avais voulu tirer avantage d'une modalité de procédure, j'aurais pu insister pour que la motion fût mise aux voix hier. Je ne l'ai pas fait parce que j'estime qu'il importe au plus haut point que tous les membres de l'Assemblée puissent participer à l'examen de ce que je considère comme une question fondamentale touchant l'intégrité de la Charte que nous sommes tous tenus de respecter.

12. Le représentant du Mali soulève maintenant une question de procédure, alléguant que sa motion aurait priorité sur la mienne. A mon avis, cecin'a pas d'importance. La question essentielle dont l'Assemblée est saisie, que ce soit aux termes du projet de résolution présenté par le représentant du Mali (A/L.476/Rev.1) ou aux termes de ma motion, demeure en substance la même. Le représentant du Mali demande formellement, au nom des auteurs du projet de résolution, que celui-ci soit adopté à la majorité simple.

13. Il ressort donc nécessairement de cette motion que le projet de résolution ne se rapporte pas à des questions touchant la paix et la sécurité internationales et, par conséquent, à des questions importantes au sens du paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte. Mais, de quelque façon qu'on la pose, que l'on adopte les termes employés par le représentant du Mali ou les miens, la question demeure la même. Si les membres de l'Assemblée votent pour la motion soumise par le représentant du Mali, c'est qu'ils considèrent que la question posée dans le projet de résolution n'est pas une question importante au sens du paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte. La question que je soulève est la même et par conséquent je dirai très franchement et très simplement que je ne veux pas faire perdre de temps à l'Assemblée en essayant de prouver par des arguties que telle ou telle motion a la priorité sur l'autre.

14. Je consens volontiers à ce que l'on mette d'abord aux voix le projet de résolution du Mali. La question que je soulève est la même. J'ai présenté ma motion pour que tous les membres de l'Assemblée comprennent la signification et les conséquences de la décision que prendra l'Assemblée et je ne puis que répéter ce que j'ai dit vendredi dernier, à savoir que ce n'est pas, pour moi ou pour ma délégation, la substance de la résolution qui est en cause. On peut voter sur la substance de la résolution. Elle sera adoptée ou non, selon ce que l'Assemblée en pensera. La question dont nous sommes saisis maintenant est beaucoup plus importante, elle est fondamentale, il s'agit de savoir si les membres de l'Assemblée doivent respecter la Charte, même si cela, parfois, les gêne.

15. Je voudrais rappeler aux membres de l'Assemblée que la Charte est une obligation conventionnelle solennellement acceptée par les gouvernements des Etats Membres. Je voudrais rappeler aux membres de l'Assemblée qu'on ne peut modifier la Charte qu'en se conformant à une procédure également acceptée par tous les Etats Membres aux termes de l'Article 108 de ladite Charte. L'Article 108 stipule:

"Les amendements à la présente Charte entreront en vigueur pour tous les Membres des Nations Unies quand ils auront été adoptés à la majorité des deux tiers des membres de l'Assemblée générale et ratifiés, conformément à leurs règles constitutionnelles respectives, par les deux tiers des Membres de l'Organisation, y compris tous les membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité."

16. Permettez-moi de dire très simplement qu'il suffit de lire le projet de résolution pour constater qu'il se rapporte à des questions touchant la paix et la sécurité internationales. A vrai dire, je suis incapable de comprendre le raisonnement du représentant du Mali. Contrairement à ce qu'il prétend, le neuvième considérant fait expressément mention de la paix et de la sécurité internationales qui, dit-il, sont menacées par la persistance du régime colonial et la pratique de l'apartheid. On retrouve le même langage au chapitre VII de la Charte sur lequel se fonde l'action obligatoire du Conseil de sécurité pour le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales.

17. Je l'ai dit vendredi [1400ème séance] et je le répète aujourd'hui, nous ne pouvons pas tout avoir. Nous ne pouvons pas d'une part demander au Conseil de sécurité d'agir parce que la paix et la sécurité internationales sont menacées et d'autre part prétendre que l'Article 18 de la Charte ne s'applique pas à l'examen de la question par l'Assemblée générale.

18. Le paragraphe 12 du dispositif du projet de résolution qui demande le démantèlement des bases militaires et invite les Etats à s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles dans les territoires coloniaux est incontestablement une recommandation concernant le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Les bases militaires, nous le savons tous, car c'est une simple question de bon sens, sont étroitement liées au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité et c'est si vrai que le 16 décembre [1398ème séance] l'Assemblée a reconnu par 56 voix contre 30 que des paragraphes analogues au paragraphe en question se rapportaient à des questions importantes et qu'ils ne pouvaient être adoptés qu'à la majorité des deux tiers des membres présents et représentés.

19. Le paragraphe 13 du dispositif du projet de résolution [A/L.476/Rev.1]:

"Demande au Comité spécial de porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité les faits nouveaux ... qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales, et de formuler des suggestions dont le Conseil pourrait s'inspirer en étudiant les mesures qu'il convient de prendre conformément à la Charte".

20. Un autre paragraphe du projet de résolution, le paragraphe 14 du dispositif:

"Prie le Secrétaire général de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires ... afin que l'opinion mondiale puisse être suffisamment informée de la grave menace à la paix que constituent le colonialisme et l'apartheid ...".

21. En bref, un paragraphe du préambule et trois paragraphes du dispositif, les plus importants peut-être, de ce projet de résolution, établissent un lien direct entre la résolution et le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité et contiennent des recommandations à ce sujet. La Charte est très claire à cet égard. Le paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 dispose que:

"Les décisions de l'Assemblée générale sur les questions importantes sont prises à la majorité des deux tiers des membres présents et votants. Sont considérées comme questions importantes: les recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales ...".

22. Il mentionne ensuite d'autres questions et laisse à l'Assemblée le soin de décider celles qui devront être comprises dans la catégorie des questions importantes au sens du paragraphe 3 de l'Article 18.

23. Ma conviction est très ferme sur ce point et je tiens à la souligner. Il s'agit là d'une question de procédure, mais un organe parlementaire, comme un Etat, ne peut vivre qu'en respectant ses procédures. Les procédures sont l'âme de nos libertés à tous. Si nous ne respectons pas les règles qui nous protègent tous — car elles peuvent jouer en faveur des uns aujourd'hui et des autres demain — nous mettrons en danger les droits de tous les Etats membres. La longue, la très longue histoire de l'humanité le révèle. En fait, de nombreux spécialistes du droit constitutionnel ont dit — et je l'ai fait valoir longtemps avant de siéger à l'Assemblée, dans des décisions que j'ai rédigées pour notre Cour Suprême — que les procédures sont la base sur laquelle se fondent la liberté individuelle et le droit de la minorité. C'est la question que nous devons trancher ici aujourd'hui. Comme je l'ai dit, elle va au-delà de la question de l'adoption du projet de résolution car elle met en cause l'intégrité de l'Assemblée. L'Assemblée respecte-t-elle la Charte? Si l'Assemblée ne la respecte pas, quelle garantie peut-elle offrir aux nations qui y sont représentées? L'Assemblée n'a pas le droit de modifier la Charte. L'Assemblée est tenue, comme tout organe des Nations Unies, d'obéir à la Charte et de respecter ses dispositions. L'une des dispositions de la Charte, que nous avons tous acceptée, est que les décisions sur les questions importantes touchant la paix et la sécurité internationales doivent être prises non pas à la majorité simple mais à la majorité des deux tiers. Ceci a été inscrit dans la Charte parce que l'on a reconnu le rapport étroit qui existait entre une recommandation en la matière et les mesures vraisemblablement très énergiques que le Conseil de sécurité serait appelé à prendre en vertu des Chapitres VII et VIII de la Charte.

24. Je suis donc tout à fait disposé à ne pas insister pour que l'on mette ma motion aux voix. Tel n'était pas mon propos quand je l'ai présentée. Mon intention était alors de faire ressortir avec la plus grande netteté possible que la décision sur le projet de résolution devrait être prise à la majorité des deux tiers. Si l'Assemblée adoptait la motion présentée par le représentant du Mali, demandant que la décision sur le projet de résolution soit prise à la majorité simple, elle reconnaîtrait, ce faisant, que la question n'est pas une question importante touchant la paix et la sécurité. J'estime, pour ma part, que c'est une question importante touchant la paix et la sécurité parce que le projet de résolution le dit et en raison de la nature même du problème qu'il évoque.

25. Je voudrais rappeler une fois de plus à l'Assemblée que si elle vote pour la motion présentée par le représentant du Mali, elle exprimera ainsi l'avis que cette question n'est pas une question importante au sens de l'Article 18 de la Charte. Je suis disposé à ne pas insister pour que ma motion soit mise aux voix et à accepter que l'on vote sur la motion présentée par le représentant du Mali, en sachant, dans ce cas, qu'un vote affirmatif signifiera que la question considérée n'est pas une question importante au sens de l'Article 18 de la Charte.

26. M. MOROZOV (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: En écoutant le représentant des Etats-Unis, nous nous sommes frotté les yeux à différentes reprises, doutant que, du haut de cette tribune, il puisse défendre avec une telle chaleur l'intangibilité des dispositions de la Charte et nous demandant s'il s'agissait bien du représentant de la délégation qui prend fait et cause bien souvent pour des décisions visant à tourner la Charte et notamment à passer outre à la compétence du Conseil de sécurité.

27. Nous n'en croyions pas nos yeux de voir le représentant d'un Etat dont le gouvernement se rend coupable de violations invraisemblables dans de nombreuses régions du monde, coupable d'actes d'agression et d'intervention dans les affaires intérieures des autres peuples adopter soudain une position aussi orthodoxe et chercher à nous convaincre que ce ne sont pas les Etats-Unis d'Amérique mais les représentants des pays d'Afrique et d'Asie qui sapent la Charte des Nations Unies. Voilà donc que le représentant des Etats-Unis monte à cette tribune pour se faire le champion, le défenseur du strict respect de la Charte des Nations Unies!

28. Allons donc! L'orateur croyait-il lui-même sincèrement ce qu'il nous affirmait?

29. Telle a été notre première réaction devant le discours que vient de nous tenir le représentant des Etats-Unis.

30. Avant de passer à l'analyse juridique du document présenté par les Etats-Unis, j'ajouterai que, au cours des vingt années d'existence des Nations Unies, la délégation soviétique s'est toujours prononcée, tant au sein de l'Organisation qu'au dehors, pour le respect le plus strict de l'esprit et de la lettre de la Charte, je dis bien "de l'esprit et de la lettre de la Charte". Il nous faut maintenant non nous préoccuper des déclarations pathétiques que l'on vient nous faire pour nous convaincre que la procédure proposée par le représentant du Mali [A/L.476/Rev.1] porte atteinte aux fondements mêmes de notre organisation mais nous demander plus modestement, mais en termes concrets, si la proposition du représentant du Mali, qui a été faite avant que la délégation des Etats-Unis ne présente officiellement sa motion [A/L.478], s'écarte en quoi que ce soit de la Charte, notamment des procédures qui y sont prévues.

31. Si nous en concluons que cette proposition est contraire aux dispositions de la Charte, alors, quelles que soient nos sympathies et nos antipathies politiques, nous devons adopter une attitude objective fondée sur la seule interprétation correcte de la Charte. Aussi nous faut-il examiner en détail les arguments qui viennent d'être présentés.

32. Pour commencer, regardons le titre du projet de résolution qui est soumis à notre examen. Il est intitulé "Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux".

33. Nous avons déjà eu l'honneur, à l'une des dernières séances de l'Assemblée générale, de prouver, du haut de cette tribune, que l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux est une des obligations les plus importantes que la Charte impose à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

34. Même si cette Déclaration, adoptée voici cinq ans, n'existait pas, l'élimination du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations n'en serait pas moins une des principales obligations de notre organisation, inscrite dans sa Charte.

35. Outre les dispositions de la Charte sur lesquelles repose cette obligation de l'Organisation — je parle de l'élimination du colonialisme et de ses séquelles — nous disposons d'un document historique qui a été adopté par l'Assemblée générale il y a cinq ans. Il s'agit de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Cette Déclaration — contre laquelle, soit dit en passant, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique n'ont pas voté — correspond pleinement aux dispositions de la Charte.

36. Ainsi, je répète, outre les importantes dispositions de la Charte, nous avons une Déclaration qui a été adoptée en conformité de la Charte à la majorité des deux tiers et de l'application de laquelle nous nous occupons maintenant. Je tiens à préciser à ce propos que, bien que chaque question qui a trait à l'application de la Déclaration soit au sens le plus large du terme — du point de vue de la Charte, du point de vue juridique, du point de vue du règlement intérieur — une question importante, toutes les résolutions qui peuvent être adoptées sur la question de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux — c'est-à-dire sur un document qui a été adopté à la majorité de deux tiers — peuvent l'être à la majorité simple. Que ceux auxquels le contenu de ce document n'a pas l'heur de plaire, s'ils ne cherchent pas sciemment à nous induire en erreur et à nous jeter dans l'embarras, votent pour ou contre ce document, ou s'abstiennent. Nous n'acceptons de personne des conseils sur la façon dont nous devons examiner certaines questions et les voter, et nous n'avons nulle intention d'en donner aux autres. Si nous avons évoqué cette question, c'est uniquement parce que nous voulons montrer ici que, sous couleur de faire des propositions de procédure, sous couleur de se référer au règlement intérieur et à la Charte, on cherche à empêcher, d'une façon ou de l'autre, l'Assemblée générale à adopter la recommandation parfaitement fondée et justifiée qui a été adoptée par la Quatrième Commission.

37. Passons maintenant en revue les différentes dispositions auxquelles s'est référé le représentant des Etats-Unis. Il a évoqué l'alinéa du préambule selon lequel "l'Assemblée générale est pleinement consciente du fait que la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid, ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale, constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité". C'est là une constatation qui est entièrement fondée sur les dispositions de la Déclaration et sur celles de la Charte. On ne peut considérer cet alinéa comme une recommandation que l'Assemblée formulerait si elle examinait cette question dans l'exécution des obligations que lui impose la Charte en ce qui concerne le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales.

38. On ne saurait considérer cet alinéa sous cet angle; on ne peut en effet jouer sur les mots "menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales" qui figurent effectivement dans cet alinéa du préambule pour l'envisager du point de vue de la procédure, d'un point de vue strictement juridique et le placer dans une fausse perspective. Il s'agit là d'une tentative vouée à l'échec.

39. Au paragraphe 12 du dispositif les puissances coloniales sont priées de démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles. Mais si les Etats-Unis et d'autres puissances estiment que la présence de leurs bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux a pour but le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, comme on pourrait le croire à entendre le représentant des Etats-Unis, ce n'est pas là une raison pour que nous souscrivions à cette thèse. Ce n'est pas là une raison non plus pour que nous considérions le paragraphe 12 comme entrant dans la catégorie des questions qui exigent une majorité des deux tiers du moins dans le contexte actuel, c'est-à-dire dans le cadre de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. En effet, de quelle indépen-dance peut-il s'agir pour les pays et les peuples coloniaux sur les territoires desquels continueront de stationner des forces armées étrangères, ne manquera-t-on pas de se demander? De quelle indépendance peut-il être question? Nous comprenons donc parfaitement cette exigence des pays d'Asie et d'Afrique, soutenus par certains pays d'Amérique latine, qui figure au paragraphe 12 du projet de résolution. Elle relève pleinement de la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

40. Le paragraphe 13 du dispositif du projet de résolution n'a pas non plus l'heur de plaire au représentant des Etats-Unis qui l'a cité pour justifier la procédure qu'il préconise. De quoi est-il question au paragraphe 13? Il y est demandé en tout et pour tout au Comité spécial de porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité les faits nouveaux survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires qu'il examine, qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales; j'attire votre attention sur les mots: "qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales". Qu'y est-il demandé au Comité spécial, disais-je? D'examiner ces questions à la place du Conseil de sécurité peut-être? De formuler à leur sujet des recommandations à la place du Conseil de sécurité? De quoi s'agit-il au fait?

41. Je lis la suite de ce paragraphe: "et de formuler des suggestions dont le Conseil pourrait s'inspirer en étudiant les mesures qu'il convient de prendre conformément à la Charte".

42. On vient ensuite nous dire, à cette tribune, en partant d'une interprétation complètement fausse du règlement intérieur et de la Charte, que nous n'avons pas le droit d'adopter ce paragraphe 13 — lequel repose sur la Charte — à la majorité simple. Il est inutile, je crois, Messieurs, d'insister davantage. J'ai suffisamment démontré qu'en nous présentant les choses comme il vient de le faire, le représentant des Etats-Unis cherche à empêcher l'Assemblée générale d'adopter le projet de résolution en question et espère qu'il pourrait (j'ignore ce qui arrivera dans la réalité) ne pas recueillir les deux tiers des voix, conformément aux vœux que d'aucuns semblent former. Or, et c'est par là que je terminerai, nous avons déjà recueilli les deux tiers des voix voici cinq ans lorsque nous avons solennellement adopté ce document historique et je rappellerai qu'alors les Etats-Unis d'Amérique n'avaient pas voté contre la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Nous ne sommes pas disposés à tolérer que de mauvaises plaisanteries et l'ironie malveillante d'une fausse interprétation du règlement intérieur et de la Charte, ainsi que les appels pathétiques que l'on a pu entendre ici, empêchent l'Assemblée générale de proclamer sa volonté et de prendre des décisions qui soient dignes de cette organisation, conformes à la Charte et fondées sur le document historique que constitue la Déclaration que j'ai mentionnée dans mon intervention.

43. M. ACHKAR (Guinée): Prendre la parole après deux éminents juristes tels que M. Goldberg et M. Morozov est une tâche ardue, et même hasardeuse. Néanmoins, je vais essayer, moi aussi, d'apporter ma contribution à cette discussion. Car la conviction de notre délégation est que nous possédons des éléments essentiels à l'interprétation de la Charte et de notre projet de résolution [A/L.476/Rev.1] et qu'il ne convient pas de prendre une décision dans la confusion et dans l'équivoque. Il ne faudrait pas, d'ores et déjà, fournir des prétextes à des délégations qui se proposent de s'abstenir demain au Conseil de sécurité lors du vote sur les importants problèmes de décolonisation, en ne disant pas ici clairement dès maintenant ce que nous pensons de cette situation.

44. Il est vrai que parler en faveur de la motion du Mali équivaut à s'opposer à la motion des Etats-Unis. Je vais donc m'opposer à la motion des Etats-Unis, afin que l'on comprenne pourquoi ma délégation est en faveur de la manière de voir de la délégation du Mali en ce qui concerne le projet de résolution dont je suis coauteur.

45. Premièrement, nous ne sommes pas d'accord sur l'interprétation que le représentant des Etats-Unis a donnée de certains paragraphes de notre projet de résolution. En effet, les questions qui exigent la majorité des deux tiers — et M. Goldberg a eu l'amabilité de nous citer tout à l'heure la Charte — sont énumérées à l'Article 18 de ce document, où il est parlé de recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Or, les auteurs font une constatation — et nous espérons que l'Assemblée fera la même: il n'y a pas de recommandations dans notre projet de résolution, qui dit dans son préambule que "la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité". Ce n'est pas une recommandation, c'est une constatation. Lorsque l'Assemblée aura fait cette constatation, et au moment où des recommandations devront être faites, peut-être alors la délégation américaine pourra-t-elle déposer sa motion. Pour l'instant, nous croyons que cette motion est prématurée et est injustifiable. Si, dans le dispositif de notre projet de résolution, nous avons recommandé que des mesures soient prises maintenant pour telle ou telle raison, si nous nous étions référés à n'importe quelle autre disposition de la Charte demandant l'application de mesures coercitives, on aurait pu alors parler de recommandations. Mais nous prétendons que, pour l'instant — et cela vaut non seulement pour le préambule mais également pour le dispositif — il n'y a que des constatations et nous ne faisons que demander au Comité des Vingt-Quatre d'étudier les problèmes. Lorsque le Comité des Vingt-Quatre aura constaté qu'il existe des situations constituant une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, nous lui demanderons alors de faire des recommandations au Conseil de sécurité. Il ne s'agit donc pas encore d'une recommandation. Cela, c'est le premier point que je voulais préciser.

46. Deuxièmement, je voudrais dire qu'il existe beaucoup de précédents. Je pense que ces précédents devraient actuellement faire jurisprudence dans nos discussions puisque, jusqu'à présent, personne n'a estimé que nous avions violé la Charte ou même le règlement intérieur. Je voudrais rappeler les précédents les plus récents.

47. A la dix-huitième session, j'ai eu personnellement l'honneur de présider la Quatrième Commission, qui a fait nombre de recommandations sur les questions coloniales, et je voudrais citer deux seulement de ces recommandations, l'une qui portait sur la Rhodésie du Sud, question qui, si j'ose ainsi dire, est très à la mode en ce moment, et l'autre qui traitait de la question du Sud-Ouest africain. Dans la première résolution visée, la résolution 1889 (XVIII), qui porte sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud, nous lisons, au huitième considérant:

"Consciente de l'aggravation de la situation en Rhodésie du Sud, qui constitue une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationale".

48. La résolution a été adoptée par l'Assemblée générale sans qu'une demande ait été faite pour que le scrutin ait lieu à la majorité des deux tiers. Je ne vais pas m'étendre sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud. On voit d'ailleurs que cette constatation se justifie de plus en plus. Mais le point que je tiens à souligner est qu'à l'époque aucune délégation, y compris la délégation américaine, n'avait estimé qu'il fallait voter à la majorité des deux tiers. Il est vrai que nous n'avions pas un juriste aussi éminent que M. Goldberg, mais je crois qu'il y a d'autres raisons encore.

49. Je voudrais également rappeler la résolution 1899 (XVIII), qui porte sur la question du Sud-Ouest africain. L'avant-dernier considérant dit:

"Profondément préoccupée par la situation critique existant au Sud-Ouest africain, dont la prolongation constitue une grave menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales".

50. Je pourrais citer plusieurs autres précédents comme cela mais je me contenterai de rappeler que récemment également, il y a eu un projet de résolution adopté sur la question de l'apartheid.

51. Que signifierait actuellement une décision de l'Assemblée générale tendant à ce que les paragraphes de notre projet de résolution qui font allusion à une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales soient mis aux voix selon le principe de la majorité des deux tiers? Cela signifierait, à notre avis, que nous rejetons toutes les décisions antérieures, c'est-à-dire que nous déclarons tous les précédents implicitement illégaux. Je ne crois pas que ce soit là l'intention de la délégation américaine parce que, si c'était cela, alors la délégation américaine remettrait en cause aujourd'hui toutes les décisions prises par l'Assemblée depuis longtemps, décisions auxquelles elle a elle-même participé.

52. Nous disons donc que nous différons profondément, d'abord sur l'interprétation de notre projet de résolution, ensuite sur l'interprétation qu'il faut donner à l'Article 18 de la Charte. Nous pensons qu'il serait regrettable que l'Assemblée se prononçât sur le projet de résolution en donnant l'impression que nous estimons que les questions coloniales ne sont pas importantes. En fait, il faut ici bien comprendre le mot "importantes". Il ne s'agit pas de la définition que donne le dictionnaire. Il s'agit de la définition que donne la Charte. Nous disons que cette définition-là ne s'applique pas à des projets de résolution de cette nature. Nous ne disons pas que les questions de maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales ne sont pas importantes. Elles le sont. Mais nous disons aussi que notre projet de résolution tel qu'il est conçu, dont les allusions à la question du maintien de la paix ne sont pas encore des recommandations, ne peut être placé dans la catégorie des projets visant des questions importantes au sens de la Charte, qui ne saurait être invoquée en l'occurrence. De la même manière, nous avons soutenu que la question du rétablissement des droits légitimes de la Chine à l'Organisation des Nations Unies n'était pas, aux termes de la Charte, une question importante, alors que les Etats-Unis ont donné une autre interprétation selon laquelle cette question est importante.

53. Nous différons donc en ce qui concerne nos interprétations, mais il ne serait pas tout à fait franc de dire que parce que nous différons dans nos interprétations, nous sommes en train de violer la Charte. Nous ne pensons pas que si l'adoption de notre projet de résolution, tel qu'il est et même si des votes séparés étaient demandés, avait lieu à la majorité simple, ce serait une violation de la Charte. Nous disons qu'il y a des précédents pour justifier cette façon de faire; nous disons que l'interprétation de l'Article 18 est là pour la justifier et nous disons également que le contenu réel de notre projet est là pour la justifier.

54. Par conséquent, ma délégation a noté avec intérêt que la délégation des Etats-Unis n'insiste pas sur sa motion. Evidemment, une décision prise sur la motion du Mali équivaldrait à une décision prise sur la motion américaine, et nous demandons aux Etats-Unis de ne pas insister pour que leur interprétation soit retenue par l'Assemblée, interprétation selon laquelle l'Assemblée déciderait d'ores et déjà que les questions de maintien de la paix et de la sécurité ne sont pas, à son avis, des questions importantes. Nous pensons que l'argumentation de la délégation des Etats-Unis ne s'applique pas à notre projet de résolution et nous demandons que cette interprétation soit sinon revue, du moins que la délégation américaine ne cherche pas à amener l'Assemblée à prendre une décision sur la base d'une appréciation que nous considérons comme erronée.

55. Nous souhaitons que la motion du Mali et surtout le projet de résolution soient adoptés à une majorité écrasante car nous savons tous que les questions coloniales ne devraient plus, de nos jours, faire l'objet de trop longues discussions au sein de notre assemblée. Je croyais que toutes les délégations s'étaient prononcées en faveur de l'anticolonialisme, qu'elles s'étaient proclamées anticolonialistes, et je ne crois pas que ce soit le moment de chercher des raisons ou des prétextes pour ne pas combattre franchement et loyalement le colonialisme. Que le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud, et éventuellement le Royaume-Uni avec la question de la Rhodésie du Sud, s'élèvent ici contre des questions comme celles-là, nous pouvons le comprendre si nous ne le pardonnons pas. Mais que des délégations qui se prétendent anticolonialistes ne viennent pas nous créer des difficultés de procédure pour justifier de leur part des oppositions ou des abstentions ultérieures.

56. M. BHABHA (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a découvert certaines erreurs dans le projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 distribué cet après-midi à l'Assemblée.

57. Vendredi, le représentant de la Somalie a soumis certains amendements [A/L.477] au projet de résolution. Le premier amendement prévoyait l'introduction, dans le préambule, du nouveau paragraphe ci-après:

"Concerned about the policy of colonial Powers to circumvent the rights of colonial peoples through the promotion of the systematic influx of foreign immigrants and the dislocation, deportation and transfer of the indigenous inhabitants".

Cet amendement a été adopté à l'unanimité et il constitue maintenant, dans le document A/L.476/Rev.1, le sixième considérant. Mais, bien que le représentant de la Somalie ait présenté son amendement en anglais, je constate qu'il y a une erreur dans le texte du sixième considérant tel qu'il figure dans le document A/L.476/Rev.1. Le texte reproduit dans ce document est le suivant:

"Concerned about the policy of the colonial Powers, which are circumventing the rights of the colonial peoples by encouraging the systematic influx of foreign immigrants and by scattering, deporting and transferring the indigenous inhabitants".

Ni le mot "encouraging" ni le mot "scattering" ne figure dans l'amendement présenté par la délégation de la Somalie.

58. On peut relever une erreur analogue dans le nouveau paragraphe 5 du dispositif. Dans le document A/L.476/Rev.1 le texte de ce paragraphe est le suivant:

"Calls upon the colonial Powers to put an end to their policy, which violates the rights of colonial peoples through the systematic influx of foreign immigrants and through the scattering, deportation and transfer of the indigenous inhabitants".

59. Dans l'amendement figurant dans le document A/L.477, qui a été adopté à l'unanimité par l'Assemblée, le texte du nouveau paragraphe 5 du dispositif est le suivant:

"Calls upon the colonial Powers to discontinue their policy of violating the rights of colonial peoples through the systematic influx of foreign immigrants and the dislocation, deportation and transfer of the indigenous inhabitants".

60. Avant de demander la parole pour faire cette déclaration, ma délégation a porté cette question à la connaissance des fonctionnaires compétents du Secrétariat et un rectificatif [A/L.476/Rev.1/Corr.1] contenant le texte correct des amendements adoptés vendredi par l'Assemblée a été publié.

61. Je demande que les corrections voulues soient également apportées aux textes du projet de résolution publiés dans les autres langues.

62. Le PRESIDENT: Je précise que le texte anglais du document A/L.476/Rev.1 contient une erreur. La rectification fait l'objet du document A/L.476/Rev.1/Corr.1.

63. M. BOZOVIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Dans ses interventions de vendredi [1400ème séance] et d'aujourd'hui, le représentant des Etats-Unis a déclaré que l'Assemblée générale n'avait pas compétence pour décider qu'un projet de résolution portant sur la paix et la sécurité ne constitue pas une question importante. Il a voulu dire, je suppose, que l'Assemblée générale n'est pas compétente pour décider qu'une question énumérée au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte n'est pas importante.

64. A ce propos, je dois rendre hommage à la langue française qui, en la matière, est plus précise que l'anglais. Le texte français du paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 est rédigé comme suit:

"Les décisions de l'Assemblée générale sur les questions importantes sont prises à la majorité des deux tiers des membres présents et votants. Sont considérées comme des questions importantes: ...".

65. Le texte anglais dit: "These questions shall include: ...", alors que le texte français dit: "Sont considérées comme questions importantes: ...". Le texte français est donc plus précis et il fait certainement foi tout aussi bien que le texte anglais. Les mots "Sont considérées comme questions importantes" signifient que l'Assemblée a déjà pris une décision en la matière et qu'on ne peut rien modifier sans réviser la Charte.

66. Si le représentant des Etats-Unis a voulu dire que l'Assemblée n'a pas le droit d'éliminer l'une des questions énumérées au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte sans réviser la Charte, je suis entièrement d'accord avec lui. Mais si nous reconnaissons que l'Assemblée ne peut pas, sans réviser la Charte, éliminer une des questions énumérées au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 et décréter qu'il ne s'agit pas d'une question importante, nous devons en même temps reconnaître que l'Assemblée ne peut pas, sans réviser la Charte, ajouter des questions à celles qui sont énumérées au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 ou, en d'autres termes, décider qu'une autre question doit être considérée comme une question importante au sens dudit Article.

68. Il en découle que les décisions que l'Assemblée peut prendre sur le point de savoir si une question sera soumise à la règle de la majorité des deux tiers ou à celle de la majorité simple n'a rien à voir avec l'opinion de l'Assemblée sur l'importance de la question. Cela ne signifie pas, et à notre avis cela ne peut pas signifier, que la décision d'appliquer la règle de la majorité simple ou celle de la majorité des deux tiers indique que l'Assemblée considère que la question mise aux voix est importante ou ne l'est pas. Les questions importantes sont énumérées dans la Charte et l'Assemblée ne peut prendre de décision que sur la majorité requise dans les autres cas.

69. Toutes les questions que nous examinons ici se rapportent d'une façon ou d'une autre aux buts essentiels de la Charte dont l'un est le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité. Toutes les questions que nous examinons sont très étroitement liées aux efforts que nous déployons pour atteindre les buts définis par la Charte. Même dans la Déclaration relative aux territoires non autonomes, qui constitue le Chapitre XI de la Charte, nous trouvons les mots "paix et sécurité internationales". C'est naturellement compte tenu de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, en vue de promouvoir la paix et la sécurité internationales que les puissances coloniales doivent prendre des mesures permettant aux peuples coloniaux d'accéder aussitôt que possible à l'indépendance.

70. Les recommandations faites aux puissances coloniales d'adapter leur politique à un monde en évolution et de respecter les aspirations des peuples des territoires non autonomes devraient, si l'interprétation de certaines délégations est juste, figurer parmi les questions énumérées au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte. Mais les auteurs de la Charte ne les y ont pas fait figurer.

71. Des propositions tendant à soumettre certaines résolutions à la règle de la majorité des deux tiers ont été présentées, et toujours dans une intention très précise — comme dans le cas qui nous occupe où certains des paragraphes qui soulèvent des objections sont ceux qui invitent les puissances coloniales à supprimer les bases militaires parce que leur existence rend plus difficile aux peuples coloniaux l'accession à l'indépendance. Toutefois, il ne s'agit pas d'une recommandation visant des mesures concrètes que devrait prendre un organe des Nations Unies dans le domaine de la paix et de la sécurité; or seules ces recommandations sont visées dans le paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18.

72. Dans sa déclaration, le représentant des Etats-Unis a fait observer qu'il est dit dans le neuvième considérant que le régime colonial et la pratique de l'apartheid menacent la paix et la sécurité internationales et il a déclaré qu'il s'agissait là d'une constatation précise faite en vue d'invoquer le Chapitre VII de la Charte. Toutefois, telle qu'elle est exprimée, il ne s'agit de rien d'autre que d'une constatation, il ne s'agit pas d'une recommandation concrète.

73. Se fondant sur cette interprétation de la Charte, la délégation yougoslave, dans ce cas comme toujours depuis vingt ans, s'en tiendra à la procédure prévue par la Charte: cette résolution, comme toutes les autres résolutions se rapportant aux territoires non autonomes, doit être soumise à la règle de la majorité simple et c'est dans ce sens que votera la délégation yougoslave. Nous ne nions naturellement pas qu'il s'agisse d'une question ayant trait à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Mais la résolution ne contient pas, à cet égard, de recommandation concrète aux organes compétents des Nations Unies.

74. M. COLLIER (Sierra Leone) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le moment venu, ma délégation votera pour la motion présentée par le représentant du Mali, estimant que cette question doit faire l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple et ne constitue pas une question importante au sens de la Charte. Nous ne partageons pas l'avis du représentant des Etats-Unis et nous n'appuierons certainement pas sa proposition. Le représentant des Etats-Unis a appelé notre attention sur le paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte, qui fait mention des "décisions de l'Assemblée générale sur des questions importantes". Comme on l'a déjà dit ici, cet après-midi, ce paragraphe énumère ensuite les cas dans lesquels l'article est applicable.

75. En exposant son point de vue, le représentant des Etats-Unis s'est référé spécialement au paragraphe du préambule, où il est dit:

"Pleinement consciente du fait que la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité".

Ma délégation n'estime pas qu'il s'agisse là d'une recommandation. En fait, ce texte invite l'Assemblée à approuver ce qu'elle a déjà approuvé auparavant; il dit que l'Assemblée est "pleinement consciente" de la situation.

76. Samedi encore [1403ème séance], l'Assemblée a adopté la résolution 2079 (XX) sur le Tibet, résolution qui, nous a-t-on dit, requerrait seulement un vote à la majorité simple parce qu'elle avait trait à la question des droits de l'homme. La résolution dont nous sommes saisis a également trait aux droits de l'homme: elle a trait à la discrimination raciale, partout où elle s'exerce; ce n'est donc pas, comme voudrait le faire croire le représentant des Etats-Unis, une question touchant la paix et la sécurité internationales en tant que telles, au sens du paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte.

77. Je ne comprends pas comment certaines délégations, parmi celles-là mêmes qui ont parlé de façon si convaincante, si persuasive de la résolution relative au Tibet et décidé qu'elle devait faire l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple peuvent venir maintenant nous demander de considérer une question analogue comme une question "importante".

78. Le représentant de la Guinée a fait observer à juste titre que quand la Charte fait mention d'une question "importante", ce mot est employé dans un sens particulier et non pas dans son sens usuel tel que le définit le dictionnaire. Nous ne pouvons considérer une question comme "importante" que lorsqu'elle correspond à la définition précise qui en est donnée et entre dans le cadre du paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18.

79. D'autres parties de cette résolution ont soulevé des objections: les paragraphes 12 et 13 du dispositif. Ma délégation estime que le contenu du paragraphe 12 du dispositif a trait, bien entendu, à la non-intervention, mais surtout, ce qui est beaucoup plus important, à la décolonisation, question sur laquelle l'Assemblée s'est prononcée et qui ne peut certainement pas donner lieu à une rupture éventuelle de la paix internationale dans le sens usuel de ces mots. C'est une question de décolonisation et ce n'est pas une recommandation au Conseil de sécurité; c'est une exhortation aux peuples qui auraient encore une politique colonialiste à renoncer à cette politique.

80. Le paragraphe 13 du dispositif invite le Comité spécial à prendre, à l'avenir, certaines mesures. Là encore, il s'agit d'une question de décolonisation et l'Assemblée a chargé le Comité spécial d'en suivre constamment l'évolution. En conséquence, nous ne pensons pas qu'il s'agisse d'une question exigeant un vote à la majorité des deux tiers, nous estimons que la majorité simple suffit. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, on nous a persuadés, pas plus tard que samedi, dans un cas analogue, que seule la majorité simple était requise et effectivement nous avons voté sur la question du Tibet à la majorité simple. Nous ne comprenons pas comment d'autres critères pourraient prévaloir dans le cas présent. En conséquence, ma délégation votera contre la proposition des Etats-Unis. En fait, nous espérons que la délégation des Etats-Unis comprendra qu'elle devrait retirer sa proposition.

81. M. GOLDBERG (Etats-Unis) [traduit de l'anglais]: J'ai suivi avec la plus grande attention le débat constructif au cours duquel le grave problème qui nous occupe a été traité très sérieusement. Je voudrais seulement faire quelques observations à ce propos.

82. Au sujet des observations de M. Morozov, représentant de l'Union soviétique, je voudrais simplement déclarer que nous ne le cédon à personne pour ce qui est du respect de la Charte. Nous croyons en elle. Nous ne l'avons jamais tournée dans le passé. Nous continuons à croire en elle et nous ne la tournerons pas à l'avenir.

83. Je ne comprends pas l'argumentation du représentant de l'URSS selon laquelle puisque l'Assemblée a adopté à la majorité des deux tiers une déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, tout projet de résolution ayant pour objet la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration peut être adopté à la majorité simple. Il me semble que, de toute évidence, c'est le contraire qui est vrai et que ce qu'il a dit ne peut pas être considéré comme une proposition sérieuse car on en arriverait alors, peu à peu, à adopter n'importe quel genre de déclaration se rapportant à la question au mépris total des principes de la Charte.

84. Pour en terminer avec les observations du représentant de l'Union soviétique, je voudrais simplement corriger ce qui n'était manifestement qu'une simple erreur. Nous ne cherchons pas à rendre nulle une décision de la Quatrième Commission. Le projet de résolution [A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1] dont nous sommes saisis n'a jamais été soumis à la Quatrième Commission. Il a été présenté à l'Assemblée en séance plénière.

85. J'ai également écouté très attentivement la déclaration de M. Marof Achkar, représentant de la Guinée. Je voudrais appeler votre attention sur un point qui me semble très important en ce qui concerne les faits qu'il a présentés. Il a mentionné trois résolutions qui, dit-il, ont été adoptées, et qui en effet ont été adoptées, par l'Assemblée: la résolution sur la Rhodésie du Sud, la résolution sur le Sud-Ouest africain et la résolution sur l'apartheid. Toutefois, je voudrais faire remarquer que la résolution sur la Rhodésie du Sud [1889 (XVIII)] a été adoptée par 73 voix contre 2, avec 19 abstentions, soit à une majorité beaucoup plus forte que la majorité des deux tiers; la résolution sur le Sud-Ouest africain [1889 (XVIII)] par 84 voix contre 6, avec 17 abstentions, soit à une majorité beaucoup plus forte que la majorité des deux tiers; la récente résolution sur l'apartheid [2054 (XX)] par 80 voix, contre 2, avec 16 abstentions, soit à une majorité beaucoup plus forte que la majorité des deux tiers. Dans ces trois cas, nul n'a fait valoir avant le vote que seule la majorité simple était requise et après le vote une motion de ce genre eut été sans objet puisque chacune des résolutions a été adoptée à une majorité de plus des deux tiers.

86. A vrai dire, on pourrait invoquer d'autres précédents, qui ont un rapport encore plus direct avec le problème. Le 30 janvier 1962, le paragraphe 7 du dispositif du projet de résolution relatif à l'Angola, adopté ultérieurement en tant que résolution 1742 (XVI), sous une forme modifiée, éliminant le paragraphe 7, avait été rejeté parce qu'il n'avait pas recueilli la majorité des deux tiers. Le texte de ce paragraphe était simplement le suivant:

"Prie le Comité spécial de dix-sept membres constitué aux termes de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale d'examiner de toute urgence la question de l'Angola de sorte que le peuple angolais puisse parvenir rapidement à l'indépendance" ^{1/}.

87. On a dit ici que les références à la paix et à la sécurité internationales ne peuvent être considérées comme un élément significatif du projet de résolution où elles apparaissent seulement sous forme de constatations. Ce n'est sûrement pas l'avis des auteurs. Il est dit au neuvième paragraphe du préambule:

"Pleinement consciente du fait que la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité".

Se fondant sur ce considérant, que propose le projet de résolution? Il propose une recommandation selon la tradition de l'Assemblée. Je lis au paragraphe 5 du dispositif: "Fait appel aux puissances coloniales pour qu'elles mettent fin à leur politique". De quelle politique s'agit-il? Du maintien du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid, ainsi que de toute forme de discrimination raciale que le projet de résolution condamne incontestablement.

88. Le représentant du Sierra Leone a déclaré que l'Assemblée avait adopté à la majorité simple une motion relative au Tibet. En effet, toutefois, cette résolution, qui se rapporte aux droits de l'homme, ne fait pas la moindre allusion à la question de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Bien que l'Assemblée examine des questions ayant trait à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, il est évident, et chacun s'en rend sûrement compte, qu'on ne saurait considérer chacun des graves abus dont elle traite, chaque violation des droits dont elle parle, comme une menace à la paix et à la sécurité au sens des dispositions de la Charte.

89. Enfin, je dois dire, avec tout le respect qui lui est dû, que le représentant de la Yougoslavie n'a nullement saisi toute la portée de l'Article 18 de la Charte. L'Article 18 de la Charte définit, au paragraphe 2, les questions qui doivent faire l'objet d'un vote à la majorité des deux tiers. Il précise que ces questions comprennent: "les recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales". Or, les clauses du projet de résolution contenant une invitation — et j'aurais pu les lire toutes —, y compris celles qui sont essentielles, entrent de toute évidence dans cette catégorie.

90. Les décisions sur d'autres questions que l'Assemblée peut considérer comme importantes en dehors de celles qui sont énumérées au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 peuvent effectivement être prises à la majorité simple. Mais certainement nul ne saurait prétendre, par exemple, que l'élection des membres non permanents du Conseil de sécurité peut faire l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple uniquement parce que l'Assemblée décide par un vote à la majorité simple qu'il en sera ainsi.

91. Je tiens à répéter, très simplement, que nous sommes saisis d'une question fondamentale. Il me semble évident, compte tenu des précédents, y compris la décision prise il y a quelques jours par l'Assemblée, que la question examinée est une question importante au sens de la Charte. La fidélité à la Charte exige le respect de ses dispositions. Faute de quoi nos décisions ne sont pas valables. Nous sommes ici, nul n'en peut douter, pour faire des recommandations valables et non pas pour faire des recommandations qui peuvent être adoptées à la majorité simple et qui violent la Charte.

92. M. COULIBALY (Mali): Dans sa première déclaration, le représentant des Etats-Unis d'Amérique a cherché à créer l'impression que la délégation du Mali, en soumettant sa motion de procédure vendredi dernier [1400^{ème} séance], avait voulu par là violer la Charte des Nations Unies.

93. Je suis convaincu que les délégations ici présentes et qui ont écouté le représentant des Etats-Unis jugent autrement l'attitude constante de la délégation du Mali en ce qui concerne, notamment, la défense des dispositions de la Charte. S'il y a une délégation qui viole la Charte des Nations Unies, ce n'est certainement pas celle du Mali: les annales de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité sont largement édifiantes à cet égard, et montrent quelles sont les puissances, ici, qui violent constamment la Charte des Nations Unies.

94. Au contraire, la délégation du Mali, en déposant sa motion de procédure, a voulu empêcher une violation de la Charte des Nations Unies. En effet, qu'avons-nous demandé? Nous avons demandé que le projet de résolution sur l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux fasse l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple. Ce faisant, nous sommes en parfait accord avec la Charte des Nations Unies, notamment avec l'Article 18, auquel le représentant des Etats-Unis s'est référé. En effet, dans l'Article 18, il n'est pas question des problèmes de la décolonisation. Son paragraphe 2 est ainsi libellé:

"Les décisions de l'Assemblée générale sur les questions importantes sont prises à la majorité des deux tiers des membres présents et votants. Sont considérées comme questions importantes: les recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, l'élection des membres non permanents du Conseil de sécurité, l'élection des membres du Conseil économique et social, l'élection des membres du Conseil de tutelle conformément au paragraphe 1, c, de l'Article 86, l'admission de nouveaux Membres dans l'Organisation, la suspension des droits et privilèges de Membres, l'exclusion de Membres, les questions relatives au fonctionnement du régime de tutelle et les questions budgétaires."

95. Je ne vois rien ici qui ait trait aux problèmes de la décolonisation. Cependant, au moment de l'élaboration de la Charte, les problèmes de la décolonisation existaient. La Charte a même consacré un chapitre aux territoires non autonomes. Mais à l'Article 18 il n'est pas fait mention des problèmes de décolonisation comme questions importantes. Pourtant, le même Article 18 continue en stipulant:

"Les décisions sur d'autres questions, y compris la détermination de nouvelles catégories de questions à trancher à la majorité des deux tiers, sont prises à la majorité des membres présents et votants."

Or, à ma connaissance, l'Assemblée générale n'a pas défini une nouvelle ou de nouvelles catégories de questions devant être tranchées à la majorité des deux tiers comportant les problèmes de la décolonisation.

96. Nous avons fait notre proposition, le vendredi soir, parce que le vendredi matin il y avait ici des tendances, des manœuvres qui visaient à induire l'Assemblée en erreur, à manipuler le règlement intérieur et la Charte de manière à imposer un vote à la majorité des deux tiers pour toutes les questions touchant la décolonisation. On a voulu interpréter de façon abusive l'Article 18 en disant que les problèmes de décolonisation sont des questions importantes au titre de cet article. Nous disons que les problèmes de décolonisation sont des questions importantes. Je vais même plus loin: toutes les questions que nous discutons aux Nations Unies sont des questions importantes; si elles n'étaient pas importantes, nous n'aurions pas à nous prononcer sur ces questions. Mais dans les questions importantes que nous discutons ici, la Charte des Nations Unies en a énoncé un certain nombre qui requièrent un vote à la majorité des deux tiers. C'est parce que la question que nous discutons actuellement n'est pas énumérée dans la série des questions importantes prévues par la Charte que nous avons voulu arrêter les manœuvres des personnes qui veulent induire en erreur les membres de l'Assemblée, de manière à faire obstacle au processus de décolonisation.

97. Le représentant des Etats-Unis a dit que notre projet de résolution comportait des recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales au sens de l'Article 18 de la Charte.

Je ne pense pas que cela soit exact. En effet, je ne vois nulle part, dans notre projet de résolution, de recommandation au sens de cet article. L'un des passages incriminés par le représentant des Etats-Unis est le considérant qui dit:

"Pleinement consciente du fait que la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité".

98. Est-ce que ce passage constitue une recommandation concernant les mesures que l'Assemblée générale ou le Conseil de sécurité doivent prendre en vue du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales? Je ne le pense pas. Il s'agit d'une simple constatation. Nous sommes conscients — personne, ici, ne peut le nier — que le maintien du colonialisme et de l'apartheid constitue une menace contre la paix et la sécurité internationales. Personne ne peut nier non plus que ces deux pratiques constituent un crime contre l'humanité. Est-ce que le fait de constater ce qui existe peut être considéré comme une recommandation au Conseil de sécurité ou à l'Assemblée générale concernant les mesures d'ordre pratique à prendre pour sauvegarder la paix et la sécurité internationales? Je dis: non.

99. Il y a ensuite le paragraphe 12 du projet de résolution, où nous disons:

"Prie les puissances coloniales de démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles".

Est-ce là une recommandation comportant des mesures pratiques à prendre pour le maintien de l'ordre et de la sécurité internationaux au titre de la Charte? Je ne le crois pas. Je sais, évidemment, qu'il y a ici des puissances qui veulent entretenir des bases militaires hors de leur territoire national. Mais nous pensons que, dans le contexte d'un tel projet de résolution, il s'agit de défendre le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, de défendre leur souveraineté. Or, les bases militaires ont été précisément installées dans les territoires coloniaux sans consulter les peuples. Ceux-ci n'ont pas donné leur accord à l'installation de bases militaires sur leur territoire parce que ces bases militaires sont précisément utilisées pour porter atteinte à leur liberté, à leurs droits les plus élémentaires. Quand nous demandons, dans un projet de résolution, que ces bases militaires soient démantelées, il s'agit de défendre les droits de ces peuples, leur droit à l'autodétermination, leur souveraineté. Encore une fois, ce paragraphe ne peut pas être considéré comme une recommandation concernant les mesures à prendre pour le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité au titre de l'Article 18 de la Charte.

100. C'est compte tenu de toutes ces raisons et pour barrer la route à toutes les manœuvres qui ont été tentées ici depuis le début de la semaine dernière pour arrêter le processus de décolonisation que nous avons demandé que l'Assemblée générale se prononce sur le projet de résolution à la majorité simple. Mais il n'a jamais été dans notre intention de dire que les problèmes de décolonisation ne sont pas des questions importantes. Ces questions sont très importantes, puisque nous nous en occupons. Mais nous disons que ces questions ne sont pas incluses dans les catégories de questions qui, selon l'Article 18 de la Charte, exigent un vote à la majorité des deux tiers. Les problèmes de décolonisation sont importants; mais ils ne sont pas énumérés à l'Article 18 parmi les catégories de questions qui exigent un vote à la majorité des deux tiers. C'est ce que nous avons voulu démontrer. C'est ce que nous avons voulu faire respecter par l'Assemblée générale quand nous avons déposé notre motion de procédure.

101. M. ESFANDIARY (Iran) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le paragraphe 12 du dispositif du projet de résolution [A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1] qui prie les puissances administrantes de démanteler les bases militaires déborde — à notre avis — le cadre des questions coloniales. Il touche des questions qui peuvent avoir des prolongements intéressant le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. En conséquence, à notre avis, les dispositions du paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 sont applicables au paragraphe 12 du dispositif du projet de résolution.

102. Il va s'en dire que, selon nous, le projet de résolution dans son ensemble, quelle que soit son importance, traite de questions coloniales et conformément aux dispositions énoncées dans ledit paragraphe et au précédent établi par l'Assemblée générale, il devrait être adopté à la majorité simple.

103. Je voudrais ajouter, en ce qui concerne la substance du projet de résolution que, pour les raisons que nous avons indiquées, ma délégation s'abstiendra lors du vote sur le paragraphe 12 du dispositif et votera pour le projet de résolution dans son ensemble.

104. M. LOPEZ VILLAMIL (Honduras) [traduit de l'espagnol]: De nombreux orateurs ont défilé cet après-midi à la tribune au moment où la vingtième session de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies va se clore, session qui, de façon générale, s'est révélée féconde puisqu'elle a permis de résoudre nombre de problèmes très importants pour l'Organisation. Pourtant, au dernier moment, on soulève des questions qui sèment la confusion et nuisent ainsi à l'idée que l'opinion publique du monde entier se fait de l'Organisation.

105. Le projet de résolution qui nous est soumis [A/L.476/Rev.1] se rapporte précisément à une question étroitement liée à la juste interprétation de la Charte des Nations Unies et, après avoir entendu tous les arguments présentés cet après-midi, il nous semble que si les Nations Unies en viennent à contester le texte même de la Charte et à l'interpréter chacun à son gré, le jour viendra où nous verrons le diable monter à cette tribune pour nous lire la Bible.

106. Et les petites discussions de ce genre risquent de faire perdre son prestige à l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans toutes les régions du monde. On a fait valoir une série d'arguments et l'un des orateurs en est venu à dire que les auteurs de la Charte ne constituaient et ne représentaient pas la majorité des Etats qui forment aujourd'hui l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

107. C'est un bien mauvais argument car la Charte énonce une série de principes de caractère universel sans tenir compte du fait qu'une région du monde pouvait, dans la conjoncture politique du moment, imposer des conditions particulières aux autres régions uniquement en faisant valoir certains aspects de l'émancipation moderne. C'est un argument d'autant plus mauvais que les auteurs de la Charte sont ici présents, notamment le représentant de l'Union soviétique, et qu'ils ne s'étaient pas, que je sache, opposés au texte que l'on cherche aujourd'hui à interpréter contre tout sens logique, grammatical, juridique ou autre.

108. Si nous voulons vraiment faire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies une institution respectée de tous les Etats et non pas seulement d'un groupe d'entre eux, si nous voulons édifier un monde où règnent la compréhension et l'aide mutuelle, ne nous moquons pas de la Charte des Nations Unies dont le sens est clair comme le jour. En outre, dans le passé, vous avez déjà été appelé, Monsieur le Président, à prendre au sujet de cas semblables des décisions qui constituent des précédents très nets.

109. L'article dont on s'efforce de déformer le sens aujourd'hui est précisément l'Article 18, qui se rapporte aux décisions de l'Assemblée générale sur les questions importantes. "Sont considérées comme questions importantes: les recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales..."

110. On nous dit que le projet de résolution soumis à l'Assemblée ne se rapporte pas à ces questions; que ce projet de résolution très habilement rédigé et présenté à la dernière heure ne traite que d'un aspect de l'anticolonialisme et ne contient donc pas de questions importantes. Depuis le début, et tout au long de l'existence de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, ma délégation a prouvé son attachement à tous ces principes, elle a soutenu l'anticolonialisme à la Quatrième Commission et les actes de toute une série de sessions témoignent de la position prise par mon pays et par les autres pays d'Amérique latine qui croient à ces principes. Mais nous ne pensons pas qu'on puisse aujourd'hui, sous la bannière de l'anticolonialisme, introduire le cheval de Troie de la guerre froide, de la propagande et d'une prétendue défense de principes qui ne sont qu'un masque sous lequel on cherche à imposer une politique déterminée à certaines régions.

111. L'anticolonialisme est une bannière très noble que nous respectons tous; il se fonde sur le respect de l'indépendance des Etats. Mais rien dans la Charte de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne s'oppose à l'interdépendance, au commerce extérieur, à la signature de traités internationaux puisque jusqu'à présent les Etats n'ont pas perdu leurs droits de contracter ni même de signer des accords de défense mutuelle, quelle que soit leur nature, économique, sociale ou politique.

112. En Europe de l'Est, en Europe occidentale, en Asie et en Afrique, de nombreux Etats ont conclu des traités que ni la Charte ni les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ne peuvent réussir à éliminer uniquement grâce au vote d'une majorité qui aura réussi à se constituer pour imposer une certaine politique.

113. Si tous les Etats veulent faire respecter les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et la Charte, il faut que leurs décisions se fondent sur le texte même de celle-ci.

114. Les arguments invoqués pour démontrer que l'article 18 ne dit pas réellement ce qu'il dit sont absolument fallacieux. Si nous demandions à un tribunal quelconque ou même à la Cour internationale de Justice de La Haye, organe des Nations Unies, comment il convient d'interpréter cet article et le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis, je suis sûr que personne ne mettrait en doute qu'il s'agit bien là de questions touchant le maintien de la paix. Ainsi, par exemple, les paragraphes 12 et 13 du dispositif, qui paraissent susciter le plus d'inquiétude et qui, plus que l'anticolonialisme semblent constituer la pierre angulaire de ce projet de résolution, prient les puissances coloniales de démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles; en outre, il prie le Comité spécial de porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité les faits nouveaux survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires qu'il examine qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales et de formuler des suggestions dont le Conseil pourrait s'inspirer en étudiant les mesures qu'il convient de prendre conformément à la Charte.

115. Je voudrais leur demander de quoi il s'agit quand on parle de démantèlement de bases. Ne s'agit-il pas de désarmement? Ne s'agit-il pas du maintien de la paix? S'agirait-il simplement d'une manifestation sportive? N'est-ce pas là une question importante?

116. Je crois que nous ne devons pas nous leurrer ni chercher à nous persuader de ce que nous voulons faire croire aux autres et à l'opinion publique internationale. Ma délégation a défendu le principe du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes; elle s'est prononcée en faveur de toutes les résolutions relatives aux droits de l'homme et de celles qui visent à éliminer le colonialisme. Mais dans ce projet de résolution, on introduit à dessein des éléments politiques très éloignés des nobles desseins que poursuit l'anticolonialisme, l'anticolonialisme authentique, né dans la conscience de l'homme, du respect de l'indépendance totale à laquelle les Etats aspirent dans leurs relations internationales et dans le cadre de la mission qui est la leur dans l'histoire, à leurs yeux et aux yeux de leurs voisins. Mais, de l'avis de ma délégation, le projet de résolution qui nous est soumis se rapporte à une question importante et exige la majorité prévue par la Charte et non la majorité proposée par certains délégués qui ont décidé à l'avance d'aller à l'encontre de ce que prévoit la Charte.

117. C'est pourquoi ma délégation a pris la position que je viens d'exposer et votera contre les paragraphes 12 et 13 du dispositif qui semblent contenir l'essentiel du projet de résolution.

118. M. MOROZOV (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: C'est avec beaucoup d'hésitation que nous prenons à nouveau la parole non que notre position soit ébranlée mais parce que nous sommes partagés entre deux désirs. D'une part, nous voudrions être polis et courtois à l'égard du représentant des Etats-Unis qui nous a demandé de préciser la logique de notre position et, d'autre part, certaines considérations comme l'heure et la date à laquelle nous siégeons ne nous encourageant évidemment pas à mobiliser l'attention de l'Assemblée générale une seconde fois. Mais nous n'avons pas pu résister à la tentation de préciser une nouvelle fois notre position à l'intention du représentant des Etats-Unis d'autant que celui-ci nous a pratiquement prié de le faire.

119. Nous n'avons malheureusement pas sous les yeux le texte russe de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance. Aussi citerai-je le texte anglais et j'en ferai autant pour le projet de résolution que nous examinons pour étayer ma thèse. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, la Déclaration adoptée il y a cinq ans par 89 voix contre zéro, avec neuf abstentions — dont les Etats-Unis d'Amérique qui, malgré tout, n'ont pas voté contre elle —, justifie que l'on approuve aujourd'hui, en vue de son application, le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis à la majorité simple. Je me permettrai de rappeler à nouveau les différents points que le représentant des Etats-Unis, M. Goldberg, a évoqués pour étayer sa thèse.

120. Je vous lirai pour commencer l'alinéa du préambule de la résolution adoptée il y a cinq ans [1514 (XV)]:

"Consciente des conflits croissants qu'entraîne le fait de refuser la liberté à ces peuples ou d'y faire obstacle, qui constituent une grave menace à la paix mondiale".

121. Ce texte a été adopté par 89 voix et tout ce que l'on nous propose aujourd'hui c'est de remplacer dans ce préambule qui a été si vivement critiqué les mots "consciente" par "pleinement consciente" et "qui constituent une grave menace à la paix mondiale" par "constitue une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales". Aussi suis-je fort tenté de demander si l'on doute toujours vraiment que nous avons déjà adopté il y a cinq ans à la majorité des deux tiers cet alinéa qui est reproduit aujourd'hui dans le préambule du projet de résolution et que l'on nous propose d'adopter à la majorité simple? Veut-on nous faire passer pour un organe qui, après avoir adopté il y a cinq ans à la majorité des deux tiers la partie du préambule que je viens de citer, repousserait aujourd'hui — à la suite, je le pense, de quelques manœuvres, d'un vote par division, etc. — ce même texte qui figure dans un projet de résolution que nous considérons comme un moyen de mise en œuvre de la Déclaration. Il serait intéressant alors de voir dans quelle situation se trouverait l'Assemblée générale si elle devait suivre les conseils que vient de lui prodiguer le représentant des Etats-Unis, appuyé avec une énergie digne d'une meilleure cause par le représentant du Honduras.

122. Nous ne sommes pas un organe qui, asservi à des fins politiques, doit suivre aveuglément la procédure que l'on cherche ici à nous imposer. Nous sommes une réunion pacifique qui a l'habitude de respecter la Charte des Nations Unies et les décisions qui ont été prises. C'est pourquoi, lorsqu'on vient nous dire qu'après avoir adopté il y a cinq ans la Déclaration, nous n'avons pas le droit d'adopter aujourd'hui cet alinéa qui répète les termes de cette Déclaration en les atténuant, dirai-je, tout en leur conservant leur signification politique, j'ai envie de répondre que l'on nous traite avec un tel irrespect que l'on nous imagine incapables de procéder à l'analyse juridique nécessaire. Je parle de l'analyse juridique, si chère au cœur du représentant des Etats-Unis, à laquelle les autres orateurs se sont référés. D'un point de vue juridique, nous avons le droit d'adopter, conformément au règlement intérieur et à la Charte, cette disposition du projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis à la majorité simple car nous n'avons pas à adopter indéfiniment à la majorité des deux tiers les mêmes textes se rapportant à la même question alors qu'il s'agit de mettre en œuvre une décision politique de principe qui a déjà été adoptée sur une question extrêmement importante — je ne dis pas importante mais extrêmement importante —, celle de l'élimination du colonialisme et que nous l'avons déjà fait dans la Déclaration adoptée il y a cinq ans.

123. Je vous donnerai lecture maintenant du paragraphe 4 du dispositif de la Déclaration:

"Il sera mis fin à toute action armée et à toutes mesures de répression, de quelque sorte qu'elles soient, dirigées contre les peuples dépendants, pour permettre à ces peuples d'exercer pacifiquement et librement leur droit à l'indépendance complète, et l'intégrité de leur territoire national sera respectée".

124. On vient nous dire maintenant que la mention qui fait l'objet du paragraphe 12 du projet de résolution ne découle pas de la Déclaration, ne repose pas sur elle, ne saurait être considérée comme une mesure d'application d'une décision politique déjà adoptée par 89 voix par l'Assemblée sans, je le répète, opposition aucune. Nous ne pouvons pas bien sûr nous prêter à ce jeu et nous ne pouvons pas quitter cette tribune sans insister à nouveau pour que la proposition du représentant du Mali soit mise aux voix. J'ajouterai en conclusion que nous n'obéissons pas ici à nos sympathies politiques ni aux tendances dont il a été question aujourd'hui à cette tribune, toutefois dans des circonstances différentes, et que nous nous en tenons scrupuleusement aux dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies, au règlement intérieur et aux décisions adoptées antérieurement sous la forme de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

125. M. ACHKAR (Guinée): Je regrette vivement de devoir revenir à cette tribune. Je serai extrêmement bref. Si j'ai redemandé la parole, c'est parce que, tout à l'heure, le représentant des Etats-Unis a interprété mes exemples dans un sens que je n'ai pas voulu leur donner. Il a rappelé les précédents, c'est-à-dire les résolutions adoptées antérieurement, et il a bien voulu indiquer que ces résolutions avaient été adoptées à une majorité écrasante et qu'il aurait été absurde de parler à ce moment-là de majorité des deux tiers. Je suis entièrement d'accord.

126. Je n'ai jamais dit que ces résolutions n'avaient pas été adoptées à une majorité dépassant de loin les deux tiers. Ce que j'ai dit, c'est qu'à l'occasion de l'adoption de ces résolutions, il n'y avait pas eu de question préalable telle que celle que vient de poser le représentant des Etats-Unis.

127. Je ne doute pas que le projet de résolution qui est actuellement soumis à notre sanction sera adopté à une majorité substantielle qui dépassera probablement les deux tiers, à moins que la majorité anticolonialiste de l'Assemblée, à la suite de certains phénomènes que nous ignorons, n'ait changé d'avis. Mais si cette majorité est la même, je ne doute pas qu'elle adoptera à une majorité de plus des deux tiers le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis.

128. Mais ce dont nous discutons, c'est le préalable qui est posé. Avant que nous ne nous prononcions sur le projet de résolution, il faut que nous reconnaissons qu'il ne saurait être adopté à la majorité des deux tiers pour des raisons que nous réfutons. Par conséquent, si certaines résolutions ont été adoptées à une majorité dépassant de loin les deux tiers, cela ne justifie pas le fait qu'au début, on n'a pas invoqué ce préalable et que maintenant on veuille l'invoquer.

129. Parmi tous les exemples que j'ai donnés, il y en a un qui pourrait nous être extrêmement utile, c'est la résolution adoptée à la dix-huitième session de l'Assemblée générale sur la question même dont nous discutons en ce moment, à savoir la résolution 1956 (XVIII) concernant la situation quant à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Lors de l'adoption de cette résolution, la délégation des Etats-Unis — et aucune autre délégation ne l'a fait — avait soulevé le préalable des deux tiers. Dans cette résolution, le paragraphe 6 se lit ainsi:

"Invite le Comité spécial à porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité tous faits, survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires qu'il examine, qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales".

130. Ce texte se retrouve dans notre projet actuel, et le représentant des Etats-Unis ainsi que celui du Honduras, me semble-t-il, s'élèvent contre cela, ce qui équivaut à rejeter une décision déjà prise au cours de la dix-huitième session, sans compter les décisions de même nature qui ont été prises antérieurement. Si tel est le cas, ce n'est pas nous qui aurions besoin de la majorité des deux tiers, c'est le représentant des Etats-Unis, pour remettre en cause une décision déjà prise par l'Assemblée générale.

131. Je voudrais préciser ce que j'ai dit tout à l'heure, à savoir que dans notre projet de résolution il n'y a pas de recommandations aux termes des Chapitres VI et VII de la Charte, qui traitent de la question du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Puisque c'est dans ce cadre que le représentant des Etats-Unis veut placer sa motion des deux tiers, il aurait dû alors chercher dans le projet une recommandation qui se fonde soit sur le Chapitre VI, soit sur le Chapitre VII. La recommandation qui découle de notre constatation, c'est la libération des territoires. Cette recommandation s'inspire de la résolution 1514 (XV), et non pas du Chapitre VI ou du Chapitre VII.

132. Alors, que ceux qui ont parlé de guerre froide — je fais allusion à mon collègue du Honduras — n'en parlent plus, parce que c'est introduire la guerre froide dans ce débat qui se veut exclusivement consacré à la question de la libération des peuples dépendants.

Il est loin de nos intentions d'introduire dans cette discussion quelque notion de guerre froide que ce soit, car cela faciliterait bien trop la tâche des puissances coloniales, qui se sont trop longtemps réfugiées derrière des considérations de cette nature pour justifier leur politique obtuse et aveugle.

133. Quand mon collègue du Honduras parle de traités internationaux, je pense qu'il ne fait pas allusion au paragraphe dans lequel nous demandons que les puissances coloniales démantèlent les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et s'abstiennent d'en établir de nouvelles car entre puissances coloniales et colonies, il ne saurait y avoir d'accord international. D'une part, il existe une entité souveraine qui est la puissance coloniale, mais d'autre part, il n'y a rien. Toutes les bases militaires installées dans les colonies l'ont été en vertu d'un "package deal". La puissance coloniale déclare qu'elle se retire et demande qu'on lui donne telle et telle chose en contrepartie. Bien entendu, les territoires que l'on prétend ainsi libérer héritent de ces bases militaires et deviennent indépendants, c'est évident. Mais les bases militaires demeurent et constituent alors soit une source de répression pour certains régimes, soit une source de revenus. Mais nous disons qu'aussi longtemps que les territoires seront des colonies, il ne faut pas y conserver des bases militaires. Il ne s'agit donc pas d'accords internationaux.

134. Je voudrais insister auprès de la délégation des Etats-Unis et de certaines autres qui l'appuient pour qu'elles ne mettent pas trop l'accent sur cet aspect qu'elles veulent juridique et qui, à mon avis, est hautement politique, de la question dont nous discutons. Car il existe un risque sérieux: en insistant, je crains que les représentants auxquels je fais allusion ne se fassent passer pour les avocats militants du colonialisme. Or, ceux-ci sont parmi nous et ils se taisent bien sagement. J'espère que cet appel sera entendu. En tout cas, si nous passons au vote, je souhaite vivement — j'en ai d'ailleurs presque la conviction — que non seulement la motion du représentant du Mali soit adoptée à une majorité qui dépasse de loin les deux tiers, mais que le projet de résolution lui-même soit adopté à une majorité écrasante, dépassant de loin les deux tiers puisque parmi nous, il y a beaucoup moins d'un tiers de procolonialistes. En tout cas, c'est ce que nous avons pensé jusqu'à présent, et je ne crois pas que les événements actuels aient amené un changement dans la situation. Bien au contraire, quand on voit ce qui se passe aujourd'hui dans le monde, on peut s'attendre à ce que les forces anticolonialistes soient plus nombreuses parce qu'on sait ce que la colonisation peut amener contre la paix et la sécurité internationales et contre l'Organisation.

135. M. MARRACHE (Syrie): Ma délégation voudrait intervenir dans le débat en faveur de l'interprétation de la Charte selon laquelle la règle des deux tiers ne joue pas pour les problèmes coloniaux. Les raisons juridiques pertinentes qui plaident en faveur de cette interprétation ont déjà été exprimées par nombre de délégations. Ma délégation voudrait ajouter à ce qui a déjà été dit les observations suivantes.

136. Tout d'abord, l'Article 18, autour duquel tourne le débat, constitue une stipulation, une réglementation d'exception, qui n'est pas d'ordre commun, qui n'est pas la règle générale. En effet, dans toutes les assemblées démocratiques, la règle générale, c'est celle de la majorité simple. Elle s'applique à tous les cas, sauf exception. Quand il s'agit d'une législation d'exception, elle doit être interprétée de façon restrictive et toute énumération contenue dans une réglementation d'exception doit être limitative. On ne peut faire entrer de nouvelles catégories dans cette législation d'exception. Nous en avons une preuve très nette dans la coutume démocratique elle-même, qui est en général de voter à la majorité simple. Cela découle également du paragraphe 3 du même Article 18, qui dit que les décisions sur les autres questions sont prises à la majorité simple. Il ne s'agit donc pas d'une énumération ou d'une limitation; il s'agit de toutes les autres questions.

137. Comme les problèmes coloniaux sont d'une nature différente de celle des problèmes qui rentrent dans le cadre des "recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales", il est clair et évident qu'un problème colonial ne peut pas être inclus dans ces recommandations.

138. On pourrait démontrer cela de plusieurs façons, on pourrait invoquer plusieurs arguments, mais il me suffira de dire que la paix et la guerre que vise ce membre de phrase supposent au moins deux belligérants alors que, dans le problème colonial, il n'y a qu'un partenaire, le colonisateur. On ne pourrait pas dire, par exemple, que le Mozambique a déclaré la guerre au Portugal, ou que l'Angola a signé la paix avec le Portugal. Il faudrait qu'il y ait d'abord eu la libération de ces territoires. Après cela, une paix pourrait être signée ou une guerre engagée, et elles pourraient être considérées comme telles par les deux pays en cause.

139. Je vous dis cela pour vous démontrer le caractère très spécial du problème colonial où l'indépendance du colonisé n'est pas reconnue et où celui-ci ne peut, par conséquent, être considéré comme belligérant en droit. On parle de "lutte de libération", on parle de "révolution" mais, en droit, on ne peut parler d'une guerre internationale entre deux belligérants. Or, c'est ce dernier cas que vise l'Article 18.

140. Lorsqu'il s'agit d'une législation d'exception, les précédents eux-mêmes doivent être interprétés restrictivement, ce qui signifie que si, à un moment donné, l'Assemblée générale a décidé d'adopter une résolution sur un sujet déterminé à une majorité des deux tiers, cette décision ne s'applique qu'à ce sujet déterminé, à l'année où elle a été prise, à une session déterminée. En effet, on ne peut pas interpréter de façon large l'application d'une législation ou d'une stipulation d'exception.

141. Enfin, la majorité des deux tiers, ou des trois quarts quelquefois — car on sait que dans certaines constitutions on exige une majorité des trois quarts pour amender ou remanier la constitution — enfin, toute majorité autre que la majorité simple est faite précisément pour protéger le statu quo légal, le statu quo constitutionnel, l'état présent, pour empêcher les changements. Cela est tout à fait évident.

142. Or, la résolution 1514 (XV) nous fait un devoir de favoriser la décolonisation. La Charte elle-même, dans le premier paragraphe de l'Article 73, nous impose l'obligation de favoriser le processus de décolonisation, et non pas d'y faire obstacle. Or, exiger une majorité des deux tiers pour l'adoption de projets de résolution sur les sujets coloniaux augmente les obstacles, retarde l'évolution vers la libération, empêche un processus rapide de décolonisation. La majorité des deux tiers protège le statu quo existant. Or, le statu quo existant, c'est le statu quo colonial, et il s'agit de décoloniser. Personne, je crois, ne peut imaginer que l'Assemblée pourrait être saisie d'un projet de résolution prévoyant d'établir une colonie nouvelle. Cela est impensable. Quelqu'un peut-il imaginer qu'on pourrait établir une colonie nouvelle? Pour l'adoption d'un tel projet, il serait bon d'avoir la majorité des deux tiers, non de protéger le peuple de la colonie éventuelle et d'éviter qu'il ne subisse pas un nouveau colonialisme. Cette majorité est une majorité d'exception, de protection contre certaines innovations. Mais quand l'innovation va dans le sens de la décolonisation, tous les membres de l'Assemblée ont l'obligation de la favoriser, de la faciliter.

143. Ces considérations, venant s'ajouter à celles que d'autres délégations ont déjà exprimées, devraient nous aider à renforcer l'interprétation de la Charte qui est la plus conforme aux intérêts et à la libération des peuples.

144. M. De PINIES (Espagne) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Je dois avouer que ma délégation se trouve dans une situation particulière. Je ne nierai pas que toute ma sympathie va à la demande présentée par les représentants du Mali et de la Guinée appuyés par un grand nombre de pays.

145. Je ne vous cacherai pas non plus que ma délégation s'est trouvée dans une situation assez embarrassante lorsqu'elle a pris connaissance de la motion présentée par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique [A/L.478]. Elle pense toutefois que, dans les circonstances actuelles et eu égard aux problèmes qui se posent à l'Assemblée, nous ne pouvons pas contester le précédent sur lequel nous nous sommes appuyés tout au long de cette session au cours de laquelle nous avons travaillé avec une intensité qui est presque sans égale.

146. En fait, ma délégation se trouve devant le problème suivant: le neuvième considérant de la résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 fait état des problèmes qui "constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales". Le paragraphe 12 du dispositif mentionne, en particulier, le démantèlement des bases militaires. Le paragraphe 13 du même dispositif fait à nouveau mention d'une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

147. Si ma mémoire ne me trompe pas, nous avons examiné, il y a quelques jours [1398ème séance, par. 116 et 117] une question aussi importante que celle des 26 territoires à propos de laquelle le projet de résolution V [A/6160, par. 50] a été soumis à l'Assemblée; or, il était dit dans ce projet de résolution que l'existence de bases militaires constituait un obstacle à l'indépendance de ces peuples et, au paragraphe suivant, on en demandait le démantèlement et l'Assemblée a procédé à un vote pour confirmer la décision de la présidence en vertu de laquelle ces deux paragraphes devaient être supprimés.

148. Malgré la suppression de ces deux paragraphes, un nombre important, extrêmement important même, de délégations a voté pour le projet de résolution en question. Et les délégations qui ont voté pour ce projet de résolution représentaient notamment l'un des secteurs le plus important du monde; je ne dirai pas le plus important, mais probablement l'un des principaux. Cela ne les a pas empêchés de s'abstenir lors du vote sur le projet de résolution suivant qui ne faisait pas mention de bases militaires; c'est probablement la raison pour laquelle elles ont décidé de s'abstenir.

149. Les questions qui constituent une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et les problèmes relatifs aux bases militaires suscitent une certaine méfiance et une certaine crainte parmi de nombreuses délégations. Ceci est probablement dû — et ma délégation n'hésite pas à l'affirmer — au fait que nous n'en sommes pas encore, en matière de désarmement, au point où il serait possible de démanteler les bases et au fait qu'un certain nombre de pays croit qu'il n'est pas possible de faire droit à des demandes de cette nature tant que le désarmement général et complet n'aura pas fait davantage de progrès. Sans juger nécessaire d'accepter la proposition formulée par les Etats-Unis qui voudraient que tout le projet de résolution, sans discrimination, fasse l'objet d'un vote à la majorité des deux tiers, ma délégation pense que l'on pourrait voter par division, à la majorité des deux tiers, sur le neuvième considérant, qui dit:

"Pleinement consciente du fait que la persistance du régime colonial et de la pratique de l'apartheid ainsi que de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale constitue une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité".

Après avoir voté sur ce paragraphe, on pourrait, toujours à la majorité des deux tiers, voter sur les paragraphes 12 et 13.

150. Mon pays croit sincèrement que l'on ne saurait tolérer l'existence de bases militaires imposées. Il croit d'autre part que la politique d'apartheid est absolument inacceptable. Mais la session touche à sa fin, et je ne crois pas que ce soit le moment d'engager une discussion interminable. C'est pourquoi je me permets de suggérer, dans l'espoir que les délégations des Etats-Unis et du Mali pourront l'accepter, que seuls ces paragraphes — le neuvième considérant ainsi que le douzième et le treizième paragraphe du dispositif — fassent l'objet d'un vote par division à la majorité des deux tiers, l'ensemble du projet de résolution étant ensuite soumis à un vote à la majorité simple, selon la règle qui a toujours été appliquée aux décisions de l'Assemblée sur les problèmes de décolonisation. Ma délégation fait cette suggestion en vue d'abrégier le débat. J'espère que les membres de l'Assemblée comprendront la situation unique dans laquelle se trouve la délégation espagnole: notre pays est anticolonialiste et il est en même temps puissance administrante. Je crois qu'il n'y a pas de cas semblable au sein des Nations Unies. Dans ces conditions, ma délégation soumet cette suggestion à la bienveillante attention des représentants.

151. Le PRESIDENT: Les Etats-Unis ont renoncé à leur motion. Par conséquent, la question de priorité entre la motion du Mali et celle des Etats-Unis ne se pose plus. Je vais mettre aux voix la motion soumise par le Mali.

152. M. GOLDBERG (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je ne veux pas prolonger le débat. Le représentant de l'Espagne a fait une suggestion. Etant donné les observations du représentant de la Guinée, je tiens à préciser très nettement, avant que nous passions au vote, que j'aurais accepté cette suggestion. Notre intention n'est pas de demander que les questions coloniales fassent l'objet d'un vote à la majorité des deux tiers. Notre intention est de souligner que certains paragraphes de la résolution ont trait à la paix et à la sécurité internationales au sens de la Charte, c'est pourquoi j'avais soulevé la question. C'est pour nous une question de principe non pas de politique.

153. Je voudrais faire observer qu'en 1961, un projet de résolution a été soumis par le Cameroun, la République centrafricaine, le Tchad, le Congo (Brazzaville), le Dahomey, le Gabon, la Côte d'Ivoire, Madagascar, la Mauritanie, le Niger, le Sénégal, le Togo et la Haute-Volta. Il a été mis aux voix le 27 novembre 1961 [1065ème séance]. Il avait pour titre: "Situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". Il se rapportait, comme les paragraphes en cause, à la paix et à la sécurité internationales. Ceci, je pense, répond pleinement à l'allégation du représentant de l'Union soviétique selon laquelle lorsqu'une résolution a été adoptée dans ce domaine, les résolutions de mise en œuvre n'exigent pas la majorité des deux tiers.

154. Nous avons voté pour ce projet de résolution, comme beaucoup d'autres pays — Nigéria, Norvège, Panama, Paraguay, Pérou, Cameroun, République centrafricaine, Tchad, Chili, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), Dahomey, etc. —, d'autres ont voté contre. Le résultat du vote a été le suivant: 53 voix pour, 41 contre, avec 9 abstentions. La décision a été la suivante: "N'ayant pas obtenu la majorité des deux tiers requise, le projet de résolution n'est pas adopté." Nous faisons partie de la majorité, de la majorité simple, mais nous ne nous sommes pas élevés contre cette décision.

155. Je tiens à préciser que nous n'avons pas retiré notre motion. J'ai dit que nous n'insisterions pas pour qu'elle soit mise aux voix en priorité, le représentant du Mali ayant fait observer qu'il avait déposé sa motion avant nous.

156. Enfin, je souligne que ce n'est pas nous qui avons soulevé la question. Elle a été soulevée par la motion du représentant du Mali. Nous aurions été pleinement satisfaits si l'on avait procédé au vote et déterminé ensuite, de la façon normale — comme on l'a fait lors du vote dont je viens de faire mention —, la règle qu'il convenait d'appliquer.

157. M. COULIBALY (Mali): A la suite des suggestions et des propositions qui ont été faites après ma dernière intervention, je voudrais réaffirmer que, pour des questions de principe, ma délégation ainsi que les coauteurs du projet de résolution maintiennent la motion que j'ai présentée, c'est-à-dire que nous persistons dans notre motion demandant que le projet de résolution, dans son ensemble, fasse l'objet d'un vote à la majorité simple. Nous ne pensons pas qu'il soit juste de soumettre certains paragraphes de ce projet de résolution à la règle de majorité simple et d'autres à celle de la majorité des deux tiers.

158. On a généralisé le problème des bases ici pour créer de la confusion; on a parlé du désarmement. Mais, dans le projet de résolution, il ne s'agit pas des bases militaires situées dans des pays indépendants. Nous continuons à croire que les bases militaires installées dans les pays indépendants l'ont été parce que les gouvernements et les peuples de ces pays le veulent très certainement.

159. Cependant, en ce qui concerne l'Angola, le Mozambique ou la Guinée dite portugaise, il s'agit de bases colonialistes qui n'ont pas été installées à la demande d'un gouvernement ou d'un peuple, de bases militaires qui serviront à opprimer la population de ces pays. Ce sont précisément ces bases militaires que nous voulons voir démanteler.

160. Il ne faut pas créer la confusion en parlant du désarmement général ou en parlant du problème des bases dans son ensemble.

161. Nous demandons que les bases qui se trouvent dans les territoires coloniaux, qui ont été installés sans la consultation ni l'accord des populations et qui, par conséquent, constituent une entrave, une violation du droit de ces populations, nous voulons, dis-je, que ces bases soient démantelées. Mais il ne s'agit pas des bases se trouvant dans des pays indépendants, qui ne rentrent pas dans le contexte de la discussion actuelle.

162. J'ai tenu à apporter cette précision pour éviter toute confusion en ce qui concerne nos intentions. Nous n'entendons nullement nous mêler des affaires intérieures des pays souverains, des pays indépendants qui, dans le cadre des alliances qu'ils ont contractées, ont des bases militaires installées dans leurs pays. Il s'agit ici des bases militaires qui se trouvent en Angola, au Mozambique, et je ne pense pas que, dans cette assemblée, il y ait des délégations qui veuillent que ces bases soient maintenues dans ces pays pour, chaque jour, y tuer des populations innocentes. C'est le démantèlement de ces bases que nous demandons.

163. M. MOROZOV (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Je voudrais préciser la situation en ce qui concerne la procédure que nous allons suivre. Comme nous avons fait la semaine dernière une expérience assez pénible, sur laquelle nous ne voulons pas revenir, ni au propre ni au figuré, j'aimerais apporter les précisions suivantes.

164. Si nous adoptons la motion présentée par le représentant du Mali, cela signifiera que le projet de résolution dans son ensemble aussi bien que chacune de ses parties, chacune de ses virgules — si un vote séparé est demandé sur une virgule —, sera adopté à la majorité simple.

165. Je répète: si nous adoptons la proposition du Mali, cela signifiera, selon l'interprétation que lui donnent l'Assemblée et son Président — et j'espère que j'interprète correctement l'intention de la délégation du Mali —, si donc cette proposition est adoptée, cela signifiera que le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis fera l'objet, dans sa totalité aussi bien que pour chacune des parties qui pourront être mises aux voix séparément, d'un vote à la majorité simple.

166. Si je me trompais, j'aimerais que la question soit tirée au clair avant le vote. Mais je pense que ce que je viens de dire est évident; si je l'ai cependant fait, c'est pour éviter tout malentendu après le vote, comme cela s'est produit la semaine dernière.

167. Le PRESIDENT: Le représentant des Etats-Unis n'insiste pas pour que l'on vote sur sa motion en priorité. En conséquence, je vais mettre aux voix la motion du représentant du Mali. Il est bien entendu que si cette motion est adoptée, la question sera réglée à la majorité simple.

168. M. MOROZOV (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Je vous demanderai, Monsieur le Président, de m'excuser mais vous parlez magnifiquement une langue dont j'ai récemment seulement abordé l'étude. Aussi suis-je obligé de vérifier parfois si j'ai bien compris ce que vous venez de dire. Dans l'interprétation qui a été faite en langue russe de votre dernière intervention, je ne vous ai pas entendu confirmer que, au cas où la proposition du représentant du Mali serait adoptée, cela signifiera que le projet de résolution dans son ensemble ainsi que n'importe laquelle de ses parties qui fera l'objet d'un vote séparé seront adoptés à la majorité simple.

169. Je n'ai malheureusement pas d'écouteurs pour vérifier maintenant comment ma propre intervention vous est interprétée en français. S'il n'existe pas de divergence de vues entre nous, je vous prierai de m'excuser et je m'excuserai en même temps auprès de l'Assemblée d'avoir pris à nouveau la parole.

170. Le PRESIDENT: Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a exactement compris ce que j'ai dit. J'invite maintenant l'Assemblée à voter sur la motion soumise par le représentant du Mali, visant à ce que, lors du vote sur le projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 et Add.1 — et sur tous les éléments de ce projet —, le principe de la majorité simple soit appliqué. On a demandé le vote par appel nominal.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par la Syrie, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Syrie, Tunisie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, Burundi, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, République centrafricaine, Ceylan, Tchad, Congo (Brazzaville), Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Grèce, Guinée, Hongrie, Inde, Irak, Côte d'Ivoire, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Malawi, Mali, Mauritanie, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Soudan.

Votent contre: Thaïlande, Turquie, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Uruguay, Venezuela, Argentine, Australie, Autriche, Belgique, Bolivie, Brésil, Canada, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Costa Rica, Danemark, République Dominicaine, Equateur, El Salvador, Finlande, France, Guatemala, Honduras, Islande, Iran, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Japon, Laos, Luxembourg, Mexique, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Norvège, Panama, Paraguay, Pérou, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Espagne, Suède.

S'abstiennent: Trinité-et-Tobago, Haïti, Madagascar, Malaisie.

Par 59 voix contre 45, avec 4 abstentions, la motion est adoptée.

171. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de passer au vote sur le projet de résolution qui figure au document A/L.476/Rev.1 et Add.1, j'aimerais attirer l'attention des membres de l'Assemblée sur le rapport de la Cinquième Commission [A/6134], qui expose les incidences financières des recommandations du Comité spécial figurant au paragraphe 109 du chapitre 1er de son rapport [A/6000/Rev.1], recommandations qui, à ce que je crois savoir, sont reprises dans le projet de résolution. D'autre part, certains représentants ayant demandé à expliquer leur vote avant le scrutin, je vais leur donner la parole.

172. M. EDWARDSSEN (Norvège) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais exposer brièvement notre position à l'égard du projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis [A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1 et Rev.1/Add.1]. Mais auparavant je tiens à déclarer que nous avons voté contre la motion qui vient d'être adoptée parce que nous considérons que le projet de résolution sur lequel nous allons voter est très important. L'Assemblée vient de décider qu'il ne s'agissait pas d'une question "importante" au sens que la Charte donne à ce mot et je ne sais pas quelles conclusions mon Gouvernement tirera de cette décision.

173. Nous aurions voulu voter pour le projet de résolution car nous approuvons les objectifs proposés par les auteurs qui aspirent à mettre fin au colonialisme. Dans le passé, la délégation norvégienne a voté pour la principale résolution relative à l'application de la déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, résolution qui demande notamment au Comité spécial de poursuivre son importante mission. Toutefois, nous regrettons de devoir dire que, cette année, le projet de résolution présente certains aspects que nous ne pouvons pas accepter.

174. Tout d'abord, l'avant-dernier paragraphe du préambule contient une affirmation générale qui reflète le Chapitre VII de la Charte dans la mesure où il est dit que "la persistance du régime colonial ... constitue(nt) une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales". La position de la Norvège à cet égard est bien connue. Elle estime que, conformément à l'Article 39 de la Charte, c'est au Conseil de sécurité qu'il appartient de déterminer qu'il existe une menace à la paix.

175. En outre, certains paragraphes du dispositif présentent des difficultés pour ma délégation. Il semble ressortir du paragraphe 11 que les Etats Membres sont invités à appliquer des sanctions économiques à certains pays. Mon Gouvernement soutient que c'est là encore une prérogative du Conseil de sécurité.

176. Enfin, dans la demande faite, de façon générale, aux puissances coloniales de "démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles", on ne tient pas compte de l'opinion et de l'attitude des habitants des territoires intéressés. En conséquence, ma délégation ne peut pas l'accepter.

177. La Norvège devra donc s'abstenir lors du vote sur le projet de résolution soumis à l'Assemblée.

178. M. MELLBIN (Danemark) [traduit de l'anglais]: La position du Danemark à l'égard des problèmes de décolonisation a toujours été celle d'un pays épris de progrès et nous sommes fermement convaincus que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a un rôle extrêmement important à jouer dans le processus de décolonisation. C'est pourquoi, nous avons appuyé le projet de création du Comité spécial et toutes les résolutions visant à proroger son mandat ainsi que celles qui déterminaient les grandes lignes de la politique de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en ce qui concerne les problèmes coloniaux. En outre, nous avons eu le privilège de siéger au sein de ce Comité pendant quelques années et nous espérons qu'en participant à ses importants travaux, nous avons également apporté une contribution positive, bien que modeste, à son œuvre. Nous estimons nous aussi que le Comité doit poursuivre sa tâche.

179. C'est donc avec le plus profond regret que ma délégation ne pourra pas se prononcer en faveur du projet de résolution tel qu'il nous est présenté dans le document A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1, et Rev.1/Add.1. Ce projet va beaucoup plus loin que toutes les résolutions antérieures relatives à la question générale de la décolonisation et il soulève de nombreuses questions offrant matière à controverse. Il y a naturellement dans ce projet un certain nombre de paragraphes que nous sommes en mesure d'appuyer, comme le prouve nettement notre vote sur les résolutions des sessions précédentes relatives au problème général du colonialisme. Mais nous ne pouvons pas appuyer le présent projet de résolution. Je ne mentionnerai que nous principales objections.

180. Nous ne pouvons pas accepter la constatation trop générale de l'existence d'une menace à la paix et à la sécurité qui ressort du neuvième considérant. Nous pensons que le paragraphe 11 du dispositif n'est pas de la compétence de l'Assemblée générale. Nous ne pouvons pas appuyer la demande faite aux puissances coloniales aux termes du paragraphe 12 du dispositif — notamment parce que nous croyons qu'elle a pour but non pas la décolonisation mais quelque chose de tout à fait différent. Nous ne pensons pas que l'Assemblée générale puisse ou doive, comme il est suggéré au paragraphe 13 du dispositif, déléguer son pouvoir de faire des recommandations au Conseil de sécurité.

181. Telles sont les raisons qui détermineront aujourd'hui le vote du Danemark — lequel n'indique nullement un changement d'attitude du gouvernement qui appuiera toujours sincèrement le processus de décolonisation.

182. M. ZOHRAB (Nouvelle-Zélande) [traduit de l'anglais]: La délégation néo-zélandaise regrette de devoir dire qu'elle votera contre le projet de résolution [A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1 et Rev.1/Add.1] relatif à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Je ne parlerai pas de la question de principe et de procédure qui vient de faire l'objet d'un long débat.

183. Notre vote contre la proposition du Mali indique nettement quelle est notre position et il est je crois conforme aux dispositions de la Charte. Nous n'avons jamais, dans le passé, voté contre les projets de résolution qui visaient à mettre la Déclaration en œuvre — notamment celui qui prorogeait le mandat du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre. La Nouvelle-Zélande a constamment défendu la Déclaration, elle s'est efforcée sincèrement de la mettre en œuvre dans les quelques îles qu'elle administre encore et elle a apprécié dans une large mesure le travail accompli par les membres du Comité spécial de décolonisation. Le Comité s'est, je crois, réuni plus souvent au cours de l'année dernière ou de ces dix-huit derniers mois que n'importe quel autre organe politique des Nations Unies et ses membres, sous la présidence de l'éminent représentant du Mali, ont dû prendre connaissance d'une multitude de documents sur des dizaines de territoires. Si l'on ne peut toujours se rallier à leurs conclusions, on ne peut qu'admirer leur dévouement et c'est pourquoi la délégation néo-zélandaise leur rend hommage.

184. Bref, l'opposition de la Nouvelle-Zélande à ce projet de résolution n'est pas une opposition à la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration ou à la prorogation du mandat du Comité spécial — nous les appuyons l'un et l'autre. Notre opposition doit être interprétée comme une protestation que nous élevons parce que l'on n'a pas su établir une distinction entre les diverses situations coloniales — et ceci est plus sensible ici, nous semble-t-il, que dans les résolutions analogues adoptées dans le passé. On le constate particulièrement dans le neuvième considérant, mais également dans d'autres paragraphes. La délégation néo-zélandaise ne conteste pas qu'il y ait lieu d'appliquer, par exemple, une grande partie de ce qui est dit du colonialisme dans ce projet de résolution à la situation au Sud-Ouest africain, pour ne citer qu'un exemple, elle conteste qu'il en soit de même pour les îles Tokélaou placées sous administration néo-zélandaise.

185. Ce cas particulier nous servira d'exemple pour faire mieux comprendre la question. Les îles Tokelau sont un archipel constitué par trois petits anneaux de sable de corail situés dans le Pacifique à quelque cinq cents kilomètres au nord de Samoa. La surface totale des terres est d'environ dix kilomètres carrés. La population compte à peu près deux mille âmes. En aucun point, les flots ne s'élèvent à plus de cinq mètres au-dessus du niveau de la mer, si bien qu'ils risquent à tout moment d'être submergés par des vagues sismiques. Ces îles ont peu de possibilité de développement économique et leur économie est subventionnée par la Nouvelle-Zélande. Il n'y a pas de présence "coloniale" permanente en tant que telle dans les îles, et la plupart du temps la population administre ses affaires au moyen de conseils locaux. La seule présence militaire est celle d'un hydravion de la Royal New Zealand Air Force venant de temps à autre chercher des malades qui ont besoin de soins ou d'un navire de la Marine chargé de faire sauter un récif afin d'ouvrir un passage aux bateaux des insulaires.

186. Les 2 000 habitants des îles ont, bien entendu, le droit de décider de leur sort, y compris le droit d'accéder à l'indépendance — aussi irréalisable que cela puisse être dans la pratique — et le droit de devenir membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies tout aussi bien que n'importe quel groupe d'habitants de la région. La population aussi bien que les gouvernements intéressés ont rejeté toute idée d'association sous quelque forme que ce soit — même s'ils recevaient une subvention de la Nouvelle-Zélande — avec leurs voisins, le Samoa occidental et les îles Cook. Leur sort est donc toujours incertain. Nombre d'habitants des Tokelau semblent rêver au jour où ils pourront s'installer dans d'autres archipels ou en Nouvelle-Zélande. Les auteurs de la résolution dont nous sommes saisis peuvent-ils nous demander de voter pour un texte qui affirme, aux termes de son neuvième considérant, que l'existence de cette situation constitue une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et un crime contre l'humanité? Nous pensons que telle n'était pas l'intention des auteurs du projet de résolution. Ils se préoccupent, à juste titre, de la situation en Afrique du Sud, et c'est en tenant compte de cette situation que les spécialistes lisent ce projet de résolution. Mais, hors de l'Assemblée, on pensera que des constatations générales telles que celles qui figurent dans le neuvième considérant, sans aucune phrase explicative, s'appliquent à toutes les colonies, y compris par exemple les îles Tokelau. On peut naturellement voter pour une résolution en faisant des réserves mentales ou sans la prendre au sérieux. Mais ce n'est ni honnête ni utile pour les peuples intéressés ou pour l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Ma délégation estime que si l'Assemblée n'est pas disposée à établir des distinctions, si elle recourt aux formules toutes faites et aux généralisations, elle jettera le discrédit sur son œuvre et le mandat qu'elle a reçu de contribuer à la décolonisation, aux derniers stades du processus, sera remis en question.

187. La Nouvelle-Zélande se félicite tout particulièrement de constater, au paragraphe 8 du dispositif, que le Comité spécial sera prié de porter une attention particulière aux petits territoires. Mais nous ne pensons pas que les divers paragraphes du projet de résolution, qui ne savent pas établir de distinction, soient, pour cette demande, un contexte satisfaisant. En conséquence, nous ne pouvons pas appuyer le projet de résolution tel qu'il est rédigé.

188. Le PRESIDENT: J'invite l'Assemblée à voter sur le projet de résolution des 33 puissances [A/L.476/Rev.1 et Add.1]. On a demandé le vote par division pour le neuvième considérant et pour les paragraphes 12 et 13.

189. S'il n'y a pas d'objections, je mettrai successivement aux voix les parties du projet pour lesquelles on a demandé un vote séparé.

Par 63 voix contre 16, avec 22 abstentions, le neuvième considérant est adopté.

Par 49 voix contre 37, avec 18 abstentions, le paragraphe 12 est adopté.

Par 66 voix contre 15, avec 24 abstentions, le paragraphe 13 est adopté.

190. Le PRESIDENT: Je mets aux voix l'ensemble du projet de résolution. On a demandé le vote par appel nominal.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par la République centrafricaine, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: République centrafricaine, Tchad, Chili, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), Congo (République démocratique du), Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Grèce, Guinée, Haïti, Hongrie, Inde, Iran, Irak, Israël, Côte d'Ivoire, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Laos, Liban, Libéria, Libye, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaisie, Mali, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Niger, Nigeria, Pakistan, Pérou, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Soudan, Syrie, Thaïlande, Tunisie, Turquie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Argentine, Bolivie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, Burundi, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cameroun.

Votent contre: Nouvelle-Zélande, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Australie.

S'abstiennent: Chine, Costa Rica, Danemark, République Dominicaine, El Salvador, Finlande, France, Guatemala, Honduras, Islande, Irlande, Italie, Japon, Luxembourg, Pays-Bas, Nicaragua, Norvège, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Espagne, Suède, Trinité-et-Tobago, Autriche, Belgique, Brésil, Canada.

Par 74 voix contre 6, avec 27 abstentions, l'ensemble du projet de résolution est adopté.

191. Le PRESIDENT: Je vais donner successivement la parole aux représentants qui désirent expliquer leur vote.

192. M. DIAZ GONZALEZ (Venezuela) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Nous considérons que le paragraphe 10 du projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 et Add.1 que nous venons de voter se rapporte à l'aide prévue par les dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies. Si l'on avait voté par division sur ce paragraphe, nous nous serions abstenus.

193. Nous nous serions également abstenus sur le paragraphe 11 parce que nous considérons, comme nous l'avons dit à d'autres occasions, que la décision de prendre des sanctions contre un Etat Membre ne peut être prise que par le Conseil de sécurité conformément aux dispositions de la Charte.

194. Nous avons voté contre le paragraphe 12 pour des raisons qui sont bien connues de tous. Notre position n'a pas changé, nous l'avons exposée à maintes reprises. Nous ne pouvons pas admettre que, sous prétexte d'anticolonialisme, on introduise, dans un projet de résolution relatif à des questions coloniales, des questions marginales ou même totalement étrangères à ce domaine afin d'obliger les Etats qui sont anticolonialistes par essence et non pour de simples raisons politiques ou de propagande à voter des mesures qui favorisent d'autres Etats et non les peuples colonisés.

195. Nous avons voté pour le projet de résolution dans son ensemble parce qu'il contient des principes que nous avons toujours défendus et parce qu'il apporte de nouveaux éléments qui nous paraissent justes, notamment le paragraphe 5 du dispositif. Il y est fait appel aux puissances coloniales pour qu'elles mettent fin à leur politique qui viole les droits des peuples coloniaux par l'afflux systématique d'immigrants étrangers et par la dispersion, la déportation et le transfert des autochtones.

196. Nous interprétons ce paragraphe comme s'appliquant à toutes les catégories d'immigrants étrangers quelle que soit leur origine. Il faut, à notre avis, que l'Organisation des Nations Unies se préoccupe du sort des populations autochtones de certaines colonies. Son devoir fondamental est de protéger ces populations. L'indépendance seule ne suffit pas. Si nous laissons ces populations à la merci d'un nouveau colonialisme reposant sur une société où règnent un système de castes et le racisme, au lendemain même de leur accession à l'indépendance, ces populations autochtones seront soumises à l'autorité de la majorité étrangère.

197. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit donc penser à assurer la protection des populations autochtones contre ces communautés étrangères qui désirent allier la domination politique à la supériorité économique dont elles jouissent déjà grâce à la connivence des puissances coloniales, sous prétexte d'appliquer le principe "un homme, une voix". Ces communautés ont même pris les armes pour soutenir le colonisateur contre les populations autochtones d'Afrique, comme le prouvent les comptes rendus des séances que le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre a tenues dans cette région et en particulier les déclarations des pétitionnaires qu'il a entendus.

198. Je demande, en terminant, que mon explication de vote figure in extenso dans le compte rendu de la présente séance et à cette fin j'en remettrai le texte au Secrétariat.

199. M. PATRICIO (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a voté contre le projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1 et Rev.1/Add.1 pour des raisons qui ressortent du texte même de la résolution. Cette résolution fait mention de mon pays d'une façon discriminatoire injustifiée et absolument inadmissible. Elle contient en outre des paragraphes que ma délégation ne peut pas accepter parce qu'ils constituent une violation flagrante des principes énoncés par la Charte. Ma délégation proteste énergiquement contre les tentatives réitérées d'ingérence dans les affaires qui concernent la structure constitutionnelle de mon pays et contre l'obstination que l'on met à nous accuser de porter atteinte à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, malgré les conclusions du Conseil de sécurité.

200. A ce propos, dans un souci d'exactitude, ma délégation souhaite préciser nettement qu'il n'y a nulle part de bases militaires dans nos provinces portugaises d'Angola, de Mozambique ou de Guinée portugaise, comme on l'a prétendu dans cette enceinte. Les forces portugaises de sécurité que l'on peut trouver dans ces provinces sont là afin de protéger les populations contre les actes de violence auxquels ils peuvent être soumis par des éléments de l'extérieur.

201. Chacun connaît l'opinion de ma délégation sur la question de la décolonisation; elle est malheureusement souvent mal interprétée. Il ne serait donc pas déplacé de rappeler à l'Assemblée que ma délégation a toujours favorisé la décolonisation dans les régions où le colonialisme sévit vraiment. Mais ma délégation regrette que l'Organisation n'examine jamais les situations vraiment coloniales qui existent aujourd'hui dans le monde. Ma délégation a le regret de constater que l'on ferme les yeux sur de nombreux cas d'injustice flagrante, qui réclament réparation et remède, uniquement parce que certaines puissances veulent camoufler les objectifs politiques de leur politique étrangère.

202. Il n'est peut-être pas trop tard pour espérer que l'on comblera cette lacune dans un proche avenir.

203. M. GIMENEZ MELO (Argentine) [traduit de l'espagnol]: L'Argentine a adopté une ligne de conduite sans équivoque en appuyant toujours l'action décolonisatrice de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, action fondée sur les principes essentiels de la Charte et consacrée par la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. C'est pourquoi elle a voté pour le projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 et Add.1 qui approuve, en termes généralement mesurés et justes, l'action du Comité spécial et appuie les efforts qu'il pourra déployer à l'avenir pour mettre fin au colonialisme en tant lieu et sous toutes ses formes.

204. Toutefois, si elle avait eu la possibilité de se prononcer séparément sur d'autres paragraphes, ma délégation se serait abstenue sur le paragraphe 10, parce qu'il prête à confusion entre les prétendus mouvements de libération nationale généralement fomentés de l'étranger dans une intention qui n'est pas toujours de promouvoir l'indépendance et les véritables mouvements révolutionnaires des peuples, et sur le paragraphe 11 parce qu'il enlève aux peuples des petits pays, qui ne sont pas responsables de la politique de leurs gouvernements, la possibilité de bénéficier de l'aide au développement économique et social.

205. Sur le paragraphe 12, la délégation argentine s'est abstenue parce que, comme elle l'a dit à maintes reprises, elle considère que, bien que l'existence de bases militaires puisse, dans certains cas, constituer un obstacle au processus normal d'accès à l'indépendance d'un territoire, c'est aux futures autorités de ce territoire que revient le droit souverain de prendre une décision en la matière.

206. Avec ces réserves qui impliquent une abstention sur les paragraphes 10 et 11, ma délégation a appuyé avec satisfaction un projet qui réaffirme la décision de la majorité des Etats Membres de poursuivre sans relâche la tâche qui doit leur permettre de liquider le colonialisme.

207. Lord CARADON (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais tout d'abord dire un mot du vote auquel nous avons procédé au début de l'après-midi sur la proposition dont les auteurs prétendent que la résolution que nous venons d'adopter ne constitue pas une question importante au sens de la Charte. C'est ce qui découle de la décision de ne pas appliquer au vote sur la résolution la règle de la majorité des deux tiers. Je dois avouer que j'ai été étonné de voir tant de représentants appuyer cette proposition. Quant à moi, il me semble évident, comme le penseront beaucoup d'autres, hors de cette enceinte et ici même, que la question qui fait l'objet de nos débats est une question importante et le nier est à mon avis diminuer de valeur des résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée.

208. Pour des raisons que nous avons souvent exposées par ailleurs, nous ne pouvons pas approuver certaines parties de la résolution et en conséquence nous avons voté contre le projet dans son ensemble.

209. Je ne veux pas en rester là. Je ne voudrais pas que l'on puisse croire que, dans un domaine aussi important, qui intéresse mon pays autant qu'aucun autre pays au monde, nous avons adopté une attitude et une politique négatives. Bien au contraire. Nos principes et nos objectifs sont clairs et ils sont tout à fait positifs; partout où nous avons eu à porter le fardeau de la responsabilité, nous les avons poursuivis opiniâtement.

210. Nous croyons qu'aucune nation, aucun peuple, aucune race ne doit se laisser dominer par une autre nation, un autre peuple, une autre race.

211. Nous croyons que toutes les nations doivent pouvoir librement forger leur destin.

212. Nous croyons qu'il faut mettre fin au colonialisme aussi rapidement que possible.

213. Nous croyons que ce processus devrait être mis en œuvre en consultation avec les peuples des pays intéressés.

214. Nous croyons que les besoins et les aspirations de ces peuples devraient passer avant tout.

215. Nous croyons qu'il faut leur donner les moyens de prendre un nouveau départ, dans les meilleures perspectives de progrès économique, avec un système satisfaisant de gouvernement représentatif.

216. Nous croyons que, dans les petits territoires coloniaux dispersés qui existent encore, il faut appliquer les principes et les méthodes dans lesquels nous avons confiance, eux et nous.

217. Grâce à cette politique, nous avons, en moins de 20 ans, mené 26 nations à l'indépendance, nations dont la population représente plus d'un cinquième de la population mondiale. Et aujourd'hui, à peine plus de 1 p. 100 de la population totale du Commonwealth, qui compte 750 millions d'habitants, vit dans des territoires non autonomes et dépendants.

218. Nous sommes résolus à traiter ce 1 p. 100 comme les 99 p. 100 qui sont déjà libres, à aborder honnêtement et sans crainte, dans le respect de leurs aspirations et de leurs intérêts, les problèmes qui se posent à ces populations. Nous achèverons notre tâche comme nous l'avons commencée et comme nous l'avons accomplie jusqu'à présent.

219. Voilà ce que j'avais à dire des résultats obtenus dans le passé. Permettez-moi d'ajouter quatre observations en ce qui concerne l'avenir.

220. Tout d'abord, je respecte les sentiments très vifs qui sont exprimés dans cette résolution, particulièrement par les représentants des pays qui ont réussi à se libérer honorablement du statut colonial. Nous sommes quelquefois en désaccord avec eux sur les méthodes, mais nous sommes en plein accord avec eux sur les objectifs. Ils ne mettront pas en doute, j'espère, que nous partageons leur haine intense de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale et de domination raciale.

221. Deuxièmement, je suis certain que ceux qui expriment ces vifs sentiments comprendront que dans les territoires coloniaux qui existent encore, il subsiste des difficultés réelles, variées et d'un caractère particulier que les grandes déclarations ou les séparations brutales ne réussiront pas à éliminer. Il existe des difficultés réelles et il faut poursuivre les consultations et les entretiens avec les peuples de ces territoires si l'on veut éviter toute injustice et si l'on veut que leur avenir soit un avenir fécond, un avenir de progrès pacifique et de coopération économique.

222. Troisièmement, nous rejetons en grande partie les critiques formulées qui parfois, comme celles, que font régulièrement les états totalitaires, vont à l'encontre des intérêts et des aspirations des peuples intéressés. Cependant, nous avons toujours patiemment tenté d'expliquer et de justifier nos actions et notre politique. Nous continuerons de le faire.

223. Quatrièmement, nous reconnaissons volontiers que ce n'est pas par des mots mais par des actes qu'il faut prouver ce que nous disons et ce que nous prétendons. Mon pays est fier, à juste titre, de ce qu'il a fait en matière d'affranchissement et de libération. Mais bien que nous ayons déjà parcouru la plus grande partie du chemin que nous nous sommes assigné, nous y trouverons encore certaines des plus sérieuses pierres d'achoppement et quelques-uns des problèmes les plus difficiles à résoudre. Nous avons montré, et nous continuerons de montrer, par nos actes que nous pensons tout ce que nous disons. Il va falloir surmonter les dernières épreuves. Nous sommes résolus à les surmonter car nous savons, pour reprendre des paroles célèbres, que ce qui importe ce n'est pas d'entreprendre de grandes choses mais "que c'est en persévérant dans l'accomplissement d'une tâche jusqu'à ce qu'elle ait été menée à bien que l'on connaît la véritable gloire".

224. Que ce soit en Rhodésie, en Guyane britannique, à Aden ou dans plus d'une vingtaine de petits pays disséminés dans le monde entier, partout on s'attend à juste titre à nous voir prouver que nous poursuivons fidèlement la politique que nous préconisons — politique qui a été mise à l'épreuve et qui s'est révélée sûre et juste.

225. Nous avons l'obligation de prouver par une action positive et urgente que justice sera faite à tous, que la liberté de choix sera donnée à tous et qu'il en sera fait selon les vœux des populations.

226. Nous n'ignorons pas les difficultés que nous avons encore à vaincre. Nous savons fort bien que la tâche ne sera pas facile et nous connaissons les obstacles et les dangers qu'il nous faudra surmonter. Nous sommes résolus à y faire face et nous sommes résolus à les surmonter. Nous n'esquivons pas nos responsabilités et nous le prouverons dans la pratique, je vous en donne l'assurance. Nous mènerons à bien la tâche qui nous reste à accomplir pour atteindre les objectifs qui nous sont, je crois, communs à tous.

227. M. LOPEZ VILLAMIL (Honduras) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Si le neuvième considérant du projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 et Add.1 ainsi que les paragraphes 12 et 13 de son dispositif avaient été rejetés, ma délégation aurait été disposée à voter pour le projet de résolution dont le texte aurait alors eu un caractère absolument et authentiquement anticolonialiste. Telle est la position que ma délégation a toujours adoptée au sein des Nations Unies, et telle sera sa position à l'avenir.

228. On a tenté d'insinuer, à propos de ce que nous avons dit de l'intégrité de la Charte, que nous nous faisons en quelque sorte les avocats du colonialisme. Cela non plus nous ne pourrions jamais l'accepter. Je ne voudrais pas mentionner la phrase qui dit que "le diable paie bien ceux qui le servent bien", mais la politique étrangère de tous les pays, quand elle est fondée sur des principes, ne peut pas être mal interprétée par ceux qui refusent de respecter l'intégrité avec laquelle certains ont appuyé honnêtement pendant plus de 20 ans, au sein de l'Organisation, des projets de résolution présentés sous une forme pertinente.

229. Nous sommes contre le colonialisme quand il s'agit de véritable colonialisme et non lorsque l'anticolonialisme cherche à dissimuler d'autres intentions et quand ceux qui ont ces intentions ne sont pas précisément les pays qui ont subi le colonialisme sous quelque forme que ce soit mais ceux qui l'imposent à l'aide de forces d'occupation ou de doctrines totalitaires très éloignées des principes de la Charte.

230. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: En expliquant le vote de ma délégation sur le projet de résolution contenu dans le document A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1 et Rev.1/Add.1, je voudrais tout d'abord déclarer que nous approuvons les vues exprimées par le représentant des Etats-Unis à propos des principes sur lesquels se fonde sa position en ce qui concerne le vote. Il serait présomptueux de ma part de vouloir développer les arguments présentés par ce juriste de réputation mondiale, la réputation dont il jouit donne à ses observations une valeur toute particulière. En dehors de ce que l'on pourrait appeler les aspects de l'avis juridique sur les diverses questions en cause, on sent dans tout ce qu'il dit une compréhension et une connaissance personnelle et profonde des principes et du cheminement de la pensée dans l'esprit des hommes libres qui ont abouti à l'élaboration des concepts juridiques et des concepts d'ordre et de progrès qui sont le fondement des grands jugements. De plus, naturellement, M. Goldberg est pour nous un homme profondément attaché à l'Organisation des Nations Unies et le représentant d'un pays qui se consacre non seulement à la défense des idéaux et des objectifs de l'Organisation et de la Charte, mais au maintien, à tout prix, de l'idée que représente l'Organisation.

231. Cette idée constitue l'essence même de ce que je voudrais dire brièvement aujourd'hui. Née, comme je l'ai déjà dit et comme nous le savons tous, de la souffrance commune de l'humanité pour répondre à l'espoir commun de tous les hommes, quels que soient la couleur de leur peau, leurs croyances religieuses, le cours de l'histoire qui les a faits ce qu'ils sont, l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit avant tout défendre la suprématie du droit, la modération, la paix et la subordination, chaque fois qu'elle est nécessaire, de toutes nos étroites aspirations individuelles, locales et nationales aux idéaux qui appartiennent à tous les hommes et qui sont représentés ici.

232. Tout ceci ne saurait changer, mais 20 ans se sont écoulés depuis la signature de la Charte, 20 ans au cours desquels nous avons pensé d'une certaine façon et en certains termes, nous rapprochant ainsi de nos objectifs. Ces façons de penser et les termes dans lesquels elles ont été formulées nous ont été très utiles, mais le monde a évolué depuis lors et l'Organisation des Nations Unies a reflété certains de ses changements. Dans quelle mesure l'ont-elles vraiment fait, cela est affaire d'opinion et de conjecture. Mais je crois qu'aujourd'hui on paralyserait autant le progrès en restant fidèle aux attitudes et aux devises qui nous ont été si utiles autrefois qu'on l'aurait paralysé autrefois en ne les adoptant pas.

233. En premier lieu, dans la résolution que nous venons d'adopter, on aborde de la même façon toutes les situations qui peuvent se présenter dans le monde leur donnant ainsi, malgré la diversité fondamentale de leur nature, une seule et même apparence. Or, cette apparence unique n'existe pas. Il n'y a pas une situation, coloniale ou autre — en l'occurrence coloniale —, exactement semblable à une autre situation. Il est vrai que certaines situations ont des éléments communs. Il est également vrai qu'il y a des situations, visées implicitement, du moins, dans la résolution, qui n'ont aucun point commun avec d'autres situations visées, implicitement elles aussi, et qui en sont à vrai dire aussi différentes que le jour de la nuit.

234. Ne vous méprenez pas sur ce que je vais vous dire brièvement. C'est le fruit des longues réflexions de ma délégation et, permettez-moi de le dire, d'une expérience en la matière qui n'est pas négligeable. Cela vient également de la conviction profonde et constante que tous les hommes sont frères. Cela vient également de l'importance capitale que nous attachons à la dignité de l'homme, à la vie de l'homme et à la liberté de l'homme, et ces convictions sont aussi inséparables de la conception que le peuple australien se fait de la vie et du monde que le soleil l'est de la lumière. Cela vient d'un rejet absolu des concepts racistes. Cela vient d'une absence totale du désir d'imposer notre volonté aux autres peuples, je dirai même de la volonté de ne pas le faire. Cela vient d'une absence totale de velléités expansionnistes quelles qu'elles soient, de la volonté bien arrêtée non seulement de défendre le droit que nous avons de vivre notre vie comme nous voulons la vivre dans ces circonstances, mais aussi, dans toute la mesure du possible, de défendre ces droits pour les autres peuples quels qu'ils soient et où qu'ils soient.

235. Ceci étant exposé, je vais maintenant prononcer le mot qui est au cœur même de nos débats, le mot "colonial". Ce mot signifie-t-il, à propos de toutes les associations entre pays — telle que l'association qui existe entre mon pays et certains territoires dont il a la responsabilité —, ce qu'il représentait pour nous tous dans son sens classique il y a encore quelques années? Si tel est le cas, alors, au nom de mon pays, je dois rejeter ce mot. S'il est incontestable que certains pays demeurent sous le "régime colonial", il est également incontestable que l'Australie, mentionnée implicitement, je suppose, dans la résolution parmi les "puissances coloniales", n'impose ce régime à aucun peuple.

236. On trouve dans cette résolution, comme dans les très très nombreuses autres résolutions relatives à cette question générale, des allusions à "la lutte que les peuples sous domination coloniale mènent pour l'exercice de leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance". Il n'y a rien de semblable dans les territoires australiens. Ces luttes ne sont pas nécessaires. Il y a, en revanche, des efforts déployés en commun pour atteindre des objectifs communs: l'autodétermination, l'indépendance, l'association sur un pied d'égalité entre mon Gouvernement, puissance administrante, et le peuple qu'il gouverne. Je répète: il n'y a pas de lutte parce que la lutte n'est pas nécessaire. Il y a un effort déployé en commun par deux groupes de populations qui s'efforcent, dans le respect mutuel, d'atteindre des objectifs communs.

237. Et ceci m'amène à réfléchir un instant au sens du mot "indépendance". Ce mot nous a été très utile. Ce fut pour nous la phrase qui nous a guidés. Mais l'indépendance peut revêtir bien des formes. Elle n'a pas une forme unique, immuable. Elle n'a pas un moyen unique d'expression. Elle n'est pas non plus nécessairement synonyme de la liberté individuelle telle que nous la connaissons. S'il est vrai, je pense, qu'en tant qu'idée l'indépendance peut être considérée comme la manifestation ultime de la liberté, dans la pratique beaucoup de peuples dont le pays n'a pas encore reçu ce don suprême peuvent aller et venir dans la plus grande liberté. Et il en est ainsi dans les territoires australiens. Dans ces territoires, comme je l'ai expliqué, la liberté existe et elle insufflé la vie à toute action.

238. Maintenant que je vous ai livré ces quelques sujets de méditation, je ne voudrais pas que nos amis, d'Afrique en particulier, et d'Asie également, emportent d'ici l'idée que ma délégation n'apprécie pas à leur juste valeur leurs objectifs et leurs sentiments. Ce n'est nullement le cas. En fait, si j'étais africain, je partagerai leurs sentiments sur toutes ces questions. Leur histoire suffit à me faire comprendre leurs sentiments et leurs émotions, aussi bien que leurs luttes souvent si louables. Mais je leur demande de comprendre eux aussi les conditions différentes qui règnent dans la partie du monde où je vis, c'est-à-dire dans le Pacifique. Ici, comme je l'ai expliqué, l'histoire, différente pour tous les pays, a déterminé et continue de déterminer toute la situation. En tant que puissance coloniale, si la majorité des membres insiste pour qu'on emploie ce terme — et, comme je l'ai donné à entendre, mon pays ne se considère ni comme une puissance ni comme colonial —, nous étant libérés nous-mêmes du statut colonial, nous sommes entrés dans ce domaine presque par accident et certainement pas animés du désir de nous emparer du bien d'autrui. Nous n'avons pas eu à faire à des luttes pour l'indépendance pour la simple raison que nous reconnaissons que les aspirations des peuples priment tout et que nous ne refusons pas de leur accorder le droit ou la possibilité d'agir selon leurs vœux soit dans ce domaine, soit dans d'autres domaines où ils cherchent à s'exprimer, bien au contraire.

239. Mais quels que soient les événements de l'histoire qui aient pu nous presser à agir dans le passé, la raison pour laquelle nous restons maintenant où nous sommes est simplement que nous nous sommes engagés à accomplir une tâche envers le monde, envers l'Organisation des Nations Unies, envers nous-mêmes et, ce qui est beaucoup plus important, envers le peuple d'un pays qui, tant que cette tâche n'aura pas été menée à bien ou tant qu'il ne manifestera pas lui-même le désir qu'il en soit autrement, restera notre peuple.

240. Ce que je demande, très simplement, c'est que l'on comprenne le sens profond de nos responsabilités qui, j'en suis sincèrement convaincu, plus que tout détermine notre action en matière d'administration des territoires australiens. Ceci n'est suscité en rien par un sentiment de condescendance. Ceci n'est en rien un fardeau. Ceci est une expression de notre conviction que tous les hommes sont frères. Ceci se manifeste de façon plus personnelle dans les sentiments que nous éprouvons envers des gens que pour ma part je considère comme des amis dans le sens le plus profond de ce mot.

241. Tout en approuvant en grande partie cette résolution, tout en appréciant les grands efforts déployés par le Comité spécial au sein duquel nous poursuivons nous-mêmes nos efforts, tout en comprenant et en partageant l'inquiétude, l'angoisse même de nos amis africains devant les événements du Sud-Ouest africain, l'apartheid et la politique du Portugal, nous avons dû voter contre la résolution et ceci en partie à cause du caractère général de ses observations et recommandations, qui visent tous les cas sans distinction et dont nous devons, pour notre part, comme je l'ai exposé nettement, entièrement rejeter les aspects qui nous concernent, en partie, comme l'a fait observer le représentant des Etats-Unis, parce qu'elle est contraire à la Charte et à ce que nous estimons être les méthodes et les pratiques sans lesquelles on ne saurait mettre en œuvre l'idée même que l'Organisation des Nations Unies représente et incarne; en partie parce qu'elle contient certaines dispositions que nous désapprouvons foncièrement.

242. M. DONALDSON (Trinité-et-Tobago) [traduit de l'anglais]: La situation particulière qui existe dans mon pays explique le vote de la délégation de la Trinité-et-Tobago. Avant notre accession à l'indépendance, il y avait à la Trinité-et-Tobago une base militaire et pourtant mon Gouvernement a été en mesure de négocier avec succès les conditions dans lesquelles cette base serait maintenue. Naturellement, ma délégation appuie la résolution dans son ensemble, mais compte tenu de notre expérience, nous avons dû faire des réserves en ce qui concerne le paragraphe 12 du dispositif. C'est pour cette raison et pour cette raison seulement que ma délégation a estimé nécessaire de s'abstenir.

243. M. BOTHA (Afrique du Sud) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a voté contre les paragraphes qui ont fait l'objet d'un vote par division et contre la résolution dans son ensemble. Les auteurs du projet de résolution ont jugé bon de choisir mon pays comme cible ainsi que le montrent le cinquième, le huitième et le neuvième considérants et les paragraphes 11 et 14 du dispositif. Ma délégation s'élève contre l'allégation contenue dans ces paragraphes selon laquelle l'Afrique du Sud opprimerait ces minorités et particulièrement contre l'accusation formulée dans le neuvième considérant et paragraphe 14 du dispositif selon laquelle sa politique intérieure de développement séparé menacerait la paix et la sécurité internationales et constituerait un crime contre l'humanité. Quoi qu'il en soit, les questions relatives à la paix et à la sécurité internationales relèvent de la compétence exclusive du Conseil de sécurité et par conséquent ne sont pas de la compétence de l'Assemblée.

244. Ma délégation s'élève également contre le paragraphe 11 du dispositif qui invite l'Assemblée à agir en violation des constitutions des institutions spécialisées. En outre, je tiens à déclarer, si l'on veut faire allusion à l'assistance technique et économique, que l'Afrique du Sud ne bénéficie pas de ce genre d'assistance mais qu'elle l'octroie. La mention faite à ce paragraphe de l'Afrique du Sud est donc dénuée de sens.

245. Enfin, pour ce qui est du paragraphe 3 du dispositif, ma délégation n'est pas en mesure d'approuver toutes les recommandations figurant dans le rapport du Comité spécial.

246. C'est notamment pour les raisons que je viens d'exposer que la délégation sud-africaine n'a pas été en mesure de voter pour le projet de résolution A/L.476/Rev.1 et Corr.1 et Rev.1/Add.1.

247. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Avant d'expliquer le vote de ma délégation, je voudrais souligner que, comme nous considérons que le représentant de l'Afrique du Sud est immoralement présent dans cette enceinte, nous en sommes nous-mêmes moralement absents. Nous voudrions qu'il comprenne que pendant qu'il parlait, nous étions moralement complètement absents. Nous n'étions physiquement présents que parce que notre délégation était inscrite sur la liste des orateurs juste après l'Afrique du Sud. Nous considérons que le soit-disant représentant de l'Afrique du Sud ne représente pas réellement le peuple d'Afrique du Sud mais uniquement une minorité raciste, et en conséquence nous considérons comme absolument immoral que l'Organisation autorise ce soit-disant représentant du peuple à siéger à l'Assemblée.

248. Ma délégation a voté pour la résolution contenue dans le document A/L.476/Rev.1. Nous savons que le colonialisme qui est actuellement en voie de disparition est dans une situation très difficile. Nous le savons car nous voyons en ce moment les puissances coloniales s'efforcer de dissimuler leurs intentions sous divers prétextes; elles vont parfois jusqu'à utiliser la Charte même des Nations Unies pour dissimuler leurs iniquités. Nous voyons les puissances coloniales monter à la tribune et s'efforcer de nous citer un certain nombre d'exemples qui n'ont en fait aucun rapport avec la situation actuelle. A cet égard, je voudrais parler de l'un des orateurs qui m'a précédé, un orateur qui, à diverses reprises, nous a, de cette tribune, exhorté à ce qu'il appelait la patience et qui nous rappelait aujourd'hui que son Gouvernement a octroyé l'indépendance à tant ou tant de personnes. Nous voulons qu'il sache que si son pays a donné l'indépendance à 700 millions de personnes, cela ne signifie rien pour le peuple de Zimbabwe. Si son pays a donné l'indépendance à 700 millions de personnes, cela ne signifie rien du tout pour ceux qui l'attendent encore. Ce qu'ils veulent, c'est leur indépendance.

249. Nous voulons que les puissances coloniales comprennent tout d'abord qu'elles n'auraient jamais dû avoir de colonies. Par conséquent, quand elles viennent à cette tribune et qu'elles nous parlent des pays auxquels elles ont accordé l'indépendance, cela ne nous impressionne guère. Et quant à la patience qu'elles nous demandent toujours d'avoir, nous savons naturellement ce qu'est la patience. Mais s'ils se servent de patience à leur profit, afin de pouvoir agir de connivence, comme ils le font avec Smith en Rhodésie du Sud, où nous savons les efforts que le Gouvernement britannique déploie à cette fin, alors, nous leur disons très franchement de cette tribune qu'on fait un très mauvais usage de mot "patience".

250. Ma délégation a voté pour cette résolution parce qu'elle lui paraît riche de conséquences. Certains orateurs ont essayé de démontrer que nous devons comprendre que le colonialisme en Afrique et le colonialisme en Extrême-Orient sont différents. Je voudrais que le représentant de l'Australie comprenne qu'en Afrique, en Asie, n'importe où, le colonialisme est toujours le colonialisme. Et puisqu'il s'adresse particulièrement aux Africains pour leur demander de faire un effort de compréhension, nous lui demandons aussi de comprendre une chose: nous lui demandons de comprendre que nous avons souffert du colonialisme et que c'est pour cela que nous devons parler et agir contre le colonialisme.

251. En outre, de cette tribune, j'ai posé au représentant de l'Australie une simple question qui, jusqu'à présent, n'a pas reçu de réponse. J'ai dit que les territoires qui avaient été placés sous tutelle avaient tous accédé à l'indépendance sauf — et je le répète — sauf les territoires placés sous administration australienne. Nous nous demandons évidemment pourquoi? Serait-ce que l'Australie dispense lentement son enseignement? Si l'Australie ne peut pas mener les peuples de ces territoires à l'indépendance aussi rapidement que possible, nous devons certainement dire de cette tribune qu'elle n'est pas apte à administrer les territoires sous tutelle. Nous aurions été certainement très heureux si l'Australie était venue à la tribune, au cours de la vingtième session, déclarer qu'à la suite de consultations et négociations, elle accordait l'indépendance à tel ou tel territoire. Mais tout ce que nous l'entendons dire sans cesse, c'est "patience, patience, patience". Ce que nous voulons c'est l'indépendance des peuples du monde, qu'ils soient en Nouvelle-Guinée ou dans tout autre pays.

252. Telles sont les vues de l'Afrique et je voudrais que le représentant de l'Australie les comprenne bien. Certes, de nombreuses délégations nous ont dit de cette tribune quelle sympathie elles éprouvaient pour notre cause. Je tiens toutefois à donner aux représentants l'assurance que l'Afrique ne peut plus se contenter de mots de sympathie. Nous sommes las des grands mots de sympathie qui sonnent creux. Ce que nous voulons, ce sont des actes de façon que les peuples du monde en Afrique, en Australie, en Nouvelle-Guinée ou dans quelque pays qu'ils se trouvent puissent enfin accéder à l'indépendance tout comme d'autres pays qui sont maintenant membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

253. Telles sont, en bref, les raisons pour lesquelles ma délégation a voté en faveur de la résolution, et elle espère sincèrement que les mesures qui y sont prévues seront mises en œuvre et que l'on ne maintiendra pas de bases militaires sous prétexte de nécessité ou sous tout autre prétexte. Nous espérons que la résolution sera mise à exécution, particulièrement par les puissances coloniales.

254. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la Somalie, qui désire faire une brève déclaration.

255. M. ADAN (Somalie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je tiens avant tout à dire brièvement que j'appuie tout ce qu'a dit le représentant de la Tanzanie au sujet de l'intervention du représentant du Gouvernement raciste sud-africain de la minorité blanche. La politique criminelle du Gouvernement sud-africain n'est que trop connue des membres de l'Assemblée et du monde entier et son intervention n'a donc été qu'un cri dans le désert.

256. Je voudrais tout d'abord saisir cette occasion pour féliciter le Comité spécial des recommandations extrêmement utiles qu'il a présentées dans son rapport adopté aux termes de la résolution qui a été mise aux voix tout à l'heure. L'adoption par l'Assemblée du rapport du Comité spécial est un jalon important, pour de nombreux territoires non autonomes, dans leur lutte pour l'autodétermination et l'indépendance.

257. Nous savons qu'elle apportera un espoir et un encouragement non seulement aux grands territoires coloniaux comme l'Angola, le Mozambique et la Guinée dite portugaise mais aussi à d'autres territoires tels que la Côte française des Somalis, qui continue à ronger son frein sous le régime colonialiste, et où les aspirations des peuples intéressés ne sont certes pas moins intenses que celles de leurs frères africains des autres pays.

258. Depuis qu'elle a accédé à l'indépendance, la République Somalie a demandé constamment que le peuple de la Côte française des Somalis soit autorisé à décider de son sort politique au moyen d'élections libres organisées sous les auspices des Nations Unies. Ses représentants ont soulevé la question de la Côte française des Somalis à presque toutes les conférences politiques internationales auxquelles ils ont assisté depuis 1960. La Déclaration publiée à la fin de la Conférence des chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement des pays non alignés, tenue au Caire l'année dernière, précise nettement que les habitants de ces territoires ont le droit de disposer d'eux-mêmes et de se libérer du régime colonial. Il y est dit:

"Des participants à la Conférence invitent le Gouvernement français à prendre les mesures nécessaires pour que la Côte française des Somalis devienne libre et indépendante, conformément au paragraphe 5 de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies^{2/}."

259. Ma délégation estime que la situation est telle dans la Côte française des Somalis que la question de sa libération du régime colonial doit être inscrite par priorité à l'ordre du jour du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. A la consternation des habitants de la Côte française des Somalis, le Gouvernement français a déclaré très nettement qu'il entend rester indéfiniment dans ce territoire pour des raisons politiques et économiques ainsi que pour des raisons qu'il appelle "humanitaires". Il est certainement commode pour la France de pouvoir utiliser ce territoire comme base militaire et d'en disposer pour y installer, comme elle se le propose, un émetteur radio à grande puissance qui transmettra la voix de la France. Mais les aspirations du peuple de ce territoire ne devraient pas être sacrifiées aux convenances de la puissance coloniale.

260. Dans plusieurs communications adressées au Comité spécial, le Gouvernement somali a appelé l'attention du Comité sur les graves restrictions apportées à l'exercice de la vie politique des habitants de ce territoire non autonome et sur le refus du Gouvernement français d'appliquer au territoire les dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Eu égard à la politique libérale suivie par la France dans d'autres parties de son ancien empire colonial, nous trouvons ces aspects de la question de la Côte française des Somalis extrêmement inquiétants et difficiles à comprendre.

261. Le Gouvernement somali a déjà fait connaître ses vues sur la question dans un mémorandum adressé au Comité spécial qui a été distribué à tous les Etats Membres sous la cote A/AC.109/121. Je n'ai pas l'intention de rappeler le contenu de ce mémorandum et je me contenterai de dire que mon Gouvernement estime que le peuple de la Côte française des Somalis devrait pouvoir exercer son droit à l'autodétermination conformément au vœu qu'il en a librement exprimé. Ma délégation se félicite de constater que, en comprenant la Côte française des Somalis dans la liste des territoires non autonomes auxquels s'applique la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, l'Assemblée a reconnu ce droit.

262. Ma délégation espère que le Comité spécial accordera désormais à la question de la Côte française des Somalis la priorité qu'elle mérite.

263. En concluant, je demande que ma déclaration figure dans le compte rendu in extenso des séances de l'Assemblée et qu'elle soit portée à la connaissance du Comité spécial.

264. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Australie, qui a demandé à exercer le droit de réponse.

265. M. McCARTHY (Australie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je serai bref, car je ne désire pas entamer une polémique avec le distingué représentant de la Tanzanie. Je regrette — et ceci n'est pas un reproche — qu'il n'ait pas été présent quand j'ai répondu à ses observations précédentes. Je crois savoir que ses devoirs officiels l'avaient appelé ailleurs. Je suis donc obligé non pas de reprendre ce que j'ai dit tout à l'heure, mais de rappeler brièvement une ou deux questions que j'ai invoquées tout à l'heure.

266. Ce faisant, je rappellerai que, à la Quatrième Commission, il y a quelques semaines, il a parlé des "prétendus progrès constitutionnels faits par la Nouvelle-Guinée grâce à l'Australie". J'ai longuement expliqué, ici, que ces "prétendus" progrès constitutionnels — et nous savons tous ce que signifient ces mots aux Nations Unies — étaient, en fait, le suffrage universel exercé sans distinction de race, de croyance et de couleur, une liste commune et une majorité autochtone élue. Et quand on parle de "prétendus progrès constitutionnels", je crois qu'on emploie ce terme mal à propos. Je crois également que la population de la Nouvelle-Guinée n'aimerait pas que l'on applique les mots "prétendus progrès constitutionnels" aux progrès qui caractérisent sa situation politique dont l'évolution est très rapide.

267. Mais ce que je tiens à souligner c'est que nous avons là-bas ce qu'un de nos très éminents collègues a réclamé pour la Rhodésie du Sud et d'autres régions d'Afrique — dont il se préoccupe à juste titre — comme représentant la panacée, ce qui par-dessus tout garantit l'ultime liberté des peuples. Nous avons dans ce territoire qu'il a critiqué — et je ne cherche nullement la polémique — une force qui ne permet pas de revenir en arrière, comme je l'ai dit l'autre jour encore à la Quatrième Commission [1588ème séance]. Nous avons mis en mouvement une force qui ne permet pas de revenir en arrière. Nous avons donné à la population une voix qu'on ne peut pas étouffer. Nous avons donné à la population une voix qui lui permet d'exprimer les opinions qu'elle veut exprimer, quand elle veut les exprimer.

268. Le représentant de la Tanzanie a dit qu'il était las de ce qu'il a appelé je crois, en parlant de la situation africaine, des "mots de sympathie qui sonnent creux". Ce ne sont pas des mots creux. Avant tout, ce que j'ai dit ici, je le pense sincèrement.

269. Ensuite, c'est à l'œuvre que l'on juge l'ouvrier. Nous sommes loin de l'Afrique — et l'Afrique est loin de nous — mais ceci ne signifie pas que les problèmes africains ne nous touchent pas. De tous les parlements du monde, l'un des premiers à prendre des mesures positives — en fait, toutes les mesures qu'il pouvait prendre — contre le prétendu Gouvernement de la minorité rebelle en Rhodésie du Sud a été le Parlement australien. Dans les quatre ou cinq jours qui ont suivi la Déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance, il a proclamé qu'il ne reconnaissait pas le gouvernement rebelle et il a pris toutes les mesures qui étaient alors en son pouvoir, et qu'il a, depuis, intensifiées.

270. J'ajouterai également que, comme je l'ai déjà dit dans le passé, les Africains sont les bienvenus dans mon pays. Il y a actuellement beaucoup d'Africains dans mon pays et ils y sont respectés. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, ils nous apportent beaucoup et nous espérons que, lorsqu'ils partiront, nous leur aurons également apporté quelque chose.

271. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la France, qui a demandé à exercer le droit de réponse.

272. M. GASCHIGNARD (France): En réponse à l'intervention du représentant de la Somalie, je voudrais faire connaître brièvement le point de vue du Gouvernement français sur la question de la Côte française des Somalis.

273. Lors du référendum qui s'est tenu le 28 septembre 1958, au suffrage universel, dans tous les départements et territoires français, la population de la Côte française des Somalis, en approuvant la Constitution à une majorité de 75 p. 100 des suffrages exprimés, a manifesté sa volonté de demeurer au sein de la Communauté française.

274. Le 11 décembre 1958, son Assemblée territoriale elle-même, élue librement au suffrage universel, s'est prononcée en faveur du maintien du statu quo, c'est-à-dire du statut des territoires français d'outre-mer.

275. Lors de la première de ces consultations, le 28 septembre 1958, la Côte française des Somalis aurait pu voter "non" lors du référendum sur la Constitution et devenir immédiatement indépendante. Lors du vote intervenu le 11 décembre suivant, son Assemblée territoriale aurait pu choisir le statut d'Etat membre de la Communauté, comme l'ont fait les autres territoires français d'Afrique au sud du Sahara, lesquels sont devenus indépendants deux ans plus tard et siègent aujourd'hui parmi nous.

276. Mais la Côte française des Somalis ne l'a pas voulu. Elle a préféré suivre une autre voie, celle de l'intégration à la France. C'est dire qu'elle a exercé son droit à l'autodétermination et qu'elle a fixé son destin, exactement dans les mêmes conditions que les autres territoires français d'Afrique. Au lieu de choisir soit l'indépendance immédiate, soit l'autonomie suivie de l'indépendance, elle a librement opté pour le statut, qui était déjà le sien, de collectivité territoriale de la République française dont elle fait désormais partie intégrante.

277. Dans ces conditions, toute contestation sur le statut de ce territoire nous apparaît en contradiction avec la volonté librement exprimée des populations de la Côte française des Somalis, comme une immixtion dans les affaires intérieures d'un Etat Membre, immixtion qu'interdit formellement le paragraphe 7 de l'Article 2 de la Charte.

278. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la Somalie, qui a demandé à exercer le droit de réponse.

279. M. ADAN (Somalie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je regrette de devoir reprendre la parole à cette heure tardive mais la réponse que vient de faire le représentant de la France m'y oblige.

280. Le Gouvernement somali a demandé l'inscription de la question de la Côte française des Somalis à l'ordre du jour du Comité spécial et après les observations du représentant de la France, je dois exposer les considérations qui ont incité mon Gouvernement à prendre cette mesure.

281. On se rappellera que le Gouvernement français avait reconnu que le territoire de la Côte française des Somalis était un territoire non autonome au sens du Chapitre XI de la Charte. Cependant, dans sa lettre en date du 23 mars 1959^{3/}, le Gouvernement français a prétendu que ce territoire était pleinement autonome et qu'en conséquence la France n'avait plus à communiquer de renseignements à son sujet conformément à l'Article 73, e, de la Charte.

282. Le changement constitutionnel qui, selon le Gouvernement français, transformait radicalement le statut de ce territoire et auquel le représentant de la France vient de faire allusion, est la loi-cadre du 23 juin 1956, suivie, en 1958, de la nouvelle Constitution de la Communauté française. Le référendum de 1958, organisé dans des conditions douteuses et truqué par le Gouvernement français, n'a rien changé. La Constitution demeure celle qui était fixée par la loi-cadre de 1956 et le référendum a été soigneusement organisé de façon que les résultats soient favorables à la France. En fait d'expression de la libre volonté de la population de la Côte française des Somalis, nous ne voyons qu'un simulacre et une plaisanterie.

283. Les membres de l'Assemblée se rappelleront que les débats de la Quatrième Commission ont révélé une opposition considérable à la position française. En effet, le représentant de l'Inde a fait, le 2 décembre 1959, à la 981ème séance de la Quatrième Commission, une analyse très détaillée des dispositions de la loi-cadre qui ont prouvé que le territoire demeurerait à tous égards un territoire non autonome. Les représentants de la Tchécoslovaquie et de la Pologne ont été du même avis.

284. Je ne veux pas répéter tous les arguments si bien présentés à cette occasion par le représentant de l'Inde, chacun peut les retrouver dans les comptes rendus. Mais les représentants se rappelleront que, précisément parce que l'Assemblée générale commençait à prendre conscience de la possibilité que des pays comme le Portugal et la France modifient leurs constitutions respectives afin d'éliminer toute possibilité d'intervention de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, elle a adopté, le 15 décembre 1960, la résolution 1541 (XV). Cette résolution est assortie d'une annexe intitulée "Principes qui doivent guider les Etats Membres pour déterminer si l'obligation de communiquer des renseignements prévue à l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte leur est applicable ou non". Il suffira aux membres de lire ces principes ainsi que les commentaires sur les effets de la loi-cadre du 3 juin 1956 pour conclure, inévitablement, que la Côte française des Somalis demeure un territoire non autonome auquel s'applique l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 et qui relève de la compétence du Comité spécial. Le rapport du Comité sur ce point a été adopté aujourd'hui par l'Assemblée.

285. Le Gouvernement somali a présenté au Comité des Vingt-Quatre un mémorandum sur la Côte française des Somalis dont la deuxième section est entièrement consacrée au statut constitutionnel actuel du territoire. Nous y démontrons que l'autonomie accordée au territoire est extrêmement limitée: elle ne s'étend pas, par exemple, aux relations étrangères, à la défense nationale, à la justice, à l'inspection des travaux, aux communications avec l'étranger, à l'enseignement supérieur, aux finances, au change et à bien d'autres domaines. A vrai dire, l'autonomie interne est très inférieure à celle dont jouissent nombre de colonies britanniques auxquelles, comme le reconnaît le Royaume-Uni, s'applique l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte.

286. Le Gouvernement somali a étayé sa thèse de citations empruntées à des spécialistes français du droit administratif et constitutionnel. Il n'est donc pas étonnant que le Gouvernement somali ait été convaincu que le Comité des Vingt-Quatre approuverait cette thèse et rejetterait l'argument français de la modification constitutionnelle comme fallacieux. Il n'est pas étonnant non plus que la Conférence des chefs d'Etat et de gouvernement des pays non alignés, qui s'est réunie au Caire en 1964, ait réaffirmé catégoriquement que la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale, le 14 décembre 1960, s'appliquait à la Côte française des Somalis. J'ai eu le plaisir d'en faire état il y a peu de temps.

287. Le Gouvernement somali estime donc que les Etats et même les juristes français se sont prononcés contre le Gouvernement français. Il ne s'agit pas là d'une question compliquée d'interprétation juridique; il s'agit simplement de considérer les faits. Permettez-moi de poser quelques questions au représentant de la France, qui a cherché à dénier ses droits au peuple de la Côte française des Somalis et nous verrons si, devant les faits, ses réponses sont convaincantes.

288. Le Gouvernement français prétend-il que le territoire n'est pas géographiquement séparé de la France et qu'il n'en est pas ethniquement ou culturellement distinct? Je pose cette question en pensant au quatrième des principes adoptés par l'Assemblée générale en 1960 aux termes de la résolution 1541 (XV). Le Gouvernement français veut-il faire croire que le territoire n'est pas "dans une position ou état de subordination" par rapport à la France? Les termes que j'emploie ici sont ceux du Principe V de l'Annexe à cette résolution. Le Gouvernement français prétend-il que la situation actuelle correspond au "choix libre et volontaire des populations du territoire", conformément au Principe VII?

289. Les faits montrent maintenant combien il est absurde de vouloir prouver que la Côte française des Somalis est un territoire entièrement autonome. Veut-on réellement nous faire croire que le simple fait d'envoyer un député et un sénateur à Paris mettra ces Somalis dits français sur un pied d'égalité avec la France? Veut-on réellement nous faire croire que tous les habitants du territoire participent librement et dans des conditions d'égalité aux élections? Il serait intéressant de comparer les résultats du recensement et la liste des électeurs? Que fait l'armée française, en force, à Djibouti? Faut-il comprendre que nous nous trouvons en face des Somalis dits français, vêtus d'uniformes français et prêts à défendre leur soit-disant autonomie contre tout acte d'agression venu de la méchante Somalie?

290. Tous les membres de l'Assemblée ne comprendront que trop bien, j'en suis persuadé, combien tout ceci est absurde. Nous savons qu'au moment du référendum on a fait taire le peuple du territoire, le Premier Ministre somali a été exilé avec son Cabinet et l'Assemblée législative a été dissoute uniquement pour avoir osé faire campagne contre la position du Gouvernement français qui demandait un "oui" au référendum. Chacun le sait. Ceci est déjà de l'histoire.

291. A vrai dire, je devrais m'excuser auprès de l'Assemblée pour lui avoir fait perdre du temps en lui démontrant ce qui était évident. J'espère toutefois qu'elle n'hésitera pas à rejeter les allégations du représentant de la France.

292. Je me réserve de revenir sur cette question si cela est nécessaire.

293. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la Tanzanie, qui a demandé à exercer le droit de réponse.

294. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je dois, à mon tour, m'excuser auprès des délégations si je prolonge encore le débat. Je n'avais nullement l'intention de revenir à cette tribune. Je voulais simplement expliquer mon vote mais maintenant que le représentant de l'Australie a cru devoir me répondre, je crois devoir lui répondre à mon tour.

295. Tout d'abord, il a dit que ma délégation en parlant des modifications constitutionnelles les avaient qualifiées de "prétendues" modifications constitutionnelles. Ce sont bien en effet les mots que nous avons employés pour la simple raison qu'aujourd'hui, 20 ans après que ces territoires ont été placés sous tutelle, l'Australie nous dit encore qu'elle procède à des modifications constitutionnelles. Nous commençons vraiment à nous demander s'il s'agit bien de modifications constitutionnelles ou de manœuvres visant à retarder le moment où ces pays accéderont à l'indépendance.

296. En second lieu, le représentant de l'Australie a dit que son pays avait été le premier à prendre des mesures contre Smith. Or, avant même que Smith ait déclaré son indépendance, l'Afrique, je voudrais que le représentant de l'Australie le comprenne, avait déjà fait savoir au monde que les mesures prises par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni — et par l'Australie — n'étaient pas suffisantes. Je voudrais donc que l'on comprenne bien que la Tanzanie n'a guère à savoir gré à l'Australie d'avoir pris ces mesures.

297. Enfin, le représentant de l'Australie a tenu à faire ressortir que quelques Africains font leurs études en Australie. Je reconnais, certes, qu'un certain nombre d'étudiants de Tanzanie poursuivent leurs études en Australie, non seulement en Australie mais dans d'autres parties du monde, mais le lien qui peut exister entre le colonialisme et les étudiants tanzaniens qui se trouvent en Australie m'échappe. J'ose espérer que le représentant de l'Australie ne pense pas que la Tanzanie appuiera le colonialisme australien en Nouvelle-Guinée uniquement parce qu'une poignée d'étudiants tanzaniens se trouve actuellement en Australie. Nous espérons que lorsque nos étudiants vont dans d'autres parties du monde, ils y vont pour poursuivre leurs études et qu'ils reviennent dans leur pays pour y utiliser les connaissances acquises. Je tiens à donner au représentant de l'Australie l'assurance que nous avons aussi un certain nombre de citoyens australiens en Tanzanie. Mais nous n'essayons jamais de tirer de ce fait d'autres conclusions que celles de l'existence de relations amicales entre l'Australie et la Tanzanie. J'espère donc que le représentant de l'Australie comprendra, lui aussi, que nos étudiants sont dans son pays parce que l'Australie et la Tanzanie entretiennent des relations amicales. Mais il faut aussi que le représentant de l'Australie comprenne que nous sommes opposés au colonialisme et à la prolongation de l'administration australienne. Le jour où l'Australie octroiera l'indépendance à la Nouvelle-Guinée et aux autres territoires sous tutelle, la Tanzanie n'aura plus de sujet de discorde avec l'Australie. Mais aussi longtemps que ces territoires demeureront sous l'autorité de l'Australie, la Tanzanie devra s'élever contre la politique colonialiste de l'Australie.

298. Une fois de plus, je m'excuse auprès des membres de l'Assemblée d'avoir à nouveau demandé la parole. J'espère que je ne serai plus obligé de le faire, de moins à propos de cette question.

299. Le PRESIDENT: Je donne la parole au représentant de la France, qui a demandé à exercer le droit de réponse.

300. M. GASCHIGNARD (France): Je serai très bref, parce que je n'ai pas l'intention d'engager une polémique à cette heure très tardive avec le représentant de la Somalie. Mais je voudrais tout de même démentir formellement ses affirmations selon lesquelles le référendum de 1958 et les élections qui se sont tenues en Côte française des Somalis ont été, si j'ai bien compris, truqués et constituaient une cruelle plaisanterie. En réalité, ce référendum et ces élections ont été organisés, comme je l'ai dit tout à l'heure, exactement dans les mêmes conditions que dans tous les autres territoires de la France d'outre-mer à l'époque, et les résultats, dans ces territoires dont les représentants siègent aujourd'hui parmi nous, sont là pour témoigner que les populations ont voté librement.

La séance est levée à 19 h 40.

2189 (XXI). Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux

L'Assemblée générale,

Rappelant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux figurant dans sa résolution 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960,

Rappelant ses résolutions 1654 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961, 1810 (XVII) du 17 décembre 1962, 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963 et 2105 (XX) du 20 décembre 1965,

Rappelant également ses résolutions 1805 (XVII) du 14 décembre 1962 et 1899 (XVIII) du 13 novembre 1963, par lesquelles elle a confié des tâches concernant le Sud-Ouest africain au Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, ainsi que sa résolution 1970 (XVIII) du 16 décembre 1963 par laquelle elle a confié au Comité spécial des fonctions nouvelles au sujet des renseignements communiqués en vertu de l'alinéa e de l'Article 73 de la Charte des Nations Unies,

Ayant examiné le rapport du Comité spécial sur ses travaux de 1966²²,

Notant avec un profond regret que, six ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, de nombreux territoires sont encore sous domination coloniale, et déplorant l'attitude négative de certaines puissances coloniales, en particulier l'attitude intransigeante des Gouvernements portugais et sud-africain, qui refusent de reconnaître aux peuples coloniaux le droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance,

Préoccupée par la politique suivie par les puissances coloniales qui font échec aux droits des peuples coloniaux en favorisant l'afflux systématique d'immigrants étrangers et en déplaçant, déportant ou transférant les autochtones,

Considérant que la survivance du colonialisme et de ses manifestations, y compris le racisme et l'apartheid, et les efforts déployés par certaines puissances coloniales pour enrayer les mouvements de libération nationale par des activités répressives et l'emploi de la force armée contre les peuples sont incompatibles avec la Charte et la Déclaration,

Déplorant l'attitude de certains Etats qui persistent, malgré les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Comité spécial, à coopérer avec les Gouvernements portugais et sud-africain et avec le régime minoritaire raciste illégal de la Rhodésie du Sud qui continuent à opprimer les populations africaines,

Ayant examiné les sections du rapport du Comité spécial qui ont trait aux activités des intérêts étrangers économiques et autres intérêts financiers au Sud-Ouest africain, dans les territoires sous domination portugaise et en Rhodésie du Sud, ainsi que les conclusions et les recommandations qui y figurent,

Convaincue que tout nouveau retard dans l'application intégrale et universelle de la Déclaration constitue une source de différends et de conflits internationaux qui entravent sérieusement la coopération internationale et compromettent la paix et la sécurité mondiales,

Prenant note des mesures prises ou envisagées par le Comité spécial au sujet de la liste des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration,

Ayant adopté des résolutions au sujet de certains territoires examinés par le Comité spécial,

1. Réaffirme ses résolutions 1514 (XV), 1654 (XVI), 1810 (XVII), 1956 (XVIII) et 2105 (XX);

2. Prend note avec satisfaction du travail accompli par le Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et le félicite des efforts qu'il a déployés pour assurer l'application de la Déclaration;

3. Approuve le rapport du Comité spécial sur ses travaux de 1966 et invite à nouveau les puissances administrantes à appliquer les recommandations qui y figurent;

4. Approuve les mesures prises ou envisagées par le Comité spécial pour l'année 1967 au sujet de la liste des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration;

5. Approuve le programme de travail envisagé par le Comité spécial pour 1967, y compris l'envoi de missions de visite et la possibilité de tenir une série de réunions en dehors du Siège, et prie les puissances administrantes d'autoriser l'envoi de missions de visite dans les territoires placés sous leur administration;

6. Déclare que la persistance du régime colonial met en danger la paix et la sécurité internationales et que la pratique de l'apartheid, ainsi que de toute forme de discrimination raciale, est un crime contre l'humanité;

7. Réaffirme la légitimité de la lutte que les peuples sous domination coloniale mènent pour l'exercice de leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance et prie instamment tous les Etats d'apporter une aide matérielle et morale aux mouvements de libération nationale dans les territoires coloniaux;

8. Prie le Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés et autres organisations internationales de secours, ainsi que les institutions spécialisées intéressées, d'accroître leur assistance économique, sociale et humanitaire aux réfugiés de ces territoires;

9. Prie tous les Etats, agissant soit directement soit par l'intermédiaire des institutions internationales dont ils sont membres, y compris les institutions spécialisées, de s'abstenir de fournir une assistance quelconque aux Gouvernements portugais et sud-africain et au régime minoritaire raciste illégal de la Rhodésie du Sud tant que ces gouvernements et que ce régime n'auront pas renoncé à leur politique de discrimination raciale et de domination coloniale;

10. Appelle l'attention de tous les Etats sur les graves conséquences résultant de la formation en Afrique australe d'une entente entre les Gouvernements sud-africain et portugais et le régime minoritaire raciste illégal de la Rhodésie du Sud et demande à tous les Etats de refuser tout appui ou toute assistance à cette entente, dont l'existence et les activités sont contraires aux intérêts de la paix et de la sécurité internationales;

11. Prie les puissances coloniales de démanteler leurs bases et installations militaires dans les territoires coloniaux ainsi que de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles et d'utiliser celles qui existent encore pour entraver la libération des peuples des territoires coloniaux dans l'exercice de leurs droits légitimes à la liberté et à l'indépendance;

12. Condamne les activités de ceux des intérêts économiques et financiers étrangers qui, dans les territoires coloniaux, en particulier au Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie du Sud et dans les territoires sous domination portugaise, appuient les régimes coloniaux et constituent, de ce fait, un sérieux obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et demande aux gouvernements intéressés de prendre les mesures nécessaires pour mettre fin à ces activités;

13. Condamne la politique suivie par certaines puissances administrantes dans les territoires se trouvant sous leur domination, qui consiste à imposer des régimes non représentatifs et des constitutions, à renforcer la position des intérêts étrangers financiers et économiques, à abuser l'opinion publique mondiale et à encourager l'afflux systématique d'immigrants étrangers tout en déplaçant, déportant et transférant les autochtones vers d'autres régions, et leur demande de renoncer à ces manœuvres;

14. Prie le Comité spécial de porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité les faits nouveaux, survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires que le Comité examine, qui risquent de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales, et de formuler toute suggestion concrète dont le Conseil pourrait s'inspirer en étudiant les mesures qu'il convient de prendre conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies;

15. Invite le Comité spécial, chaque fois qu'il le jugera pertinent et opportun, à recommander une date limite pour l'accession à l'indépendance de chaque territoire considéré, conformément au désir de la population et aux dispositions de la Déclaration;

16. Invite le Comité spécial à accorder une attention particulière aux petits territoires et à recommander à l'Assemblée générale les moyens les plus appropriés, ainsi que les mesures à prendre, pour permettre aux populations de ces territoires d'exercer pleinement leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance;

17. Prie le Comité spécial de poursuivre sa tâche et de continuer à rechercher les moyens appropriés en vue d'assurer l'application immédiate et intégrale de la Déclaration dans tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance;

18. Prie le Secrétaire général de favoriser, par l'intermédiaire des divers organes et institutions des Nations Unies, la diffusion générale et suivie de la Déclaration et de faire largement connaître les travaux du Comité spécial, afin que l'opinion mondiale puisse être suffisamment informée de la situation dans les territoires coloniaux et de la lutte constante menée par les peuples coloniaux pour leur libération;

19. Prie le Secrétaire général de continuer à fournir au Comité spécial les fonds et les moyens nécessaires à l'accomplissement de son mandat;

20. Décide d'inscrire à l'ordre du jour de sa vingt-deuxième session une question intitulée "Activités des intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, qui font obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain et dans les territoires sous domination portugaise, ainsi que dans tous les autres territoires se trouvant sous domination coloniale".

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite*)

72. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Les membres de l'Assemblée se souviendront qu'il a été décidé d'examiner ce point de l'ordre du jour en séance plénière pour permettre à l'Assemblée générale de traiter de la question de l'application de la Déclaration en général. Tous les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial concernant des territoires déterminés ont été renvoyés à la Quatrième Commission. Nous avons jusqu'ici examiné en plénière les rapports de cette Commission sur le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland et sur la Rhodésie du Sud; nous examinerons dans les quelques jours qui viennent les rapports de la Quatrième Commission sur Aden, sur les îles Fidji et sur les territoires administrés par le Portugal.

73. Aujourd'hui, l'Assemblée va passer à la discussion d'ensemble de la question. Tous les problèmes qu'elle comporte peuvent être mentionnés mais, pour le bon ordre de nos débats, il serait préférable que les représentants qui ne désirent faire des observations que sur certains territoires donnés formulent celles-ci avant le vote sur les projets de résolution concernant chacun des territoires en particulier.

M. Al-Jubouri (Irak), rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, présente le rapport de ce Comité et poursuit en ces termes.

74. M. AL-JUBOURI (Irak) [Rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux] (traduit de l'anglais): Le rapport du Comité spécial sur ses travaux pendant l'année 1966 porte la cote A/6300/Rev.1. Il comporte près de 2 500 pages. Il ne saurait être court puisqu'il relate l'examen par le Comité de la situation dans quelque 60 territoires et qu'il contient deux études spéciales, l'une sur la Rhodésie du Sud et l'autre sur les territoires administrés par le Portugal.

75. Les membres de l'Assemblée générale se souviendront qu'elle a décidé, à sa 1415^{ème} séance plénière, le 24 septembre 1966, d'examiner en séance plénière la question de l'application de la Déclaration en général et de renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission, pour examen et rapport, les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial concernant des territoires déterminés.

76. La Quatrième Commission a déjà soumis ses rapports sur le Bassoutoland, le Betchouanaland et le Souaziland [A/6448], sur l'audition des pétitionnaires au sujet de la question du Sud-Ouest africain [A/6458 et Add.1] et sur la Rhodésie du Sud [A/6482 et Add.1] et elle a adopté ses rapports sur Aden [A/6557] et sur les territoires administrés par le Portugal [A/6554]. Les rapports de la Quatrième Commission sur les autres territoires étudiés dans le rapport du Comité spécial seront soumis à mesure qu'ils seront publiés.

77. En 1966, le Comité spécial a étudié la situation dans tous les territoires inscrits sur la liste de ceux auxquels s'applique la Déclaration, à l'exception de trois, et au sujet de presque tous ces territoires, le Comité spécial a, soit adopté des résolutions, soit soumis des recommandations et des conclusions qui figurent dans les chapitres pertinents de son rapport. Le rapport du Comité spécial contient également des renseignements sur les trois territoires dont il n'a pas été en mesure d'étudier la situation. En outre, des faits nouveaux survenus dans le cas de certains territoires ont obligé le Comité à étudier ceux-ci à plusieurs reprises.

78. Le Comité spécial a aussi achevé des études sur les intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, dans les territoires administrés par le Portugal et en Rhodésie du Sud. L'étude concernant la Rhodésie du Sud et les observations du Comité spécial à son égard figurent dans le document A/6300/Rev.1, chapitre III (deuxième partie). La Quatrième Commission a déjà soumis à l'Assemblée son rapport sur l'étude de cette question dans la deuxième partie du rapport sur la Rhodésie du Sud [A/6482 et Add.1]. L'étude concernant les territoires administrés par le Portugal, qui complète celle que le Comité spécial avait entreprise en 1965, ainsi que les observations du Comité à son sujet, figurent dans le document A/6300/Rev.1, chapitre V (deuxième partie). La Quatrième Commission en a discuté à la présente session lorsqu'elle a examiné la question des territoires administrés par le Portugal.

79. Dans le cadre de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale, en date du 27 novembre 1961, et en particulier aux termes du paragraphe 7 du dispositif de la résolution 2105 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale, le Comité spécial, répondant aux invitations que lui avaient adressées les Gouvernements de l'Algérie, de l'Éthiopie, de la République arabe unie, de la République-Unie de Tanzanie et de la Somalie, a tenu, en mai et juin 1966, une nouvelle série de réunions en Afrique dans les capitales de ces pays. Le Comité spécial a particulièrement souligné l'importance des résultats obtenus par ces réunions en Afrique qui ont non seulement témoigné de la préoccupation croissante de l'ONU à l'égard de la situation des peuples coloniaux mais qui ont aussi mis le Comité mieux à même d'aider ces peuples dans leur lutte pour la liberté et l'indépendance. Le Comité spécial a été profondément reconnaissant aux cinq gouvernements de leur invitation et il a adopté à l'unanimité une résolution à cet effet, le 22 juin 1966. Le Comité spécial a rendu compte de ses travaux en Afrique dans la deuxième partie du chapitre II de son rapport [A/6300/Rev.1], ainsi que dans les chapitres relatifs à chacun des territoires qu'il a étudiés lors de ses réunions en Afrique. A cet égard, j'attirerai également votre attention sur la résolution générale que le Comité spécial a adoptée le 22 juin 1966 au sujet de l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale aux territoires coloniaux qu'il a étudiés au cours de ses réunions en Afrique.

80. L'Assemblée générale, par sa résolution 1970 (XVIII) en date du 16 décembre 1963, a décidé de dissoudre le Comité des renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes et elle a confié ses fonctions au Comité spécial. Celui-ci a par conséquent examiné en 1966 les renseignements relatifs aux territoires non autonomes transmis en application de l'Article 73, e, de la Charte. Cet examen est relaté en détail au chapitre XXIII du rapport du Comité spécial et la Quatrième Commission l'étudiera à la présente session.

81. En application des dispositions de la résolution 2105 (XX), par laquelle l'Assemblée générale a demandé au Comité spécial "de porter à la connaissance du Conseil de sécurité les faits nouveaux survenus dans l'un quelconque des territoires qu'il [examinerait] qui [risqueraient] de menacer la paix et la sécurité internationales, et de formuler des suggestions dont le Conseil pourrait s'inspirer en étudiant les mesures qu'il [convenait] de prendre conformément à la Charte des Nations Unies", ce Comité a, en 1966, attiré l'attention du Conseil de sécurité sur la situation régnant dans un certain nombre des territoires qu'il avait étudiés, et notamment en Rhodésie du Sud, dans le Sud-Ouest africain, à Aden et dans les territoires administrés par le Portugal. Le Comité spécial a rendu compte des mesures qu'il avait prises à cet égard dans les paragraphes 296 à 302 du chapitre premier de son rapport.

82. En 1966, le Comité spécial a pris note de l'accession à l'indépendance de trois des territoires dont la situation avait fait l'objet d'un examen approfondi de l'Assemblée générale et du Comité, à savoir: la Guyane britannique, devenue la Guyane; le Betchoualand, devenu le Botswana; le Bassoutoland, devenu le Lesotho. Avant l'accession à l'indépendance du Betchoualand et du Bassoutoland, le Comité a porté toute son attention sur les mesures nécessaires pour leur permettre de jouir d'une complète indépendance et d'assurer leur intégrité territoriale et leur souveraineté. L'examen auquel s'est livré le Comité spécial et les mesures qu'il a prises au sujet de ces territoires sont relatés au chapitre VII de son rapport. La Quatrième Commission a déjà étudié ce chapitre et, sur sa recommandation, l'Assemblée générale a adopté, le 29 septembre 1966, la résolution 2134 (XXI).

83. Au paragraphe 8 du dispositif de la résolution 2105 (XX), du 20 décembre 1965, l'Assemblée générale a prié "le Comité spécial de porter une attention particulière aux petits territoires et de recommander à l'Assemblée générale les moyens les plus appropriés, ainsi que les mesures à prendre pour permettre éventuellement aux populations de ces territoires d'exercer pleinement leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance". En formulant ses conclusions et recommandations au sujet des petits territoires, qui sont exposées en détail dans les chapitres pertinents de son rapport, le Comité spécial a tenu compte de cette disposition.

84. Au paragraphe 9 de la même résolution, l'Assemblée générale a prié "le Comité spécial, chaque fois qu'il le [jugerait] opportun, de recommander une date limite pour l'accession à l'indépendance de chaque territoire considéré, conformément au désir de la population". Lorsqu'il a étudié la situation de certains territoires, le Comité spécial a pris cette disposition en considération.

85. Sous réserve des directives que l'Assemblée générale pourrait vouloir donner lors de sa vingt et unième session au sujet des petits territoires et des dates limites pour l'accession de territoires à l'indépendance, le Comité spécial continuera de s'inspirer de ces dispositions et des autres dispositions de la résolution 2105 (XX).

86. Aux paragraphes 184 à 223 du chapitre premier de son rapport et dans nombre d'autres chapitres relatifs à des territoires déterminés, le Comité spécial a énoncé des recommandations au sujet des missions de visite. Le Comité continue à accorder une grande valeur à ces missions qui permettent de recueillir des renseignements de première main sur la situation dans les territoires visités et sur les vœux de leurs populations, afin de les aider à appliquer la Déclaration. Le Comité spécial a donc l'intention de mettre ses recommandations en pratique avec la plus grande énergie et de continuer à rechercher le concours des puissances administrantes pour permettre l'envoi de missions de cette nature au cours de la prochaine session.

87. Dans son rapport à l'Assemblée générale lors de sa vingtième session, le Comité spécial a déclaré que,

"sous réserve de toutes instructions que l'Assemblée générale pourrait vouloir donner, lors de sa vingtième session, pour assurer l'application rapide de la Déclaration, le Comité spécial se [proposait] de poursuivre l'examen de la question de la liste des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration"^{5/}.

88. Au septième alinéa du préambule de la résolution 2105 (XX), l'Assemblée générale a noté "les mesures prises et envisagées par le Comité spécial au sujet de la liste des territoires auxquels s'applique la Déclaration". En 1966, le Comité spécial a examiné un rapport du groupe de travail chargé d'étudier cette question et a approuvé les propositions qu'il contenait. Les travaux du Comité spécial à cet égard sont relatés aux paragraphes 263 à 269 du chapitre premier de son rapport.

89. Au cours de l'année, le Comité spécial a également examiné la question de l'application des résolutions 2105 (XX) et 2107 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale et des résolutions pertinentes du Comité spécial en ce qui concerne les demandes et appels qu'elles contiennent à l'intention des institutions internationales, y compris les institutions spécialisées. Cet examen est relaté en détail aux paragraphes 224 à 261 du rapport du Comité spécial.

90. Enfin, le Comité spécial a formulé un certain nombre de recommandations destinées à l'aider à poursuivre sa tâche en 1967 et que l'Assemblée générale souhaitera peut-être examiner en étudiant l'application de la Déclaration. Ces recommandations sont énoncées à la section XII du chapitre premier du rapport. En voici quelques-unes.

91. Le Comité spécial estime que l'Assemblée générale devrait renouveler l'appel qu'elle a adressé aux puissances administrantes pour qu'elles appliquent sans délai la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux territoires coloniaux qu'elles administrent. L'Assemblée devrait adresser à nouveau un appel aux puissances administrantes pour qu'elles coopèrent avec le Comité spécial en facilitant les visites dans les territoires, conformément aux demandes figurant dans les résolutions et décisions déjà adoptées par le Comité spécial. L'Assemblée devrait à nouveau prier les puissances administrantes de coopérer avec le Secrétaire général pour permettre une large diffusion de la Déclaration et des renseignements concernant les activités entreprises par les Nations Unies et en particulier par le Comité spécial pour la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration.

92. Le Comité spécial recommande à l'Assemblée d'adopter le programme de travail exposé dans la section du rapport que j'ai mentionné et de prendre les dispositions financières appropriées pour couvrir les dépenses relatives aux activités du Comité spécial, y compris les dépenses des groupes de visite. De plus, dans le cadre du paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la résolution 1654 (XVI) de l'Assemblée générale, le Comité spécial pourrait décider de tenir une nouvelle série de réunions en Afrique en 1967.

93. Je recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'approuver le rapport du Comité spécial.

94. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne maintenant la parole au Président du Comité spécial, M. Collier, ambassadeur du Sierra Leone.

95. M. COLLIER (Sierra Leone) [traduit de l'anglais]: Une fois encore, l'Assemblée générale est saisie de la question de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. La question du colonialisme a pris, dans l'histoire récente des Nations Unies, une importance toujours plus grande. La Charte des Nations Unies consacre, en la réaffirmant, la foi dans les droits fondamentaux de l'homme, dans la dignité et la valeur de la personne humaine, dans l'égalité des droits des hommes et des femmes et des nations, grandes et petites, et dans la justice universelle. Après l'effrayante leçon de la Seconde Guerre mondiale, la communauté internationale avait à cœur d'épargner le fléau de la guerre aux générations suivantes et, pleinement consciente du fait que le mépris flagrant de la dignité et de la valeur de la personne humaine avait été l'un des principaux facteurs de cette guerre, elle a créé une organisation dont les objectifs étaient clairement orientés vers la création d'une communauté internationale où régnerait la justice pour tous les hommes.

96. Il était donc naturel que, peu après la naissance de l'Organisation, les questions de colonialisme y prennent une place importante. L'attention accordée à ces questions a pris toute son ampleur en 1960, lors de l'adoption de la fameuse Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Comme on l'a souvent dit, à l'ONU et ailleurs, ce document est devenu, pour ainsi dire, la Grande Charte du processus de décolonisation.

97. Depuis lors, le mouvement de décolonisation s'est accéléré et il est encourageant de constater que beaucoup de pays ont, depuis cette date, accédé à l'indépendance et pris leur place légitime dans les conseils des nations. Malheureusement, en dépit des nombreuses résolutions des Nations Unies, malgré la naissance, à l'échelon international, d'un sentiment général contre le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et bien que le colonialisme soit presque unanimement condamné comme un phénomène odieux, intolérable et pathologique, des affaires en suspens demeurent encore inscrites à notre ordre du jour sous la rubrique du colonialisme.

98. Il n'est sans doute pas inutile que, dès l'ouverture du présent débat, je rappelle la satisfaction qu'inspire à ma délégation, et d'ailleurs à tous les membres du Comité spécial de la décolonisation, le fait que, depuis que la question a été examinée pour la dernière fois, plusieurs pays ont accédé à l'indépendance et occupent maintenant le siège qui leur revient à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. La Guyane, qui a souffert de longues années sous le joug du colonialisme, en dépit de la lutte vaillamment menée par le peuple héroïque de ce pays, et dont la question est demeurée inscrite pendant plusieurs années à l'ordre du jour du Comité spécial, a finalement accédé à l'indépendance et c'est avec fierté que nous l'avons accueillie au début de la présente session, en qualité de Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

99. Il est peut-être significatif que la Guyane ait fêté son indépendance au moment où le Comité spécial était en Afrique, poursuivant ses efforts pour donner la chasse au colonialisme et pour l'abattre partout où il montre son horrible face, et que nous ayons salué l'indépendance de ce pays dans la belle ville de Dar-es-Salaam, capitale de la République de Tanzanie, cité que l'on en est venu depuis peu à considérer comme le havre des combattants de la libération de toute cette Afrique en proie aux troubles.

100. Le Botswana et le Lesotho ont également accédé à l'indépendance et sont fiers de siéger aujourd'hui parmi nous. Ces pays sont nés des douleurs où se débattent tous les territoires africains proches de cette chaudière de racisme qu'est l'Afrique du Sud.

101. Au cours des dernières semaines, nous avons salué avec fierté l'indépendance de la Barbade et accueilli ce merveilleux pays, si riche en ressources humaines, au sein de la communauté internationale. Nous avons toutes raisons de croire que tous les pays qui sont devenus indépendants depuis notre dernier débat joueront un rôle utile dans les affaires internationales et que le progrès de leurs peuples, sous la propre direction de ceux-ci, leur assurera une réelle prospérité dans le respect de la dignité humaine.

102. Le Comité spécial est heureux d'éliminer ces questions de son ordre du jour et s'impatiente d'y voir demeurer obstinément tant d'autres questions. Certaines puissances coloniales restent inflexibles et récalcitrantes. Elles ont refusé d'appliquer la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Certaines d'entre elles ont même bravé les résolutions des Nations Unies sur cette question; leur position est farouchement intransigeante.

103. Notre débat sur l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance commence précisément le jour où la survivance d'un colonialisme impénitent vient de nous être rappelée de façon choquante. Je veux parler de la situation en Rhodésie du Sud. M. Ian Smith, grâce aux erreurs commises par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni dans le traitement de cette affaire, a de nouveau défié l'opinion mondiale en annonçant son intention de maintenir son régime illégal. Ce régime est abominable, raciste, intolérable et rappelle fâcheusement les odieux excès du régime nazi dans l'Allemagne hitlérienne. Ce parallèle est justifié car le racisme est le racisme, quelque forme qu'il prenne. Il repose sur une doctrine d'intolérance arrogante, fondée sur la prétendue supériorité d'une certaine pigmentation de la peau. C'est en vertu de cette fausse hypothèse que M. Smith et ses collaborateurs ont revendiqué le pouvoir et prétendu imposer leur règle à la vie et au sort de millions d'individus noirs. Que cette façon de penser ait cours au milieu du XXème siècle, c'est en vérité la honte de notre temps et le scandale de la civilisation dite blanche, dont M. Ian Smith se proclame le champion.

104. Grâce aux hésitations et aux encouragements de M. Harold Wilson, le Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni — car, ne vous y trompez pas, c'était, de la part de M. Wilson, un encouragement que de déclarer, quelques jours avant la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance de M. Smith, que la force ne serait jamais employée, alors que M. Smith avait clairement indiqué ses intentions — la question de la Rhodésie va maintenant dépendre en grande partie de la résolution avec laquelle les Nations Unies relèveront le défi que constitue cette situation nouvelle.

105. On nous a dit que le Gouvernement britannique chercherait à obtenir du Conseil de sécurité le vote de sanctions obligatoires partielles.

106. Lors de la dernière conférence des Premiers Ministres du Commonwealth à laquelle participait le Sierra Leone, sir Albert Margai, le Premier Ministre de mon pays, a énoncé très clairement les conditions dans lesquelles cette affaire devait être portée devant l'Organisation des Nations Unies. En fait, ce point de vue était mentionné dans le communiqué conjoint que le représentant permanent du Royaume-Uni a bien voulu présenter au cours du débat sur cette question à la Quatrième Commission. Les mesures que nous envisageons devraient être prises aux termes des Articles 41 et 42 de la Charte et la force devrait, s'il le faut, être employée pour mettre fin à une situation qui, selon le Royaume-Uni lui-même, est illégale et relève de la trahison. Des sanctions obligatoires partielles ne peuvent guère être utiles si elles s'appliquent à des produits choisis de manière à ce que le régime puisse survivre. Elles n'aboutiraient qu'à reproduire la situation ridicule que le Royaume-Uni a créée lorsqu'il a donné au monde l'assurance que les sanctions qu'il imposait, au moment où M. Smith est entré dans l'illégalité, allaient mettre fin à ce régime en quelques semaines et non en plusieurs mois. Nous en avons assez de ce genre d'assurances.

107. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a là une responsabilité incontestable. Qu'il s'en acquitte; qu'il montre qu'il s'intéresse réellement aux dispositions de la Charte des Nations Unies qui exigent l'égalité des droits des hommes et des femmes, quelles que soient leur couleur, leurs croyances ou leur religion. Qu'il fasse cette fois la preuve qu'il est décidé à mettre rapidement fin au colonialisme et à appliquer ainsi la Déclaration dans une région qui, il nous l'a rappelé assez souvent, relève de sa seule et entière responsabilité.

108. La question du Sud-Ouest africain ayant déjà fait l'objet d'un débat complet en séance plénière, je me contenterai de rappeler aujourd'hui qu'elle figure toujours à l'ordre du jour du Comité spécial et que nous espérons l'y maintenir et suivre de très près les travaux du Comité du Sud-Ouest africain qui a été créé à la suite de ce débat.

109. Je me dois d'exprimer la satisfaction de ma délégation et celle du Comité spécial de la décolonisation à l'égard du louable exemple de coopération avec l'ONU que le Gouvernement espagnol a donné dans la région au cours de l'année écoulée. Quoi qu'on puisse dire de l'Espagne, il ne faut pas oublier que ce pays a été la première puissance coloniale qui ait autorisé une mission de visite des Nations Unies à se rendre dans un territoire, conformément au vœu exprimé par l'ONU.

110. Ce que nous avons trouvé dans ce territoire est une tout autre question, mais il faut reconnaître que le Gouvernement espagnol a coopéré sans réserve avec la mission des Nations Unies, lui a offert une hospitalité des plus généreuses et, pour autant que nous ayons pu voir, n'a fait en rien obstacle aux travaux du Comité lorsque nous nous sommes rendus dans les territoires espagnols de Fernando Poo et de Rio Muni en Guinée équatoriale. Cette mission a soumis un rapport qui sera examiné en détail. Je tiens seulement aujourd'hui à exprimer l'espoir de ma délégation que le Gouvernement espagnol sera en mesure d'accepter les recommandations de la mission et d'appliquer ainsi rapidement la Déclaration en octroyant l'indépendance aux peuples de ce territoire.

111. A ce propos, je voudrais exprimer la déception du Comité spécial de voir que certaines puissances coloniales — et en particulier le Royaume-Uni — ne sont pas prêtes à admettre des missions de visite des Nations Unies dans les territoires coloniaux. Bien que ces puissances coloniales aient souvent exprimé le désir de coopérer aux travaux de l'ONU, elles n'ont jusqu'ici, malgré les nombreuses résolutions de l'ONU en la matière, donné aucune preuve de ce désir de coopération dans la région qui leur en offrait précisément la meilleure occasion. D'autres puissances, comme la Nouvelle-Zélande, n'ont soumis qu'avec beaucoup de retard les renseignements requis par l'ONU au sujet des territoires qu'elles administrent.

112. Ma délégation espère que ces puissances coloniales et impérialistes envisageront sérieusement de coopérer avec plus de sincérité à la tâche de décolonisation entreprise par l'ONU. Cette coopération est particulièrement souhaitable dans le cas des petits territoires où il importe que le Comité spécial de l'ONU se rende sur place pour observer lui-même les conditions qui y règnent, afin d'être en mesure d'étudier les recommandations qu'il convient de faire, en fonction de ces conditions spéciales, pour assurer l'application rapide de la Déclaration.

113. Le colonialisme, malheureusement, n'est pas limité au continent africain. L'un des problèmes les plus irritants qui soient inscrits à l'ordre du jour du Comité spécial est celui d'Aden. L'ONU s'efforce depuis des années de convaincre le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de la nécessité, pour elle, d'inter-venir. Depuis des années, le Royaume-Uni a refusé de coopérer avec l'ONU et s'est réfugié derrière la déclaration habituelle, selon laquelle Aden relève de sa propre responsabilité.

114. Malgré l'absence de coopération du Royaume-Uni, le Comité spécial a adopté, pendant ses réunions en Afrique, une résolution par laquelle il a demandé au Secrétaire général de l'ONU de désigner, en consultation avec le Comité spécial et la Puissance administrante, une commission qui se rendrait à Aden pour formuler des recommandations susceptibles d'aboutir à l'indépendance.

115. C'était en juin. La réponse de la délégation du Royaume-Uni à la lettre par laquelle le Secrétaire général l'informait de cette demande contenait certains termes qui équivalaient, selon une décision ultérieure du Comité spécial, à des conditions préalables et le Comité a expressément décidé, si le Royaume-Uni ne retirait pas ces conditions, de considérer que celui-ci n'avait pas pleinement accepté la demande.

116. Après un délai inutile et entièrement dû à la répugnance de la délégation du Royaume-Uni à retirer sans équivoque ces conditions préalables, la Quatrième Commission a finalement adopté, à la presque unanimité, une résolution demandant que la mission parte sans plus tarder pour Aden. Ma délégation espère que le Royaume-Uni ne va pas maintenant recourir à ses tactiques habituelles de retards, de tergiversations et d'hésitations pour rendre inutilement ardue la tâche de la mission. Nous espérons également que le Royaume-Uni ne va pas susciter de nouveaux obstacles pour empêcher le Secrétaire général de faire droit à la requête des Nations Unies selon laquelle les membres de cette mission doivent être désignés en consultation avec le Comité spécial et l'Autorité administrante.

117. A l'ordre du jour du Comité spécial figure encore la question de nombreux petits territoires, dont le sort reste à déterminer. Le principe clé est ici, sans aucun doute, celui de l'autodétermination. Ce principe est inviolable et ma délégation croit qu'il recueille aujourd'hui l'adhésion de l'ensemble de la communauté internationale. Sans doute, de nouvelles idées devront être mises à l'épreuve afin de fixer la ligne d'action la plus appropriée pour assurer l'avenir de certains petits territoires, mais ces considérations ne peuvent être valables et pertinentes que dans le cadre du principe de l'autodétermination et c'est aux populations de ces territoires qu'il appartient, dans l'exercice libre et sans entraves de leur volonté, de fixer elles-mêmes l'avenir politique qu'elles préfèrent.

118. L'événement le plus important pour le Comité spécial au cours de l'année écoulée a sans doute été sa visite en Afrique. Une fois encore le Comité spécial des Nations Unies pour la décolonisation a pu se rendre dans des capitales africaines. Nous avons pris cette décision car nous estimons que l'ONU doit entrer directement en contact, de façon concrète, avec les problèmes inscrits à son ordre du jour. C'est parfait de siéger à New York et d'adopter des résolutions mais il importe peut-être plus encore que l'ONU soit prête à participer directement, dans la pratique, à la solution des problèmes en suspens. Dans le cas du colonialisme, il s'agit de combattants de la liberté, engagés dans une lutte acharnée, à la vie ou à la mort, pour sauvegarder les idéaux qui sont chers à la communauté mondiale moderne. Il importe d'encourager ces combattants de la liberté en se rapprochant du lieu de leur combat pour stimuler leurs efforts et les assurer de l'intérêt que leur porte notre organisme mondial.

119. Cette visite en Afrique a aussi été importante dans la mesure où elle a permis aux délégations de beaucoup de pays auxquels l'oppression du colonialisme n'est pas familière de ressentir de près l'atmosphère qui s'en dégage.

120. Ces visites du Comité ont également donné à de nombreux pétitionnaires qui, sans elles, n'auraient jamais pu se présenter devant lui en raison de la dépense, l'occasion d'exposer leur cas. Le Comité spécial s'est rendu cette année dans cinq capitales: Dar-es-Salaam (Tanzanie), Mogadiscio (Somalie), Addis-Abéba (Ethiopie), Le Caire (République arabe unie) et Alger (Algérie).

121. Dans toutes ces villes, nous avons été reçus avec chaleur, bonne volonté, amabilité et hospitalité. Les gouvernements intéressés n'ont épargné aucun effort pour mettre à notre disposition tous les services et installations nécessaires à nos travaux. Je tiens, une fois encore, à remercier les gouvernements et les peuples de ces pays, au nom de l'ONU et, en particulier, au nom des Etats membres du Comité spécial, de la peine qu'ils ont prise pour faire de notre visite dans leurs capitales une expérience si riche et mémorable.

122. Notre voyage nous a permis de donner une expression concrète au rôle que joue l'ONU dans la recherche de solutions pratiques pour les problèmes du colonialisme. Nous sommes fermement convaincus que notre voyage a contribué de façon vitale à la compréhension des problèmes qui sont inscrits à notre ordre du jour et a beaucoup aidé à faire connaître dans ces pays le sens profond de l'ONU.

123. Après avoir étudié pendant une année encore le problème du colonialisme, nous constatons que celui-ci est encore bien vivant. Le colonialisme se porte bien en raison non seulement de la politique pernicieuse suivie sciemment par les puissances coloniales en cause mais aussi, en grande partie, en raison des activités des monopoles et intérêts étrangers, financiers et économiques, dans ces pays, et notamment dans le Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie du Sud, en Angola, au Mozambique et à Bissao, en Guinée. Il est de toute évidence que, du fait de ces monopoles et intérêts financiers et économiques, beaucoup de gouvernements n'ont pas pu donner leur pleine coopération à l'application des résolutions pertinentes de l'ONU.

124. Il leur est certes aisé de voter les résolutions mais ils ne font guère ensuite pour mettre obstacle aux activités commerciales et financières de leurs ressortissants et ils coopèrent même parfois activement à ces activités qui ont pour résultat l'exploitation et l'asservissement des populations des territoires en cause. Nul n'ignore que, pour que ces territoires continuent d'assurer des revenus si abon-dants aux capitaux qui y affluent des pays occidentaux capitalistes, il faut qu'ils soient dépourvus d'une législation adéquate du travail. Ces capitalistes veulent que le coût de la main-d'œuvre demeure aussi bas que possible pour renforcer leur marge de bénéfice et c'est là ce qui, pour des raisons égoïstes, avides et mercenaires, perpétue le fléau du colonialisme.

125. Si le colonialisme se perpétue de nos jours c'est aussi, et beaucoup, à cause de la prétendue nécessité de sauvegarder les intérêts militaires dans le monde entier. Nous trouvons encore des bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux, bases dont les puissances colonialistes veulent croire qu'elles favorisent leur stratégie d'ensemble dans la prétendue "confrontation Est-Ouest", à laquelle les populations de ces territoires ne sont en rien intéressées.

126. Cette situation, regrettable en soi, s'aggrave encore si l'on considère que ces bases militaires peuvent servir d'arsenaux et de tremplins pour une agression contre les peuples eux-mêmes de ces territoires à l'occasion de leur lutte légitime pour l'indépendance. L'existence de bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux fait donc directement obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance.

127. Face à ce problème persistant du colonialisme, il nous faut continuer de légitimer les luttes de libération nationale. Ce sont des guerres justes. Ce sont des guerres que les populations des territoires coloniaux mènent pour défendre leurs droits et leur liberté. La communauté internationale devrait cristalliser le sentiment général en faveur de ces principes inaliénables. Ces principes devraient comprendre l'autodétermination des peuples et l'appui des luttes légitimes des peuples qui vivent encore sous le joug du colonialisme.

128. Nous avons atteint, dans l'évolution de la pensée internationale, le point où les nations devraient être prêtes à reconnaître que les actes de répression à l'encontre des peuples dépendants qui luttent pour leur indépendance, tels que les actes actuellement perpétrés dans les territoires dits portugais, l'Afrique du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et la Rhodésie du Sud, devraient être châtiés en tant que crimes contre l'humanité. Le monde ne doit pas demeurer passif et attendre que les événements aboutissent à un désastre de proportions inimaginables pour proclamer ensuite, dans un tribunal international, que des crimes ont été commis contre l'humanité.

129. Nous nous souvenons tous que, lors des procès de Nuremberg qui ont suivi la dernière guerre, les chefs de l'Allemagne nazie ont été poursuivis pour ce que l'on a appelé des "crimes contre l'humanité". La définition donnée des crimes comportait:

"... l'assassinat, l'extermination, la réduction en esclavage, la déportation et tout autre acte inhumain commis contre toutes populations civiles, avant ou pendant la guerre, ou bien les persécutions pour des motifs politiques, raciaux ou religieux lorsque ces actes ou persécutions, qu'ils aient constitué ou non une violation du droit interne [du pays où ils ont été perpétrés] ont été commis à la suite de tout crime rentrant dans la compétence du Tribunal, ou en liaison avec ce crime"^{6/}.

130. Dans les pratiques du colonialisme, nous trouvons aujourd'hui présents tous ces éléments — l'assassinat, l'extermination, la réduction en esclavage et la persécution. Ces crimes sont perpétrés aujourd'hui dans les territoires coloniaux. Il est grand temps que le colonialisme commence à être défini en ces termes. C'est à la communauté internationale qu'il appartient d'envisager cette question dans une perspective plus vaste, d'autant plus que l'on soulève souvent des points de droit pour la défense de la prétendue souveraineté des Etats. Il est important de reconnaître maintenant que certaines violations des droits fondamentaux de l'homme transcendent l'inviolabilité de la souveraineté des Etats. Il importe même que nous reconnaissons la légalité de ces interventions dans des termes très analogues aux arguments si persuasifs présentés au procès de Nuremberg.

131. Il me semble que le moment est venu d'élever la discussion du colonialisme à ce niveau plus élevé. Nous ne devons plus nous contenter de réprimander, ou même de condamner, les auteurs de ces actes lâches. Nous devons nous orienter vers la création d'une entente internationale générale sur la question des droits de l'homme.

132. L'argument contestable selon lequel certaines affaires relèvent de la juridiction interne d'Etats souverains nous est familier. Mais, dès l'époque de Grotius, il était entendu que, dans certaines circonstances, la communauté internationale pouvait prendre position sur une question relative aux droits de l'homme et même intervenir, s'il le fallait, dans la juridiction interne d'un Etat. Les procès de Nuremberg nous ont enseigné que des crimes contre l'humanité peuvent être commis sur la base d'une violation fondamentale des droits de l'homme de nature si énorme qu'elle vise à l'extermination d'un peuple.

133. Montrons-nous donc, à cette vingt et unième session de l'Assemblée générale, à la hauteur de cette nouvelle tâche et adoptons une résolution énergique par laquelle nous définirons le colonialisme sous son vrai jour, en tant que crime contre l'humanité, et nous jetterons les bases d'un accord international qui permettrait à l'ONU de jouer un rôle plus positif dans l'éradication de ce mal. Il se pourrait bien que nous puissions ainsi assurer l'application rapide de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et satisfaire par conséquent au principe fondamental de la Charte qui reconnaît l'égalité de tous les peuples, quelle que soit leur couleur, leur race ou leur croyance.

134. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de donner la parole au prochain orateur, je voudrais informer l'Assemblée générale que je me propose de clore la liste des orateurs désirant participer au débat général 24 heures après le début de l'examen de la question en discussion. La liste sera donc close demain, le 7 décembre, à 18 heures.

^{6/} Le statut et le jugement du Tribunal de Nuremberg (publication des Nations Unies, numéro de vente: 1949.V.7); p. 65.

135. M. RUDA (Argentine) [traduit de l'espagnol]: L'examen en séance plénière du point 23 de l'ordre du jour de l'Assemblée offre à ma délégation l'occasion, qu'elle apprécie tout particulièrement, d'exposer en termes généraux sa position au sujet de l'état actuel des problèmes coloniaux dans le monde, question à l'étude de laquelle la délégation argentine a toujours consacré l'attention la plus soutenue.

136. Tout d'abord, nous tenons à exprimer notre reconnaissance au Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre, dont les travaux constituent l'épine dorsale de l'action que poursuit l'Assemblée générale pour accomplir la mission à laquelle elle ne saurait renoncer et qui consiste à assurer la pleine application du principe consacré par la Charte en matière de libre détermination.

137. En pensant à cette tâche, nous ne saurions manquer de noter, en une brève analyse rétrospective, l'évolution sensible qu'a subi depuis 1945 le traitement des problèmes coloniaux au sein de l'Organisation. Les pas que l'ONU a franchis vers la pleine reconnaissance des aspirations des peuples à la libération et à l'indépendance ont suivi un rythme hésitant et peut-être parfois d'une lenteur excessive mais la tâche se poursuit, incontestablement avec succès.

138. Ce processus est jalonné d'étapes mémorables: tout d'abord, l'élaboration du Chapitre XI de la Charte sur la Déclaration relative aux territoires non autonomes, qui fut approuvée par les fondateurs de l'ONU, puis la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et sa mise en œuvre ultérieure par la résolution 1654 (XVI) aux termes de laquelle fut créé le Comité spécial. Ces trois piliers constituent l'armature sur laquelle repose actuellement l'action moderne et dynamique des Nations Unies en matière de décolonisation.

139. A cette œuvre de l'ONU qui est venue étayer la lutte des peuples décidés à diriger leurs propres destinées, la délégation argentine a toujours participé en apportant un concours enthousiaste à la recherche de la solution juste et appropriée.

140. Au cours de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, nous avons eu la satisfaction de saluer l'accession à l'indépendance de nouveaux Etats qui sont devenus Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. En accédant à l'indépendance, la Guyane, le Lesotho, le Botswana et la Barbade ont clos en 1966 de nouveaux chapitres de l'histoire de la lutte menée contre le colonialisme grâce au courage des peuples et à l'action des Nations Unies.

141. Cependant, de vastes territoires et des populations nombreuses restent encore soumis à des régimes colonialistes et leur progrès vers l'indépendance complète n'offre pas pour le moment de perspectives très prometteuses, comme l'a montré l'exposé détaillé que vient de faire le représentant du Sierra Leone, président du Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre. Nous pensons, en particulier, à la situation des territoires et des populations de la partie méridionale du continent africain.

142. D'un côté, l'on a pu, au cours de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, mettre en marche un mécanisme visant à la solution du problème du Sud-Ouest africain. C'est là un pas dans la bonne direction et nous souhaitons ardemment que les étapes suivantes, dont il faut élaborer le plan, ne se heurtent à aucun obstacle afin que le peuple du Sud-Ouest africain puisse bientôt accéder à l'indépendance.

143. D'un autre côté, certaines situations, dans le sud du continent africain, demeurent statiques et n'offrent aucune perspective encourageante. Les territoires administrés par le Portugal posent à la communauté internationale un grave problème qui devient chaque jour plus aigu du fait que la Puissance administrante ne se résout pas à appliquer le principe de libre détermination que consacre la Charte.

144. De même, ma délégation est extrêmement préoccupée de la situation de la Rhodésie du Sud que le Conseil de sécurité doit examiner incessamment. Nous avons le désir le plus profond de voir cette situation trouver une prompt solution fondée sur le respect des droits de la majorité de la population de la Rhodésie du Sud et, à cet égard, la délégation argentine au Conseil de sécurité engagera dans ce prochain débat toute son énergie et sa détermination.

145. C'est ainsi que six ans ont passé depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et que, malgré tout, plus de cinquante territoires se trouvent encore sous une administration coloniale. C'est là, à notre avis, un indice précis et décisif de l'ampleur de la tâche que l'ONU doit encore accomplir pour aider ces peuples à réaliser leurs aspirations légitimes.

146. La résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale constitue indiscutablement un ensemble de règles adéquat pour assurer la réalisation complète de ce noble idéal. L'application de cette résolution doit mener au terme souhaité le processus de décolonisation dans les zones où persistent encore des formes de colonialisme.

147. Non pays est très bien placé pour apprécier les souffrances qu'imposent les politiques coloniales non seulement parce qu'il a dû, au XIX^{ème} siècle, mener une lutte sanglante pour obtenir son indépendance et celle de peuples frères mais aussi parce qu'aujourd'hui même les îles Malouines — qui font partie de son territoire — subissent une domination étrangère qui est un relent des pratiques coloniales si fréquentes dans les relations internationales du siècle dernier et d'une partie du siècle présent.

148. L'Assemblée générale, en adoptant à sa vingtième session la résolution 2065 (XX), a expressément reconnu le différend qui oppose mon pays au Royaume-Uni au sujet des îles Malouines. Cette décision de l'Assemblée générale a renforcé la certitude de mon pays que l'exercice de ses droits lui sera restitué sans délai.

149. La résolution 2065 (XX) est ainsi venue couronner de succès un processus qui a comporté des études approfondies et des débats tenus successivement par le Sous-Comité III, puis par le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre et enfin par la Quatrième Commission.

150. C'est ainsi que l'Assemblée, après avoir placé le cas des îles Malouines dans le cadre des dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, a invité le Gouvernement de mon pays et celui du Royaume-Uni à entamer des négociations.

151. En réponse à cette invitation, ont commencé des négociations dont mon gouvernement, conjointement avec celui du Royaume-Uni, a informé l'ONU. Ces négociations se poursuivent actuellement à Londres et mon gouvernement a l'espoir de pouvoir transmettre très prochainement, dès la présente session de l'Assemblée, de nouveaux renseignements sur leur résultat, conformément au paragraphe 2 du dispositif de la résolution 2065 (XX).

152. Je ne veux pas terminer cet exposé sans exprimer à nouveau la gratitude de mon pays pour la compréhension et l'accueil favorable qu'ont reçus ses points de vue auprès de la plupart des délégations dans une affaire qui fait de mon pays une partie directement intéressée au processus de décolonisation en raison de la spoliation que lui a fait subir l'action armée du Royaume-Uni.

La séance est levée à 17 h 25.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

90. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): L'Assemblée va maintenant reprendre l'examen du point 23 de l'ordre du jour.

91. Avant de donner la parole au premier orateur inscrit, je voudrais vous informer qu'à moins que l'Assemblée n'en décide autrement, nous adopterons la procédure que je vais exposer. Plus de 20 orateurs sont inscrits pour participer au débat général et un projet de résolution sera, par ailleurs, déposé en plénière cet après-midi.

92. Les représentants qui souhaitent intervenir dans le débat général lorsque l'Assemblée sera saisie du projet de résolution pourront faciliter notre tâche en formulant en même temps les observations qu'ils désireraient faire sur le projet. Après consultations avec les délégations et en raison, particulièrement, de l'importance du point 23, j'ai convenu que les représentants qui parleront du projet de résolution pourront également, s'ils le désirent, formuler quelques observations générales sur l'ensemble de la question.

93. Lorsque nous aurons ainsi entendu tous les orateurs, nous entendrons les délégations qui souhaiteront expliquer leur vote avant la mise aux voix du projet de résolution.

94. Je voudrais toutefois, pour le moment, suggérer que la date limite pour la soumission de nouvelles propositions ou d'amendements concernant la question en discussion soit fixée au lundi 12 décembre, à midi.

95. Si la procédure que je viens d'exposer ne soulève pas d'objection, je considérerai que l'Assemblée générale approuve mes suggestions.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

96. M. MOD (Hongrie): Il est devenu de tradition, et ce n'est non seulement juste mais très utile, que l'Assemblée générale, après toute une année de travail ardu du Comité spécial et deux mois de débats à la Quatrième Commission, se réunisse en séance plénière pour examiner la situation en ce qui concerne la réalisation des objectifs fixés par la Déclaration de 1960, confirmés et développés d'année en année par de nouvelles résolutions.

97. La première question dont je désire m'occuper concerne le bilan de l'année qui s'est écoulée depuis la dernière session de l'Assemblée générale. En effet, c'est ce bilan qui doit servir de base pour évaluer le travail accompli et déterminer ce qui nous reste à faire.

98. Le tableau de la situation présente un double aspect. D'une part, nous devons accepter comme un résultat indéniable le fait que nous avons analysé plus à fond et dénoncé à l'Organisation des Nations Unies la nature et les pratiques du colonialisme et du néo-colonialisme. Nous avons soumis à une analyse dé-taillée les activités des monopoles internationaux dans trois territoires d'importance capitale: le Sud-Ouest africain, la Rhodésie du Sud et les colonies portugaises. Nous en avons tiré la conclusion logique que les activités de ces intérêts étrangers constituent l'un des plus grands obstacles qui empêchent les peuples de ces territoires de faire valoir leur droit inaliénable à l'indépendance nationale. Nous avons signalé de nombreuses connexions de "l'Alliance impie" ainsi que d'autres aspects du néo-colonialisme. Nous les avons condamnés, et nous avons invité certaines puissances qui s'opposent à la liquidation du système colonial à mettre fin à leurs activités néfastes et à donner effet aux résolutions de l'Assemblée générale.

M. Khalaf (Irak), vice-président, prend la présidence.

99. D'autre part, il faut constater qu'après l'élan vigoureux des premières années, au cours desquelles un grand nombre de peuples coloniaux ont acquis l'indépendance et sont entrés dans nos rangs, le processus d'indépendance s'est ralenti jusqu'à l'immobilité. Nous lisons dans la partie générale du rapport du Comité spécial:

"Nombreux ont été les membres du Comité spécial qui, à l'ouverture des travaux de 1966, ont exprimé l'opinion que les progrès réalisés en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux étaient loin de répondre aux espoirs qu'avait fait naître son adoption il y avait de cela près de six ans." [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 310.]

100. C'est un fait regrettable et indéniable que, dans les territoires d'importance capitale, dans le sud de l'Afrique, outre l'absence de progrès, l'année passée accuse une détérioration réelle de la situation, par exemple, en Rhodésie du Sud. Autrement dit, le passif dépasse l'actif dans le bilan. Ce bilan passif n'est ici qu'une grave constatation, mais il a coûté la vie à des centaines de milliers de gens innocents — femmes, enfants et vieillards — qui, si la situation avait pris une différente tournure, auraient pu vivre encore, et dont certains se seraient éventuellement trouvés parmi nous en tant que représentants de quelque nouvel Etat.

101. Lorsque nous cherchons les causes de l'arrêt du progrès, nous ne sommes pas seulement guidés par une curiosité scientifique ou politique abstraite. Le sang de millions de gens innocents retombe sur ceux que l'opinion publique mondiale montre d'un doigt accusateur.

102. Les causes du maintien à tout prix du système colonial peuvent être classées en trois groupes.

103. Premièrement, les rapports du Comité spécial ont analysé les activités des monopoles étrangers dans trois territoires d'importance décisive. Les trois rapports indiquent la même conclusion: les monopoles internationaux traduisent la sueur et le sang des peuples coloniaux dans "la langue" de milliards de dollars, de livres sterling, de marks ouest-allemands. Certains pays ont un intérêt pécuniaire à maintenir les conditions coloniales. Le premier groupe de causes est donc d'ordre économique.

104. Deuxièmement, le second groupe d'arguments apportés en faveur du maintien des conditions coloniales revêt un caractère politique: "Nous sommes une nation intégrale avec des provinces d'outre-mer", affirme le Portugal. "Nous sommes prédestinés à diriger la race inférieure des Noirs", déclarent les fascistes de l'Afrique du Sud et, avec l'aide tacite mais efficace des Britanniques, le rebelle fasciste de Rhodésie du Sud, Ian Smith. "C'est dans l'intérêt du peuple de l'Arabie du Sud que nous soutenons le gouvernement de la Fédération" annonce au monde le Royaume-Uni. "La souveraineté des îles Maurice et Seychelles ne souffre aucune atteinte du fait que nous en ayons détaché le "British Indian Ocean Territory" à des fins militaires anglo-américaines", nous explique encore le Royaume-Uni. "A la longue, nous préparons la population de l'île de Guam à la nationalité américaine", a déclaré à la dernière session un sénateur américain au sujet de l'île transformée en port-avions aux fins de l'agression américaine au Viet-Nam.

105. Toutes ces allégations, et je n'en ai cité que quelques-unes, reposent sur des bases politiques et ont pour but de présenter comme un "droit inaliénable" des colonisateurs la violation du droit souverain d'autres peuples ou d'une majorité, et visent à déclarer le droit politique du maintien du statu quo. Le deuxième groupe de causes est, on le voit, d'ordre politique.

106. Enfin, le troisième groupe de causes est d'ordre stratégique, militaire. Une des caractéristiques importantes du monde d'aujourd'hui est qu'il se trouve rétréci par suite du développement des transports et communications et de la technique militaire; c'est pourquoi les territoires coloniaux sont partie intégrante de la politique militaire "globale" des puissances coloniales.

107. L'Afrique du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain et les colonies portugaises en Afrique australe sont à juste titre comparables à une forteresse militaire internationale; les petites îles et les territoires coloniaux de moindre importance sont une véritable superstructure de la stratégie globale anglo-américaine. Voici quelques exemples, pris au hasard, de l'usage fait de quelques territoires: Ascension: attaque en 1964 contre la République démocratique du Congo; Guam: agression contre le Viet-Nam; Aden: agression contre les pays arabes; Angola et Mozambique: nombreuses agressions contre les pays africains indépendants voisins (Tanzanie, Zambie, République démocratique du Congo, Malawi).

108. Avant d'en tirer une conclusion, je désire faire remarquer qu'afin d'éviter toute controverse, je n'ai cité que des exemples qui se rapportent à des événements passés réels, pour ne pas être accusé d'évoquer des dangers "théoriques". Bien plus, je ne revendique pas le droit d'auteur et je laisse le soin de formuler la conclusion à l'auteur d'une brochure du British Strategic Studies Institute datée du 26 mars 1966:

"Les bases et les engagements britanniques en Arabie du Sud et dans le golfe Persique continuent à favoriser l'influence occidentale au Moyen-Orient et à décourager toute manifestation de belligérance locale... Elles défendent la route stratégique menant aux positions britanniques dans l'océan Indien et dans l'Asie du Sud-Est et peuvent ainsi être considérées comme contribuant à contenir toute progression d'une puissance communiste dans ces régions. Mais leur objectif essentiel est de défendre le flux du pétrole du Moyen-Orient, d'empêcher ou d'arrêter tout conflit dans leur propre voisinage immédiat et de constituer une base pour des interventions militaires britanniques dans d'autres régions proches." [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. II, par. 323.]

Le troisième motif est donc le maintien de la domination militaire, de la stratégie "globale" d'agression contre le tiers monde et les pays socialistes.

109. Les trois motifs que je viens d'exposer constituent la principale caractéristique des forces qui empêchent la liquidation du système colonial.

110. De quelque côté que l'on examine le colonialisme, on trouve les intérêts étrangers qui empêchent les profits, les régimes racistes et ceux qui en profitent politiquement, le système de travail forcé dans les colonies portugaises et ceux qui ont intérêt à le maintenir, le réseau agressif de bases militaires et ceux dont les forces armées utilisent ces bases.

111. Voici les trois conclusions qui sautent aux yeux: tout cela a été créé contre l'indépendance nationale et le progrès, pour assurer le maintien du statu quo; tout cela sert décidément à maintenir les intérêts matériels, politiques ou militaires d'un groupe de pays industriellement développés; et, enfin, cet état de choses est dépourvu de toute base en droit international et se fonde sur l'usage de la force brutale.

112. Les membres du groupe qui lutte pour le maintien du colonialisme ont deux caractères communs importants: ils sont, d'une façon ou de l'autre, individuellement ou collectivement, alliés militairement aux Etats-Unis. Ils vivent dans le système social du capitalisme, qui est, historiquement parlant, le créateur et, aujourd'hui, le bastion du colonialisme. Voilà les faits.

113. Si la distribution des rôles, la dramatis personae est restée la même au cours des temps, les méthodes employées dans l'intérêt du maintien de la domination sont devenues plus variées et nuancées. Je pense qu'avant d'aborder la question des tâches à accomplir, il faut également parler brièvement des méthodes employées.

114. A présent, les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance sont constitués par le bloc d'Afrique australe ainsi que par de nombreuses îles dispersées dans les océans et par quelques territoires de moindre importance. D'autre part, ces derniers temps, les forces anticolonialistes se sont étendues bien au-delà des frontières géographiques des territoires coloniaux actuels. Je pense aux pays indépendants d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine et aux pays socialistes, ainsi qu'aux organisations régionales, aux conférences internationales et à leurs organes permanents. Une grande personnalité du continent africain d'autorité internationale, le Président de la République de Zambie, a dit le 15 novembre 1966 dans son allocution à l'Assemblée générale:

"Mon gouvernement et mon peuple ne se sont pas seulement souciés de la stabilité et du progrès de la seule Zambie. Nous sommes conscients de nos obligations internationales, non seulement en tant que Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, mais aussi en tant que participant à d'autres organisations internationales et régionales qui, à notre avis, constituent dans leur ensemble un dispositif immense et complexe pour préserver la stabilité, la paix et la sécurité dans le monde entier et pour favoriser une compréhension, une coopération et un progrès authentiques dans la communauté internationale." [1464ème séance, par. 6.]

115. Un important progrès analogue a eu lieu, à l'intérieur des territoires coloniaux par le développement des mouvements et des fronts de libération nationale. Le droit international s'enrichit continuellement par la reconnaissance de la légalité de la lutte pour l'indépendance et par la reconnaissance de la légalité de l'assistance morale et matérielle donnée à cette lutte — pour ne mentionner que ces fonctions essentielles quasi législatives de l'Assemblée générale.

116. C'est à ce milieu changé que doit s'adapter la nouvelle stratégie des forces du colonialisme. Je ne vais me référer qu'à quelques-uns de ses éléments, aux plus typiques. Je les classe selon un seul critère commun, à savoir les droits et intérêts fondamentaux des peuples coloniaux que les puissances coloniales attaquent par ce moyen. Dans cette énumération, j'irai du particulier au général.

117. L'offensive, elle-même, est dirigée contre les conditions d'existence individuelle de la majorité des habitants du territoire colonial, comme il ressort, par exemple, du système de production forcée de café et du sucre dans les colonies portugaises. Elle est dirigée, au mépris de la Charte, de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et de tout instrument international concernant les droits de l'homme, contre les droits et la dignité humaine de chacun des habitants des colonies. C'est à juste raison que, dans son discours déjà cité, l'honorable Président de la Zambie a posé la question:

"En Rhodésie, un petit groupe de fous s'est saisi de l'administration, et plus de 4 millions de personnes sont gardées comme otages; le régime de Smith peut imposer aux Africains n'importe quelles mesures, les détenir, limiter leurs mouvements, les emprisonner impunément. La réaction mondiale, celle en particulier de certaines puissances occidentales, témoigne de peu de compréhension, ou même pas du tout. Si elles comprennent, elles ne montrent guère le désir d'adopter une attitude aussi nette que celle prise au moment de l'incident de Kisangani en 1964. Les 200 000 Blancs sont-ils de meilleurs citoyens de la Rhodésie que les 4 millions de Noirs?"

"Devons-nous maintenant croire que les droits de l'homme sont indivisibles, excepté en Afrique méridionale? Devons-nous accepter que l'égalité des êtres humains devant la loi est vraie, excepté en Afrique du Sud?" [Ibid., par. 52 et 53.]

118. L'offensive est dirigée contre la majorité à l'intérieur du pays et ses intérêts collectifs; elle peut prendre la forme de l'oppression ouverte, comme en Afrique du Sud ou en Rhodésie du Sud, ou consister en l'imposition à la population d'un gouvernement fantoche qui n'est point représentatif, comme à Aden, par exemple. Elle est dirigée, en conséquence, contre l'indépendance politique et économique du territoire colonial.

119. Elle est dirigée contre l'indépendance militaire du territoire colonial, soit par l'installation forcée de bases militaires, comme à Guam, à Aden, etc., soit par le démembrement d'un territoire national, comme dans le cas des îles Maurice et Seychelles. Elle est dirigée, par conséquent, contre l'unité du territoire colonial.

120. Enfin, elle est dirigée — songeons à "l'Alliance impie" — contre l'unité de l'Afrique en tant que continent. Et cela se fait — comme j'ai déjà signalé, et je pourrais encore citer Salazar lui-même — en adoptant la devise que le fascisme a discréditée dans la seconde guerre mondiale: en défense de la civilisation occidentale, ou comme le président Kaunda a dit si pertinemment:

"L'appel à la supériorité raciale, le concept de maître et d'esclave, celui de chrétien et de païen, celui de la civilisation occidentale face à une autre notion assez mal définie, voilà les points de ralliement qui ont permis le maintien du statu quo dans cette région." [1464ème séance, par. 27.]

C'est ce que font les colonialistes — individuellement si cela semble plus opportun, ou en coopération ouverte ou clandestine si cela leur semble plus convenable — comme en témoignent notamment les relations de Smith avec l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal.

121. C'est l'OTAN qui est l'organe militaire et le symbole de cette activité riche en nuances nouvelles qui s'appelle le néo-colonialisme.

122. A mon sincère regret, les événements de ces derniers jours m'obligent à faire une pause dans l'exposé de mes pensées. Nous sommes tous au courant de ce qui se déroule maintenant en Rhodésie du Sud et autour de ce territoire. Il est regrettable mais en somme logique que les événements de ces derniers jours fournissent la preuve de toutes les constatations énumérées dans mon intervention. Le Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni, M. Wilson, a assuré à Smith, par avance, qu'il n'aurait pas recours à la force contre lui. Fort de cette assurance et sûr de l'appui de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal, Smith défie le Gouvernement britannique qui, d'une part, est empêché de prendre des mesures énergiques par les puissants monopoles du Royaume-Uni et, d'autre part, ne veut rien faire qui puisse irriter l'un des plus importants de ses partenaires économiques et commerciaux, la République sud-africaine. Voilà une preuve frappante, de fraîche date, contre le néo-colonialisme, et une réfutation par excellence de toute fausse indignation.

123. Ce n'est pas le respect des droits de l'homme, des idéaux nobles des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ou de l'opinion mondiale, mais la soif inextinguible du profit et de la domination politique et militaire sur les autres peuples qui est le mobile des forces qui agissent dans les coulisses.

124. Je crois que nous sommes tous d'accord pour admettre que le processus de décolonisation est parvenu à une phase très difficile et fort compliquée. Pensons aux territoires moins étendus; l'application des principes fondamentaux n'est pas tout à fait la même en Rhodésie du Sud, qui compte 4 millions d'habitants, que dans une île dont la population ne s'élève qu'à quelques milliers et qui, en même temps, fait partie d'un archipel.

125. D'autre part, une situation relativement nouvelle est aussi survenue au sein de l'Organisation mondiale. Depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration de 1960, l'Assemblée générale a accompli un travail immense. Qu'il me soit permis d'ajouter que cela n'est pas simplement dû à la composition changée de l'Assemblée, bien qu'elle ait été la condition première pour l'adoption de résolutions justes. Qu'il me soit permis de faire remarquer à ce sujet que nous sommes heureux de voir ces changements se poursuivre aujourd'hui même, en accueillant la Barbade dans nos rangs. Cela dit, je crois que la grande majorité de l'Assemblée générale est d'accord avec moi pour constater que le Comité spécial lui aussi mérite les plus grands éloges tant au sein de l'ONU qu'en dehors de l'Organisation.

126. Toutefois, nous devons accepter la situation telle qu'elle est, car ce n'est que dans ce cas que nous pouvons trouver des solutions justes. Pour tracer un tableau complet, cependant, il ne faut pas oublier ce que j'ai dit dès le début, à savoir que le processus de décolonisation a subi un coup d'arrêt. Dans mon intervention, j'ai essayé de relever certaines des causes les plus importantes de cette stagnation.

127. Avant de formuler mes propositions pour quelques tâches qui nous attendent, je voudrais caractériser brièvement la situation qui existe. D'abord, la situation au sein des Nations Unies. Elle comporte deux éléments fondamentaux.

128. D'une part, l'Assemblée générale. L'Assemblée adopte d'année en année des résolutions justes concernant chaque question particulière. Les résolutions, séparément, fournissent d'année en année une analyse de la situation dans les territoires coloniaux particuliers et fixent les tâches à accomplir. Par la suite, cependant, les parties les plus directement intéressées, dont dépend le succès de l'exécution, sabotent, également d'année en année, l'application des résolutions, arguant que les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ont le caractère de recommandations.

129. L'autre élément du travail de l'ONU est le Conseil de sécurité. Le nombre des questions coloniales discutées par le Conseil de sécurité augmente d'année en année. Le ton des résolutions devient plus fort d'année en année. Dans l'affaire de la Rhodésie du Sud, par exemple, nous en sommes déjà au niveau de l'embargo partiel.

130. En dehors de l'ONU, cependant, grâce à une immense pression morale, les colonialistes se voient obligés, dans certains domaines, de poursuivre des activités quasi clandestines. Néanmoins, nous n'avons pas encore été à même d'aller à la racine du mal dans les territoires "difficiles".

131. Dans cette situation, et à cause des nombreuses incidences de la question, je pense qu'il est bon d'affirmer en principe qu'il faut commencer par discuter d'urgence les aspects les plus importants du problème. Sur la base de ce qui précède, ma délégation gation est de l'opinion que l'Assemblée générale devrait tenir compte des considérations suivantes.

132. Premièrement, il existe en Afrique méridionale un complexe qui, pour le moment, résiste à la pression de l'époque et qui, il y a plusieurs années, recevait le nom d'"Alliance impie". Il est temps d'examiner, d'un point de vue tant politique que militaire et économique, non seulement ses membres pris séparément, mais aussi le complexe entier avec toutes ses caractéristiques. Dans ce but, il serait opportun d'inviter le Comité spécial à examiner ce complexe, aussi bien du point de vue de ses relations intérieures, politiques, économiques et militaires, que du point de vue de ses relations extérieures.

133. Lorsqu'il s'agit de la question la plus importante, les membres de cette alliance agissent toujours de concert. Nous devons, nous aussi, les examiner de ce côté également. Il serait bon de prier le Secrétaire de procéder sans délai à la préparation de la documentation nécessaire à cet examen.

134. Deuxièmement, le Comité spécial a déjà examiné les activités des monopoles internationaux dans trois territoires. Les résultats de l'examen sont à notre disposition. Je crois qu'en allant, sous ce rapport également, du particulier vers le général — comme nous le ferons certainement, sur la base des recommandations du Comité spécial —, nous pourrions découvrir nombre d'éléments nouveaux qui faciliteront notre travail ultérieur. L'examen des activités générales des monopoles internationaux dans les colonies sera donc une mesure juste et nécessaire.

135. Troisièmement, toujours sur la base des considérations mentionnées, et au sujet de l'examen des tâches relatives à un autre domaine, je voudrais citer le paragraphe 14 du dispositif de la résolution 2105 (XX) adoptée à la session dernière de l'Assemblée générale:

"L'Assemblée générale

"...

"Prie le Secrétaire général de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour favoriser une large diffusion de la Déclaration et faire largement connaître les travaux du Comité spécial, afin que l'opinion mondiale puisse être suffisamment informée de la grave menace à la paix que constituent le colonialisme et l'apartheid et invite toutes les puissances administrantes à coopérer avec le Secrétaire général dans l'exécution de sa tâche."

136. Je pense que la résolution est assez claire. En conséquence, je voudrais, d'une part, faire une constatation et, d'autre part, présenter une requête.

137. D'abord la constatation: l'une des caractéristiques importantes de l'ONU est qu'elle est un forum international de manière générale et, du point de vue de l'ordre du jour, le forum international le plus important de la lutte anticolonialiste. Cela signifie, en d'autres termes, qu'elle fournit un immense forum international, par exemple, aux représentants des mouvements de libération nationale. Ce qui fait l'importance de ce forum, c'est que la presse mondiale assure une vaste publicité aux travaux de l'ONU et que, d'autre part, les résolutions adoptées deviennent d'importantes armes d'assistance morale aux luttes de libération nationale. Enfin — et c'est le dernier élément de la constatation — l'ONU remplit sa tâche seulement si elle fait, elle aussi, tout son possible pour que — comme la résolution stipule — l'opinion mondiale soit suffisamment informée des aspects importants de ses travaux. De plus, le paragraphe précité de la résolution s'adresse aussi au service compétent de l'Organisation, bien entendu par l'intermédiaire du Secrétaire général.

138. Ma requête — que ma délégation a une fois soumise, en partie, à la Quatrième Commission, mais qui est restée sans réponse — est la suivante: ma délégation prie officiellement et formellement le Secrétaire général d'ordonner au Service de l'information de présenter à l'Assemblée générale, le plus tôt possible au cours de la discussion, un rapport détaillé sur l'application du paragraphe 14 de la résolution 2105 (XX) et sur les moyens qu'il envisage à ce propos.

139. Quatrièmement, ma dernière proposition a trait au travail du Conseil de sécurité. Je pense, d'abord, qu'il ne suffit pas qu'il poursuive le travail de l'Assemblée générale. Je suis convaincu que la majorité de l'Assemblée générale est d'accord pour constater que, dans le sud du continent africain, ce ne sont pas seulement les membres individuels de l'Alliance impie, mais aussi le complexe entier qui menace la paix du continent africain, donc la paix et la sécurité internationales. De plus, cet état de choses mènera tôt ou tard au point où non seulement certains domaines ou aspects du système colonial, mais aussi l'existence même du colonialisme, menaceront la paix et la sécurité. On peut constater en même temps que l'Assemblée générale, à elle seule, ne vient pas à bout des colonialistes. Il faut que le Conseil de sécurité, cet organe de l'ONU qui est seul habilité à recourir à la force, s'associe plus activement que jusqu'ici à la lutte anticolonialiste. Je recommande donc de proposer au Conseil de sécurité, d'une part, d'examiner, non seulement du point de vue des questions d'actualité soulevées en des occasions particulières, mais d'une manière générale et systématique, la situation dans les territoires où la paix et la sécurité sont menacées et, d'autre part, de tirer des conclusions, en allant du particulier vers le général, par exemple dans le cas de l'Alliance impie. Un examen juste et complet peut donner naissance à une série de mesures coercitives bien réfléchies pouvant briser la résistance des derniers bastions du colonialisme.

140. Pour conclure, je désire exprimer la plus haute appréciation de ma délégation au Comité spécial, à ses sous-comités et à tous ceux qui les ont assistés dans leur travail. Pour notre part, nous approuvons les conclusions et les recommandations du Comité spécial sur les territoires particuliers et sur les questions générales.

141. Nous sommes convaincus que, se basant sur les résolutions justes de l'Assemblée générale, le Comité spécial accomplira l'année prochaine un travail encore plus efficace. De notre côté, nous nous sommes efforcés, dans la présente intervention, de proposer quelques idées pour contribuer au succès de son travail futur.

142. M. BUSNIAK (République socialiste tchécoslovaque) [traduit du russe]: La Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée à sa quinzième session et dont elle examine aujourd'hui l'application est sans aucun doute l'un des documents les plus importants des Nations Unies. La Déclaration procède du fait que le colonialisme, qui est la forme la plus grossière d'exploitation de peuples entiers, est une des réalités les plus honteuses, les plus anachroniques du XXème siècle au cours duquel des perspectives jusqu'alors inconnues se sont ouvertes devant l'humanité — révolution technique, exploration de l'espace extra-atmosphérique, bouleversements socio-culturels et instauration de relations nouvelles entre les pays et entre les peuples.

143. Le régime colonial est complètement compromis et condamné par l'opinion mondiale et tous les peuples; c'est ce que confirme le fait qu'aucune puissance coloniale n'a cru pouvoir élever la voix contre l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et qu'à l'exclusion du seul Portugal, toutes les métropoles ont jugé nécessaire non seulement en théorie, mais aussi dans la pratique, de reconnaître le droit légitime des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

144. Il y a lieu de s'inquiéter, toutefois, que, malgré les dispositions de la Déclaration qui exigent qu'il soit mis rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, la vingt et unième session de l'Assemblée générale est contrainte, six ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, d'examiner le problème de la décolonisation avec encore plus d'insistance que précédemment.

145. C'est un fait dont nous sommes tous témoins que sur notre planète vivent des millions d'hommes qui n'ont jamais connu la liberté et l'indépendance et qui n'ont jamais eu la possibilité d'exercer leur droit à l'autodétermination. Et cela en dépit du fait que la communauté internationale tout entière est imprégnée, pour employer une métaphore, des engagements solennels et des plus nobles déclarations sur la liberté et la dignité de l'homme, et cela en dépit de l'existence de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

146. La Rhodésie du Sud, la politique d'apartheid du Gouvernement de la République sud-africaine, le Sud-Ouest africain, l'Angola, le Mozambique, la Guinée dite portugaise, Aden et Oman, pour ne citer que ces territoires sont des exemples classiques du colonialisme et nos délibérations sur le problème de la décolonisation traduisent toute la profondeur et toute l'horreur de la brutale exploitation et de l'asservissement colonial.

147. Surtout dans le sud de l'Afrique, les régimes racistes et coloniaux qui contrôlent de vastes territoires peuplés de millions d'Africains intensifient leur opposition au processus de décolonisation. Leur attitude envers la Déclaration, envers les efforts que fait l'Organisation et envers les décisions que nous adoptons ici ne fait que traduire leur mépris de l'Organisation, de ses buts, de son programme. L'année dernière, ces régimes ont renforcé les liens qui les unissaient et se sont aidés mutuellement en boycottant ouvertement les mesures de décolonisation de l'ONU. Le resserrement des liens économiques et politiques en Afrique australe ne fait qu'accroître le danger d'une alliance des régimes coloniaux et racistes qui sont prêts à lutter non seulement pour enrayer la décolonisation de l'Afrique, mais aussi pour recoloniser les anciens territoires dépendants.

148. L'Assemblée générale dispose d'une documentation suffisante qui corrobore cette conclusion. A la présente session, le Portugal a réaffirmé qu'il ne comptait pas accorder l'indépendance aux territoires africains qui se trouvaient sous sa domination et qu'il refusait d'appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Ian Smith a rappelé récemment que son régime raciste lutterait jusqu'au bout pour son existence et la République sud-africaine a refusé d'une façon tout aussi brutale de mettre fin à sa politique d'apartheid et à ses tentatives d'annexer le Sud-Ouest africain.

149. On sait qu'il ne s'agit pas ici seulement de déclarations vides de sens puisque ces régimes mettent en œuvre leur politique dans la pratique en prenant des mesures concrètes d'oppression, des mesures d'exception, en renforçant la terreur coloniale et en développant le système de discrimination raciale. En Afrique, il est en train de se créer un front des forces de la réaction, du colonialisme et du racisme dont le programme consiste en fait à employer la force pour écraser le mouvement de libération nationale, ce qui crée une menace permanente à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

150. L'Organisation des Nations Unies a le devoir d'accorder toute son attention à cette question si importante. Si elle veut faire face à la situation qui s'est créée dans cette région du monde, que l'on a appelée à juste titre "l'Afrique au sud du Zambèze", avec réalisme, elle doit multiplier ses efforts pour mettre en œuvre des mesures concertées qui permettraient d'en finir avec cette situation insupportable. Le Conseil de sécurité en particulier peut et doit jouer le rôle important qui lui revient dans ce domaine.

151. Si l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a marqué un ralentissement, cela tient au fait que les métropoles ne sont pas seules à s'opposer de toutes leurs forces à l'élimination du colonialisme; d'autres puissances, qui apparaissent à l'arrière-plan, apportent un appui plein et entier à la politique coloniale, sans leur soutien, cette politique ainsi que les séquelles du colonialisme auraient été depuis longtemps balayées. La vaste alliance des Etats occidentaux, qui a un caractère agressif, constitue pour les régimes coloniaux et racistes un point d'appui sur lequel ceux-ci comptent sans réserve lorsqu'ils élaborent leurs plans militaires et stratégiques.

152. La décolonisation fait partie intégrante de l'évolution de l'humanité vers le progrès, vers l'égalité, vers l'établissement de relations amicales entre les peuples et elle est une condition de leur liberté, comme le proclame le préambule de la Déclaration. C'est de ce point de vue qu'il faut envisager la politique des colonialistes et de tous ceux qui les soutiennent.

153. Permettez-moi, à l'aide de quelques exemples, d'attirer votre attention sur les groupements qui ici même, dans notre Organisation, se constituent lors de l'examen des questions liées à l'élimination du colonialisme.

154. Les pays ci-après ont voté contre la résolution 2105 (XX) dans laquelle l'Assemblée générale a pris position sur la question qui nous occupe et dont les auteurs étaient presque exclusivement des Etats ayant l'expérience la plus amère de l'assujettissement colonial: Australie, Nouvelle-Zélande, Portugal, République sud-africaine, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord et Etats-Unis d'Amérique. Un autre épisode où cette coalition s'est manifestée au grand jour s'est déroulé le 23 mai 1966 lorsque le projet de résolution des Etats africains sur la Rhodésie du Sud a été mis aux voix. A cette occasion, l'alliance occidentale a empêché l'adoption de l'important projet de résolution du Mali, du Nigéria et de l'Ouganda^{2/}. Il est caractéristique qu'au cours de la session africaine du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, la délégation des Etats-Unis d'Amérique n'ait voté que pour un seul des sept projets de résolution adoptés et encore s'agissait-il d'un projet sur lequel la Puissance administrante elle-même était d'accord.

155. C'est là précisément qu'il faut chercher la raison pour laquelle la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux n'est pas appliquée. Je voudrais souligner à ce propos qu'il n'est pas seulement question ici de la position prise par ces puissances lors des votes qui interviennent dans notre Organisation, ou de l'expression de certains points de vue déterminés, mais bien d'une coalition entre les colonialistes et ceux qui les protègent, coalition qui se traduit par la fourniture de quantités importantes d'armes très variées ainsi que d'une assistance économique et financière par des investissements, par des fournitures de matériel et surtout, malheureusement, par les souffrances indicibles des peuples coloniaux qui sont asservis.

156. A ce propos, je ne saurais passer sous silence des preuves et les renseignements qui ont été fournis au Comité des Vingt-Quatre lors des séances qu'il a tenues à Alger par les pétitionnaires venant des colonies portugaises et par un ancien officier de l'armée coloniale portugaise qui n'ont pu que susciter l'horreur devant le cynisme qui caractérise les guerres coloniales actuelles. C'est en vérité un témoignage bouleversant sur notre temps.

157. De nombreuses guerres coloniales et guerres d'agression ont bénéficié du plein appui de l'OTAN. Ce pacte se fonde de façon tout arbitraire sur la doctrine selon laquelle tout succès du mouvement de libération nationale constitue une menace pour les positions militaires et stratégiques de ce bloc et considère les colonies comme une sorte de base d'appui pour les actes d'intervention et d'agression dirigés contre les peuples qui luttent pour leur libération.

158. On ne peut manquer de souligner que les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, par exemple, utilisent leurs territoires coloniaux du Pacifique pour mener leur guerre d'agression au Viet-Nam.

159. La Déclaration n'est pas non plus mise en œuvre dans la mesure où les puissances coloniales refusent de donner effet aux mesures prévues dans les diverses résolutions que notre Organisation a adoptées au sujet de l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale ou au sujet de diverses questions coloniales. Le Royaume-Uni qui, par ses manœuvres et ses entorses systématiques à l'application des résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, a en fait contribué directement à la création d'un deuxième régime raciste en Afrique, porte une lourde responsabilité à l'égard de l'ONU et du monde entier.

160. Une autre circonstance grave est la non-exécution par certains pays, notamment par les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, le Royaume-Uni et la République fédérale d'Allemagne, des mesures adoptées par l'ONU à l'égard de l'Afrique du Sud, de la Rhodésie du Sud et du Portugal. Le renforcement de la coopération économique et militaire entre la République fédérale d'Allemagne et les régimes racistes de l'Afrique du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Sud, ainsi que celui de Salazar au Portugal, fait peser une lourde menace sur l'avenir de l'Afrique. Les puissances occidentales incitent même la République fédérale d'Allemagne à mener cette politique qui perpétue les traditions du colonialisme allemand en pensant que la RFA, Etat non membre des Nations Unies, pourra échapper aux critiques et aux mesures que pourra prendre contre elle l'Organisation.

161. Les Etats que j'ai mentionnés aident les monopoles à augmenter leurs investissements dans les colonies, à s'emparer des richesses naturelles et à exploiter la main-d'œuvre locale de la façon la plus grossière. Il est manifeste que les intérêts économiques et financiers sont la base de l'intérêt que les Etats-Unis, le Royaume-Uni, la République fédérale d'Allemagne et d'autres puissances occidentales portent au maintien du système colonial en Afrique, dans le sud de la Péninsule arabique et ailleurs. L'activité des monopoles étrangers dans les pays coloniaux est devenue le principal obstacle au progrès des peuples dans la voie de la liberté et de l'indépendance.

162. Une des conditions essentielles d'une véritable décolonisation est le démantèlement de toutes les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux. Il ne semble plus nécessaire de prouver ici à quel point cette exigence est fondée. La question ne fait pas de doute; cela a été confirmé par la vingtième session de l'Assemblée générale aussi bien que par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Il est inutile de préciser en détail à quelle fin les bases militaires établies à Aden, à Guam et dans d'autres territoires ont été et sont encore utilisées ou de quelle manière s'est déroulée l'intervention au Congo.

163. La thèse selon laquelle le colonialisme est inconcevable sans armée coloniale et sans bases mili-

taires est entièrement justifiée. Voilà pourquoi il est d'autant plus inquiétant d'apprendre que le nombre des bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux, loin de diminuer, augmente dans certaines régions et que ces bases y sont élargies.

164. Il est particulièrement dangereux de voir les puissances occidentales s'efforcer de plus en plus souvent de s'assurer, après l'octroi d'une indépendance de pure forme, le maintien des bases qu'elles possédaient, en vertu "d'accords de défense", c'est-à-dire d'accords inégaux conclus encore sous l'ère coloniale.

165. A sa vingt et unième session, l'Assemblée générale doit condamner résolument les tentatives de ce genre qui visent à imposer une volonté étrangère aux peuples qui n'ont pas encore acquis une pleine indépendance et recommander au Comité des Vingt-Quatre d'étudier de façon approfondie la question des bases militaires établies dans les territoires coloniaux et de mettre au point des mesures destinées à mettre en œuvre le plus rapidement possible le paragraphe 12 de la résolution 2105 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale.

166. Je juge aussi indispensable d'attirer l'attention sur le fait que, depuis quelque temps, les métropoles ont de plus en plus tendance à créer dans les territoires coloniaux, sous le couvert des formes les plus variées d'autonomie et de semi-autonomie, des régimes non représentatifs en vue de conserver ces territoires dans leur dépendance même après avoir été contraints de leur accorder une indépendance formelle.

167. Les déclarations que le Royaume-Uni a faites récemment à la Quatrième Commission à propos d'Aden n'ont pu dissiper les doutes et les craintes que nous éprouvions de voir la Puissance administrante aller de l'avant dans la réalisation de ses plans visant à transformer Aden et les autres parties de l'Arabie du Sud en une formation néo-colonialiste qui leur permettrait de conserver sa position de domination politique et militaire.

168. Les discussions qui se sont déroulées à la Quatrième Commission en 1966 ont fait ressortir la nécessité de consacrer une attention toute particulière aux différentes manœuvres néo-colonialistes, qu'il s'agisse de leur volonté de tourner la résolution 1514 (XV) en établissant des régimes indépendants ou autonomes de pure forme, des activités des monopoles, et des capitaux étrangers qui constituent la base matérielle de la dépendance et de l'assujettissement néo-colonialiste, de la création et du maintien de bases militaires ou de la violation au moyen de la force de l'intégrité territoriale des pays coloniaux.

169. L'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies, qui a considéré le colonialisme, l'apartheid et toutes les manifestations de discrimination raciale comme une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales et comme des crimes contre l'humanité, a tiré une leçon importante des événements en reconnaissant la légitimité de la lutte des peuples qui souffrent sous la domination coloniale, pour l'autodétermination et l'indépendance et en invitant les Etats à apporter toute l'assistance matérielle et morale possible au mouvement de libération nationale.

170. Le fait que l'existence même du colonialisme repose sur le recours constant à la force et à l'agression contre les peuples opprimés des colonies, donne à ces peuples un droit inconditionnel à la légitime défense, et ce par tous les moyens, y compris l'attaque armée, qui doivent leur garantir le droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

171. Ce droit des peuples qui vivent encore sous la domination coloniale a été de nouveau exprimé dans une résolution de la présente session sur l'interdiction de recourir à la force dans les relations internationales et le respect du droit à l'autodétermination des peuples, dans laquelle il est directement fait état de la Charte des Nations Unies.

172. La résolution 2160 (XXI), à laquelle je viens de faire allusion, a de nouveau confirmé le droit des peuples qui se trouvent sous la domination coloniale à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance ainsi que le droit de chaque nation, petite ou grande, à choisir, sans aucune intervention extérieure, son système politique, social et économique.

173. C'est sur cette base, et en se référant à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux ainsi qu'à la Déclaration sur l'inadmissibilité de l'intervention que l'Assemblée générale, lors de sa présente session, a formulé une thèse importante selon laquelle toute action coercitive, directe ou indirecte, qui prive les peuples placés sous la domination étrangère de leur droit à l'autodétermination, à la liberté et à l'indépendance, ainsi que le droit de choisir librement leur propre statut politique et de réaliser leur développement économique, social et culturel, constitue une violation de la Charte des Nations Unies. C'est à la lumière de ce que je viens de dire qu'il faudra, à l'avenir, analyser de façon très concrète tous les agissements des colonialistes et de ceux qui les soutiennent.

174. La délégation tchécoslovaque estime de son devoir de dire, pour conclure, quelques mots à propos du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Nous estimons que c'est un organe vraiment efficace qui s'est acquitté d'une tâche importante et utile. Au cours de sa session d'Afrique notamment, qui s'est tenue en mai-juin 1966, il a adopté tout un ensemble de décisions importantes qu'il convient d'appuyer par tous les moyens dont on dispose [A/6300, chap. V (première partie), par. 649-616]. Bien que la République socialiste tchécoslovaque ne soit pas membre du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, elle compte à l'avenir suivre de près ses travaux et, dans la mesure de ses possibilités, participer à son activité.

175. En conclusion, je tiens à assurer l'Assemblée générale que la lutte pour l'élimination rapide et complète du colonialisme restera un des aspects essentiels de la politique étrangère de la Tchécoslovaquie et que notre pays continuera, avec toute la diligence voulue, à appuyer de tous ses moyens la lutte que mènent tous les peuples opprimés pour se libérer du joug colonial et pour assurer le respect du droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

La séance est levée à 12 h 55.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

23. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de donner la parole aux représentants inscrits sur la liste, je la donne au représentant du Sierra Leone qui désire présenter un projet de résolution.

24. M. COLLIER (Sierra Leone) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il m'a été demandé de formuler, au nom des auteurs du projet de résolution contenu dans le document A/L.506, quelques observations en guise d'introduction. Auparavant, je voudrais toutefois faire remarquer que l'Irak figure maintenant sur la liste des auteurs du projet de résolution. Je suis sûr que de nombreuses autres délégations auront désiré s'y faire inscrire également quand nous aurons terminé l'examen de cette question. Le projet de résolution a maintenant pour auteurs les pays suivants: Afghanistan, Algérie, Côte d'Ivoire, Ethiopie, Inde, Irak, *Voir également par. 79 ci-après.

Koweït, Libéria, Mauritanie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Sierra Leone, Syrie et Yougoslavie.

25. Ce projet de résolution couvre à peu près l'ensemble de la question au point où en est parvenu ce débat sur le colonialisme. Ainsi qu'il ressort clairement des paragraphes du préambule, de nombreuses résolutions ont été adoptées sur ce sujet, et ces paragraphes rappellent certaines résolutions qui ont été adoptées relativement à divers aspects du problème. Mais ce projet de résolution tire essentiellement sa force du rapport du Comité spécial [A/6300/Rev.1] dont nous sommes saisis. Ce rapport concerne les travaux accomplis par le Comité spécial au cours de l'année écoulée. Il est exact que l'Assemblée générale sera saisie de projets de résolution concernant spécifiquement divers points de l'ordre du jour du Comité spécial sur la fin du colonialisme, mais le présent projet est un document complet qui embrasse toute l'étendue de la question, et j'estime qu'il est important parce qu'il traite de certains principes fondamentaux liés à ce problème et appelle l'attention de l'Assemblée générale sur les difficultés auxquelles se heurte la tâche de la décolonisation et sur les solutions qui, à notre avis, mettront un terme à ces difficultés.

26. Le facteur le plus important, sur lequel nous avons insisté dans le préambule, est que, six ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, nous constatons que le colonialisme continue de sévir. C'est sur cette constatation que nous nous sommes appuyés, dans le projet de résolution, pour faire ressortir les causes de cette situation. Cela a été fait particulièrement dans les paragraphes du dispositif, et je voudrais citer à ce propos le paragraphe 6:

"Déclare que la persistance du régime colonial met en danger la paix et la sécurité internationales et que la pratique de l'apartheid, ainsi que de toute forme de discrimination raciale, est un crime contre l'humanité".

27. Il s'agit là d'un élément nouveau et important que nous mettons en évidence, parce que, ainsi qu'il a été déclaré au cours des débats, le colonialisme a atteint des proportions dont notre organisation internationale doit prendre dûment note. Le moment est venu où l'unanimité devrait se faire au sein de la communauté internationale pour définir le colonialisme comme il convient, c'est-à-dire comme un crime contre l'humanité. Cela est particulièrement important alors que l'ONU traite, en un autre lieu, de la question de la Rhodésie, autre expression du colonialisme, qui ne revêt pas là seulement son caractère traditionnel, mais comporte aussi une part de racisme. C'est pourquoi nous avons mentionné cet aspect du problème au paragraphe 6.

28. Nous avons introduit un nouvel élément, que l'on trouve au paragraphe 15 du dispositif et qui est ainsi exprimé:

"Invite le Comité spécial, chaque fois qu'il le jugera pertinent et opportun, à recommander une date limite pour l'accession à l'indépendance de chaque territoire considéré...".

Nous estimons que, dans le contexte général de la persistance du colonialisme, le moment est venu où le Comité spécial devrait être en mesure de recommander des dates limites d'accession à l'indépendance. Nous croyons que cela peut se faire et nous pensons que c'est une tâche à laquelle le Comité spécial devrait s'employer.

29. Le projet de résolution contient de nombreuses propositions que nous avons déjà adoptées, aussi devrait-il être relativement facile à l'Assemblée d'adopter ces recommandations maintenant. Nous avons, par exemple, insisté sur le fait que, dans le sud de l'Afrique, nous voyons aujourd'hui l'"alliance impie" du Portugal, de l'Afrique du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Sud établir une sorte de rempart contre le progrès dans cette partie du continent et, par ce comportement, mettre en danger la paix internationale. Cet aspect de la question a été mentionné dans des résolutions antérieures et nous l'avons rappelé en insistant davantage cette fois-ci.

30. Un autre élément d'une extrême importance, mentionné dans ce projet de résolution, est le rôle joué par des intérêts financiers et des monopoles. Nous voyons avec regret de nombreux pays, en particulier des pays capitalistes, appuyer des résolutions contre le colonialisme, mais faire très peu d'efforts pour empêcher leurs ressortissants de se livrer aux activités qui ont rendu possible le colonialisme et lui ont permis de se développer à notre époque.

31. Nous avons donc fait figurer dans les paragraphes du dispositif d'importantes dispositions destinées à empêcher ces pratiques. Nous avons également souligné le rôle utile que le Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés pourrait jouer en allégeant les souffrances des réfugiés qui ont fui leur pays pour échapper à l'oppression et aux conditions déplorables créées par le colonialisme dans ces territoires.

32. Nous avons aussi rappelé qu'il existe dans les territoires coloniaux des bases militaires qui devraient être démantelées. Ainsi qu'on l'a déjà fait remarquer, ces bases militaires, parfois établies dans des territoires coloniaux au nom des intérêts militaires et prétendument mondiaux des grandes puissances — intérêts qui, très souvent, soit dit en passant, ne jouent pas un grand rôle dans la vie des territoires où ces bases ont été établies —, ont fréquemment servi de tremplins pour des attaques contre les citoyens de ces territoires qui cherchent légitimement à se débarrasser du colonialisme. Nous avons insisté sur cela dans le paragraphe 11 du dispositif et nous prions effectivement les puissances coloniales de démanteler ces bases militaires.

33. Nous avons aussi inclus dans ce projet l'important principe, approuvé l'année dernière, selon lequel les luttes des peuples pour leur libération sont légitimes et doivent être encouragées de toutes les manières possibles, et selon lequel, toujours, ceux qui y prennent part doivent être considérés comme des citoyens respectables et des patriotes travaillant légitimement à liquider le colonialisme et à libérer leur pays de la contrainte et de l'oppression.

34. Nous recherchons également, par ce projet de résolution, le renouvellement du mandat du Comité spécial. Nous estimons que l'existence du Comité spécial sur la fin du colonialisme a fortement contribué au processus de décolonisation. Le Comité s'est ré-vélé un organisme très utile qui a exercé une étroite surveillance sur ce qui s'est passé dans ces terri-toires.

35. Nous avons également souligné l'importance des missions de visite. Nous sommes d'avis que ces vi-sites servent très utilement à mettre en relief les efforts déployés par l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour trouver des solutions pratiques aux problèmes internationaux. Il est excellent d'adopter des réso-lutions. Malheureusement, un grand nombre d'entre elles ont peu de chance d'être mises en pratique. Mais dans le domaine du colonialisme, beaucoup peut être fait et, en vérité, beaucoup a déjà été fait. Nous croyons que cette intervention directe dans les régions où subsiste le colonialisme est une source d'inspiration pour ceux qui sont engagés dans la lutte. Nous pensons que ces visites ont fait la preuve de leur utilité, aussi recommandons-nous qu'elles continuent et que des dispositions soient prises à cet effet.

36. En définitive, ce projet de résolution ne contient rien de réellement nouveau. Il vise uniquement à exposer en une seule résolution les problèmes qui, selon nous, restent posés et les solutions qui peuvent être recommandées. Nous croyons que, au stade où en est parvenu le débat aux Nations Unies, nous devrions pouvoir rechercher de nouvelles mesures pour résoudre ces problèmes malheureusement an-ciens. Nous devrions par exemple, ainsi que je l'ai déjà dit, reconnaître que le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes entre véritablement dans la catégorie des crimes contre l'humanité. Nous croyons que la légi-timité des luttes actuelles comme celles que mènent les patriotes et les combattants de la libération devrait être reconnue.

37. Nous insistons aussi sur le fait que le colo-nialisme, dans ses odieuses manifestations actuelles, est très fortement teinté de racisme. Nous voyons cette clique, cette alliance, cette entente, fortement implantée dans la partie méridionale de l'Afrique, en Afrique du Sud, au Portugal et en Rhodésie du Sud. Cette alliance doit être reconnue pour ce qu'elle est et des mesures énergiques doivent être prises pour la briser.

38. Nous reconnaissons aussi le fait que, n'étaient les pratiques et les activités des monopoles, ainsi que les agissements de certains nationaux de territoires coloniaux qui prétendent le combattre, le colonialisme cesserait d'être un cancer dans la communauté inter-nationale.

39. Nous avons exposé tous ces faits et nous espé-rons que toutes les délégations qui ont affirmé en maintes occasions leur horreur du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et déclaré combien elles tenaient à tout faire pour éliminer le colonialisme de l'his-toire de notre temps n'auront aucune difficulté à appuyer ce projet de résolution.

40. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Le projet de résolution a été présenté par le représentant du Sierra Leone au nom de ses auteurs. Je tiens à remercier les auteurs du projet de résolution d'avoir présenté celui-ci au commencement du débat. C'est là, à mon avis, un effort de coopération très construc-tif, parce que les orateurs qui désireront intervenir dans le débat général sur le projet de résolution à mesure qu'il se déroulera auront en main le docu-ment au sujet duquel l'Assemblée pourra prendre une décision. Je leur suis reconnaissant d'avoir présenté ce projet de résolution dès maintenant et d'en avoir expliqué les buts.

41. Je donne la parole au représentant de la Répu-blique-Unie de Tanzanie, un des auteurs du projet de résolution, pour un complément d'explications sur les buts visés par les dispositions de ce projet.

42. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: La Tanzanie désire formuler quelques observations au sujet du projet de réso-lution [A/L.506] présenté par le représentant du Sierra Leone et dont elle est un des auteurs. Ma délégation a pris note avec satisfaction de la possi-bilité que nous aurons, ainsi que vous nous en avez informés ce matin, Monsieur le Président, de faire au fur et à mesure du débat des observations géné-rales sur le projet de résolution, et telle est précisé-ment l'intention de ma délégation. Il me semble que si je devais commenter ce projet paragraphe par paragraphe, je ne ferais que répéter ce qui a déjà été dit par le représentant du Sierra Leone. Néanmoins, afin de ne laisser dans l'ombre aucun point du projet, je vais m'efforcer d'en tracer un tableau fidèle dans la mesure où le permettra ma courte déclaration.

43. Il y a maintenant six ans qu'a été adoptée par l'Assemblée générale la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, et cependant nous en sommes encore aujourd'hui à dis-cuter la question du colonialisme pour la seule raison que certaines puissances ont refusé d'observer les dispositions de cette résolution. Et comme l'a fait justement remarquer le représentant du Sierra Leone, nous prenons note de ce fait dans un des paragraphes du préambule.

44. Ma délégation désire souligner la nécessité ur-gente de l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. C'est là de toute évidence une tâche dont il est extrêmement urgent de s'acquitter en Afrique et dans le monde entier. Si nous voulons que nous soient épargnées les explosions qui pourraient conduire à une autre guerre mondiale, la décolonisation doit être menée à son terme maintenant.

45. Pendant des siècles, l'Afrique a souffert de la domination et de l'exploitation étrangères. Aujourd'hui, le tiers environ du continent languit encore sous le colonialisme, l'impérialisme et l'humiliation ra-ciale. L'asservissement de l'Afrique et des Africains et les abus commis à leur égard par les colonialistes, les impérialistes et les régimes racistes sont intolérables et sont une insulte à l'humanité tout entière.

46. Mais qu'il me soit permis de souligner une fois de plus que les peuples d'Afrique ont pris une déci-sion solennelle. L'Organisation de l'unité africaine et les combattants de la liberté de ces colonies ont résolu de faire cesser immédiatement l'humiliation dont n'a cessé de souffrir l'Afrique, et j'ajoute que ce ferme désir se trouve fortement appuyé par la résolution 1514 (XV) adoptée par l'Assemblée géné-rale et rappelée dans un des paragraphes du disposi-tif de notre projet de résolution. Il n'est pas surpre-nant que certaines puissances coloniales redoutent le mouvement de libération, mais elles doivent bien se persuader qu'elles n'abusent qu'elles-mêmes en pratiquant la politique de l'autruche.

47. Elles ne parviendront jamais à dissimuler au monde les pratiques criminelles perpétrées dans les colonies et que dénoncent les honnêtes gens et les Nations Unies par la voix du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Permettez-moi cependant d'ajouter qu'il est tout à fait déplorable que, encore à l'heure actuelle, une petite, mais puissante, minorité de Membres de notre organisation continue de pratiquer le colonialisme et d'apporter un soutien moral, économique, militaire et autre à des régimes aussi inhumains et promis à la ruine que ceux de Salazar, Vorster et Smith. Aussi bien, ce point a-t-il été mentionné également dans notre projet de résolution. Ces puissances, est-il besoin de le dire, continuent de fournir à Salazar, Vorster et Smith une assistance économique et militaire pour combattre les principes de liberté et de dignité humaines. Permettez-moi d'insister ici sur le rôle joué par les puissances occidentales. Je sais que certaines délégations ici présentes nous diront que nous faisons preuve de partialité en mentionnant ces faits, mais le Comité des Vingt-Quatre n'en a pas moins recueilli d'abondants témoignages qui prouvent le bien-fondé de notre cause. C'est pourquoi nous avons inclus cet aspect de la question dans notre projet de résolution.

48. Les puissances occidentales doivent comprendre qu'en soutenant le colonialisme elles affaiblissent l'autorité même de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. De simples déclarations d'intention de notre part ne sont plus suffisantes; nous ne pouvons continuer de parler des droits de l'homme; nous ne pouvons continuer d'adopter des conventions sur les droits de l'homme et prétendre que nous apportons le progrès à l'humanité si nous ne sommes pas capables de vaincre le colonialisme. Celui-ci est actuellement le principal défi à la dignité et à la liberté de l'homme.

49. Je me permets d'assurer certaines puissances occidentales qu'il est indiscutablement de leur intérêt que la décolonisation soit menée à son terme. Si elle ne l'est pas, il peut en résulter une de ces catastrophes que la Charte des Nations Unies tend précisément à éviter. Je ne pense pas exagérer en disant que les nuées annonciatrices d'une telle catastrophe sont maintenant visibles en Rhodésie du Sud.

50. Cependant, avant d'aborder certains aspects essentiels de la question de la décolonisation, je voudrais souligner une fois encore ce que nous avons si souvent déclaré, à savoir que le colonialisme est véritablement un crime contre l'humanité. Je n'ai pas besoin d'ajouter que l'on retrouvera très souvent cette expression dans nos projets de résolution. Nous avons vu comment les régimes coloniaux ont commis ces crimes depuis l'origine du colonialisme en Afrique et dans le monde entier. C'est ainsi que, au Congo, le roi Léopold a fait massacrer plus d'un million d'Africains; au Sud-Ouest africain, les Allemands ont fait des centaines de milliers de victimes parmi l'héroïque peuple herero; au Tanganyika — devenu la Tanzanie —, en 1895, les Allemands firent périr plus de 150 000 personnes; au Soudan, le valeureux peuple soulevé sous la conduite du Mahdi a été impitoyablement massacré.

51. Tous ces crimes sont imputables aux aventures coloniales et continuent d'être commis dans les territoires coloniaux qui subsistent en Afrique et dans le reste du monde. Il n'est que de se souvenir, par exemple, que plus de 300 000 personnes, pour la plupart des femmes et des enfants sans défense, ont été sauvagement massacrées en Angola en 1961 et que des milliers de femmes et d'enfants incapables de se défendre sont chaque jour assassinés par les colonisateurs portugais en Angola, au Mozambique et en Guinée dite portugaise.

52. Puis-je rappeler aux Membres de l'Organisation que des milliers de personnes en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain, en Afrique du Sud et dans les colonies portugaises languissent dans des cachots pour la seule raison qu'elles défendent la cause de la liberté. Si tous ces crimes ne peuvent être qualifiés de crimes contre l'humanité, comme nous les avons qualifiés dans notre projet de résolution, ma délégation serait en droit de se demander ce que les créateurs de cette expression ont voulu entendre par là. Si nous reconnaissons au contraire que ces crimes commis par certaines puissances coloniales sont des crimes contre l'humanité, je me demanderai pourquoi l'Organisation internationale ne peut prendre de mesures pour les faire cesser.

53. Si l'on veut que l'Organisation internationale fasse honneur à ses responsabilités envers l'humanité, des mesures doivent être prises au sujet de ces crimes. En fait, j'irai jusqu'à déclarer qu'il est grand temps pour nous de créer aux Nations Unies un organisme chargé d'enquêter sur ces crimes et de se préoccuper de la meilleure manière d'en châtier les auteurs.

54. L'Organisation des Nations Unies renoncerait à sa mission si elle se contentait d'observer tandis qu'une partie de la race humaine est soumise à d'aussi barbares tourments. Faisons honneur à nos responsabilités si nous ne voulons pas que les générations à venir nous accusent d'avoir montré de l'indulgence pour ces crimes.

55. Je voudrais en venir maintenant à quelques-uns des problèmes les plus pressants en matière de décolonisation. Je parlerai d'abord de la question de la Rhodésie. Je sais que ce sujet est actuellement débattu dans un autre organe de l'Organisation. Néanmoins, je tiens à faire remarquer que l'entière responsabilité de l'état de choses actuel incombe sans conteste au Gouvernement britannique qui, à notre avis, et j'insiste là-dessus, a traité toute la question de la Rhodésie du Sud d'un point de vue raciste. Nous avons été également très déçus par la position prise par certaines puissances occidentales relativement à cette question. De belles paroles nous ont été prodiguées, mais ces puissances ont prouvé par leurs actes qu'elles en faisaient peu de cas.

56. En ce qui concerne le Royaume-Uni, nous ne pouvons nous empêcher de douter de sa sincérité, simplement parce que chaque fois qu'il a envisagé d'entreprendre une certaine action, il a annoncé à l'avance en quoi elle consisterait, afin de donner à Smith le temps de se préparer à y faire face. C'est ainsi que, alors que nous parlions de sanctions volontaires, Smith se préparait à faire face à des sanctions volontaires, et que, alors que nous faisons beaucoup de bruit à propos des sanctions dites sélectives, actuellement en discussion au Conseil de sécurité et qui, de toute façon, ont été annoncées en septembre, Smith se trouve avoir disposé de trois mois pour se préparer.

57. Smith fait actuellement des plans pour surmonter un blocus. Si ces sanctions sélectives échouent, et je suis sûr qu'elles échoueront, la Grande-Bretagne se trouvera dans l'obligation de s'adresser de nouveau aux Nations Unies pour demander ce blocus.

58. Pourquoi nos amis occidentaux ne veulent-ils pas entendre raison et comprendre que, pour vaincre Smith, il n'est qu'un moyen: la force? Quand nous avons émis cette opinion en décembre dernier, toutes sortes d'invectives ont été lancées contre nous. Certains ont laissé entendre que les Africains étaient des extrémistes; d'autres qu'ils faisaient simplement des déclarations creuses; d'autres encore sont même allés jusqu'à mettre en doute nos motifs. Mais maintenant qu'on a échoué les sanctions dites volontaires du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, qui avaient été si fortement appuyées par certaines puissances occidentales à l'Assemblée, nous ne voyons pas condamner semblablement le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni.

59. Je tiens à répéter que l'emploi de la force constitue le seul moyen de vaincre Smith, et je crois que le temps est notre allié et qu'il pourra prouver que nous voyons juste. Smith est un égoïste qui dirige un groupe d'égoïstes. C'est un homme borné qui dirige un groupe de gens bornés, un homme tyrannique qui dirige un groupe de gens tyranniques dont le but est de conserver pour eux la Rhodésie en en dépossédant 4 millions d'Africains. Le seul argument que ce genre de personne ou de groupe de personnes puisse entendre est la force. Le traitement qui a été appliqué à Smith et à son groupe en tant que rebelles entrera dans l'histoire comme un des actes de racisme les plus flagrants que la Grande-Bretagne ait jamais couverts, simplement parce que Smith et son groupe sont des Blancs.

60. En passant à la question du Sud-Ouest africain, je tiens à déclarer que nous espérons que le Comité ad hoc sur le Sud-Ouest africain présentera des propositions qui conduiront ce territoire à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance sans intervention de l'Afrique du Sud. Nous espérons qu'aucun Membre des Nations Unies ne cherchera à contrecarrer la convocation d'une session extraordinaire de l'Assemblée générale, ainsi que l'envisage la résolution 2145 (XXI) sur le Sud-Ouest africain.

61. Pour ce qui est de la question des colonies portugaises, on ne peut que regretter que le Portugal n'ait pas, jusqu'ici, fait preuve de suffisamment de bon sens pour décoloniser. Nous avons déclaré à plusieurs reprises que le colonialisme constitue en soi une forme d'agression, et le colonialisme portugais est bien en lui-même une agression contre le peuple africain. Je n'ai pas besoin de rappeler les nombreuses occasions où des Etats africains indépendants ont eu à se plaindre des actes d'agression dirigés contre eux par le Portugal. Le plus récent de ces actes a été l'agression commise par le Portugal contre la Tanzanie le 29 novembre 1966. Nous connaissons les motifs de ces agressions portugaises. Elles visent en premier lieu à détourner l'attention mondiale des meurtres commis par le Portugal dans ses colonies africaines et en second lieu à faire croire hypocritement au monde qu'il n'y a pas de combattants de la liberté dans les colonies portugaises, mais seulement des infiltrations en provenance des Etats indépendants voisins.

62. Ces manœuvres, toutefois, ne mèneront pas le Portugal très loin, car nous connaissons fort bien le jeu que le Portugal colonial cherche à jouer. Je désire justement saisir cette occasion pour prévenir solennellement une nouvelle fois le Portugal que le Gouvernement et le peuple de la Tanzanie ne toléreront plus ces provocations. Et je voudrais ajouter que les autres Etats indépendants d'Afrique ne le toléreront plus pour leur part.

63. Je dois maintenant réaffirmer l'engagement du Gouvernement et du peuple de la Tanzanie à soutenir ceux qui se battent contre ce colonialisme en Afrique. Cet engagement renouvelé s'exprime dans notre projet de résolution lorsque nous déclarons reconnaître la légitimité de la lutte des peuples sous domination coloniale et prions les gouvernements d'apporter une aide matérielle et morale à ces peuples. La Tanzanie ne reculera devant aucun sacrifice pour chasser d'Afrique les colonisateurs portugais. Leurs desseins agressifs semblent dirigés aussi contre la Zambie, la République démocratique du Congo, le Congo (Brazzaville), la Guinée et le Sénégal. Je crois sincèrement qu'il est grand temps que ces pays entreprennent une action commune pour convaincre le Portugal que ces provocations ne seront plus tolérées.

64. Je voudrais à présent en venir à la question de l'aide apportée par certains pays au Portugal colonial, en particulier de l'aide militaire, et, là, je veux distinguer le cas des Etats-Unis. Il est assurément honteux que ce grand pays démocratique se fasse, en notre siècle, le principal fournisseur d'armes d'une puissance coloniale, sachant que ces armes seront utilisées contre nos peuples en lutte pour leur indépendance. Les Etats-Unis ne s'en tireront pas par un simple démenti public. Que nos peuples soient tués par des armes provenant des Etats-Unis, nos cœurs, en Afrique, en sont profondément meurtris. Il s'agit d'une accusation très grave. Nous faisons appel aux hommes de bonne volonté aux Etats-Unis et à leur gouvernement pour qu'ils portent remède à nos blessures. En réalité, le peuple démocratique des Etats-Unis devrait combattre à nos côtés pour vaincre le fascisme en Afrique, car, si la liberté doit avoir un sens, elle doit avoir en Afrique celui-là même que le peuple des Etats-Unis voudrait qu'elle eût pour lui.

65. J'aimerais parler brièvement de la question des petits territoires, dont il est également fait mention dans notre projet de résolution. A vrai dire, on ne peut plus aborder le sujet des petits territoires sans évoquer celui des bases militaires, car ces petits territoires ou petites îles sont peu à peu transformés en hideuses forteresses de destruction. Mais j'ai l'intention de parler de ces bases militaires par la suite.

66. Ma délégation estime qu'il convient d'envisager sérieusement les problèmes de ces petits territoires et de leur consacrer une étude approfondie. Actuellement, les puissances coloniales exercent sur certains d'entre eux une lente coercition en vue de les absorber. On donne à ces manœuvres quantité de raisons, la question de la viabilité économique étant invariablement invoquée, comme si l'indépendance et la liberté étaient des produits échangeables contre de l'argent. Ma délégation exprime avec force l'opinion que les Nations Unies doivent procéder à une étude de ce problème, afin de trouver des solutions pour ces territoires, et que les puissances coloniales doivent présenter aux peuples de ces territoires des mesures à cet effet. Ce qui se passe dans ces petits territoires est la prolongation du système colonial, à tel point que des îles distantes seulement de 15 kilomètres sont encouragées à se sentir différentes les unes des autres. De cela, nous avons un excellent exemple dans les Caraïbes. J'estime que les Caraïbes devraient être encouragées à coopérer plutôt qu'à rechercher des affiliations avec les puissances coloniales. Cela est également vrai dans l'océan Indien et en Extrême-Orient. Il arrive qu'une île soit divisée entre deux puissances coloniales.

67. Ma délégation est d'avis que des mesures hâtives tendant à l'absorption de ces territoires sont inacceptables aussi bien pour nous-mêmes que pour les peuples qu'elles concernent, surtout quand elles sont élaborées sans que l'Organisation des Nations Unies en ait connaissance. A ce sujet, il est essentiel qu'une attention particulière soit accordée par les Nations Unies à la façon dont les peuples coloniaux ont continuellement à participer à des référendums brusqués, organisés par certaines puissances administrantes. Car l'expérience a montré que, dans plusieurs cas, des puissances administrantes ont astucieusement organisé des référendums offrant aux peuples colonisés soit de s'associer intégralement avec la métropole, soit de demeurer sous la dépendance de la puissance coloniale comme entité qualifiée d' "autonome" par celle-ci. Dans un cas comme dans l'autre, il s'agit de la continuation de la domination coloniale. En outre, étant donné que les colonialistes s'arrogent le droit de fixer les règles d'organisation de ces référendums, les incompatibilités que cela comporte n'ont pas besoin d'une analyse approfondie. Nous sommes donc catégoriquement opposés à cette manière d'agir arbitraire des colonialistes et à l'escamotage par lequel ils procèdent à l'annexion de peuples et de territoires.

68. Il s'ensuit tout à fait naturellement que, afin de jouer un rôle concret, l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne doit pas se contenter de faire office de simple observateur invité par une puissance administrante à assister à de telles manœuvres, mais qu'elle doit participer à l'élaboration et à l'organisation de tout référendum propre à donner aux peuples coloniaux l'occasion claire et nette d'exercer leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

69. J'aborderai maintenant la question des bases militaires qui, je me permets de le répéter, est mentionnée dans notre projet de résolution.

70. Nous sommes, en Tanzanie, tout à fait opposés à l'installation de bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux. Nous ne leur voyons aucune utilité, surtout lorsque ces bases sont utilisées dans des desseins qui n'ont rien à voir avec les habitants d'un territoire. On nous dit parfois que ces bases font l'objet d'un contrat entre les parties intéressées. Nous avons de sérieux doutes quant à la valeur d'un contrat conclu avec un peuple asservi. Dans de tels cas, les puissances coloniales sont en quelque sorte des fidéicommissaires; c'est pourquoi ces contrats ne peuvent être considérés comme légalement constitués et ayant véritablement une valeur obligatoire. Je sais que dans d'autres organes des Nations Unies nous nous efforçons de résoudre le problème du désarmement. Afin, par conséquent, que puisse être réalisé ce louable dessein, les puissances coloniales doivent démanteler leurs bases dans les territoires coloniaux.

71. Nous avons le ferme espoir que cet appel sera entendu. Nous ne voulons pas qu'un voile définitif soit jeté sur le sort des peuples colonisés parce que certaines puissances sont engagées dans une lutte égoïste pour la domination du monde.

72. Je passerai enfin à la question du Comité des Vingt-Quatre. Nous sommes d'avis que ce comité doit poursuivre sa tâche, ainsi qu'il est d'ailleurs indiqué dans notre projet de résolution. En réalité, quand on considère le nombre de pays qui ont accédé à l'indépendance depuis 1960, on voit quel excellent travail a été accompli par ce comité. Et l'admission de la Barbade comme Membre de l'Organisation ce matin-même [1487^{ème} séance] en est la preuve. Nous estimons donc qu'il serait juste que le mandat du Comité soit prorogé. Cependant, nous pensons qu'il devrait continuer de tenir des réunions hors de New York, afin de travailler dans des conditions qui lui permettraient de bénéficier de la présence de pétitionnaires qui ne peuvent venir à New York. Cela aussi est mentionné dans notre projet de résolution.

73. Nous prions les puissances coloniales d'autoriser l'envoi de missions de visite dans leurs territoires. De cette manière, l'Organisation des Nations Unies pourrait jouer un rôle utile dans la décolonisation des territoires restants. Nous avons été informés en plusieurs occasions des difficultés rencontrées par les puissances coloniales dans ces territoires. Nous espérons que ces puissances autoriseront l'ONU à aller s'en rendre compte elle-même.

74. Permettez-moi de parler maintenant de la question des monopoles. Il ne paraît guère nécessaire de rappeler ici le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre sur cette question. Néanmoins, je désirerais faire remarquer aux Membres de l'Organisation que, dans le dernier paragraphe du dispositif de notre projet, nous demandons à l'Assemblée générale d'inscrire cette question à son ordre du jour, et nous espérons qu'il lui sera possible d'examiner tous les aspects de ce problème au cours de sa vingt-deuxième session.

75. Point n'est besoin d'ajouter quelque chose à ce que contient ce rapport quant à la façon dont les monopoles ont contribué à entraver la marche des peuples colonisés vers l'indépendance. Je dirai simplement que nous avons constaté que non seulement ces monopoles pratiquent l'apartheid, non seulement ils pratiquent la discrimination, mais encore qu'ils vont jusqu'à verser des contributions — de l'argent — aux puissances coloniales, argent qui sert ensuite à financer des activités criminelles dirigées contre les combattants de la liberté. Nous ne pouvons nous empêcher de conclure, nous autres Africains, que ces monopoles retardent la marche des peuples d'Afrique vers l'autodétermination et l'indépendance. C'est en tenant compte de ce fait que nous avons rédigé le paragraphe 20 de notre projet de résolution de façon que l'Assemblée puisse étudier cette question à fond au cours de sa vingt-deuxième session et faire des propositions destinées à la régler.

76. Pour conclure, j'insisterai encore une fois sur l'urgence de la décolonisation. Le temps presse, et ce qui est nécessaire, ce sont les actes plus que les paroles. En Afrique particulièrement, la lutte que nous menons pour recouvrer notre dignité a atteint le stade où ceux qui ne sont pas avec nous sont contre nous. Unissons-nous contre le fléau et hâtons ainsi le moment où l'humanité tout entière pourra vivre dans la liberté et la fraternité.

77. Je désire réaffirmer le soutien du Gouvernement et du peuple de la Tanzanie à tous ceux qui luttent pour leur liberté. Je saisis cette occasion pour remercier toutes les délégations qui ont soutenu cette cause aux Nations Unies. Nous considérons leur appui comme un acte de solidarité et d'amitié dans lequel nous pouvons placer notre confiance. Et je voudrais mentionner particulièrement à cet égard les pays de l'Amérique latine et les pays socialistes pour l'appui précieux qu'ils nous ont prêté dans ce domaine de la décolonisation.

78. Permettez-moi d'exprimer une fois encore l'espoir que ce projet de résolution pourra être adopté à l'unanimité. Je sais que certaines puissances coloniales prendront la parole pour essayer de démontrer que ce projet de résolution est absurde. Je sais qu'elles interviendront pour chercher à l'interpréter comme un acte de guerre froide. Mais comme je l'ai dit en un autre lieu, l'époque où la question de la guerre froide pouvait être exploitée est révolue; l'époque où l'opinion publique mondiale pouvait être abusée avec de tels arguments est révolue. Le moment de la décolonisation est venu; le moment de faire cause commune afin d'apporter la liberté à ceux qui connaissent la servitude est venu. J'espère donc que l'unanimité pourra se faire sur ce projet de résolution. Je dois dire, évidemment, que je connais deux délégations — celles du Portugal et de l'Afrique du Sud — qui ne pourront pas appuyer ce projet de résolution. A vrai dire, s'il devait se faire qu'elles l'appuient, nous aurions à examiner si ce projet n'aurait pas par hasard quelque chose d'anormal.

Point 23 de l'ordre du jour:

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite). 4

*Président: M. Abdul Rahman PAZHWAK
(Afghanistan).*

27. M. TILINCA (Roumanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le représentant de la Roumanie inscrit pour prendre la parole sur cette question n'est pas prêt et demande à intervenir plus tard.

28. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je voudrais rappeler une fois de plus ce qui a été déclaré, et pratiqué, au cours de cette session de l'Assemblée générale, à savoir que, si un représentant n'est pas prêt à prendre la parole à son tour, la parole lui sera donnée à la fin de la séance.

29. M. CHEVTCHENKO (République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine) [traduit du russe]: Près de six ans ont passé depuis le jour mémorable où, dans cette salle, sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique, nous avons adopté un document ayant une importance historique: la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ce fut une grande victoire des forces modernes qui luttent pour la paix et la liberté. L'utilité de ce document et son importance ont été confirmées par tous les événements ultérieurs, qui ont montré d'une façon convaincante que le sort du colonialisme dans l'histoire est prédéterminé et qu'il ne saurait y avoir de retour en arrière.

30. En adoptant la Déclaration, notre Organisation a établi des principes bien définis de droit international s'appliquant aux problèmes coloniaux. En particulier, elle a précisé que "la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères constitue un déni des droits fondamentaux de l'homme, est contraire à la Charte des Nations Unies et compromet la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales". Ainsi, notre Organisation a reconnu la légalité et la justice de la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour conquérir leur liberté et leur indépendance.

31. Nous estimons qu'il est opportun et approprié de rappeler cela maintenant, à un moment où certains Etats, tout en multipliant les déclarations verbales sur leur "fidélité à la Charte des Nations Unies", "la responsabilité collective pour le sort de l'Organisation", etc., boycottent la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et ne contribuent ainsi en rien à consolider l'Organisation, ni à élever son prestige.

32. La délégation de la RSS d'Ukraine estime qu'il est essentiel, maintenant que l'Assemblée générale examine l'évolution de la décolonisation à la lumière du rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/6300/Rev.1], d'exiger des puissances coloniales une réponse claire et détaillée à la question demandant ce qu'ils ont fait, d'une façon concrète, pour mettre en œuvre la Déclaration. En particulier, comment ont-ils appliqué le paragraphe 5 de ce document, spécifiant que "des mesures immédiates (je souligne "immédiates") seront prises, dans les territoires sous tutelle, les territoires non autonomes et tous autres territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, pour transférer tous pouvoirs aux peuples de ces territoires, sans aucune condition ni réserve, conformément à leur volonté et à leurs vœux librement exprimés, sans aucune distinction de race, de croyance ou de couleur, afin de leur permettre de jouir d'une indépendance et d'une liberté complètes"?

33. Il est notoire, comme le montrent les résultats des travaux du Comité des Vingt-Quatre cette année,

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

26. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): L'orateur suivant inscrit pour le débat général sur cette question est le représentant de la Roumanie.

que les puissances coloniales, maintenant comme auparavant, cherchent à saboter la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, ainsi que celle des multiples résolutions adoptées par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre, l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité.

34. S'il n'en était pas ainsi, trouverions-nous maintenant dans le monde, six ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration, plus de 85 territoires coloniaux englobant une population de quelque 50 millions de personnes?

35. Grâce à la lutte obstinée et opiniâtre des peuples, avec l'appui de toutes les forces anticoloniales et le soutien de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, les régimes d'oppression coloniale ont été éliminés dans de nombreux territoires.

36. Mais en même temps, on ne peut manquer de noter qu'en ce moment, l'activité des mouvements de libération des peuples s'est sensiblement ralentie. A la session précédente, ainsi qu'à la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, de nombreuses délégations ont exprimé à ce sujet une inquiétude légitime.

37. Les événements de ces derniers temps indiquent que les puissances coloniales ont intensifié leur opposition à la lutte des peuples d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Océanie pour leur libération finale et, dans certains secteurs, passent même à la contre-attaque.

38. Ce renouveau d'activité des forces du colonialisme a été rendu possible par une agressivité accrue de l'impérialisme contemporain et, avant tout, de l'impérialisme américain, coupable d'agression contre le peuple vietnamien. Les Etats-Unis cherchent à transformer le Viet-Nam en une base de contre-attaque contre les autres pays des continents asiatique et africain, et à semer la crainte parmi les peuples qui luttent pour la liberté et l'indépendance. En fin de compte, cela signifie que l'agression des Etats-Unis d'Amérique au Viet-Nam représente un sérieux défi lancé au mouvement mondial de libération nationale.

39. L'agression des Etats-Unis au Viet-Nam, leur ingérence et leurs activités subversives contre les pays africains, les opérations punitives du Royaume-Uni en Arabie du Sud, tout cela représente des maillons d'une chaîne unique d'actions agressives du colonialisme.

40. Les colonialistes et les néo-colonialistes tirent avantage de tout pour maintenir leurs positions: les difficultés économiques, les dissensions internes, les discordes religieuses et ethniques, etc.

41. Les événements de ces derniers temps montrent d'une façon convaincante qu'il est nécessaire d'opposer au colonialisme collectif un front puissant d'anti-colonialisme collectif. Jamais il n'a été aussi évident qu'il est maintenant nécessaire de consolider la cohésion de toutes les forces qui s'opposent à l'agression et au colonialisme. C'est grâce à l'unité d'action de toutes les forces anticolonialistes que des victoires décisives ont pu être remportées dans la lutte pour la libération nationale de centaines de millions d'êtres humains.

42. Si l'on considère le continent africain, les principaux bastions du colonialisme y sont: la République sud-africaine, le Sud-Ouest africain, l'empire colonial portugais — comprenant l'Angola, le Mozambique et la Guinée dite portugaise — et enfin la Rhodésie du Sud, avec son régime raciste de minorité blanche. La lutte pour la libération de ces territoires aborde une étape vraiment décisive. La vague de libération nationale se rapproche de plus en plus des frontières de la République sud-africaine. Les progrès ultérieurs de la décolonisation dans la partie sud de l'Afrique dépendent beaucoup de l'évolution des événements en Rhodésie du Sud.

43. On peut dire que la solution du problème de la Rhodésie du Sud est devenue une épreuve sérieuse imposée à notre Organisation, car les colonialistes font fi des décisions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale. On sait que le Royaume-Uni a posé les bases du régime raciste actuel, en lui transmettant le contrôle des forces armées, en créant des conditions économiques et politiques favorables pour l'accession au pouvoir du régime Smith et la proclamation ultérieure par ce régime de la prétendue indépendance. C'est bien le Royaume-Uni qui a déclaré, juste avant cette "proclamation d'indépendance", qu'il n'avait pas l'intention de recourir à la force. Les prétendues sanctions annoncées par le Royaume-Uni avaient pour but, non pas de mettre fin au régime raciste, mais de temporiser pour lui permettre de consolider ses forces. Tel était aussi le but des longs pourparlers du Gouvernement britannique avec Smith, qui ont été à juste titre condamnés à la présente session de l'Assemblée générale [résolution 2138 (XXI)].

44. Maintenant que Smith a repoussé les dernières propositions britanniques, il semble que l'on commence un nouveau jeu ayant pour but de tromper l'Afrique, notre Organisation et l'opinion publique mondiale. Le programme britannique de "sanctions sélectives obligatoires", exposé au Conseil de sécurité [1331ème séance], est insuffisant. En effet, la portée des mesures proposées est extrêmement limitée. La déclaration du Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni au Conseil de sécurité, selon laquelle le Gouvernement britannique consentirait à l'interdiction des livraisons de pétrole à la Rhodésie du Sud, à condition que cette proposition soit rédigée "sous une forme acceptable" [1332ème séance] donne simplement, à première vue, l'impression d'être encore un stratagème.

45. Le Gouvernement britannique a annoncé, avant la proclamation de l'"indépendance", qu'il n'avait pas l'intention d'utiliser la force, et cette attitude n'a pas changé. En outre, en annonçant le 5 décembre à la Chambre des communes le projet de sanctions susmentionné, le gouvernement Wilson s'est hâté de déclarer que ces sanctions ne devaient pas provoquer "un affrontement économique ou militaire dans lequel serait entraîné tout le sud de l'Afrique". Quel est le sens de tout cela?

46. Cela signifie qu'avec l'aide du Conseil de sécurité, on voudrait exercer une certaine pression sur Smith pour qu'il donne son accord à l'arrangement colonialiste qui avait été proposé par le Royaume-Uni lors de la dernière rencontre entre Wilson et Smith.

47. Il est incontestable que le Royaume-Uni est le principal responsable du drame qui se joue en Rhodésie du Sud. A notre avis, le Royaume-Uni ne peut éluder l'obligation qui lui incombe d'en finir avec le régime minoritaire raciste illégal de Rhodésie du Sud. Pour cela, les actions les plus décisives s'imposent. A ce sujet, la délégation ukrainienne partage le point de vue de plusieurs délégations africaines qui, au cours du débat général et pendant la discussion à la Quatrième Commission, et maintenant encore, ont préconisé que le Conseil de sécurité décide d'appliquer les mesures de coercition prévues par le Chapitre VII de la Charte de notre Organisation.

48. Les racistes et les colonialistes de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Portugal et de la République sud-africaine sont liés par une caution solidaire. Il s'agit de l'existence d'une base coloniale unique englobant le sud de l'Afrique. Jusqu'ici, notre Organisation s'est occupée de la Rhodésie du Sud, des territoires portugais, de l'apartheid dans la République sud-africaine et au Sud-Ouest africain en tant que problèmes distincts, bien que l'on reconnût leur interdépendance. Ne serait-il pas temps, pour le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale, d'examiner ce problème colonial comme un tout indivisible? Nous estimons que dès la présente session, l'Assemblée générale doit attirer l'attention de tous les Etats sur les conséquences dangereuses de la formation, dans le Sud du continent africain, de l'alliance tripartite que nous avons mentionnée, et doit lancer un appel à tous les Etats pour qu'ils refusent tout soutien, toute aide, toute assistance à cette alliance dont le but est le maintien de l'esclavage colonial, dirigé contre les peuples d'Afrique. L'aide à l'un des participants doit être considérée comme une aide à l'ensemble de cette alliance coloniale.

49. Il est d'autant plus justifié de considérer les problèmes coloniaux du Sud de l'Afrique comme un tout indivisible que l'activité des monopoles étrangers, financiers et économiques, est la seule force motrice de ce colonialisme collectif. Le régime Smith, les dirigeants de la République sud-africaine et les colonialistes portugais ne sont qu'une arme entre les mains des monopoles internationaux et de leurs fondés de pouvoirs.

50. Notre délégation appuie la condamnation de l'activité des monopoles étrangers dans les territoires africains qui est contenue dans la résolution adoptée par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre le 22 juin 1966 [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. II, par. 619]. A notre avis, l'Assemblée doit confirmer cette condamnation de l'activité des monopoles économico-financiers étrangers dans le Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie du Sud, en Angola, au Mozambique, en Guinée (Bissau) et dans tous les autres territoires coloniaux, qui tend à perpétuer les régimes coloniaux; elle doit demander aux gouvernements des pays intéressés de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires pour mettre fin à cette activité.

51. Si l'on fait le bilan du travail du Comité des Vingt-Quatre en 1966, on doit constater que le Comité a indubitablement fait œuvre utile en contribuant à démasquer la politique des puissances coloniales et l'activité des monopoles étrangers, et en élaborant des mesures utiles et concrètes tendant à mettre en œuvre la Déclaration sur la décolonisation.

52. Les travaux du Comité en Afrique ont été particulièrement fructueux et couronnés de succès, comme d'autres délégations l'ont déjà souligné. L'Assemblée générale doit, à notre avis, proposer au Comité de poursuivre ses efforts en vue de la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et approuver le programme de travail que le Comité s'est fixé pour 1967, y compris la possibilité d'organiser une série de réunions en Afrique et d'envoyer des groupes de visite dans divers territoires, en particulier dans les régions de l'Atlantique, de l'océan Indien et du Pacifique.

53. Au cours de la période de presque six ans qui s'est écoulée depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration historique sur la décolonisation, l'Assemblée générale a pris de nombreuses décisions utiles et constructives tendant à mettre en œuvre cette Déclaration. Mais les puissances coloniales ont méconnu et continuent à méconnaître ces décisions. Telle a été et continue d'être l'attitude du Royaume-Uni en ce qui concerne Aden et la Rhodésie du Sud; telle a été et continue d'être l'attitude des colonialistes portugais et des racistes de la République sud-africaine. Les raisons pour lesquelles ils se refusent à se soumettre à la volonté de cette Assemblée internationale sont bien connues: pour appliquer leur politique coloniale, ils continuent à s'appuyer sur l'aide et le soutien des amis et alliés qu'ils ont parmi les pays faisant partie de l'OTAN.

54. De l'avis de notre délégation, des mesures décisives et énergiques doivent être prises contre les colonialistes. Ces mesures doivent émaner de l'organe qui, d'après la Charte, a la responsabilité principale du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, le Conseil de sécurité. C'est l'organe qui doit examiner à fond et directement les problèmes coloniaux qui menacent la paix et la sécurité, ou qui y portent atteinte. Et l'une des tâches prioritaires du Conseil à cet égard est d'appliquer les mesures coercitives prévues par la Chapitre VII de la Charte des Nations Unies contre le Portugal et la République sud-africaine, ainsi que contre les Etats qui continuent à accorder leur aide au régime raciste illégal de Rhodésie du Sud, régime dont l'élimination doit être réalisée par le Gouvernement britannique conformément à la résolution 2151 (XXI) de l'Assemblée générale.

55. C'est au Conseil de sécurité lui-même qu'il incombe essentiellement de veiller à l'application de ses propres résolutions, ainsi que de celles de l'Assemblée générale; avant tout, il doit prendre des mesures sévères et radicales contre l'"alliance impie" des colonialistes d'Afrique afin de les forcer à quitter pour toujours ce continent meurtri.

56. Notre Organisation doit créer et entretenir autour des colonialistes une atmosphère de réprobation et d'impatience, comme l'a déclaré M. Belokolos, Ministre des affaires étrangères de la RSS d'Ukraine au cours de la discussion générale, à la présente session de l'Assemblée générale: "A sa présente session, l'Assemblée générale se doit de déclarer en termes clairs et non équivoques que la perpétuation du colonialisme est la négation des nobles idéaux et des fins élevées pour la réalisation desquels l'ONU a été créée et que la politique du colonialisme est contraire à l'esprit et aux buts des Nations Unies et constitue de ce fait une violation flagrante de la Charte des Nations Unies" [1436ème séance, par. 121].

57. Au cours de la présente session, l'Assemblée générale doit déclarer solennellement, dans sa résolution sur le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, que la perpétuation des régimes coloniaux, de l'apartheid et de la discrimination raciale constitue un crime contre l'humanité.

58. Notre délégation note avec satisfaction que plusieurs délégations partagent ce point de vue. En particulier, il a été présenté ici [1485ème séance] d'une façon convaincante par le président du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, l'ambassadeur Collier, qui a fait remarquer à juste titre que les crimes commis aujourd'hui par les colonialistes sont semblables à ceux qu'ont commis les nazis et qui ont été définis dans le statut du tribunal de Nuremberg.

59. De l'avis de notre délégation, une déclaration officielle de la part de notre Organisation, affirmant que la politique du colonialisme est contraire à la Charte et est un crime de droit international d'une telle gravité qu'il constitue un crime contre l'humanité, offrirait de nouvelles possibilités pour appliquer aux colonialistes les mesures coercitives prévues par le Chapitre VII de la Charte de notre Organisation.

60. A notre avis, ces crimes contre l'humanité perpétrés par les colonialistes doivent être largement portés à la connaissance des peuples et, à cette fin, l'Assemblée générale, à sa présente session, doit prier le Secrétaire général d'organiser, par l'intermédiaire des services compétents de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la diffusion régulière de renseignements complets sur la mise en œuvre de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, de sorte que l'opinion publique mondiale soit adéquatement informée des crimes contre l'humanité commis par les colonialistes.

61. A notre avis, l'Assemblée générale devrait aussi, à sa présente session, adopter une recommandation sur l'établissement de délais limites pour l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, afin que l'année prochaine, 1967, soit la dernière année d'existence du honteux système colonial.

62. Notre Organisation a reconnu la légitimité de la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour réaliser leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Elle a aussi proposé à tous les Etats d'apporter une aide matérielle et morale aux mouvements de libération nationale. Cet appel doit recevoir l'appui sans réserve de ceux qui sont réellement en faveur de la liberté des peuples et de leur indépendance.

63. En ce qui concerne la République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, elle a constamment appuyé et continue d'appuyer la détermination des peuples à obtenir la liquidation totale et définitive de tous les régimes coloniaux et racistes, ainsi que l'abolition totale et définitive du honteux système de l'oppression coloniale.

M. Mod (Hongrie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

64. M. PARTHASARATHI (Inde) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'Assemblée générale est maintenant saisie du rapport du Comité spécial sur les travaux accomplis par ce comité en 1966 [A/6400/Rev.1], qui est un document très important. Le Comité spécial a entrepris de vastes études concernant une soixantaine de territoires non autonomes, allant de territoires sur lesquels se concentre aujourd'hui l'attention mondiale jusqu'à de petites îles lointaines dont les problèmes ne sont guère connus du reste du monde. Le Comité spécial a également entrepris deux études spécialisées très utiles sur les activités des intérêts étrangers économiques et autres qui font obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux dans les territoires sous administration portugaise et en Rhodésie du Sud. En tant que membre du Comité spécial depuis sa création en 1961, ma délégation a participé activement et avec un vif intérêt aux travaux du Comité. A ce sujet, ma délégation tient à dire sa grande admiration pour le dynamisme et l'esprit constructif avec lesquels ceux-ci ont été dirigés par l'ambassadeur Collier, du Sierra Leone, président du Comité spécial. Ma délégation remercie sincèrement le Président de ses efforts inlassables et les autres membres du Comité de leur coopération très active, ce qui nous a permis d'effectuer nos travaux avec la plus grande efficacité.

65. L'intérêt témoigné par notre gouvernement et notre peuple au processus historique de la décolonisation résulte de ce que l'Inde n'est une nation indépendante et souveraine que depuis une vingtaine d'années. Si ma délégation éprouve une grande satisfaction à voir de nombreuses nations devenues maîtresses de leur propre destin au cours des dernières décennies, elle n'en est pas moins profondément inquiète de constater que de vastes régions d'Afrique et d'ailleurs sont encore sous la domination coloniale. Ainsi que l'a déclaré notre premier ministre, Mme Indira Gandhi, devant le groupe afro-asiatique aux Nations Unies, le 1er avril 1966:

"... nous qui avons récemment conquis l'indépendance en nous libérant du régime colonial, nous ne pouvons oublier un instant la triste condition et l'angoisse de nos frères et sœurs d'Aden, d'Angola, de Mozambique, de Rhodésie du Sud, d'Afrique du Sud et du Sud-Ouest africain".

66. La situation, surtout dans la partie méridionale du continent africain, demeure critique et n'offre pas de perspective de solution pacifique prochaine. Les colonialistes irréductibles qui ont formé une alliance infâme contre toutes les forces de raison et de justice continuent de prospérer aux dépens de la sueur et du sang des Africains. De l'avis de ma délégation — avis partagé, j'en suis sûr, par beaucoup d'autres — ces vestiges pervers du colonialisme ne parviennent à survivre, en partie du moins, que grâce à l'aide directe et indirecte que leur apportent certains de leurs puissants amis. Ma délégation regrette profondément cette attitude et renouvelle son appel à ces pays pour qu'ils prennent les mesures efficaces qui, nous n'en doutons pas, sont en leur pouvoir pour détruire ces bastions du colonialisme.

67. Ma délégation n'a pas l'intention de commenter en détail la situation qui règne actuellement dans la partie méridionale de l'Afrique, car nous l'avons déjà fait en de précédentes occasions, à la Quatrième Commission comme devant l'Assemblée générale. Je tiens toutefois à réaffirmer notre satisfaction devant la décision de l'Assemblée de mettre fin au mandat de l'Afrique du Sud sur le Sud-ouest africain. Ma délégation, qui a toujours été profondément inquiète de la condition misérable du peuple du Sud-ouest africain, dont elle a soutenu la cause aux Nations Unies dès le début, attend avec impatience les recommandations du Comité ad hoc nommé par l'Assemblée générale dans sa résolution 2145 (XXI) concernant les moyens pratiques d'administration de ce territoire. Qu'il me soit permis de réaffirmer une fois de plus l'appui total et sans réserve de ma délégation en ce qui touche les droits inaliénables du peuple du Sud-ouest africain à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

68. En ce qui concerne les colonies portugaises d'Afrique, nous constatons que la politique du Portugal devient de plus en plus intolérable. Avec ses alliés racistes et colonialistes, l'Afrique du Sud et la Rhodésie du Sud, le Portugal est parvenu à déjouer toutes les tentatives faites par notre Organisation mondiale pour libérer les peuples depuis longtemps opprimés de ses colonies. A cet égard, ma délégation est également d'avis que, comme l'indique l'étude des activités des intérêts étrangers économiques et financiers dans les colonies portugaises, les grands monopoles étrangers opérant dans ces colonies exploitent depuis longtemps la population indigène afin de réaliser pour eux-mêmes de rapides bénéfices. C'est pour ces raisons que ma délégation a été un des auteurs d'un projet de résolution présenté à la Quatrième Commission [A/6554, par. 14] demandant que soient prises des sanctions économiques obligatoires contre le Portugal. Ma délégation est persuadée que seule une telle mesure aura un effet sur l'attitude intransigeante du Portugal.

69. La Rhodésie du Sud constitue à l'heure actuelle le problème le plus critique et le plus explosif auquel notre Organisation ait à faire face. Les événements récents qui ont amené le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni à s'adresser au Conseil de sécurité pour lui demander de prendre des sanctions économiques sélectives obligatoires contre la Rhodésie du Sud n'ont fait que corroborer l'opinion de ma délégation, souvent exprimée ici, selon laquelle le régime minoritaire raciste de ce pays ne peut être renversé par les mesures hésitantes et inefficaces appliquées jusqu'ici. L'opinion de ma délégation à ce sujet est entièrement exprimée dans la résolution 2151 (XXI), qui recherche l'application par le Conseil de sécurité des mesures coercitives nécessaires prévues au Chapitre VII de la Charte des Nations Unies et demande au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de prendre toutes les mesures nécessaires, y compris le recours à la force, pour mettre fin au régime minoritaire raciste illégal en Rhodésie du Sud.

70. L'étude approfondie effectuée sur la Rhodésie du Sud par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a montré très clairement que l'application de sanctions économiques volontaires à la Rhodésie du Sud ne suffira pas à elle seule à produire l'effet désiré sur l'économie de ce pays tant que l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal refuseront leur coopération. Ma délégation s'abstiendra toutefois de commenter davantage le fait que ces sanctions sont impuissantes à provoquer les résultats désirés, car nous aurons prochainement l'occasion de développer notre point de vue.

71. Beaucoup de temps et d'attention ont été consacrés cette année à la question d'Aden par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et par la Quatrième Commission. Ma délégation a enregistré avec satisfaction l'assurance donnée par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni qu'il quitterait le territoire en 1968 et que la base militaire d'Aden serait supprimée. Cependant, il ressort des déclarations faites par la Puissance administrante ainsi que par les pétitionnaires d'Aden que la situation à Aden a considérablement empiré et qu'il règne dans ce territoire une atmosphère de crainte et de violence. Avec d'autres membres du Comité spécial, ma délégation a estimé que la meilleure manière pour les Nations Unies de venir en aide à la population d'Aden était d'envoyer dans ce territoire une mission spéciale pourvue d'un mandat approprié. Nous voulons croire que cette mission, qui sera désignée par le Secrétaire général, pourra accomplir sa tâche avec la coopération de tous les intéressés.

72. J'en viens maintenant au cas des îles Fidji, fort éloignées dans le Pacifique, où le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni s'est toujours refusé à tenir compte des résolutions pertinentes des Nations Unies. La Puissance administrante y a poursuivi avec vigueur une politique ayant pour but de diviser les communautés et de les tenir à l'écart les unes des autres afin de maintenir les intérêts de la minorité européenne dans ces îles. Il est heureux, cependant, que la Quatrième Commission ait adopté récemment un projet de résolution [A/6572, par. 13] réaffirmant le principe démocratique universellement reconnu énoncé par la formule "à chaque homme sa voix" et demandant son application aux îles Fidji. Ma délégation n'a jamais admis le vote communal et a soutenu le principe de l'égalité de représentation de tous les citoyens, sans considération de race ni de religion, principe qu'elle considère comme juste et inviolable. Ma délégation espère que la Puissance administrante acceptera l'envoi d'une mission de visite dans ce territoire, comme elle l'a accepté pour Aden.

73. Peut-être convient-il de formuler, à ce point de mon intervention, quelques observations sur la question générale de l'envoi de missions de visite des Nations Unies dans les territoires non autonomes. Ma délégation pense que ces missions offrent des avantages multiples. Outre qu'elles aident l'Organisation à étudier les problèmes d'un territoire dans leur véritable perspective, elles permettent aux peuples des régions intéressées de prendre pleinement conscience de leurs possibilités d'avenir. L'utilité pratique de ces missions pour aider à la préparation indispensable d'élections ou de référendums et de toutes autres dispositions semblables avant l'obtention de l'autonomie interne ou de l'indépendance ne saurait être exagérée. Le cas des îles Cook et celui, plus récent, d'une mission de visite en Guinée équatoriale sont deux des nombreux exemples qui illustrent l'utilité de ces missions. Il va sans dire que ces dernières servent aussi à mettre en relief le rôle important joué par les Nations Unies dans le processus de décolonisation.

74. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a procédé, par l'entremise de ses sous-comités, à une étude louable et inédite des nombreux territoires insulaires dispersés dans l'océan Pacifique, l'océan Indien et l'océan Atlantique. Ma délégation est d'avis que les études de ce genre sont d'une très grande utilité, car, outre qu'elles fournissent des lignes directrices aux puissances administrantes, elles incitent celles-ci à prendre des mesures lorsque rien n'a été fait dans le sens désiré. Il n'est pas exagéré d'affirmer, comme le fait ma délégation, que, sans l'attention accordée à ces petits territoires par le Comité spécial, aucun d'entre eux n'aurait atteint le degré relatif d'autonomie et de développement économique et social qu'ils possèdent aujourd'hui.

75. Le Comité spécial s'est rendu en Afrique, où il a séjourné en mai et juin 1966, sur l'invitation des Gouvernements de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, de l'Algérie, de la République arabe unie, de la Somalie et de l'Éthiopie. Ce séjour a permis aux membres du Comité d'entrer en contact plus étroit avec les populations des territoires dépendants et de mieux comprendre les aspects complexes de la situation. De nombreux dirigeants nationalistes de ces colonies, qui n'auraient pu venir exposer leurs griefs au Siège des Nations Unies, en raison de la distance et du coût du voyage, ont pu facilement entrer en rapport avec le Comité en Afrique.

76. Je voudrais saisir cette occasion pour exprimer les remerciements et la gratitude de ma délégation aux pays qui ont accueilli le Comité en Afrique et dont l'hospitalité et la coopération ont été remarquables. A ce propos, ma délégation ne peut s'empêcher de dire l'intense déception que lui ont causée certaines puissances administrantes dont le manque de coopération et l'attitude négative ont empêché le Comité de se rendre dans plusieurs pays coloniaux pour y prendre directement connaissance des faits.

77. Je voudrais maintenant citer avec satisfaction et fierté le nom de la Barbade, qui a accédé à l'indépendance voilà quelques jours seulement. Ma délégation a suivi avec grand intérêt et avec préoccupation, dans les divers organismes des Nations Unies, les épreuves et les tribulations de la Barbade avant son indépendance. Après avoir longtemps lutté pour pouvoir jouir de ses droits inhérents, le peuple de cette nouvelle et jeune nation vient de s'engager dans sa grande et exaltante entreprise de reconstruction nationale et de progrès. Ma délégation ne doute pas que, malgré les problèmes communs à toutes les nations depuis peu indépendantes et les difficultés résultant de situations particulières, ce peuple courageux sera capable, sous l'habile direction de son premier ministre Errol Barrow, de forger son destin dans la paix et la prospérité. Nous adressons nos félicitations les plus sincères au Gouvernement et au peuple de la Barbade et ma délégation se félicite par avance de travailler avec ses représentants au sein de notre Organisation.

78. En tant que nation ayant souffert de tous les maux du colonialisme et de la domination impériale, notre engagement au service de la cause de l'octroi de la liberté dans toutes les colonies sans exception est irrévocable. Le colonialisme et la paix sont irrécconciliables, et c'est pourquoi, quelles que soient leurs convictions idéologiques, toutes les nations qui sont attachées à la paix doivent lutter pour éliminer rapidement les derniers vestiges du colonialisme.

79. Enfin, qu'il me soit permis d'affirmer, au nom de mon gouvernement et de mon peuple, que ma délégation envisage avec plaisir une nouvelle année de rudes, mais très utiles, travaux comme membre du Comité spécial, dans le cadre de nos efforts pour apporter la liberté et l'indépendance aux millions d'êtres humains qui en sont encore privés.

80. Ma délégation est un des auteurs du projet de résolution [A/L.506] sur la question que l'Assemblée examine actuellement. Nous avons en effet la conviction que l'application des dispositions de ce projet accélérerait grandement le processus de la décolonisation, ce qui, par voie de conséquence, contribuerait à apaiser les tensions existant dans le monde aujourd'hui. Ma délégation espère que ce projet de résolution sera adopté par l'Assemblée à une écrasante majorité.

81. M. WAZIRI (Afghanistan): Je tiens tout d'abord à exprimer la gratitude de ma délégation au Président du Comité spécial pour les efforts qu'il a déployés afin de nous présenter son admirable travail.

82. A sa quinzième session, par sa résolution 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Depuis ce mémorable événement, l'Assemblée générale a examiné chaque année la situation quant à l'application de cette déclaration, et après avoir examiné le rapport du Comité spécial, elle a prié ce dernier de continuer à rechercher les voies et moyens d'assurer l'application immédiate et intégrale de la Déclaration à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance.

83. L'adoption en 1960 de la Déclaration des Nations Unies sur l'octroi de l'indépendance et les décisions prises par l'Assemblée générale reconnaissant la légalité de la lutte des peuples pour la liberté et l'indépendance, l'appel lancé par l'Assemblée générale à tous les Etats pour qu'ils apportent une aide matérielle et morale à cette lutte, et la condamnation du colonialisme dans toutes ses manifestations, ont apporté un appui politique à tous les peuples qui luttent contre le colonialisme.

84. Au cours de la présente session de l'Assemblée générale, nous avons eu l'agréable occasion de saluer l'accession à l'indépendance de nouveaux Etats qui sont devenus Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. La Guyane, le Lesotho, le Botswana et la Barbade sont des Etats qui, en devenant indépendants au cours de cette année, ont réalisé la lutte contre le colonialisme menée par les peuples et par les Nations Unies.

85. D'autre part, la décolonisation progresse lentement, non pas parce que les Nations Unies ne font pas tout ce qu'elles peuvent, mais parce qu'il y a encore des hommes et des gouvernements qui ne croient pas à l'égalité des peuples et continuent à violer les principes de la Charte.

86. La délégation afghane est profondément inquiète du fait qu'après plus de 20 ans de discussions et de débats, nous sommes encore en face de questions coloniales qui n'ont pas trouvé de solution, et que les résolutions des Nations Unies, pendant ces années écoulées, se sont heurtées constamment à l'attitude et au refus injustifiés des puissances administrantes.

87. Ma délégation estime que la situation dans laquelle se trouvent engagés les territoires coloniaux met sérieusement en cause la responsabilité des Nations Unies. Nous constatons avec regret que ces territoires sont plongés dans un désordre inquiétant et que leurs populations sont privées de leurs droits fondamentaux.

88. La délégation afghane condamne non seulement le colonialisme classique dit colonialisme occidental, mais toute sorte d'expansionnisme ayant pour but l'exploitation et l'oppression d'êtres humains et la domination de l'homme par l'homme, car ces pratiques sont fondées sur la force, l'isolement et la division.

89. D'année en année, la situation s'aggrave en Rhodésie du Sud. Le gouvernement rebelle continue de fouler aux pieds le principe sacré du respect de la dignité humaine et du droit inaliénable de chaque peuple à la liberté, à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

90. Dans de telles conditions, nous pensons que les Nations Unies doivent faire preuve de vigilance pour rechercher les moyens de mettre rapidement fin à la rébellion dans le territoire de la Rhodésie du Sud et d'aider le peuple sud-rhodésien à instituer un gouvernement majoritaire et une société équitable, libérée de la discrimination. Nous espérons que des progrès rapides seront enregistrés à cet égard et que, comme le prévoient les résolutions pertinentes des Nations Unies, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni prendra sans délai des mesures propres à permettre au peuple de la Rhodésie du Sud de déterminer son propre avenir conformément aux objectifs de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

91. En ce qui concerne les territoires sous administration portugaise, le Gouvernement du Portugal persiste à ne pas tenir compte des résolutions pertinentes des Nations Unies. De même, ce gouvernement foule aux pieds les principes sacrés du respect de la dignité humaine et repousse le droit inaliénable des peuples à l'autodétermination, réaffirmé dans lesdites résolutions, et rien n'indique qu'il a renoncé à ses objectifs d'intégration politique et économique desdits territoires à la métropole.

92. Dans de telles conditions, les Nations Unies doivent prendre toutes les mesures qui s'imposent afin d'assurer l'accession rapide de ces pays à l'indépendance.

93. D'autre part, le Gouvernement sud-africain persiste à refuser l'application des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale concernant le Sud-Ouest africain. Par ses arguments non fondés, le Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud continue de s'opposer à la mise en œuvre des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale. D'année en année, la situation s'aggrave et le Gouvernement sud-africain nie le droit inaliénable des peuples à la liberté, à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

94. La politique d'apartheid, appliquée dans le territoire du Sud-Ouest africain, est considérée par ma délégation comme une violation flagrante des droits de l'homme. La délégation afghane, comme la majorité écrasante des autres délégations dans cette Assemblée, condamne la discrimination raciale et la politique d'apartheid; elle estime que les Nations Unies devraient intervenir au Sud-Ouest africain selon les dispositions de la résolution [2145 (XXI)] récemment adoptée par l'Assemblée générale.

95. La délégation afghane pense que l'Assemblée générale doit consacrer une attention particulière à la question d'Aden et de la péninsule de l'Arabie du Sud, à Oman et aux autres territoires coloniaux. Elle appuie pleinement les dispositions du projet de résolution A/L.506, sûre qu'elle est qu'à l'heure actuelle l'essentiel est de mettre fin, aussi rapidement que possible, à l'anachronisme que constitue la persistance du colonialisme en plein XX^{ème} siècle.

96. Ma délégation considère comme un privilège et un honneur de faire partie du Comité spécial. L'Afghanistan, qui a appuyé sans réserve la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance, a toujours approuvé pleinement les recommandations du Comité spécial. C'est pourquoi nous sommes convaincus que tant que des hommes continueront d'être opprimés par leurs frères, la paix et la sécurité internationales seront toujours menacées.

97. M. JOVEJATI (Syrie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Rarement une question examinée par l'Assemblée générale aura eu autant de portée et de pertinence que le point 23 de l'ordre du jour, ou mieux incarné les problèmes internationaux les plus importants. Rarement une question aura illustré aussi clairement la signification des principes fondamentaux de la Charte et montré à quel point ces principes sont aujourd'hui mis en cause par de puissantes forces de réaction.

98. Le cadre dans lequel s'exercent les efforts des Nations Unies en vue de libérer les peuples et les sociétés des chaînes de la domination et de l'exploitation coloniales a été créé par la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV). En donnant un caractère d'institution au droit à l'autodétermination des peuples dépendants et en créant le mécanisme permettant de l'exercer, les auteurs de la Déclaration ont cherché à concrétiser davantage les importants progrès réalisés par la grande révolution contemporaine déclenchée contre l'injustice et l'inégalité; et la création du Comité spécial a fourni l'instrument de mise en pratique des principes de la Déclaration et de surveillance de leur application adéquate. Ainsi, les principes, le cadre et l'organisme ont-ils été mis à notre disposition. Ce qui a manqué jusqu'ici et doit maintenant s'affirmer pour que la tâche de la décolonisation soit couronnée de succès, c'est la volonté de mettre les idéaux en pratique. En ce qui concerne ce dernier point, qui est capital, l'usage de passer en revue l'évolution de la situation chaque année à l'Assemblée acquiert une importance particulière. On peut ainsi évaluer l'étendue des progrès accomplis, analyser les points faibles et faire apparaître les flots de résistance aux changements. Mais ce qui est encore plus important, c'est de rechercher les méthodes les plus efficaces grâce auxquelles la communauté internationale pourrait mener à bonne fin, quelles que soient les circonstances, cette noble tâche d'émancipation qu'elle s'est engagée à réaliser.

99. A ce sujet, les rapports pertinents du Comité spécial nous dépeignent fidèlement la situation et nous donnent des indications claires quant aux succès obtenus, aux espérances permises et aux déceptions éprouvées.

100. On ne saurait douter que le Comité spécial est déterminé à poursuivre sa tâche avec persévérance sous la direction de ses présidents futurs comme il l'a menée sous la haute compétence de ses présidents passés et de son président actuel, et à accepter à cet effet tous les inconvénients et tous les sacrifices. Les membres qui connaissent bien ses travaux et son programme chargé peuvent témoigner de son dévouement à la cause qu'il défend, avec l'aide de notre distingué Secrétaire général et du personnel très capable que ce dernier a mis à sa disposition.

101. Mais la solution des problèmes dépend souvent des puissances administrantes et, à cet égard, le seul pouvoir du Comité spécial est un pouvoir de persuasion. Quand celui-ci reste sans effet, le Comité spécial ne peut que faire des recommandations et dénoncer la partie responsable de l'échec.

102. Du côté positif du bilan, l'accession à l'indépendance de la Guyane, du Botswana, du Lesotho et de la Barbade est un sujet de satisfaction, et un juste hommage doit être rendu aux peuples de ces pays pour les sacrifices qu'ils ont consentis afin de recouvrer leur droit à la dignité et à la liberté.

103. L'année prochaine, 1967, sera marquée par l'espoir que le dialogue déjà engagé sur la préparation de l'indépendance de la Guinée équatoriale, et celui qui est sur le point de l'être au sujet d'Ifni et du Sahara, conduiront à la décolonisation de ces territoires au plus tard en 1968.

104. L'année 1968 est aussi celle qui a été définitivement fixée pour l'accession d'Aden au rang d'Etat. La présence de l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans ce territoire, enfin acceptée par la Puissance administrante sous la pression matérielle du mouvement de libération nationale et la pression morale des Nations Unies, devrait y normaliser le climat politique et adoucir les profondes blessures infligées à ce vaillant peuple arabe au cours de 130 années d'une domination impitoyable.

105. Pourtant, malgré cette amélioration partielle, l'inquiétude causée par les aspects de la politique coloniale menée dans cette région par la même puissance administrante n'a pas diminué. En fait, cette puissance est engagée dans une triple action qui donne lieu aux appréhensions les plus vives et qui perpétue les germes de conflits et de tensions. Le renforcement et l'extension des installations militaires se poursuivent; l'isolement de la région par rapport au monde arabe est imposé avec une telle rigueur que même la modeste assistance financière, culturelle et technique accordée par la Ligue des Etats arabes aux populations de ces territoires est entravée.

106. Enfin, et ce n'est pas le moins important, on achète des allégeances permanentes, par l'intermédiaire de régimes non représentatifs et archaïques, en exploitant à fond les dissensions tribales et l'ignorance primitive. On favorise l'analphabétisme, quand on devrait instruire. On laisse s'accumuler les retards, quand on devrait moderniser. On craint la prise de conscience des masses et on l'étouffe au moindre signe.

107. Les Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies auront trouvé à ce sujet de stupéfiantes révélations dans la déclaration faite au mois de juin dernier par le Secrétaire général adjoint de la Ligue arabe devant le Comité spécial lors des réunions du Caire [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. II, par. 314 à 344].

108. Dans d'autres cas, et toujours dans la même région, la fiction des cheiks et des sultans, prétendument souverains, indépendants et populaires au plus haut point, mais qui laissent délibérément à leurs bienveillants amis britanniques le soin de s'occuper de tout ce qui concerne la défense, les affaires étrangères, la sécurité, les ressources et le potentiel économique, est une tentative cynique visant à égarer l'opinion publique mondiale, en plein XXème siècle, à l'ère des Nations Unies et de leurs principes.

109. Cependant, les milieux libéraux des puissances colonialistes elles-mêmes réclament que cesse ce déguisement de la vérité. Ils soutiennent que, si les gouvernements colonialistes veulent faire une politique opposée à la souveraineté et à l'indépendance des peuples, qu'ils le fassent du moins honnêtement; qu'ils déclarent franchement que ce qu'ils veulent, c'est le monopole sur de vastes ressources, l'imposition de contrats inéquitables pour l'exploitation de ces ressources, et l'établissement de bases militaires d'où ils puissent constamment menacer d'étouffer sur-le-champ toute voix s'élevant en faveur de l'émancipation et de la liberté et toute tentative en vue de faire régner l'unité, le socialisme et la justice.

110. La politique coloniale qui a provoqué souffrances et effusions de sang dans cette région se retrouve dans d'autres territoires. Seuls les prétextes et les méthodes varient. Comment pourrait-on expliquer autrement la suppression par une minorité de fanatiques des droits élémentaires de quatre millions d'Africains sur leur sol vénéré du Zimbabwe? N'est-ce pas sur l'initiative de la même puissance colonialiste que des terres ont été ici aliénées, là froidement usurpées, ici distribuées à des colons, là tout simplement annexées à la Couronne, ici cédées à des sociétés, là — où elles sont le plus arides — utilisées pour y parquer la population africaine innocente, légitime propriétaire? Le Conseil de sécurité est de nouveau saisi de la question, mais qui est responsable, du fait de ses atermoiements, de l'aggravation de la situation?

111. De même, comment la persistance et le renforcement de la pratique de l'apartheid et la conquête de fait du Sud-ouest africain peuvent-ils s'expliquer autrement que parce que ceux qui violent la Charte et la volonté de l'humanité étaient assurés que des sanctions ne leur seraient pas universellement appliquées, que l'on ne permettrait pas aux pays africains voisins de s'armer suffisamment pour menacer leurs acquisitions illégitimes, et que le formidable commerce et les profits illicites réalisés au prix de la sueur et du sang des Africains sont considérés comme trop précieux pour ne pas l'emporter sur n'importe quelles considérations morales?

112. Comment expliquer la politique coloniale du Portugal, qui supprime l'identité, la personnalité africaine et les droits naturels de millions d'habitants du Mozambique, de la Guinée et de l'Angola, sans le bouclier défensif que son appartenance à l'Alliance atlantique lui fournit si opportunément? Ce n'est pas la défunte théorie de l'assimilation, mais sa position dans une alliance si puissante qui permet au Portugal de s'opposer au courant de l'histoire et à l'évolution des relations humaines. L'argument selon lequel certaines puissances peuvent rester les partenaires du Portugal dans une alliance défensive tout en condamnant sa politique est un artifice dialectique pour refuser de reconnaître la vérité et tenter de justifier une position moralement indéfendable. Les porte-parole de l'Alliance atlantique ne cessent d'insister sur la communauté de vues, de culture, de civilisation et d'idéaux qui les unit. Ce n'est que lorsqu'ils sont mis en face des réalités de la politique coloniale du Portugal qu'ils isolent les liens purement défensifs qui les unissent au Portugal dans ce qu'ils affirment être uniquement un domaine restreint.

113. Il existe une autre alliance concrète d'intérêts entre les forces de réaction qui oppriment le peuple africain dans les colonies sous domination portugaise, en Afrique du Sud, au Sud-ouest africain et en Rhodésie du Sud. Aucune assurance qu'il n'existe pas d'"alliance officielle" ne saurait rien changer à cette réalité, car il s'agit d'une alliance d'esprit réactionnaire fondée sur la prétendue supériorité de la race blanche et d'une alliance d'intérêts fondée sur l'exploitation inhumaine de la race africaine. Quand les privilèges illégitimes des colons sont menacés dans une de ces régions, les autres régions réagissent et organisent aussitôt un soutien fanatique en faveur de ceux qui sont menacés et une résistance fanatique à tout changement.

114. Derrière cette alliance d'intérêts et cet effort de sauvegarde des privilèges, on trouve la puissance des monopoles et de la finance internationale. Leur comportement dans les territoires africains usurpés repose malheureusement sur la discrimination contre les Africains, dont ils exploitent les propres ressources sans bénéfice aucun pour ceux-ci.

115. Alors que toute législation industrielle reflète la tendance universelle à payer au travailleur la part qui lui revient, le travailleur africain est insuffisamment rétribué et se voit refuser toute possibilité de formation professionnelle et de promotion. Par ces moyens, le taux de plus-value atteint un indice phénoménal et les bénéfices triplent. Mais ces pratiques n'ont été rendues possibles dès le début que par la puissance dominatrice, qui les a tolérées et s'est acquis de la sorte la gratitude de ces sociétés et leur appui pour poursuivre sa politique d'oppression. Ces sociétés en sont venues à associer la permanence de leurs bénéfices à celle de la puissance opprimante. Elles soutiennent donc celle-ci par tous les moyens afin d'assurer cette permanence. Non seulement des contributions sont versées sous couleur d'impôts anodins, mais encore un traitement préférentiel est accordé à la métropole en ce qui concerne le prix des produits. Parfois, ces sociétés possèdent même leurs petites armées dans les limites de leur exploitation, afin d'aider l'oppression et d'étouffer dès le début tout mouvement d'émancipation. C'est ainsi que l'identité d'intérêts devient l'identité de buts.

116. Certaines délégations prétendent encore ne pas voir comment ces monopoles mettent obstacle à l'indépendance des pays coloniaux. Elles demandent: "N'offrent-ils pas du travail aux Africains? N'aident-ils pas à accroître le revenu national? S'ils se retiraient, la situation des Africains ne serait-elle pas encore plus sombre?" Par ces arguments délibérément naïfs, ces délégations veulent paraître innocentes. Cependant, l'histoire de ces sociétés constitue une suite parfaitement cohérente.

117. Les pays auxquels appartiennent ces sociétés par leur nationalité gardent le silence. Quand ils sont libéraux, ils réservent leur position au lieu de voter contre une condamnation de ces intérêts. Ils déclarent que ces nationaux échappent à leur juridiction, et ils se dérobent ainsi à toute action, grâce à un mythe juridique, comme si la loi avait été créée pour faire obstacle à la justice et comme si elle pouvait sérieusement être appelée la loi quand elle permet à l'injustice de se perpétuer.

118. Ces violations de la Charte menacent clairement la paix et la sécurité internationales, car on ne peut s'attendre que les peuples d'Afrique et d'ailleurs cessent leur lutte et abandonnent leurs droits à une vie digne et à l'indépendance. On ne peut s'attendre que les jeunes pays africains, dont la situation et la force s'affermissent, acceptent ce déni de justice envers leurs frères. Et la suggestion du représentant de la Hongrie [1487ème séance] de faire jouer à cet égard au Conseil de sécurité son rôle constitutionnel est le premier remède qui vient à l'esprit de ceux qui sont attachés au prestige et à l'efficacité de notre Organisation internationale. Mais en même temps, le Comité spécial doit être encouragé à poursuivre sa tâche, à envoyer ses sous-comités dans divers territoires, grands et petits, et à continuer de se rendre dans les capitales africaines pour établir ce lien organique indispensable entre les idéaux intellectuels et la lutte active et pour faire connaître à l'Assemblée générale les détails de l'alliance des forces de réaction et des monopoles internationaux.

119. Mais d'abord et avant tout, le sens de solidarité qui unit la majorité des Etats Membres impose que l'appui donné aux combattants de la liberté soit concret et non pas seulement moral. Les liens entre les organisations régionales et l'ONU doivent se développer dans la mesure requise par la gravité des problèmes. Enfin, on doit faire comprendre aux tenants des forces de réaction que, au niveau même du commerce, des échanges et des intérêts matériels, l'Afrique peut avoir soit des amis, soit des ennemis, mais qu'il n'y a pas de place pour les indécis.

120. La richesse des ressources intellectuelles qui a permis la rédaction d'une résolution telle que la résolution 1514 (XV) n'est pas incapable de rendre concrets ces points théoriques au stade où nous en sommes, pour en faire une charte d'action, une charte qui couronnera en fin de compte les efforts déployés avec tant d'ardeur pour assurer la primauté de la justice et de l'équité.

121. M. RODRIGUEZ ASTIAZARAIN (Cuba) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Voilà six ans que l'Assemblée générale a adopté l'historique Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Chaque année, nous nous réunissons pour examiner les résultats obtenus par le Comité spécial anticolonialiste, dénommé des Vingt-Quatre, créé pour réaliser les objectifs de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale.

122. Ma délégation désire exprimer une fois de plus sa reconnaissance pour les efforts accomplis par le Comité spécial en vue de faire triompher ces buts si justes, malgré la résistance tenace opposée par les puissances coloniales au processus de décolonisation dans le monde. L'opiniâtreté avec laquelle ces puissances cherchent à maintenir leur domination politique et économique sur les territoires coloniaux constitue une violation flagrante de la Charte des Nations Unies, qui proclame le droit des peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

123. Nous comprenons que les travaux du Comité spécial se heurtent aux intérêts de grandes puissances colonialistes qui utilisent toutes leurs ressources au sein de cet organisme pour entraver, freiner et empêcher toute mesure efficace visant à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV).

124. C'est pourquoi les progrès sont lents et pourquoi nous sommes obligés de redoubler d'efforts dans la lutte contre le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme, inséparable de la lutte contre l'impérialisme à la tête duquel se trouve le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, principal exploiteur et oppresseur du monde contemporain.

125. Les impérialistes oublient tout principe humanitaire et dénie aux peuples les droits les plus élémentaires afin de poursuivre l'exploitation lucrative de leurs richesses. Pour les impérialistes, la sueur, le sacrifice et le sang des peuples représentent de simples facteurs traduisibles en chiffres de bilan. C'est pourquoi, nous le répétons, les travaux dont est chargé le Comité spécial sont constamment contrariés par les représentants de tous les Etats colonialistes et leurs partisans.

126. Les résolutions adoptées par la dernière Assemblée générale en ce qui concerne la légalité de la lutte des peuples pour leur liberté et leur indépendance, l'appel lancé à tous les Etats pour qu'ils apportent une assistance morale et matérielle à cette lutte, et la condamnation du colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et manifestations en tant que crime contre l'humanité, doivent nous encourager à poursuivre la réalisation de ces objectifs. Mais où notre appui peut se révéler le plus utile, c'est là où se déroule la lutte émancipatrice des peuples exploités. Augmentons notre aide à ces mouvements de libération et nous éliminerons définitivement ce cancer de l'humanité que constituent le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme.

127. Les impérialistes font de vains efforts pour étouffer les mouvements de libération et maintenir leur régime de domination et d'exploitation coloniales, appliquant à cet effet des méthodes brutales de répression, se livrant à des agressions criminelles et à des interventions armées, et pratiquant la ségrégation et la discrimination raciale.

128. Cuba pourrait relater ici les expériences combien amères qui jalonnent son histoire, car, à cause de l'intervention armée du Gouvernement des Etats-Unis, l'indépendance véritable nous fut escamotée et nous nous vîmes imposer des gouvernements dociles, acquis à la politique de domination coloniale nord-américaine. Dans le domaine économique, les impérialistes nous imposèrent le rôle de producteurs de matières premières pour l'industrie nord-américaine et d'acheteurs pour leurs produits manufacturés.

129. Malgré la révolution victorieuse, et bien que nous en ayons fini une fois pour toutes avec les conséquences de la politique coloniale yankee, nous avons toujours sur notre territoire la base militaire que les Etats-Unis y maintiennent avec arrogance et sans justification légale contre la volonté de notre peuple et de son gouvernement. Nous devons appeler l'attention de l'Assemblée sur le danger que constituent les bases militaires étrangères qui font partie de l'arsenal agressif des impérialistes et sont utilisées pour tenter d'étouffer les mouvements travaillant à l'indépendance dans les territoires coloniaux et néo-coloniaux.

130. Une des manifestations les plus élevées de la solidarité existant entre les peuples du monde entier victimes d'agression a été sans aucun doute la Conférence tricontinentale qui s'est tenue à La Havane, capitale de la République de Cuba, au début de 1966^{3/} et qui réunissait les représentants des mouvements de libération nationale et d'autres forces progressistes de trois continents. Puisqu'il s'agit d'un événement historique d'importance majeure dans la lutte contre les forces impérialistes et colonialistes, qu'il me soit permis de citer un paragraphe de la résolution générale de la commission politique sur le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme, paragraphe qui exprime énergiquement ce que doit être la réponse des peuples et des gouvernements progressistes du monde à la violence déchaînée par les impérialistes?

"Proclamer que face à la violence armée que l'impérialisme, et au premier chef l'impérialisme nord-américain, emploie pour étouffer la lutte de libération qui ne cesse de s'intensifier, les peuples victimes de l'agression ont à la fois le droit et le devoir de recourir à la violence révolutionnaire. Etre solidaire de la lutte que mène chaque peuple à cette fin et insister auprès de tous les pays des trois continents pour qu'ils apportent aux mouvements révolutionnaires qui luttent par les armes ou sur le plan politique l'appui moral, et aussi matériel, politique et diplomatique qui est nécessaire pour garantir la victoire sur l'impérialisme, le colonialisme et le néo-colonialisme dans les trois continents, et qui est également un droit et un devoir pour tous les peuples." [A/6611/Add.1, p. 36 (par. 4).]

131. Ces dernières années, de nouveaux Etats sont nés, dont les peuples ont obtenu leur indépendance grâce à leur lutte héroïque. Cependant, en Afrique, au Moyen-Orient et en Amérique latine, des peuples restent soumis au pouvoir colonial. Une des populations soumises à la plus brutale des répressions est, sans aucun doute, celle de la partie méridionale de l'Afrique, où les pires forces racistes et réactionnaires du monde, protégées et encouragées par les impérialistes nord-américains, se sont unies pour exercer leur domination criminelle et bénéficient de l'aide économique de ces impérialistes et du soutien d'alliances militaires telles que l'OTAN. Grâce à ces appuis, ces forces maintiennent dans la sujétion les peuples du Sud-ouest africain, de la Rhodésie du Sud, de l'Angola, du Mozambique et de la Guinée dite portugaise. A Pretoria et en Rhodésie, ces produits de l'impérialisme s'efforcent, au mépris de la volonté de la communauté internationale, de poursuivre leur politique inhumaine d'apartheid. L'alliance de ces forces colonialistes se manifeste par la répression constante du mouvement d'indépendance et constitue une menace pour les Etats indépendants d'Afrique et un danger pour la paix et la sécurité internationales.

132. En intervenant dans le débat sur la question du Sud-ouest africain (1454ème séance), ma délégation a exprimé clairement sa condamnation du Gouvernement de l'Afrique du Sud, qui poursuit et aggrave sa politique d'oppression à l'égard de la population africaine et étend ses pratiques discriminatoires inhumaines au territoire du Sud-ouest africain. Nous avons accordé notre appui à toutes mesures que les Etats africains pourraient considérer comme nécessaires pour favoriser l'indépendance de ce territoire ou révoquer le mandat de l'Afrique du Sud sur le Sud-ouest africain. C'est pourquoi nous nous sommes prononcés en faveur du projet de résolution A/L.483 et Add.1 à 3. A nos yeux, le seul mandataire du Sud-Ouest africain est son propre peuple, que nous nous réaffirmons déterminés à appuyer moralement et matériellement dans sa juste lutte pour l'indépendance. Cependant, le refus du régime de l'Afrique du Sud et de ceux qui le soutiennent de respecter les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale et du Comité spécial est une preuve de plus de la résistance des puissances coloniales qui veulent empêcher l'Organisation des Nations Unies de réaliser les objectifs de la résolution 1514 (XV).

133. La situation en Rhodésie mérite une attention particulière. Voilà plus d'un an que la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance a été proclamée par une minorité blanche de colons fascistes qui continuent d'opprimer la population africaine du Zimbabwe malgré les résolutions adoptées par les Nations Unies. Or, qu'ont fait les impérialistes? Comment ont-ils répondu à l'appel de la communauté internationale? Voyons quelques simples chiffres qui ont été publiés, non certes par un journal de mon pays, mais par le New York Times d'hier, dimanche 11 décembre, à la section 4, page 1. L'article indique que les exportations de la Rhodésie du Sud vers les Etats-Unis sont passées de 15 400 000 dollars en 1965 à un chiffre estimé à 19 millions de dollars en 1966. En direction de l'Allemagne fédérale, elles sont passées dans le même temps de 25 200 000 à 25 800 000 dollars, et en direction de l'Afrique du Sud de 36 400 000 à 42 millions de dollars. Voilà ce que nous offrent les impérialistes, les colonialistes et les racistes en réponse aux efforts du Comité spécial.

134. Mon pays se solidarise avec le peuple du Zimbabwe qui mène une lutte héroïque, et il réaffirme sa détermination de lui apporter l'aide morale et matérielle dont il pourra avoir besoin pour obtenir son indépendance.

135. Ma délégation est préoccupée par la situation qui règne dans les territoires sous domination portugaise. En Guinée dite portugaise, aux îles du Cap-Vert, de même qu'en Angola, au Mozambique et aux îles Saint-Thomas et du Prince, les populations subissent une constante répression destinée à étouffer leurs justes aspirations à l'indépendance.

136. Cuba salue une nouvelle fois du haut de cette tribune les progrès victorieux du mouvement de libération nationale de la Guinée dite portugaise et renouvelle l'assurance de son plein appui à tous les peuples qui luttent pour se libérer du joug étranger.

137. En Amérique latine reste posée l'irritante question de Porto Rico, qui continue de subir la domination coloniale du Gouvernement des Etats-Unis. Le 18 octobre dernier, dans son intervention au cours du débat général, M. Raúl Roa, Ministre des affaires étrangères de mon pays, a fait la déclaration suivante au sujet de la situation de Porto Rico:

"Avec la caution d'une politique anticolonialiste sans duplicité ni faille, la délégation cubaine demande l'appui de tous les Etats indépendants en faveur de l'île sœur de Porto Rico. Faisant appel à tous les recours et à tous les stratagèmes, le Gouvernement nord-américain a essayé de soustraire cette question à l'examen de l'Assemblée générale. Il ne suffit pas de réclamer l'abolition des séquelles du colonialisme européen en Amérique latine. Si l'on est anticolonialiste et logique avec soi-même, il faut réclamer avant tout l'abolition de la domination coloniale qu'imposent les Etats-Unis à Porto Rico, dont le peuple, de même langue que nous, de mêmes traditions et de même culture, et dont l'indépendance a été favorisée par José Martí, en même temps que celle de Cuba, complète ainsi l'entreprise libératrice de Simon Bolivar en élevant une digue à l'expansion économique et politique des Etats-Unis vers le sud du continent.

"La délégation cubaine estime que, conformément aux principes de la Charte et aux résolutions anticolonialistes qu'elle a adoptées, l'Assemblée générale doit se prononcer sur cette question. Le Gouvernement révolutionnaire de Cuba a demandé l'an dernier, par ma lettre en date du 1er octobre 1965, l'inscription de la question de Porto Rico au programme du Comité spécial de décolonisation. Le document reprenait la demande de 47 chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernements réunis à la deuxième Conférence des pays non alignés et se faisait l'écho de demandes de toutes les organisations patriotiques de Porto Rico. Le groupe de travail dudit Comité a recommandé que l'on procède à une étude afin de déterminer si Porto Rico peut être inscrit sur la liste des territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance, renvoyant l'examen de la question à la prochaine session du Comité spécial.

"La délégation cubaine renouvelle à l'Assemblée générale sa demande pour que l'on prenne immédiatement en considération le problème de Porto Rico. Il convient de souligner que nous ne le faisons pas seulement en tant que Membre de l'Organisation, mais aussi au nom et en tant que représentant d'un peuple héroïque et plein d'abnégation qui, depuis un siècle, lutte pour sa totale émancipation. Il appar-tiendra aux Etats Membres de choisir et de dire s'ils appuient l'indépendance de ce peuple ou le renforcement de ses chaînes." [1446ème séance, par. 113 à 115.]

138. La question de l'inscription de Porto Rico au programme du Comité des Vingt-Quatre a été discutée de nouveau cette année. Le groupe de travail a pensé qu'une nouvelle étude détaillée était nécessaire et a déclaré que cette étude devrait être effectuée le plus rapidement possible au cours de la prochaine session du Comité spécial.

139. Ma délégation réaffirme que le Comité spécial est parfaitement compétent pour étudier la question de Porto Rico, territoire dépendant auquel s'applique pleinement la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale.

140. Les impérialistes nord-américains font d'inutiles efforts pour tenter de dissimuler la situation réelle de Porto Rico. Aux Nations Unies, ils invoquent la résolution 748 (VIII) de l'Assemblée générale. Or, cette résolution a été adoptée sans que l'Assemblée ait eu exactement connaissance de la situation qui régnait à Porto Rico. Les Etats-Unis ont parlé d'un plébiscite par lequel le peuple aurait — paraît-il — choisi son destin. Cependant, ils n'ont pas mentionné que ce plébiscite n'offrait pas la solution de l'indépendance et que 60 p. 100 des électeurs inscrits s'abstinrent d'y participer ou manifestèrent leur opposition à l'occupation coloniale yankee. Les Etats-Unis invoquent, je le répète, la résolution 748 (VIII), mais à la neuvième Conférence internationale américaine, tenue à Bogota en 1948, ils se sont opposés à l'adoption d'une résolution anticolonialiste, de crainte que des études sur le colonialisme en Amérique ne viennent à porter sur leur occupation illégale de Porto Rico. A ce moment-là, la résolution 748 (VIII) n'avait pas encore été adoptée.

141. Nous avons la ferme intention d'empêcher les impérialistes, quoi qu'ils fassent, de dissimuler une vérité aveuglante. Porto Rico est soumis au pouvoir législatif, exécutif et judiciaire des Etats-Unis. Sa population n'a aucune juridiction sur les questions de citoyenneté, d'affaires étrangères, de défense, d'immigration et d'émigration, de commerce extérieur, de monnaie, de postes, de radiocommunications, de télévision, etc. Le seul droit que les Etats-Unis ont accordé à la population portoricaine est celui de mourir pour défendre les intérêts impérialistes, comme en Corée et au Viet-Nam. En cela, oui, il faut reconnaître la générosité des Etats-Unis!

142. Pour terminer, je tiens à déclarer que mon pays se prononcera en faveur de toutes mesures que pourra proposer le Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour permettre aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux d'accéder à l'indépendance.

143. M. GEORGESCU (Roumanie): La délégation de la République socialiste de Roumanie participe à la discussion des problèmes relatifs à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux avec la conviction que l'ONU doit jouer un rôle plus efficace dans la liquidation définitive des derniers vestiges du colonialisme. La liberté et l'indépendance sont évidemment le résultat de la lutte des peuples soumis à la domination coloniale, mais par les moyens qui lui sont propres notre Organisation peut contribuer elle aussi d'une manière substantielle au succès de cette lutte et à la liquidation définitive du système colonial anachronique.

144. Le rapport annuel du Secrétaire général sur l'activité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies accorde une place importante aux problèmes de la décolonisation.

"Il faut admettre" — déclare le Secrétaire général dans l'introduction à son rapport annuel — "que si l'ONU a été à la pointe de l'action en faveur du principe de l'autodétermination, et si elle a beaucoup fait pour encourager et parfois aider l'émancipation de peuples dépendants, elle n'a pas réussi jusqu'ici à apporter ou à faciliter des solutions efficaces aux divers problèmes coloniaux, fort graves et difficiles, qui subsistent encore." [A/6301/Add.1, p. 12.]

C'est à ce stade-là qu'ont commencé, à la présente session, les travaux de la Quatrième Commission et de l'Assemblée générale.

145. Bien que l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité aient adopté des recommandations et des décisions adéquates au sujet de la proclamation de l'indépendance des territoires non autonomes, d'importants problèmes coloniaux, comme ceux du Sud-Ouest africain, de la Rhodésie du Sud et des territoires portugais, restent particulièrement graves, du fait que les puissances administrantes se refusent obstinément à mettre en application les nombreuses résolutions adoptées et continuent à recourir à l'utilisation de la force policière et armée pour le maintien de leur domination.

146. Quelques-unes des résolutions adoptées par l'Assemblée générale lors de la présente session constituent, à notre avis, un pas en avant en ce qui concerne le processus de la décolonisation.

147. Ainsi, le retrait du Mandat de l'Afrique du Sud sur le Sud-Ouest africain et l'institution du Comité des Quatorze^{4/} chargé de présenter, pour avril 1967 au plus tard, des recommandations sur la préparation du territoire en vue de l'indépendance [voir résolution 2145 (XXI)] placent l'Organisation des Nations Unies devant une responsabilité directe. Les 14 gouvernements, ainsi que notre Organisation dans son ensemble, ne pourront plus se limiter à des études et à des recommandations générales, mais devront prendre des mesures pratiques efficaces qui puissent aboutir à brève échéance à l'indépendance du Sud-Ouest africain.

148. Par sa résolution 2151 (XXI) du 17 novembre 1966, l'Assemblée générale ne se contente pas de reconnaître aux peuples le droit de lutter contre les puissances coloniales; elle fait aussi appel à tous les Etats pour qu'ils accordent leur appui moral et matériel à ceux qui mènent une dure lutte pour acquérir leur indépendance nationale ou, dans le cas de la Rhodésie du Sud, au peuple du Zimbabwe le gouvernement raciste illégal de Smith.

149. La politique menée par le Portugal dans les territoires placés sous son administration est, aux termes du projet de résolution adopté par la Quatrième

^{4/} Comité spécial pour le Sud-Ouest africain.

Commission [A/6554, par. 14], condamnée comme "crime contre l'humanité".

150. Aussi, étant donné le refus persistant des puissances administrantes, les répressions et les guerres coloniales déchaînées par elle, le forum international ne se limite-t-il pas à ses propres mesures et décisions. Il juge également nécessaire d'encourager les peuples à poursuivre leur lutte sacrée pour l'indépendance et fait appel à tous les Etats pour appuyer moralement et matériellement cette lutte qui constitue le facteur décisif dans la liquidation de l'odieux régime de domination coloniale, l'esclavagisme des temps modernes. Dans le cas de la Rhodésie, l'appel vise au renversement du gouvernement raciste et illégal de Smith.

151. La domination coloniale a constitué, des siècles durant, une véritable calamité pour des continents entiers et pour l'humanité. Le continent africain, qui a eu le plus à souffrir du fait des occupations étrangères, peut s'enorgueillir de civilisations et de cultures millénaires célèbres et autres civilisations remarquables en plein développement, que les colonialistes ont trouvées en Afrique et essayé de détruire pendant leur domination. Le festival de l'art noir de Dakar a constitué pour certains une "découverte" de l'Afrique. Les trésors artistiques africains ont mis en lumière un monde nouveau grandiose. L'histoire de l'Afrique ne commence pas, comme le prétendent les apologistes du colonialisme, avec la colonisation de ce continent. Le colonialisme a constitué au contraire l'interruption du développement de l'Afrique et parfois même la destruction des civilisations florissantes de cet immense territoire.

152. Le processus de la décolonisation est loin d'être achevé. Bien que cette salle nous offre un cadre magnifique où la moitié des délégations représentent de jeunes Etats récemment libérés, il n'en reste pas moins que plus de 50 territoires, plus ou moins grands, se trouvent encore sous domination coloniale.

153. Des voix se font encore entendre, à la tribune de l'ONU, qui parlent de l'incapacité pour certains territoires de devenir indépendants soit parce qu'ils seraient dépourvus des cadres et des conditions nécessaires pour se développer, soit parce qu'ils ne pourraient pas exister comme Etats indépendants en raison de l'exiguïté de leur territoire. Mais qui donc est responsable de la pénurie des cadres et des conditions, sinon les puissances coloniales, qui n'ont rien négligé pour empêcher la création de pareilles conditions? Les faits sont trop connus pour qu'il soit nécessaire de les rappeler ici. Une simple comparaison entre l'effectif des cadres qui existait sur ces territoires au moment de la proclamation de l'indépendance et celui qui existe à présent est suffisante pour démontrer que ces jeunes Etats ont formé, en quelques années seulement, plus de cadres qu'il n'en fut formé pendant toute la période de domination coloniale.

154. Il est impérieusement nécessaire que tous les territoires encore sous domination étrangère, quels que soient leur étendue et leur population, le lieu où ils se trouvent ou le fait d'être considérés comme des "territoires stratégiques", obtiennent sans délai leur indépendance. Une fois libres et indépendants, c'est aux peuples de décider eux-mêmes de leur sort.

Ils seront alors en mesure de choisir seuls une éventuelle et libre association avec de petits territoires voisins, conformément à leurs propres intérêts.

155. Un simple coup d'œil sur la carte suffit pour se rendre compte que les territoires n'ayant pas encore acquis leur indépendance sont dispersés dans presque tous les continents, sur les océans et les mers les plus importants. Dans beaucoup de ces territoires, il existe soit une situation explosive due à la dure oppression coloniale, soit des bases militaires étrangères de différentes puissances. Tout cela rend impérieux que soit octroyée au plus vite et sans aucune condition l'indépendance totale à tous les peuples qui habitent ces territoires, au nombre de plus de 50.

156. Selon la Charte de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, les rapports entre les puissances administrantes et les territoires dépendants ont un caractère international, du fait qu'ils sont sous l'égide et la surveillance de l'ONU et qu'ils doivent contribuer à ce que les peuples en question parviennent à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance. Vingt ans après l'institution du régime de tutelle, on discute encore à l'ONU sur la nature de ces territoires, on émet de nombreuses théories rétrogrades et colonialistes. Selon l'esprit et la lettre de la Charte de l'ONU, le régime international de tutelle ayant un caractère de transition vers l'indépendance, il ne saurait être restraint par aucune discrimination ou limitation en ce qui concerne les mesures visant la décolonisation des territoires encore dépendants.

157. Les événements ont montré que la décolonisation représente un processus complexe auquel les puissances coloniales s'opposent avec acharnement, en recourant à toute une gamme de moyens allant jusqu'aux répressions militaires de grande ampleur, à de véritables guerres non déclarées contre les populations autochtones.

158. La période qui a suivi la seconde guerre mondiale restera dans l'histoire comme celle de la grande décolonisation politique. La grande majorité de la population des colonies a obtenu l'indépendance et plus de 50 nouveaux Etats indépendants, qui occupent une place d'honneur dans cette Assemblée, ont été créés pendant cette même période.

159. L'immense matériel accumulé dans les archives du Conseil de tutelle et de la Quatrième Commission contient d'innombrables exemples d'attribution ou d'opposition aux actions de décolonisation, mais surtout des nombreux moyens et méthodes utilisés par les puissances administrantes pour maintenir encore, dans les Etats nouvellement créés, leur position et leurs privilèges économiques antérieurs. Dans la lutte qu'il mène pour prolonger son existence, le colonialisme essaie de revêtir l'habit du néo-colonialisme.

160. Récemment, à la Quatrième Commission, de nombreuses délégations se sont élevées contre les tentatives de la puissance administrante en vue de former un gouvernement fédéral pour la proclamation de l'indépendance d'Aden, dont le but serait notamment de maintenir les intérêts économiques étrangers. Le néo-colonialisme, dont le caractère est essentiellement économique, cherche par conséquent à se substituer au colonialisme.

161. Dans le cadre de la Deuxième Commission et de l'Assemblée générale on discute depuis plusieurs années de la souveraineté nationale sur toutes les ressources naturelles des pays. Il s'agit évidemment des suites du colonialisme dans les nouveaux Etats indépendants, de la récupération du droit légitime des peuples sur toutes les richesses nationales, du libre exercice de la souveraineté, dans le domaine non seulement politique, mais aussi économique.

162. Les réalités de ces pays, la vie même exigent que la décolonisation soit accomplie dans tous les domaines.

163. Dans le discours qu'il a prononcé le 23 septembre 1966 devant l'Assemblée générale, le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Sénégal, M. Thiam, déclarait:

"On sait que le rapport entre les revenus du monde développé et du monde sous-développé était de 15 à 1 en 1938. Il est maintenant de 35 à 1." [1414ème séance, par. 214.]

Cette situation concerne l'ensemble du tiers monde et particulièrement les 50 pays qui ont rejeté la domination coloniale.

164. Les monopoles des anciennes métropoles et d'autres monopoles internationaux détiennent d'importantes ressources économiques, mettent insuffisamment en valeur ces richesses, surtout lorsqu'il s'agit de matières premières qu'ils échangent souvent à des prix non rémunérateurs, ce qui fait que le processus de développement économique est incomplet et très lent. Ils maintiennent ainsi pour eux-mêmes d'importants leviers économiques dans de nombreux territoires.

165. L'écart économique entre les pays développés et les Etats en voie de développement a tendance à devenir un précipice dangereux pour le progrès de l'humanité, pour la sécurité du monde entier. Quelques données illustreront davantage cette situation inquiétante.

166. Parlant des pays en voie de développement, l'Etude sur l'économie mondiale, 1965, précisait en effet:

"En 1964, la dette totale était de l'ordre de 40 milliards de dollars (soit nettement plus que les recettes d'exportation de la même année), et les sorties de capitaux pour le service de l'intérêt et de l'amortissement s'élevaient à 5 milliards de dollars (soit bien plus de la moitié des entrées nettes de nouveaux capitaux à long terme et de dons).

"Près des trois quarts de cette dette consistaient en dette publique ou garantie par l'Etat. Entre 1956 et 1964, la dette garantie par l'Etat avait augmenté au rythme d'environ 15 p. 100 par an^{5/}."

167. Dans une étude publiée par la Dotation Carnegie pour la paix internationale^{6/}, on fait ressortir que les pays développés, représentant environ 20 p. 100 de la population du globe, détiennent presque 60 p. 100 du produit social total du monde, tandis que les pays en voie de développement, soit environ 46 p. 100 de la population du globe, ne possèdent guère que près de 18 p. 100 de ce produit mondial.

168. Les hommes d'Etat et les hommes de science objectifs sont d'accord pour considérer que cet état de choses est dû, notamment dans les pays récemment libérés, aux suites néfastes du colonialisme qui persiste encore sous l'habit du néo-colonialisme. De nombreuses voix autorisées se sont élevées ici, à l'Assemblée générale, contre cette situation pour demander que soient prises des mesures capables d'y remédier. D'autre part, l'ONU a entrepris certaines mesures destinées à contribuer au développement économique des pays de cette catégorie, mesures qui sont toutefois loin d'éliminer les séquelles économiques de la domination coloniale.

169. Il est tout à fait clair que si le colonialisme était jusqu'à une période récente le principal danger pour la grande majorité des pays du tiers monde, c'est maintenant le néo-colonialisme qui est devenu une menace grave pour ces mêmes vastes régions. Il est fort probable que notre Organisation sera bientôt appelée à s'occuper, en tout esprit de responsabilité, des moyens de remédier aux obstacles dressés par le néo-colonialisme sur la voie du développement normal, équilibré, de tous les pays.

170. Les Etats récemment libérés se trouvent dans une période de renaissance nationale, d'efforts constructifs pour la réalisation complète des aspirations nationales de leurs peuples.

171. Nous venons de mentionner quelques données fondamentales sur la situation économique actuelle du tiers monde. La décolonisation étant un phénomène complexe, les peuples s'efforcent de réaliser une indépendance réelle, entière, en achevant la décolonisation économique après la libération politique.

172. La délégation roumaine est convaincue que les peuples récemment libérés parachèveront leur indépendance nationale dans tous les domaines, y compris le domaine culturel et spirituel. Parmi ces peuples, certains ont de belles traditions culturelles, d'autres furent interrompus dans leur développement lorsqu'ils furent précipités dans la brume du colonialisme. Ils sont tous animés par les nobles idéaux du progrès matériel et spirituel sur la base de la pleine souveraineté, de la coopération mutuellement avantageuse et de la paix. Ce n'est qu'après avoir conquis leur indépendance que les nations pourront consacrer tous leurs efforts au développement de leur entité nationale et fournir, dans toute la mesure de leur capacité, la contribution dont la société a besoin dans son évolution. Loin d'être périmée, la nation est une réalité vivante, et lui créer les moyens de se manifester c'est répondre à un besoin impérieux de normalisation de la situation internationale et du progrès général.

173. Le colonialisme constitue encore une source majeure de menaces à la paix, de conflits et de guerres. Tout observateur impartial peut constater que c'est précisément pendant la période de décolonisation qui a suivi la seconde guerre mondiale que les menaces à la paix, les conflits et les guerres se sont produits, surtout dans des territoires sous domination étrangère et principalement pour des raisons de maintien des pratiques coloniales.

174. Sans doute, les territoires encore colonisés dispersés dans tout le globe terrestre — et qui dépassent le nombre de 50 — constituent-ils une source réelle et active de conflits armés. La situation extrêmement grave qui règne dans la partie méridionale du continent africain peut dépasser rapidement, par son caractère et son intensité, ses limites actuelles. Elle constitue une menace réelle pour les pays africains indépendants des régions avoisinantes. Une grande responsabilité incombe, à cet égard, à notre Organisation.

175. Réaffirmant le droit sacré de tous les peuples à une indépendance nationale totale, la délégation roumaine demande instamment que les Nations Unies prennent, en application de la résolution 1514 (XV), les mesures nécessaires en vue d'une décolonisation complète et urgente, de sorte que chaque territoire et chaque peuple encore soumis à la domination coloniale puissent obtenir une indépendance nationale réelle.

176. A cet effet, il est nécessaire que notre Organisation envisage et prenne des mesures pratiques afin d'empêcher que l'œuvre de la décolonisation ne soit confiée à des personnes ou à des groupes de personnes liés aux milieux colonialistes et que les pratiques coloniales ne soient perpétuées par le truchement du néo-colonialisme. Les gouvernements provisoires appelés à assurer le passage des territoires de l'état colonial à celui de l'indépendance peuvent parfois porter un grave préjudice aux intérêts fondamentaux des peuples. Il faut donc créer toutes les conditions nécessaires pour que les peuples qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance puissent exprimer librement leur volonté d'indépendance et de liberté et prendre leur destinée dans leurs propres mains.

177. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a procédé à des études et a élaboré des rapports bien documentés sur de nombreux territoires. Il a fait des suggestions et des propositions judicieuses et utiles qui peuvent être mises en application.

178. L'Organisation des Nations Unies est appelée à prendre, dans les plus brefs délais, des mesures énergiques pour que la situation intolérable qui règne dans le Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie du Sud, en Angola et au Mozambique, soit complètement liquidée. Elle doit mettre en application sans retard les recommandations et les sanctions décidées par l'Assemblée générale et par le Conseil de sécurité. Les peuples asservis, la paix et la sécurité du monde l'exigent impérieusement. Agir autrement serait encourager les colonialistes à poursuivre impunément leurs dangereuses actions.

179. Le PRESIDENT: Avant de lever la séance, je rappelle que le délai prévu pour le dépôt de propositions concernant le point 23 de l'ordre du jour a expiré aujourd'hui à midi.

La séance est levée à 13 h 5.

Président: M. Abdul Rahman PAZHWAK
 (Afghanistan).

ils comptaient plus de 660 millions d'habitants. Aujourd'hui, ces chiffres ont été ramenés à environ 8 millions de kilomètres carrés et 37 millions d'habitants. La superficie des territoires encore soumis à la domination des colonialistes a diminué de quatre fois, et ces territoires sont peuplés par des habitants 18 fois moins nombreux.

M. Tinoco (Costa Rica), vice-président, prend la présidence.

77. Ceux qui sont engagés dans la lutte pour l'élimination du système colonial se comptent par centaines de milliers, par millions. Les principaux fronts se trouvent dans les territoires coloniaux mêmes. La liberté des peuples, grands et petits, qui ont jeté bas les chaînes du colonialisme, des 400 millions d'Indiens aux 250 000 habitants de la Barbade, a été arrachée aux colonialistes de haute lutte car ceux-ci ne leur en ont pas fait don.

78. On sait fort bien que dans leur combat difficile pour la liberté et l'indépendance, les peuples des colonies ont un adversaire puissant. Les colonialistes disposent d'armées dotées de matériel et d'équipement techniques les plus modernes, de ressources économiques et financières immenses; ils sont unis au sein de blocs militaires, l'OTAN, le CENTO, l'OTASE; ils se prêtent main-forte grâce aux livraisons d'armes, aux prêts et à toutes sortes de manœuvres politiques dans l'arène internationale. Ils ont derrière eux l'expérience séculaire de l'oppression des peuples, la stratégie du "diviser pour régner", mise au point par plusieurs générations d'administrateurs coloniaux, qui est appliquée aussi bien à l'échelle de continents entiers qu'à l'intérieur de différents pays coloniaux, surtout lorsque les peuples ne font pas preuve d'assez de vigilance.

79. Les peuples des colonies n'ont, quant à eux, ni les armements modernes, ni les moyens financiers, ni la base économique nécessaires, ni, parfois même, l'expérience historique. Mais ils sont prêts à se battre pour la liberté et décidés à triompher. Et ils ont des amis.

80. Les peuples coloniaux qui luttent pour leur libération sont soutenus fermement et sans défaillance par l'Union soviétique et les autres pays socialistes qui leur fourniront, comme par le passé, une aide matérielle et morale. De nombreux pays d'Asie et d'Afrique qui ont conquis leur liberté et leur indépendance dans un combat difficile se tiennent résolument aux côtés de leurs frères en lutte. Leur combat trouve un écho de plus en plus puissant auprès des pays d'Amérique latine qui, par suite de certaines circonstances historiques, ont réussi à se soustraire au joug colonial il y a un siècle et demi déjà et dont les peuples se transmettent de père en fils des récits sur leur lutte héroïque pour l'indépendance.

81. Telle est, dans le monde, la répartition des forces en présence dans la lutte pour la liquidation du système colonial, pour l'élimination des derniers régimes coloniaux. L'Organisation des Nations Unies y occupe une place particulière et importante. Née pendant la dernière phase de la guerre contre le fascisme, l'ONU a inscrit dans sa Charte en tant que principe essentiel, l'égalité de droits entre les nations,

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

75. M. MENDELEVITCH (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: La libération des peuples coloniaux est l'un des aspects les plus progressistes de l'évolution qui marque notre époque. L'un après l'autre, les régimes coloniaux s'effondrent en Afrique, en Asie, en Amérique, en Océanie et on voit apparaître à leur place des Etats indépendants qui entrent dans la communauté internationale comme membres à part entière.

76. En 1945, les empires coloniaux couvraient une superficie de 36,9 millions de kilomètres carrés et grandes et petites, et a pris nettement position en faveur de l'indépendance de tous les peuples coloniaux.

82. Elle a à son actif des décisions utiles et des mesures pratiques visant à appuyer les peuples qui aspirent à se défaire du joug colonial. L'énumération même la plus succincte de ces décisions et mesures ne laisse pas d'impressionner.

83. La Déclaration des Nations Unies sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, la reconnaissance, par l'Organisation, du caractère légitime et juste des mouvements de libération nationale, les appels lancés par l'ONU pour qu'une aide et un soutien, de caractère moral et matériel, soient apportés aux peuples en lutte, ont renforcé la base juridique et politique internationale de toutes les mesures anticolonialistes prises à l'échelle mondiale.

84. L'examen systématique, lors des sessions de l'Assemblée générale, au Conseil de sécurité, au Comité spécial pour la décolonisation et dans d'autres organes des Nations Unies, de la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, aussi bien dans son ensemble que pour chaque territoire colonial en particulier, a accru considérablement les moyens de prendre des mesures politiques en faveur des peuples qui n'ont pas encore obtenu l'indépendance et permis à l'opinion mondiale de faire davantage sentir le poids de son influence à l'appui de cette lutte.

85. Les sessions que le Comité spécial des Nations Unies sur la décolonisation a tenues dans des pays d'Afrique, le travail qu'il a accompli à proximité immédiate des territoires coloniaux ainsi que l'envoi dans plusieurs territoires coloniaux de missions de visite et de groupes de l'ONU ont créé des conditions favorables à l'établissement, par l'Organisation, de contacts directs avec les mouvements de libération nationale, et lui ont permis de mieux comprendre et d'aider davantage les peuples coloniaux dans leur juste cause.

86. Les appels réitérés de l'ONU aux institutions spécialisées, notamment à l'UNESCO, à la FAO et à l'Organisation mondiale de la santé, ont contribué à appeler l'attention de ces institutions sur la nécessité de cesser de fournir toute aide, financière ou autre, aux colonialistes et à envisager de quelle façon elles pourraient prêter assistance aux peuples combattant pour leur liberté. Parmi les institutions spécialisées seule la Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement est jusqu'ici demeurée sourde à la voix de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et, en dépit de sa volonté clairement exprimée, continue à aider le Portugal qui mène des guerres coloniales contre trois peuples africains. Elle continue également à prêter une aide à la République sud-africaine qui, par sa politique d'apartheid, a lancé un défi à l'humanité civilisée.

87. Ces dernières années l'Organisation a fourni une contribution importante à la lutte anticolonialiste par les rapports judicieux et bien documentés du Comité spécial de la décolonisation sur le rôle des monopoles capitalistes dans les colonies portugaises, au Sud-Ouest africain et en Rhodésie du Sud. Ces rapports ont révélé tous les rouages du colonialisme contemporain. Dans le langage dépouillé des faits, ces rapports ont montré comment le sang et la sueur des peuples colonisés sont transformés par l'action des monopoles en bénéfices que se répartissent les consortiums gigantesques des États-Unis d'Amérique, du Royaume-Uni, de l'Allemagne occidentale, de l'Afrique du Sud et de certains autres pays.

88. Il y a 100 ans, un grand économiste britannique, Danning, s'exprimait en ces termes: "Le capital craint le manque de bénéfices ou les bénéfices trop faibles comme la nature craint le vide. Mais quand le bénéfice est suffisant, le capital s'enhardit. Assurez-lui 10 p. 100 et le capital accepte n'importe quel investissement; pour 20 p. 100 il s'anime; pour 50 p. 100 il est littéralement prêt à prendre tous les risques; pour 100 p. 100 il foule au pied toutes les lois humaines; pour 300 p. 100 de bénéfice, il n'y a pas de crime devant lequel il reculera, même si ce crime doit lui valoir la potence." Je viens de citer un ouvrage de l'économiste anglais Danning, publié en 1860, il y a 100 ans.

89. Le rapport du Comité spécial des Nations Unies sur la décolonisation (A/6300/Rev.1) concernant les activités des monopoles étrangers dans les territoires coloniaux prouve qu'au cours du siècle dernier le capital est devenu encore plus avide, encore plus impitoyable, encore plus prêt à tous les crimes.

90. Les décisions anticolonialistes de l'ONU sont accueillies favorablement par les peuples en lutte. Les dirigeants des organisations nationalistes de l'Angola et du Mozambique, de la Guinée (Bissau) et d'Aden, du Sud-Ouest africain et de la Rhodésie du Sud viennent ici, à l'Assemblée générale, ou s'adressent au Comité spécial des Nations Unies sur la décolonisation pour décrire la situation dans ces territoires et demander à l'ONU de les appuyer et de les aider dans leur lutte.

91. Dans l'ensemble, il n'est pas exagéré de dire que l'action politique de l'ONU a assurément contribué au fait que, depuis 1960, année de l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, 26 territoires coloniaux d'une superficie totale de plus de 5 millions de kilomètres carrés et comptant près de 50 millions d'habitants ont brisé les chaînes coloniales et fondé plus de 20 nouveaux États indépendants.

92. Qu'il soit permis à la délégation soviétique de souhaiter encore une fois la bienvenue de cette tribune, au nom du peuple soviétique, aux jeunes États indépendants d'Asie, d'Afrique, d'Amérique et d'Océanie maintenant représentés en si grand nombre au sein de notre Organisation.

93. Pourtant, si importants que soient les succès remportés, la lutte pour la liquidation des régimes coloniaux est loin d'être terminée. Elle se poursuit dans les jungles de l'Angola, dans les savanes du Mozambique, dans les rues d'Aden, dans les steppes du Sud-Ouest africain, dans les îles des océans Pacifique, Indien et Atlantique.

94. Si l'Organisation des Nations Unies veut demeurer à la hauteur de sa tâche consistant à apporter une aide à la lutte anticolonialiste légitime des peuples, elle doit encore faire beaucoup, bien plus que ce qu'elle n'a fait jusqu'ici.

95. Il convient de tenir compte des caractéristiques de la phase actuelle du combat mené pour la liquidation des vestiges du système colonial de l'impérialisme. En effet, il reste à libérer 37 millions d'êtres humains et si l'on y ajoute la population africaine de l'Afrique du Sud qui, de l'aveu de tous, est réduite à la situation de peuple colonial, on voit que le système colonial de l'impérialisme maintient toujours en esclavage 54 millions d'êtres humains.

96. Ce chiffre est naturellement beaucoup moins élevé qu'il y a 10 ans et à plus forte raison qu'il y a 20 ans: tout de même 54 millions d'êtres humains, c'est-à-dire de 12 à 15 millions de familles — hommes, femmes, enfants, vieillards — dont chacun a, à la naissance, le même droit légitime à la liberté et à la dignité humaine que les citoyens de n'importe quel peuple représenté à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, sont les seuls à être privés de la possibilité d'exercer ce droit.

97. Or, non seulement une portion considérable des territoires coloniaux échappe encore à la décolonisation, mais de surcroît les colonialistes s'accrochent avec une obstination particulière à ce qui leur reste.

98. Regardons de plus près quels sont les territoires qui demeurent encore sous la domination coloniale et pourquoi les colonisateurs s'accrochent ainsi à eux.

99. Le principal secteur du colonialisme reste de nos jours un vaste bloc de territoires d'Afrique, tout un sous-continent englobant les colonies portugaises, le Sud-Ouest africain, la Rhodésie du Sud et, en fait, l'Afrique du Sud. Par ailleurs, des dizaines de possessions coloniales de superficie relativement restreinte sont éparpillées sur presque tous les continents et océans.

100. Le sous-continent colonial en Afrique est une vaste région qu'exploitent impitoyablement — et avec le plus grand profit — les monopoles des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni, de l'Allemagne occidentale, de l'Afrique du Sud, de la France, de la Belgique et de l'Italie, peuplée de quelques dizaines de millions d'Africains, auxquels les monopoles font subir une exploitation qu'ils cherchent à étendre également aux peuples des Etats africains indépendants voisins, notamment au Malawi, au Botswana et au Lesotho. C'est une des principales régions d'où les plus grands Etats capitalistes tirent de l'or, des diamants, du platine, de l'uranium, du chrome et de nombreuses autres matières premières de la plus grande valeur.

101. C'est à partir de ce dernier bastion important du colonialisme que se prépare la contre-offensive de l'impérialisme contre l'Afrique libre. Les représentants des Etats africains ont entièrement raison lorsqu'ils déclarent qu'aucun pays africain ne pourra se sentir entièrement libre tant que les peuples du sud du continent ne seront pas libérés.

102. Les provocations systématiques auxquelles se livrent les colonialistes portugais contre la Tanzanie, la Zambie, le Sénégal et le Congo ne sont que des opérations de reconnaissance, des sondages destinés à mesurer la capacité de défense des Etats africains indépendants en vue de déceler ses faiblesses éventuelles pour leur porter un coup plus dur. Le défi que le régime raciste de la Rhodésie du Sud lance à toute l'Afrique n'est aussi qu'une opération de reconnaissance visant à déterminer si les conditions sont mûres pour tenter d'imposer à nouveau aux peuples africains qui se sont libérés la loi coloniale du fouet.

103. Il serait peu réaliste de s'imaginer que les colonialistes seront disposés à abandonner pacifiquement leur dernier grand bastion en Afrique. Non, ils s'y accrocheront et s'y cramponneront de toutes leurs forces: ils y mènent des guerres coloniales, renforcent la répression et consolident tout l'appareil de la contrainte. C'est là que les forces du progrès et de la liberté et les forces de la réaction et de l'asservissement sont aux prises. Bien des choses dépendent de l'issue de cette lutte pour les deux parties.

104. Les colonialistes ne se retireront pas non plus pacifiquement des nombreux petits territoires situés sur les différents continents et océans où flotte encore leur drapeau. Aden et Porto Rico, les îles Chagos et Guam, Okinawa et les îles Canaries, telle est l'infrastructure géographique du réseau de bases militaires dirigées contre des Etats et des peuples pacifiques. Les bases militaires installées dans ces enclaves et sur ces îles sont utilisées actuellement à des fins d'agression plus intensivement que jamais et, de toute évidence, ce réseau va en s'élargissant. L'île de Guam est devenue l'un des principaux points d'appui de l'agression des Etats-Unis au Viet-Nam. La menace des bases nucléaires des Etats-Unis dans l'île de Porto Rico pèse sur l'Amérique latine. On construit et on envisage de construire dans l'océan Indien de nouvelles bases militaires toujours plus nombreuses qui mettront en danger la sécurité des pays du sud de l'Asie et de l'Afrique orientale. Les colonialistes britanniques, chassés de Suez il y a 10 ans, ont longtemps opéré dans les bases militaires d'Aden d'où ils menaçaient les Etats arabes indépendants; maintenant, ils ne peuvent plus se maintenir à Aden, mais, avant de l'évacuer, ils créent de nouvelles bases militaires en Oman et dans les îles Bahrein. Ailleurs, dans ce que l'on appelle les petits territoires coloniaux, la lutte pour la libération, pour la liquidation des régimes coloniaux et des bases militaires se poursuit aussi avec acharnement. Les peuples de ces territoires ont également besoin d'une aide et d'un soutien.

105. Dans les circonstances actuelles, que peut faire l'Organisation des Nations Unies? Que doit-elle faire à l'étape actuelle de la lutte pour la liquidation définitive des régimes coloniaux, au moment où la résistance des colonialistes est devenue particulièrement opiniâtre et où ils cherchent, tantôt dans un endroit, tantôt dans un autre, à passer à la contre-offensive sans ménager leurs ressources?

106. La délégation soviétique estime qu'avant tout l'évolution de la situation exige que l'Organisation des Nations Unies donne maintenant une appréciation plus précise et plus concrète de ce que représente la survivance des régimes coloniaux. Nous soutenons l'idée, exprimée à cette tribune par le Président du Comité spécial des Nations Unies sur la décolonisation, l'ambassadeur G. Collier, représentant du Sierra Leone, suivant laquelle l'Assemblée générale devrait déclarer que le maintien des régimes coloniaux constitue un crime contre l'humanité [1485ème séance].

107. Oui, le maintien des régimes coloniaux est un crime contre l'humanité parce que les peuples coloniaux sont soumis à l'oppression, à l'asservissement, à la discrimination raciale pour que les monopoles capitalistes puissent en tirer des superbénéfices.

108. Oui, le maintien des régimes coloniaux est un crime contre l'humanité parce que les colonialistes, cherchant à maintenir leur domination, commettent des massacres, exterminent des groupes entiers de population, mènent des guerres coloniales et recourent à la répression et à la torture contre les combattants de la liberté.

109. Le maintien des régimes coloniaux est aussi un crime contre l'humanité parce qu'il a pour corollaire la déportation systématique des habitants autochtones, leur expulsion des terres les plus fertiles et l'installation sur ces terres de colons blancs.

110. Le maintien des régimes coloniaux est encore un crime contre l'humanité parce que dans les territoires coloniaux on crée des bases militaires, on entraîne des contingents de mercenaires pour intervenir dans les affaires intérieures d'Etats indépendants occupés à édifier leur propre vie nationale.

111. Le maintien des régimes coloniaux, c'est un crime contre l'humanité au sens même de la Charte et du jugement rendu par le Tribunal militaire international à l'issue du procès des principaux criminels de guerre nazis.

112. Si le maintien de régimes coloniaux à notre époque est devenu dans l'ensemble un crime contre l'humanité, les actes des colonialistes portugais et des racistes sud-africains et sud-rhodésiens sont d'autant plus criminels et passibles des sanctions les plus sévères.

113. La délégation soviétique demande qu'à sa vingt et unième session l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies souligne tous ces points dans la résolution qu'elle adoptera sur la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

114. Mais ce n'est pas tout. Il ne suffit pas de dénoncer un crime et de proclamer son désir d'y voir mettre un terme. Il est indispensable de réfléchir aux moyens efficaces de lutter contre ce crime. Et nous voulons dire à ce propos que c'est précisément parce que les colonialistes font preuve d'une telle obstination et menacent par leurs actes la paix et la sécurité internationales que le moment est venu de faire participer plus activement au règlement des problèmes de décolonisation le Conseil de sécurité, organe des Nations Unies auquel la Charte de l'Organisation a confié la responsabilité principale du maintien de la paix dans le monde et qui, conformément à l'Article 25 de la Charte, est habilité à prendre des décisions obligatoires pour tous les Etats Membres de l'ONU.

115. Pour mettre un terme aux crimes des colonialistes et, au premier chef, des colonialistes portugais et sud-africains, le moment est venu d'appliquer les dispositions du Chapitre VII de la Charte, c'est-à-dire l'Article 41, qui prévoit des mesures de coercition de caractère non militaire, mais si cela se révèle insuffisant, il faudra appliquer l'Article 42 prévoyant le recours, par l'Organisation des Nations Unies, à la force contre ceux qui portent atteinte à la paix et la sécurité internationales. L'application des Articles 41 et 42 de la Charte est du ressort du Conseil de sécurité. Il est donc naturel qu'une participation plus active du Conseil de sécurité à la solution des problèmes de la décolonisation confère une responsabilité particulière aux membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité, car c'est de leur unanimité que dépend l'efficacité des mesures prises par le Conseil.

116. L'Union soviétique, membre permanent du Conseil de sécurité, est prête, ainsi que l'a déclaré à plusieurs reprises le Gouvernement soviétique, à suivre sans défaillance la ligne de conduite qu'elle s'est fixée et à contribuer à l'adoption par le Conseil de sécurité de décisions efficaces, de nature à écarter les menaces à la paix et à la sécurité résultant de la résistance qu'opposent les colonialistes à la libération des peuples coloniaux. La parole est aux autres membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, le Royaume-Uni et la France. L'examen, pendant de nombreuses années, des questions coloniales à l'ONU nous ayant montré à l'évidence le peu d'empressement manifesté par certains de contribuer non pas en paroles mais en actes à la liquidation du colonialisme, nous jugerions logique qu'ici, à l'Assemblée générale, on les invite expressément à ne pas faire obstacle à l'adoption, par le Conseil de sécurité, de décisions qui apporteront aux peuples des colonies une aide tangible dans leur lutte. L'Assemblée générale doit lancer un avertissement aux termes duquel, si l'un ou l'autre des Etats Membres de l'ONU également membre du Conseil de sécurité cherche malgré cela à faire obstacle à l'adoption, par le Conseil, de décisions efficaces sur ces questions, le monde entier les considérera comme des complices de ce crime contre l'humanité.

117. Un tel avertissement adressé à certaines puissances alliées du Portugal au sein de l'OTAN est particulièrement nécessaire à l'heure actuelle où leur coopération militaire avec le Portugal se renforce encore davantage.

118. S'il en faut des preuves, voici l'un des faits, le dernier en date, que nous pouvons citer comme exemple. Il y a une semaine seulement que la Quatrième Commission de l'Assemblée générale a adopté à une majorité écrasante une résolution sur la question des colonies portugaises — nous l'avons approuvée aujourd'hui en séance plénière — qui contient un appel adressé aux pays membres de l'OTAN pour qu'ils cessent de fournir au Portugal des armes et du matériel militaire quels qu'ils soient.

119. Il y a une semaine de cela, dis-je, et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et le Royaume-Uni ont conclu, dans le cadre de l'OTAN, un nouvel accord militaire avec le Portugal portant sur la création d'un commandement unifié américano-anglo-portugais pour la région de la péninsule ibérique située, faut-il le rappeler, tout près de l'Afrique. Telle est l'attitude à l'égard des résolutions de l'ONU de ceux pour qui l'alliance avec le Portugal est plus chère et plus précieuse que la liberté des peuples africains. L'Assemblée générale doit, nous semble-t-il, avoir son mot à dire à ce sujet. C'est là un fait que l'on ne saurait méconnaître.

120. Mais ce ne sera pas suffisant non plus et on ne réglera pas ainsi, nous semble-t-il, les problèmes qui se posent à l'Organisation des Nations Unies au stade actuel de la lutte pour la liquidation des régimes coloniaux. A notre avis, l'Assemblée générale devrait exiger avec plus de fermeté que jamais que l'on apporte une aide morale et matérielle aux peuples des colonies qui cherchent à se libérer. Cet appel doit être adressé particulièrement à toutes les institutions spécialisées des Nations Unies qui s'occupent de questions de développement économique, d'aide financière, de coopération dans les domaines de la culture, de l'enseignement, de la santé publique, etc. Ces institutions peuvent faire beaucoup pour ceux qui luttent avec abnégation pour la liberté.

121. Il y a encore un principe que l'Assemblée générale doit souligner dans la résolution qu'elle adoptera sur la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: le moment est venu d'avertir sérieusement les colonialistes que l'Organisation des Nations Unies estime contraires à la Charte, à la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, à la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme, non seulement des actes tels que le déclenchement des guerres coloniales, la répression qui frappe les combattants de la liberté, mais aussi l'utilisation de toutes sortes de méthodes néo-colonialistes telles que l'installation de régimes fantoches dans les territoires coloniaux, l'expansion dans ces territoires des activités des monopoles économiques et financiers étrangers, l'établissement de bases militaires, le démembrement du territoire national, ainsi que toutes les manœuvres destinées à masquer le colonialisme, à induire en erreur l'opinion publique et à empêcher les peuples coloniaux d'accéder à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

122. Il y a deux ans, la Conférence des Etats non alignés du Caire a prononcé des paroles de poids contre le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations. Nous estimons que dans l'intérêt de tous les peuples, dans l'intérêt des générations futures, il est du devoir de l'Assemblée générale de l'ONU d'en faire de même dès maintenant. Ce sera d'autant plus opportun que les colonialistes recourent, ces derniers temps, de plus en plus souvent à des méthodes néo-colonialistes et misent toujours davantage sur ces méthodes. A cet égard, il suffit de rappeler la politique du Royaume-Uni à Aden et en Rhodésie du Sud.

123. Telles sont les tendances fondamentales des décisions qui, de l'avis de la délégation soviétique, devront être prises à la vingt et unième session de l'Assemblée générale. Adopter ces décisions, c'est fournir un apport politique nouveau, répondant aux exigences de notre époque, à la lutte des peuples pour la liquidation du colonialisme et faire tout ce que l'Organisation des Nations Unies peut et doit faire pour que l'année 1967 soit marquée par la liquidation complète et définitive des régimes coloniaux.

124. Nous estimons que le renforcement du soutien de tous types prêté aux peuples dans le dur combat qu'ils mènent pour éliminer définitivement les régimes coloniaux est du devoir de chaque Etat Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, une affaire d'honneur pour toute l'Organisation.

125. M. KATENGA (Malawi) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a lu avec beaucoup d'attention le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux [A/6300/Rev.1].

126. Comme beaucoup d'autres pays d'Afrique et d'Asie, mon pays a eu un long passé colonial avant d'accéder à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté. Nos dirigeants, y compris notre Président, ont connu la prison sous le régime colonial. C'est pourquoi mon gouvernement et le peuple du Malawi sont opposés à tout système d'administration coloniale imposé par le gouvernement d'une minorité ou d'un pays étranger aux populations autochtones de certaines régions de l'Afrique et de l'Asie et de certaines îles dispersées à travers le monde. Mon gouvernement croit au droit des peuples d'être maîtres de leur propre destin.

127. Je tiens donc à déclarer catégoriquement que le Malawi s'est toujours opposé et continuera toujours à s'opposer à ce qu'un système quelconque de gouvernement soit imposé par un pays à un autre ou par un groupe de pays à un autre.

128. Je rappelle à l'Assemblée que le Malawi est signataire de la Charte de l'Organisation de l'unité africaine. Cette charte, en particulier, exhorte tous les membres de l'Organisation à travailler pour la liquidation du colonialisme et de l'impérialisme sur le continent africain. Je tiens à faire savoir qu'en ce qui concerne mon gouvernement, son opposition au colonialisme est absolue. Nous sommes opposés au colonialisme d'où qu'il vienne. Pour nous, la liberté et l'indépendance sont des choses si sacrées que nous ne nous tournons pas dans une seule direction pour rechercher les méfaits du colonialisme, mais dans toutes les directions où nous les voyons se manifester.

129. Nous soutenons les peuples d'Afrique qui sont encore dans les chaînes du régime colonial et qui luttent pour leur indépendance. Notre situation géographique nous place sur la ligne de démarcation entre l'Afrique indépendante et l'Afrique encore soumise à la domination coloniale ou à des gouvernements de minorité. Comme on peut le voir, ce n'est pas la situation la plus favorable pour un pays dont l'effort principal vise à édifier une structure nationale qui permette d'élever le niveau de vie de sa population. En dépit de toutes ces conditions défavorables, le Malawi continue à réaliser des progrès dans l'exécution de ses programmes économiques et sociaux.

130. L'intérêt que nous portons à notre propre prospérité ne diminue cependant pas les soucis que nous éprouvons pour ceux de nos frères et de nos sœurs qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance et qui luttent pour l'obtenir. Ils peuvent compter sur toute notre sympathie et sur notre appui moral le plus sincère.

131. Les enquêtes menées par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre ont mis en lumière, en ce qui concerne la situation existant dans les pays coloniaux, certains aspects qui avaient échappé à mon gouvernement. Nous espérons que les groupes d'enquête continueront à fournir à l'Organisation les renseignements qui lui sont nécessaires et sans lesquels aucune décision équitable ou constructive ne peut être prise. A ce propos, ma délégation tient à attirer l'attention de l'Organisation sur le fait qu'elle doit s'efforcer, en vue de trouver un règlement juste et équitable des questions coloniales, d'entendre et de noter les points de vue de pétitionnaires représentant une gamme d'opinions aussi étendue que possible. C'est la conciliation de toutes ces opinions qui mettra les pays coloniaux sur la voie de la stabilité lors de leur accession à l'indépendance.

132. Je dois souligner que c'est de la stabilité politique que dépendront dans une large mesure les progrès futurs des nations nouvelles. Nous savons tous qu'une des raisons principales d'instabilité dans les jeunes nations est que les pays colonisateurs ont négligé de donner aux peuples autochtones les connaissances nécessaires pour gérer leurs propres affaires.

133. Nous espérons que les territoires qui sont encore sous administration coloniale sont préparés avec la plus grande bonne volonté à accéder à l'autonomie, qui doit leur être accordée, de l'avis de mon pays, dès que la situation politique le permettra. A cette fin, il est nécessaire de procéder à des modifications constitutionnelles dans les territoires placés sous administration étrangère, de façon à permettre à la population autochtone de participer au gouvernement du pays et à faciliter ainsi le transfert du pouvoir et de l'autorité sans à-coups et dans des délais aussi courts que possible. Nous trouvons à cet égard un encouragement dans les progrès d'ordre constitutionnel réalisés dans des territoires qui ont été admis récemment dans l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

134. Nous nous inquiétons également du déséquilibre qui existe entre les recettes provenant des exportations et les dépenses occasionnées par les importations. Si elle n'est pas comblée par des mesures rigoureuses, la vaste marge défavorable entre les exportations et les importations constituera un lourd handicap pour la balance des paiements des territoires lorsqu'ils entreront dans la famille des nations souveraines.

135. Si vous le permettez, je voudrais lire maintenant deux courts paragraphes du rapport: "La situation des réfugiés au Malawi était désespérée. Depuis plus d'un an, c'est-à-dire depuis l'arrivée du premier groupe de réfugiés, le problème ne faisait que s'aggraver. Le FRELIMO (Frente de Libertação de Moçambique) avait fait tout ce qu'il pouvait pour faire connaître au Gouvernement du Malawi la triste situation des réfugiés, et si ce gouvernement faisait ce qu'il pouvait, aucun plan n'avait été nettement établi pour améliorer la situation. La plupart des réfugiés s'étaient établis dans les îles du lac de Malawi, dont les eaux étaient officiellement considérées comme appartenant au Mozambique, bien que les îles elles-mêmes fassent partie du territoire du Malawi. On comptait aujourd'hui plus de 8 000 réfugiés dont la plupart vivaient encore sur les deux îles et quelques-uns dans la région frontalière du sud du Malawi. En ce qui concernait une aide possible du Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés, le Comité spécial lui-même devait demander au Haut Commissaire quels contacts avaient été pris par le Gouvernement du Malawi, quels étaient les rapports qui s'étaient établis entre eux, si tant était qu'il y en eût, et quelles raisons avaient empêché les réfugiés vivant au Malawi de recevoir la même assistance que ceux qui se trouvaient par exemple en Tanzanie. Les organisations religieuses et humanitaires ne bénéficiaient pas au Malawi des mêmes facilités pour aider les réfugiés que dans les autres pays. Les pétitionnaires ont fait appel au Comité spécial pour qu'il veille à ce qu'on donne les moyens nécessaires à ces organismes." [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. V, par. 397-398.]

136. Le premier paragraphe traite de la situation des réfugiés provenant du Mozambique et se trouvant dans mon pays. Les deux îles mentionnées dans ce paragraphe, celles de Likoma et de Chisumulu, appartiennent effectivement au Malawi et elles ont reçu au cours des derniers mois un flot assez important de réfugiés provenant du Mozambique. Quelques-uns de ceux-ci sont entrés chez nous en traversant la frontière qui nous sépare au sud-est de ce dernier pays. Je voudrais cependant signaler une inexactitude dans ce rapport. Je le fais pour que les représentants ici présents puissent se faire une idée exacte de la situation effroyable qui a obligé des familles entières, avec femmes et enfants, à fuir leurs foyers du Mozambique.

137. Dans la seule île de Likoma, nous avons environ 2 000 réfugiés, hommes, femmes et enfants, qui ont tous traversé notre frontière de l'est avec le Mozambique. Le chiffre de 8 000 qui figure dans le rapport est donc exagéré. D'ailleurs, l'île a des dimensions telles qu'elle ne pourrait pas accueillir les 8 000 personnes qui selon le rapport s'y trouveraient. La population de Likoma elle-même ne dépasse pas 5 000 habitants au plus.

138. Comme toujours en pareil cas, ces personnes sont arrivées dépourvues de nourriture, d'abris et de tout ce qui est indispensable pour vivre. Indépendamment du camp construit sur l'île par mon gouvernement pour héberger les réfugiés, la population de Likoma a ouvert ses portes toutes grandes à ses amis moins fortunés et les a traités comme ses propres frères, qu'ils sont en effet.

139. Mon gouvernement a envoyé dans l'île de Likoma des équipes de personnel médical avec du matériel, des denrées alimentaires, des vêtements et d'autres fournitures, qui ont coûté au total plus de 11 000 livres sterling en moins de 11 mois, pour aider à réinstaller et à reconverter les malheureuses victimes de la crise politique au Mozambique. Vous voyez que cela représente une somme d'argent importante prélevée sur nos maigres ressources.

140. En outre, mon gouvernement a pris des mesures pour recevoir certains des enfants de ces réfugiés dans les écoles locales existantes, dirigées tant par des missionnaires de l'île que par le Gouvernement du Malawi.

141. Quant aux autres réfugiés qui ont traversé la frontière sud-est du Malawi, leur nombre est plus difficile à évaluer parce que la ligne conventionnelle tracée par les puissances coloniales entre le Malawi et le Mozambique ne tient pas compte du fait que des deux côtés de la ligne les familles sont apparentées et parlent les mêmes langues. Celles qui se trouvaient dans une situation difficile en Mozambique ont simplement franchi la frontière conventionnelle et ont trouvé refuge auprès des familles alliées du Malawi.

142. Le Président de mon pays, M. Hastings Kamuzu Banda, s'adressant au Parlement national du Malawi le 18 mai 1966, a déclaré très nettement que les Africains du Mozambique qui étaient venus volontairement au Malawi et qui désiraient s'y installer n'auraient pas à passer par le processus ridicule de la naturalisation, mais qu'ils pourraient, en se faisant simplement inscrire, obtenir la citoyenneté pleine et entière avec tous les droits et toutes les responsabilités qu'elle comporte. Ils ne seraient pas non plus incités à rester au Malawi s'ils changeaient d'avis par la suite. Pour être précis, le Président a dit notamment ce jour-là :

"Dorénavant, tous les Africains du Mozambique... ont le droit, s'ils vivent dans notre pays ou s'ils font partie d'une famille séparée par la frontière, de devenir citoyens du Malawi par une simple inscription, sans naturalisation."

143. Pour notre part, nous estimons qu'il est de notre devoir de faire tout ce que nous pouvons pour les réfugiés du Mozambique et jusqu'à présent nous ne le cédons à personne au point de vue de l'aide apportée. Nous continuerons à agir par nous-mêmes tant que nous nous en estimerons capables, ce qui a été le cas jusqu'à présent. Si la tâche prend une ampleur telle qu'elle dépasse nos possibilités, nous envisagerons, bien entendu, de demander de l'aide.

144. Je tiens à dire, en terminant, que ma délégation approuve et appuie la plus grande partie du rapport. Je veux cependant souligner et faire consigner au procès-verbal que le chiffre qui figure dans le rapport et qui concerne les réfugiés du Mozambique qui se trouvent dans l'île de Likoma, appartenant au Malawi, est inexact. J'ai voulu aussi informer l'Assemblée des mesures importantes que mon gouvernement a prises pour améliorer le sort des réfugiés du Mozambique. A ce sujet, je déplore que les paragraphes du rapport dont j'ai déjà parlé nous attribuent une attitude négative. Mon gouvernement s'attendait à être félicité pour les efforts qu'il a faits en vue d'héberger les réfugiés malgré la faiblesse de ses ressources.

145. Quant au projet de résolution qui nous est soumis [A/L.506] ma délégation en appuie le principe général. Il contient quelques phrases au sujet desquelles ma délégation formule des réserves, indépendamment de la partie du rapport dont je viens de parler et qui n'a pas notre appui. Etant donné que le projet de résolution spécifie dans le paragraphe 3 de son dispositif que le rapport du Comité spécial est approuvé, ma délégation n'a pas d'autre choix que de s'abstenir lors du vote du projet, pour les raisons que j'ai indiquées.

146. M. KULAGA (Pologne) [traduit de l'anglais]: A beaucoup d'égards, l'année 1965 a sans doute marqué la transition entre une phase très importante de la lutte contre le colonialisme et ce que nous aimerions considérer comme la phase finale de cette période tragique de l'histoire qu'on appelle ainsi.

147. La phase que nous venons de traverser a commencé par une flambée sans précédent des luttes de libération nationale. Ses faits marquants ont été la Déclaration de 1960 sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et, depuis 1960, l'accès à l'indépendance de 39 Etats, tous anciens territoires coloniaux.

148. Si on jette un coup d'œil rétrospectif sur ces quelques années on ne peut pas manquer de constater les progrès accomplis. Ils sont évidents, en premier lieu, dans le nombre des personnes et des régions libérées du colonialisme. Ils sont évidents aussi dans le travail approfondi qui a été fait pour codifier, en quelque sorte, les principes de la décolonisation: réaffirmation de son caractère inconditionnel, reconnaissance de sa légitimité, formulation du droit des peuples coloniaux à rechercher et à recevoir un appui moral, politique et matériel dans leur lutte. Ces progrès sont tangibles dans les efforts faits pour rétrécir le champ de l'autorité arbitraire assumée par les puissances coloniales qui se servent des territoires sous leur dépendance à leurs propres fins égoïstes: politiquement, en combattant non seulement le colonialisme, mais aussi les méthodes néo-colonialistes; économiquement, en s'attaquant aux racines du colonialisme, aux intérêts des monopoles des puissances coloniales; et militairement, en condamnant l'utilisation de plus en plus large des territoires non autonomes pour la mise en œuvre des plans militaires et stratégiques d'agression des puissances coloniales.

149. Il faut reconnaître que le mérite de ces progrès revient au Comité spécial, qui s'est acquitté de son mandat avec un dévouement inlassable et un dynamisme soutenu. En ce qui nous concerne, nous félicitons chaleureusement le Comité du travail qu'il a accompli.

150. Cependant, dans le même temps, de nouveaux problèmes ont surgi et des problèmes anciens ont pris des proportions nouvelles. Une autre phase s'est ouverte, marquée par l'agressivité croissante des forces colonialistes, par l'emploi généralisé de méthodes néo-colonialistes et même par des tentatives de reconquête coloniale. Tout cela a inévitablement accru la tension. L'ordre du jour de la présente session de l'Assemblée ainsi que celui du Conseil de sécurité en constituent des preuves éloquentes.

151. Il semble donc que le bilan annuel de la situation en ce qui concerne la décolonisation, qu'il est de tradition d'établir en examinant le point de l'ordre du jour relatif à l'application de la Déclaration de 1960, doive être remplacé cette année par une réévaluation générale de la situation ainsi que des méthodes que nous devons employer à l'avenir pour y faire face.

152. La gravité de cette situation exige que nous procédions à une telle réévaluation. La révolte de plus en plus violente contre le colonialisme persistant confère à cette question une priorité absolue. Les principes que nous avons dégagés au cours de ces dernières années et l'expérience que nous avons acquise nous permettent de procéder à cette réévaluation.

153. Je n'essaierai pas de traiter de tous les problèmes qui se posent à nous dans le domaine de la décolonisation. De nombreux orateurs qui m'ont précédé ont fait des déclarations extrêmement intéressantes et ont soulevé des points que je ne reprendrai pas. Je me limiterai à rappeler seulement quelques faits.

154. Le premier fait, ou plutôt le premier défi à relever, est constitué par la situation qui existe dans le sud de l'Afrique: Afrique du Sud, Sud-Ouest africain, colonies portugaises et Rhodésie du Sud. Nous en sommes venus — et, de l'avis de ma délégation, à juste titre — à considérer la situation dans cette partie de l'Afrique comme une entité. Chaque événement qui renforce l'une des composantes de cette entité colonialiste et raciste les renforce toutes et renforce l'entité elle-même. Chaque événement qui affaiblit l'une des composantes affaiblit l'ensemble. Cependant, pour nous, le problème n'est pas d'affaiblir, mais d'éliminer complètement le système de domination raciale et d'exploitation qui constitue l'essence même de cette entité.

155. Il est maintenant évident que le régime colonialiste et raciste qui s'est solidement installé au pouvoir dans cette partie du monde est ferme et impitoyable. A beaucoup d'égards, son acharnement procède du désespoir, car aucun être humain doué d'intelligence ne saurait, en cette seconde moitié du XX^{ème} siècle, escompter qu'un système qui repose sur la négation absolue et agressive de toutes les valeurs que défend actuellement l'humanité progressiste puisse être imposé indéfiniment.

156. Le caractère implacable de ce régime ne résulte pas seulement d'une haine raciale aveugle. Il résulte aussi, semble-t-il, d'un froid calcul, d'une analyse de tous les éléments politiques, économiques et stratégiques qui déterminent l'attitude de beaucoup de pays à l'égard de l'Afrique méridionale. Dans bien des cas, il est fait appel au sentiment de "parenté", dénué de tout contenu politique ou social, comme l'a si bien rappelé dans son discours sur la question de la Rhodésie du Sud, le Ministre des affaires étrangères de la Zambie.

157. Ces calculs reposent pour une très large part sur la crainte, que prétendent éprouver certains pays, qu'il se produise un "vide du pouvoir" dans cette partie de l'Afrique. Cette crainte est dénuée de tout fondement, car elle résulte de la méconnaissance du fait, d'importance capitale, qu'il ne peut y avoir de vide là où se trouvent des peuples que nous reconnaissons comme souverains dans leur pays. Ces calculs sont fondés aussi sur une communauté d'intérêts dans la stratégie mondiale et africaine. "L'anticommunisme" et l'opposition aux mouvements de libération sont les bases jumelles de cette stratégie.

158. Parmi les nombreuses déclarations des dirigeants et de la presse d'Afrique du Sud, on peut rappeler cette profession de foi de Die Burger, un journal progouvernemental:

"Les intérêts vitaux de la Grande-Bretagne et de l'Afrique du Sud sont intimement liés à de trop nombreux égards pour qu'il soit possible de les dissocier sur l'ordre des persécuteurs de l'Afrique du Sud^{3/}..."

159. On peut trouver un son de cloche analogue dans une déclaration du Ministre des affaires étrangères du Portugal, M. Nogueira, qui, parlant de l'attitude des puissances occidentales envers les pays colonialistes a écrit ce qui suit:

"L'équilibre se rompra définitivement en leur défaveur et alors les grandes questions mondiales, qui n'ont rien à voir avec le colonialisme, seront résolues par l'arbitrage et sous la dictée de la zone grise^{4/}."

160. Si nous comparons ces déclarations avec les faits, n'est-ce pas l'assistance militaire et économique de plusieurs pays occidentaux membres de l'OTAN qui permet au Portugal de continuer sa guerre coloniale sur trois fronts? Il suffit de se rappeler la résolution que l'Assemblée générale vient d'adopter. N'est-ce pas la Grande-Bretagne qui a remis les forces armées de la Fédération de l'Afrique centrale au régime raciste de minorité de Salisbury, lui donnant ainsi les moyens militaires d'imposer sa doctrine et même de défier la politique officiellement proclamée du Royaume-Uni?

161. Cependant, le facteur fondamental de ces calculs est d'ordre économique, car les investissements occidentaux en Afrique du Sud, qui se montent à 4 500 millions de dollars augmentent sans cesse et donnent des bénéfices doubles de ceux des investissements dans d'autres pays [voir A/AC.115/L.56/Rev.2]; les mines du Sud-Ouest africain sont pour 95 p. 100 entre les mains de sociétés étrangères et de nouvelles concessions sont sans cesse accordées à des monopoles occidentaux, comme le signale le rapport du Comité spécial qui traite des activités des monopoles étrangers au Sud-Ouest africain et dans les colonies portugaises. Les intérêts étrangers font preuve d'une activité commerciale toujours croissante et nous en avons été convaincus par l'exemple des prétendues sanctions contre la Rhodésie du Sud, basées sur le principe des vases communicants.

162. Il en résulte que les conditions existantes sont considérées par certains comme très satisfaisantes, ainsi que l'a dit éloquemment, entre autres, M. Hermann J. Abs, un grand financier d'Allemagne occidentale, qui était à l'époque Directeur de la Deutsche Bank:

"L'Allemagne occidentale considère l'Afrique du Sud comme un des pays d'investissement les plus sûrs. Il n'est guère besoin d'encourager beaucoup les investisseurs pour les en persuader. Il faut, naturellement, tenir compte de la question politique... Je suis enclin à penser qu'il faut poursuivre les échanges normalement^{5/}."

163. Il est donc compréhensible que les dirigeants racistes de l'Afrique du Sud ne soient pas très inquiets de l'action de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. C'est M. Eric Louw qui, en 1963, disait:

"qu'il était évident que des pays comme le Royaume-Uni et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, qui font avec l'Afrique du Sud un commerce profitable, entretiennent avec elle des liaisons aériennes et maritimes et y ont effectué des investissements importants, n'étaient pas prêts à appuyer des propositions de sanctions. Il a ajouté que l'énorme quantité d'or produite par la République sud-africaine était un facteur dont ces pays tenaient compte^{6/}.

164. Le Comité spécial avait donc parfaitement raison de formuler la conclusion évidente que les activités des monopoles constituaient un obstacle majeur à l'obtention, par les peuples de la partie méridionale de l'Afrique, de leur droit inaliénable à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

165. Voici donc la situation devant laquelle nous nous trouvons: un bloc raciste, couvrant presque la moitié d'un continent, appuyé effectivement par un certain nombre de pays occidentaux et engendrant dans la région une tension grave et une menace pour la paix et pour la sécurité.

166. Ce défi doit être relevé et il doit l'être avec des moyens appropriés. Un premier pas a été fait par la révocation du mandat de l'Afrique du Sud sur le Sud-Ouest africain. Il doit être suivi maintenant de mesures s'attaquant au fond du problème. Les débats, les appels et les recommandations de l'Assemblée générale ont eu un effet politique et psychologique. Ils ont alerté l'opinion publique, circonscrit le problème et recommandé les moyens de le résoudre. Il appartient maintenant au Conseil de sécurité d'agir. Sans même se poser la question de savoir si la situation actuelle dans le sud de l'Afrique constitue une menace pour la paix et pour la sécurité mondiales (et pour notre part nous estimons qu'une telle menace existe) il est maintenant parfaitement évident qu'en ce qui concerne l'Organisation des Nations Unies, c'est de l'attitude des puissances occidentales que dépend tout progrès vers une solution du problème: en Rhodésie, c'est du consentement de la Grande-Bretagne à employer la force contre le régime Smith; dans les colonies portugaises, c'est de l'aide apportée par certains pays occidentaux à cette mini-puissance coloniale; en Afrique du Sud, c'est des intérêts économiques britanniques, américains et ouest-allemands; au Conseil de sécurité, c'est de la bonne volonté des puissances occidentales à prendre les mesures prévues au Chapitre VII de la Charte.

167. Un problème qui, jusqu'en 1965, n'a pas beaucoup retenu l'attention de cette Commission occupe maintenant un rang élevé dans l'ordre de priorité. C'est celui des petits territoires. Deux considérations principales militent en faveur d'un surcroît d'intérêt pour ces territoires. Tout d'abord, quelles que soient leur taille et leur situation économique ou géographique, leurs habitants ont le droit de se prononcer, en toute liberté et en toute connaissance de leurs droits, sur leur statut futur. En second lieu, ces territoires ne peuvent être considérés comme de simples pions sur l'échiquier politique et stratégique des puissances administrantes, comme des pièces de terre qui peuvent être découpées, démembrées et regroupées d'après les nécessités stratégiques de ces puissances et dont les habitants peuvent être déplacés comme s'ils n'étaient pas des êtres humains. Les responsabilités de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ne sont pas et ne peuvent pas être plus limitées du fait qu'un territoire dépendant donné est de faible dimension. En fait, selon la résolution 2105 (XX), l'Organisation doit accorder une attention particulière aux petits territoires et, en vérité, il est nécessaire qu'il en soit ainsi.

168. Tous les renseignements dont nous disposons nous montrent que les puissances administrantes ont une tendance très nette à utiliser les petits territoires en tant que maillons d'une chaîne d'installations et de bases militaires. De l'île de l'Ascension à celle de Guam, en passant par le nouveau territoire colonial de l'océan Indien et par les frontières nord du bloc raciste de l'Afrique méridionale, un cercle de bases est en cours d'établissement.

169. Ce faisant, les puissances administrantes violent un certain nombre de principes et de résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies: le Chapitre XI de la Charte, les résolutions 1514 (XV), 2023 (XX), 2066 (XX) et enfin la résolution 2105 (XX) qui condamne l'installation de bases dans les territoires dépendants et demande aux puissances administrantes de les démanteler et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles.

170. Les puissances administrantes créent ainsi de nouvelles zones de tension, car ces bases ne sont pas seulement des relais pour des opérations d'agression — comme cela a été prouvé et l'est chaque jour dans les cas de Guam, de l'île de l'Ascension et d'Aden — mais aussi des bases de départ pour des agressions contre des petits pays luttant pour consolider leur indépendance. En effet, à quoi peuvent servir des bases comme celles qui sont situées dans les îles Seychelles et Maurice?

171. Que savons-nous de plus au sujet des petits territoires? Sans doute les prospectus touristiques nous en apprennent-ils davantage que les renseignements reçus au titre de l'Article 73, e, de la Charte. Que fait-on pour développer le potentiel économique de ces territoires? Que fait-on de leurs ressources naturelles qui, conformément à la résolution 1514 (XV), doivent être à la libre disposition des habitants pour leurs propres besoins?

172. Il faut poser toutes ces questions et il faut aussi y répondre. Les moyens d'obtenir ces réponses, dans le cadre de l'intérêt particulier que nous devons porter à ces territoires sont définis dans la résolution 2105 (XX). Ce sont des groupes d'enquêtes du Comité spécial, chargés d'étudier la situation sur place. Il est temps de mettre cette clause à exécution. En même temps, il faut réaliser les meilleures conditions possibles pour le libre développement de ces territoires et pour permettre à leurs habitants de décider librement de leur avenir, sans qu'aucun engagement d'aucune sorte limitant d'une façon quelconque cette liberté de choix soit pris en leur nom.

173. Nous avons récemment terminé notre débat sur Aden. Notre préoccupation essentielle au cours de ce débat a été de déjouer les tentatives de la Puissance administrante qui visaient à imposer une solution néo-colonialiste du problème, à transférer le pouvoir à un régime servile et à sauvegarder ses propres intérêts sans avoir à assumer la responsabilité de plus en plus lourde et de plus en plus onéreuse de l'administration directe et de l'oppression. Nous nous sommes efforcés de faire adopter une solution conforme aux vœux des populations ainsi qu'aux intérêts de la paix et de la sécurité dans la région.

^{6/} Ibid., dix-neuvième session, Annexes, annexe 12, document A/5825, par. 560.

174. Nous avons vu la stratégie coloniale à l'œuvre sous trois formes: la concentration dans des régions considérées comme importantes du point de vue économique; c'est le cas de l'Afrique méridionale; le choix des territoires ayant une importance du point de vue stratégique; c'est le cas, en particulier, pour les petits territoires; la projection de la suzeraineté dans l'avenir, dans la mesure où des intérêts politiques sont en jeu; c'est le cas du néo-colonialisme, dont l'exemple le plus récent nous a été donné par la question d'Aden.

175. Tous ces cas ont un dénominateur commun, à savoir l'oppression des peuples colonisés, dont on contrarie les aspirations, ce qui conduit à l'agression ouverte et à la répression armée, toutes choses qu'on en vient maintenant à considérer et à dénoncer à juste titre comme des crimes contre l'humanité.

176. C'est pourquoi nous avons pensé qu'il était très nécessaire de procéder à une réévaluation de nos activités en matière de décolonisation, d'adapter ces activités à la situation actuelle et d'utiliser tous les moyens à notre disposition pour poursuivre l'objectif que la majorité de cette Assemblée n'a cessé de chercher à atteindre: l'élimination définitive du colonialisme.

177. Voilà pourquoi ma délégation, dans les discussions qui ont porté au cours de cette session sur les questions coloniales, a cherché à apporter sa modeste contribution à cette tâche de réévaluation.

178. C'est dans cet esprit que nous prendrons position sur le projet de résolution qui nous est soumis.

179. M. BOZOVIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et l'examen du problème du colonialisme au cours de la présente session montrent que le processus de la décolonisation se poursuit dans des conditions extrêmement difficiles, en particulier en Afrique centrale et méridionale. Dans le combat qu'elles mènent pour la mise en application des principes et des prescriptions de la Charte des Nations Unies concernant le droit de tous les peuples à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, les populations vivant dans des régions qui sont encore sous administration coloniale se heurtent, de même que l'Organisation des Nations Unies, à la résistance concertée de forces puissantes qui se sont fixé pour but de retarder le processus d'émancipation politique et économique des peuples et des Etats et de restreindre leur liberté de choix quant au genre de vie et au mode de développement qui conviennent le mieux à leurs intérêts et qui répondent à leurs aspirations. Ces forces, employant leur supériorité matérielle comme moyen de chantage, de pression et d'intervention, recourant même à l'usage des armes, sont directement engagées, par le truchement d'une assistance politique, économique et militaire, dans les opérations armées et dans les activités de répression que le Gouvernement du Portugal et les racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud et de l'Afrique du Sud mènent dans les territoires placés sous leur domination.

180. Les faits cités dans le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre prouvent sans aucun doute que ce sont les mêmes forces qui appuient Salazar, Smith et Vorster, que les armes utilisées contre les populations dans cette partie de l'Afrique sont de la même origine et proviennent des mêmes sources et que les guerres coloniales et les mesures de répression contre les populations africaines entrent dans le cadre d'un plan plus vaste établi par les forces coloniales et néo-coloniales visant à sauvegarder des intérêts politiques et économiques étrangers, à conserver les points d'appui qui sont utilisés pour menacer l'indépendance chèrement acquise des Etats africains et à maintenir les positions privilégiées et l'influence de certaines puissances.

181. A ce point de vue, il existe un lien incontestable entre, d'une part, ce qui se passe au Viet-Nam et dans d'autres parties du monde où la politique suivie s'appuie sur la force, et, d'autre part, l'action des colonisateurs portugais et des racistes blancs en Afrique. Encouragés par l'attitude de quelques autres défenseurs d'un système de relations sociales qui implique l'exploitation des ressources humaines et matérielles des autres peuples, les colonisateurs portugais et les racistes de l'Afrique méridionale sont parvenus à la conclusion qu'ils peuvent, eux aussi, s'engager dans des guerres impérialistes, menées sur une échelle plus réduite mais qui ne sont pas moins dangereuses, pour priver des peuples de leurs droits inaliénables. Comptant sur la force de leurs alliés, ils sont convaincus qu'ils peuvent atteindre leurs buts. Aussi traitent-ils de naïfs ceux qui prétendent qu'aucune force au monde ne peut empêcher un peuple de se libérer s'il est décidé à ne plus accepter la condition d'esclave qui lui est imposée par les intérêts politiques et économiques étrangers.

182. L'histoire de la lutte menée dans le passé par de nombreux peuples, dont le mien, prouve combien ont été et sont encore naïfs ceux qui ne croient pas à la force d'un peuple bien décidé à se libérer. Des succès temporaires et apparents remportés dans la lutte contre des peuples qui combattent pour leur liberté ne doivent par conséquent tromper personne. Il ne faut pas non plus en tirer une conclusion erronée qui, dans un monde où les armes de destruction pullulent, pourrait conduire à des erreurs catastrophiques, aux conséquences imprévisibles.

183. Les forces qui appuient les puissances coloniales et les racistes d'Afrique ne se bornent pas à prendre une part active à la lutte contre les peuples coloniaux. Conscientes du fait que l'émancipation complète, politique et économique, des Etats africains et leur unité d'action rendraient impossible le maintien de la domination étrangère sur le sol africain, des puissances étrangères s'efforcent, en ayant recours à des pressions de toute sorte, économiques et autres, d'influencer l'orientation de la politique intérieure et extérieure des Etats africains récemment libérés. Des obstacles sans nombre sont dressés sur la voie que s'efforcent de suivre ces pays pour se développer à un rythme rapide, pour créer les bases matérielles qui leur permettraient de préserver et de renforcer leur indépendance politique, et pour devenir aptes à apporter dès que possible leur pleine contribution à la lutte pour la paix et l'égalité des peuples. Les pays récemment libérés, qui viennent seulement de se débarrasser des liens coloniaux classiques et qui constituent aujourd'hui la majorité dans la communauté mondiale, sont en butte, surtout en Afrique, à des tentatives répétées visant à les soumettre aux intérêts et à la politique de puissances étrangères. Les résultats immédiats de ces activités des puissances coloniales et néo-coloniales sur le sol africain, facilitées par l'existence de bastions coloniaux dans cette partie du monde, sont les crises que connaissent aujourd'hui les pays qui viennent d'accéder à l'indépendance: crises tant dans leur relations mutuelles que dans leurs relations avec les pays situés hors du continent africain. Il en découle une situation telle que la sécurité de ces Etats et la paix en Afrique sont constamment menacées. C'est ainsi que des pays qui, en vertu de la logique même de leur développement et des aspirations de leur peuple, ont le désir de constituer un facteur de paix, de développement progressif et de coopération internationale fondée sur l'égalité, sont transformés en zones de conflits d'intérêts étrangers, de pression économique et politique et d'emploi de la force.

184. Ces activités, qui sont nettement opposées au sens de l'histoire et qui sont dangereuses tant par les troubles qu'elles occasionnent que par l'influence néfaste qu'elles ont sur les relations internationales et sur la paix mondiale, appellent de la part de l'Organisation internationale une action politique de grande envergure. De l'avis de ma délégation, l'Assemblée générale ne saurait s'acquitter de ses obligations envers les peuples qui sont encore colonisés, ni servir les intérêts de la paix mondiale, si elle ne prenait pas pleinement conscience des réalités, si elle n'attirait pas, avec suffisamment de force, l'attention des peuples sur les causes véritables de la situation alarmante qui règne dans le domaine de la décolonisation ainsi que dans celui des relations internationales en général et si elle ne recommandait pas des mesures destinées à contribuer à l'élimination des dangers qui planent à l'heure actuelle sur l'humanité. Il nous semble qu'il est nécessaire d'envisager la possibilité d'adopter un document qui, prenant comme préambule l'évolution défavorable des relations internationales et reconnaissant que la suppression des rapports de caractère colonial entre les peuples constitue une condition essentielle de l'instauration de la coopération et de la paix dans le monde, recommanderait des mesures concrètes pour la libération des territoires encore placés sous domination coloniale et appuierait les efforts déployés par les pays nouvellement libérés en vue de renforcer leur indépendance et de préserver leur souveraineté.

185. Le rapport du Comité spécial nous présente des faits irréfutables qui montrent l'influence néfaste qu'exercent les intérêts économiques étrangers dans les territoires dominés par le Portugal, ainsi qu'en Rhodésie du Sud et en Afrique du Sud.

186. Le rapport souligne une fois de plus que les forces armées du Portugal utilisent dans leurs colonies des armes qu'elles ont obtenues au titre de l'OTAN ou en vertu d'accords bilatéraux conclus avec certains de leurs alliés. Il souligne également que les bases militaires étrangères dans les colonies constituent un des plus gros obstacles à la libération des peuples coloniaux, ainsi qu'un instrument de pression et d'intervention dans les affaires des Etats voisins. En outre, ces bases sont utilisées pour des actions agressives contre d'autres Etats. Consolent du fait que de telles activités de la part de puissances étrangères et d'intérêts économiques étrangers constituent l'obstacle principal (on peut même dire aujourd'hui "le seul obstacle") que rencontrent dans leur lutte pour la liberté les peuples encore placés sous la domination coloniale, le Comité spécial recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'inviter tous les Etats intéressés à mettre un frein aux activités des sociétés ayant leur siège sur leur territoire et à cesser de commettre des actes qui constituent à la fois des violations des obligations contractées aux termes de la Charte et une participation directe à la lutte menée par le Portugal et les racistes dans la partie méridionale de l'Afrique contre la population des territoires placés sous leur domination.

187. A propos de ce qui précède, je tiens à dire un mot des tentatives que font certains pour masquer la nature et le caractère véritables des activités exercées par quelques pays et par certains intérêts économiques en Afrique centrale et méridionale, en utilisant des arguments qui ne tiennent pas compte du statut particulier conféré aux populations coloniales par la Charte des Nations Unies. Nous entendons souvent parler de l'utilité des investissements étrangers et, à ce sujet, on cite en exemple certains Etats indépendants. A notre avis, il suffit de dire que les intérêts économiques étrangers opèrent dans les pays indépendants à la suite de négociations au cours desquelles ces pays ont eu la possibilité de décider des conditions de l'entrée des capitaux et des activités des sociétés étrangères. Cependant, les peuples coloniaux n'ont pas les moyens d'influer sur la prise des décisions, et en conséquence, ils sont dans une certaine mesure l'objet d'un marchandage entre les puissances coloniales et les intérêts étrangers. C'est pourquoi la thèse selon laquelle, dans ces conditions et en particulier dans les conditions particulières des guerres coloniales menées dans les territoires sous domination portugaise et des mesures de répression en vigueur en Rhodésie du Sud et en Afrique du Sud, les activités des intérêts économiques étrangers contribuent effectivement à élever le niveau de vie de ces peuples ne saurait résister à un examen honnête. Ce qui est plus important, que l'on oublie souvent, et non sans intention, c'est qu'au moyen des investissements étrangers dans ces territoires, particulièrement à l'heure actuelle, les populations sont soumises encore davantage à l'oppression et aux spoliations. Les miettes des tables des riches, qui s'enrichissent par l'exploitation de la main-d'œuvre à bon marché et des richesses matérielles de ces pays, ne sauraient compenser toutes les souffrances et toutes les privations auxquelles ces peuples sont quotidiennement soumis. Ce n'est que dans une atmosphère de liberté complète et véritable que ces peuples peuvent bénéficier d'une activité économique étrangère, avantageuse pour tous les participants.

188. En ce qui concerne les bases militaires, il est juridiquement indéfendable et politiquement erroné de les comparer à des bases étrangères situées sur le territoire d'Etats indépendants qui les ont acceptées et qui ont le droit d'en demander le retrait quand ils le jugent bon. Dans le cas des territoires coloniaux, dont les populations sont privées de toute possibilité de décision en la matière, l'Organisation des Nations Unies, protectrice des peuples colonisés, a le droit et le devoir, pour faire appliquer les dispositions de la Charte et pour sauvegarder la paix, d'exiger que ces bases soient démantelées.

189. L'analyse objective de la situation actuelle montre qu'il existe une contradiction flagrante entre les paroles et les actes de certains Etats en ce qui concerne le processus de la décolonisation en Afrique centrale et méridionale. Il est grand temps de cesser de tromper le monde par des condamnations verbales de la politique pratiquée par les colonialistes portugais et les racistes blancs en Afrique, par des déclarations désapprouvant cette politique, par des expressions de sympathie à l'égard des victimes des mesures de répression et des opérations armées punitives, qui ne sont rendues possibles que grâce à l'aide massive, sous forme d'armes et sous d'autres formes, qui est accordée à Salazar, à Smith et à Vorster. L'appui verbal, si fort soit-il, que donnent certains pays à la lutte des peuples coloniaux pour leur libération ne peut pas racheter la faute qu'ils commettent en contribuant à la prolongation des souffrances de ces peuples. A l'heure actuelle, la politique d'un pays est jugée davantage par ses actes que par ses paroles.

190. Bien entendu, nous ne sommes pas idéalistes au point d'escompter que les pays qui sont favorables au maintien de la domination étrangère et du colonialisme aideront les peuples coloniaux dans leur lutte pour leur libération. Cependant, dans l'intérêt de la paix et de la sécurité de tous, nous avons le droit d'exiger que ces pays cessent d'apporter aux colonialistes et aux racistes une aide qui permet à ceux-ci d'entreprendre, en s'abritant derrière le bouclier de leurs puissants alliés, des opérations militaires et des expéditions punitives causant aux peuples qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance des dommages matériels considérables et d'énormes pertes en vies humaines.

191. La stabilité de la paix en Afrique et dans le monde entier dépend aujourd'hui, pour une large part, de la liquidation immédiate des bastions colonialistes et racistes sur ce continent et sur les autres. En conséquence, notre devoir commun est de nous attaquer de façon décisive aux causes véritables de l'inquiétude qui règne dans cette partie du monde et de faire connaître nos exigences en premier lieu à ceux de l'action desquels dépend, en dernière analyse, la solution pacifique des problèmes. Si nous laissons ces derniers sans solution immédiate, il peut s'ensuivre pour une population innocente des effusions de sang dont les conséquences seraient de la plus extrême gravité, étant donné le caractère racial du conflit dans cette partie de l'Afrique.

192. C'est guidée par ces considérations, que la délégation de la Yougoslavie, animée du désir d'éliminer dès que possible les foyers de conflit, a appuyé le projet de résolution que l'Assemblée examine en ce moment.

193. Je me suis attaché aux problèmes qui sont généralement considérés aujourd'hui comme les plus aigus et les plus dangereux et qui, par conséquent, requièrent une étude immédiate de la part de l'Assemblée générale. Il y a aussi le problème de ce qu'on appelle les petits territoires, lequel exige en raison de circonstances particulières, l'adoption en temps opportun de mesures en vue de trouver les solutions les plus appropriées.

194. A cet égard, je me permets de suggérer au Comité des Vingt-Quatre d'envisager la possibilité de réunir, sous les auspices de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, une conférence des représentants de ces petits territoires. Une telle conférence permettrait à ces représentants d'exposer leurs problèmes, d'exprimer leurs désirs et de proposer des solutions pertinentes. Sur cette base, l'Organisation des Nations Unies pourrait élaborer un vaste programme d'action en vue de contribuer à résoudre les problèmes posés par l'existence de ce qu'on appelle les petits territoires, dont la population a droit également à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

195. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'espagnol): Je donne la parole au représentant des Etats-Unis d'Amérique afin qu'il puisse exercer son droit de réponse.

196. Mme ANDERSON (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je désire exercer mon droit de réponse à propos des déclarations qui ont été faites aujourd'hui au sujet de Porto Rico.

197. Le Commonwealth de Porto Rico constitue une entité absolument autonome ainsi que l'a confirmé l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies. Il a été créé après l'approbation par un vote, à une majorité écrasante, de la population de Porto Rico, en 1952. Il a été reconnu en tant que gouvernement autonome par la résolution 748 (VIII) adoptée le 27 novembre 1953 par l'Assemblée générale, qui a dit que le peuple de Porto Rico avait "effectivement exercé son droit de disposer de lui-même" et que ce territoire n'était plus dépendant.

198. Depuis que Porto Rico est devenu un Commonwealth autonome, la population, au cours d'élections régulières, a eu amplement l'occasion de manifester son point de vue à ce sujet. Lors des dernières élections, qui ont eu lieu en novembre 1964, environ 60 p. 100 de la population ont voté en faveur du parti qui se prononce pour le maintien du statut de Commonwealth et 35 p. 100 ont voté pour celui qui demande que Porto Rico devienne un Etat des Etats-Unis. Moins de 3 p. 100 ont voté pour le parti de l'indépendance.

199. Il est tout à fait déplacé de parler à l'heure actuelle de Porto Rico comme d'un territoire non autonome, en raison du fait que les Portoricains ont eu, à de nombreuses occasions, toute liberté pour décider de leur statut politique. Des votes tels que ceux qui ont été exprimés lors des élections de 1964 prouvent sans erreur possible que Porto Rico ne trouve aucun intérêt à devenir indépendant des Etats-Unis. Cette solution a été offerte clairement à maintes reprises à la population de l'île, qui l'a toujours repoussée d'une façon retentissante. Soulever la question aujourd'hui dans cette enceinte, c'est mettre en doute la validité d'une décision que l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies a dûment prise, et créer un précédent qui, de l'avis de ma délégation, pourrait avoir des répercussions extrêmement dangereuses. Les Etats-Unis s'opposent de la façon la plus formelle à une telle manœuvre.

La séance est levée à 18 heures.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

1. M. DACHTSEREN (République populaire mongole) [traduit du russe]: L'Assemblée générale examine l'un des problèmes les plus importants de notre époque, celui de l'élimination totale et définitive du honteux système du colonialisme, ainsi que le bilan des activités de l'ONU pendant la période écoulée en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

2. Nous notons avec satisfaction que, depuis l'adoption de ce document historique, plus de 20 pays d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine se sont libérés, après des siècles de domination coloniale, et se sont joints à la famille des nations souveraines. Nous avons été heureux de souhaiter la bienvenue, au cours de cette session, à quatre nouveaux Etats d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine.

3. Bien que six ans se soient déjà écoulés depuis l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, déclaration dont le but était d'éliminer le colonialisme, définitivement et totalement, sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, plus de 30 millions d'êtres humains souffrent encore sous le joug colonial et raciste dans les diverses parties du monde.

4. Les peuples de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise et de l'Arabie du Sud poursuivent leur lutte courageuse pour la liberté et l'indépendance nationales, contre les envahisseurs étrangers que sont les colonialistes portugais et britanniques. Il ne fait pas de doute que la lutte des peuples de ces territoires se terminera par une victoire totale sur les colonialistes, et que ces peuples viendront occuper la place qui leur revient de droit dans notre Organisation en tant que nations souveraines et à part entière.

5. L'Organisation des Nations Unies est appelée à jouer un rôle important dans l'émancipation des peuples coloniaux qui tournent leurs regards vers elle, placent en elle de grands espoirs et attendent de sa part un soutien efficace. Les représentants des mouvements de libération nationale des territoires coloniaux, qui ont été entendus par les Nations Unies à titre de pétitionnaires, ont fait appel à notre Organisation pour qu'elle leur accorde un appui total en vue de libérer rapidement leurs pays du joug des colonialistes étrangers. Il est du devoir sacré de l'ONU d'aider ces peuples, conformément aux buts et aux principes de la Charte.

6. La reconnaissance par l'Organisation des Nations Unies du droit imprescriptible des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance, de la légitimité de la lutte qu'ils mènent pour la réalisation de ces droits, ainsi que de la nécessité de leur accorder une aide matérielle et morale, est un résultat important dans le combat pour l'élimination définitive du système colonial de l'impérialisme.

7. La politique anticolonialiste de principe suivie par les jeunes Etats d'Afrique et d'Asie ainsi que par les pays socialistes Membres de l'ONU, tant à l'intérieur qu'à l'extérieur de l'Organisation, a permis d'adopter, sur les questions coloniales, une attitude ferme et sans défaillance et de prendre des mesures réalistes pour l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

8. Or, malheureusement, tous les Membres de l'ONU ne s'efforcent pas sincèrement de mettre en œuvre cette importante Déclaration. Tout d'abord, les puissances impérialistes et colonialistes de l'Occident refusent obstinément de renoncer à leur politique colonialiste et néo-colonialiste. C'est précisément par suite de l'opposition de ces puissances que le colonialisme et ses pires manifestations, le racisme et l'apartheid, ont pu se maintenir dans le sud de l'Afrique, transformant cette région en une source permanente de conflits internationaux qui constituent une menace grave à la paix et à la sécurité internationales.

9. Au cours de ces dernières années, on a pu constater non seulement une certaine stagnation dans le processus de décolonisation, mais aussi une aggravation marquée de la situation dans les territoires coloniaux, tout particulièrement en Afrique australe.

10. L'apparition du régime raciste de la minorité blanche en Rhodésie du Sud, l'intensification des mesures le répression prises par les colonialistes portugais et britanniques contre les populations des territoires coloniaux, la conclusion d'une alliance tripartite entre les régimes racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud, de la République sud-africaine et du Portugal fasciste, posent à l'ONU un problème grave et exigent l'adoption de nouvelles méthodes en vue du règlement des problèmes coloniaux.

11. On sait que la politique d'assentiment tacite suivie par le Royaume-Uni à l'égard de la Rhodésie du Sud a conduit à la renaissance, dans ce territoire, d'un régime raciste et que les prétendues sanctions économiques se sont révélées inefficaces pour résoudre ce problème.

12. Notre délégation condamne la politique du Gouvernement britannique, qui se refuse à aller au-delà des prétendues "sanctions sélectives" et continue, en fait, à agir de connivence avec les racistes.

13. L'apparition dans le sud de l'Afrique d'un bloc de racistes et de colonialistes zélés, patronnés par des alliés puissants, les Etats impérialistes occidentaux, ayant à leur tête les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, le Royaume-Uni et la République fédérale d'Allemagne, devrait être considérée dans son ensemble comme un plan à long terme des colonialistes et des impérialistes, visant à perpétuer les régimes colonialistes et racistes dans cette partie du continent africain pour faire de cette région un point d'appui en vue d'une offensive contre la liberté et l'indépendance des peuples africains.

14. Notre délégation souscrit entièrement à l'opinion exprimée ici, selon laquelle la politique des régimes racistes de Ian Smith, de la République sud-africaine et du Portugal doit être considérée comme un tout indivisible, et qu'une attention particulière doit être accordée à la situation dans le sud de l'Afrique, car c'est là que se trouvent concentrés tous les problèmes coloniaux fondamentaux qui, s'ils ne sont pas rapidement résolus, risquent de menacer directement la paix.

15. Le moment est venu de prendre des mesures efficaces contre le Portugal et la République sud-africaine qui, méconnaissant les résolutions successives du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale, s'obstinent à pratiquer une politique coloniale cruelle d'oppression des populations autochtones des territoires coloniaux — politique de ségrégation raciste et d'apartheid, constituant un crime contre l'humanité. L'Assemblée générale doit recommander au Conseil de sécurité de prendre contre le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et les Etats qui continuent à leur prêter assistance les mesures de coercition, prévues au Chapitre VII de la Charte des Nations Unies.

16. La situation critique en Afrique australe n'est pas le seul problème. Les puissances coloniales maintiennent dans l'esclavage colonial des dizaines de petits territoires et y font ce que bon leur semble.

17. Les puissances administrantes, au mépris des buts et des principes de la Charte et des dispositions de la Déclaration, appliquent dans certains territoires une politique de démembrement, de désagrégation de l'unité nationale, de violation de l'intégrité territoriale, qui mène à l'absorption graduelle de ces territoires. Le danger le plus grand réside dans la transformation des petits territoires en bases militaires. C'est ainsi que les Etats-Unis d'Amérique ont transformé en bases militaires les territoires placés sous leur tutelle. Des faits nombreux montrent que les bases militaires établies dans l'île de Guam et dans d'autres territoires sont utilisées par les impérialistes américains pour des attaques aériennes pirates contre la République démocratique du Vietnam.

18. Nous nous souvenons qu'autrefois les représentants des puissances coloniales soutenaient ici que les conditions n'étaient pas encore mûres pour l'octroi de l'indépendance à tel ou tel territoire colonial et que cette mesure demanderait encore des dizaines d'années. L'histoire a montré à quel point cet argument est indéfendable. Les pays qui, de l'avis des impérialistes, n'auraient pas été à même de mener une vie indépendante, non seulement édifient aujourd'hui avec succès leur vie nationale, mais participent aussi activement aux travaux des Nations Unies, fournissant un apport précieux à la réalisation des buts et des principes de l'Organisation.

19. C'est pourquoi notre délégation réaffirme la disposition de la résolution 1514 (XV), paragraphe 3, selon laquelle "le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance" et estime que, si tous les Etats Membres de l'ONU font preuve de bonne volonté, il est possible d'éliminer entièrement et définitivement le colonialisme dans les délais les plus brefs. Notre délégation appuie l'idée exprimée ici, à savoir que le processus de décolonisation doit être terminé le plus rapidement possible, car la survivance du colonialisme et du racisme est un crime contre l'humanité, incompatible avec les buts, les idéaux et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

20. Si le processus de décolonisation traîne en longueur, c'est parce qu'une poignée de puissances colonialistes et leurs alliés, les puissances impérialistes, se refusent obstinément à mettre en œuvre les dispositions de la Déclaration des Nations Unies et d'autres décisions importantes de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité. La politique de ces Etats, tendant à conserver à tout prix l'ordre colonial, est dictée par leurs intérêts économiques, financiers et stratégiques. Les monopoles des puissances impérialistes et, au premier chef, ceux des Etats-Unis, de la République fédérale d'Allemagne, du Royaume-Uni, de la Belgique et d'autres pays, amassent des bénéfices fabuleux en exploitant sans pitié les ressources humaines et matérielles des territoires coloniaux.

21. On comprend donc aisément pourquoi les puissances occidentales financent la guerre coloniale sanglante menée par les colonialistes portugais en Afrique, pourquoi elles leur fournissent des armes et aident par tous les moyens les régimes racistes de la Rhodésie du Sud et de la République sud-africaine. Ainsi, l'un des principaux obstacles à l'accession à l'indépendance des peuples coloniaux est l'activité des monopoles étrangers dans les territoires coloniaux. A cet égard, je voudrais souligner que le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre a accompli un travail très utile en étudiant les intérêts étrangers, économiques et financiers, en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain ainsi que dans les territoires sous domination portugaise, et en présentant sur ce sujet un rapport des plus pertinents.

22. Notre délégation souscrit pleinement aux recommandations du Comité spécial sur cette question et appuie la proposition tendant à inscrire à l'ordre du jour provisoire de la vingt-deuxième session le point intitulé: "Activités des intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, qui font obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain et dans les territoires sous domination portugaise, ainsi que dans tous les autres territoires se trouvant sous domination coloniale...".

23. Un autre obstacle important à l'application de la Déclaration est le maintien, dans les territoires coloniaux, de bases militaires des puissances impérialistes et colonialistes. Les bases militaires des puissances impérialistes servent à protéger les intérêts économiques et financiers de ces pays qui les utilisent souvent pour écraser les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux.

24. La délégation mongole estime que la lutte des peuples pour l'élimination des bases militaires et le retrait des troupes étrangères est indissolublement liée au combat général mené contre l'impérialisme, pour la libération des peuples coloniaux et pour la paix mondiale.

25. De l'avis de notre délégation, l'Assemblée générale doit exiger la liquidation immédiate de toutes les bases militaires établies dans les territoires coloniaux et la cessation, dans ces territoires, de la construction de nouvelles bases et d'autres installations militaires.

26. Au moment où les colonialistes et les néo-colonialistes font tout ce qui est en leur pouvoir pour conserver l'ordre colonial qui leur est profitable, il devient particulièrement important de créer les conditions nécessaires à l'octroi d'une indépendance réelle aux peuples coloniaux et à la protection de ces peuples contre l'expansion néo-colonialiste.

27. L'expansion économique, la division des territoires et des populations des possessions coloniales, l'établissement de bases militaires, l'installation de régimes non représentatifs, l'octroi d'une indépendance de pure forme, ce sont là les méthodes néo-colonialistes grâce auxquelles les impérialistes et les colonialistes s'efforcent de maintenir la domination qu'ils ont imposée dans le passé aux peuples coloniaux et à ceux qui ont conquis leur indépendance nationale. Comme l'écrivait un Africain: "Le colonialisme s'en va par la grande porte mais revient par la porte de service."

28. Non contents de réduire les peuples coloniaux à l'esclavage économique, les néo-colonialistes s'ingèrent ouvertement dans les affaires intérieures d'Etats souverains qui se sont déjà libérés de la domination coloniale, cherchant ainsi à maintenir leurs positions économiques et stratégiques dans ces pays. L'exemple le plus éclatant de cet état de choses est l'agression des Etats-Unis au Viet-Nam qui est la plus authentique des guerres coloniales.

29. Etant donné que la survivance du colonialisme et du racisme non seulement est incompatible avec les buts et les principes élevés de la Charte des Nations Unies, mais constitue aussi une menace grave à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, le Conseil de sécurité devrait consacrer une attention plus grande aux questions coloniales afin de prendre des mesures efficaces et appropriées contre les colonialistes et contre ceux qui leur prêtent aide et assistance en dépit des décisions répétées de notre Organisation.

30. Pour conclure, la délégation mongole tient à remercier le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre pour le travail fructueux qu'il a accompli au cours de la période écoulée et pour son rapport si utile, qui contient un grand nombre de renseignements ainsi qu'une analyse objective de la situation dans les territoires coloniaux. Notre délégation souscrit sans réserve aux recommandations du Comité spécial et à son programme de travail pour 1967.

31. Le peuple de la Mongolie et son gouvernement condamnent sévèrement le colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations, qu'ils considèrent comme le plus grand crime contre l'humanité et soutiennent fermement les peuples en lutte pour leur liberté et leur indépendance nationale. La République populaire mongole, fidèle à sa politique qui est, par principe, anti-impérialiste et anti-colonialiste, est prête à appuyer toute mesure efficace tendant à accélérer au maximum l'élimination du système honteux du colonialisme.

32. M. TCHERNOUCHTENKO (République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie) [traduit du russe]: La délégation de la République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie voudrait tout d'abord souligner que l'écroulement du système colonial de l'impérialisme et l'apparition dans l'arène mondiale de nouveaux Etats indépendants sont des caractéristiques de notre temps. De gigantesques empires coloniaux, dont leurs fondateurs comptaient bien qu'ils dureraient de longs siècles, ont disparu dans les flammes des mouvements de libération nationale.

33. La majorité écrasante des pays qui subissaient le joug colonial ont accédé à l'indépendance politique. Ils y sont parvenus grâce aux mesures décisives prises de concert par les forces progressistes des mouvements de libération nationale qu'appuyaient tous les peuples épris de paix et, au premier chef, les pays du groupe socialiste. Le jour est proche où les derniers foyers du colonialisme — déjà condamné irrévocablement par l'histoire — seront éteints à jamais.

M. Ortiz Sanz (Bolivie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

34. Il y aura cette année six ans que, sur l'initiative de l'Union soviétique, a été adoptée la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, devenue depuis lors un appui moral solide pour tous ceux qui luttent pour l'élimination de la domination coloniale, pour la liberté et l'indépendance des peuples.

35. La tempête purifiante du mouvement de libération nationale, à laquelle l'adoption de la Déclaration a donné un nouvel élan, a apporté à de nombreux peuples d'Afrique, d'Asie et d'Amérique latine l'indépendance et la liberté tant attendues.

36. Cependant, les forces du colonialisme poursuivent leurs combats d'arrière-garde. Des bastions du colonialisme subsistent dans diverses régions du monde. Les populations de l'Afrique du Sud, de la Rhodésie du Sud, de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise, du Sud-Ouest africain, d'Aden, de l'Oman et d'autres colonies doivent encore vivre et lutter dans des conditions d'esclavage colonial.

37. Les colonialistes résistent avec l'énergie du désespoir à la poussée croissante des mouvements de libération. Par tous les moyens possibles, le Royaume-Uni, le Portugal, l'Australie, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et d'autres puissances colonialistes essaient d'empêcher l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Considérant les colonies comme des sources de matières premières bon marché, des débouchés avantageux pour leurs produits, des zones d'investissements de capitaux, des points d'appui militaires et stratégiques, les puissances impérialistes continuent à piller les populations des colonies et à tirer de cette exploitation des bénéfices énormes. Les monopoles internationaux que soutiennent les gouvernements des pays occidentaux sont les principaux coupables de la continuation de l'esclavage colonial.

38. Les renseignements fournis par le Comité spécial des Vingt-Quatre au sujet des activités des monopoles dans le Sud-Ouest africain, dans les colonies portugaises et en Rhodésie du Sud montrent que les monopoles impérialistes qui opèrent dans le sud de l'Afrique s'enrichissent de manière fabuleuse en exploitant impitoyablement les populations autochtones de ces territoires. On pourrait en dire autant des monopoles à l'œuvre dans d'autres possessions coloniales. On voit donc aisément pourquoi les monopoles internationaux soutiennent les régimes réactionnaires racistes en Afrique australe ainsi que dans d'autres colonies. Les monopoles sont directement responsables de répression cruelle des mouvements de libération nationale. Ils exercent une influence décisive sur la politique des régimes racistes en Afrique du Sud et en Rhodésie du Sud, sur la politique des colonialistes portugais et celle des régimes réactionnaires fantoches en Arabie du Sud, dans l'Oman et dans d'autres colonies.

39. Outre leurs intérêts économiques, les puissances coloniales ont également dans les colonies d'importants intérêts politiques, militaires et stratégiques. Elles ont établi, dans les territoires coloniaux, de nombreuses bases militaires pour servir la politique anticomuniste et combattre les mouvements de libération nationale.

40. Dans sa résolution 2105 (XX), l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies a prié les puissances coloniales de démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles. Mais cette injonction reste méconnue. La base militaire britannique d'Aden et d'autres bases au Moyen-Orient continuent d'être utilisées par le Royaume-Uni pour écraser le mouvement de libération nationale en Arabie du Sud. A partir de ces bases, les colonialistes britanniques commettent divers actes de provocation et d'agression contre les Etats voisins indépendants, surtout contre la République arabe du Yémen.

41. La base militaire des Etats-Unis à Guam ainsi que leurs bases situées dans le Territoire sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique servent en quelque sorte de tremplin pour l'agression dirigée contre le mouvement de libération nationale en Asie du Sud-Est. Les éléments des forces aériennes des Etats-Unis stationnés à Guam bombardent systématiquement le territoire de la République démocratique du Viet-Nam, semant la mort et les destructions parmi la population du Viet-Nam.

42. Au mépris de la volonté des peuples, les puissances coloniales étendent le réseau de leurs bases militaires et stratégiques dans les colonies au lieu de les supprimer.

43. Comme il ressort des documents de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et des déclarations officielles du Gouvernement britannique, la création de ce qu'on appelle les territoires britanniques de l'océan Indien vise au premier chef à mettre en place un système de bases militaires qui seront utilisées conjointement par le Royaume-Uni et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique. D'après le Times de Londres du 19 mai 1966, on a l'intention d'utiliser ces bases pour les sous-marins atomiques équipés de fusées "Polaris".

44. Il est parfaitement évident que le Royaume-Uni et les Etats-Unis d'Amérique veulent faire de l'océan Indien une zone nucléaire placée sous leur contrôle, un tremplin militaire, pour lutter contre le mouvement de libération nationale.

45. Les milieux dirigeants des Etats-Unis d'Amérique encouragent les colonialistes britanniques à s'acquitter de leurs prétendues obligations dans la région à l'est de Suez — ils les poussent à jouer le rôle de "gendarme dans cet hémisphère".

46. Les Etats-Unis et leurs alliés du bloc militaire et colonial de l'OTAN sont à l'heure actuelle le rempart le plus solide du colonialisme contemporain. Dans toutes les régions où sévit la terreur coloniale et où coule le sang des patriotes, que ce soit en Afrique du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain ou en Rhodésie du Sud, en Angola ou au Mozambique, les responsables ne sont pas uniquement les racistes belliqueux qui ont usurpé le pouvoir dans ce pays ou le régime colonial du Portugal, mais aussi leurs protecteurs: les Gouvernements des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, du Royaume-Uni et d'autres pays membres de l'OTAN.

47. On sait que, dans sa résolution 2105 (XX), l'Assemblée générale des Nations Unies a déclaré que le colonialisme, la politique raciste d'apartheid et toutes les formes de discrimination raciale constituaient une "menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales" et "un crime contre l'humanité".

48. Or, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et d'autres puissances occidentales continuent à investir des capitaux en Afrique du Sud, à développer leurs échanges commerciaux avec ce pays et à méconnaître les résolutions des Nations Unies, leur demandant de rompre les relations politiques, économiques et militaires avec la République sud-africaine.

49. Ce n'est pas un hasard si les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, le Royaume-Uni, la République fédérale d'Allemagne et d'autres puissances occidentales ne prennent aucune mesure efficace contre le régime raciste de Rhodésie du Sud. Il ne fait de doute pour personne que le régime de Smith, qui a proclamé "l'indépendance" de la Rhodésie du Sud, n'aurait pu commettre ce crime contre les populations africaines si les puissances occidentales ne lui avaient pas permis de consolider sa position économique et militaire en l'aidant par tous les moyens dans ces domaines.

50. C'est précisément grâce à cet appui des Etats-Unis, du Royaume-Uni, de la République fédérale d'Allemagne et d'autres Etats membres de l'OTAN que le Portugal peut mener une guerre coloniale sordide en Angola, au Mozambique et dans la Guinée dite portugaise. C'est cet appui qui permet au Portugal, l'un des pays les plus pauvres et les plus arriérés d'Europe, de maintenir dans ses colonies une armée de 120 000 hommes, abondamment pourvue d'armes et de matériel que lui fournissent libéralement ses alliés de l'OTAN. Au cours de ces dernières années, les Etats-Unis à eux seuls ont prêté sous diverses formes au régime Salazar une aide financière et militaire se montant à des centaines de millions de dollars.

51. Le Gouvernement de l'Allemagne occidentale appuie de plus en plus activement les colonialistes. Ne possédant pas de colonies, l'Allemagne occidentale cherche à accroître son expansion économique en Asie, en Afrique et en Amérique latine et à augmenter sa part du pillage de ces continents en imposant des échanges commerciaux inégaux et en soutirant des bénéfices grâce aux sorties de capitaux. Ce pays participe directement à la lutte contre les mouvements de libération nationale des peuples coloniaux. Le Gouvernement de la République fédérale d'Allemagne prête une assistance économique et livre des armes au Portugal et à la République sud-africaine, les aidant ainsi à poursuivre leur politique coloniale.

52. Avec l'appui direct et l'accord tacite des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, du Royaume-Uni, de la République fédérale d'Allemagne et d'autres Etats membres de l'OTAN, les éléments les plus réactionnaires du colonialisme et du racisme continuent à consolider leurs positions sur le continent africain. Des faits toujours plus nombreux témoignent de l'activité criminelle du bloc des colonialistes et des racistes, connu sous le nom d'"alliance impie", qui unit les racistes d'Afrique du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Sud aux colonisateurs portugais. C'est ce bloc qui doit servir de force de frappe principale dans la lutte contre le mouvement de libération nationale en Afrique, qui doit mener l'offensive contre les pays indépendants de ce continent.

53. Le colonialisme contemporain est perfide et dangereux. Il revêt aujourd'hui des formes nouvelles, des aspects nouveaux et plus subtils, ceux du néo-colonialisme. Les néo-colonialistes, s'adaptant à l'esprit du temps, vont souvent jusqu'à accorder l'indépendance politique aux colonies. Mais ils n'en conservent pas moins les positions clefs, dans le domaine économique comme dans d'autres domaines, installent au pouvoir des gens acquis à leurs idées et poursuivent une politique tout à l'avantage des colonialistes.

54. L'arsenal du colonialisme contemporain comporte toutes sortes de procédés et d'artifices. Agissant selon le principe traditionnel "diviser pour régner", les néo-colonialistes attisent les dissensions entre tribus, encouragent les tendances séparatistes et créent des problèmes là où il n'y en a pas. Ils envainement les différends territoriaux et les litiges frontaliers — legs de leurs anciens maîtres coloniaux — entre des pays qui se sont récemment libérés du joug colonial. Ces différends et ces litiges détournent l'attention des peuples des pays libérés du règlement des problèmes économiques, politiques et sociaux urgents qui se posent à eux pendant que les colonialistes s'engraissent à leurs dépens.

55. On a recours, pour parvenir aux mêmes fins, aux formes les plus diverses d'asservissement économique et politique des peuples: l'exportation des capitaux, les échanges commerciaux inégaux, l'assistance assortie de conditions politiques bien précises, la participation des pays à des blocs agressifs, la création sur leur territoire de bases militaires, l'installation de régimes fantoches.

56. Lorsque le peuple d'un pays engage la lutte pour défendre ses droits inaliénables, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, qui se sont arrogé le rôle de gendarme mondial, recourent à la force brutale et à la terreur sanglante pour maintenir leur domination. L'agression des Etats-Unis qui se poursuit au Viet-Nam en offre un témoignage éclatant et on peut citer comme autres exemples l'intervention armée des Etats-Unis dans la République Dominicaine et dans d'autres pays.

57. Mais il ne faut pas que les colonialistes et les néo-colonialistes se leurrent d'espairs chimériques. Ni les complots, ni les intrigues, ni la corruption, ni les actes directs d'agression armée ne pourront arrêter le cours irréversible de l'histoire et étouffer la volonté des peuples qui aspirent à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

58. La délégation de la République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie a étudié attentivement le rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, publié sous la cote A/6300/Rev.1.

59. A notre avis, le Comité spécial a accompli, au cours de l'année 1966, une œuvre importante et utile. Un nouvel apport à la lutte pour la libération des peuples de l'esclavage colonial a été fourni par la session que le Comité spécial a tenue en Afrique, où il a pu étudier sur place la situation et prendre des décisions dont l'application marquerait une étape importante dans l'élimination complète des vestiges du système colonial. Nous notons avec satisfaction que le Comité a poursuivi le travail important qu'il avait entrepris en 1964 — l'étude des activités des monopoles étrangers dans le sud de l'Afrique — et qu'il a présenté des renseignements abondants sur l'action néfaste des monopoles en Rhodésie du Sud et dans les colonies portugaises. Nous approuvons la plupart des résolutions adoptées par le Comité.

60. Mais il ne faut pas se contenter des résultats obtenus. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit faire en sorte qu'en 1967 déjà il ne reste plus sur terre une seule colonie, un seul peuple qui subisse l'esclavage de l'impérialisme. Les Nations Unies ont le devoir d'appuyer par tous les moyens la lutte des peuples pour leur libération et de leur apporter tout leur soutien matériel et moral.

61. Il est indispensable de s'employer à assurer l'application de la résolution que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée à sa vingtième session en ce qui concerne l'élimination des bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux [résolution 2105 (XX)]. Il convient de condamner résolument l'utilisation de ces bases par les puissances impérialistes, contre les peuples d'Asie, d'Afrique et d'Amérique latine, et leur utilisation pour des guerres d'agression dirigées contre les peuples en lutte pour leur liberté et leur indépendance.

62. A notre avis, l'Assemblée générale doit en outre recommander au Conseil de sécurité d'appliquer les sanctions obligatoires prévues au Chapitre VII de la Charte des Nations Unies contre le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et les Etats qui continuent à aider le régime illégal raciste en Rhodésie du Sud.

63. Il est indispensable de condamner résolument les activités des monopoles internationaux au Sud-Ouest africain, en Rhodésie du Sud, en Angola, au Mozambique, dans la Guinée dite portugaise et dans tous les autres territoires coloniaux — car c'est là le principal obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux — et inviter les gouvernements des Etats intéressés à prendre les mesures voulues pour mettre un terme à ces activités.

64. Selon la délégation biélorussienne, le Comité spécial doit poursuivre sa tâche en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux à tous les territoires qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance.

65. Il est nécessaire par ailleurs de rappeler à l'ordre certaines institutions spécialisées des Nations Unies et, au premier chef, la Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement qui, en violation des décisions de l'ONU, continue à fournir une aide financière au Portugal et à la République sud-africaine.

66. La République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie demeurera toujours aux côtés des peuples en lutte contre l'oppression coloniale. Elle préconise comme par le passé une entière coopération avec tous les Etats et tous les peuples qui combattent contre le colonialisme, le néo-colonialisme et la politique impérialiste d'asservissement d'autres peuples.

67. M. Amjad ALI (Pakistan) [traduit de l'anglais]: L'Assemblée générale est saisie une fois de plus en séance plénière de la question de l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Six ans se sont écoulés depuis que l'Assemblée générale a adopté par sa résolution 1514 (XV) la Déclaration historique sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux et a créé un Comité spécial chargé d'examiner les questions coloniales et de lui faire rapport à ce sujet. Avant de dire quelques mots sur la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration, je tiens à féliciter le Comité spécial de l'excellent travail qu'il a réalisé en nous tenant au courant, par ses rapports très complets, de la situation existante dans les territoires coloniaux.

68. Il est très agréable de constater qu'un certain nombre d'anciens territoires coloniaux ont accédé à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté — et qu'il me soit permis à cette occasion de rappeler que ma délégation, avec celles des autres membres de l'Assemblée, a eu l'honneur d'accueillir la Guyane, le Lesotho, le Botswana et la Barbade dans l'Organisation — il est regrettable que des territoires comme la Rhodésie du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain, l'Angola, le Mozambique, Aden et beaucoup d'autres dans différentes régions du monde continuent de vivre sous la domination étrangère.

69. Certaines puissances coloniales refusent obstinément d'appliquer la Déclaration, sous un prétexte ou sous un autre. Non seulement elles ont recours à la force pour réprimer les mouvements de libération et refusent de reconnaître aux peuples en cause leur droit inaliénable à l'autodétermination, mais elles violent ouvertement les droits fondamentaux de l'homme. L'attitude intransigeante des gouvernements de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal est trop connue pour qu'il soit nécessaire de la rappeler. Les volumineux rapports du Comité spécial nous apprennent comment ces puissances coloniales continuent de défier l'opinion publique mondiale et de violer la résolution de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Ma délégation déplore l'attitude rebelle de ces deux gouvernements.

70. La situation en Rhodésie est, nous le savons tous, des plus explosive. Le régime raciste illégal de Ian Smith est comme un cancer dans le corps politique de l'Afrique. Si la Puissance administrante a refusé, à la grande satisfaction de tous les hommes de bonne volonté et épris de paix, de reconnaître le régime existant en Rhodésie, les mesures qu'elle a préconisées pour le renverser sont, de l'avis de ma délégation, insuffisantes. Nous espérons néanmoins que l'on n'hésitera pas à recourir à des mesures décisives en vue d'établir en Rhodésie un gouvernement démocratique véritablement représentatif de l'opinion et des aspirations de la majorité de la population du pays.

71. Ma délégation ne peut accepter la thèse du Gouvernement portugais selon laquelle l'Angola et le Mozambique feraient partie intégrante du Portugal. Si la communauté mondiale admettait des prétentions analogues à celles que soutiennent des pays comme le Portugal qui occupent par la force le territoire d'autres peuples et s'efforcent ensuite de l'intégrer à leur propre territoire, les principes fondamentaux du droit international et des relations pacifiques entre Etats seraient violés. Nous suivons avec sympathie et nous appuyons la lutte des peuples de l'Angola et du Mozambique contre la domination portugaise et nous espérons que dans un avenir assez rapproché notre Organisation aura le plaisir de les accueillir en son sein.

72. Nous vivons à une époque où l'humanité accomplit de grands progrès dans tous les domaines. Nous sommes à l'âge des vastes espoirs et de l'accomplissement victorieux des aspirations fondamentales des peuples. Espérons donc que l'Assemblée générale adoptera, au cours de cette vingt et unième session, une résolution invitant fermement les puissances coloniales à abandonner leur contrôle sur des terri-toires étrangers et à accorder à ceux-ci l'indépendance.

73. Ma délégation, fermement convaincue de la primauté du droit à l'autodétermination des peuples encore soumis à la domination étrangère, figure parmi celles qui présentent le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1. Persuadés que notre conviction est partagée par l'écrasante majorité de cette Assemblée, nous lui recommandons d'adopter ce projet de résolution.

74. M. BUDO (Albanie): Permettez-moi tout d'abord de m'associer, au nom de la délégation de la République populaire d'Albanie, aux autres délégations pour saluer la naissance du nouvel Etat de la Barbade et lui souhaiter la bienvenue parmi nous à l'occasion de son admission à l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

75. Face à l'élan sans précédent du mouvement de libération nationale des peuples, aux victoires historiques qu'il a remportées dans la dernière période et aux défaites foudroyantes qu'il a infligées à un colonialisme qui est maintenant ébranlé dans ses fondements et en voie de désagrégation, les impérialistes et les colonialistes font des efforts redoublés et se cramponnent avec acharnement à leur politique d'asservissement des peuples et de discrimination raciale.

76. C'est ainsi que plus de 50 territoires, représentant de vastes régions habitées par des dizaines de millions de personnes, se trouvent encore soumis au joug colonial. Les peuples de la Rhodésie du Sud, de l'Afrique du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain, de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée dite portugaise, d'Aden, d'Oman, de Porto Rico, des Iles du Pacifique et d'autres territoires, qui subissent encore ce régime odieux et intolérable, luttent résolument pour la réalisation de leur droit inaliénable à la liberté et à l'indépendance. Leur lutte jouit de l'appui de tous les peuples et de tous les pays épris de liberté, et leur victoire est certaine et imminente.

77. Mais les puissances coloniales, défiant l'opinion mondiale et ne tenant pas compte des nombreuses résolutions des Nations Unies sur la décolonisation, s'emploient de toutes leurs forces, en ayant recours à tous les moyens à leur disposition, y compris la force armée, à maintenir et à perpétuer le système abominable de subjugation coloniale.

78. Le rapport du Comité spécial (A/6300/Rev.1) fait état de cette situation et des méthodes et moyens utilisés à cette fin par les colonialistes. Il nous renseigne en particulier sur les difficultés auxquelles le Comité se heurte dans l'accomplissement de sa tâche par suite de la persistance des puissances administrantes à refuser de respecter les résolutions pertinentes de notre Organisation. Cette situation provoque de sérieuses préoccupations chez les Etats Membres épris de paix et de liberté, qui se rendent fort bien compte des efforts qu'il leur faut déployer pour surmonter toutes les difficultés et tous les obstacles élevés par les impérialistes s'ils veulent apporter une contribution efficace à la lutte des peuples pour la conquête de la liberté et de leur souveraineté nationale.

79. Des faits patents nous prouvent à l'évidence que les puissances coloniales s'efforcent, dans diverses régions, de regrouper leurs forces et de regagner les positions perdues. L'une des régions typiques à cet égard, où s'étendent de vastes territoires des plus riches et où sévit un système d'esclavage colonial et de ségrégation raciale des plus féroces, est l'Afrique méridionale. Les colonialistes portugais et les racistes de l'Afrique du Sud et de la Rhodésie du Sud, en collusion avec d'autres puissances colonialistes — et en premier lieu les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et la Grande-Bretagne — s'évertuent à transformer cette région en un vaste bastion militaire destiné à étouffer la lutte de libération nationale des peuples opprimés d'Afrique et à servir de point de départ dans la mise en œuvre des plans agressifs dirigés contre les autres peuples de ce continent.

80. Pendant qu'il complotait avec les autres colonialistes en Afrique méridionale et qu'en collusion avec la clique de racistes blancs de la Rhodésie du Sud il met en application son sinistre plan contre le peuple du Zimbabwe, le Gouvernement britannique déploie tous ses efforts pour consolider ses positions dans une autre région du globe — l'Arabie du Sud — en vue de s'en servir comme d'une base militaire importante pour la protection de ses intérêts coloniaux contre le mouvement de libération nationale des peuples arabes, ainsi que pour la réalisation de ses plans stratégiques dans cette zone. La base d'Aden, qui est constamment renforcée, représente en particulier un instrument important de la politique aggressive britannique et constitue une grave menace pour la paix et la sécurité dans ce secteur.

81. Par suite du développement rapide et impétueux du mouvement de libération nationale en Asie, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et leurs alliés accordent une importance primordiale à la zone du Pacifique. D'où les efforts redoublés des impérialistes et des colonialistes pour consolider et perpétuer leur domination sur les nombreux territoires et îles dépendant de cette zone. Les puissances administrantes se mettent en quatre pour dissimuler à l'opinion mondiale la situation réelle régnant dans ces territoires, qui sont progressivement transformés en forteresses devant servir de têtes de pont dans la mise en application des plans de guerre contre la République populaire de Chine et les peuples asiatiques épris de liberté, et ce conformément à la stratégie globale américaine. La preuve la plus évidente de cette politique belliciste et de ces plans dangereux nous est fournie par le réseau de nombreuses bases militaires établi dans la région du Pacifique, ainsi que par l'usage que les Etats-Unis font actuellement de ces bases dans leur guerre d'agression contre l'héroïque peuple vietnamien.

82. Les divers moyens et subterfuges auxquels les colonialistes ont recours pour le maintien de leur système abhorré d'exploitation des peuples étrangers sont bien connus. Ils vont des supercheries constitutionnelles, de la corruption, de la conspiration et des pressions à la persécution, la terreur et l'emploi de la force armée.

83. Un exemple caractéristique dans ce sens et qui a attiré l'attention de toute l'humanité progressiste nous est fourni par le cas de la Rhodésie du Sud. La proclamation illégale, il y a une année, de la prétendue indépendance de ce territoire par une minorité de colons blancs, encouragés et appuyés par l'impérialisme britannique et par d'autres puissances coloniales, a soulevé une vague d'indignation parmi les peuples de l'Afrique et de tous les continents.

84. Après avoir échoué dans leurs manœuvres précédentes bien connues, les colonialistes britanniques, en collusion avec leurs suppôts blancs de ce territoire, ont eu recours à cette dernière tactique frauduleuse condamnée par tous les peuples du monde. A ce crime infâme contre le peuple du Zimbabwe sont mêlées d'autres puissances impérialistes et colonialistes avec, en tête, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, qui sont la plus grande puissance colonialiste et raciste et dont les monopoles ont de grands intérêts en Rhodésie du Sud d'où ils tirent des bénéfices considérables.

85. Poursuivant son jeu sinistre, le Gouvernement britannique, après ses dernières manigances avec le raciste Ian Smith, vient de proposer au Conseil de sécurité de prétendues sanctions obligatoires et partielles^{1/}. Naturellement de telles manœuvres fallacieuses ne peuvent qu'être rejetées. Nous estimons quant à nous que ni les impérialistes, ni leurs forces armées ne peuvent aider à la libération des peuples subissant encore la servitude coloniale et raciale. La possibilité de venir vraiment en aide au peuple du Zimbabwe, qui lutte pour la réalisation de ses droits sacrés à la libre détermination et à l'indépendance, dépend de la mesure dans laquelle les Nations Unies feront preuve de résolution et de fermeté pour relever le défi de la collusion des colonialistes et des racistes.

86. Un autre exemple, tout récent, qui met en évidence la diversité des stratagèmes utilisés par les impérialistes pour le maintien de l'asservissement colonial et raciste, est le cas de l'arrêt scandaleux de la Cour internationale de Justice, en date du 18 juillet 1966, concernant le Sud-Ouest africain^{2/}.

87. Ces deux exemples suffisent à prouver de quoi sont capables les impérialistes et les colonialistes, comment ils se soutiennent l'un l'autre et comment ils agissent de concert, foulant aux pieds les normes incontestées du droit international, les dispositions de la Charte et les résolutions des Nations Unies, et défiant sans scrupule l'opinion publique mondiale. En permettant de dissiper certaines illusions quant aux objectifs réels des puissances coloniales, de tels cas servent à aider les Etats Membres pacifiques à mieux réaliser les voies et mesures uniques qui s'imposent en vue de venir réellement en aide aux peuples coloniaux.

88. Les méthodes d'exploitation inhumaine utilisées par les puissances colonialistes dans les territoires se trouvant sous leur dépendance sont bien connues aux Nations Unies. Le dernier rapport du Comité spécial et les déclarations des pétitionnaires devant la Quatrième Commission sont bien édifiants à cet égard. Ils nous montrent encore une fois qu'en Rhodésie du Sud, au Sud-Ouest africain, en Angola, au

Mozambique et ailleurs, les populations autochtones sont dépossédées de leurs terres les plus riches en faveur des colons blancs, que la main-d'œuvre africaine est extrêmement mal payée, que les richesses du sous-sol, l'industrie, le commerce intérieur et extérieur sont entre les mains des colons blancs et des monopoles étrangers. L'exploitation féroce et la discrimination raciale s'étendent à tous les domaines de la vie politique, économique, culturelle et sociale.

89. Les études du Comité spécial quant aux activités des monopoles et des intérêts financiers étrangers dans des territoires comme le Sud-Ouest africain, la Rhodésie du Sud, l'Angola, la Guinée dite portugaise, etc., mettent en évidence les graves conséquences économiques et politiques qu'amène pour les populations africaines la continuation du fléau du colonialisme dans ces territoires. Selon ces études, l'économie de ces territoires se trouve entre les mains des monopoles où prédominent surtout les intérêts britanniques et américains. L'exploitation des richesses de ces territoires apporte aux monopoles étrangers des bénéfices énormes. Dans la plupart des cas, les revenus des capitaux investis sont au-dessus de 25 p. 100.

90. C'est pour la sauvegarde de leurs intérêts cupides et abominables et conformément à leurs plans agressifs que les impérialistes et les colonialistes déploient tous leurs efforts et ont recours à tous les moyens possibles en vue de maintenir et de perpétuer l'esclavage colonial. Ils mènent contre les combattants de la liberté une politique de répression sauvage et de violation des droits civiques les plus élémentaires. Les arrestations et les emprisonnements en masse, les tortures, la terreur la plus féroce, les exécutions et jusqu'aux exterminations en masse sont des traits caractéristiques des conséquences du maintien de la domination coloniale.

91. Faisant état des méthodes de répression sauvage et de terreur employées par les colonialistes portugais, le rapport du Comité spécial nous parle des prisons de l'Angola et d'autres colonies portugaises remplies de patriotes, des tortures et des méthodes spéciales atroces dont les patriotes sont l'objet de la part des fascistes portugais, de l'assassinat systématique de populations innocentes, des bombardements aériens de villages isolés, de l'emploi de gaz toxiques, etc. De même, le rapport décrit les lois oppressives en vigueur en Rhodésie du Sud et dans d'autres territoires, la privation de la population autochtone des droits civiques les plus élémentaires, les arrestations et les emprisonnements arbitraires et sans procès de dizaines de milliers de combattants. Les impérialistes et les colonialistes ne s'embarassent d'aucun scrupule dans l'application de leurs méthodes fascistes destinées à étouffer et à réprimer la lutte de libération des peuples subjugués.

92. L'essor sans précédent de la lutte de libération nationale des peuples et les coups écrasants qu'elle a assénés au colonialisme ont obligé les puissances impérialistes, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique en tête, à recourir à de nouvelles formes plus camouflées d'exploitation et d'assujettissement des peuples. Les méthodes néo-colonialistes de pénétration économique et d'emprise politique dans les pays faibles et petits, de la part des Etats-Unis et d'autres puissances impérialistes, revêtent actuellement un caractère de plus en plus sérieux. Les peuples et les pays épris de paix et de liberté se rendent fort bien compte du danger que représentent ces nouvelles formes de domination impérialiste et font preuve de résolution et de fermeté pour combattre le néo-colonialisme avec la même force que la forme classique du colonialisme.

^{2/} Sud-Ouest africain, deuxième phase, arrêt, C.I.J., Recueil 1966, p. 6.

93. Dans la mise en œuvre de leur politique néo-colonialiste, les Etats-Unis utilisent toute une série de méthodes et de moyens très variés, allant du chantage économique, politique et militaire, de l'espionnage, de la subversion et de la corruption aux prétendus "corps de paix" qui sont destinés à jouer le rôle de cinquième colonne dans les pays où ils sont envoyés. Les impérialistes américains déploient tous leurs efforts en vue de s'ingérer toujours davantage dans les affaires intérieures d'autres Etats; ils ont imposé des accords militaires à de nombreux pays, créé des blocs agressifs et, dans diverses régions du globe, un réseau de bases militaires qui portent atteinte à la souveraineté des pays où elles sont établies et mettent gravement en danger leur sécurité.

94. Ayant occupé militairement des territoires comme la Corée du Sud, Taïwan et d'autres territoires, ils ont transformé ceux-ci en de véritables colonies. Un cas typique qui illustre le mieux leur politique de conquête et d'agression est celui du Viet-Nam, où les Etats-Unis mènent une guerre d'agression des plus barbares contre l'héroïque peuple vietnamien qui lutte héroïquement contre les envahisseurs américains pour le salut de la patrie.

95. Les Etats-Unis sont aujourd'hui la première puissance colonialiste et ils représentent la principale forteresse du colonialisme; c'est grâce à eux que le régime hideux de l'asservissement des peuples a pu se maintenir et survivre jusqu'à présent. Leur politique d'hégémonie mondiale et d'agression s'est attiré la haine de toute l'humanité progressiste. La lutte des peuples et des pays épris de liberté est principalement dirigée contre les Etats-Unis d'Amérique, qui sont de plus en plus isolés et de plus en plus serrés dans l'étau implacable des contradictions insolubles.

96. Le mouvement de libération nationale des peuples a pris un essor sans précédent. Les peuples se trouvant encore sous le joug colonial mènent une lutte résolue pour leur libération, sans reculer devant les sacrifices que leur imposent les répressions féroces et les massacres des puissances coloniales, et indépendamment de la solidarité de ces dernières. Ils avancent à pas assurés vers la conquête de la liberté et de l'indépendance, et le jour n'est pas loin de l'effondrement total de ce système abhorré de subjugation coloniale. Leur lutte jouit du soutien de toute l'humanité progressiste.

97. Le peuple albanais et son gouvernement se sont constamment solidarisés avec la juste lutte des peuples coloniaux et dépendants. Nous avons toujours fermement rejeté les prétentions de ceux qui, sous le prétexte d'un danger de guerre, et usant du slogan de la coexistence pacifique entre impérialistes et peuples dépendants, ont préconisé la capitulation de ces derniers devant leurs oppresseurs. Nous avons toujours soutenu que la lutte de libération nationale est une lutte juste et sacrée, qu'elle sert au mieux la cause de la paix et de la sécurité internationales et que c'est un devoir, pour tout pays épris de liberté, de lui apporter l'aide matérielle et morale. Nous sommes heureux de constater que, depuis la dernière session, ce concept incontestable est consacré dans les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale.

98. L'élimination du colonialisme sous toutes ses manifestations est primordiale et revêt un caractère très urgent. Elle touche à la grande cause de la liberté, de la libre détermination et de l'indépendance des peuples; elle concerne la paix et l'avenir de l'humanité. Les Nations Unies ne peuvent se permettre de tolérer davantage le refus des colonialistes et des racistes de reconnaître et d'appliquer les résolutions sur l'élimination du colonialisme, de la discrimination raciale et de l'apartheid. Ce serait contraire aux obligations qui leur incombent en vertu de la Charte.

99. Les Etats Membres épris de liberté ont le devoir d'assumer fermement leurs responsabilités, en cette vingt et unième session, et de relever le défi des colonialistes qui persistent à ne pas tenir compte des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale. Le moment est venu d'agir en conséquence et d'adopter des mesures radicales et nettes, en prévoyant de très courts délais pour leur mise en œuvre et, le cas échéant, l'application, contre les puissances colonialistes récalcitrantes, des sanctions prévues au Chapitre VII de la Charte. C'est là, compte tenu de la situation existante, l'unique voie pour venir réellement en aide aux peuples luttant pour l'indépendance.

100. En adoptant de telles mesures, l'Assemblée générale aura agi conformément aux buts et aux principes fondamentaux de la Charte, ainsi qu'aux vœux des peuples et des pays progressistes du monde entier; elle aura servi au mieux la cause des peuples dépendants et de la paix.

101. Pour sa part, la délégation albanaise est prête, ainsi que par le passé, à appuyer toutes mesures susceptibles de répondre réellement à ces objectifs.

102. M. TARABANOV (Bulgarie): Le rapport [A/6300/Rev.1] présenté cette année par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre à l'Assemblée générale démontre que la lutte des peuples contre les derniers remparts du colonialisme est entrée dans une phase décisive.

103. Cette conclusion s'impose en ce qui concerne surtout l'Afrique australe où se situe, à l'heure actuelle, le front principal de libération nationale. La lutte armée des peuples de cette région d'Afrique, infligeant de lourdes pertes aux forces coloniales et racistes, a marqué de nouveaux succès. Le mouvement de libération nationale au Mozambique, en Angola et en Guinée dite portugaise, non seulement tient tête à l'armée coloniale, mais a déjà libéré de vastes régions du joug colonial. Les forces patriotiques organisent la vie libre et démocratique pour les populations de ces régions et posent les bases solides des futurs Etats indépendants.

104. Les peuples luttant pour leur liberté et leur indépendance ont remporté des succès importants dans un autre secteur de la lutte anti-impérialiste, le Sud arabe. Le peuple d'Aden et de l'Arabie du Sud, déterminé à se débarrasser du joug colonial, a contraint le Royaume-Uni à céder la place. En effet, ce dernier a été obligé de fixer une date pour l'indépendance de ce pays. A l'heure actuelle, le mouvement patriotique dans ce pays est entré dans une nouvelle étape. Sa tâche maintenant est de déjouer les visées du Royaume-Uni, qui cherche à imposer au peuple de l'Arabie du Sud un régime réactionnaire non représentatif.

105. Le trait caractéristique de la période que vise le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre est la solidarité toujours croissante témoignée aux peuples en lutte contre le colonialisme par les forces anti-impérialistes. Ces forces, et en premier lieu les pays afro-asiatiques et socialistes, ont multiplié leur assistance, aussi bien morale que matérielle, aux mouvements de libération nationale. Les représentants de ces mouvements ont souvent exprimé leur appréciation pour cette solidarité et cette assistance. En même temps, ils ont rendu hommage aux Nations Unies pour la contribution importante qu'elles ont apportée à la lutte anticolonialiste.

106. L'accession de la Guyane à l'indépendance, l'admission de la Barbade à l'Organisation des Nations Unies il y a quelques jours à peine ainsi que de deux Etats africains, le Botswana et le Lesotho, ont pu être réalisées grâce à l'appui actif et aux efforts de décolonisation fournis au sein des Nations Unies; ces dernières ont témoigné un intérêt particulier envers le Botswana et le Lesotho, étant donné leur voisinage dangereux avec le régime de l'apartheid en Afrique du Sud. L'Assemblée générale a d'ailleurs pris la décision, ainsi que nous le savons, de prévenir le régime de Pretoria que chaque violation de la souveraineté et de l'intégrité territoriale du Botswana et du Lesotho serait considérée comme un acte d'agression [voir résolution 2134 (XXI), par. 2].

107. La décision prise au cours de la vingt et unième session de l'Assemblée générale de liquider, une fois pour toutes, le mandat de l'Afrique du Sud sur le Sud-Ouest africain [voir résolution 2145 (XXI)] a constitué un acte positif. Cette décision a mis fin à 20 années de manœuvres impérialistes et ouvert la voie à l'application intégrale, à l'égard du Sud-Ouest africain, des dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV).

108. Ces succès de la décolonisation, de même que le développement de la lutte des mouvements de libération nationale en Afrique et en Arabie du Sud, ne devraient cependant pas nous faire oublier qu'une grande partie de l'Afrique et d'autres territoires dispersés dans les différentes parties du monde demeurent encore soumis au joug colonial qui persiste, six ans après l'adoption de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

109. En Rhodésie du Sud, le régime illégal de la minorité raciste continue d'exister et a même célébré, il y a quelques jours, son premier anniversaire. Une discussion parallèle, qui se déroule maintenant au Conseil de sécurité, fait ressortir la responsabilité des gouvernements successifs du Royaume-Uni dans l'installation de ce régime criminel en Rhodésie du Sud. Le refus du Royaume-Uni d'appliquer des mesures effectives -- y compris l'utilisation de la force -- est la raison principale qui a permis à ce régime de se maintenir et de défier les Nations Unies ainsi que l'opinion publique mondiale. Malgré les condamnations les plus résolues de notre Organisation, malgré les déclarations solennelles du Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni selon lesquelles il n'entrerait pas en pourparlers avec ce régime illégal, le Gouvernement britannique a cependant jugé nécessaire d'entreprendre des négociations officielles avec celui-ci et de rechercher un moyen de préserver ses intérêts.

110. Quant à nous, nous appuyons la position des pays africains, telle qu'elle a été réitérée ces jours derniers par leurs représentants qualifiés au Conseil de sécurité, à savoir que l'accord proposé par le Royaume-Uni ne saurait restaurer les droits inaliénables du peuple du Zimbabwe. Au lieu d'assurer la libération de ce peuple, un tel accord aurait pour résultat, en effet, de légaliser l'usurpation du pouvoir par la minorité blanche et de laisser pour toujours 4 millions d'autochtones à la merci de ce régime raciste. Il n'est pas étonnant qu'Ian Smith ait exprimé sa satisfaction du nouveau compromis britannique et ait accepté les propositions de M. Wilson sur le fond du problème. Etant donné l'empressement montré par la Grande-Bretagne dans la recherche d'un compromis avec Ian Smith, celui-ci s'attend maintenant à de nouvelles concessions.

111. Les événements de l'année écoulée, ainsi que le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, montrent que l'on ne peut dissocier le problème de la Rhodésie du Sud des autres problèmes coloniaux qui se posent en Afrique, à savoir celui des colonies portugaises, celui du Sud-Ouest africain et l'existence du régime d'apartheid. C'est un fait indéniable que le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et le régime d'Ian Smith sont liés intimement par l'identité de leurs intérêts et de leurs visées en Afrique. L'alliance impie entre ces trois régimes colonialistes et racistes est une réalité dangereuse pour l'Afrique. Les événements de Rhodésie du Sud ont révélé au monde la façon dont cette alliance fonctionne et dont est organisée l'entraide entre ces régimes, rempart du colonialisme en Afrique. L'incident des trois pétroliers qui, en son temps, a servi de tremplin de propagande au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, a mis en évidence le rôle néfaste que jouent les ports du Mozambique et de l'Afrique du Sud dans l'approvisionnement en pétrole de la Rhodésie du Sud.

112. Dans sa résolution sur les colonies portugaises, l'Assemblée générale a dénoncé l'exportation de la population des colonies portugaises en Afrique du Sud comme crime contre l'humanité [voir résolution 2184 (XXI)]. Cette exportation forcée de la main-d'œuvre, nouvelle forme moderne d'esclavagisme, est un élément important de la coopération entre le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud.

113. Ces derniers jours, dans la presse américaine, on a pu trouver des informations supplémentaires sur les actions coordonnées du Portugal et de l'Afrique du Sud contre les patriotes du Sud-Ouest africain. L'existence d'une alliance politique, économique et militaire entre les trois régimes colonialistes et racistes représente un grave danger pour la paix et la sécurité des nations africaines et, par là même, pour la paix mondiale.

114. Les actes agressifs commis par ces trois régimes contre les États indépendants limitrophes et, tout récemment, les provocations contre la Tanzanie, devraient servir d'avertissement et montrer que cette alliance impie a des visées au-delà du Zambèze. Le débat récent qui s'est déroulé au Conseil de sécurité sur la plainte de la République démocratique du Congo contre le Portugal ^{3/} fut une démonstration que le Portugal et ses alliés mènent une activité organisée en vue de la restauration du colonialisme. Il est plus que nécessaire de considérer ce nouvel aspect du danger que représentent les régimes colonialistes et racistes en Afrique. L'Assemblée générale devrait être pleinement consciente de ce problème et le prendre en considération dans ses recommandations au Conseil de sécurité.

115. Le débat sur les colonies portugaises et la Rhodésie du Sud à la Quatrième Commission, et sur la politique d'apartheid à la Commission politique spéciale, a fourni une nouvelle évidence du rôle néfaste de la collaboration politique, économique et militaire de certaines grandes puissances occidentales avec les régimes colonialistes et racistes en Afrique. Les pétitionnaires des colonies portugaises ont fourni, en effet, des preuves indéniables que sans l'aide de l'OTAN un pays arriéré tel que le Portugal n'aurait pas pu résister à la montée du mouvement de libération nationale en Afrique. Le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre constitue un véritable acte d'accusation sur l'activité néfaste des monopoles et de la haute finance des pays occidentaux en Rhodésie du Sud, dans les colonies portugaises et dans le Sud-Ouest africain.

116. Devant ces faits, quelle est la valeur, peut-on se demander, des déclarations de sympathie exprimées par les États-Unis et par d'autres puissances occidentales à l'égard des peuples subjugués? Leurs gouvernements ne tolèrent-ils pas la participation de leurs ressortissants à l'exploitation esclavagiste en Afrique? L'établissement des monopoles et des intérêts financiers dans les colonies ne crée-t-il pas des bases d'ingérence dans les futures affaires des États indépendants par les méthodes néo-colonialistes?

117. Il est hors de doute que la coopération des puissances occidentales, de leurs monopoles ainsi que leur alliance militaire avec le Portugal, l'Afrique du Sud et Ian Smith en Rhodésie du Sud, sont la colonne vertébrale des régimes colonialistes et racistes. Si l'on ne met pas fin à cette coopération dans l'immédiat, elle va coûter d'innombrables souffrances et des milliers de morts; elle exacerbera la haine raciale en Afrique, ce qui aura des conséquences catastrophiques.

118. Le fait que, par l'intermédiaire du Comité des Vingt-Quatre et de la Quatrième Commission ainsi que, dernièrement, par les institutions spécialisées et les organisations internationales affiliées aux Nations Unies, notre Organisation suit de près l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) et des autres résolutions relatives aux problèmes coloniaux, est certainement réconfortant. A plusieurs reprises, le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a ouvert un débat sur le rôle que peuvent jouer les institutions spécialisées auprès des Nations Unies. Il a même voté une résolution [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. premier, par. 261] par laquelle il a exprimé, comme on le sait, sa satisfaction de l'activité de certaines institutions spécialisées, telles que le Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés, l'UNESCO, l'OIT et autres, pour leur empressement à aider le processus de décolonisation.

119. Les représentants des mouvements de libération apprécient, en effet, l'aide accordée par les institutions respectives aux réfugiés et à ceux qui souffrent de l'oppression coloniale. Les représentants des mouvements de libération nationale dans les colonies portugaises ont demandé que cette aide soit étendue dans les zones libérées où ils édifient des services médicaux, s'occupent de l'éducation et de l'enseignement. C'est un champ fructueux pour que l'activité humanitaire des institutions spécialisées puisse se manifester; cela pourrait devenir un apport précieux à l'œuvre de la décolonisation.

120. Dans sa résolution sur l'activité des institutions spécialisées et des organisations internationales, le Comité spécial désapprouve l'activité de la Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement et du Fonds monétaire international, qui continuent à octroyer des prêts au Portugal et à l'Afrique du Sud. La discussion qui a eu lieu en Quatrième Commission sur cette question a démontré que cette activité est incompatible avec toute affiliation à l'Organisation des Nations Unies et qu'elle doit cesser immédiatement. Il est tout à fait justifié de demander à ces deux institutions d'annuler les prêts qu'elles ont accordés au Portugal et à l'Afrique du Sud et de prendre les mesures nécessaires pour que des faits pareils ne se reproduisent plus.

121. Etant donné que l'activité des institutions spécialisées et des organisations internationales liée à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) a soulevé un intérêt particulier, peut-être serait-il opportun que l'Assemblée générale et la Quatrième Commission aient la possibilité de discuter plus amplement de ce problème.

122. Un autre problème lié à l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV) est celui de l'information de l'opinion publique mondiale sur la lutte des peuples pour la libération nationale, et de la contribution des Nations Unies au processus de décolonisation. Nous avons entendu des demandes de pétitionnaires pour une plus large diffusion de la vérité sur la situation dans les territoires intéressés, sur leur lutte et sur le travail de reconstruction effectué dans les zones libérées. Ce problème mérite d'être étudié de plus près par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et la Quatrième Commission, à la suite de quoi des décisions devraient être prises.

123. A mesure que se déploie cette lutte des peuples pour la libération nationale et à la suite des succès que cette lutte a enregistrés dernièrement, une réaction opiniâtre s'est manifestée dans les cercles colonialistes, et une résistance farouche s'est élevée contre l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et peuples coloniaux. Cependant, nous sommes certains que les forces anti-impérialistes sont immenses et qu'elles sont à même de liquider les derniers remparts de l'impérialisme. En effet, le moment est venu de faire entendre définitivement aux forces colonialistes que l'époque du colonialisme sous toutes ses manifestations odieuses et honteuses — la pratique de l'apartheid et de la discrimination raciale — est révolue. Le moment est venu de mobiliser toutes les forces, y compris celle des Nations Unies, pour aider les peuples subjugués à briser leurs chaînes et pour éliminer une des menaces les plus graves à la paix du monde d'aujourd'hui.

124. M. EL KONY (République arabe unie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il y a six ans, l'Assemblée générale adoptait l'une des déclarations les plus importantes de l'histoire de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Dans ce document, tous les Membres de l'Organisation déclaraient solennellement que tous les peuples avaient le droit de libre détermination et que la sujétion des peuples à une subjugation, à une domination et à une exploitation étrangères compromettait la cause de la paix et de la coopération mondiales. Pourtant, des millions d'êtres humains demeurent encore sous le joug colonial.

125. Au lieu de prendre immédiatement des mesures pour transmettre le pouvoir aux peuples intéressés, les puissances coloniales mènent une guerre sans merci contre ceux qui luttent pour leur liberté et leur indépendance, espérant briser leur résistance et leur imposer la domination coloniale. Elles ont eu recours jusqu'à présent à toutes sortes de méthodes visant non seulement à faire échec aux diverses résolutions adoptées par l'Organisation, mais aussi à étouffer par la force les aspirations légitimes des peuples et à mettre fin à leur noble lutte. Les rapports du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, comme ceux de ses sous-comités, contiennent une foule de renseignements sur ces méthodes.

126. Aujourd'hui, alors que nous examinons ici le problème du colonialisme, un autre organe important des Nations Unies discute de la tragédie de la Rhodésie du Sud, résultat de la politique coloniale systématique menée par le Royaume-Uni. Par une manifestation typique des qualités manœuvrières des Britanniques, le Gouvernement de Londres s'efforce de créer l'impression qu'il fait de son mieux pour renverser le régime raciste de Ian Smith. Alors qu'il lui a passé le pouvoir dans le territoire au moyen des constitutions illégales de 1923 et de 1961, il tente maintenant de nous faire croire qu'il change de politique et qu'il le condamne.

127. Le Gouvernement britannique sait fort bien que, si on n'emploie pas la force contre le régime raciste de minorité de Rhodésie du Sud, celui-ci continuera à se maintenir. L'expérience a prouvé que les sanctions économiques ne permettent pas d'obtenir les résultats recherchés, à moins que tous les Etats, et en particulier l'Afrique du Sud et le Portugal, ne coopèrent à leur application. Or, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni parle de sanctions obligatoires sélectives d'une portée très limitée.

128. Dans les territoires sous administration portugaise, nous constatons que, non content de nier le droit des peuples de ces territoires à l'autodétermination, le Portugal mène une guerre coloniale sans merci contre les populations. Il ne tient aucun compte de toutes les résolutions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

129. Quant au Sud-Ouest africain, le régime raciste de Pretoria a étendu sa politique d'apartheid à ce territoire sous mandat et persiste à refuser de reconnaître l'autorité de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

130. A Aden, l'intensification des opérations militaires montre jusqu'où peut aller la brutalité de la politique coloniale britannique dans ce territoire. En outre, la violation systématique et quotidienne des droits de l'homme, comme les atrocités commises par les autorités militaires contre le peuple combattant d'Aden, témoignent de la gravité de la situation dans ce territoire. Hier, l'Assemblée générale a adopté une résolution sur la question d'Aden, aux termes de laquelle le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est prié de lever l'état d'urgence et de libérer tous les prisonniers et détenus politiques afin que la mission de l'Organisation des Nations Unies puisse s'acquitter des responsabilités dont elle a été chargée. Le porte-parole britannique a déclaré que son gouvernement était disposé à coopérer avec l'Organisation à l'application intégrale des résolutions de l'Assemblée générale relatives à Aden.

131. Le moment est venu pour le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de faire la preuve de sa bonne volonté et de sa sincérité en levant immédiatement l'état d'urgence et toutes les mesures qui l'accompagnent.

132. Jusqu'à maintenant le Gouvernement britannique a refusé d'appliquer la résolution relative à Oman qui a été adoptée par l'Assemblée générale à sa dernière session. Il continue à priver le peuple d'Oman de ses droits légitimes à l'autodétermination et à la liberté.

133. Tout au long de la discussion qui s'est déroulée en Quatrième Commission, des faits indiscutables et d'importance capitale concernant la politique coloniale ont été révélés. Le premier est que les puissances coloniales maintiennent des bases militaires et en créent même de nouvelles sur les territoires qu'elles administrent. L'expérience prouve que ces bases sont utilisées et maintenues pour intimider et réprimer les mouvements nationalistes de ces territoires. Elles ne sont destinées ni à la défense des territoires ni à la protection des intérêts de leur population.

134. Le deuxième fait est que les puissances coloniales s'efforcent de créer dans les territoires dépendants des régimes non représentatifs, étrangers aux intérêts et aux aspirations des populations en lutte, et d'imposer des institutions non démocratiques à seule fin de perpétuer leur influence et leur contrôle. Nous sommes convaincus que, seuls, les véritables représentants de la population ont le droit de rédiger la Constitution de leur pays.

135. Le troisième fait est que les intérêts financiers et les monopoles étrangers implantés dans les territoires dépendants jouent un rôle de premier plan dans la détermination de la politique qu'adoptent certains Etats, tels que le Royaume-Uni, les Etats-Unis d'Amérique et d'autres, à l'égard de la colonisation. Cela explique les tentatives faites par ces Etats pour contrecarrer les efforts de l'Organisation des Nations Unies tendant à mettre un terme au régime colonial dans certains territoires comme la Rhodésie du Sud, le Sud-Ouest africain, l'Angola et le Mozambique. Cela met aussi en lumière le rôle que jouent ces Etats dans le maintien de la situation intolérable qui règne actuellement dans ces territoires.

136. Le quatrième fait est que les puissances coloniales encouragent l'afflux systématique d'immigrants étrangers, tout en déplaçant, en déportant et en transférant les autochtones hors de leur patrie. Elles espèrent qu'ainsi les immigrants deviendront plus nombreux que les autochtones et qu'elles pourront perpétuer leur domination. Nous avons déjà vu cela en Palestine. Des immigrants et des aventuriers, en provenance de tous les pays d'Europe, sont venus dans ce pays pour y remplacer les autochtones en employant la terreur. Le résultat est qu'une minorité d'immigrants européens a usurpé le pouvoir en Palestine, tandis que les autochtones vivent dans des camps, hors de leur patrie.

137. Compte tenu des faits que je viens de citer, ma délégation estime que le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 constitue une mesure positive et que c'est le minimum que puisse faire notre Organisation pour promouvoir la cause de la liberté, de la paix et de la justice.

138. En conclusion, qu'il me soit permis de saisir cette occasion pour rendre hommage aux membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre pour leurs efforts inlassables et pour la contribution précieuse qu'ils ont apportée à l'étude de ces problèmes. Je tiens également à rappeler la part importante qu'a prise à ces travaux le Président du Comité, l'ambassadeur Collier, du Sierra Leone.

139. Mlle BROOKS (Libéria) [traduit de l'anglais]: Le monde dans lequel nous vivons est un monde dur et sinistre où une moitié de la population est libre et l'autre moitié en esclavage. Vingt et un ans se sont écoulés depuis la signature de la Charte des Nations Unies qui proclamait la foi dans les droits fondamentaux de l'homme, dans la dignité et la valeur de la personne humaine, dans l'égalité des droits des hommes et des femmes ainsi que des nations, grandes et petites. Six années ont passé depuis l'adoption de la charte de la décolonisation, c'est-à-dire de la résolution 1514 (XV) sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Pourtant, des millions d'êtres dans le monde vivent encore sous la domination coloniale.

140. Les tensions sont devenues très fortes et la situation dans certaines parties de l'Afrique en est venue à constituer une menace pour la paix et la sécurité mondiales. Cela ne doit pas surprendre les gouvernements coloniaux qui administrent ces territoires, car les délégations africaines et asiatiques, d'année en année, ont attiré l'attention de ces gouvernements sur la situation et ont demandé que des mesures adéquates soient prises pour assurer le développement progressif, pacifique et ordonné des populations dans la voie de l'autodétermination et de l'indépendance. Au lieu de nous écouter, on a repoussé nos demandes et on nous a accusés de déformer les faits. On aurait dû savoir que lorsqu'on encourage et qu'on appuie, dans l'administration des peuples, une politique contraire aux normes les plus élémentaires de la justice, le résultat en est un accroissement de la tension, une explosion de violence et finalement la guerre.

141. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni ne peut pas dégager sa responsabilité en ce qui concerne la situation qui existe aujourd'hui en Rhodésie et qui est un défi à son prestige et à la conscience du monde. Le régime illégal de Ian Smith n'existait pas en 1961 lorsque les délégations africaines et asiatiques se sont fortement opposées à la Constitution de cette année-là pour la Rhodésie en soulignant les injustices qu'elle engendrerait pour la majorité de la population africaine. Ces délégations ont alors demandé que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni rejette cette Constitution et convoque une conférence de la table ronde réunissant tous les partis politiques et les dirigeants du territoire pour qu'ils se mettent d'accord sur des conditions et qu'ils rédigent une nouvelle Constitution. La Grande-Bretagne a repoussé cette suggestion et a continué d'accorder une protection injustifiée à la population blanche minoritaire.

142. A la suite des élections qui ont eu lieu en 1962, dans le cadre du système électoral qui avait été sévèrement critiqué par la Quatrième Commission et par l'Assemblée générale, c'est le parti le plus réactionnaire qui est venu au pouvoir; le gouvernement n'a montré nullement l'intention de porter remède à l'inégalité dont souffraient les Africains, mais il l'a maintenue en adoptant une législation répressive. On ne peut pas oublier que, lors de la dissolution de la Fédération de la Rhodésie et du Nyassaland, le contrôle de la plus grande partie des forces armées de l'ancienne Fédération a été transféré à la Rhodésie, ce qui a renforcé la puissance militaire du régime illégal actuel. La Grande-Bretagne a été mise en garde par les délégations africaines et asiatiques contre l'alliance impie de la Rhodésie, de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal, dont les objectifs principaux sont de renverser le cours de l'histoire en ce qui concerne les mouvements de libération du continent africain et de perpétuer la théorie diabolique de la supériorité raciale. La Grande-Bretagne a fait la sourde oreille et n'a pas voulu voir ce qui se passait.

143. Aujourd'hui, non seulement notre Organisation et le monde entier sont placés devant le fait accompli d'une déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance émanant d'un régime raciste, mais Ian Smith, employant tous les moyens pour renforcer son emprise sur le territoire, met en vigueur contre les Africains des lois de sécurité encore plus rigoureuses que celles de l'Afrique du Sud, applique un accord d'extradition passé avec ce dernier pays (de sorte que les combattants de la liberté qui traversent la frontière sont renvoyés dans leur territoire d'origine) et restreint les activités politiques et la liberté d'expression. Il a également signé avec l'Afrique du Sud un accord militaire de coopération contre les soulèvements africains, et, tranquillement mais méthodiquement, il introduit en Rhodésie un système du "Bantoustan" analogue à celui de l'Afrique du Sud. Nous savons aussi que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a manifesté l'intention de ne pas recourir aux seuls moyens efficaces pour renverser le régime illégal de Ian Smith.

144. On se demande si la Grande-Bretagne ne perpétue pas le racisme quand elle refuse de renverser le régime illégal de Ian Smith, alors qu'elle n'avait éprouvé aucune difficulté à recourir à l'usage de la force, sous prétexte de maintenir l'ordre, contre les Africains et les Asiatiques qui se soulevaient au Kenya, en Nigéria, en Inde et en Guyane britannique pour défendre leurs aspirations à la liberté et à l'indépendance.

145. Le Conseil de sécurité avait averti le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni que les sanctions partielles préconisées par ce dernier ne seraient pas efficaces; il est arrivé ce qui avait été prévu. Le Royaume-Uni demande maintenant une extension de ces mesures, mais sous forme de sanctions sélectives. Très franchement, nous autres Africains, nous estimons que seules des sanctions obligatoires et généralisées méritent d'être prises sérieusement en considération. Toutefois, le Royaume-Uni reste prudent et Ian Smith inflexible.

146. Il faut que je parle, même très brièvement, du Sud-Ouest africain. Je ne puis m'empêcher de rappeler les paroles du Dr Swatzenberger, qui était mon conseiller en droit international à l'University College Law School, de Londres. A la fin de sa série de conférences de l'année scolaire 1953, il a exhorté ses élèves à ne pas oublier que "le droit international est au service de la politique de force". J'étais imbu d'un idéal d'équité et je croyais fermement que la justice devait être rendue à tous les hommes et j'ai quitté la salle de cours sans bien comprendre ce que voulait dire cette phrase "le droit international est au service de la politique de force". Cependant, tous ceux qui ont participé aussi longtemps que moi aux travaux de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ont certainement été amenés à comprendre parfaitement cette pensée subtile. En manière de plaisanterie, quelques mois avant l'arrêt de la Cour, un représentant de l'Afrique du Sud m'avait laissé entendre que le Libéria et l'Ethiopie perdraient leur procès contre son pays. Si je considère, d'une part, le bien-fondé de la cause, le mépris manifesté par l'Afrique du Sud pour ses obligations découlant du mandat sur le Sud-Ouest africain, le fait que ce pays a rejeté la compétence de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, qu'il ne tient manifestement aucun compte des résolutions de l'Assemblée sur le Sud-Ouest africain, qu'il a apporté lui-même des témoignages à l'appui de l'accusation d'apartheid formulée par le Libéria et l'Ethiopie, et, d'autre part, qu'une Cour internationale de justice refuse de se prononcer sur la question de l'apartheid, je n'ai aucune peine à comprendre parfaitement le sens de la phrase: "Le droit international est au service de la politique de force".

147. Toutefois, étant donné que la politique de force peut être employée dans un but constructif pour défendre le règne du droit, pour administrer la justice et pour assurer la stabilité de l'ordre social dans le monde, je tiens à dire que les portes ont été largement ouvertes à l'accomplissement de ces desseins constructifs par la résolution sur le Sud-Ouest africain adoptée par l'Assemblée générale au cours de la présente session [résolution 2145 (XXI)]. J'adresse donc un appel aux grandes puissances et je leur demande de saisir cette occasion de venir en aide à l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans ses efforts pour amener le peuple du Sud-Ouest africain à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance.

148. Je ne crois pas que l'Afrique du Sud puisse continuer à violer son mandat et à méconnaître les principes de la Charte si ses puissants alliés modifient leur politique de soutien direct ou indirect. Je suis persuadée que le Libéria et l'Ethiopie ont eu raison d'agir comme ils l'ont fait en portant l'affaire devant la Cour. D'ailleurs, c'était à l'époque la seule voie qui leur était ouverte. Bien qu'ils n'aient pas obtenu de décision sur ce point, je suis convaincue que le monde est plus conscient que jamais que la position prise par l'Afrique du Sud ne repose sur aucune base juridique; si ce pays peut considérer que l'arrêt de la Cour constitue une victoire pour lui, ce n'est en fait que le début d'une évolution qui aboutira inévitablement à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance du peuple du Sud-Ouest africain.

149. Le Portugal estime qu'il lui est possible non seulement d'opprimer les Africains du Mozambique, de l'Angola et de la Guinée dite portugaise, mais encore de violer dans l'administration de ces territoires le principe de l'Article 2, paragraphe 4 qui dit:

"Les Membres de l'Organisation s'abstiennent, dans leurs relations internationales, de recourir à la menace ou à l'emploi de la force, soit contre l'intégrité territoriale ou l'indépendance politique de tout Etat, soit de toute autre manière incompatible avec les buts des Nations Unies."

150. Le Gouvernement de Tanzanie a récemment élevé une protestation contre le fait que des soldats portugais ont traversé la frontière, pénétré en territoire tanzanien et tué des ressortissants de ce pays. Est-ce réellement une question de vie ou de mort pour le Portugal que de maintenir ces territoires sous sa domination coloniale? Le Portugal méconnaît impunément les résolutions adoptées par le Conseil de sécurité au sujet du Mozambique et de l'Angola, tout en ayant de plus en plus recours à l'emploi de la force contre les mouvements de libération nationale de ces pays. Les alliés du Portugal feraient bien de cesser de lui accorder une aide qui lui permet de commettre des actes de répression contre les Africains et de s'opposer à la marche de ces peuples sur la voie de l'autodétermination et de l'indépendance. Nous estimons que ses partenaires de l'OTAN devraient prendre toutes les mesures voulues pour garantir que le Portugal ne détournera pas les matériels de guerre destinés à la défense de la zone de l'Atlantique nord pour s'en servir contre la vie et les biens des Africains qu'il administre.

151. C'est avec un regret sincère que nous constatons que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni s'est opposé à l'envoi d'une mission de l'Organisation des Nations Unies aux îles Fidji. J'estime qu'il a plus à gagner qu'à perdre à la présence d'une telle mission dans ces îles. La même remarque s'applique à la France qui s'est opposée à l'envoi d'une commission en Côte française des Somalis.

152. Je voudrais maintenant dire quelques mots au sujet des territoires sous tutelle, qui relèvent également de ce rapport. Je tiens, en particulier, en ce qui concerne la question de Nauru, à inviter le Gouvernement australien à appliquer sa propre doctrine, telle qu'il l'a énoncée, dans sa politique à l'égard des territoires qu'il administre. Le Gouvernement australien a dit qu'il n'appartenait ni au Conseil de tutelle, ni à l'Assemblée générale, ni à lui-même de décider de l'avenir des populations des territoires placés sous son administration. Cependant, l'Australie n'applique pas ce principe en ce qui concerne Nauru, dont la population a déclaré qu'il n'y avait pour elle d'autre choix que l'indépendance et que celle-ci devrait lui être accordée le 31 janvier 1968 au plus tard. Nous demandons au Gouvernement australien de faire la preuve de sa bonne foi en appliquant sa propre politique à l'égard des territoires qu'il administre. Je voudrais attirer l'attention de l'Assemblée sur un autre point. Jamais dans l'histoire de l'humanité il n'a été admis que les gisements minéraux d'un Etat ou d'un territoire appartenaient à un autre Etat. Or, cela semble être la position du Gouvernement australien dans le cas de Nauru, quand il prétend que les gisements de phosphate n'appartiennent pas à la population de l'île, mais à la Compagnie britannique qui les exploite. Nous invitons les représentants de l'Australie à se reporter aux lois de leur pays sur la question des ressources naturelles et aux idées généralement admises partout dans le monde à cet égard. Nous recommandons au Gouvernement australien d'appliquer la résolution 1803 (XVII), qu'il connaît parfaitement, au sujet de la souveraineté permanente sur les ressources naturelles.

153. Le Comité spécial a appelé l'attention de l'Assemblée générale [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 325] sur le fait qu'il existe encore un grand nombre de territoires coloniaux qui n'ont pas encore accédé à l'indépendance. Ma délégation est persuadée, comme le Comité spécial, que jusqu'à ce que ces territoires puissent exercer leur droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance conformément à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, le Comité spécial devra continuer d'examiner la situation qui prévaut dans ces territoires en vue de contribuer à faire assurer le plus vite possible l'application de la Déclaration. Au nom de ma délégation, je tiens à remercier les membres du Comité spécial et à leur exprimer ma gratitude pour la tâche qu'ils ont accomplie au cours de ces dernières années ainsi que pour l'excellent rapport qu'ils ont présenté à l'Assemblée générale sur cette question particulière.

154. M. ARKHURST (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation tient à définir une fois de plus sa position sur l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux.

155. Le rôle que joue le Comité spécial dans la tâche de décolonisation est d'une importance vitale et la délégation du Ghana a suivi avec un très vif intérêt les activités de cet organisme au cours de l'année passée. Le rôle du Comité spécial nous semble capital parce qu'il consiste en particulier à rechercher dans la pratique une solution aux problèmes difficiles que pose le colonialisme. Bien que le rythme de la décolonisation ne soit pas aussi rapide que beaucoup d'entre nous l'avaient souhaité, les succès obtenus par le Comité spécial et par l'Organisation des Nations Unies en général sont très importants et il faut en rendre hommage au Comité et à son éminent Président, M. Gershon Collier, du Sierra Leone. Nous espérons que ce comité, animé de la même détermination, redoublera d'efforts pour s'acquitter de la tâche encore plus difficile de faire libérer sans retard les dernières colonies.

156. Etant donné que c'est la première fois que la délégation du Ghana a l'occasion d'exprimer son point de vue sur la question du colonialisme depuis l'admission de la Barbade à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, je tiens à souhaiter la bienvenue à la délégation de ce pays et à lui dire que nous espérons coopérer très étroitement avec elle.

158. Notre conception de l'indépendance et notre propre passé colonial nous donnent la conviction que la liberté doit être universelle et indivisible. Il n'est plus possible de mettre en doute le droit de chaque individu ou de chaque groupe d'individus de jouir d'une liberté totale dans les domaines économique, social et politique; en conséquence, l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit condamner, de façon catégorique et décisive, l'attitude et l'activité de certaines puissances administrantes qui s'obstinent à empêcher l'accession à l'indépendance des populations soumises à leur domination coloniale.

159. A cet égard, la situation actuelle dans le sud de l'Afrique nous rend de plus en plus anxieux au sujet du sort de ceux qui vivent sous le joug colonial et de la possibilité de réaliser l'harmonie entre les races et la coexistence dans cette région. Le Ghana, en raison de la doctrine qui lui est propre et des principes qu'il défend, ne peut demeurer indifférent alors que les deux puissances colonialistes et racistes les plus intransigeantes de notre époque fomentent des troubles raciaux et politiques dont les conséquences se font sentir au-delà des frontières de la Rhodésie du Sud, du Sud-Ouest africain, de l'Afrique du Sud, de l'Angola et du Mozambique. C'est dans l'intérêt général, pour prévenir les conséquences fâcheuses de la domination coloniale et raciale, que la délégation du Ghana a été heureuse de donner son appui à la mesure justifiée et opportune prise par l'Assemblée générale, il y a quelques semaines à peine, en tant que première étape vers la solution du problème difficile du Sud-Ouest africain.

160. En Rhodésie du Sud, nous avons encore le spectacle affreux d'un régime raciste illégal auquel le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni, plus que quiconque, a permis de se maintenir. Les attermoiements continus de la Puissance administrante et son refus intransigeant de se rallier à l'opinion internationale quant à la manière dont le problème de la Rhodésie du Sud devait être résolu, ont obligé l'Organisation des Nations Unies à tolérer pendant trop longtemps ce défi à sa Charte et à ses principes. Nous n'avons pas l'intention de nous laisser aller ici à des récriminations, mais, puisque l'erreur d'un seul nous a causé à tous une anxiété inutile, nous estimons qu'il faut souligner fortement cette erreur pour éviter qu'elle se reproduise à l'avenir.

161. Aujourd'hui, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni recherche l'appui de l'Organisation des Nations Unies pour mater une rébellion et pour décoloniser la Rhodésie du Sud. Nous ne devons pas manquer de faire ressortir que les mesures qu'il préconise maintenant viennent au moins un an trop tard. Le Ghana, pour sa part, fera connaître son point de vue sur les propositions détaillées du Gouvernement britannique au cours de l'examen de ce problème par l'organe approprié. Qu'il me suffise de dire que le Royaume-Uni doit maintenant tenir compte de l'opinion publique mondiale, qui, en l'occurrence, a vu si juste.

162. La tâche de décoloniser les territoires sous administration portugaise prend d'énormes proportions et, du fait de la brutalité du Portugal, les Etats Membres et le Comité des Vingt-Quatre doivent assumer leurs responsabilités avec plus de dévouement et d'énergie que jamais. Pour ce qui est des divers territoires portugais, nous avons fait connaître notre opinion à la Quatrième Commission. Nous aurions préféré que le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis aujourd'hui [A/L.506 et Add.1] condamne le Portugal avec plus de vigueur, mais nous sommes disposés à respecter l'opinion de ceux dont la sensibilité serait froissée par une condamnation catégorique. Il faut que ceux-ci, à leur tour, soient disposés à jouer leur rôle pour amener le Portugal à accepter les principes de notre Organisation.

163. Le Comité des Vingt-Quatre a accompli cette année un travail inestimable en étudiant l'activité des intérêts financiers étrangers dans les territoires coloniaux sous administration portugaise et en Rhodésie du Sud. Dans la mesure où cette activité entrave l'accession à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance des territoires en cause, la délégation du Ghana est moralement tenue de la déplorer. Outre notre responsabilité collective en ce qui concerne ces territoires, chaque Etat Membre en particulier doit empêcher ses ressortissants non seulement de prendre part à leur exploitation économique, mais aussi de donner un appui moral et matériel à la puissance administrante pour qu'elle puisse maintenir sa domination sur les peuples coloniaux.

164. Je passe maintenant à l'attitude de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal, que les auteurs du projet de résolution dont l'Assemblée est saisie n'ont pas voulu condamner catégoriquement. Les progrès accomplis par l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans l'œuvre de décolonisation sont fort louables, mais de graves difficultés n'ont cessé de surgir du fait que le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud pensent pouvoir imposer leurs conceptions fausses à notre Organisation et s'opposer à l'application des dispositions de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée dans les territoires placés sous leur administration. Ces pays ont maintenu leur attitude arrogante parce que l'Organisation des Nations Unies n'a pas eu la volonté d'exercer toute la pression dont elle était capable pour ramener à la raison le Portugal et l'Afrique du Sud. C'est un état de choses regrettable que nous ne pouvons nous empêcher de déplorer.

165. Nous sommes forcés de regretter également que certains Etats Membres accordent leur appui et leur assistance aux gouvernements de ces pays pour perpétuer le colonialisme et le racisme et qu'ils soient assez impudents pour nous dire ici, à l'Organisation des Nations Unies, combien leur cœur saigne pour les populations de l'Angola, du Mozambique, de la Guinée portugaise et du Sud-Ouest africain. Le sentiment de sympathie qui règne dans ces salles serait suffisamment fort pour gagner aux peuples coloniaux leur indépendance si la sympathie était l'unique facteur déterminant de leur libération. Malheureusement, ce n'est pas le cas. Nous nous adressons donc à ces amis des peuples subjugués pour les prier de cesser leur appui matériel qui permet au Portugal et à l'Afrique du Sud de se moquer des décisions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

166. Nous lançons cet appel très sérieusement parce que le prestige de l'Organisation est maintenant en jeu. Contrairement à ce que pensent certains, la baisse de ce prestige n'est pas due à ceux qui essaient de trouver des solutions fermes et progressistes, mais bien à ceux qui refusent d'appliquer les décisions adoptées par l'Assemblée générale pour des raisons particulières d'intérêt personnel qui, à longue échéance, sont illusoires.

167. Permettez-moi maintenant de dire quelques mots de la question des bases militaires telle qu'elle est traitée dans le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis. Conformément aux résolutions de l'Organisation de l'unité africaine et fidèles à notre propre foi dans la coexistence pacifique, nous partageons les vues exprimées dans ce projet de résolution selon lesquelles des bases militaires étrangères ne peuvent être tolérées en Afrique, surtout quand elles sont utilisées pour étouffer les aspirations légitimes des peuples de territoires dépendants. L'existence de bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux est indéfendable, particulièrement lorsqu'elles sont utilisées contre la volonté de la population et pour entraver leur lutte pour l'autodétermination, la liberté et l'indépendance. A cet égard, nous appuyons pleinement le paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution.

168. Pour conclure, la délégation du Ghana tient à féliciter le Comité du travail qu'il effectue dans l'intérêt des peuples coloniaux. Nous appuyons ses efforts, comme nous l'avons toujours fait et nous nous associons aux buts du projet de résolution. A ce propos, j'ai l'honneur de vous informer, Monsieur le Président, que le Ghana voudrait être ajouté à la liste des Etats coauteurs du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1.

La séance est levée à 12 h 55.

POINT 23 DE L'ORDRE DU JOUR

Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux: rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux (suite)

112. M. TAMANO (Philippines) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il y a six ans, presque jour pour jour, nous avons adopté la résolution 1514 (XV) contenant la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Depuis lors, 20 pays se sont émancipés, abandonnant le statut de colonie pour devenir des Etats libres et souverains Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Dans un grand nombre de cas, l'émancipation de ces pays était due aux efforts inlassables et à l'influence du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, dont nous étudions maintenant le rapport à l'Assemblée générale [A/6300/Rev.1].

113. Cependant, si l'on pense aux grands espoirs qu'avait fait naître l'adoption de la Déclaration il y a six ans, les progrès réalisés en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux sont "loin de répondre" à ces espoirs. Le Comité spécial ajoute:

"Le Comité spécial a constaté qu'en général la violation constante du droit des pays et des peuples coloniaux à l'autodétermination par les puissances intéressées et les mesures qu'elles prenaient, de connivence avec les intérêts économiques et autres, pour réprimer la lutte que menaient les mouvements de libération nationale ne s'étaient pas relâchées... par suite de l'opposition délibérée des puissances administrantes intéressées ou de leur refus de coopérer, un certain nombre de problèmes coloniaux, graves et ardues, n'avaient marqué aucun progrès perceptible vers une solution pacifique dans le contexte de la Déclaration et avaient même pris des proportions alarmantes, lourdes de dangers." [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 310.]

114. Si cet état de choses se maintient malgré les efforts du Comité spécial et malgré tout ce que l'on a fait pour souligner quelle grave menace constituent pour la paix le colonialisme et l'apartheid, je frémis de penser à ce qui se serait passé si nous n'avions pris aucune mesure dans cette direction.

115. Il est vraiment regrettable que tant de territoires aient encore le statut de colonie et que si peu d'entre eux aient l'espoir d'accéder à l'indépendance au cours des deux années à venir.

116. Pourtant, il est spécifié dans la Déclaration que "le manque de préparation dans les domaines politique, économique ou social ou dans celui de l'enseignement ne doit jamais être pris comme prétexte pour retarder l'indépendance."

117. Si l'on admet que les puissances coloniales ont apprécié avec justesse les conditions qui s'opposent à l'octroi immédiat de l'indépendance aux territoires qu'elles administrent, on doit alors reconnaître qu'elles ont manqué aux obligations qui leur incombaient en vertu de la Charte, aux termes de laquelle elles avaient accepté comme une mission sacrée l'obligation de favoriser dans toute la mesure possible la prospérité des habitants de ces territoires et, à cette fin, d'assurer leur progrès politique, économique et social ainsi que le développement de leur instruction, de développer leur capacité de s'administrer eux-mêmes et d'affermir la paix et la sécurité internationales. Ce dernier objectif n'avait pas été mentionné pour la forme. Les auteurs de la Charte avaient fort justement prévu que le refus de l'autonomie et l'oppression des peuples de ces territoires créerait un état de tension internationale et menacerait la paix et la sécurité du monde.

118. Deux décennies — soit une génération — se sont maintenant écoulées depuis que les puissances administrantes ont assumé cette obligation. Si elles s'étaient acquittées consciencieusement de leurs devoirs, on peut raisonnablement penser qu'il existerait maintenant, dans ces colonies, une génération de jeunes hommes et de jeunes femmes évolués, prêts à participer plus activement à l'élaboration de la destinée de leur pays.

119. Les Philippines, attachées à leur idéal de paix universelle et de bien-être général, estiment qu'il importe au plus haut point que le Comité spécial puisse mener à bien la tâche qui lui a été confiée, c'est-à-dire assurer la prompte application de la Déclaration. Ayant elles-mêmes subi le régime colonialiste pendant près de quatre siècles, les Philippines savent dans quelle misère profonde les pays et les peuples coloniaux sont encore plongés. S'étant échappé de ces profondeurs pour atteindre la lumière et l'air pur de la liberté et de l'autonomie l'année même de la création de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, mon pays estime qu'il est de son devoir de tendre une main secourable et ferme pour aider les autres pays à sortir de l'abîme du colonialisme.

120. C'est bien volontiers que mon pays s'est attelé à cette tâche. Je ne veux pas entrer dans les détails mais on trouvera dans le discours que notre président, S. E. M. Ferdinand E. Marcos, a fait à l'Assemblée générale le 22 septembre 1966, et dont je citerai ici un passage pertinent, l'indication très nette de notre intérêt:

"... l'un des problèmes les plus graves que les Nations Unies, et, en fait tous les pays du monde, devront bientôt affronter est le vaste problème de la division du monde en pays riches et pays pauvres sous l'effet du colonialisme, car les pays riches sont les anciens colonisateurs et les pays pauvres les anciennes colonies." [1411ème séance, par. 24.]

121. Le Président ajoutait:

"Nous demandons aux grandes puissances ... d'achever de liquider le colonialisme et d'en faire disparaître les derniers vestiges dans un monde où il n'a plus aucune place ni aucune raison d'être." [Ibid., par. 39.]

122. Nous nous joignons donc aux représentants qui ont déjà pris la parole à propos de cette question pour remercier le Comité des Vingt-Quatre des progrès significatifs qu'il a enregistrés l'an dernier en aidant l'Assemblée générale à appliquer la Déclaration. Ma délégation tient également à remercier les Gouvernements de l'Algérie, de l'Éthiopie, de la Somalie, de la République arabe unie et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie de la générosité qu'ils ont manifestée en accueillant le Comité spécial en mai et juin 1966. Cela a permis au Comité spécial d'observer de près les méthodes d'oppression qui caractérisent le colonialisme, et aux victimes du colonialisme d'exposer personnellement leur cas devant le Comité spécial — ce qu'elles n'auraient pu faire autrement. La possibilité qui leur a été ainsi donnée les a sans aucun doute encouragés à redoubler d'efforts pour atteindre leur objectif, qui est la liberté.

M. Waldheim (Australie), vice-président, prend la présidence.

123. La délégation des Philippines a tout spécialement remarqué la déclaration faite par l'ambassadeur Collier, président du Comité spécial, lors de son intervention du 6 décembre lorsqu'il a exprimé la satisfaction de sa délégation:

"... et du Comité spécial de l'exemple fort louable donné par le Gouvernement espagnol dans le domaine de la coopération avec les Nations Unies au cours de l'année dernière. Quoi qu'on puisse dire de l'Espagne, il faut rappeler qu'elle a été la première puissance coloniale à permettre à une mission de visite des Nations Unies de se rendre sur un territoire conformément aux vœux de l'Organisation, ... a offert une hospitalité somptueuse et ... n'a nullement entravé le travail du Comité." [1485ème séance, par. 109 et 110.]

124. Ma délégation tient à se joindre à la délégation du Sierra Leone et au Comité spécial pour féliciter le Gouvernement espagnol de cette attitude.

125. Aujourd'hui, la situation en Rhodésie du Sud retient notre attention à tous. C'est avec regret que ma délégation constate le nouveau défi lancé par le régime illégal de la minorité raciste qui refuse de reconnaître le droit inaliénable de la majorité autochtone à choisir les représentants qui doivent les gouverner. Il est attristant aussi de remarquer que, comme il est indiqué dans le rapport du Comité spécial, "les mesures prises par la majorité des Etats Membres en application des résolutions pertinentes de l'ONU [n'ont] eu qu'une portée limitée sur le régime, la raison principale en étant que les Gouvernements de l'Afrique du Sud et du Portugal [ont] refusé d'agir de même [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. I, par. 315].

126. En ce qui concerne la question du Sud-Ouest africain nous espérons que le Comité spécial des Quatorze sera en mesure de présenter des recommandations à l'Assemblée générale au plus tard en avril 1967.

127. Ma délégation tient à dire combien elle est satisfaite que le Royaume-Uni et les parties directement intéressées aient pu parvenir à un accord en ce qui concerne l'envoi d'une mission des Nations Unies dans le territoire d'Aden. Nous souhaitons à cette mission de réussir dans sa tâche.

128. Je ne retiendrai pas davantage l'Assemblée par des commentaires sur le statut des autres territoires; les vues de ma délégation sur les questions qui les concernent ont été amplement exposées à la

Quatrième Commission. Toutefois, il semble à ma délégation que, dans tous ces territoires, l'accession à l'indépendance se heurte au même obstacle: l'intérêt égoïste des puissances administrantes ou des régimes minoritaires au pouvoir, ainsi que leur désir de réaliser rapidement de gros bénéfices sur leurs investissements financiers et des profits excessifs aux dépens des travailleurs autochtones exploités et insuffisamment rémunérés. Nous demandons instamment à ces puissances et à ces régimes de se retirer de bonne grâce pendant qu'il en est encore temps et que leur geste peut encore être apprécié.

129. Le projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] est d'une précision digne d'éloges. La plupart de ses dispositions pourront être utiles au progrès de notre œuvre de décolonisation. Cependant, nous pensons, comme certains membres du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, que le paragraphe 11 du dispositif n'a pas sa place dans un projet de résolution par ailleurs bien rédigé.

130. Nous estimons que le Comité spécial est compétent pour examiner cette question uniquement lorsque, de toute évidence, l'utilisation d'une base militaire donnée ou l'installation d'une nouvelle base dans un territoire colonial donné entraverait la libération de la population du territoire en question. Autrement dit, il faut distinguer, selon qu'une base militaire donnée est utilisée ou non comme instrument de répression à l'encontre des habitants du territoire. Il faut pouvoir prouver cela, sinon il serait dangereux de généraliser.

131. En conséquence, ma délégation ne peut voter en faveur du paragraphe 11 et demande un vote séparé sur ce paragraphe.

132. En même temps, ma délégation souhaite rester fidèle à la position ferme qu'elle a adoptée en ce qui concerne la décolonisation, et qu'elle a défendue depuis la toute première session de l'Assemblée générale. Nous pensons que les autres dispositions du projet de résolution qui favorisent nos efforts communs pour la cause de la décolonisation compensent de loin les dispositions du paragraphe 11 du dispositif contre lesquelles nous nous élevons. En conséquence, nous voterons en faveur du projet de résolution dans son ensemble, étant entendu que notre position au sujet du paragraphe 11 du dispositif est suffisamment réservée par le vote négatif que nous exprimerons à propos de ce paragraphe.

133. Nous souscrivons également à l'opinion du Comité spécial selon laquelle les petits territoires méritent de bénéficier de l'application de la Déclaration mais, compte tenu des facteurs qui leur sont propres, nous recommandons que l'on fasse preuve de prudence en ce qui concerne les modalités et les procédures d'application. Le Comité spécial devra peut-être rechercher une nouvelle façon d'aborder le problème, mais il doit garder sans cesse à l'esprit que l'objectif final est la liberté et l'indépendance ou l'autonomie, selon les désirs librement exprimés de la population considérée.

134. L'envoi de missions de visite permettrait, à notre avis, de régler plus rapidement les problèmes que posent ces facteurs particuliers. Nous lançons un appel aux puissances administrantes pour qu'elles adoptent, en recevant ces missions de visite, une attitude positive et compréhensive, de façon que les missions obtiennent des renseignements exacts et que tous les intéressés soient traités de façon équitable. La chicane et l'équivoque ne feraient que prolonger les maux dont nous souffrons déjà sans éviter entièrement l'inéluctable solution du problème.

135. Le rythme auquel les territoires coloniaux accèdent actuellement à l'indépendance est décourageant. Si nous devons prendre le chiffre des trois ou quatre accessions par an, comme moyenne, il faudra encore au moins 20 ans pour que les quelque 50 territoires restants deviennent autonomes. De ce fait, la proposition tendant à fixer une date limite pour l'accession à l'indépendance de chaque territoire considéré, conformément au désir de la population, nous semble pertinente et parfaitement juste.

136. La délégation des Philippines appuie pleinement la proposition de réitérer l'appel de l'Assemblée générale aux puissances administrantes pour que celles-ci appliquent sans plus tarder la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux qu'elles administrent et pour qu'elles coopèrent avec le Secrétaire général en vue de favoriser le plus possible la diffusion de la Déclaration et des renseignements sur l'activité des Nations Unies dans ce domaine. Ma délégation appuie le programme de travail indiqué à la section XII du chapitre premier du rapport du Comité spécial sur ses travaux de 1966 et approuve les dispositions financières proposées pour couvrir les dépenses de fonctionnement du Comité, y compris les frais afférents aux groupes de visite.

137. M. NKAMA (Zambie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a l'honneur, au nom des délégations du Burundi, de Ceylan, de la Guinée, du Kenya, du Pakistan, de la République arabe unie, de la Somalie, du Yémen et de la Zambie, de présenter certains amendements [A/L.507] au projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2. Ces amendements, s'ils sont mineurs, n'en sont pas pour autant négligeables.

138. Les membres de l'Assemblée verront certainement que, si le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2 est adopté avec les quelques amendements que nous nous proposons de lui apporter, la résolution définitive constituera un jalon important dans l'histoire de l'humanité.

139. Nul n'ignore que l'événement le plus significatif de notre époque a incontestablement été la lutte menée pour leur émancipation par les peuples d'Asie et d'Afrique, si longtemps écrasés par le joug colonial. Cela dit, nous avons pris conscience de ce que l'accession des anciennes colonies à l'indépendance politique n'est pas une fin en soi mais un moyen d'accomplir des tâches plus grandes et de résoudre des problèmes plus graves. Nous, peuples libérés, commettrions une grave erreur en nous imaginant que l'émancipation politique constitue la solution de tous nos problèmes et met définitivement fin au colonialisme. C'est bien plutôt le contraire qui est vrai.

140. En effet, lorsque l'impérialisme s'aperçoit qu'il lui est difficile de survivre dans ses formes et manifestations classiques bien connues, il dresse sa tête hideuse de manière plus rusée et plus subtile. Le colonialisme se dissimule alors dans l'exploitation économique sous diverses formes de chantage militaire direct, notamment l'implantation de bases militaires étrangères dans les territoires non autonomes. Bien souvent, ces bases servent de tremplin aux interventions et aux agressions impérialistes, soit, comme nous le savons tous, contre des Etats libres et indépendants, soit contre ceux qui luttent encore pour leur autonomie et leur liberté.

141. Le souvenir que nous gardons de l'intervention militaire tripartite — cette prétendue "mission humanitaire" contre la République démocratique du Congo, qui s'est terminée par un massacre général de civils congolais sans défense — n'est encore que trop frais dans nos mémoires. Aucun de nous n'ignore que l'Australie est sur le point de construire, dans les territoires sous tutelle de Nouvelle-Guinée et du Papua, une gigantesque base militaire que ses troupes ne manqueront pas d'utiliser à des fins agressives. Quant à la base britannique d'Aden, elle est trop connue de cette assemblée pour qu'il me soit nécessaire d'entrer dans le détail des aventures guerrières britanniques auxquelles elle a servi de point de départ.

142. Une autre forme subtile de colonialisme consiste à imposer des constitutions habilement mises au point: je pense par exemple à la Rhodésie du Sud et aux nombreux autres cas qu'il est superflu de mentionner puisque nous les connaissons tous.

143. Pour toutes ces raisons, et aussi pour bon nombre de raisons que j'ai passées sous silence, ma délégation est heureuse, au nom des délégations que j'ai citées, de présenter les amendements suivants au projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2. Premièrement: à la troisième ligne du paragraphe 11 du dispositif, remplacer "qui existent" par "qui existent encore". Deuxièmement: à la deuxième ligne du paragraphe 13, ajouter "et des constitutions" après le mot "régimes".

144. Il nous a été signalé qu'une erreur s'est glissée dans les traductions française et espagnole de ces amendements. Dans ces traductions, le paragraphe 13 du dispositif contient en effet l'expression: "à imposer des constitutions et des régimes non représentatifs". Il convient en fait de lire: "à imposer des régimes et des constitutions non représentatifs".

145. Qu'il me soit permis pour conclure, au nom des délégations que je représente, de dire qu'il s'agit là d'un projet de résolution de la plus haute importance qui exige de l'Assemblée qu'elle se prononce à l'unanimité. C'est dans cet esprit de compréhension, de coopération et de solidarité que les délégations du Burundi, de Ceylan, de la Guinée, du Kenya, du Pakistan, de la République arabe unie, de la Somalie, du Yémen et de la Zambie ont proposé les quelques amendements que je viens de présenter. Nous espérons que les délégations des pays frères qui ont parrainé le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2 accepteront ces amendements.

146. Lord CARADON (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il me paraît superflu de revenir sur les raisons qui empêchent ma délégation d'appuyer le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2. Certains passages de ce texte sont tout à fait inacceptables à nos yeux.

Nos réserves ayant été exprimées très clairement et à maintes occasions par le passé, il est inutile d'y revenir pour expliquer notre vote.

147. Cependant que d'aucuns se lancent dans des généralisations hâtives et des accusations sans fondement, mon pays poursuit sa politique positive et constructive de décolonisation. Cette politique, qui a pour objet de transformer un empire colonial en une communauté indépendante, nous l'avons toujours suivie fidèlement. Nulle déformation des faits ne peut donc changer quoi que ce soit à des résultats effectifs autrement éloquentes que des discours. Les graves problèmes raciaux de l'Afrique méridionale, et, plus particulièrement, la résolution du Gouvernement britannique de faire respecter les vœux de la majorité en Rhodésie, sont examinés séparément et le Gouvernement britannique a de nouveau porté le problème pressant de la Rhodésie devant le Conseil de sécurité. Je me bornerai donc aujourd'hui à répéter, à ce sujet, ce que j'ai déjà eu l'occasion de déclarer à maintes reprises, à savoir que la politique du Gouvernement britannique, en Afrique méridionale comme ailleurs, part de la conviction inébranlable qu'aucune nation, aucune population, aucune race ne doit être dominée par une autre. Tels sont les principes qui ont inspiré notre politique de décolonisation, et c'est une voie dans laquelle nul autre pays au monde ne s'est engagé plus que le mien.

148. Depuis que je suis ici, j'ai vu hisser aux Nations Unies les drapeaux de 12 nations nouvelles qui étaient précédemment sous administration britannique; nous venons en outre d'accueillir cette année la Guyane, le Botswana, le Lesotho et la Barbade. Plus de 700 millions d'hommes, soit environ le quart de la population du monde, qui étaient auparavant sous administration britannique, ont donc accédé à l'indépendance au cours des 21 dernières années. Nous reconnaissons et respectons bien entendu le rôle fondamental joué dans ce processus par les populations elles-mêmes, mais nous sommes pour notre part décidés à poursuivre jusqu'au bout notre entreprise de décolonisation, en employant pour ce faire des méthodes qui ont depuis longtemps fait leurs preuves, et en tenant toujours compte avant tout des intérêts et des vœux des populations intéressées.

149. L'Arabie du Sud accédera à l'indépendance dans un peu plus d'un an. L'île Maurice, nous l'espérons, la suivra bientôt sur cette voie. Le Souaziland, quant à lui, doit obtenir son indépendance au plus tard en 1969. Les progrès se poursuivent donc, sans interruption et sans retard, en se fondant toujours sur cette base solide que constituent les consultations des populations intéressées, sans l'assentiment desquelles nulle décision n'est prise. Certes, des problèmes particuliers se posent aux divers territoires éparpillés un peu partout dans le monde dont nous assumons encore la responsabilité: s'il en était autrement, tous ces territoires seraient déjà indépendants. Ces difficultés particulières, nous nous efforcerons pourtant de les résoudre avec autant de patience que de célérité, en ayant toujours pour objectifs ceux qui ne cessent d'être les nôtres depuis plusieurs dizaines d'années: respecter les vœux et les besoins des populations intéressées et aider chaque nation nouvelle à prendre son départ dans l'indépendance dans les meilleures conditions possibles. Nous sommes fiers de ces accomplissements. Nous sommes fermement décidés à leur conserver jusqu'au bout ce caractère d'honorabilité.

150. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de passer aux explications de vote, je donne la parole à la représentante des Etats-Unis pour une motion d'ordre.

151. Mme ANDERSON (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Avant de passer au vote, je voudrais appuyer la demande de vote séparé sur le paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2 dont nous sommes saisis. Ce paragraphe, entre autres choses, prie les "puissances coloniales" de démanteler leurs bases et installations militaires dans les "territoires coloniaux" et de "s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles".

152. Bien que les Etats-Unis ne se considèrent pas comme une puissance coloniale, nous estimons que ce paragraphe soulève d'importantes questions constitutionnelles. Comme chacun sait, le paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte énumère un certain nombre de "questions importantes" à propos desquelles les décisions de l'Assemblée générale doivent être prises à la majorité des deux tiers des membres présents et votants. Parmi ces "questions importantes" figurent les "recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales". Cette disposition de la Charte ne peut être modifiée que par la procédure d'amendement prévue au Chapitre XVIII; elle ne peut pas être modifiée par un simple vote de l'Assemblée.

153. Le paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution sur lequel nous sommes sur le point de voter constitue, aux termes de la Charte, une recommandation "relative au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales". Je vois mal comment on pourrait soutenir le contraire car l'établissement, le retrait ou l'utilisation des bases militaires paraissent être, aux yeux de mon gouvernement, aussi directement liés au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales que cela est possible. De l'avis de la délégation des Etats-Unis, ce paragraphe du projet de résolution constitue donc incontestablement une question importante, au sens technique que donne à cette expression l'Article 18, et son adoption requiert donc la majorité des deux tiers.

154. En conséquence, je voudrais demander officiellement que ce paragraphe fasse l'objet d'un vote séparé et qu'il ne soit considéré comme adopté que s'il reçoit la majorité requise des deux tiers.

155. Je ne doute pas que toutes les délégations pensent, avec la mienne, qu'il est indispensable de respecter la Charte de l'Organisation et de protéger les droits et les privilèges de tous en nous en tenant strictement à la procédure prévue. Je pense en conséquence que ma motion ne manquera pas de recevoir un très large appui.

156. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie a également demandé à être entendu pour une motion d'ordre. Je lui donne la parole.

157. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a demandé la parole pour une motion d'ordre. Il n'entrait pas dans ses intentions de le faire, mais l'intervention de la représentante des Etats-Unis ne lui laisse guère de choix.

158. Point n'est besoin de rappeler que nous nous sommes trouvés l'année dernière dans une situation analogue et que la même question a été tranchée à la majorité simple. La représentante des Etats-Unis a invoqué les Articles 11 et 18 de la Charte pour tenter de démontrer que le problème des bases militaires étrangères relève de la question du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. A ce propos, ma délégation doit dire qu'elle est fort surprise de voir que, sur cet aspect de la décolonisation, elle se heurte constamment à des pays qui ne sont pas des puissances coloniales au sens habituel du terme. En tout premier lieu, rappelons une fois encore que le colonialisme constitue en soi une agression. C'est donc un argument inacceptable que de prétendre que l'installation d'une base militaire sur un territoire colonial soulève le problème du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. De quelle paix et de quelle sécurité s'agit-il en effet? Ma délégation aurait pu accepter cet argument s'il était appliqué aux bases militaires établies dans des pays souverains, en vertu d'accords entre la puissance qui demande à installer de telles bases et le pays qui les accepte sur son territoire. En revanche, pour ce qui est des pays colonisés, les bases militaires qui s'y trouvent ont été installées contre les vœux des populations. Ma délégation voit donc très difficilement comment on peut prétendre que l'existence de ces bases sert la cause du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. S'il s'agissait de maintenir la paix et la sécurité internationales, les intérêts de ces populations n'auraient-ils pas dû être pris en considération? Or, nous constatons que cela n'a pas été le cas des bases militaires qui ont été installées dans les territoires coloniaux. En fait, dans la plupart des cas, ces bases ont été installées contre les vœux de la population intéressée.

159. Dans ces conditions, il me paraît évident que ces bases constituent un danger. Nous avons parlé de désarmement: comment l'idée de désarmement pourra-t-elle avoir un sens tant que ces bases n'auront pas été démantelées? Bien au contraire, si une puissance coloniale était entraînée dans une guerre mondiale, les victimes en seraient certainement les populations colonisées et cela non pas pour avoir commis quelque faute, mais du seul fait de l'égoïsme d'une puissance qui aspire à dominer le monde.

160. Par conséquent, Monsieur le Président, je ne pense pas que cette question demande une majorité des deux tiers. Je ne pense pas que le maintien d'une base militaire dans un pays colonisé doive être considéré comme une question qui intéresse le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales. Ces bases ont été implantées contre les vœux des populations, pour lesquelles leur présence constitue une menace. C'est pour défendre ces populations colonisées qui ne peuvent elles-mêmes venir à cette tribune déclarer qu'elles n'ont nul besoin de bases militaires que nous soulevons, au paragraphe 11 du projet de résolution, la question de leur démantèlement. S'il arrivait en revanche, lorsque les territoires en question seront devenus des pays indépendants, que quelqu'un désire négocier avec eux, les choses seraient alors totalement différentes.

161. J'ose espérer que, pour la simple raison qu'il a été statué sur cette question, la délégation des Etats-Unis ne va pas faire renaître la querelle qui s'était élevée au cours de la dernière session et que l'Assemblée avait réglée à l'amiable. Néanmoins, au cas où les Etats-Unis maintiendraient leur position, je ne doute pas que l'Assemblée s'en tiendra à sa décision de l'an dernier et déclarera que l'adoption du paragraphe 11 du dispositif ne nécessite qu'une majorité simple. Cette question relevant après tout de la mise en œuvre de la décolonisation, il serait inapproprié de traiter isolément un paragraphe particulier: c'est dans son ensemble que doit être traité ce problème de mise en œuvre.

162. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de la Zambie pour une motion d'ordre.

163. M. NKAMA (Zambie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a estimé devoir demander la parole pour une motion d'ordre afin d'appuyer ce que vient de déclarer le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie. Nous pensons comme lui qu'aucun des paragraphes du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2 ne doit être isolé de l'ensemble. Nous sommes d'avis que les délégations intéressées par ce document doivent lire et considérer chaque paragraphe dans son contexte et ne point en faire des entités distinctes.

164. En second lieu, ma délégation voudrait déclarer très clairement — et sans crainte — qu'elle commence à être passablement désabusée par l'attitude de certaines délégations qui, lorsque l'Assemblée discute de problèmes de cette nature, recourent systématiquement à ce que je crois pouvoir appeler des manœuvres dilatoires ou des stratagèmes de procédure. Il ne fait aucun doute que, comme l'a remarqué le représentant de la Tanzanie, lorsque des bases militaires sont implantées dans des territoires coloniaux, les populations de ces territoires ne sont pas invitées à exprimer leur opinion, leurs sentiments ou leurs désirs: ces bases sont établies contre les vœux des populations autochtones des territoires intéressés. Telle est, à notre sens, la raison pour laquelle elles doivent être supprimées. Ce sont les peuples colonisés eux-mêmes qui le désirent.

165. A quoi sert-il d'employer des tactiques dilatoires ou de se livrer à des manœuvres de procédure? Regardons les choses bien en face: nous sommes en présence d'une question coloniale. Nous voulons que les bases militaires disparaissent parce que c'est là le vœu des peuples colonisés eux-mêmes. On a soutenu que ces bases avaient pour objet de maintenir la paix et la sécurité: c'est manifestement faux. Elles ont été créées pour que les puissances coloniales elles-mêmes puissent continuer à protéger leurs intérêts économiques, financiers, politiques et autres. Ce sont leurs intérêts, et non pas ceux des populations des territoires en question que ces bases militaires protègent. C'est là un fait connu de tous.

166. Permettez-moi, pour illustrer mon propos, de reprendre l'exemple de la base britannique d'Aden, à laquelle j'ai déjà fait allusion tout à l'heure. Qui peut prétendre que cette base a été établie en ayant en vue les intérêts de la population d'Aden et des territoires avoisinants? Elle a été créée pour que la Grande-Bretagne puisse perpétuer sa domination coloniale sur la région. Les habitants d'Aden disent: "Nous ne voulons plus de cette base britannique." Toute manœuvre ou stratagème de procédure est dès lors inutile car les termes du problème sont parfaitement clairs: que le Royaume-Uni supprime cette base et la population d'Aden sera satisfaite.

167. Avant de terminer, je voudrais en appeler au représentant de la République libre, souveraine et indépendante des Philippines qui a demandé un vote séparé sur le paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2. Comme l'a déclaré il y a quelques instants le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, ce projet n'a rien à voir avec les Etats souverains, libres et indépendants du monde. Nous nous occupons ici des territoires coloniaux. En fait, je tiens à dire en toute sincérité combien nous apprécions tous la contribution du peuple et du Gouvernement philippins à la cause de la libération des peuples. Nous connaissons tous le rôle de premier plan que le peuple philippin, qui appartient à la famille des nations afro-asiatiques, a joué non seulement dans la libération des peuples d'Asie, mais dans celle des peuples d'Afrique. Aussi est-ce à cet esprit et à ce sentiment de fraternité que ma délégation fait appel lorsqu'elle demande à la délégation philippine de retirer sa demande de vote séparé sur le paragraphe 11 du projet de résolution. Je suis certain qu'elle entendra notre appel.

168. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de la Yougoslavie pour une motion d'ordre.

169. M. BOZOVIC (Yougoslavie) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation a été quelque peu surprise de voir la délégation des Etats-Unis agir comme par le passé et demander à nouveau l'application de la règle de la majorité des deux tiers. Pour notre part, lorsque nous avons été battus par trois fois sur ce point à propos des territoires sous administration portugaise, nous avons accepté sportivement cette défaite. Aussi avais-je espéré que la délégation des Etats-Unis ne nous placerait pas derechef dans une situation analogue à celle que nous avons connue l'an dernier.

170. Je pourrais bien sûr analyser les raisons qui ont incité la délégation des Etats-Unis à demander l'application de la règle de la majorité des deux tiers à propos du paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2: je me contenterai de rappeler que les Etats-Unis figurent au nombre de ces membres de l'Organisation qui assument la responsabilité d'administrer des territoires dont la population n'a pas encore atteint sa pleine autonomie. On peut certes appeler ces puissances des puissances administrantes, mais on peut également les appeler des puissances coloniales.

171. Je ne me propose pas de chercher à savoir si la question qui nous intéresse est ou non une "question importante". Toutes les questions dont nous sommes saisis sont importantes car la Charte en a ainsi statué. Je ne me propose pas non plus de chercher à savoir si la recommandation contenue dans le paragraphe en question entre ou non dans la catégorie des recommandations qui se rattachent au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales: il est bien évident que toutes nos recommandations entrent, d'une manière ou d'une autre, dans cette catégorie.

172. Je partage jusqu'à un certain point l'opinion de la représentante des Etats-Unis, mais j'estime qu'il serait plus exact de dire que l'installation des bases militaires ou leur suppression sont directement liées au maintien du colonialisme et de la domination étrangère sur les peuples colonisés. Et c'est précisément la raison pour laquelle l'Assemblée générale, qui tient compte du fait que les populations coloniales n'ont pas été consultées sur l'établissement ou l'utilisation de ces bases, est parfaitement en droit d'en demander le démantèlement afin que le processus de décolonisation puisse se poursuivre.

173. Quant au respect qu'il convient d'accorder à la Charte, il me semble que nombreux sont les domaines dans lesquels la contribution de la délégation des Etats-Unis, comme d'ailleurs celle de toutes les délégations ici présentes, pourrait être nettement plus substantielle.

174. Pour toutes ces raisons, et aussi parce que les objectifs des deux parties sont parfaitement clairs — les uns, c'est-à-dire les puissances coloniales, désirant conserver leurs bases, les autres, qui ont foi dans le droit des peuples à la liberté, estimant que ces bases doivent être démantelées —, la délégation yougoslave s'élève contre la motion déposée par la délégation des Etats-Unis.

175. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Irak pour une motion d'ordre.

176. M. ALJUBOURI (Irak) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je suis heureux de pouvoir annoncer que les auteurs du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2 ont accepté les amendements [A/L.507] proposés par le représentant de la Zambie.

M. Pazhwak (Afghanistan) reprend la présidence.

177. Les délégations suivantes doivent donc être considérées comme cosignataires de l'ensemble du projet de résolution: Afghanistan, Algérie, Burundi, Ceylan, Côte d'Ivoire, Ethiopie, Ghana, Guinée, Inde, Irak, Kenya, Koweït, Libéria, Mali, Mauritanie, Nigéria, Pakistan, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Sierra Leone, Somalie, Soudan, Syrie, Yémen, Yougoslavie et Zambie.

178. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): L'orateur suivant est le représentant de l'Union soviétique qui a demandé la parole pour une motion d'ordre.

179. M. MENDELEVITCH (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) [traduit du russe]: Je vous remercie, Monsieur le Président, de me donner la parole pour une motion d'ordre. C'est en effet sur une motion d'ordre que je me propose de dire quelques mots à la suite de l'intervention de la délégation des Etats-Unis.

180. Comme l'an passé, la délégation des Etats-Unis s'est efforcée de trouver le moyen d'édulcorer le projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] visant à la liquidation du colonialisme, dans l'un de ses aspects les plus importants pour les peuples colonisés, celui qui a trait à la présence de bases militaires dans les colonies. Il n'y a là, de toute évidence, rien de nouveau. Déjà, l'an dernier, la délégation des Etats-Unis avait tenté de parvenir à ce but. D'une façon générale, toutes les délégations ici présentes comprennent le sens politique de cette intervention, qu'ont d'ailleurs suffisamment mis en lumière les orateurs qui m'ont précédé.

181. A ceci, je me permettrai seulement d'ajouter que les motifs qui poussent les Etats-Unis à édulcorer un projet de résolution tendant à la liquidation du colonialisme, et, en particulier, à l'évacuation des bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux, ne sont un secret pour personne. S'ils se comportent de la sorte, c'est parce qu'ils utilisent ces bases pour servir leur politique, dont je n'ai pas l'intention de donner une appréciation au stade actuel de notre discussion, bien que l'on puisse en dire long sur les objectifs concrets de l'utilisation, par des opérations menées par les Etats-Unis, de bases militaires dans certaines colonies, par exemple à Guam. Cependant, nous aurons l'occasion d'y revenir.

182. La délégation soviétique tient à s'associer, je le répète, aux arguments d'ordre politique qui ont été avancés par certains orateurs qui m'ont précédé: les représentants de la Tanzanie, de la Zambie et de la Yougoslavie. Par ailleurs, elle souhaiterait dire quelques mots de l'aspect juridique de la question. Les décisions que nous prenons ici, à l'Assemblée générale, et, d'ailleurs, au sein de tous les organes des Nations Unies, doivent être juridiquement fondées. A cet égard, afin de démontrer le caractère insoutenable de la proposition des Etats-Unis, je voudrais rappeler tout d'abord, comme l'ont d'ailleurs fait de nombreux orateurs au cours de la discussion, qu'il y a six ans l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 1514 (XV), c'est-à-dire la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, à une majorité écrasante — neuf délégations seulement s'étant abstenues. Cette déclaration est devenue l'assise même des décisions de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sur le problème de la liquidation du colonialisme. Pendant toutes les années qui ont suivi, à tous les stades ultérieurs de l'examen de cette question, les organes des Nations Unies se sont occupés de l'application, de la mise en pratique de cette déclaration fondamentale. Certes, divers aspects de cette mise en œuvre sont très importants pour les peuples coloniaux. Mais aucun de ces aspects, aucune des caractéristiques du problème de la liquidation du colonialisme ne nécessite aucune nouvelle décision de principe touchant l'essence même du problème.

183. En effet, dans la Déclaration, l'Assemblée a proclamé solennellement la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations.

184. J'aimerais attirer l'attention de la délégation des Etats-Unis sur ces mots: "... mettre fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Sous quelles formes se présente donc le colonialisme dans le monde et quelles en sont les manifestations? En premier lieu, le colonialisme peut revêtir une forme politique: c'est la domination politique d'un Etat sur le peuple d'un autre pays. Telle est la forme politique du colonialisme. Viennent ensuite les formes et les manifestations économiques du colonialisme, à savoir la mainmise d'un Etat sur l'économie d'un autre pays qui ne lui appartient pas et ne fait pas partie intégrante de son territoire. Voilà comment se manifeste le colonialisme économique. Il est également une forme sociale — une manifestation sociale du colonialisme. Quelles sont-elles? Dans les territoires coloniaux, on interdit par exemple l'usage de leur langue maternelle aux autochtones qui subissent par ailleurs des limitations dans les domaines de l'enseignement, de la santé publique et dans maints autres domaines. Enfin, il faut citer la discrimination raciale sous toutes ses formes ainsi que l'apartheid. C'est là encore une manifestation du colonialisme.

185. Enfin, il y a la forme militaire du colonialisme: l'aménagement, dans les territoires coloniaux, de bases ou installations militaires, le déploiement dans ces territoires de forces armées, à quelque fin que ce soit. Peu importe les fins, ce n'est pas sur elles que porte la discussion. Je ne veux pas entamer actuellement une polémique avec la délégation des Etats-Unis sur ce point et je tiens à souligner que, pour le moment, je me contente d'examiner l'aspect juridique de la question. En tout état de cause, le déploiement de forces armées et la construction de bases militaires sur le territoire d'une colonie est une manifestation militaire du colonialisme, une forme militaire de colonialisme.

186. A une majorité écrasante, l'Assemblée générale a décidé de proclamer solennellement "la nécessité de mettre rapidement et inconditionnellement fin au colonialisme sous toutes ses formes et dans toutes ses manifestations". Il faut entendre par là ses formes et manifestations de caractère politique, économique, social et militaire. C'est là un fait irréfutable. Aucun juriste, aucun juge conscient de ses devoirs, n'oserait contester ce point.

187. Mais, s'il en est ainsi — et il en est bien ainsi —, il découle de l'adoption de cette déclaration par l'Assemblée générale que toutes les décisions ultérieures touchant les aspects concrets de la liquidation du colonialisme, notamment sur le plan militaire, ne peuvent être considérées que comme de simples modalités d'application de la Déclaration. Or, la majorité des deux tiers n'est jamais requise pour l'adoption d'une décision concrète sur la mise en œuvre d'une décision de principe quelconque. La majorité simple suffit. Je fais donc appel à la délégation des Etats-Unis pour qu'elle retire sa motion, tendant à ce que le vote ait lieu à la majorité des deux tiers, puisque cette motion ne se justifie en rien, ni sur le plan politique, ni sur le plan juridique.

188. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Il n'y a plus d'autres orateurs désirant prendre la parole sur ce point de procédure. Avant de passer au vote, je vais donner la parole aux représentants qui souhaitent expliquer leur vote.

189. M. DIALLO SEYDOU (Guinée): Quelques amendements apportés au projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] ont déterminé la délégation de Guinée à se porter coauteur de cet important projet parce qu'il explique dans le détail les formes les plus subtiles de la colonisation et les moyens les plus pratiques pour y remédier.

190. En expliquant mon vote, je voudrais préciser que, après 20 ans, nous voici à nouveau discutant des divers aspects du colonialisme. Etait-ce par une euphorie passagère que les puissances qui, en 1945, ont créé les Nations Unies ont inscrit dans la Charte, en toute conscience, que le colonialisme était condamné par l'histoire, que les peuples avaient le droit de vivre librement et de choisir le régime qui leur convient?

191. Il a fallu 10 ans pour qu'un projet de résolution soit à nouveau mis en discussion ici et adopté par l'Assemblée générale [résolution 1514 (XV)]. Je répète: il a fallu 10 ans. Faudra-t-il encore 10 ans pour que les puissances colonialistes considèrent qu'il est trop tard pour revenir sur cette décision et avancent résolument vers la voie de la décolonisation intégrale?

192. Telles sont les réflexions qui ont conduit ma délégation, à la suite des amendements apportés au projet de résolution, à s'inscrire comme coauteur et à expliquer ici, en toute franchise, sa position.

193. Le paragraphe 11 tel qu'amendé explique effectivement que le système colonial ne peut demeurer dans certains pays sans l'installation et le renforcement des bases militaires; c'est une réalité — personne n'ose la contester — que le Portugal sous-développé ne peut soutenir la lutte sur tous fronts, se battant en Angola, en Guinée dite portugaise, au Mozambique, que parce que ce pays, colonisateur impénitent, bénéficie des bases de l'OTAN, qui l'aident dans son exploitation et dans son opposition, qui constituent une honte pour la conscience universelle. C'est pourquoi le paragraphe 11 s'explique avec toute la force qu'il revêt.

194. Nous n'avons pas besoin de gendarmes aux portes de la Guinée. Ce n'est pas là-bas qu'il faut défendre la liberté, il faut la défendre chez soi, sans entraves, en toute conscience. Ce paragraphe 11 nous a donc incités à nous porter coauteur du projet de résolution et nous lui donnons notre appui le plus total.

195. Les derniers aspects du colonialisme sont des plus hideux car ils empêchent l'affirmation de la personnalité des Etats qui ont un gendarme à leur porte, muni d'un sifflet et un revolver en main.

196. Nous arrivons maintenant au paragraphe 12 du projet de résolution concernant les activités des intérêts et des monopoles. La délégation guinéenne avait insisté pour que les grandes puissances en question soient indiquées par leur nom, par leur drapeau et la couleur de celui-ci, afin que l'on sache que ce sont bien ces puissances qui donnent leur appui à ces monopoles, qui empêchent la décolonisation intégrale. Le rapport du Comité des Vingt-Quatre [A/6300/Rev.1], lui, n'a pas transigé: il les a citées. Elles n'ont qu'à consulter ce rapport, elles verront que nous les y avons désignées du doigt. Ainsi, ce paragraphe ne cite pas les intérêts étrangers et les monopoles, mais il indique précisément les perspectives d'avenir pour mieux les situer, pour cerner leurs responsabilités collectives, afin de savoir qui s'oppose à la décolonisation intégrale.

197. C'est pour cette raison que la délégation guinéenne s'est portée coauteur du projet de résolution parce que, dans le paragraphe 20 du dispositif, le dernier, il est bien spécifié:

"L'Assemblée générale,

"...

"Décide d'inscrire à l'ordre du jour de sa vingt-deuxième session une question intitulée "Activités des intérêts étrangers, économiques et autres, qui font obstacle à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux ..."

198. Nous sommes satisfaits parce qu'on verra plus clair. Les déclarations d'intention, les droits de l'homme proclamés partout ne sont plus des instruments aptes à tromper notre vigilance et à fausser nos espoirs. Nous sommes satisfaits parce que ce projet de résolution tire sa force des 20 années d'expérience que nous avons vécues ensemble et nous ouvre des perspectives bien meilleures en situant les responsabilités. Car, vous, puissances coloniales, puissances occidentales, êtes responsables de l'arrêt de la décolonisation, du retard apporté au processus normal de décolonisation; vous êtes responsables devant l'humanité d'avoir violé les engagements que vous avez pris en 1945; vous êtes responsables parce que vous ne parvenez pas à renoncer à vos intérêts sordides pour laisser les peuples vivre heureux et suivre leur chemin.

199. Nous sommes satisfaits de ce paragraphe qui indiquera, en réalité, ce qu'aura été l'histoire de notre siècle. Cette histoire, elle sera très belle, si ce siècle accepte le combat pour la liberté et la dignité chères à la délégation guinéenne. Cependant, l'histoire de notre fin de siècle sera une histoire sombre si elle ne doit être qu'une lutte d'influence et d'intérêts économiques et financiers. Si cette histoire est dominée seulement par les industriels et les banquiers, elle ne sera qu'une histoire vile, sans morale, et nous conduira peut-être à un précipice que nul ici ne peut même imaginer.

200. Allons-nous nous diriger vers ce processus, allons-nous accepter la décolonisation dans le massacre ou allons-nous nous réunir autour de la table ronde pour une discussion fraternelle et harmonieuse, afin de trouver la solution à nos crimes de conscience, allons-nous — vous et nous — rechercher un terrain d'entente?

201. Pour un temps encore, que nous, nous croyons très bref, notre monde devra affronter ces problèmes. Les méthodes que nous adopterons pour les résoudre devront être à la mesure des espoirs que les peuples colonisés placent, depuis 20 ans, en l'Organisation des Nations Unies.

202. La délégation guinéenne appuie par conséquent le projet de résolution et est convaincue que la majorité des délégations intéressées à la décolonisation agiront de même. Nous avons, les uns et les autres, la responsabilité d'aborder avec plus de franchise et plus de détermination la décolonisation. Ce faisant, nous aiderons tous cette organisation internationale à atteindre un de ses objectifs fondamentaux: l'élimination du colonialisme sur notre globe. Nous contribuerons à renforcer le potentiel moral des Nations Unies à travers le monde et à augmenter le capital de confiance et d'espoir que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a suscité à travers l'Afrique. Nous sommes convaincus que, cette année plus que jamais, ce projet de résolution aura un écho favorable dans cette assemblée.

203. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de donner la parole à l'orateur suivant, je voudrais attirer l'attention des membres de l'Assemblée sur le fait que la discussion générale sur ce point de l'ordre du jour est terminée et que tous les représentants qui désiraient prendre la parole sur le projet de résolution ont eu la possibilité de le faire. Ayant passé ce stade, nous nous en tiendrons, avec l'approbation de l'Assemblée, aux explications de vote.

204. Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Afrique du Sud pour qu'il explique son vote.

205. M. MATTHYS BOTHA (Afrique du Sud) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation ne peut appuyer le projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] en raison de son caractère tendancieux qui déforme à bien des égards les objectifs et la politique de mon gouvernement au Sud-Ouest africain. Avant de parler brièvement de certains des éléments contestables du projet de résolution, permettez-moi de rappeler qu'au début de la présente session l'Assemblée a examiné longuement et à fond la question du Sud-Ouest africain et a terminé l'examen de ce point. Ma délégation a donc eu l'occasion d'exposer quels sont les véritables motifs et les objectifs de la politique du Gouvernement sud-africain; le procès-verbal en fait état. Malgré cela, au cinquième alinéa du préambule du projet de résolution, nous voyons que l'on accuse l'Afrique du Sud de refuser de reconnaître aux peuples coloniaux le droit à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance et, au huitième alinéa, il est indiqué, notamment, que mon gouvernement continue "à opprimer les populations africaines". Pourtant, le Ministre des affaires étrangères d'Afrique du Sud a exposé clairement, dans sa déclaration du 12 octobre 1966, les méthodes que nous appliquons et les mesures que nous prenons pour favoriser le progrès des habitants du Sud-Ouest africain et les préparer à l'autodétermination. Comme l'a déclaré notre ministre des affaires étrangères:

"Nous serions nous aussi très satisfaits de les voir atteindre cet objectif au plus tôt, mais nous ne pouvons pas accélérer ce mouvement outre mesure. Nous devons garder la préoccupation constante de savoir si les différents groupes ethniques en sont réellement arrivés au stade où ils sont capables de se diriger eux-mêmes — pour employer l'expression utilisée dans le Mandat; or les opinions et les désirs des populations elles-mêmes constituent le facteur primordial en l'espèce. Alors qu'ils ont encore besoin de nos conseils et de notre aide, nous ne pouvons pas mettre fin à notre tutelle en leur accordant pour seule consolation l'indépendance politique. Ce serait renoncer à notre mission sacrée." [1439ème séance, par. 183.]

206. Comme l'a déclaré notre ministre, notre politique a pour but de mettre fin progressivement au contrôle des tuteurs et à émanciper le pupille [ibid., par. 194]. Le programme appliqué par le Gouvernement sud-africain ne vise pas à coloniser, mais à favoriser l'émancipation de divers peuples.

207. Au paragraphe 6 du dispositif du projet de résolution dont nous sommes saisis, il est stipulé que "la pratique de l'apartheid, ainsi que de toute forme de discrimination raciale, est un crime contre l'humanité"; dans la mesure où cette allégation est peut-être dirigée contre la politique de mon gouvernement, je tiens à la rejeter catégoriquement car elle est dénuée de tout fondement juridique ou moral. Qualifier la politique de mon gouvernement de crime contre l'humanité, c'est travestir la vérité et méconnaître totalement les exposés qui ont été faits fréquemment à cette tribune par les représentants de l'Afrique du Sud.

208. Au cours de la discussion générale sur la question du Sud-Ouest africain, nous avons de nouveau souligné qu'en ce qui concerne la façon dont nous administrons ce territoire le Gouvernement sud-africain entend accorder à tous les peuples placés sous sa tutelle, quelle que soit leur origine raciale ou ethnique, le droit de déterminer et de construire eux-mêmes leur avenir, afin qu'ils puissent vivre dans la paix et l'harmonie sur un pied d'égalité dans la dignité humaine.

209. Le paragraphe 9 du dispositif du projet de résolution prie tous les Etats agissant soit directement, soit par l'intermédiaire des institutions internationales dont ils sont membres, y compris les institutions spécialisées, de s'abstenir de fournir une assistance quelconque au Gouvernement sud-africain. Je préciserai à ce propos que l'Afrique du Sud fournit, plutôt qu'elle ne reçoit, une assistance technique et qu'elle est non seulement en mesure, mais encore désireuse d'accorder cette assistance à ceux qui voudront bien la demander. Cependant, je tiens à répéter ce que ma délégation a déjà eu l'occasion de déclarer à la Quatrième Commission [1654ème séance] lors de l'examen d'un autre projet de résolution, au sujet des arrangements conclus par l'Afrique du Sud avec la Banque internationale pour la reconstruction et le développement et le Fonds monétaire international du fait qu'elle est membre de ces deux organismes. Ma délégation avait alors mis l'Assemblée générale en garde contre toute décision invitant les institutions spécialisées à passer outre aux dispositions de leurs statuts respectifs. Nous avons souligné qu'une telle façon d'agir non seulement violerait des accords formels, mais encore créerait un précédent susceptible de nuire aux pays qui bénéficieraient le plus de l'aide des institutions techniques et spécialisées, c'est-à-dire aux pays en voie de développement. Ces pays pourraient un jour s'apercevoir que le fait de soumettre les activités des institutions techniques et spécialisées à des critères politiques est contraire à leurs intérêts.

210. Au paragraphe 10 du dispositif, les auteurs du projet de résolution prétendent qu'il existe une entente entre les Gouvernements sud-africain, portugais et rhodésien et invitent les Etats, en conséquence, à refuser "tout appui ou toute assistance à cette entente, dont l'existence et les activités sont contraires aux intérêts de la paix et de la sécurité internationales". Outre que l'Afrique du Sud n'a conclu aucun accord avec ses voisins, ce paragraphe introduit, semble-t-il, une nouvelle conception de la politique internationale, selon laquelle des Etats voisins ne doivent pas s'entraider, bien que la coopération entre voisins soit l'un des principes fondamentaux de la Charte des Nations Unies qui, dans son préambule, nous invite tous à "pratiquer la tolérance, à vivre en paix l'un avec l'autre dans un esprit de bon voisinage". Mais cette coopération est condamnée lorsqu'elle concerne l'Afrique du Sud et ses voisins.

211. Mon gouvernement répond à ce genre de sophisme en rappelant que sa politique est de coopérer étroitement avec les Etats voisins sur la base de la coexistence pacifique et de la non-ingérence dans les affaires intérieures de ces Etats. Telles sont les relations que l'Afrique du Sud a établies avec tous les Etats qui touchent son territoire; elle est prête d'ailleurs à étendre sa coopération au-delà de ses frontières et à la pratiquer avec tous les Etats qui le souhaitent.

212. Le paragraphe 12 du dispositif condamne les activités de ceux des intérêts économiques et financiers étrangers, qui opèrent dans divers territoires, y compris au Sud-Ouest africain, et demande aux gouvernements intéressés de prendre les mesures nécessaires pour mettre fin à ces activités.

213. A ce propos, on peut se demander si les coauteurs souhaitent freiner le développement de l'économie dans ces territoires et empêcher l'amélioration du niveau de vie des habitants que les entreprises privées favorisent parce qu'elles disposent des moyens et des compétences les plus avancés de la technique et de la science moderne ainsi que d'une organisation et d'une gestion rationnelles qui sont indispensables au développement de l'économie. Entraver ce développement ne pourrait que nuire aux peuples de ces territoires. De toute évidence, ce paragraphe du projet de résolution obéit à des motifs politiques et la particularité avec laquelle il a été défendu à grand renfort de slogans au cours du débat le prouve bien.

214. Telles sont quelques-unes des raisons pour lesquelles ma délégation votera contre le projet de résolution.

215. M. AZNAR (Espagne) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Ma délégation souscrit entièrement à l'esprit du projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] dont l'Assemblée est saisie: les idées qui s'y trouvent énoncées coïncident avec les thèses espagnoles sur la décolonisation. Comme j'ai eu l'occasion de le dire devant d'autres instances de l'Organisation, l'Espagne est pour une décolonisation complète, sincère et réelle fondée sur cette liberté et cette dignité dont vient de parler le représentant de la Guinée. Pour ce qui est de nous, nous avons proclamé — et nous voulons proclamer encore — que nous veillerons à ce que soit appliqué le principe de l'autodétermination là où les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ont décidé qu'il devait s'appliquer, que nous négocierons là où l'Assemblée nous conseille ou nous recommande de négocier, en tenant compte des intérêts de la population, et, en fin de compte, que nous décoloniserons. De cela l'Assemblée peut être absolument assurée.

216. Je ne puis, en toute conscience, cacher que nous aurions préféré voir rédiger en d'autres termes plusieurs des paragraphes de ce projet de résolution, que nous aurions souhaité pour ce texte une formulation plus pratique et plus réaliste qui convienne mieux à tous. Ma délégation a des réserves à formuler en ce qui concerne le huitième alinéa du préambule et les paragraphes 7, 9, 10, 12 et 13 du dispositif et elle tient en fait à réserver entièrement sa position à leur sujet.

217. Encore une fois nous aurions préféré voir éliminer quelques-unes des phrases de ces paragraphes et remplacer certains de leurs termes par d'autres d'une portée plus pratique. Certaines des idées que renferment quelques-uns des paragraphes du projet de résolution viennent d'être exprimées par le représentant de la Guinée, mais dans des termes différents et, à notre avis, mieux que ne le fait le projet de résolution.

218. Le paragraphe 11 du dispositif qui a trait aux bases militaires revêt pour nous une très grande importance. Sur ce point, ma délégation souscrit pratiquement à toutes les idées développées par le représentant de la Tanzanie dans son intervention d'il y a quelques instants. Une des raisons qui font que nous sommes pour le projet de résolution à l'étude est justement ce paragraphe 11, qui traite des bases militaires.

219. En un mot, nous souhaiterions qu'il y ait un vote séparé sur les paragraphes que j'ai mentionnés car alors nous pourrions ne pas voter en leur faveur. S'il n'est pas possible de procéder à un vote séparé sur les divers paragraphes du texte, la délégation espagnole souhaiterait tout au moins qu'il soit indiqué dans le compte rendu des débats que l'Espagne réserve rigoureusement sa position sur lesdits paragraphes. C'est à cette condition qu'elle votera pour l'ensemble du projet de résolution.

220. Il me faut ajouter que ce vote final s'inscrit dans le cadre d'une politique générale de décolonisation que l'Espagne même et entend poursuivre à l'avenir, d'une politique en vertu de laquelle ce pays a invité il y a quelques mois les Nations Unies à envoyer une mission de visite dans un territoire relevant de sa compétence et les invite aujourd'hui dans un autre territoire. De plus, le Gouvernement espagnol annonce que dans un certain territoire — et je n'entrerai pas dans les détails, la question étant examinée en ce moment par la Quatrième Commission — il prévoit de convoquer dans les premiers mois de 1967 une conférence constitutionnelle au cours de laquelle les représentants des diverses tendances de l'opinion qui participeront à ses travaux seront appelés à décider de l'avenir de ce territoire.

221. Puisque telle est la politique de l'Espagne, il n'est pas exagéré de notre part de vouloir que la même politique soit suivie en notre faveur, et, puisque, dans notre propre territoire il nous est infligé une situation coloniale, il n'est pas exagéré de vouloir que l'on nous donne loyalement ce que nous donnons nous-mêmes, que l'on nous demande ce que nous demandons nous-mêmes; il n'est pas exagéré de vouloir que l'on fasse une politique loyale et sincère, fondée sur la dignité et sur le respect des résolutions des Nations Unies, comme nous sommes prêts à le faire nous-mêmes dans les territoires que nous administrons.

222. Pour toutes les raisons que je viens d'évoquer rapidement et vu l'esprit et l'orientation générale du projet de résolution, nous appuierons ce texte étant entendu, comme nous l'avons déjà dit, que l'Espagne réserve sa position au sujet des paragraphes que j'ai mentionnés.

223. M. QUARLES VAN UFFORD (Pays-Bas) [traduit de l'anglais]: Il y aura six ans demain, au moment où la résolution sur la décolonisation allait être mise aux voix, ma délégation a eu l'occasion de déclarer, du haut de cette tribune, qu'elle voterait pour le projet qui est devenu depuis la résolution fondamentale sur la décolonisation. Sur les questions touchant l'octroi de l'indépendance, la position de ma délégation a toujours été conforme à la Déclaration qui figure dans ce qui est devenu la résolution 1514 (XV).

224. C'est donc à son grand regret que ma délégation se voit dans l'impossibilité de voter pour le projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] dont est maintenant saisie l'Assemblée générale.

225. Chaque année l'Assemblée générale consacre un certain nombre de jours à étudier la situation dans le domaine de la décolonisation puis elle résume ses conclusions, ses recommandations et ses vœux dans une résolution. Tout en réaffirmant que ma délégation reste fidèle au principe de la décolonisation, je tiens à déclarer qu'à son avis l'actuel projet de résolution ne reflète pas la situation telle qu'elle se présente maintenant et ne tient pas le compte qu'il faudrait des progrès accomplis dans le domaine de la décolonisation.

226. Qui plus est, ce texte outrepassa la déclaration originelle, par la lettre et par l'esprit, et c'est pour cela que, tout en continuant d'adhérer aux mêmes principes directeurs quant à la manière de guider les peuples dépendants vers la libre détermination, ma délégation ne pourra donner son appui à un certain nombre de paragraphes et s'abstiendra lors du vote sur le projet de résolution dans son ensemble.

227. M. APPIAH (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je tiens d'abord à préciser, Monsieur le Président, que je prends la parole pour une motion d'ordre. Je n'oublie pas ce que vous avez dit avant de donner la parole aux orateurs précédents, mais je m'étais inscrit auprès du bureau pour une motion d'ordre, non pour une explication de vote. Par erreur, sans doute, ce message n'a pas été transmis au Président. Ayant procédé à une vérification, ma délégation a appris cette erreur et a reçu l'assurance que le Président en serait informé.

228. Le PRÉSIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je dois dire au représentant du Ghana que j'ignorais qu'il avait demandé à parler. C'est pourquoi, en lui donnant la parole maintenant, après tous les orateurs qui souhaitaient expliquer leur vote, je n'ai pas dit qu'il ne pourrait parler que pour expliquer son vote; il peut donc dire ce qu'il veut.

229. M. APPIAH (Ghana) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je vous en remercie.

230. La distinguée et gracieuse représentante des Etats-Unis a, il y a quelques instants, cherché à étayer sa thèse sur les Articles 11 et 12 de la Charte. Puis-je renvoyer les membres de l'Assemblée à l'Article 11 où il est déclaré:

"L'Assemblée générale peut discuter toutes questions se rattachant au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales."

231. Au paragraphe 2 de l'Article 18 de la Charte, on lit ce qui suit:

"Les décisions de l'Assemblée générale sur les questions importantes sont prises à la majorité des deux tiers des membres présents et votants. Sont considérées comme questions importantes: les recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales..."

232. A mon humble avis, l'expression "les recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales", à l'Article 18, doit être lue en fonction de l'Article 11 qui en donne une description complète où figurent notamment "les principes généraux de coopération pour le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales". Donc, à l'Article 18 il faut lire en fait: "Sont considérés comme questions importantes les principes généraux de coopération pour le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales", parce que c'est seulement en se référant à l'Article 11 que l'on obtient une définition complète des "recommandations relatives au maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales". Une fois cette interprétation ou explication admise, on peut aussitôt poser la question suivante: qu'envisage l'Article 18?

233. Selon moi, il résulte de ce que je viens d'énoncer que l'Article 18 envisage une coopération internationale entre partenaires égaux; en d'autres termes, lorsqu'il s'agit de formuler des principes de coopération en vue du maintien de la paix et de la sécurité, les parties contractantes doivent être libres et égales et le pays qui fournit le terrain pour l'installation d'une base doit être lui-même sur un pied de coopération à titre d'associé.

234. Quelqu'un peut-il dire, même avec beaucoup d'imagination, que les peuples colonisés peuvent coopérer? Sachant comment les choses se passent communément peut-on vraiment dire qu'un peuple colonisé est consulté lorsque des bases sont installées? Il est certain que non.

235. Je voudrais faire bien comprendre aux membres de l'Assemblée que, s'ils n'interprètent pas comme je l'ai dit le libellé des Articles 11 et 18 que je viens de citer comme je l'ai indiqué, ils trahiront complètement la pensée des rédacteurs de la Charte. C'est pour cette raison, et seulement pour cette raison, que nous disons qu'il ne s'agit pas pour nous, dans ce projet de résolution, des bases militaires installées dans des territoires indépendants car nous savons qu'elles ont été installées là de par la volonté de partenaires égaux. Les bases auxquelles nous sommes opposés sont celles qui ont été installées sur le territoire de nations dépendantes, dont les populations ont vu leurs droits foulés aux pieds par les puissances administrantes et qui, en fait, n'ont jamais été consultées sur ces questions.

236. Nul n'ignore d'ailleurs que ces bases sont souvent utilisées pour étouffer les aspirations politiques légitimes des populations des territoires dépendants. Nous en avons un exemple précis avec la Rhodésie du Sud. Si les Britanniques n'avaient pas installé une base sur ce territoire, Smith aurait-il osé, tout téméraire qu'il soit, lancer un défi non seulement à la puissance de la Grande-Bretagne, mais à la conscience de l'humanité civilisée tout entière?

237. Nous affirmons donc qu'aucun argument ne peut être fourni en faveur du maintien des bases militaires sur un territoire dont les propriétaires légitimes n'ont jamais été consultés avant que ces bases y soient installées.

238. Je voudrais humblement mais très sincèrement, en y mettant toute ma conviction, engager les représentants à relire les Articles 11 et 18 de la Charte. S'ils le font, ils ne pourront pas ne pas conclure que l'Article 18 ne peut s'interpréter avec exactitude que rapproché de l'Article 11, lequel précise en effet très clairement qu'il s'agit en fait "des principes généraux de coopération pour le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales".

239. Ceux d'entre vous qui, dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, ont eu l'occasion de rédiger des statuts, règlements et autres textes juridiques admettront aisément que cela est clair comme le jour. En effet, une fois que l'on a exposé nettement sa position dans le premier chapitre, il n'est pas toujours nécessaire de tout répéter dans les paragraphes ou les subdivisions qui suivent. Il suffit de mentionner le point principal et de renvoyer au début du texte, qui, comme ici l'Article 11, énonce clairement l'intention et la portée du statut, ou de la loi, ou de la résolution, ou du règlement, selon le cas.

240. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de passer au vote sur la proposition dont nous sommes saisis dans le cadre de la question à l'ordre du jour, je vais mettre aux voix la motion des Etats-Unis d'Amérique tendant à ce que la décision relative au paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] soit prise à la majorité des deux tiers. Le vote par appel nominal a été demandé.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

Le vote commence par l'Ethiopie, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Finlande, France, Grèce, Islande, Iran, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Japon, Luxembourg, Malaisie, Malte, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Norvège, Paraguay, Pérou, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Suède, Thaïlande, Turquie, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Uruguay, Venezuela, Argentine, Australie, Autriche, Belgique, Bolivie, Brésil, Canada, Chine, Colombie, Danemark, El Salvador.

Votent contre: Ethiopie, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinée, Guyane, Hongrie, Inde, Indonésie, Irak, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Libéria, Libye, Mali, Mauritanie, Mongolie, Maroc, Nigéria, Pakistan, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Espagne, Soudan, Syrie, Togo, Tunisie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cameroun, Ceylan, Congo (République démocratique du), Cuba, Tchécoslovaquie, République Dominicaine.

S'abstiennent: Gabon, Côte d'Ivoire, Madagascar, Malawi, Mexique, Niger, République centrafricaine, Chili, Dahomey.

Par 55 voix contre 38, avec 9 abstentions, la motion est rejetée.

241. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): J'invite maintenant les membres de l'Assemblée à examiner le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2, tel qu'il a été modifié par les auteurs qui ont accepté les amendements figurant dans le document A/L.507.

242. Le rapport de la Cinquième Commission [A/6573] indique les incidences financières des recommandations formulées par le Comité spécial aux paragraphes 325 à 336 du chapitre I de son rapport [A/6300/Rev.1] qui, il me semble, sont incorporées au projet de résolution. On a demandé pour le paragraphe 11 du dispositif du projet de résolution un vote séparé par appel nominal.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

L'appel commence par la Guinée, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Guinée, Guyane, Hongrie, Inde, Indonésie, Irak, Côte d'Ivoire, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Libéria, Libye, Mali, Mauritanie, Mongolie, Maroc, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Espagne, Soudan, Syrie, Togo, Tunisie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cameroun, Ceylan, Chili, Congo (République démocratique du), Cuba, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, République Dominicaine, Ethiopie, Ghana, Guatemala.

Votent contre: Islande, Italie, Japon, Luxembourg, Malte, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Norvège, Philippines, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Suède, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Australie, Belgique, Brésil, Canada, Chine, Danemark, France, Grèce.

S'abstiennent: Iran, Irlande, Israël, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaisie, Mexique, Paraguay, Pérou, Thaïlande, Turquie, Uruguay, Venezuela, Argentine, Autriche, Bolivie, République centrafricaine, Colombie, El Salvador, Finlande, Gabon.

Par 58 voix contre 23, avec 21 abstentions, le paragraphe 11 est adopté.

243. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Le représentant de l'Uruguay a demandé un vote séparé sur les paragraphes 6 et 9 du dispositif. J'invite les membres de l'Assemblée générale à voter sur le paragraphe 6.

Par 69 voix contre 12, avec 16 abstentions, le paragraphe 6 est adopté.

244. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): J'invite maintenant les membres de l'Assemblée à voter sur le paragraphe 9.

Par 71 voix contre 6, avec 25 abstentions, le paragraphe 9 est adopté.

245. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je vais maintenant mettre aux voix l'ensemble du projet de résolution [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] tel qu'il a été modifié par l'adoption des amendements [A/L.507]. Un vote par appel nominal a été demandé.

Il est procédé au vote par appel nominal.

Le vote commence par le Libéria, dont le nom est tiré au sort par le Président.

Votent pour: Libéria, Libye, Madagascar, Malaisie, Mali, Mauritanie, Mongolie, Maroc, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Paraguay, Pérou, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie Saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Espagne, Soudan, Syrie, Thaïlande, Togo, Tunisie, Turquie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie, Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Argentine, Bolivie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cameroun, République centrafricaine, Ceylan, Chili, Colombie, Congo (République démocratique du), Cuba, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, République Dominicaine, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Grèce, Guatemala, Guinée, Guyane, Haïti, Hongrie, Inde, Indonésie, Iran, Irak, Côte d'Ivoire, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït.

Votent contre: Malte, Nouvelle-Zélande, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, Etats-Unis d'Amérique, Australie.

S'abstiennent: Luxembourg, Malawi, Mexique, Pays-Bas, Norvège, Suède, Autriche, Belgique, Brésil, Canada, Chine, Danemark, El Salvador, Finlande, France, Islande, Irlande, Israël^{5/}, Italie, Japon.

Par 76 voix contre 7, avec 20 abstentions, le projet de résolution dans son ensemble, tel qu'il a été modifié, est adopté.

246. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant que nous ne levions la séance, un certain nombre de représentants ont demandé la parole, l'un pour exercer son droit à la réponse, les autres pour expliquer leur vote. Je donnerai tout d'abord la parole aux représentants qui désirent expliquer leur vote.

247. M. PEON DEL VALLE (Mexique) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Il est incontestable que le projet de résolution que vient d'adopter l'Assemblée générale [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] contient divers éléments qui sont d'une grande valeur et qui vont dans le sens de l'action remarquable que depuis les premiers jours de leur existence les Nations Unies mènent, souvent avec un succès réel, pour la liberté des peuples soumis au régime d'administration coloniale.

^{5/} La délégation d'Israël a par la suite fait savoir au Secrétariat qu'elle désire que l'on consigne son vote comme ayant été en faveur du projet de résolution dans son ensemble, tel qu'il a été modifié.

248. Si l'on met à part la mission fondamentale qu'elle remplit pour tout ce qui touche directement les problèmes de la guerre et de la paix, on constate qu'il n'est pas d'entreprise plus édifiante et plus pleine de promesses que celle à laquelle se consacre notre organisation pour l'émancipation des peuples qui ne se gouvernent pas encore eux-mêmes. Avec le principe de la non-intervention, le principe de la reconnaissance du droit des peuples à l'émancipation est, et a toujours été, un des principes fondamentaux de la politique extérieure du Mexique.

249. C'est pourquoi, la délégation mexicaine, malgré les réserves que lui inspirent certains paragraphes, non seulement n'a pas voté contre le projet de résolution, mais elle tient maintenant à exprimer toute l'estime que lui inspire ce texte dont l'intention évidente est de défendre les hautes valeurs de la collectivité humaine; elle tient également à féliciter le Comité spécial pour le travail remarquable qu'il a accompli dans l'exercice de ses fonctions ainsi que le Rapporteur de cet important organe des Nations Unies pour les rapports qu'il a préparés.

250. Si elle n'a pas voté contre ce texte, la délégation mexicaine n'a toutefois pas eu le plaisir de voter pour lui, comme elle l'aurait fait n'étaient-ce les réserves et les doutes que lui inspirent divers paragraphes de la résolution.

251. Ainsi, elle craint qu'en demandant, comme le fait le paragraphe 9 du dispositif, que l'on s'abstienne de fournir une assistance "quelconque", par exemple au Gouvernement portugais, on ne sorte des objectifs anticolonialistes que l'on cherche à atteindre dans le cadre de la question à l'étude, perdant de vue en même temps que toute nation, tout peuple, peut à n'importe quel moment avoir besoin d'aide, et qu'en lui donnant cette aide on ne fait qu'obéir aux lois de la solidarité humaine en faveur de la paix et de la santé, voire du progrès, lorsque celui-ci est légitime.

252. Quant au paragraphe 10 du dispositif, il y est question d'une "entente" dont l'existence, tout au moins dans l'acception internationale classique de ce terme, n'est ni constatée ni établie dans les textes qui régissent le fonctionnement de notre organisation.

253. Pour ce qui est du paragraphe 11 du dispositif, la délégation mexicaine ne le juge pas opportun en ce moment, estimant qu'il vaut mieux ne rien décider avant de connaître les conclusions de la Conférence du Comité des dix-huit puissances sur le désarmement au sujet de la question des bases militaires que l'Assemblée générale, sur la recommandation de la Première Commission, lui a renvoyée aux fins d'examen et de rapport.

254. Tels sont, en quelques mots et dans les grandes lignes, quelques-uns des doutes et des réserves qui expliquent que nous n'ayons pas pu voter pour cette résolution, et cela bien que nous souscrivions pleinement, aujourd'hui comme de tout temps, aux objectifs qu'elle poursuit, et qui sont ceux que vise l'action des Nations Unies, je veux parler de la défense du droit de chaque individu à la liberté et du droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes.

255. M. PATRICIO (Portugal) [traduit de l'anglais]: Ma délégation voudrait expliquer brièvement pour quelles raisons elle a émis un vote négatif sur le projet de résolution qui vient d'être adopté. Nous ne nous proposons pas d'étudier en détail cette longue résolution. On peut formuler à son égard de nombreuses objections.

256. Elle ne tient aucun compte de certaines situations coloniales véritables existant dans le monde actuellement alors qu'elle considère comme coloniales d'autres situations qui ne le sont pas. Cette résolution est ainsi entachée d'un esprit partisan qui est contraire aux intentions et aux buts attribués à la teneur des recommandations. Celles-ci sont dirigées contre les intérêts et les droits de certaines puissances et feignent d'ignorer par ailleurs qu'il se trouve des puissances qui ne sont pas mentionnées dans la résolution et qui se rendent coupables en cet instant même d'impérialisme et de colonialisme sous leurs formes les plus brutales. Ces autres puissances sont complètement passées sous silence dans la résolution et apparaissent en fait comme ses partisans, l'une d'entre elles figurant même parmi les auteurs.

257. Cette résolution, en outre, porte gravement atteinte à la Charte de différentes façons. Pour ne donner qu'un exemple, les recommandations concernant la Rhodésie sont une violation flagrante de l'Article 12 de la Charte, qui interdit manifestement à l'Assemblée générale de faire des recommandations sur toute question que le Conseil de sécurité est en train d'examiner. Il ne peut y avoir deux avis sur ce point, tant le mépris de la Charte est évident. La Charte est devenue aujourd'hui une sorte de chiffon de papier entre les mains d'un groupe d'Etats Membres dont la politique arbitraire est maintenant devenue la loi de l'ONU.

258. En outre, ma délégation déplore les termes exagérés dans lesquels le texte tout entier est rédigé et les profonds préjugés qu'il fait apparaître. Ces préjugés sont particulièrement apparents dans la mention qui est faite de mon pays aux cinquième, huitième et neuvième alinéas du préambule ainsi qu'aux paragraphes 9, 10 et 20 du dispositif. Ces passages sont fondés uniquement sur des suppositions fausses et ma délégation les rejette catégoriquement, ainsi que toutes leurs implications.

259. Cela ne signifie pas que nous ne formulons pas d'objection à l'égard des autres paragraphes. Dans ce texte mal conçu, il ne se trouve guère de disposition qui puisse résister à l'épreuve de la vérité, de la justice et même d'un jugement dépourvu de passion. Ma délégation souhaite donc que l'on sache qu'elle proteste énergiquement contre l'emploi des mots "les territoires sous domination portugaise". Ce n'est là rien d'autre qu'un slogan démagogique, qui n'est conforme ni à la vérité, ni à la dignité que l'on attendrait d'une résolution de l'organisation mondiale où nous nous trouvons.

260. Si la majorité des membres de l'Organisation continuent à ne pas tenir compte de la réalité portugaise, cette majorité ne devra pas alors s'étonner que le Portugal ne la suive pas. Ma délégation ne peut qu'exprimer ses réserves les plus formelles au sujet de la résolution qui vient d'être adoptée.

261. M. KAYUKWA (République démocratique du Congo): Ma délégation n'a pas eu l'occasion d'expliquer son vote avant et elle estime devoir le faire maintenant. Nous avons voté en faveur du projet de résolution dans son ensemble et en faveur de chacun de ses paragraphes. La raison en est très simple: ma délégation est profondément convaincue, avant tout, que le phénomène colonial est révolu et doit être éliminé jusqu'à ses séquelles contemporaines. Dès lors, il est aisé de comprendre que ma délégation combattrait toute puissance qui, comme le Portugal, se refuse à notre époque à décoloniser les territoires sous sa domination, ou qui exerce à leur endroit un chantage inadmissible. Nul n'ignore en effet que non seulement le Portugal tue les gens qui vivent sous sa domination, mais aussi qu'il les exporte comme de la marchandise. C'est là un phénomène inacceptable dans notre monde actuel.

262. C'est dans cet ordre d'idées que ma délégation estime que la présence de bases ou de troupes étrangères dans les territoires colonisés constitue un honteux chantage, de sorte que nous ne pouvons l'accepter. Car ces bases non seulement sont installées contre le gré des peuples colonisés, mais en outre répondent à un souci qui va bien souvent au-delà de celui des intérêts réels des territoires intéressés. C'est ainsi que le Portugal, entre autres, utilise l'équipement et les armes fournies par l'OTAN non seulement pour massacrer les habitants de l'Angola et du Mozambique, mais aussi pour accomplir des actes d'agression contre les pays indépendants voisins de ces territoires.

263. Pour les mêmes raisons, ma délégation considère également que les activités de certains intérêts économiques et financiers constituent de sérieuses entraves et un grave handicap au droit des peuples à recouvrer leur dignité d'hommes libres.

264. Ma délégation s'est donc associée aux autres pour condamner les activités de ces intérêts.

265. Voilà, en très peu de mots, quelques raisons parmi tant d'autres qui ont amené ma délégation à voter en faveur du projet de résolution.

266. M. SOLANO LOPEZ (Paraguay) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Ma délégation éprouvait et éprouve encore des réserves et des doutes sérieux au sujet du libellé de certains paragraphes du projet de résolution que l'Assemblée vient d'approuver [A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2] et plus particulièrement au sujet des paragraphes 9 et 11 du dispositif, ce dernier mettant en jeu, à notre avis, les problèmes de la paix et de la sécurité en général.

267. En dépit de ces réserves et de ces doutes, ma délégation a voté pour le projet de résolution dans son ensemble, jugeant qu'il était nécessaire de ne rien faire qui puisse retarder le moment où les peuples dépendants pourront exercer leurs droits imprescriptibles à l'autodétermination et accéder à l'indépendance et à la souveraineté totales. Ma délégation, malgré les réserves qu'elle a mentionnées, estime que la résolution adoptée représente une mesure constructive dans ce sens.

268. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne maintenant la parole au représentant de Cuba, qui souhaite exercer son droit de réponse.

269. M. RODRIGUEZ ASTIAZARAIN (Cuba) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Au cours de la séance d'hier après-midi [1490ème séance], la représentante de la puissance coloniale qui occupe le territoire de Porto Rico a exercé son droit de réponse, essayant, mais en vain, de réfuter les arguments que ma délégation avait invoqués à la séance précédente [1489ème séance] au sujet de la situation à Porto Rico.

270. Comme nous l'avons vu, la délégation des Etats-Unis n'a rien apporté de nouveau, s'en tenant aux arguments rebattus que l'on ne connaît que trop. Etant donné qu'elle n'a pas pu réfuter les arguments de fond avancés par ma délégation, il n'est pas nécessaire que je revienne sur les considérations que ma délégation a formulées sur la question.

271. Les déclarations de la représentante des Etats-Unis peuvent se ramener aux trois affirmations suivantes: premièrement, Porto Rico est un pays autonome et la résolution 748 (VIII) de l'Assemblée générale le reconnaît; deuxièmement, lors des élections de 1952, le peuple porto-ricain s'est déclaré pour cette prétendue autonomie; troisièmement, en 1964, les Porto-Ricains, lors de nouvelles élections, ont réaffirmé leur volonté de conserver leur statut actuel.

272. Il ressort de ces déclarations que dans cette affaire les Etats-Unis veulent laisser les Nations Unies dans l'erreur; c'est pourquoi Cuba estime de son devoir de faire en quelques mots la lumière sur cette volonté de la puissance occupante de continuer à cacher la situation réelle dans laquelle se trouve le peuple frère de Porto Rico.

273. Il faut dire tout d'abord que c'est essentiellement sur la base des données et informations présentées par la puissance coloniale elle-même que la résolution 748 (VIII) de l'Assemblée générale a été adoptée. Quant à la thèse selon laquelle Porto Rico serait une entité politique autonome, tout semble indiquer que la représentante des Etats-Unis n'accorde pas ses idées avec celles qui ressortent des dispositions de la loi No 600, adoptée à la deuxième session du 81ème Congrès des Etats-Unis, en vertu de laquelle ledit changement politique est intervenu à Porto Rico.

274. Dans un rapport à la Chambre des représentants sur le projet de loi S/3336, qui est devenu par la suite la loi No 600, la commission de la Chambre des représentants qui s'occupe des questions intéressant le domaine public a fait observer que les articles de la charte organique de Porto Rico qui régissaient les relations entre les Etats-Unis et Porto-Rico — il s'agit des relations d'ordre politique, social et économique des Etats-Unis avec Porto Rico — demeuraient en vigueur; en d'autres termes, ces sections ne subissaient aucune modification et la loi No 600 n'empêcherait pas le Congrès des Etats-Unis d'intervenir éventuellement pour déterminer le statut politique définitif de Porto Rico.

275. Nous invitons la représentante des Etats-Unis à se reporter, pour se rafraîchir la mémoire, au rapport de la Chambre des représentants No 2275 (House Report No 2275)^{6/}, dans lequel se trouvent ces données officielles.

^{6/} U.S. Code Congressional Service, 81st Congress, Second Session, 1950, p. 2681 à 2684.

276. Il faut ajouter que les auteurs du projet de loi No 600, s'exprimant par l'intermédiaire du sénateur O'Mahoney, ont déclaré: "Aux termes du projet de loi, les rapports entre Porto Rico et le Gouvernement fédéral seraient virtuellement les mêmes."

277. M. Edward G. Miller, sous-secrétaire d'Etat des Etats-Unis qui était alors chargé des affaires intéressant l'Amérique latine, a révélé l'objectif fondamental de la loi No 600 dans une lettre adressée à ladite commission du domaine public, lorsqu'il a déclaré: "Il s'agit d'obtenir l'assentiment officiel des Porto-Ricains en ce qui concerne leurs rapports actuels avec les Etats-Unis."

278. Par ailleurs, pour ce qui est de la question des élections, nous rappellerons que, lorsque la loi No 600 a été soumise à la population porto-ricaine qui, lors du référendum qui a eu lieu le 3 juin 1951, devait l'accepter ou la rejeter, 505 753 personnes seulement, sur un corps électoral de 1 150 000 personnes, se sont rendues aux urnes, 386 812 ayant voté pour la loi et 118 941 ayant voté contre. On constate donc que 644 247 personnes se sont abstenues de voter, soit près de 60 p. 100 du corps électoral, et que 34 p. 100 seulement ont voté pour la loi tandis que 66 p. 100 se sont abstenues ou ont voté contre.

279. Lors des élections de 1952, la population étant invitée à se prononcer non pas sur la question de l'indépendance, mais sur quelques petites modifications sans importance à apporter au statut colonial, 39 p. 100 seulement des électeurs ont voté.

280. Quant aux élections de 1964, nous avons été surpris d'entendre la délégation des Etats-Unis en parler; il s'agissait d'élections normales, celles qui ont lieu tous les quatre ans pour élire des fonctionnaires coloniaux, et elles ne portaient nullement sur la question de l'indépendance.

281. Quoi qu'il en soit, que l'on se fonde sur les faits, la loi, la jurisprudence ou les déclarations des hauts fonctionnaires du Gouvernement des Etats-Unis, on doit constater qu'après avoir subi une occupation militaire pendant 68 ans Porto Rico reste une simple possession des Etats-Unis.

282. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je donne maintenant la parole à la représentante des Etats-Unis d'Amérique en vertu du droit de réponse.

283. Mme ANDERSON (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) [traduit de l'anglais]: Je voudrais répondre à la déclaration qui vient d'être faite. Comme je ne veux pas retarder la levée de la séance de l'Assemblée, je serai très brève. Je rappellerai seulement, au sujet de la déclaration que nous venons d'entendre, déclaration qui déforme complètement les faits, que ma délégation a exposé ici même hier la véritable situation en ce qui concerne le statut autonome de Porto Rico, lequel a été reconnu par l'Assemblée générale et est en vigueur à ce jour.

284. Je voudrais donc inviter les membres de l'Assemblée à se reporter à la déclaration que j'ai faite hier [1491ème séance].

La séance est levée à 19 h 35.

Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, de Sainte-Hélène, de Sainte-Lucie et de Saint-Vincent*L'Assemblée générale,*

Ayant étudié la question des territoires suivants: Antigua, Bahamas, Bermudes, Dominique, Grenade, Guam, îles Caïmanes, îles Cocos (Keeling), îles Gilbert-et-Ellice, île Maurice, îles Salomon, îles Samoa américaines, îles Seychelles, îles Tokélaou, îles Turks et Caïques, îles Vierges américaines, îles Vierges britanniques, Montserrat, Nioué, Nouvelles-Hébrides, Pitcairn, Saint-Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, Sainte-Hélène, Sainte-Lucie et Saint-Vincent,

Ayant examiné les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs à ces territoires³⁰,

Rappelant ses résolutions 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960, 1654 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961, 1810 (XVII) du 17 décembre 1962, 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963, 2066 (XX) du 16 décembre 1965, 2069 (XX) du 16 décembre 1965 et 2189 (XXI) du 13 décembre 1966,

Profondément préoccupée par les renseignements contenus dans le rapport du Comité spécial concernant la persistance de politiques visant notamment à la destruction de l'intégrité territoriale de certains de ces territoires et à l'établissement, par les puissances administrantes, de bases et d'installations militaires en violation des résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée générale,

Déplorant le refus de certaines puissances administrantes d'autoriser des missions de visite de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à se rendre dans ces territoires,

Sachant que, dans ces conditions, l'attention soutenue et l'assistance de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sont nécessaires si l'on veut que les peuples de ces territoires atteignent leurs objectifs, énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies et dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux,

Consciente de la situation géographique et des conditions économiques particulières de certains de ces territoires,

1. Approuve les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs à ces territoires;

2. Réaffirme le droit inaliénable des peuples de ces territoires à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance;

3. Invite les puissances administrantes à appliquer sans retard les résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée générale;

4. Réitère sa déclaration selon laquelle toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale des territoires coloniaux et à établir des bases et des installations militaires dans ces territoires est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale;

5. Demande instamment aux puissances administrantes d'autoriser les missions de visite de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à se rendre dans les territoires et de leur offrir toute leur coopération et toute leur assistance;

6. Décide que l'Organisation des Nations Unies devra prêter toute l'aide nécessaire aux peuples de ces territoires dans les efforts qu'ils déploient pour décider librement de leur statut futur;

7. Prie le Comité spécial de continuer à accorder une attention spéciale à ces territoires et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale, lors de sa vingt-deuxième session, sur l'application de la présente résolution;

8. Prie le Secrétaire général de continuer à prêter toute son assistance dans l'application de la présente résolution.

*La version révisée du compte rendu incorpore le document A/PV. 1500/Add.1 (explications de vote additionnelles).

35. Le PRÉSIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Nous passons maintenant au point 23 de l'ordre du jour et au rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. La discussion générale sur le point 23 s'est terminée le 13 décembre par l'adoption de la résolution 2189 (XXI).

36. Par conséquent, il appartient maintenant à l'Assemblée générale de se prononcer sur le projet de résolution de la Quatrième Commission concernant la Côte française des Somalis [A/6583, par. 11]; sur les projets de résolution concernant Ifni, le Sahara espagnol et la Guinée équatoriale [A/6623, par. 20]; enfin sur les projets de résolution concernant les territoires qui n'ont pas été examinés séparément [A/6628, par. 19].

37. Je donnerai tout d'abord la parole aux représentants qui désirent expliquer leur vote avant que nous mettions aux voix les divers projets de résolution concernant le point que nous examinons actuellement. L'Assemblée votera sur les projets de résolution dans l'ordre où ils ont été présentés par la Commission. Une fois ces opérations terminées, je donnerai la parole aux représentants qui après coup désireront expliquer leur vote.

38. Ces questions ayant été examinées en détail par la Commission et, étant donné le peu de temps dont l'Assemblée dispose pour mener à bien les travaux de sa vingt et unième session, je demanderai aux représentants de faire en sorte que leurs interventions soient aussi brèves que possible.

39. M. KAYUKWA (République démocratique du Congo): Aux 1664ème et 1666ème séances de la Quatrième Commission, ma délégation avait eu l'occasion d'expliquer très largement son vote et sa position sur le projet de résolution [A/6583, par. 11] que nous examinons en ce moment. Elle avait dit notamment qu'elle se réservait sur le paragraphe 4 du dispositif, bien qu'elle eût l'intention de voter en faveur du projet de résolution dans son ensemble. En toute logique, son vote aurait donc dû être émis ainsi. Or, il s'est fait que, par inadvertance, pensant que le vote portait sur l'ensemble du projet de résolution alors qu'il portait sur le paragraphe 4, ma délégation a émis un vote favorable sur ce paragraphe. Aussi s'était-elle réservée le droit de signaler cette erreur et de la faire corriger en Assemblée générale. C'est ce qu'elle fait. Elle tient, ce faisant, à s'excuser si elle a créé pour certaines délégations de faux espoirs ou une satisfaction erronée en leur laissant croire qu'elle avait pu appuyer le paragraphe 4.

40. Cela dit, qu'il me soit permis, très brièvement, comme le Président l'a souhaité, de préciser encore davantage la position de ma délégation sur le projet de résolution que nous examinons. L'attitude de ma délégation lors du vote procédera de deux sentiments, à savoir le souci de considérer les faits et le souci de respecter les principes.

41. Quelles sont les données du problème de la Somalie dite française? Ces données sont les suivantes.

42. Premièrement, nous nous trouvons en face d'un pays dont la situation géographique et la composition ethnique soulèvent, à tort ou à raison, des revendications et des controverses de la part des pays voisins.

43. Deuxièmement, nous nous trouvons en face d'une puissance administrante dont les vues sur la décolonisation sont basées sur le respect total du principe de l'autodétermination, et dont le courage, s'agissant du respect de ces principes, au cours de toute l'histoire de la décolonisation, pourrait difficilement être mis en doute.

44. Troisièmement, nous nous trouvons devant le fait que la Puissance administrante s'est déjà engagée dans le processus de la décolonisation et de l'autodétermination en décrétant, pour l'année prochaine, un référendum sur l'avenir politique du territoire.

45. Enfin, nous nous trouvons aussi devant le fait qu'une certaine inquiétude semble se manifester à propos des conditions politiques présentes, en raison notamment de l'agitation, et en tenant compte de ce que, pour les besoins du maintien de l'ordre public, certaines personnes se sont vues privées de liberté, ou même, il faut le dire, obligées de quitter le territoire.

46. Prenant en considération tous ces facteurs, ma délégation pense qu'elle ne pouvait pas se soustraire à la nécessité, tout d'abord, d'affirmer avec vigueur le principe de l'autodétermination pour ce territoire, aux fins de se conformer à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale et de reconnaître par la même occasion la compétence de l'Organisation des Nations Unies en la matière, ensuite, d'apprécier en stricte justice les efforts de la France dans l'application de ladite résolution en ce qui concerne la Côte dite française des Somalis.

47. En outre, ma délégation ne veut pas se soustraire à la nécessité de signaler également à l'attention de la Puissance administrante l'inquiétude de certains Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à la suite de l'hypothèque que les conditions politiques présentes pourraient faire peser sur la liberté d'expression lors du référendum.

48. Enfin, ma délégation tient à souligner qu'elle souhaite grandement, dans la mesure du possible et dans l'intérêt de la cause de la décolonisation de ce territoire, une libre coopération de la Puissance administrante avec l'Organisation des Nations Unies et, à défaut, avec l'Organisation de l'unité africaine, dans la conviction sincère que cette coopération ne ferait que rehausser davantage le prestige de la Puissance administrante.

49. Concernant les principes de l'autodétermination et de la compétence des Nations Unies, ma délégation a estimé qu'il était nécessaire de les affirmer, en même temps qu'elle estimait utile de porter à la connaissance de la Puissance administrante le souci de tous les Etats Membres — souci partagé d'ailleurs par la Puissance administrante elle-même — de réaliser cette autodétermination dans les meilleurs délais possible.

50. C'est pour ces raisons que, dans le projet de résolution, les clauses ayant trait à ces vues ont eu l'approbation de ma délégation, même si elle eût souhaité, pour certaines d'entre elles, quelques changements de forme qui auraient pu améliorer le texte.

51. En ce qui concerne la présence des Nations Unies, ma délégation a indiqué qu'elle aurait souhaité une libre coopération de la Puissance administrante. Force nous est de constater que la clause relative à cette présence n'épouse pas la forme de cette libre coopération que nous souhaitons tous, mais plutôt celle d'une sorte d'imposition, attitude qui n'a pas été nécessaire pour l'accession à l'indépendance de beaucoup des Membres ici présents et qui heurte d'une manière compréhensible l'honneur d'une délégation dont le pays, à l'encontre de certains autres — qui se refusent à prendre leurs pleines responsabilités pour certains territoires sous leur domination ou refusent de reconnaître aux populations sous leur responsabilité le droit à l'autodétermination —, peut plutôt s'honorer de son passé en matière de décolonisation.

52. Dès lors, cette coopération, parce que imposée, a été refusée par la Puissance administrante elle-même, et ma délégation, par conséquent, a considéré comme inutile la clause en question puisque irréalisable, sans pour autant cesser de croire que cette coopération reste malgré tout souhaitable, sans pour autant être convaincue que l'absence de l'ONU compromettrait nécessairement le déroulement normal du référendum.

53. C'est pour cela que ma délégation s'est abstenue lors du vote sur le paragraphe 4 du projet de résolution en question à la Quatrième Commission et qu'elle compte également s'abstenir en Assemblée générale si un vote séparé est demandé sur ce paragraphe.

54. Je voudrais terminer en rappelant encore une fois que c'est par erreur que ma délégation a voté en commission pour le paragraphe 4 de ce projet de résolution.

55. Le PRÉSIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de donner la parole à l'orateur suivant, j'aimerais rappeler que ces points ont été examinés en détail à la Quatrième Commission, que le temps dont dispose l'Assemblée est très limité et que déjà 11 orateurs sont inscrits. A ce point des débats, les déclarations devraient se limiter à des explications de vote. Peut-être y a-t-il quelque difficulté à définir de façon satisfaisante pour tous ce qu'est une explication de vote, encore que l'objet d'une explication de vote soit très clair. Je fais donc appel à l'esprit de collaboration des représentants pour que leurs déclarations se bornent à des explications de vote, conformément à leurs décisions mêmes.

56. M. AZNAR (Espagne) [traduit de l'espagnol]: En séance plénière, l'Assemblée générale va voter trois projets de résolution qui intéressent directement l'Espagne. Ils émanent de la Quatrième Commission, qui les a adoptés, et traitent des problèmes de la décolonisation qui se posent en Guinée équatoriale, au Sahara espagnol, à Ifni et à Gibraltar.

57. J'ai maintenant à expliquer et à justifier mon vote en ce qui concerne les deux premiers projets [A/6623, par. 20]. Je vous prie, Monsieur le Président, d'en tenir compte, étant donné que je vais expliquer non pas un seul vote mais deux. J'ai en outre le sentiment que, comme représentant officiel de l'Espagne et vu la responsabilité espagnole quant aux points mentionnés, il est peut-être intéressant ici que nous fassions connaître les motifs de notre vote. Je le ferai le plus clairement possible.

58. Je commencerai par le territoire de la Guinée équatoriale, formé politiquement des anciennes provinces de Río Muni et de Fernando Póo. Comme tous les représentants s'en souviendront, l'été dernier, une mission des Nations Unies, invitée à cet effet par l'Espagne, s'est rendue en Guinée équatoriale.

59. De cette tribune même, M. Collier, président du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, a fait voici quelques jours un éloge chaleureux de l'attitude espagnole, vanté l'hospitalité réservée aux visiteurs et la liberté absolue dont ils ont joui pour accomplir leur mission. Cette visite a donné lieu à un rapport assurément très minutieux [A/6300/Rev.1, chap. IX et X] dont le Comité spécial a pris connaissance et qu'il a adopté en temps utile.

60. Selon ma délégation, dans ce document d'information, qui comprend — je me permets de le dire sincèrement mais respectueusement — des choses vraies et des erreurs, comme toute œuvre humaine, il y a plus particulièrement une suggestion, une initiative politique d'importance spéciale et probablement — ou sûrement pourrions-nous dire — riche de possibilités. Cette initiative consiste à proposer la convocation d'une conférence constitutionnelle, à laquelle seraient représentés tous les secteurs de l'opinion publique guinéenne. Cette conférence discuterait avec la plus grande liberté et la plus grande responsabilité tous les problèmes ayant trait à la décolonisation de la Guinée équatoriale.

61. Aussitôt après avoir pris connaissance du rapport du Sous-Comité, le Gouvernement espagnol a fait sienne cette idée d'une conférence, et le 10 décembre, le représentant de l'Espagne, M. Pinies, en vertu d'instructions que, comme chef de la délégation espagnole, je lui avais moi-même données, a déclaré devant le Comité spécial que notre gouvernement avait décidé de convoquer dans les premiers mois de 1967 une conférence constitutionnelle à laquelle tous les secteurs de l'opinion publique du territoire pourraient et devraient envoyer des représentants, librement désignés.

62. Dans notre esprit, on s'est acheminé vers la décolonisation de la Guinée équatoriale, dans des conditions irréprochables et sûres. Ainsi était donnée au peuple guinéen l'occasion décisive de se sentir maître de son destin, artisan unique de son avenir, à la fois pour les grands problèmes de l'autodétermination et pour les problèmes moins importants et secondaires.

63. Il a semblé à ma délégation qu'au moment de voter sur le projet de résolution II dont je parle, la réaction logique devant les projets très concrets du Gouvernement espagnol devait être de ne rien faire qui, de près ou de loin, directement ou indirectement, signifie interférence, limitation, orientation de la faculté éminemment libre que doit avoir le peuple de la Guinée équatoriale de décider ce qui lui convient, ce qu'il croit devoir le mieux aider à réaliser ses idéaux.

64. En résumé, ce peuple doit conserver sa volonté absolument libre à travers les débats et les accords de la conférence constitutionnelle. Or, comme nous estimions et continuons d'estimer que le projet de résolution ne tient pas suffisamment compte de ce principe fondamental de la conférence souveraine, nous avons choisi de nous abstenir au moment du vote.

65. Vous me ferez, j'espère, la justice de penser que notre abstention s'accompagne de rectitude dans le jugement et d'honnêteté dans la conduite.

66. Je dois ajouter quelques mots au sujet de la Guinée équatoriale, parce que j'ai le sentiment qu'ils peuvent présenter un certain intérêt. Pour le Gouvernement espagnol — et j'attacherais du prix à ce que tous les représentants en prennent acte —, tout ce qui constituerait une ingérence vis-à-vis de la conférence constitutionnelle, tout ce qui préjugerait ou prédéterminerait les résolutions de ladite conférence est, comme je l'ai déjà dit, inopportun, parce que cela reviendrait à diminuer les facultés multiples des forces politiques et sociales du peuple guinéen. C'est à ce peuple et à lui seul qu'il appartient de dire oui à ceci et non à cela, et peut-être à d'autres choses encore. C'est là ce que signifie le mot "autodétermination".

67. Vous savez maintenant que si ce peuple de Guinée, par le truchement de la conférence, dans la plus libre des décisions, décide de se prononcer pour l'indépendance, l'Espagne appliquera strictement les recommandations formulées par les Nations Unies d'accélérer la préparation spéciale du pays afin que cette indépendance devienne réalité dans le plus bref délai possible.

68. A cet effet, et conformément à l'offre que ma délégation a faite devant la Quatrième Commission, l'Espagne, je le répète, convoquera dans les premiers mois de l'année 1967 la conférence constitutionnelle à laquelle j'ai fait allusion. A cette conférence seront représentés les autorités autonomes et les différents groupes politiques et sociaux qui constituent la communauté de la Guinée équatoriale, et les résolutions qui y seront adoptées seront communiquées au Secrétaire général des Nations Unies.

69. La conférence constitutionnelle tant de fois citée entraînera — du moins peut-on le prévoir — des modifications de structure politique, lesquelles permettront au peuple de la Guinée équatoriale, et à lui seul, sans ingérence d'aucune sorte, d'accéder par lui-même à l'indépendance. L'Espagne offre toute l'assistance nécessaire pour que ce processus puisse se dérouler et que la Guinée obtienne la confirmation de sa personnalité internationale complète, couronnée, le moment venu, par son admission comme Membre de plein droit aux Nations Unies, lesquelles seraient dès lors, et conformément à la Charte et de la manière la plus efficace, garantes de son intégrité territoriale.

70. Voilà, ni plus ni moins, ce que je tenais à dire au sujet du projet de résolution II adopté par la Quatrième Commission, en ce qui concerne la Guinée équatoriale. Je tenais à faire ces quelques remarques sur le mécanisme et les mesures recommandées par ce projet, solutions qui, nous le croyons en toute conscience, ne sont pas de nature à aider à la décolonisation du territoire. Telle est la raison pour laquelle ma délégation s'est abstenue lors du vote sur ce projet.

71. J'aimerais maintenant expliquer notre vote sur le projet de résolution I qui concerne l'Ifni et le Sahara espagnol. Là encore, comme pour le problème de la Guinée équatoriale, je dirai, avec votre permission, que tous — c'est-à-dire ceux qui ont présenté ce projet, ceux qui ont voté pour et la délégation de l'Espagne, qui a voté contre — nous interprétons la même mélodie, mais sur des instruments différents. Ainsi que l'écrivait un homme politique espagnol éminent du temps de ma jeunesse, je dirai que nous sommes d'accord quant aux critères essentiels, mais que nos opinions diffèrent sur les moyens.

72. Le critère essentiel est que le Sahara espagnol doit être décolonisé par la voie de l'autodétermination. Quant aux moyens, il s'agit de savoir quelle est la voie ou quelles sont les voies que nous devons suivre pour parvenir à ce but.

73. Mon gouvernement a pensé que les tâches et les formalités qu'implique la décolonisation future pourraient être précédées d'une visite officielle des Nations Unies en territoire saharien, comme cela s'est produit à Fernando Póo et au Rio Muni. C'est ce que le représentant permanent adjoint de l'Espagne avait déclaré devant la Quatrième Commission dans les termes ci-après:

"La délégation espagnole est prête à engager des consultations avec le Secrétaire général en vue de désigner un comité qui se rendrait au Sahara espagnol. Ce comité ferait lui-même, sur place, une étude objective de la situation dans le territoire et se ferait une opinion à ce sujet, confirmant la sin-cérité de l'Espagne en matière de décolonisation. Un groupe de personnes impartiales et désintéressées, ne représentant pas les pays qui ont manifesté un intérêt direct pour le Sahara espagnol ou qui ont des ambitions territoriales à son endroit, déterminerait quelle est la vraie situation dans le territoire et quels en sont les aspects essentiels. Cela permettrait à la Commission de se faire une idée de ce que l'Espagne a accompli jusqu'ici, de se procurer des renseignements précis, de connaître les plans envisagés et de savoir ce que désire la population autochtone sur son avenir, désir qui se réalisera, en temps utile, par le processus d'autodétermination^{2/}."

74. Nous pensons sincèrement que, à propos du vote, nous nous trouvons dans une situation analogue à celle que j'ai décrite au sujet de la Guinée équatoriale. Pour la seconde fois, je répète — et je crois que l'Assemblée donnera à mes paroles leur portée exacte — que l'Espagne a de nouveau invité les Nations Unies à se rendre dans un territoire non autonome qu'elle administre. Comment mieux prouver notre sincérité et notre désir de collaboration? N'était-il pas raisonnable d'attendre qu'ait été effectuée cette visite, afin que l'Organisation puisse, elle-même, sans préjugés et sans parti pris, recueillir les renseignements indispensables sur le Sahara espagnol et sur tout ce que sa situation a de particulier? Ne fallait-il pas attendre que le sous-comité qui se rendra dans ce territoire ait rédigé son rapport et que celui-ci ait fait l'objet d'un débat devant permettre d'apporter à chacun les renseignements nécessaires?

75. Vous voudrez bien admettre qu'un Etat qui ouvre toutes grandes les portes de ses territoires non autonomes aux Nations Unies pour que l'Organisation puisse observer la situation et procéder aux études indispensables a lieu d'être douloureusement surpris de constater que l'on a répondu à la cordialité et à l'ampleur de cette initiative par une résolution où nous croyons discerner des craintes et les signes d'une méfiance manifeste. La dignité des Nations Unies n'est pas une notion vaine. Si l'Espagne n'était pas résolue à décoloniser la Guinée équatoriale, aurait-elle invité les Nations Unies à se rendre dans ce territoire? Si l'Espagne n'avait pas également le désir d'appliquer le principe d'autodétermination au Sahara en vue de sa décolonisation, aurait-elle proposé aux Nations Unies d'aller constater elles-mêmes et sur place les réalités sahariennes? Nul ne peut le croire. Telles sont les vraies raisons et telle est l'authentique signification du vote négatif que nous avons émis à la Quatrième Commission.

76. Ce vote ne signifie nullement que nous revenons le moins du monde sur nos décisions de décolonisation; il maintient au contraire et confirme les assurances que nous avons données que le principe d'autodétermination sera, dans la liberté, dans la justice et dans la dignité, appliqué au Sahara espagnol. Précisément parce que c'est cela que nous voulons, nous avons demandé de ne pas introduire dans ce processus des éléments de trouble, de confusion, voire même de tension.

77. La visite des Nations Unies devait avoir lieu sans condition d'aucune sorte. Mais il est bien entendu qu'aucune condition ne devait être dictée à quiconque, ni aux Nations Unies ni à la Puissance invitante. Autrement dit, la visite devait avoir lieu dans une atmosphère exempte de passion et dans un cadre exempt de préjugé ou d'idée préconçue. Je crois donc que notre position est claire, que notre vote est expliqué et sa portée véritable définie. Je le répète une fois encore, nous sommes pleinement d'accord avec les auteurs du projet de résolution sur l'essentiel, et nos opinions ne divergent que sur les modalités d'application.

78. Du territoire d'Ifni, que dirai-je qui ne fasse que répéter ce que vous savez déjà? Une négociation bilatérale peut parfaitement résoudre le problème, compte tenu des intérêts de la population. La méthode recommandée dans le projet de résolution dont il est question est selon nous beaucoup plus confuse et moins efficace.

79. Je n'insisterai pas sur ce point parce que l'Assemblée brûle du désir de clore sa session et que, je crois, toutes les délégations partagent cet espoir avec vous, Monsieur le Président. Avant de quitter cette tribune, je demande que, lorsque le projet de résolution I sur la question d'Ifni et du Sahara espagnol sera mis aux voix, les mots "En consultation avec les Gouvernements du Maroc et de la Mauritanie", qui figurent au paragraphe 4 du dispositif, fassent l'objet d'un vote séparé. Nous le demandons parce que ce texte introduit aux Nations Unies une notion sans précédent qui, si elle devait être retenue, entraînerait des complications inouïes, comme le savent tous ceux qui ont étudié le problème.

80. Nous venons d'adopter le projet de résolution concernant la Côte française des Somalis [A/6583, par. 11], ce qui est admirable. Dans ce projet concernant un territoire auquel les voisins, la Somalie et l'Ethiopie, déclarent s'intéresser si vivement, il n'est pas question de la nécessité de les consulter. Ce projet, nous venons de l'adopter. Or, dans le projet concernant le Sahara espagnol, il en est question. Il y a donc là deux poids et deux mesures, ce qui nous paraît injuste; par conséquent, aux arguments que j'ai déjà invoqués, et qui sont les plus profonds, s'ajoute cette raison technique, qui vient à l'appui des considérations précédentes.

M. Solomon (Trinité-et-Tobago), vice-président, prend la présidence.

81. M. NSANZE (Burundi): Mon pays est appelé, bien que benjamin des républiques qu'a déjà connues le monde, à se classer dans la catégorie des Etats que l'histoire peut qualifier de champions de l'indépendance totale et de la rupture complète de liens fondés sur la force.

82. La nature, qui a situé le Burundi à l'intersection des quatre points cardinaux de l'Afrique; l'histoire, qui l'a englobé dans la communauté humaine dominée; l'espèce humaine, qui l'a accueilli dans son sein, nécessitent l'appui par ma délégation de toutes les résolutions plaidant pour la libération des peuples encore soumis à la domination coloniale. En conséquence, mon intervention se réfère aux huit premiers points figurant à notre ordre du jour.

^{2/} Cette déclaration a été faite à la 1660ème séance de la Quatrième Commission, dont le compte rendu officiel est publié sous forme résumée.

83. Les raisons invoquées ci-dessus montrent clairement que la République dernière née ne peut se dérober à sa vocation libératrice. Le droit des peuples à disposer d'eux-mêmes découle de l'essence même de l'homme. En d'autres termes, l'existence humaine d'un peuple quelconque s'identifie à une nécessité automatique de la jouissance de l'indépendance politique. Le seul fait qu'un peuple est là justifie ses revendications naturelles de ses droits politiques et ses aspirations fondamentales à la souveraineté. Peu importe son niveau de formation intellectuelle, peu importe ses dimensions géographiques, peu importe même son importance numérique.

84. Le droit économique est également inhérent à la nature humaine. Les visées de la domination coloniale se ramènent à la formule suivante: "Coloniser, c'est se mettre en rapport avec des pays neufs, pour profiter des ressources de toute nature de ces pays, les mettre en valeur dans l'intérêt national..."^{3/} Il s'agit bien entendu de l'intérêt national de la puissance colonisatrice. Je cite Mérignhac, dans son Précis de législation et d'économie coloniales.

85. En conséquence, maintenir le système colonial sur un peuple quelconque équivaut à réclamer et à renier tout à la fois la condition humaine. Voilà la contradiction explosive, caractéristique principale du dogme colonial.

86. Toute frustration de ce droit radical à l'indépendance est à rayer de l'histoire humaine, que cette frustration soit perpétuée par d'autres puissances, ou qu'elle le soit par le trio dominateur de l'Afrique centrale, bastion de la colonisation en Afrique: je veux parler de Lisbonne, qui pratique une colonisation de type classique avec sa propre rhétorique; de Pretoria, avec son recours à des formules rituelles de déshumanisation systématisée incarnée dans l'apartheid; de Salisbury, avec son culte de l'avatar colonial caractérisé par la collusion Londres-Salisbury dans une malice politique inextricable.

87. Voilà les raisons pour lesquelles mon pays ne peut se désolidariser de ceux qui œuvrent pour le triomphe du droit et de la liberté des peuples.

88. Je remercie le Président pour sa patience et sa bienveillance et l'Assemblée pour son attention.

89. M. OWONO (Cameroun): La délégation camerounaise votera en faveur de tous les projets de résolution contenus dans les rapports de la Quatrième Commission sur le point 23 de l'ordre du jour.

90. Nous avons déjà expliqué clairement nos positions à l'égard de ces projets de résolution, que nous avons adoptés dans leur ensemble, et nous voulons les réaffirmer également en séance plénière. J'aurais voulu arrêter mes remarques après avoir fait cette déclaration, mais j'estime que l'exposé que vient de faire le représentant de l'Espagne nécessite qu'à cette occasion nous apportions les précisions que nous avons déjà données en Quatrième Commission [1665ème séance] concernant la Guinée équatoriale.

91. J'ai noté à ce sujet également avec plaisir que l'Espagne se conformera à la recommandation du Comité spécial tendant à tenir une conférence avant l'indépendance, conférence qui portera sur les modalités de transfert de souveraineté à la population locale de ce territoire.

92. Evidemment, il est naturel que le Gouvernement espagnol, comme l'a souligné tout à l'heure le représentant de l'Espagne, émette des réserves sur certaines recommandations. Nous pensons qu'un choix sélectif de ces recommandations n'est pas, à notre avis, conforme à toute la bonne volonté dont l'Espagne a fait preuve en ce qui concerne l'envoi de représentants du Comité spécial dans le territoire. Si elle retient quelques-unes de ces recommandations et n'approuve pas les autres — ce qui a motivé son abstention en Quatrième Commission, abstention qu'elle renouvellera également tout à l'heure —, ma délégation voudrait en ce moment demander des éclaircissements sur ce que nous avons considéré comme étant la base même de la politique espagnole, politique qui a valu à l'Espagne les félicitations du Comité spécial, de la Quatrième Commission, des représentants du Cameroun et des gouvernements africains pour la compréhension dont elle a fait preuve en cette manière.

93. En Quatrième Commission, la délégation camerounaise avait exprimé son appréhension et sa crainte que l'attitude du Gouvernement espagnol remette en cause les résultats de la Loi fondamentale de 1963, approuvée par un référendum et qui a consacré l'unité du territoire. Je suis heureux d'apprendre que le Gouvernement espagnol acceptera le verdict populaire qui sera le fruit de la conférence, mais nos doutes sont justifiés du fait que la demande d'éclaircissements que nous avons formulée, à savoir que les résultats de la conférence n'aient pas comme conséquence de remettre en cause un fait acquis, c'est-à-dire l'intégrité territoriale, n'a pas été satisfaite. Nos craintes étaient justifiées par le fait que, à Madrid même, le Président du gouvernement autonome local avait déjà signalé, comme l'avait fait le Comité spécial, qu'il existait une minorité agissante qui interprétait les intérêts des résidents espagnols dans le territoire. Nous ne sommes pas spécialement inquiets lorsqu'il s'agit de cette interprétation des intérêts espagnols des résidents parce que nous tenons compte de l'appui du Gouvernement espagnol, appui qui a été consacré dans une loi fondamentale qui a reconnu l'unité du territoire.

94. Mais si ces assurances ne sont pas données en Quatrième Commission et si l'on nous dit ici qu'il faudra simplement accepter toutes les décisions de la conférence, nous sommes encore en droit, en assemblée plénière, de nous demander si nos doutes ne sont pas fondés et si la position des Bubis de Fernando Póo et du colonat espagnol dans l'île — ce que le Comité spécial a appelé les intérêts étrangers — ne serait pas, comme l'a dit le Président du Conseil du gouvernement à Madrid, de nature à modifier l'objet même de la Loi fondamentale et la raison pour laquelle toutes les délégations ont félicité le Gouvernement espagnol.

95. Je ne m'attends pas à d'autres précisions sur ce point. J'estime que si la conférence constitutionnelle traduit simplement le désir du peuple, uniquement du peuple, en vue de son intérêt, nul doute que ce sera dans le cadre de l'unité du territoire. Les réserves que je fais actuellement et le doute que j'emporte de cette tribune viennent du fait que je n'ai pas entendu une réponse affirmative selon laquelle aucune éventualité de cette nature ne résultera de la conférence.

^{3/} A. Mérignhac, Précis de législation et d'économie coloniales, Paris, Société du Recueil Sirey, édit., 1912, p. 205.

96. Ma délégation se réserve le droit de soumettre à nouveau cette question lors de la vingt-deuxième session, si nos doutes actuels sont fondés.

97. Je voudrais terminer en félicitant également l'Espagne, comme nous l'avons toujours fait. Ce pays entretient de bonnes relations avec le mien; la délégation camerounaise est en droit de dire ici à l'Espagne que nous avons salué avec un vif plaisir toutes les initiatives qui ont été prises pour la décolonisation de ses territoires voisins, mais que nous serons en mesure de dire — chaque fois que nous pensons qu'une initiative n'est pas suffisamment poussée ou suffisamment objective, précisément à cause de l'amitié qui lie nos deux pays — que la notion d'intégrité territoriale est l'une de celles qui doivent conditionner justement toutes les autres démarches vers l'indépendance.

98. Lorsque, tout à l'heure, le représentant de l'Espagne a dit que c'est au moment où la Guinée équatoriale sera admise à l'Organisation des Nations Unies qu'elle pourra elle-même préserver son intégrité territoriale, nous ne pensons pas que l'unité du territoire ait été mise en cause; au contraire, nous supposons que cela signifie que ce territoire est indépendant en tant qu'unité et que c'est parce que ce territoire sera Membre de l'Organisation des Nations Unies que, ipso facto, le Gouvernement espagnol cessera d'assurer la sauvegarde de son intégrité et de sa souveraineté. Telle est la conception que nous avons dégagée des conclusions du représentant de l'Espagne sur ce sujet. J'ose espérer que nous n'avons pas mal compris, que c'est exactement cela qu'il a voulu dire.

99. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): L'Assemblée va maintenant voter sur les projets de résolution dont elle est saisie. Des votes enregistrés ont été demandés sur toutes les propositions qui vont être soumises à l'Assemblée générale, au titre du point 23 de l'ordre du jour.

Trinité-et-Tobago, Tunisie, Ouganda, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie.

Votent contre: Australie, Belgique, Canada, Danemark, France, Grèce, Islande, Japon, Luxembourg, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Norvège, Philippines, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Suède, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, États-Unis d'Amérique.

S'abstiennent: Argentine, Autriche, Bolivie, Brésil, Chine, Costa Rica, République Dominicaine, Equateur, El Salvador, Finlande, Guatemala, Haïti, Iran, Irlande, Israël, Italie, Côte d'Ivoire, Laos, Madagascar, Îles Maldives, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Pérou, Thaïlande, Turquie, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Par 72 voix contre 18, avec 27 abstentions, le paragraphe 4 du dispositif du projet de résolution II est adopté.

110. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je mets maintenant aux voix le projet de résolution dans son ensemble.

Le vote est enregistré électroniquement.

Votent pour: Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Argentine, Bolivie, Brésil, Bulgarie, Birmanie, Burundi, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cambodge, Cameroun, République centrafricaine, Ceylan, Tchad, Chili, Chine, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), République démocratique du Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, Equateur, El Salvador, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinée, Haïti, Honduras, Hongrie, Inde, Indonésie, Iran, Irak, Irlande, Israël, Côte d'Ivoire, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Laos, Liban, Lesotho, Libéria, Libye, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaisie, Mali, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Pérou, Philippines, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Espagne, Soudan, Syrie, Togo, Trinité-et-Tobago, Tunisie, Turquie, Ouganda, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, République arabe unie, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Haute-Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie.

Votent contre: néant.

S'abstiennent: Australie, Autriche, Belgique, Canada, Danemark, République Dominicaine, Finlande, France, Grèce, Islande, Italie, Japon, Luxembourg, Îles Maldives, Pays-Bas, Nouvelle-Zélande, Nicaragua, Norvège, Portugal, Afrique du Sud, Suède, Thaïlande, Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord, États-Unis d'Amérique.

Par 93 voix contre 0, avec 24 abstentions, le projet de résolution II dans son ensemble est adopté.

109. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Je mets maintenant aux voix le projet de résolution II. Il a été demandé un vote enregistré séparé sur le paragraphe 4 du dispositif et, sauf obligation, nous voterons d'abord sur ce paragraphe.

Le vote est enregistré électroniquement.

Votent pour: Afghanistan, Albanie, Algérie, Bulgarie, Birmanie, Burundi, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, Cambodge, Cameroun, République centrafricaine, Ceylan, Tchad, Chili, Colombie, Congo (Brazzaville), République démocratique du Congo, Cuba, Chypre, Tchécoslovaquie, Dahomey, Ethiopie, Gabon, Ghana, Guinée, Honduras, Hongrie, Inde, Indonésie, Irak, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Kenya, Koweït, Liban, Lesotho, Libéria, Libye, Malawi, Malaisie, Mali, Mauritanie, Mexique, Mongolie, Maroc, Népal, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Panama, Pologne, Roumanie, Rwanda, Arabie saoudite, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Singapour, Somalie, Espagne, Soudan, Syrie, Togo, ^{6/} Après coup, la délégation de Belgique a fait connaître au Président qu'elle demandait qu'il soit pris acte du fait qu'elle avait voté pour le projet de résolution.

M. Pazhwak (Afghanistan) reprend la présidence.

112. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Certains représentants ont demandé à fournir après coup des explications de vote. Dix orateurs sont inscrits pour des explications de vote. J'ai déjà appelé l'attention des Membres sur le temps limité qui nous est imparti. Je tiens, à ce propos, à exprimer ma gratitude aux représentants de la Somalie, de l'Ethiopie, du Maroc et de la Mauritanie, qui ont accepté de ne pas prendre la parole bien qu'ils figurent sur la liste des orateurs pour explication de vote; il est bien entendu que leurs déclarations apparaîtront in extenso dans le compte rendu, telles qu'elles seront remises par écrit au Secrétariat. Ceci m'encourage à faire appel à tous les autres Membres dont les noms figurent sur la liste des orateurs pour qu'ils s'efforcent d'accepter également cette solution. Au cas où certains d'entre eux s'y refuseraient, je leur demanderais, comme l'Assemblée en a décidé, de bien vouloir limiter leur intervention à une explication de vote et de renoncer à présenter des observations autres que des explications de vote, qui pourraient entraîner d'autres représentants à exercer leur droit de réponse.

113. Compte tenu donc des explications que je viens de fournir et s'il n'y a aucune objection, je conclurai que les autres représentants sont d'accord, à savoir qu'ils ne prendront pas la parole, mais que le texte de leur déclaration sera remis au Secrétariat pour être inséré en entier dans le compte rendu sténographique.

114. Si, comme je crois le comprendre, le représentant de l'Espagne n'accepte pas cette solution, je lui demanderai de bien vouloir se limiter à expliquer son vote.

115. Si d'autres orateurs adoptent la même attitude, je leur adresse le même appel. Je tiens d'ores et déjà à exprimer ma gratitude aux quatre délégations qui ont accepté cet arrangement, et je serais reconnaissant à ceux qui eux aussi renonceraient à prendre la parole.

116. Je donne la parole au représentant de l'Espagne pour une explication de vote.

117. M. AZNAR (Espagne) [traduit de l'espagnol]: Je regrette très vivement de devoir encore retenir l'attention de l'Assemblée, mais je ne puis empêcher qu'au cours de la même séance trois projets de résolution ont fait l'objet d'un scrutin qui intéressent directement l'Espagne. C'est la raison pour laquelle j'ai jugé nécessaire de dire quelques mots pour expliquer mon vote.

118. L'Espagne a voté en faveur du projet de résolution adopté par la Quatrième Commission au sujet de Gibraltar [A/6628, par. 20] et a voté dans le même sens à l'Assemblée générale parce qu'elle estime que cette résolution contient des éléments constructifs. En effet, elle demande l'accélération de la décolonisation de Gibraltar en collaboration avec l'Espagne, et rappelle les termes de l'accord général du 16 octobre 1964, adopté par le Comité des Vingt-Quatre et ratifié lors de sa vingtième session par l'Assemblée générale dans la résolution 2070 (XX).

119. Cet accord invitait l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni à rechercher une solution négociée du problème en tenant compte de la résolution 1514 (XV). Comme les représentants s'en souviendront, le paragraphe 6 de cette résolution stipule que toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies.

120. La résolution sur laquelle nous venons de voter demande également que le processus de décolonisation de Gibraltar ne soit ni retardé ni entravé et affirme que l'Assemblée générale a toute compétence en la matière, réaffirmant ainsi le caractère politique et l'aspect colonial du problème et excluant la possibilité de faire sortir la question Gibraltar du cadre politique et de la renvoyer à une instance juridique internationale.

121. La résolution recommande enfin à l'Espagne et au Royaume-Uni, au cours de leurs négociations, de tenir compte des intérêts de la population, ce que mon pays avait déjà demandé au Comité des Vingt-Quatre en 1963 et qui fut repris, dans les mêmes termes que maintenant, dans les conclusions du Comité des Vingt-Quatre qui datent de 1964.

122. Aux yeux de l'Espagne, les habitants de Gibraltar ont certains intérêts que l'Espagne respecte entièrement. A cet effet, ma délégation, au sein de la Quatrième Commission s'est exprimée dans ces termes:

"a) Que les deux pays entament sans retard des négociations sur le statut destiné à protéger les intérêts des résidents du territoire de Gibraltar lorsque la situation coloniale qui y existe aura disparu, ce statut devant être enregistré par les Nations Unies; b) au cas où l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni n'arriveraient pas à se mettre d'accord sur un tel statut, le Gouvernement espagnol serait disposé à soumettre un projet de statut à l'intention des habitants de Gibraltar à l'examen et à l'approbation éventuels du Secrétaire général de l'ONU; ce statut reconnaîtrait aux habitants de Gibraltar tous les droits dont un groupement humain quelconque peut disposer, à l'exception de la possession d'une partie du territoire espagnol, qui est d'ailleurs contraire à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, qui préconise au paragraphe 6 de son dispositif le respect de l'intégrité territoriale et de l'unité nationale des pays colonisés^{7/}."

123. Je ne dissimulerai pas, et la délégation espagnole s'en est expliquée à la Quatrième Commission, qu'au cours des six mois de négociations hispano-britanniques, le Royaume-Uni n'a dit mot à l'Espagne des intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar qui devront être protégés une fois le rocher décolonisé. Le Royaume-Uni s'est borné à discuter avec nous de titres juridiques remontant à 1713, ainsi que d'autres prétendus titres acquis, selon la Grande-Bretagne, à la fin du siècle dernier sur un territoire espagnol contigu à Gibraltar.

124. La première fois que nous avons entendu parler concrètement et spécifiquement des intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar, et de ce que pourraient être ces intérêts, c'est samedi dernier, devant la Quatrième Commission [1679ème séance], de la bouche d'un pétitionnaire de Gibraltar. En exposant les revendications de ceux qu'il représente, le pétitionnaire a donné l'impression qu'il n'avait confiance qu'en la protection offerte par la Grande-Bretagne et qu'il n'en avait pas la moindre en la garantie des Nations Unies, offerte par l'Espagne pour que les intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar soient connus et protégés. En réalité, ledit pétitionnaire ne défendait pas uniquement ses intérêts, ce qui eût été logique et acceptable; il défendait aussi le maintien du contrôle souverain de la Grande-Bretagne sur la base militaire de Gibraltar.

^{7/} Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, vingt et unième session, Quatrième Commission, 1671ème séance, par. 27.

125. J'espère que les négociations fondées sur le consensus du Comité des Vingt-Quatre, sur la résolution 2070 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale et sur celle que nous venons d'adopter permettront à l'Espagne et au Royaume-Uni, conformément aux propositions de l'Espagne, dans les délais que prévoit cette dernière résolution et avec l'aide du Secrétaire général, de trouver une solution négociée qui mettra un terme à la situation coloniale de Gibraltar, ce que nous demandent les Nations Unies depuis 1964.

126. Avant de quitter cette tribune, je voudrais ajouter que je forme les vœux les plus enthousiastes pour que soit bientôt résolu le problème des îles Malouines, à propos duquel le peuple argentin, qui possède un grand nombre de titres historiques, d'arguments juridiques et humains, attend une décision qui rétablisse l'empire de la justice dans ce territoire dont la souveraineté doit lui revenir sans délais injustifiables.

127. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Les représentants de l'Italie, des Etats-Unis d'Amérique, de l'Equateur et du Mexique m'ont fait savoir qu'ils acceptent ma proposition, comme l'ont fait les autres délégations dont j'ai annoncé qu'elles avaient accédé à ma requête.

128. Le seul orateur qui demeure inscrit est le représentant du Royaume-Uni à qui je donne la parole.

129. Lord CARADON (Royaume-Uni) [traduit de l'anglais]: J'aurais été heureux, Monsieur le Président, de répondre à l'appel que vous nous avez adressé, mais le représentant de l'Espagne vient de parler de cette question qui intéresse directement mon pays. Je voudrais donc très brièvement expliquer les raisons pour lesquelles ma délégation a voté ce matin en faveur du projet de résolution.

130. Au cours du débat remarquable qui s'est déroulé en Quatrième Commission au sujet de Gibraltar, il y a eu une question et une conclusion d'importance fondamentale. Cette conclusion a permis à ma délégation de voter en faveur de la résolution; car elle dit simplement qu'il est essentiel de tenir compte des vœux de la population.

131. Nous nous réjouissons vivement de la quasi-unanimité de la Quatrième Commission en faveur de ce principe fondamental et de l'unanimité que nous constatons aujourd'hui. Nous sommes heureux que la délégation espagnole ait accepté d'inscrire ce principe dans la résolution. Il était nécessaire et juste d'insister pour que ce principe fondamental fût reconnu et respecté, car l'Article 73 de la Charte pose le principe de la primauté des intérêts des habitants. Ayant ce principe en l'esprit, je n'ai que trois autres choses à dire très brièvement.

132. Premièrement, nous sommes ravis que cet amendement ait été proposé et accepté, car jamais nous ne pourrions accepter que décolonisation veuille dire incorporation de Gibraltar à l'Espagne contre le gré de la population. Avec l'amendement, la résolution est sur ce point sans équivoque.

133. Deuxièmement, rien ne saurait en quoi que ce soit préjuger du type de décolonisation le mieux adapté à la situation de Gibraltar. La résolution elle-même n'en préjuge pas.

134. Troisièmement, je déclare que nous sommes disposés à poursuivre les négociations, avec l'espoir et l'intention d'arriver à une conclusion satisfaisante.

135. Pour ces raisons, il nous a été agréable de voter en faveur de la résolution.

136. Le PRESIDENT (traduit de l'anglais): Avant de passer au point suivant de l'ordre du jour, je donne la parole au représentant de la Côte d'Ivoire.

137. M. AKE (Côte d'Ivoire): J'ai demandé la parole au nom de ma délégation pour rectifier le vote que ma délégation a émis sur le projet de résolution concernant la Côte française des Somalis. Comme on peut le remarquer facilement dans le rapport [A/6583, par. 10], en Quatrième Commission ma délégation s'était abstenue sur le paragraphe 4 du dispositif et sur l'ensemble du texte. Or, il s'est trouvé qu'ici même, la délégation de la Côte d'Ivoire n'a pas pris part au vote sur le paragraphe 4 et a voté pour l'ensemble du texte. Je voudrais dire — comme nous l'avons déclaré à la Quatrième Commission [1666ème séance] — qu'à notre avis, dans cette affaire, l'intervention des Nations Unies est inopportune et qu'une telle résolution est inutile.

138. Par conséquent, ma délégation voudrait qu'il soit consigné au compte rendu que la délégation de la Côte d'Ivoire s'abstient sur le paragraphe 4 du dispositif et s'abstient également sur l'ensemble du texte.

Point 23 de l'ordre du jour

APPLICATION DE LA DECLARATION SUR L'OCTROI DE L'INDEPENDANCE
AUX PAYS ET AUX PEUPLES COLONIAUX

TERRITOIRES N'AYANT PAS ETE EXAMINES SEPEAREMENT

Rapport de la Quatrième Commission

Rapporteur : M. Mohsen Sadigh ESFANDIARY (Iran)

1. A sa 162ème séance, le 21 septembre 1966, le Bureau a décidé de recommander à l'Assemblée générale l'inscription à l'ordre du jour d'une question intitulée "Application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux : rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux". A sa 163ème séance, le 22 septembre, le Bureau a décidé de recommander à l'Assemblée générale de renvoyer à la Quatrième Commission tous les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial relatifs à des territoires déterminés.
2. A sa 1415ème séance plénière, le 24 septembre, l'Assemblée générale a, conformément aux recommandations du Bureau, inscrit la question à son ordre du jour et renvoyé à la Quatrième Commission les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial relatifs à des territoires déterminés.
3. A sa 1633ème séance, le 10 novembre, la Quatrième Commission a décidé d'examiner, en en faisant un seul point de son ordre du jour, les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial concernant les territoires qu'elle n'étudierait pas séparément. On trouvera ci-après la liste des territoires intéressés, avec l'indication des chapitres correspondants du rapport du Comité spécial :

Gibraltar	(A/6300/Add.8, chapitre XI)
Ile Maurice, îles Seychelles et Sainte-Hélène	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XIV)

Iles Gilbert et Ellice, île Pitcairn et îles Salomon	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XV)
Iles Nioué et Tokélaou	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XVI)
Nouvelles-Hébrides	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XVII)
Iles Samoa américaines, Guam et Territoire sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XVIII)
Territoire sous tutelle de Nauru, Papua et Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle Guinée, et îles Cocos (Keeling)	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XIX)
Brunéi	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XX)
Hong-kong	(A/6300/Add.9, chapitre XXI)
Iles Vierges américaines, îles Vierges britanniques, Antigua, Dominique, Grenade, Montserrat, Saint-Christophe- et Nièves et Anguilla, Sainte-Lucie, Saint-Vincent, Barbade, Bermudes, Bahamas, îles Turks et Caïques, îles Caïmanes, îles Falkland (Malvinas) et Honduras britannique	(A/6300/Add.10, chapitre XXII)

4. La Commission a examiné cette question à ses 1669ème, 1671ème, 1672ème, 1674ème, 1675ème, 1677ème, 1678ème et 1679ème séances, entre le 13 et le 17 décembre.

5. A la 1669ème séance, le 13 décembre, le Rapporteur du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux a présenté les chapitres du rapport du Comité relatifs à la question examinée, dont la liste figure plus haut.

6. La Quatrième Commission était saisie des communications ci-après adressées au Secrétaire général :

a) Lettres datées du 20 janvier 1966 et du 2 mars 1966 envoyées par le représentant permanent de l'Espagne au sujet de Gibraltar (A/6242 et A/6277):

b) Lettres datées du 9 février 1966, du 22 août 1966 et du 15 décembre 1966 envoyées par le représentant permanent de l'Argentine au sujet des îles Falkland (Malvinas) (A/6261 et Add.1; A/C.4/682);

c) Lettres datées du 9 février 1966, du 22 août 1966, du 8 décembre 1966 et du 15 décembre 1966 envoyées par le représentant permanent du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord au sujet des îles Falkland (Malvinas) (A/6262 et Add.1; A/6568; A/C.4/683);

d) Lettre datée du 2 mars 1966 envoyée par le représentant permanent adjoint du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande du Nord au sujet de Gibraltar (A/6278).

7. A l'occasion de l'examen de cette question, la Commission a fait droit aux demandes d'audition suivantes :

Pétitionnaires	Territoires intéressés	Séance au cours de laquelle l'audition a été accordée
M. Milton Cato, chef politique du parti travailliste de Saint-Vincent (A/C.4/680)	Saint-Vincent	1664ème
M. A. Hodgson, coprésident adjoint du Progressive Labour Party des Bermudes (A/C.4/681)	Bermudes	1669ème
M. Joshua Hassan, premier ministre, et M. Peter J. Isola, premier ministre adjoint de Gibraltar (A/C.4/684)	Gibraltar	1676ème
M. Salvador Costa Vizosa, Mlle Mercedes López Clavijo, M. Francisco Dieguez Natera, membres du Sindicato de los Trabajadores españoles en Gibraltar (A/C.4/684/Add.1)	Gibraltar	1677ème

8. A la 1672ème séance, le 15 décembre, M. A. Hodgson a prononcé devant la Commission une déclaration concernant les Bermudes et a répondu aux questions que lui ont posées les membres de la Commission.
9. A la 1679ème séance, le 17 décembre, M. Joshua Hassan et M. Peter J. Isola ont prononcé devant la Commission des déclarations concernant Gibraltar et ont répondu aux questions que leur ont posées les membres de la Commission.
M. Salvador Costa Vizosa, Mlle Mercedes López Clavijo et M. Francisco Dieguez Natera ne se sont pas présentés devant la Commission. M. Milton Cato ne s'est pas non plus présenté devant la Commission.
10. La discussion générale sur la question a eu lieu aux 1669ème, 1671ème, 1674ème et 1675ème séances, entre les 13 et 16 décembre.
11. De sa 1677ème à sa 1679ème séance, les 16 et 17 décembre, la Commission a examiné deux projets de résolution sur la question, concernant, l'un, Gibraltar (A/C.4/L.863 et Add.1) et l'autre les territoires suivants : Antigua, Bahamas, Bermudes, Dominique, Grenade, Guam, îles Caïmanes, îles Cocos (Keeling), îles Gilbert et Ellice, île Maurice, îles Salomon, îles Samoa américaines, îles Seychelles, îles Tokélaou, îles Turks et Caïques, îles Vierges américaines, îles Vierges britanniques, Montserrat, Nioué, Nouvelles-Hébrides, Pitcairn, Saint-Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, Sainte-Hélène, Sainte-Lucie, Saint-Vincent et Territoires sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique (A/C.4/L.866). La Commission a également prié le Président de dégager le consensus de la Commission en ce qui concerne les îles Falkland (Malvinas). On trouvera dans les sections I à III ci-dessous un compte rendu des débats de la Commission sur le projet de consensus présenté par le Président, ainsi que le texte des projets de résolution.

III. ANTIGUA, BAHAMAS, BERMUDES, DOMINIQUE, GRENAD, GUAM, ILES CAIMANES, ILES CCCOS (KEELING), ILES GILBERT-ET-ELICE, ILE MAURICE, ILES SALOMON, ILES SAMOA AMERICAINES, ILES SEYCHELLES, ILES TOKELACU, ILES TURKS ET CAIQUES, ILES VIERGES AMERICAINES, ILES VIERGES BRITANNIQUES, MONTSEERRAT, NICUE, NOUVELLES-HEBRIDES, PITCAIRN, SAINT-CHRISTOPHE-ET-NIEVES ET ANGUILLA, SAINTE-HELENE, SAINTE-LUCIE ET SAINT-VINCENT, TERRITOIRE SOUS TUTELLE DES ILES DU PACIFIQUE

17. A la 1679ème séance, le 17 décembre, le représentant de l'Inde a présenté un projet de résolution au nom de l'Algérie, de l'Arabie Saoudite, du Burundi, du Congo (République démocratique du), de l'Ethiopie, du Ghana, de l'Inde, de l'Indonésie, de l'Irak, du Kenya, du Koweït, de la Libye, du Mali, de la Mauritanie, de l'Ouganda, du Pakistan, de la République arabe unie, de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, du Sierra Leone, de la Somalie, du Soudan, de la Syrie, du Yémen, de la Yougoslavie et de la Zambie (A/C.4/L.866).

18. A la même séance, la Commission a voté sur le projet de résolution. Sur la demande des Philippines, le membre de phrase "et à l'établissement, par les puissances administrantes, de bases et d'installations militaires" au quatrième alinéa du préambule a fait l'objet d'un vote séparé. Ce membre de phrase a été adopté par 48 voix contre 11, avec 23 abstentions. Le vote a eu lieu par appel nominal et les voix se sont réparties comme suit :

Ont voté pour :	Algérie, Arabie Saoudite, Birmanie, Bulgarie, Cameroun, Ceylan, Chili, Chypre, Congo (République démocratique du), Cuba, Espagne, Ethiopie, Ghana, Guinée, Hongrie, Inde, Indonésie, Irak, Jamaïque, Jordanie, Koweït, Libéria, Libye, Mali, Maroc, Mauritanie, Mongolie, Niger, Nigéria, Pakistan, Pologne, République arabe unie, République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie, République socialiste soviétique d'Ukraine, République-Unie de Tanzanie, Roumanie, Sénégal, Sierra Leone, Soudan, Syrie, Tchécoslovaquie, Togo, Trinité et Tobago, Tunisie, Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques, Yémen, Yougoslavie, Zambie.

RECOMMANDATIONS DE LA QUATRIEME COMMISSION

19. La Quatrième Commission recommande à l'Assemblée générale d'adopter les projets de résolution suivants :

/...

PROJET DE RESOLUTION II

Question d'Antigua, des Bahamas, des Bermudes, de la Dominique, de la Grenade, de Guam, des îles Caïmanes, des îles Cocos (Keeling), des îles Gilbert et Ellice, de l'île Maurice, des îles Salomon, des îles Samoa américaines, des îles Seychelles, des îles Tokélaou, des îles Turks et Caïques, des îles Vierges américaines, des îles Vierges britanniques, de Montserrat, de Nioué, des Nouvelles-Hébrides, de Pitcairn, de Saint-Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, de Sainte-Hélène, de Sainte-Lucie et de Saint-Vincent et du Territoire sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique

L'Assemblée générale,

Ayant étudié la question des territoires suivants :

Antigua, Bahamas, Bermudes, Dominique, Grenade, Guam, îles Caïmanes, îles Cocos (Keeling), îles Gilbert et Ellice, île Maurice, îles Salomon, îles Samoa américaines, îles Seychelles, îles Tokélaou, îles Turks et Caïques, îles Vierges américaines, îles Vierges britanniques, Montserrat, Nioué, Nouvelles-Hébrides, Pitcairn, Saint-Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, Sainte-Hélène, Sainte-Lucie, Saint-Vincent et Territoire sous tutelle des Iles du Pacifique,

Ayant examiné les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs à ces territoires^{1/},

Rappelant ses résolutions 1514 (XV) du 14 décembre 1960, 1654 (XVI) du 27 novembre 1961, 1810 (XVII) du 17 décembre 1962, 1956 (XVIII) du 11 décembre 1963, 2066 (XX) du 16 décembre 1965, 2069 (XX) du 16 décembre 1965 et 2189 (XXI) du 13 décembre 1966,

Profondément préoccupée par les renseignements contenus dans le rapport du Comité spécial concernant la persistance de politiques visant notamment à la destruction de l'intégrité territoriale de certains de ces territoires et à l'établissement, par les puissances administrantes, de bases et d'installations militaires en violation des résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée générale,

Déplorant le refus de certaines puissances administrantes d'autoriser des missions de visite de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à se rendre dans ces territoires,

^{1/} A/6300/Add.9, chap. XIV à XIX, A/6300/Add.10, chap. XXII.

Sachant que, dans ces conditions, l'attention soutenue et l'assistance de l'Organisation des Nations Unies sont nécessaires si l'on veut que les peuples de ces territoires atteignent leurs objectifs, énoncés dans la Charte des Nations Unies et dans la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux,

Consciente de la situation géographique et des conditions économiques particulières de certains de ces territoires,

1. Approuve les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux relatifs à ces territoires;

2. Réaffirme le droit inaliénable des peuples de ces territoires à l'autodétermination et à l'indépendance;

3. Invite les puissances administrantes à appliquer sans retard les résolutions pertinentes de l'Assemblée générale;

4. Réitère sa déclaration selon laquelle toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale des territoires coloniaux et à établir des bases et des installations militaires dans ces territoires est incompatible avec les buts et les principes de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale;

5. Demande instamment aux puissances administrantes d'autoriser les missions de visite de l'Organisation des Nations Unies à se rendre dans les territoires et de leur offrir toute leur coopération et toute leur assistance;

6. Décide que l'Organisation des Nations Unies devra prêter toute l'aide nécessaire aux peuples de ces territoires dans les efforts qu'ils déploient pour décider librement de leur statut futur;

7. Prie le Comité spécial de continuer à prêter une attention spéciale à ces territoires et de faire rapport à l'Assemblée générale, à sa vingt-deuxième session, sur l'application de la présente résolution;

8. Prie le Secrétaire général de continuer à prêter toute son assistance dans l'application de la présente résolution.

XI et XIV à XXII; A/C.4/680)

DISCUSSION GENERALE

14. Le PRESIDENT rappelle que la Commission a décidé (1633ème séance) que tous les autres territoires non énumérés séparément au paragraphe 5 du document A/C.4/669 seront examinés conjointement à l'exception des chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial relatifs à la Côte française des Somalis, à Ifni, au Sahara espagnol et à la Guinée équatoriale.

15. M. ALJUBOURI (Irak), en qualité de rapporteur du Comité spécial, présente les chapitres du rapport du Comité spécial (A/6300/Rev.1) relatifs aux territoires n'ayant pas été examinés séparément. Les chapitres XI, XIV à XIX et XXII contiennent un compte rendu de l'examen, par le Comité spécial, des territoires suivants: Gibraltar; île Maurice, îles Seychelles et Sainte-Hélène; îles Gilbert et Ellice, Pitcairn et îles Salomon; Nioué et îles Tokélaou; Nouvelles-Hébrides; Samoa américaines, Guam et Territoire sous tutelle des îles du Pacifique; Territoire sous tutelle de Nauru, Papua et Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée et îles Cocos (Keeling); îles Vierges américaines, îles Vierges britanniques, Antigua, Dominique, Grenade, Montserrat, Saint-Christophe-et-Nièves et Anguilla, Sainte-Lucie, Saint-Vincent, Barbade, Bermudes, Bahamas, îles Turks et Caïques, îles Caïmanes et îles Falkland (Malvinas).

16. Le chapitre relatif au Territoire sous tutelle de Nauru, au Papua et au Territoire sous tutelle de la Nouvelle-Guinée (ibid., chap. XIX) demeure également en rapport avec le point 13 de l'ordre du jour (Rapport du Conseil de tutelle). Aux chapitres XX, XXI et XXII figurent des renseignements sur trois territoires: le Brunéi, Hong-kong et le Honduras britannique, que le Comité spécial n'a pas pu examiner durant l'année 1966.

17. M. HOPE (Royaume-Uni) rappelle qu'au cours de l'année qui vient de s'écouler quatre territoires (la Guyane, le Botswana, le Lesotho et la Barbade) ont cessé d'être sous administration britannique pour devenir indépendants et que l'on a fixé une date prochaine pour l'accession à l'indépendance de l'Arabie du Sud et du Souaziland. Il décrit ensuite la situation dans les petits territoires qui restent encore sous administration du Royaume-Uni.

18. Dans l'île Maurice, on a établi un nouveau système électoral, en consultation avec le peuple et en parfait accord avec tous les partis politiques. On prépare actuellement les élections et il convient de rappeler que, si le nouvel organe législatif élu le demande, l'indépendance sera octroyée à l'île après une période de six mois de pleine autonomie interne.

19. Aux îles Seychelles, le Secrétaire aux colonies du Royaume-Uni a proposé d'adopter le suffrage universel des adultes. De plus, on a nommé un commissaire constitutionnel chargé de visiter le territoire, de consulter tous les secteurs de l'opinion et de recommander les étapes nécessaires à l'évolution constitutionnelle future des îles. Tant le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni que les partis politiques du territoire ont accepté la proposition du Commissaire, à savoir l'instauration immédiate du suffrage universel des adultes et la création d'un conseil unique chargé de fonctions exécutives et législatives.

20. A Sainte-Hélène, le Gouverneur a procédé à des consultations et a recommandé qu'une grande partie des pouvoirs soit transférée aux habitants autochtones. Selon ce nouveau système, le Conseil consultatif serait un conseil législatif comprenant seulement deux membres fonctionnaires et 12 membres élus. Il sera créé un conseil exécutif qui comprendra les présidents de chacun des comités du Conseil législatif. Ces propositions, acceptées par le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et introduites dans une nouvelle constitution qui est entrée en vigueur il y a un mois, ont été fondées sur l'accord quasi unanime de la population du territoire.

21. Le Comité spécial a mentionné dans son rapport (ibid., chap. XIV) quelques atolls de l'océan indien qui étaient administrés auparavant par l'île Maurice et les îles Seychelles. La délégation du Royaume-Uni a déjà exposé sa position sur la question et se bornera à répéter que les nouvelles dispositions relatives à ces atolls dans lesquels il n'y a pas d'habitants autochtones et où pratiquement personne ne réside en permanence, ont été arrêtées en consultation avec les Gouvernements de l'île Maurice et des îles Seychelles et avec leur accord et celui de leurs membres élus. Le 16 novembre 1966, le Secrétaire à la défense du Royaume-Uni a déclaré sans équivoque que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'avait nullement formé le projet de créer des bases militaires dans ces atolls.

22. Dans les îles Salomon, le Conseil législatif a examiné et adopté formellement des propositions tendant à augmenter le nombre de membres élus et, sous réserve des limitations administratives imposées par le climat et la géographie, à organiser des élections au suffrage direct. Ces propositions doivent être soumises prochainement au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni pour approbation, afin qu'elles puissent être réalisées en 1967.

23. De la même manière ont été publiées au cours de l'année, dans les îles Gilbert et Ellice, des propositions visant à supprimer le Conseil consultatif, qui serait remplacé par une Chambre des représentants dont la grande majorité serait élue au suffrage universel des adultes. La moitié des membres du Conseil exécutif serait choisie parmi ces membres élus. Toutes ces propositions ont été examinées et approuvées par les membres du gouvernement local et soumises au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni pour examen.

24. Les consultations entre le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et le Gouvernement français sur l'évolution des Nouvelles-Hébrides se sont également poursuivies. Il faut reviser et moderniser divers aspects de l'administration interne du territoire qui font obstacle au progrès et, à cette fin, ont eu lieu divers entretiens à l'échelon ministériel et à l'échelon des hauts fonctionnaires.

25. Même à Pitcairn, qui est une île minuscule comptant seulement 88 habitants, ont été apportées des modifications considérables au système d'administration, et les habitants dirigent leurs propres affaires sous un régime pleinement électif.

26. En ce qui concerne la région des Caraïbes, le représentant du Royaume-Uni rappelle que l'on peut trouver une analyse détaillée des nouvelles propositions formulées concernant Antigua, Saint-Christophe, la Dominique, la Grenade, Sainte-Lucie et Saint-Vincent, dans le rapport du Sous-Comité III du Comité spécial (ibid., chap. XXII, annexe).

27. En octobre 1966, a eu lieu une conférence constitutionnelle sur les îles Vierges britanniques au cours de laquelle on est parvenu à un parfait accord sur les diverses nouvelles mesures constitutionnelles à prendre, notamment, l'établissement du poste de ministre principal et d'un système ministériel.

28. En raison de la superficie extrêmement réduite de son territoire, les propositions concernant les autres îles n'ont pas porté sur Montserrat, où le gouvernement élu concentre ses efforts sur le développement économique. Le Gouvernement britannique est disposé à réunir une conférence pour discuter de l'avenir constitutionnel de Montserrat quand les partis politiques locaux seront prêts à entamer une telle discussion.

29. En novembre, une conférence constitutionnelle sur les Bermudes s'est réunie à Londres, au cours de laquelle il a été décidé, à la suite d'un débat prolongé avec les représentants de tous les partis de l'organe législatif élu, qu'il serait établi une constitution écrite, instauré un système ministériel et créé une chambre basse élue et qu'il serait procédé à la revision des systèmes électoraux. Deux groupes minoritaires ont formulé des réserves. Il y a lieu d'observer également que l'on a abaissé à 21 ans l'âge minimum des électeurs et que l'on a supprimé la voix supplémentaire accordée aux propriétaires, de manière que, désormais, les Bermudes seront dotées d'un système de suffrage universel des adultes fondé sur le principe "à chacun une voix".

30. Aux Bahamas, le Gouverneur, sur les conseils du Premier Ministre, a dissous l'Assemblée, et le 10 janvier 1967 doivent avoir lieu des élections générales au suffrage universel des adultes fondées sur le principe "à chacun une voix" dans des circonscriptions électorales délimitées par une commission indépendante.

31. Aux îles Caïmanes, un comité de l'Assemblée législative récemment élue prépare actuellement un rapport sur les réformes constitutionnelles qu'il convient de proposer au Secrétaire aux colonies du Royaume-Uni. Les représentants des îles Turks et Caïques ont proposé d'établir un lien administratif avec l'extérieur et il a été convenu que le Gouverneur des Bahamas serait également Gouverneur des îles Turks et Caïques.

32. Enfin, ont eu lieu des entretiens entre le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni et le Gouvernement espagnol sur la question de Gibraltar, conformément à la résolution adoptée par le Comité spécial le 17 novembre 1966 (ibid., chap. XI, par. 66). Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est disposé à poursuivre ces entretiens bilatéraux, desquels les Nations Unies seront tenues informées. M. Hope n'indiquera la position de son gouvernement sur le fond de la question que si d'autres délégations jugent nécessaire d'agir de même. Des entretiens ont lieu également avec le Gouvernement argentin concernant les îles Falkland, conformément à la résolution 2065 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale et les Nations Unies seront également informées de ces entretiens. En ce qui concerne le Honduras britannique, un médiateur nommé par le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis, comme suite à une demande du Royaume-Uni et du Guatemala, continue à s'acquitter de ses fonctions.

33. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a déclaré qu'il est disposé à accorder l'indépendance aux territoires qui la désirent et peuvent la conserver. Dans les autres territoires, où l'ensemble de la population exprime le vœu d'obtenir rapidement l'indépendance, les préparatifs faits pour l'octroyer ont déjà considérablement progressé. Cependant, dans un grand nombre de petits territoires, il s'agit principalement de favoriser un progrès immédiat sur la voie d'une plus large autonomie interne, sans préjudice des décisions qui pourraient être prises ultérieurement au sujet de leur statut définitif. De toute manière, tant le rythme que l'orientation du progrès doivent dépendre, avant tout, des désirs de la population elle-même et, sur cette base, comme l'indiquent tous les renseignements, les progrès sont rapides et sûrs.

34. M. CAMPORA (Argentine) souligne que, dans sa résolution 2065 (XX), l'Assemblée générale a reconnu expressément l'existence d'un différend entre les Gouvernements de la République argentine et du Royaume-Uni sur la question des îles Malvinas. Ces îles, qui font indiscutablement partie du territoire argentin, ont été soumises par la force à la domination coloniale du Royaume-Uni au moyen d'une action armée qui a été déclenchée en 1833 et à la suite de laquelle a été supplantée l'autorité de l'Argentine qui exerçait dans les îles ses droits légitimes de souveraineté. Plus tard a été installée dans les îles, par l'intermédiaire de la puissance colonisatrice, une population adventive n'accusant aucun accroissement naturel et dont le chiffre est actuellement de 2 079 personnes seulement.

35. L'Assemblée générale, dans sa résolution 2065 (XX), a classé le cas des îles Malvinas dans la catégorie des cas caractéristiques de colonialisme auxquels s'applique la résolution 1514 (XV). C'est pour appliquer les dispositions de cette résolution ou pour mettre un terme au statut colonial dont souffrent les îles Malvinas que l'Assemblée générale a invité les Gouvernements de la République argentine et du Royaume-Uni à poursuivre les négociations en vue de trouver une solution pacifique au problème. Par les mots: mettre fin au statut colonial dont souffrent ces îles, on ne peut entendre que leur restitution à la République argentine car, de cette manière, seront réalisés avec équité et objectivité les buts de la résolution 2065 (XX).

36. Dans ce sens, et répondant à l'invitation qui leur était adressé dans cette résolution, les Gouvernements de l'Argentine et du Royaume-Uni ont publié, en janvier 1966, un communiqué commun selon lequel ils étaient d'accord pour poursuivre sans délai les entretiens. Par la suite, ont eu lieu à Londres des entretiens tendant à trouver une solution et ils se poursuivent actuellement. Le Secrétaire général a été informé de tous ces faits, afin de tenir le Comité spécial dûment au courant du déroulement des négociations. De son côté, le Comité spécial a pris acte des faits en question dans son présent rapport à l'Assemblée générale.

37. Le représentant de l'Argentine exprime sa reconnaissance au Comité spécial et en particulier à son Sous-Comité III pour le travail qu'ils ont accompli en ce qui concerne les situations coloniales dans les pays d'Amérique. Il se réserve également le droit, le cas échéant, d'intervenir ultérieurement dans le débat.

38. M. APPIAH (Ghana) demande au représentant du Royaume-Uni combien de fonctionnaires britanniques sont compris dans les 88 habitants de Pitcairn. Il voudrait savoir en outre quelles autres catégories de personnel britannique se trouvent dans l'île et à combien s'élèvent le revenu national et les dépenses annuelles de l'administration.

39. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) traitant de la question de l'île Maurice, tient à faire observer que le système de vote existant dans ce territoire est un des plus compliqués du monde, comme l'a reconnu le Comité spécial lui-même.

40. En ce qui concerne les atolls administrés antérieurement par l'île Maurice et les îles Seychelles, le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie rappelle que lorsque le Comité spécial a examiné cette question et a demandé au Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni de ne pas y établir de base militaire, cette demande était due à ce que le New York Times avait mentionné la possibilité de l'installation d'une base militaire du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis dans cette région. M. Malecela serait reconnaissant à la délégation du Royaume-Uni de confirmer à nouveau qu'elle n'a aucune intention d'établir une base dans ces atolls.

41. M. ZOHRAB (Nouvelle-Zélande) déplore qu'il reste seulement à la Quatrième Commission si peu de temps pour étudier les petits territoires, dont les populations, lorsqu'il s'agit de décider de leur propre avenir, se heurtent à des problèmes qui exigent une étude approfondie et une grande compréhension. Dans les grandes colonies, la solution classique de l'indépendance souveraine s'est révélée l'aboutissement logique et souhaité de la libre détermination. En revanche, pour bon nombre de petits territoires, la solution est beaucoup moins évidente. Sans que soit nié leur droit de libre détermination, les populations doivent s'attacher à concilier le désir naturel qu'a toute communauté humaine de s'administrer elle-même avec les exigences que comporte la souveraineté absolue, notamment celle de disposer de certaines ressources. Tout pays souverain moderne doit posséder un certain appareil étatique, même simplifié, être capable de sauvegarder son intégrité et faire face par ses propres moyens à une proportion raisonnable de ses dépenses de fonctionnement. S'il ne peut satisfaire à ces exigences, il s'expose alors à certains risques. Dans certains petits territoires, où les droits des populations ne sont pas moindres que ceux des collectivités plus importantes mais qui n'ont pas le minimum de ressources humaines et matérielles nécessaires, la réponse peut être trouvée dans des solutions autres que l'indépendance souveraine — par exemple l'association avec un autre pays auquel ces territoires sont unis par des liens historiques, culturels ou ethniques. Cependant, c'est aux populations du territoire lui-même qu'il appartient de décider de leur propre avenir et on ne peut résoudre leurs problèmes en prétendant leur appliquer simplement certaines formules, même si elles ont sans aucun doute fait leurs preuves dans d'autres cas.

42. Le dilemme devant lequel se trouvent les petits territoires apparaît plus clairement lorsque l'on examine des cas précis. La Nouvelle-Zélande, par exemple, est encore responsable de la destinée de l'île Nioué, qui a 5 000 habitants, et de celle des îles Tokélaou, qui en comptent moins de 2 000, territoires dont les ressources naturelles sont extrêmement limitées.

43. Pour faire connaître la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, la Nouvelle-Zélande, agissant en collaboration avec le Département de la tutelle et des territoires non autonomes, a fait traduire cette résolution dans les langues vernaculaires, en a fait diffuser le texte dans les îles et a organisé des réunions pour que les populations puissent faire connaître leurs vues. Les habitants des îles ont conscience de leurs droits et savent que la Nouvelle-Zélande est favorable à l'abrogation du statut colonial. Cependant, ils souhaitent que l'association avec la Nouvelle-Zélande se poursuive et paraissent désirer pour le moment qu'elle dure indéfiniment.

44. Les possibilités qui s'offrent aux habitants des îles sont théoriquement illimitées mais c'est à eux qu'il appartient de dire quelles sont les possibilités réelles. Même lorsque la Nouvelle-Zélande, jugeant possible et logique que les habitants des îles Tokélaou souhaitent constituer une association avec l'un ou l'autre des archipels voisins, s'est engagée à supporter pendant de nombreuses années les dépenses relatives à l'administration de ce nouveau territoire pour le cas où les habitants des îles Tokélaou décideraient d'en faire partie, ces derniers ont préféré conserver leurs liens avec la Nouvelle-Zélande. Ils souhaitent apparemment conserver les droits qui leur sont garanties actuellement, à savoir celui d'entrer sans restriction en Nouvelle-Zélande et celui d'obtenir des subventions financières directes et une assistance technique, et ils estiment que l'économie de la Nouvelle-Zélande est la seule économie stable de la région qui puisse leur fournir une telle aide.

45. Quant aux 5 000 habitants de Nioué, eux aussi semblent, du moins pour le moment, vouloir conserver des liens directs avec la Nouvelle-Zélande. En 1962, quatre possibilités leur ont été offertes: l'indépendance, l'intégration à un Etat indépendant, l'appartenance à une éventuelle fédération polynésienne, et enfin l'autonomie dans l'association avec un autre Etat. L'Assemblée de Nioué a repoussé les trois premières possibilités et a déclaré à l'époque ce qu'elle a depuis répété à plusieurs occasions, à savoir qu'à ce stade elle n'était disposée qu'à progresser sur la voie de l'autonomie. Le premier pas dans cette direction a été accompli lorsqu'on a mis en place un régime ministériel embryonnaire. De plus, on sait que depuis 1962 l'Assemblée législative exerce son contrôle financier sur toutes les recettes, y compris les subventions accordées par la Nouvelle-Zélande.

46. Les populations des groupes d'îles considérés n'ont jusqu'à présent pris aucune décision définitive quant à leur avenir, mais apparemment elles ne veulent pas de la solution classique de l'indépendance souveraine et entendent envisager d'autres possibilités. Elles peuvent prendre une décision définitive lorsqu'elles le désirent: la Nouvelle-Zélande, quant à elle, continuera, quelle que soit cette décision, à leur fournir son assistance. La tâche principale de la Commission dans les cas de ce genre est de veiller non pas à ce que les populations intéressées se prononcent pour tel ou tel statut, mais à ce qu'elles puissent exercer librement leur droit de libre détermination au moment où elles le voudront et comme elles le voudront.

47. M. BARDER (Royaume-Uni), exerçant son droit de réponse, se loue que le représentant de l'Argentine ait fait allusion en termes cordiaux aux entretiens qui ont lieu entre le Gouvernement argentin et le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni au sujet des îles Falkland et exprime l'espoir que ces entretiens aboutiront à une solution du problème qui soit pacifique et acceptable pour tous. Cependant, la délégation britannique ne peut accepter les affirmations du représentant de l'Argentine qui contestent la souveraineté du Royaume-Uni sur les îles Falkland, point sur lequel son gouvernement n'a pas de doutes, et elle n'accepte pas non plus une grande partie de la déclaration du représentant de l'Argentine sur le problème et ses origines. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni désire, cependant, que le différend concernant les îles Falkland ne porte pas atteinte aux bons rapports qui existent entre le Royaume-Uni et l'Argentine.

48. En ce qui concerne les observations qu'a formulées le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie sur le système électoral compliqué de l'île Maurice, le représentant du Royaume-Uni note que l'unique critère sur lequel on doit se fonder pour juger ce système est la question de savoir s'il est ou non acceptable pour le peuple de l'île Maurice et si celui-ci l'accepte en fait. Etant donné que tout le peuple et tous les partis de l'île Maurice l'acceptent, il est relativement moins important que le Comité spécial le juge difficile à comprendre.

49. Répondant à la première question posée par le représentant du Ghana, le représentant du Royaume-Uni indique qu'il n'y a pas de fonctionnaires britanniques à Pitcairn. La délégation du Royaume-Uni examinera immédiatement les autres questions qui ont été soulevées.

50. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie), exerçant son droit de réponse, déplore que la délégation du Royaume-Uni juge d'importance mineure la question du système électoral compliqué qui existe dans l'île Maurice; il semble qu'elle essaie de minimiser le droit du peuple de cette île à déterminer son propre avenir. En disant que la situation constitutionnelle complexe est une question qui relève exclusivement du peuple, il ne tient pas compte du fait que les Nations Unies doivent être informées des options éventuelles qui sont offertes au peuple. A ce sujet, le représentant de la Tanzanie rappelle que le peuple du Tanganyika a accepté, parce qu'il n'avait pas d'autre choix, une constitution en vertu de laquelle les 22 000 habitants européens avaient autant de représentants que les millions d'autochtones du territoire. Il est possible que le peuple de l'île Maurice se trouve dans une situation analogue et M. Malecela note qu'il est toujours opportun de pouvoir faire un choix.

DISCUSSION GÉNÉRALE (suite)

1. M. GROS ESPIELL (Uruguay) signale que la délégation de son pays a déjà eu l'occasion de préciser sa position à propos de chacun des nombreux territoires, groupés sous ce point, au sein du Comité spécial chargé d'étudier la situation en ce qui concerne l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux. Le représentant de l'Uruguay déclare vouloir réitérer cette position et réaffirmer l'applicabilité de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale à tous ces territoires ainsi que le devoir qui incombe aux Nations Unies d'en assurer la décolonisation rapide et totale. M. Gros Espiell tient en outre à souligner de nouveau l'utilité de l'envoi de missions de visite des Nations Unies dans de petits territoires où existent des problèmes particuliers afin que leurs peuples parviennent à une autodétermination et à une indépendance authentiques, en pleine connaissance de cause.

2. En ce qui concerne la question des îles Falkland (Malvinas), M. Gros Espiell rappelle que, dès l'année 1964, où le Sous-Comité III du Comité spécial a analysé ce problème, le représentant de l'Uruguay a exposé en détail l'opinion de son pays et a réaffirmé la compétence du Comité pour connaître de cette question, expliquant l'impossibilité juridique de l'existence de colonies étrangères en Amérique, la non-reconnaissance d'acquisitions territoriales fondées sur la force et l'applicabilité, à ce cas précis, du paragraphe 6 de la résolution 1514 (XV). Cette thèse a trouvé son écho dans les conclusions et recommandations adoptées par le Sous-Comité en date du 18 septembre 1964^{1/}, et, un an après, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 2065 (XX) par laquelle elle invitait les Gouvernements de l'Argentine et du Royaume-Uni à poursuivre les négociations recommandées par le Comité spécial en vue de trouver une solution pacifique au problème, en tenant dûment compte des dispositions et des objectifs de la Charte des Nations Unies et de la résolution 1514 (XV), ainsi que des intérêts de la population des îles Falkland (Malvinas). L'Uruguay a été l'un des auteurs du projet de résolution, et son représentant a déclaré (1558^e séance) qu'il ne s'agissait pas de discuter de la question des droits de possession, mais de mettre un terme à un état de fait dépourvu de tout fondement juridique.

3. Le représentant de l'Uruguay juge regrettable que l'on ne soit pas parvenu à une solution et souligne qu'étant donné son caractère colonial le problème présente un intérêt non seulement bilatéral, mais multilatéral. Il estime indispensable d'insister auprès des parties intéressées pour qu'elles activent leurs pourparlers et informent d'urgence l'Assemblée générale des résultats. Cette position pourrait être adoptée en tant que consensus par la Commission.

4. En ce qui concerne la question de Gibraltar, M. Gros Espiell réitère la position de son pays: le Rocher de Gibraltar est terre espagnole usurpée par le Royaume-Uni qui doit faire retour à l'Espagne. La délégation uruguayenne a d'ailleurs été l'un des auteurs du projet de résolution approuvé par le Comité spécial le 17 novembre 1966 (voir A/6300/Rev.1, chap. XI, par. 66). Il est indispensable de poursuivre les négociations afin d'obtenir l'application de la résolution 1514 (XV). La situation n'est pas sans issue si l'on reconnaît le droit qu'a l'Espagne de recouvrer une partie de son territoire, car le Royaume-Uni est tenu de respecter le Traité d'Utrecht, sans modification, pour ce qui a trait aux limites et à la nature de la cession, à la suite de ratifications ultérieures. La résolution approuvée par le Comité spécial, avec quelques amendements de nature à l'améliorer, peut permettre un progrès sensible dans la question de Gibraltar.

5. M. DE PINIES (Espagne) rappelle que le 17 novembre 1966 le Comité spécial a approuvé une résolution sur Gibraltar sur laquelle l'Espagne, n'appartenant pas à ce comité, n'a pu voter, bien qu'elle soit intervenue dans le débat antérieur auquel elle avait été invitée à participer. Cette résolution a, d'ores et déjà, été communiquée officiellement au Gouvernement espagnol, par une lettre datée du 12 novembre émanant du fonctionnaire chargé du Département de la tutelle et des territoires non autonomes. Dans cette lettre, on rappelle la nécessité d'appliquer à Gibraltar les résolutions 1514 (XV) et 2070 (XX) ainsi que le consensus du Comité spécial du 16 octobre 1964^{2/} par lequel, après avoir constaté l'existence d'un différend hispano-britannique au sujet de Gibraltar, on recommandait la décolonisation de ce territoire au moyen d'une solution négociée entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni dans le sens de la résolution 1514 (XV) et en tenant compte des intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar. La résolution du 17 novembre 1966 non seulement rappelle le mandat de décolonisation adopté en 1964 et ratifié en 1965, en vertu duquel l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni ont entamé des négociations le 18 mai 1966, mais regrette en outre le retard apporté à la décolonisation de Gibraltar, invite les deux parties à poursuivre les négociations et à faire rapport le plus tôt possible au Comité spécial et, enfin, demande au Secrétaire général d'aider à la mise en œuvre du processus de décolonisation de Gibraltar.

6. La délégation espagnole tient à préciser sa position quant à la phase du processus de décolonisation où se trouve Gibraltar. Elle se fonde, en premier lieu, sur le texte même de la résolution du Comité spécial, dont le premier paragraphe du dispositif invite les deux parties à s'abstenir de tout acte qui compromettrait le succès de ces négociations. Personne ne pourra, à coup sûr, supposer que l'Espagne ait intérêt à entraver ou à faire échouer une négociation qu'elle a dû réclamer neuf fois avant que le Royaume-Uni ne l'accepte et en laquelle l'Espagne place son espoir de voir un jour prochain s'abolir une situation coloniale sur son propre sol. La délégation espagnole est, en outre, portée à intervenir en raison de la déclaration que le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie a faite lors du débat du Comité spécial qui a précédé l'approbation de la résolution mentionnée. A la 480ème séance du Comité spécial, le représentant de la Tanzanie a exprimé ses réserves sur ce qui se passerait réellement entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni depuis le début des négociations recommandées par la résolution 2070 (XX) et s'est déclaré insatisfait que l'Espagne ou le Royaume-Uni informe séparément le Comité spécial de certains aspects desdites négociations, donnant à entendre que, si cette procédure se poursuivait, le Comité spécial ne pourrait se faire une idée exacte de la tournure qu'avaient pris les pourparlers entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni depuis le 18 mai 1966. Ces doutes sont compréhensibles étant donné le manque de renseignements dont l'Espagne ne se sent pas responsable. L'Espagne n'a pas fait l'historique détaillé des négociations devant le Comité spécial parce que, peut-être par un excès de scrupule, elle se croyait obligée de les garder secrètes — c'est ce qu'avait demandé le Royaume-Uni — jusqu'à ce que les deux pays aient pu communiquer conjointement au Comité spécial ou à l'Assemblée générale que l'on était parvenu ou en passe de parvenir à une solution ou à la solution négociée demandée par le consensus du Comité spécial. Les doutes qui pouvaient exister quant à l'attitude de l'Espagne durant les négociations ainsi que la publication, au mois de novembre, d'un livre blanc britannique^{3/} où ont été reproduits presque tous les documents échangés entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni depuis le 18 mai, libèrent l'Espagne de tout engagement de garder le silence. Cependant, l'invitation faite aux deux pays de s'abstenir d'entraver la négociation oblige la délégation espagnole à en retracer l'historique véritable.

7. Dans une note verbale en date du 17 janvier 1966 (A/6242, annexe I), l'Espagne a, une fois de plus, demandé au Royaume-Uni d'entamer les négociations au sujet de Gibraltar recommandées dans la résolution 2070 (XX), et, dans une note verbale en date du 14 février 1966 (voir A/6278), le Gouvernement britannique a accepté la proposition espagnole. Le 18 mai, les Ministres des affaires étrangères de l'Espagne et du Royaume-Uni se sont réunis à Londres. Le Ministre espagnol a remis à son homologue anglais un mémoire où l'Espagne exposait sa proposition à l'égard du problème de Gibraltar, position mûrie depuis deux siècles. En effet, Gibraltar constituait un problème pour l'Espagne bien avant que le processus de décolonisation ne commence. Le mémoire présenté par l'Espagne respectait les directives de l'Organisation des Nations Unies relatives à la décolonisation de Gibraltar et contenues dans le consensus du Comité spécial ainsi que dans la résolution 2070 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale. Conformément à ces directives, l'Espagne a proposé une solution constructive pour résoudre le problème de Gibraltar consistant en un accord entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni, dont l'article premier prévoyait l'abrogation de l'article X du Traité d'Utrecht de 1713 et le rétablissement de l'unité nationale et de l'intégrité territoriale espagnoles. Dans un deuxième article, l'Espagne se montrait disposée à respecter les intérêts particuliers du Royaume-Uni à Gibraltar, qui feraient l'objet d'un accord spécial en annexe de l'accord envisagé. Dans le troisième article relatif à la protection des intérêts des ressortissants britanniques de Gibraltar, il était proposé au Royaume-

Uni de négocier et de signer un deuxième accord supplémentaire qui viendrait s'ajouter à l'accord initial proposé par l'Espagne et aux termes duquel les deux pays établiraient un régime juridique qui protégerait les droits des habitants de Gibraltar, à savoir: la liberté de religion, leur nationalité britannique, leur droit de résidence, le libre exercice de leurs activités légitimes, la garantie de leurs emplois, etc. En outre, l'Espagne s'engageait à faciliter leur participation au développement économique de la baie d'Algésiras, qui est l'un des objectifs fondamentaux de la politique espagnole de développement économique. Autrement dit, cet accord reconnaissait aux habitants de Gibraltar les droits maximaux dont n'importe quel groupement humain peut jouir, à l'exception de celui de disposer d'une partie du territoire espagnol. Dans un quatrième et dernier article, il était précisé que la convention qui contenait la formule espagnole pour la décolonisation de Gibraltar n'entrerait en vigueur que lorsque l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni auraient négocié et souscrit les deux accords supplémentaires prévus aux articles 2 et 3, et lorsqu'ils auraient été enregistrés par l'Organisation des Nations Unies. L'Espagne proposait donc une formule qui allait bien plus loin que ce qu'exigeait l'ONU. Le consensus du Comité spécial se contentait de demander que l'on tienne compte des intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar. Or, l'Espagne était disposée à prendre en considération et à respecter les intérêts particuliers de la Grande-Bretagne qui sont de nature essentiellement militaire. L'Espagne espère que les bases militaires situées sur des territoires étrangers disparaîtront, et que la tension qui existe dans le monde depuis la seconde guerre mondiale ferait place progressivement à une véritable coexistence pacifique fondée sur le désarmement général et complet. Entre-temps, l'établissement de bases aux termes de pactes entre les divers Etats pour des raisons de sécurité mutuelle ne saurait faire l'objet de reproches, mais l'existence de bases imposées par un pays fort à un pays faible en vertu d'un passé impérialiste et colonial et qui, de ce fait, servent exclusivement les intérêts de l'Etat colonisateur et constituent un danger constant pour l'Etat colonisé, est intolérable. Le représentant permanent de l'Espagne auprès de l'Organisation des Nations Unies a récemment exposé la position de l'Espagne à cet égard, et M. de Piniés se contente de la rappeler pour expliquer qu'en respectant les intérêts militaires britanniques à Gibraltar, l'Espagne espérait transformer une base coloniale qui lui avait été imposée par la force des armes, en une base militaire établie en vertu d'un pacte, ayant un caractère temporaire et dont l'avenir serait lié au sort général de toutes les bases militaires à l'étranger.

8. Lorsque le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni a pris connaissance du mémoire espagnol, il a réservé la position politique britannique au sujet de Gibraltar, après avoir cependant déclaré que les propositions espagnoles méritaient d'être étudiées attentivement par le Royaume-Uni. Cet examen s'est terminé le 20 mai au cours d'une réunion entre les délégations espagnole et britannique durant laquelle la délégation britannique s'est contentée de demander toutes sortes d'éclaircissements, qui lui ont été fournis, au sujet de l'accord proposé par l'Espagne. Tout semblait indiquer que les négociations hispano-britanniques pourraient se poursuivre sur la base de la formule proposée par l'Espagne, qui respecte scrupuleusement les directives des Nations Unies et permettrait de mettre fin à la situation coloniale de Gibraltar. Toutefois, le 23 mai, lorsque le Ministre des affaires étrangères du Royaume-Uni a répondu, à la Chambre des Communes, à des questions relatives à la proposition espagnole du 18 mai, il a déclaré que les négociations qui venaient d'être entamées avaient pour objet d'établir des rapports civilisés entre l'Espagne et Gibraltar. Apparemment, la véritable décolonisation de Gibraltar n'entraîne pas dans les vues des dirigeants britanniques, comme nous avons pu nous en rendre compte le 12 juillet 1966, lors de la troisième réunion de ces négociations hispano-britanniques. Cette réunion, qui s'est également tenue à Londres, marque un tournant dans le déroulement des négociations: en effet, à cette réunion, le Royaume-Uni n'a nullement tenu compte de la proposition espagnole. Il ne l'a ni approuvée, ni rejetée, ni modifiée, ni même commentée. Il l'a tout simplement laissée de côté. En outre, à ce moment-là, la Grande-Bretagne a remis à l'Espagne un long document exposant ses droits juridiques sur Gibraltar et dans lequel elle essayait de nier purement et simplement que l'Espagne eût des raisons de demander que le Rocher lui fût restitué, pour rétablir ainsi l'intégrité territoriale et l'unité nationale de l'Espagne. Le Royaume-Uni a même essayé de démontrer que la formule de décolonisation suggérée par l'Espagne ne respectait pas les directives des Nations Unies. Dans ce document, le Royaume-Uni s'accrochait à ses titres coloniaux sur Gibraltar précisément au moment où elle prenait place avec l'Espagne à la table des négociations pour essayer de trouver une solution définitive à la situation coloniale qui existe à Gibraltar. En outre, le Royaume-Uni a soumis à l'Espagne des "mini-propositions" ayant trait à la suppression de la contrebande en provenance de Gibraltar, au rabaissement au niveau municipal du prétendu Gouvernement de Gibraltar et à la nomination d'un commissaire espagnol sur le Rocher, etc. Ces propositions n'avaient rien à voir avec la décolonisation de Gibraltar et ne contribuaient d'aucune façon constructive à la solution négociée préconisée par la résolution 2070 (XX).

9. Puis, il s'est produit quelque chose de bien plus grave encore: le Gouvernement britannique s'est déclaré souverain, sans pour autant justifier, en aucune façon, cette prétendue souveraineté d'un kilomètre carré de territoire espagnol contigu à Gibraltar qui n'a jamais été cédé par l'Espagne par le Traité d'Utrecht, mais sur lequel le Royaume-Uni s'était installé vers le milieu du XIX^{ème} siècle, en ayant recours à la force et à la duplicité et en ignorant les protestations continuelles et réitérées de l'Espagne. Ainsi le Royaume-Uni profitait de négociations pour la décolonisation de Gibraltar pour arracher à l'Espagne la souveraineté d'une partie supplémentaire de son territoire. Ce dernier acte britannique qui constitue pratiquement une agression contre l'intégrité territoriale de l'Espagne est le seul dont la délégation espagnole ait parlé le 11 novembre 1966 devant le Comité spécial (voir A/6300/Rev.1, chap. XI, par. 28 et 29). Les scrupules de l'Espagne, qui l'ont conduite à garder le silence sur ce que les Anglais avaient demandé, ont empêché la délégation espagnole d'expliquer en détail la façon dont cette agression s'est produite. A présent, s'estimant libérée de cet engagement au silence, l'Espagne désire exposer les faits.

10. En 1713, l'Espagne a été obligée de céder à la Grande-Bretagne, avec certaines limitations, la place forte de Gibraltar, dont la frontière nord était constituée par ses murailles. Une escadre anglo-hollandaise venue appuyer un candidat au trône d'Espagne a conquis le rocher dont la garnison défendait les droits d'un autre candidat qui régnait déjà à Madrid depuis cinq ans. Une fois que le rocher a été occupé, les Anglais se sont empressés, avec une mauvaise foi que l'Encyclopédie britannique elle-même reconnaît, de proclamer la souveraineté de la reine de la Grande-Bretagne expulsant la population civile espagnole, d'abord, et leurs alliés hollandais ensuite, et ignorant les soi-disant droits du prétendant à la couronne d'Espagne, alors qu'ils avaient pris pied dans la forteresse de Gibraltar précisément pour les défendre. En 1815, après les campagnes napoléoniennes, les autorités militaires de Gibraltar ont établi des camps sanitaires en dehors des murailles, en territoire espagnol, que l'Espagne avait démilitarisé en gage du maintien de bonnes relations entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni. Ces camps, qui accueillaient les soldats de la garnison qui avaient survécu aux épidémies de fièvre qui ont ravagé Gibraltar au début du XIX^{ème} siècle, se sont peu à peu étendus au territoire espagnol jusqu'à ce qu'ils occupent le kilomètre carré dont il a été question. En 1909, le Gouvernement britannique a élevé une grille de fer qui sépare ce morceau de territoire usurpé de l'Espagne et plus tard, au cours de la guerre civile espagnole — alors qu'aucun des deux partis adverses n'était en condition de protester —, le Gouvernement britannique a construit sur cette zone un aéroport qu'il a agrandi au cours de la seconde guerre mondiale. Le Gouvernement britannique actuel prétend que l'Espagne n'a pas protesté lors de cet agrandissement, ce qui serait, dit-il, une preuve tacite du consentement de l'Espagne à l'existence de l'aéroport. Mais en lisant le Livre blanc britannique de novembre 1966, il est évident que les protestations espagnoles, compte tenu des circonstances, étaient alors allées aussi loin qu'elles le pouvaient, à savoir jusqu'à abattre des avions militaires qui, à partir de Gibraltar, violaient l'espace aérien espagnol. L'Espagne a élevé des protestations répétées et constantes au sujet de la présence anglaise en dehors des frontières du territoire cédé au Traité d'Utrecht. Après chaque protestation, la Grande-Bretagne s'empressait de fournir toutes sortes d'explications et de prétendre que l'installation britannique en territoire espagnol n'altérerait pas la frontière. Ce n'est que le 12 juillet 1966 que le Royaume-Uni a officiellement employé les mots "souveraineté britannique" pour justifier sa présence sur ledit territoire.

11. Le Gouvernement actuel du Royaume-Uni a voulu repousser l'accusation espagnole en déclarant que ce n'est pas le 12 juillet 1966 que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a proclamé pour la première fois sa souveraineté sur la partie sud de l'isthme. Le Gouvernement travailliste a tenté de mettre sur le compte de l'ancien Gouvernement conservateur la responsabilité de cette agression commise contre la souveraineté espagnole, en affirmant qu'en 1909 sir Edward Grey, alors secrétaire d'Etat aux affaires étrangères, avait fait savoir à l'ambassadeur d'Espagne à Londres que le terrain situé au sud de la grille édiflée par les Anglais était déjà territoire britannique. Cette excuse, laborieusement présentée trois mois après le 12 juillet, vise uniquement à dégager la responsabilité de l'actuel Gouvernement britannique en la faisant endosser par un gouvernement antérieur. M. de Piniés affirme, et il met quiconque au défi de prouver le contraire, qu'avant le 12 juillet 1966 aucun gouvernement britannique n'a osé déclarer officiellement à l'Espagne qu'il était souverain sur la partie sud de l'isthme. Même sir Edward Grey, aux temps glorieux de l'impérialisme britannique, n'a osé avancer une telle affirmation. La simple lecture du Livre blanc publié par le Gouvernement de Londres suffit à prouver que seul l'actuel Gouvernement travailliste anglais s'est permis le luxe de déclarer en 1966 qu'il est souverain sur le territoire espagnol qui jouxte Gibraltar et que cette souveraineté se fonde purement et simplement sur l'occupation britannique de ce territoire. Il s'agit, au contraire, d'une occupation entreprise par la ruse et maintenue par la force, qui fait fi des protestations continues de l'Espagne.

12. Lorsque les négociations hispano-britanniques sur la décolonisation de Gibraltar ont été entamées, le Gouvernement espagnol était tout à fait convaincu qu'alors même que le Royaume-Uni occupait illégalement une portion de son sol, la souveraineté espagnole sur celle-ci n'était pas caduque et était encore reconnue par le Royaume-Uni. D'où l'étonnement et la déception de l'Espagne devant l'attitude du Royaume-Uni, qui, en opposant délibérément cet obstacle aux négociations, prouvait combien il était peu désireux d'arriver à une décolonisation véritable de Gibraltar. Pour sauver la négociation, comme cela est et a toujours été le désir de l'Espagne, il n'y avait d'autre solution que d'essayer de convaincre le Royaume-Uni de la nécessité de reconsidérer cette déclaration de souveraineté et de la retirer du cadre des négociations, étant donné que le succès de celle-ci aurait permis de résoudre non seulement le problème de Gibraltar, mais aussi celui de la zone située au nord de ce territoire. Le Gouvernement espagnol a donc demandé au Gouvernement britannique, par une note verbale du 21 juillet 1966, de reconsidérer sa déclaration de souveraineté sur la partie sud de l'isthme. Le Royaume-Uni s'y est refusé carrément, et il s'est produit entre les deux pays un échange de notes au cours duquel le Royaume-Uni, de plus en plus arrogant, a affirmé sa souveraineté sur la zone espagnole usurpée, a dérogé unilatéralement au caractère neutre que l'Espagne lui avait donné au XVIII^{ème} siècle et a réaffirmé que l'aéroport qui y est situé continuerait d'être utilisé par ses forces aériennes et celles de ses alliés, ne tenant aucun compte du fait que les avions militaires qui l'utilisent violent l'espace aérien espagnol autour de Gibraltar, comme cela a été le cas dernièrement à 26 reprises, que le Gouvernement espagnol a prouvées et que le Gouvernement britannique a essayé de nier. La délégation espagnole a l'intention de distribuer un document qui fait état de toutes les communications échangées entre son pays et le Royaume-Uni au sujet de l'agression britannique commise le 12 juillet.

13. L'Espagne ne pouvait demeurer indifférente devant les conséquences de cette agression. Pendant trois mois, elle a demandé à plusieurs reprises au Royaume-Uni de reconsidérer son attitude, ne recevant que des réponses négatives de plus en plus hautaines. Au cours de ces trois mois, l'Espagne s'est armée de patience. Elle s'est limitée à protester par écrit en exposant et en défendant ses droits. Elle n'a pas abattu d'avions britanniques. Elle n'a pas ouvert le feu contre ces avions lorsqu'ils survolaient ses eaux et son territoire. Elle a autorisé l'aviation civile à continuer d'utiliser l'aérodrome. Elle n'a pris aucune mesure contre celui-ci. Elle n'a pas élevé de tours qui empêchent de l'utiliser. Elle ne l'a pas entouré de barrières de ballons captifs qui en rendent l'accès difficile pour les avions. Elle n'a pas refusé de communiquer des renseignements météorologiques ni d'accorder les autres facilités dont un aérodrome isolé, à des milliers de kilomètres de sa métropole, a besoin pour garantir la sécurité du vol et de la vie humaine. Le représentant de l'Espagne exprime l'espoir que cette attitude patiente, constructive et humanitaire de l'Espagne aura été prise en considération par le Comité spécial lorsque l'agression britannique lui a été exposée, ou qu'elle le sera maintenant par la Quatrième Commission. En revanche, lorsque l'Espagne a interrompu le 5 octobre 1966 le transit de véhicules et de marchandises qui s'effectuait par la douane de la ville de La Línea de la Concepción aux portes mêmes de cet aérodrome, foyer de menaces contre l'Espagne, les services d'information britanniques ont organisé un scandale considérable. Toutes les agences de presse ont recueilli les expressions "blocus de Gibraltar" et "politique de coups d'épingle", qui ont été prononcées à Londres. Le Royaume-Uni tentait de dissimuler la gravité de son implantation militaire dans le territoire espagnol et les violations de l'espace aérien espagnol commises par des avions militaires derrière une campagne où l'Espagne apparaissait comme l'agresseur. On prétendait comparer l'agression militaire britannique à la réduction des facilités espagnoles, de nature purement administrative, par laquelle l'Espagne voulait contrer l'agression dont elle était l'objet.

14. Pour toutes ces raisons, et aussi parce que les violations britanniques de l'espace aérien espagnol ont été condamnées le 11 et le 17 novembre 1966 devant le Comité spécial par les représentants de la Syrie, de l'Uruguay, du Venezuela, de la Tunisie et de la République-Unie de Tanzanie, la délégation espagnole estime que la demande qui a été faite aux deux parties, dans la résolution du Comité spécial, de s'abstenir de mettre obstacle aux négociations n'implique absolument pas que le Comité spécial interdit à l'Espagne de se défendre contre les agressions colonialistes commises par le Royaume-Uni. Le représentant de la Syrie a fait remarquer le mois dernier qu'il n'y a aucune raison que l'aérodrome de Gibraltar soit utilisé à des fins militaires alors que le Royaume-Uni n'est en guerre contre personne. Le représentant de l'Uruguay a ajouté que cette utilisation militaire est la cause des incidents dénoncés par l'Espagne, et le représentant de la Tunisie s'est joint au représentant de la Syrie pour demander au Royaume-Uni de mettre un terme aux incidents — les violations de l'espace aérien — dont la délégation espagnole avait fait état devant le Comité spécial. Le représentant du Venezuela a condamné le 17 novembre les violations de l'espace aérien espagnol, auxquelles le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie a également fait allusion. Naturellement, le représentant du Royaume-Uni a tenté de comparer ces agressions militaires aux mesures administratives de nature fiscale prises par l'Espagne sur son propre territoire, c'est-à-dire à la douane de La Línea de la Concepción. Le fait d'admettre cette comparaison constituerait une injustice grave, mais il serait en outre surprenant que le Comité spécial interdise à un pays colonisé sur une partie de son territoire de se défendre contre les agressions du colonialisme.

15. Les Nations Unies pourraient efficacement faciliter les négociations et les accélérer si la Quatrième Commission, en adoptant une résolution sur ce point, recommandait que cet aérodrome ne soit pas utilisé à des fins militaires qui sont à l'origine de ces agressions colonialistes. Tout comme le représentant de la République-Unie de Tanzanie dans son intervention du 17 novembre, la délégation espagnole estime regrettable que l'invitation qui a été faite aux deux parties de ne pas mettre d'obstacle aux négociations n'ait pas été précisée davantage, ce qu'elle tentera de faire maintenant en précisant les mesures qui doivent être mentionnées concrètement. Elle ne comprend pas, en effet, comment on peut mettre sur le même pied le pays colonisé, l'Espagne, qui a constamment demandé au Royaume-Uni d'ouvrir des négociations — encouragée qu'elle était par la résolution 2070 (XX) — et le pays colonisateur, le Royaume-Uni, qui a toujours refusé le dialogue avec l'Espagne, même après le consensus de 1964, et dont le Secrétaire d'Etat a affirmé le 10 novembre 1966 devant la Chambre des communes qu'il n'existe aucun problème colonial à Gibraltar. L'esprit constructif et la patience illimitée dont a fait preuve le Gouvernement espagnol ne sauraient être plus évidents, comme l'a prouvé le fait que les négociations se sont poursuivies malgré l'agression britannique du 12 juillet 1966.

16. L'historique de ces négociations montrera l'absence d'une volonté décolonisatrice sincère du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni. Le 10 septembre 1966, au cours d'une nouvelle réunion à Londres, le Gouvernement espagnol, prouvant son désir de négociation, a accepté les "mini-propositions" anglaises du 12 juillet dans la mesure où elles pouvaient constituer un pas vers la solution définitive recommandée par la résolution 2070 (XX). Le seul point que l'Espagne n'acceptait pas dans ces propositions était l'offre anglaise que la marine de guerre et l'aviation militaire espagnoles utilisent le port et l'aérodrome de Gibraltar sous contrôle britannique. L'Espagne n'a nul besoin d'une base militaire dans la baie d'Algésiras. L'Espagne ne peut davantage accepter que la démolition possible de la grille — ce mur de la honte construit par le Royaume-Uni en 1909 — dépende de l'approbation par l'Espagne de la supposée souveraineté anglaise sur la zone contiguë à Gibraltar et usurpée par le Royaume-Uni.

En tout cas, le Gouvernement britannique, voyant que l'Espagne acceptait en principe ses propositions comme un pas vers la solution définitive, les a retirées le 10 octobre 1966 en les remplaçant par une nouvelle proposition, celle de saisir la Cour internationale de Justice de la discussion des titres coloniaux sur Gibraltar, avant de poursuivre les négociations pour décoloniser le territoire. Le 14 décembre, le Gouvernement espagnol, s'en tenant à la résolution du Comité spécial du 17 novembre 1966, a répondu officiellement au Gouvernement britannique que l'Espagne ne peut accepter la proposition de soumettre le cas de Gibraltar à la Cour internationale de Justice.

17. M. de Piniés donne lecture de cette réponse, dans laquelle l'Espagne dit que les questions que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni désire soumettre à la décision de la Cour internationale de Justice ont pour but d'obtenir le jugement de celle-ci sur deux affaires: premièrement, déterminer lequel des deux pays a la souveraineté sur le territoire cédé à la Grande-Bretagne par l'Espagne en vertu de l'article X du Traité d'Utrecht du 13 juillet 1713, et la portée et la validité actuelles des limites que cet article impose au Royaume-Uni; deuxièmement, déterminer lequel des deux pays a la souveraineté sur ce que le Royaume-Uni appelle "zone neutre britannique", contiguë à Gibraltar, qui n'a pas été cédée à Utrecht, comme le reconnaît lui-même le Gouvernement britannique, mais sur laquelle il invoque un titre de souveraineté acquis par une prétendue prescription au détriment de la souveraineté espagnole, et déterminer également quelles nouvelles servitudes éventuelles l'aérodrome construit dans cette zone imposera à l'Espagne. La Cour internationale de Justice serait donc appelée à se prononcer sur la question de savoir si le Royaume-Uni est souverain ou non et, dans l'affirmative, sur la portée de sa souveraineté, dans un territoire que la Grande-Bretagne a usurpé et que l'Espagne a cédé par la force des armes à la couronne britannique en 1713, ainsi que sur la question de savoir si l'Espagne est souveraine ou non et, dans l'affirmative, sur la portée de cette souveraineté sur un kilomètre carré de territoire espagnol contigu à Gibraltar, dans lequel le Royaume-Uni s'est installé de facto au milieu du XIX^{ème} siècle, prétendant actuellement qu'en vertu de cette occupation il lui appartient "à titre de souverain". La réponse de l'Espagne déclare ensuite que la Charte des Nations Unies recommande aux Etats Membres de résoudre pacifiquement les conflits qui peuvent les diviser, en soumettant leurs différends à une instance juridique internationale. L'Espagne est d'accord avec cette recommandation, qui protège les Etats faibles contre l'arbitraire des Etats forts, dans le cadre d'un ordre juridique international commun. L'Espagne reste fidèle à la conception des fondateurs du droit des gens moderne, d'un droit international efficace et juste. C'est pourquoi elle ne peut que préconiser qu'en cas de conflit il soit fait appel à la Cour internationale de Justice, et elle regrette que le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni n'ait pas proposé, avant les décisions de l'ONU relatives à la décolonisation, qu'une instance internationale soit saisie, conformément au droit, des différends juridiques existant entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni au sujet du problème de Gibraltar. Ces différends ont donné lieu à des conflits continuels entre les deux pays au cours des deux derniers siècles, notamment à cause des usurpations de territoire et des eaux territoriales espagnoles; et, en dernier lieu, depuis 1950, lorsque le Royaume-Uni a décidé de modifier le régime juridique intérieur de la colonie sous une forme que l'Espagne considère comme portant atteinte à l'article X du Traité d'Utrecht. Connaissant les droits que lui réservait l'article X et entièrement sûre de sa souveraineté sur la partie de territoire espagnol voisine de Gibraltar que le Royaume-Uni a occupé illégalement au siècle dernier, l'Espagne n'aurait pas hésité un moment à accepter que la Cour internationale de Justice examine les droits et les limitations que le Traité d'Utrecht imposait aux deux pays. Pour l'Espagne, recourir à une instance internationale et notamment à la Cour internationale de Justice aurait signifié la possibilité de mettre un frein à l'expansionnisme colonial anglais à Gibraltar.

18. Aujourd'hui, la question a changé de nature et de signe. Il ne s'agit pas de mettre un frein au colonialisme, il s'agit de décoloniser. C'est pourquoi la proposition du Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est arrivée à un moment où ce recours est dépassé, puisque le Comité spécial avait décidé, deux ans avant que cette proposition ne soit formulée, que Gibraltar devait être décolonisé, recommandant à l'Espagne et au Royaume-Uni la recherche d'une solution négociée qui mette fin à la situation coloniale existant à Gibraltar. Cette décision de l'ONU, acceptée en son temps par l'Espagne et par le Royaume-Uni et en vertu de laquelle ont commencé les négociations hispano-britanniques, doit être bien prise en considération pour apprécier l'actuelle proposition britannique de soumettre à la Cour internationale de Justice certains différends juridiques sur la situation coloniale à Gibraltar. Il est évident que l'Organisation des Nations Unies, connaissant les différends juridiques et de toute nature qui divisent l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni sur Gibraltar, a décidé et recommandé — en insistant de nouveau sur ce point — qu'il soit mis fin à la situation coloniale de Gibraltar. Il est évident également que cette situation coloniale a son origine dans l'article X du Traité d'Utrecht et dans les conséquences qui découlent de son application. C'est pourquoi, pour appliquer loyalement les résolutions des Nations Unies, il faut partir de l'inefficacité actuelle dudit article à régir une situation qui doit disparaître.

19. Négligeant le principe qui condamne cet article comme l'expression d'une situation coloniale à laquelle il faut mettre fin, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni propose à l'Espagne de saisir la Cour de la question de savoir lequel des deux pays est souverain sur Gibraltar, en vertu précisément de ce traité. Le Gouvernement espagnol ne peut accepter cette proposition du Royaume-Uni, qui implique que dans n'importe quel cas de décolonisation il faudrait remonter à l'examen préalable des titres juridiques de la puissance coloniale et accepter que ces titres pré-déterminent en quelque sorte la solution définitive de l'affaire. Dans le cas de Gibraltar, cette procédure serait en contradiction avec le mandat de l'ONU et plus précisément avec la résolution approuvée le 17 novembre 1966 par le Comité spécial, qui déclare que la décolonisation de Gibraltar ne doit pas être différée. Au cours de la discussion qui a précédé l'adoption de cette résolution, aucun membre du Comité n'a préconisé que la Cour internationale de Justice intervienne dans le processus de décolonisation de Gibraltar.

20. L'Espagne pense que les titres en litige, les seuls qu'aurait pu examiner la Cour internationale de Justice, ne sont pas pertinents pour le processus de décolonisation à Gibraltar, ni pour les négociations hispano-britanniques par lesquelles ce processus a été engagé puisque le Gouvernement espagnol a ouvert ces négociations en offrant de respecter au maximum tous les intérêts, tant britanniques que des habitants de Gibraltar, qui seraient affectés par le changement de souveraineté, formulant avec précision les garanties suffisantes pour la protection future de ces intérêts. Par conséquent, tout délai employé à examiner les titres juridiques britanniques sur Gibraltar — titres qui sont contraires à la Charte de l'Organisation des Nations Unies et dont le caractère précaire est apparu tout au long des négociations — constituerait un retard injustifié dans ce processus. Le Gouvernement espagnol s'en tient donc à ce qui a été décidé par l'Assemblée générale et par le Comité spécial et ne peut, en conséquence, approuver des initiatives que les Nations Unies n'ont pas recommandées. Pour la même raison, le Gouvernement espagnol ne peut davantage accepter de saisir la Cour internationale de Justice de la question de savoir lequel des deux pays est souverain et quelle est la portée de cette souveraineté sur le territoire contigu à Gibraltar, qui s'étend jusqu'à la grille construite en 1909 et qui a été usurpé par le Royaume-Uni par la ruse et par la force. Cette usurpation est le symbole le plus scandaleux et le plus frappant de la situation coloniale à Gibraltar, et le Gouvernement espagnol ne peut cacher son étonnement devant la conduite du Gouvernement britannique qui s'est décidé — en 1966, lorsque le colonialisme est en cours de liquidation — à invoquer un titre souverain sur la partie méridionale de la zone neutre espagnole.

21. La réponse du Gouvernement espagnol conclut que celui-ci considère que le mandat décolonisateur de l'Assemblée générale de l'ONU, lorsqu'elle recommande la liquidation de la situation coloniale à Gibraltar dans la forme où elle l'a fait, constitue la seule base à considérer pour la solution des différends juridiques et de toute autre nature qui existent entre l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni au sujet de Gibraltar, et que le Gouvernement espagnol reste disposé, avec le même esprit constructif, à poursuivre les négociations pour mettre fin à cette situation coloniale.

22. Il est évident que l'Espagne estime que les discussions sur les titres juridiques britanniques à Gibraltar, tant sur le plan bilatéral des négociations que sur celui de la Cour internationale de Justice, ne sont absolument pas pertinents. En vérité, l'heure de décoloniser est arrivée dans tous les pays et également à Gibraltar.

23. M. de Piniés rappelle que le représentant de l'Union soviétique a dit, à la 480ème séance du Comité spécial, que l'Espagne n'avait présenté aucune proposition constructive relative à la décolonisation de Gibraltar. Le représentant de l'Espagne espère que l'explication qu'il vient de donner aura convaincu le représentant de l'Union soviétique du contraire et, dans ce dessein, la délégation espagnole distribuera un second document reproduisant simplement les propositions espagnoles du 18 mai 1966, les "mini-propositions" anglaises du 12 juillet 1966, la réponse espagnole à celles-ci, la réponse britannique proposant de soumettre le problème à la Cour internationale de Justice et la réponse espagnole à cette dernière proposition. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique a fait observer, à la même séance, que l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni concluaient un accord sur la base militaire de Gibraltar, que le Gouvernement de Londres avait mise au service de l'OTAN avec le consentement de l'Espagne. Il est à espérer que le représentant de l'Union soviétique s'est maintenant aperçu que l'Espagne — qui ne fait pas partie de l'OTAN — n'a aucun intérêt à ce que les Britanniques placent Gibraltar au service de cette organisation, que l'Espagne ne s'intéresse pas à une base dans la baie d'Algésiras et que, si elle s'est décidée à respecter l'existence de la base britannique, c'est parce que l'ONU ne l'a pas interdit et que c'est aux Britanniques, et non à l'Union soviétique, de rendre le territoire à l'Espagne. Si le représentant de l'Union soviétique est prêt à obtenir que l'ONU recommande au Royaume-Uni de démanteler les installations militaires à Gibraltar et qu'elle interdise à l'Espagne de respecter les intérêts militaires britanniques à Gibraltar, la délégation espagnole n'aura rien à objecter à ces recommandations, que l'Espagne appliquerait scrupuleusement.

24. Venant ensuite à la situation actuelle dans laquelle se trouve le processus de décolonisation de Gibraltar, M. de Piniés déclare que les réunions qui se déroulent entre les délégations espagnole et britannique depuis le 18 mai, ont au moins permis de s'assurer que le Royaume-Uni ne veut pas décoloniser, car il n'a tenu aucun compte des solutions proposées par l'Espagne pas plus que de celles plus limitées que lui-même avait avancées et qu'il a ensuite retirées pour finir par se retrancher derrière la Cour internationale de Justice afin de tenir Gibraltar hors du processus de décolonisation. Dans le Livre blanc britannique publié en novembre 1966, il apparaît clairement que le Royaume-Uni, au lieu de décoloniser, a préféré entamer des pourparlers avec l'Espagne au sujet des titres coloniaux sur Gibraltar et le territoire espagnol usurpé situé au nord de Gibraltar. Ces pourparlers ont mis en évidence la nature très précaire de ces titres. Du 18 mai jusqu'à présent, on a également pu noter la persistance d'un colonialisme actif à Gibraltar qui s'est manifesté par une politique expansionniste dirigée contre l'Espagne. L'usurpation de la partie sud de l'isthme, sa militarisation et l'intention déclarée du Gouvernement britannique d'imposer à l'Espagne des servitudes militaires pour que l'aérodrome de Gibraltar puisse fonctionner plus efficacement, sont des aspects pertinents de cet expansionnisme colonialiste. Après l'entrevue de Gibraltar entre M. Wilson et Ian Smith, qui a eu lieu du 1er au 4 décembre, il semble difficile de cacher ou de dissimuler l'atmosphère coloniale qui enveloppe toute l'affaire de Gibraltar. L'hebdomadaire de Gibraltar, Vox, signalait le 2 décembre au sujet de la rencontre qu'il y avait peu d'endroits au monde où Ian Smith pouvait aujourd'hui se rendre en étant assuré de pouvoir rentrer à Salisburys; l'un d'eux est Gibraltar.

25. Il ressort tout aussi clairement des négociations qui ont commencé en mai que le Royaume-Uni n'a pas le moindre désir de décoloniser le Rocher et que pour retarder la fin inévitable d'une situation coloniale il se retranche derrière les prétextes les plus divers: tantôt il s'agit des vœux de certains habitants de Gibraltar qui n'auraient pas été suffisamment informés de l'attitude espagnole, et que le Royaume-Uni lui-même est disposé à sacrifier pour défendre ses véritables intérêts, comme le montrent les "mini-propositions" britanniques du 12 juillet, et tantôt de la nécessité de porter la question devant la Cour internationale de Justice.

26. En dernier lieu, les pourparlers ont mis en évidence la véritable raison de l'obstination britannique en ce qui concerne Gibraltar, à savoir: la base militaire, dont le port et l'aéroport sont tous deux situés sur un terrain volé à l'Espagne, et qui n'a jamais été cédé. Si ces négociations ont permis de faire la lumière sur toutes ces circonstances, elles n'auront pas été tout à fait vaines. On aura pu voir une fois de plus le fond même du problème: qu'il faut accepter le principe de la décolonisation de Gibraltar, en accord avec l'Espagne et compte tenu des intérêts des habitants du Rocher.

27. Cette nécessité présente à l'esprit et en vue d'accélérer le processus de décolonisation, l'Espagne a soumis au Royaume-Uni les propositions suivantes: a) que les deux pays entament sans retard des négociations sur le statut destiné à protéger les intérêts des résidents du territoire de Gibraltar lorsque la situation coloniale qui y existe aura disparu, ce statut devant être enregistré par les Nations Unies; b) au cas où l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni n'arriveraient pas à se mettre d'accord sur un tel statut, le Gouvernement espagnol serait disposé à soumettre un projet de statut à l'intention des habitants de Gibraltar à l'examen et à l'approbation éventuelle du Secrétaire général de l'ONU; ce statut reconnaîtrait aux habitants de Gibraltar tous les droits dont un groupement humain quelconque peut disposer à l'exception de la possession d'une partie du territoire espagnol qui est d'ailleurs contraire à la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, qui préconise au paragraphe 6 de son dispositif le respect de l'intégrité territoriale et de l'unité nationale des pays colonisés; c) le Gouvernement espagnol, désireux d'arriver à trouver une solution constructive au problème de Gibraltar, est disposé à négocier avec le Royaume-Uni un régime temporaire qui ferait l'objet d'un accord sauvegardant les intérêts britanniques à Gibraltar que le Royaume-Uni désire protéger, dans la mesure où le maintien de ces intérêts n'est pas en contradiction avec la Charte des Nations Unies et les résolutions qui ont été ou seront adoptées par l'Assemblée générale.

28. Le Gouvernement espagnol réitère une fois de plus sa volonté de poursuivre les négociations avec le Royaume-Uni, conformément à la résolution 2070 (XX) ainsi qu'à celle que le Comité spécial a adoptée le 17 novembre 1966, en vue de mettre fin à la situation actuelle de Gibraltar.

29. M. HOPE (Royaume-Uni) déclare que sa délégation désire commencer par quelques remarques préliminaires au sujet de la déclaration du représentant de l'Espagne sur la question de Gibraltar. Il ne manquera pas, d'ailleurs, d'étudier attentivement cette déclaration. Les négociations entre les deux gouvernements se poursuivent en ce moment, mais comme, malgré cela, la délégation espagnole vient de faire une longue déclaration sur cette question, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est obligé d'exposer sa position plus en détail qu'il ne l'avait prévu.

30. Une autre raison encore motive le caractère purement préliminaire des remarques de M. Hope. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni a aujourd'hui même reçu la réponse du Gouvernement espagnol à la proposition britannique visant à soumettre à la Cour internationale de Justice les questions juridiques sujettes à controverse. Cette réponse n'a pas encore été examinée comme il convient et, en conséquence, M. Hope ne peut donner à ses remarques un caractère définitif. Néanmoins, il apparaît d'ores et déjà que l'Espagne déclare qu'elle n'est pas disposée à accepter la proposition du Royaume-Uni de saisir la Cour de la question parce qu'elle estime que cette décision serait contraire aux résolutions des Nations Unies.

31. A cet égard, il convient d'emblée de faire trois observations. En premier lieu, la proposition britannique de porter les controverses juridiques entre les deux pays devant la Cour internationale de Justice n'est aucunement contraire aux recommandations de l'Assemblée générale dans la résolution 2070 (XX); en effet, cette proposition ne vise pas à remplacer les pourparlers bilatéraux recommandés par l'Assemblée générale et par le Comité spécial; bien au contraire, son but est de contribuer à une conclusion positive de ces négociations en faisant la lumière sur la position en ce qui concerne les nombreux arguments juridiques mis en avant par le Gouvernement espagnol. La revendication espagnole ne se fonde pas sur le principe de la décolonisation, comme l'affirme le Gouvernement espagnol, mais sur des questions de droit international complexes et difficiles; par conséquent, le meilleur moyen d'arriver à un accord serait de résoudre ces questions en les portant devant la plus haute instance impartiale qui, au surplus, est un organe principal des Nations Unies. Cela n'est en aucune manière incompatible avec ce que stipulent les résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ou du Comité spécial.

32. En deuxième lieu, il faut noter que le Gouvernement espagnol a mis deux mois à étudier la proposition britannique. Il est à penser que ses conseillers juridiques ont étudié la question et qu'ils ont envisagé toutes les conséquences possibles d'un recours éventuel à la Cour internationale de Justice. Il est maintenant évident que le Gouvernement espagnol n'est pas disposé à accepter cette proposition. Si c'est là sa décision définitive, il est clair qu'il ne se fie guère au bien-fondé de sa cause. Le Gouvernement britannique est prêt à soumettre cette question à la Cour, et il se conformerait évidemment à sa décision. Cela contraste avec l'attitude de l'Espagne. Il doit être bien entendu que si la réclamation espagnole n'a pas de valeur juridique elle n'a pas de valeur du tout.

33. En troisième lieu, le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni note, après un premier examen de la réponse du Gouvernement espagnol, que celle-ci contient en outre certaines propositions au sujet des négociations futures. Le Gouvernement britannique étudiera ces suggestions et y répondra lorsqu'il les aura examinées. Il est donc impossible de prévoir aujourd'hui la suite qui y sera donnée.

34. Il faut maintenant passer à deux aspects du différend. Il y a d'abord les nombreuses questions de nature essentiellement juridique qui font l'objet de la discussion et qui concernent la souveraineté sur l'isthme, l'utilisation de l'aéroport, les prétendus vols des avions britanniques au-dessus du territoire espagnol et, surtout, la souveraineté sur Gibraltar lui-même. Vient ensuite l'affirmation fondamentale de l'Espagne selon laquelle Gibraltar sera décolonisé s'il est fait droit à ses exigences.

35. Il faut avant tout rappeler à la Commission que le Traité d'Utrecht a indiscutablement concédé à perpétuité le Rocher de Gibraltar au roi d'Angleterre.

36. Dans sa déclaration devant le Comité spécial, le représentant de l'Espagne a longuement parlé de la partie sud de l'isthme qui sépare Gibraltar de l'Espagne. Il est surprenant que le Gouvernement espagnol proteste maintenant parce que le Gouvernement britannique a déclaré que la partie sud de cet isthme fait partie du territoire de Gibraltar et qu'elle est, en conséquence, sous souveraineté britannique. Cette réclamation pourrait faire croire que le Royaume-Uni aurait récemment attaqué de quelque façon le territoire espagnol ou qu'il aurait avancé une nouvelle revendication territoriale aux dépens de l'Espagne. Rien n'est plus faux. La situation n'est nullement nouvelle; au contraire, cette région, fréquemment désignée sous le nom de "sol neutre britannique", fait partie intégrante du territoire de Gibraltar et a été administrée en tant que territoire britannique depuis 1838 en tout cas et depuis plus longtemps même, car dès le siècle précédent une grande partie de territoire située immédiatement au nord de Gibraltar était utilisée à diverses fins, et notamment à la protection du Rocher, et pendant les premières années du XIX^{ème} siècle ce territoire était déjà administré à divers égards comme une partie de Gibraltar. Les lignes de démarcation britanniques ont été fermement établies en 1838 sans protestation de la part du Gouvernement espagnol, et le Royaume-Uni exerce depuis lors sa juridiction sur cette zone. Il est donc évident que, quelles que soient les limites territoriales de la cession originelle, qui d'ailleurs n'ont pas été définies par le Traité d'Utrecht, le Royaume-Uni a, par prescription, un titre valable sur tout le territoire de Gibraltar dans les limites de la frontière actuelle.

37. Il résulte néanmoins des conversations qui ont eu lieu jusqu'à présent que le Gouvernement espagnol est d'un avis différent sur cette question et sur d'autres points de droit; le Gouvernement britannique, loin d'adopter une attitude agressive pour défendre sa cause, propose donc que ce différend ainsi que les autres sujets de litige soient soumis à la Cour internationale de Justice. Si l'Espagne croit vraiment que le Royaume-Uni agit illégalement dans cette affaire, elle devrait accepter sans hésitation la proposition britannique.

38. Le Gouvernement espagnol affirme que le Royaume-Uni a proclamé sa souveraineté sur la partie sud de l'isthme pour la première fois le 12 juillet 1966. A l'appui de cette assertion, il a introduit une distinction entre l'expression "territoire britannique" utilisée pour décrire cette zone dans les communications hispano-britanniques de 1909 et l'expression "territoire sous souveraineté britannique". Il résulte clairement de cette correspondance de 1909, que le Gouvernement espagnol entendait par cette expression que le Royaume-Uni proclamait sa souveraineté sur cette zone que le Royaume-Uni occupe depuis 130 ans. Le droit du Royaume-Uni sur cette zone n'a jamais été discuté depuis lors, soit par le Gouvernement espagnol, soit à l'époque par le Gouvernement d'Algésiras, et maintenant le Royaume-Uni est accusé d'agression bien qu'il n'y ait eu aucune attaque, aucun recours à la force, ni aucune prise de position.

39. Le Gouvernement espagnol s'est également plaint que le Gouvernement britannique utilise l'aéroport situé dans la partie sud de l'isthme, en qualifiant cette utilisation "d'acte d'agression" contre l'Espagne. Cet aéroport a été établi en territoire britannique, et l'aviation militaire l'utilise depuis 1935, au sud du Gouvernement espagnol, sans qu'il y ait eu de protestation de ce gouvernement dans l'un ou l'autre cas. En 1939 et en 1940, le Gouvernement espagnol a exprimé son inquiétude devant la possibilité que l'utilisation de l'aéroport de Gibraltar entraîne des survols de son territoire, mais il n'a pas protesté contre l'existence même de l'aéroport comme d'un acte de force ou d'une violation de sa souveraineté. D'ailleurs, dans un échange de lettres en 1950, le Gouvernement espagnol a déclaré en substance "reconnaître que Gibraltar... est un aéroport militaire". En outre, le Royaume-Uni a installé les appareils techniques les plus modernes en vue d'éliminer, autant que possible, les risques de violation de l'espace aérien espagnol. Le Royaume-Uni ne fait que se conformer à la pratique établie depuis 25 ans sans soulever de protestation. Le représentant de l'Espagne a accusé de nouveau les aviateurs britanniques d'avoir violé la souveraineté espagnole en survolant le territoire espagnol. Ainsi que le Gouvernement espagnol en a été avisé directement par la voie diplomatique, ces allégations ont été soumises à une enquête serrée, et il est apparu qu'il n'y a eu qu'une seule violation, non intentionnelle, de sa souveraineté, au sujet de laquelle le Gouvernement britannique a présenté ses excuses. Il s'est agi d'une erreur d'un pilote novice au cours de son premier vol vers Gibraltar, et cet incident s'est produit parce que ce pilote n'a pas suivi les instructions précises données au personnel navigant. Le Gouvernement britannique a informé le Gouvernement espagnol que le radar et les enregistrements faits, à ce moment-là, avaient prouvé que les autres allégations étaient sans fondement. D'autre part, le représentant de l'Espagne doit se souvenir que le 30 juillet 1965 un avion des forces aériennes espagnoles a tourné au-dessus de Gibraltar pendant 10 minutes et qu'il est passé dangereusement près d'un avion britannique qui essayait d'atterrir. Le Gouvernement espagnol a présenté ses excuses, en soulignant que les incidents de nature technique doivent être ramenés à leurs justes proportions et qu'ils ne doivent pas devenir l'objet de controverses politiques. C'est aussi l'avis de la délégation du Royaume-Uni, qui regrette, en conséquence, que l'on ait fait tant de publicité à ces accusations d'avoir survolé le territoire espagnol et qu'elles aient fait l'objet d'une controverse politique au moment même où les deux gouvernements ont des conversations. Puisque l'Espagne s'oppose pour des arguments juridiques invoqués bien tardivement à ce que le Royaume-Uni utilise l'aéroport de Gibraltar, cette dernière suggère que cette question soit également soumise à la Cour internationale de Justice.

40. On a aussi parlé d'obstruction aux conversations entre le Gouvernement espagnol et le Gouvernement britannique. La délégation du Royaume-Uni estime de son devoir de signaler que, si obstruction il y a, elle provient des allégations soudaines et nullement provoquées que le Gouvernement espagnol a lancées contre le Gouvernement britannique — qui se sont avérées dénuées de fondement — et des mesures qu'il a prises à la frontière entre Gibraltar et La Línea. Le Gouvernement espagnol a imposé, à l'improviste, une restriction après l'autre pour retarder et finalement suspendre presque complètement le trafic normal qui existe depuis longtemps des deux côtés de la frontière. Les premières restrictions ont été imposées un jour après la décision du Comité spécial d'octobre 1964, qui demandait que des entretiens aient lieu. La dernière restriction, et la plus sévère, a été imposée cinq jours avant les dernières conversations, qui ont eu lieu à Londres le 10 octobre 1966. Chaque nouvelle restriction a été prévue de manière à précéder chaque série d'entretiens. Il est évident que des négociations de cet ordre exigent un esprit de bonne volonté et de compréhension mutuelle, et ne peuvent être poursuivies sous la menace ou la pression, quelles qu'elles soient. Ces restrictions espagnoles ne peuvent avoir d'autre but que d'influencer par un biais le Gouvernement britannique durant les conversations en faisant pression sur le peuple de Gibraltar. Si, malgré leurs conséquences pour les habitants de Gibraltar, le Gouvernement espagnol maintient ces restrictions, il ébranlera sérieusement la confiance dans les bonnes intentions qu'il affirme avoir concernant les intérêts de cette population. La délégation britannique demande donc au Gouvernement espagnol, s'il souhaite réellement résoudre le problème et faire aboutir les négociations, d'abroger la fermeture de la frontière.

41. La Commission sait que le Royaume-Uni a présenté le 12 juillet 1966 au Gouvernement espagnol des propositions de collaboration relatives à Gibraltar. Il ne s'agissait pas seulement de la base navale ou de l'aéroport, mais de propositions constructives, plus précisément de supprimer la grille frontalière qualifiée ce soir, de manière quelque peu insultante, de "mur de la honte". Cette grille sera supprimée si, de son côté, l'Espagne accepte de lever les restrictions spéciales au poste frontière de La Línea et de rétablir des conditions normales. Le représentant de l'Espagne n'a pas mentionné l'offre britannique faite à son pays d'établir à Gibraltar un commissaire espagnol qui remplirait le rôle de représentant spécial et d'agent consulaire et aurait le droit de faire flotter le drapeau espagnol sur ses bureaux et sa demeure. Cette offre reconnaissait également les intérêts spéciaux de l'Espagne dans l'évolution constitutionnelle de la colonie et comportait la promesse de donner au Gouvernement espagnol la possibilité d'exprimer son point de vue avant tout changement. Ces propositions n'ont pas été retirées, contrairement à ce qu'a laissé entendre le représentant de l'Espagne, et elles constituent une base utile pour de nouveaux progrès dans les conversations bilatérales. Dans sa réponse à ces propositions, le Gouvernement espagnol exigeait que le Royaume-Uni concède le principe de la souveraineté espagnole sur tout le territoire comme condition préalable. Le Royaume-Uni a commenté en détail les propositions espagnoles, mais ne pouvait accepter une condition préalable équivalente à une reddition totale. Comme la revendication espagnole se fonde sur des arguments juridiques que le Royaume-Uni, de son côté, n'accepte pas, le Gouvernement britannique a proposé que cette question ainsi que les autres soit, elle aussi, posée à la Cour internationale de Justice.

42. Les bases juridiques sur lesquelles l'Espagne fonde sa demande sont, en premier lieu, le fait que Gibraltar est une terre espagnole parce que le Rocher est uni à la péninsule ibérique. Mais, par contre, elle ne prétend pas par ailleurs que le Portugal fasse partie de l'Espagne, bien qu'il occupe une autre partie de la même péninsule. La Malaisie occupe une péninsule et, néanmoins, elle ne fait pas partie de la Thaïlande, pas plus que Singapour, à son tour, ne fait partie de la Malaisie. Cet argument géographique n'est pas valable en matière de décolonisation et fait abstraction de la population du territoire. Il est certainement dépourvu de valeur juridique.

43. La deuxième thèse sur laquelle se fonde la revendication espagnole est d'ordre historique. L'Espagne affirme qu'avant 1713 Gibraltar était espagnol. C'est bien vrai, mais jusqu'où faut-il remonter dans l'histoire pour déterminer la souveraineté. Gibraltar est anglais depuis 250 ans, il a été précédemment espagnol pendant un peu plus de 200 ans, arabe auparavant pendant 700 ans, et ainsi de suite. On pourrait remonter jusqu'aux Romains et aux Carthaginois. En réalité, l'histoire à elle seule ne donne pas une orientation valable pour le présent. Un autre aspect de la revendication espagnole se fonde sur les dispositions du Traité d'Utrecht de 1713. Peut-être, lorsque ce traité a été signé était-il impossible de prévoir les circonstances actuelles, mais tant le Gouvernement britannique que le Gouvernement espagnol se sont toujours efforcés de respecter leurs obligations internationales, et il est incontestable que, par le Traité d'Utrecht, la souveraineté de Gibraltar a été cédée au Gouvernement britannique (selon les termes du Traité) "pour toujours et avec tous les droits sans exception ou limitation d'aucune sorte". L'Espagne ne le nie pas, mais elle insiste sur la nécessité d'accepter aussi les conséquences d'autres dispositions, particulièrement de celle qui a trait à la séparation de Gibraltar et du territoire espagnol. Il semble que le Gouvernement espagnol soutienne que la frontière entre Gibraltar et l'Espagne doit être fermée, sans qu'il soit tenu compte des usages normaux et de la coutume internationale et des habitants de Gibraltar. La fermeture de la frontière ne favoriserait guère non plus les intérêts des habitants du territoire espagnol. Le Gouvernement britannique estime, au contraire, que la fermeture de la frontière est un acte inamical, qui a pour but d'exercer une influence injuste sur les conversations entre les deux pays, en créant des difficultés à la population de Gibraltar. Le Gouvernement espagnol estime également, semble-t-il, qu'en vertu du Traité il n'est pas possible de donner aux habitants de Gibraltar un rôle plus décisif dans l'administration du territoire. Cela est aussi un point de droit qu'il faudrait examiner et qu'il conviendrait de soumettre à une instance légale.

44. Toutes ces raisons expliquent pourquoi le Gouvernement britannique a proposé au Gouvernement espagnol de soumettre à la Cour internationale de Justice tous les points de désaccord entre les deux pays, notamment la question de la souveraineté et de l'interprétation du Traité d'Utrecht et toutes les autres questions juridiques qui se posent dans le cadre du différend opposant l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni. Malheureusement, la première réaction de l'Espagne à cette offre a été aussi négative que tardive. La Commission en tirera sans aucun doute ses propres conclusions. Si ses arguments reposent sur un fondement légal, pourquoi l'Espagne hésite-t-elle à porter le différend devant la plus haute instance internationale? La thèse espagnole n'est pas véritablement fondée sur la décolonisation; l'Espagne n'affirme pas que le passage de 25 000 Gibraltariens sous la souveraineté espagnole les libérera ou élargira leurs libertés, ce qui est certainement l'essence de la décolonisation; elle n'affirme pas davantage que les Gibraltariens soient espagnols ou désirent s'unir à l'Espagne; la déclaration de l'Espagne se fonde sur des raisonnements juridiques et sur l'interprétation du Traité; c'est une prétention juridique de souveraineté sur un morceau de territoire, et, en conséquence, la Cour internationale de Justice est sans aucun doute l'instance appropriée pour examiner ces problèmes comme le prévoit la Charte.

45. L'Espagne affirme que lorsqu'elle demande que Gibraltar soit replacé sous la souveraineté espagnole elle le fait conformément au paragraphe 6 du dispositif de la résolution 1514 (XV), qui condamne toute tentative visant à détruire partiellement ou totalement l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale d'un pays. Mais cette affirmation est fondée sur l'hypothèse que Gibraltar appartient à l'Espagne, argument juridique que le Royaume-Uni a rejeté et que l'Espagne est peu disposée à soumettre au jugement d'une cour impartiale. Or, Gibraltar est un territoire placé sous la souveraineté britannique en droit et en vertu d'un traité et ne fait pas partie de l'Espagne; par conséquent, l'unité nationale et l'intégrité territoriale de l'Espagne n'est aucunement en jeu, et le paragraphe 6 de la résolution 1514 (XV) est donc inapplicable. Affirmer le contraire revient à accepter la revendication de l'Espagne, que le Royaume-Uni rejette catégoriquement tant que la Cour internationale n'aura pas statué en la matière.

46. La question de Gibraltar mérite d'être étudiée attentivement, car elle n'intéresse pas uniquement le Royaume-Uni et l'Espagne; en tant que foyer du peuple de Gibraltar, elle revêt pour ce dernier le plus grand intérêt. Il faut examiner de plus près l'assertion du représentant de l'Espagne, que l'Espagne propose de décoloniser Gibraltar. On entend habituellement par décolonisation la libre détermination ou l'octroi de l'indépendance à la population d'un territoire sous domination étrangère. Tel ne semble pas être le cas en ce qui concerne les propositions de l'Espagne au sujet de Gibraltar. Au cours des conversations qui se sont déroulées à Londres, la délégation espagnole a déclaré le 12 juillet que [en ce qui concerne la solution internationale du problème] le consentement ou l'absence de consentement des habitants de Gibraltar aux propositions espagnoles est inutile tant du point de vue juridique que politique et que l'Espagne ne peut accepter que la solution finale du problème de Gibraltar soit entravée par l'obstination de ses habitants. Il faut donc examiner avec une attention spéciale les promesses de l'Espagne de tenir compte des intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar. Il n'est donc pas surprenant que le Secrétaire aux affaires étrangères britannique ait qualifié à juste titre de "fantastique" la façon dont l'Espagne baptise du nom de "décolonisation" sa revendication territoriale. Il a souligné que l'Espagne cherche nettement à s'emparer de Gibraltar contre le gré des habitants. On ne saurait dire que ce serait faire là œuvre de décolonisation. Ceux qui ont entendu, il y a déjà deux ans, les déclarations des pétitionnaires de Gibraltar devant le Comité spécial se rappelleront qu'ils avaient catégoriquement rejeté l'union avec l'Espagne et exposé leur désir de maintenir leur association avec le Royaume-Uni. Il est indéniable que la population de Gibraltar n'est pas en faveur des propositions espagnoles visant à réunir Gibraltar à l'Espagne. Il ne s'agit pas ici de réunification d'un peuple divisé arbitrairement par des frontières internationales ni du retour à la mère patrie d'un peuple qui en avait été séparé. Les habitants du territoire constituent un peuple méditerranéen d'origine mélangée qui ne sont ni Espagnols ni Anglais, mais sont fiers d'être à la fois Gibraltariens et Britanniques. L'Espagne a qualifié la population de Gibraltar de groupe de peuplement "artificiel". C'est aller un peu loin pour parler d'un peuple qui vit depuis 250 ans à Gibraltar, depuis plus longtemps, par exemple, que la population actuelle de la Californie n'est établie dans cet Etat.

47. L'Espagne affirme que ce morceau de terre appartient à son territoire. Le Gouvernement britannique rejette cette revendication ainsi que celle qui porte sur la partie sud de l'isthme et sur l'aéroport, ou même les plaintes relatives à la violation de l'espace aérien espagnol. Il déplore en outre que l'Espagne ait recours à cette tactique à des fins de propagande pour exciter l'opinion publique et demande au Gouvernement espagnol de supprimer les restrictions — qui ne sont justifiées ni par un traité ni par l'usage international — qu'il a imposées à la frontière. L'Espagne défend cette thèse non pas à des fins de décolonisation, mais parce qu'elle revendique un territoire britannique. Le Gouvernement britannique est disposé à porter toutes ces questions juridiques faisant l'objet d'un différend devant la plus haute instance juridique des Nations Unies, ce qui serait la première démarche essentielle à faire en vue d'aboutir à un règlement, et, si le Gouvernement espagnol rejette cette proposition, le Gouvernement britannique tirera ses propres conclusions.

48. Le représentant de l'Espagne a fait savoir qu'il avait l'intention de faire distribuer aux membres de la Commission plusieurs documents ayant trait à la question de Gibraltar. La délégation britannique a mis à la disposition des membres de la Commission une petite brochure intitulée Gibraltar — les faits, où il est dit que les arguments britanniques reposent sur deux principes fondamentaux: a) le droit légitime de la Grande-Bretagne sur tout le territoire de Gibraltar; b) le facteur humain, à savoir les habitants de Gibraltar eux-mêmes. En effet, aux termes de l'Article 73 de la Charte des Nations Unies, les intérêts des habitants des territoires non autonomes l'emportent sur toute autre préoccupation. Il faut se féliciter que dans ses déclarations, l'Espagne accepte à présent, semble-t-il, le principe qu'il faut tenir compte des intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar, conformément à la résolution 2070 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale. Néanmoins, les actes espagnols à la frontière sont principalement dirigés contre cette population et, par conséquent, n'inspirent pas confiance aux Gibraltariens, en particulier dans les bonnes dispositions de l'Espagne à leur égard.

49. Le Gouvernement du Royaume-Uni est disposé à poursuivre des négociations amicales et pacifiques en vue de trouver une solution constructive qui respecte les intérêts des habitants de Gibraltar. Le maintien de l'offre faite le 12 juillet le prouve. Le Gouvernement britannique donnera suite aux réponses du Gouvernement espagnol dès qu'elles auront été traitées et examinées comme il convient.

50. Mme HOLGUIN (Colombie) se réfère à la question des îles Falkland (Malvinas) dont traite la résolution 2065 (XX) de l'Assemblée générale. Il convient de se féliciter que tant le Royaume-Uni que la République argentine aient commencé à donner suite à la demande contenue dans cette résolution et aient entamé des négociations pour résoudre pacifiquement ce problème. Cela constitue un pas en avant dans la voie de la liquidation de tous les vestiges du colonialisme sur le continent américain. Le problème de la liquidation du colonialisme a été étudié à maintes reprises par les pays membres du système interaméricain et à toujours eu l'appui de la Colombie ainsi que celui des pays d'Amérique latine.

51. En ce qui concerne les îles Falkland (Malvinas), il s'agit d'un cas de colonialisme; par conséquent, la résolution 1514 (XV) leur est applicable, en particulier le paragraphe 6 de cette résolution. Il faut regretter, toutefois, que les deux gouvernements parties se contentent de signaler que les négociations se poursuivent et n'aient pas, conformément à la résolution 2065 (XX), informé la Commission des résultats des entretiens. La représentante de la Colombie prie instamment le Royaume-Uni et l'Argentine d'intensifier leurs négociations pour arriver le plus tôt possible à une solution pacifique de ce problème qui affecte depuis plus d'un siècle le continent américain.

M. Fakhreddine (Soudan) prend la présidence.

52. M. MENDELEVITCH (Union des Républiques socialistes soviétiques) déclare que le problème dont la Quatrième Commission est actuellement saisie porte sur ce que l'on nomme les petits territoires. Cette notion de petits territoires peut prêter à équivoque parce qu'elle semble amoindrir l'importance du problème. Ces territoires sont petits par leur superficie, qui parfois ne se chiffre pas en milliers, mais en centaines ou même en dizaines de kilomètres carrés, et par leur population qui parfois ne dépasse pas quelques milliers ou même quelques centaines d'habitants. Cependant, du point de vue de la Quatrième Commission, leur importance ne réside pas dans leur dimension, mais dans le fait qu'il s'agit de territoires coloniaux.

53. La lecture du rapport du Comité spécial relatif à ces territoires montre qu'entre ces derniers et les autres territoires que la Commission a déjà examinés il n'existe aucune différence de principe quant à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, contenue dans la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale. Ces territoires sont des colonies, ce sont des terres qui n'appartiennent pas à ceux qui les possèdent actuellement. Ils ont été conquis par des pays plus puissants au moment où les grands pays capitalistes se partageaient le monde. Leur population est soumise aux colonisateurs. Leurs richesses, leurs ressources naturelles et humaines sont exploitées par les grands monopoles qui exploitent également les ressources de l'Angola, du Mozambique et d'autres territoires.

54. Les colonialistes sont les mêmes aussi: le Royaume-Uni, l'Australie et la Nouvelle-Zélande et, dans le cas qui nous occupe, une autre puissance coloniale, les Etats-Unis. En ce qui concerne les autres colonies, les Etats-Unis restent au deuxième plan, ils fournissent des armes et du matériel militaire aux colonialistes, ils les défendent et leur apportent leur appui dans les organisations internationales et à l'Organisation des Nations Unies en s'abstenant de voter en faveur des résolutions dirigées contre le colonialisme. Toutefois, dans le cas des petits territoires, les Etats-Unis pratiquent directement le colonialisme et sont donc une puissance coloniale au sens strict du terme. Le Royaume-Uni, la Nouvelle-Zélande, l'Australie et les Etats-Unis, colonialistes invétérés, se prêtent mutuellement appui au sein des alliances militaires et à l'ONU.

55. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique est convaincu que, en ce qui concerne les territoires administrés par le Portugal, les Etats-Unis appuieront le Portugal et que ce dernier à son tour appuiera les Etats-Unis lorsque la question de Guam et des territoires du Pacifique sera examinée. Si l'on ajoute l'Afrique du Sud, le groupe des colonialistes est au complet.

56. Les petits territoires sont des colonies, et la résolution 1514 (XV) leur est pleinement applicable. Toutefois, il existe une différence entre ces territoires et les territoires coloniaux qui ont déjà été examinés. Cette différence n'est pas géographique, mais politique. Les petits territoires peuvent avoir pour les colonialistes une importance stratégique et militaire considérables et encore plus actuellement que par le passé. C'est là une caractéristique permanente qui n'est due ni au hasard ni à la conjoncture. Il y a toujours eu des bases militaires dans les territoires coloniaux. Il existait une base à Suez jusqu'à ce que le peuple égyptien expulse les Britanniques. A Tunis, ce sont les Français qui se sont fait expulser.

57. Dans les colonies importantes les colonialistes se voient obligés, bien malgré eux, à abandonner petit à petit leurs bases militaires. Ils se réfugient alors dans les petites îles disséminées dans les océans où il leur est plus facile de maintenir des bases militaires. Le contrôle des colonialistes y est plus sûr et plus ferme puisque la population étant peu nombreuse, en général il ne se produit pas de protestations de masse. Le Premier Ministre du Royaume-Uni le reconnaît lui-même puisque selon le rapport du Comité spécial (voir A/6300/Rev.1, chap. XIV, par. 53), il a affirmé sans ambages au cours d'une réunion parlementaire du Parti travailliste qui s'est déroulée le 15 juin 1966, que le Royaume-Uni cherchait à éliminer, partout où il serait possible de le faire, le système de grandes bases situées dans des zones peuplées. M. Wilson a d'ailleurs ajouté que ce dont on avait véritablement besoin, c'était des postes de surveillance comme ceux dont dispose le Royaume-Uni dans l'océan Indien, qui n'ont pratiquement pas de population locale et qui, par contre, permettent aux forces britanniques de se rendre rapidement à un coût minime, partout où elles doivent aller.

58. Ces territoires sont éparpillés dans l'océan Indien, dans l'océan Pacifique ou constituent des enclaves dans les continents. Leur ensemble forme l'infrastructure des bases de l'OTAN. L'étude du Comité spécial met en évidence le fait qu'il s'agit de bases stratégiques dont le but est de servir de point de départ à des opérations militaires de grande envergure; ils ont d'ailleurs été fréquemment utilisés à cette fin au cours de ces dernières années.

59. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique cite l'exemple de l'île de Guam, où est installée une base militaire très importante. Selon la presse des Etats-Unis elle-même, les bombardiers B-52, qui sont parmi les plus puissants du monde, en décollent quotidiennement pour bombarder les héroïques guerilleros luttant pour la liberté du Viet-Nam du Sud. Et les bombardiers B-52 ne s'en tiennent pas là, mais ils bombardent également le territoire d'un Etat indépendant et souverain, la République démocratique du Viet-Nam.

60. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique espère que le représentant des Etats-Unis n'a pas l'intention d'affirmer, comme il l'a fait au Comité spécial, que la question de l'utilisation de forces aériennes à partir de la base de Guam n'a aucun rapport avec la décolonisation. Ce rapport est évident: Guam est une colonie, les Etats-Unis y ont une base militaire et le paragraphe 11 de la résolution 2189 (XXI) relatif à l'application de la Déclaration sur l'octroi de l'indépendance aux pays et aux peuples coloniaux, que l'Assemblée générale a adoptée le 13 décembre 1966, prie les puissances coloniales de démanteler leurs bases et installations militaires situées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles et d'utiliser celles qui existent encore pour entraver la libération des peuples des territoires coloniaux dans l'exercice de leurs droits légitimes à la liberté et à l'indépendance. La délégation des Etats-Unis a fait tout ce qui lui était possible, bien que sans grande habileté, pour empêcher l'approbation de ce paragraphe 11. Néanmoins, la thèse des Etats-Unis a été rejetée par la grande majorité des membres de l'Assemblée générale. Il est à espérer que cela servira de leçon pour l'avenir au Gouvernement des Etats-Unis. Il est donc parfaitement démontré que la question de l'utilisation de l'île de Guam comme base militaire contre le peuple du Viet-Nam reste en relation directe avec le problème de l'élimination du colonialisme.

61. Devant le Comité spécial, la représentante des Etats-Unis a affirmé (ibid., chap. XVIII, par. 53) que la question des installations militaires de Guam n'offrait guère de rapport avec le mandat du Comité spécial. Cette position est indéfendable. L'élimination des bases militaires est un aspect capital du processus de décolonisation. Si Guam n'était pas une colonie, il est absolument certain qu'il n'y aurait pas de base militaire dans l'île.

62. A la même occasion, la représentante des Etats-Unis a déclaré que la base ne faisait courir aucun danger au peuple de Guam et ne constituait aucun obstacle à son progrès. Cette affirmation est assez hasardeuse, car il n'existe aucun traité qui fasse de Guam un sanctuaire à respecter en cas de guerre. La base militaire de Guam est une menace manifeste pour la population civile de l'île.

63. M. Mendelevitch mentionne également le cas de l'île d'Ascension, dans l'océan Indien, d'où a été lancée en 1964 contre le Congo une agression à laquelle ont participé conjointement les forces du Royaume-Uni, des Etats-Unis et de la Belgique. Une fois de plus, l'alliance des colonialistes a utilisé pour ses desseins agressifs une base située dans un petit territoire colonial.

64. L'Union soviétique considère avec inquiétude la tendance à l'extension du réseau des bases militaires colonialistes. Le rapport du Comité spécial (ibid., chap. XIV, par. 43 et 44) mentionne l'intention du Royaume-Uni d'utiliser Diego Garcia, la plus grande des îles de l'archipel des Chagos, comme centre de communications et dépôt de carburants; les installations de l'île pourraient être aménagées pour la transformer en poste-relais. Il semble que plusieurs autres pays, parmi lesquels l'Australie et la Nouvelle-Zélande, s'intéresseraient à la création de postes-relais pour les transports aériens et maritimes dans l'océan Indien, entre la mer Rouge et les îles Coco (Keeling). Diego Garcia deviendra une base stratégique du système de sécurité du Royaume-Uni à l'est de Suez. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique signale que la même observation a été faite pour Aden. Mais il semble qu'il existe un projet d'installer à Diego Garcia une base navale pour sous-marins atomiques, armés de fusées nucléaires Polaris. L'île serait ainsi un maillon de plus dans la chaîne de bases nucléaires des Etats-Unis, qui n'ont d'ailleurs pas besoin d'être très nombreuses. Une ou deux bases par océan sont suffisantes: Guam et Diego Garcia dans le Pacifique, Scapa Flow en Ecosse et Rota à l'entrée de la Méditerranée.

65. Ces projets des colonialistes constituent un danger pour bien des Etats. Il est temps d'agir, et l'Organisation des Nations Unies doit jouer un rôle actif dans le processus de décolonisation. Que peut faire l'ONU pour aider les peuples des petits territoires coloniaux à obtenir leur liberté et leur indépendance? Elle doit réaffirmer que la résolution 1514 (XV) s'applique entièrement à ces territoires. Elle doit exiger que les bases militaires soient supprimées et que les peuples des territoires ne soient pas obligés de participer aux activités militaires des puissances coloniales, comme c'est le cas à Guam.

66. En ce qui concerne Gibraltar, la base militaire qui y est installée doit être supprimée sans retard. Il paraît que des négociations sont en cours entre le Royaume-Uni et l'Espagne; l'Union soviétique ne veut pas s'y immiscer, mais elle insiste sur la nécessité de démilitariser Gibraltar et de supprimer la base. Le projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2, approuvé par l'Assemblée générale [résolution 2189 (XXI)], et plus précisément son paragraphe 11, s'applique également à Gibraltar; néanmoins, la déclaration du Royaume-Uni ne mentionne pas la suppression de la base militaire. Si le Royaume-Uni ne veut pas appliquer les décisions de l'ONU et refuse de supprimer la base, il doit le dire clairement.

67. L'Assemblée générale devrait exiger que les puissances coloniales renoncent à toute manœuvre colonialiste et néo-colonialiste dans les petits territoires. Récemment, le Royaume-Uni a assuré que l'île d'Antigua serait indépendante et il a néanmoins déclaré ensuite que les relations extérieures et la sécurité, attributs fondamentaux de la souveraineté, continueraient à être la responsabilité du Royaume-Uni. Il doit être mis fin à ces manœuvres, et l'Assemblée générale doit l'exiger. Elle doit également exiger qu'il soit mis fin au pillage dont sont victimes ces territoires.

68. La délégation soviétique juge très positive la proposition du Comité spécial concernant l'envoi de missions de l'ONU dans les petits territoires. Cette pratique doit se généraliser, et l'Union soviétique soutient l'envoi de missions aux îles Fidji, ainsi qu'au Sahara espagnol et en Guinée équatoriale. Il convient également d'envoyer une mission de visite dans d'autres petits territoires, parmi lesquels le représentant de l'Union soviétique mentionne le Territoire britannique de l'océan Indien, car il voit avec inquiétude les manœuvres tendant à séparer les îles Chagos de l'île Maurice et des îles Seychelles, ainsi que le projet de construction d'une base militaire. Il conviendrait qu'une mission des Nations Unies étudie sur place la situation, notamment en ce qui concerne la base militaire projetée. Il faudrait également envoyer une mission des Nations Unies à Guam, où il existe une importante base militaire qui présente un grave danger. L'Organisation des Nations Unies doit s'assurer elle-même de cette réalité. Dans son rapport sur les Samoa américaines, Guam et le Territoire sous tutelle des îles du Pacifique, le Sous-Comité II du Comité spécial estime qu'une visite de ces territoires par le Comité spécial est nécessaire et serait de la plus grande utilité, car, outre qu'elle permettrait aux Etats Membres de mieux se rendre compte des besoins et des aspirations de la population, elle permettrait également à cette dernière de prendre davantage conscience de ses droits qui lui ont été garantis par l'Organisation des Nations Unies (ibid., chap. XVIII, annexe, par. 31, g). L'Union soviétique fait sienne sans réserves cette proposition d'envoyer une mission aux Samoa américaines, à Guam et dans le Territoire sous tutelle des îles du Pacifique. En particulier, elle estime important d'étudier le cas de Guam. Les Etats-Unis déclarent constamment leur désir de coopérer avec l'Organisation des Nations Unies. Le représentant de l'Union soviétique demande aux Etats-Unis de ne pas s'opposer à l'envoi d'une mission et de démontrer ainsi qu'ils sont réellement disposés à coopérer avec l'Organisation.

69. L'Union soviétique insiste sur le fait que tout territoire, grand ou petit, doit être décolonisé. Pas un mètre carré de terre, pas un seul être humain ne doit rester soumis au colonialisme, qui doit être éliminé sans retard et pour toujours.

70. M. WITMAN (Etats-Unis d'Amérique) fait observer que le représentant de l'Union soviétique a parlé du problème des bases militaires, bien que la Commission examine la question de la décolonisation. Le problème des bases a été discuté à la Première Commission, qui a décidé d'en saisir la Commission du désarmement. En ce qui concerne Guam, la délégation des Etats-Unis se réserve le droit d'intervenir au moment qu'elle jugera opportun.

71. Enfin, au sujet de l'allusion au Viet-Nam faite par le représentant de l'Union soviétique, le représentant des Etats-Unis fait observer que son gouvernement a fait tout ce qui était possible pour que cette question soit examinée par un organe adéquat des Nations Unies.

72. M. LOLEKA (République démocratique du Congo) propose que la déclaration du représentant de l'Union soviétique soit reproduite in extenso dans le compte rendu de la séance.

73. M. GROS ESPIELL (Uruguay) propose que la déclaration du représentant de l'Espagne soit reproduite in extenso dans le compte rendu de la séance.

74. Le PRESIDENT dit qu'en l'absence d'objections il considérera que la Commission accepte que les déclarations des représentants de l'Union soviétique et de l'Espagne soient reproduites in extenso.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

75. M. KANAKARATNE (Ceylan) dit que, si la déclaration du représentant de l'Espagne est reproduite in extenso, l'équité impose qu'il en soit de même pour celle du représentant du Royaume-Uni.

76. M. OULD DADDAH (Mauritanie) déclare que le représentant du Royaume-Uni s'est borné à expliquer le texte d'une brochure déjà distribuée. Tous les membres de la Commission ayant reçu ce document, il n'est pas nécessaire de reproduire in extenso la déclaration de ce représentant.

77. M. MALECELA (République-Unie de Tanzanie) fait observer que le document distribué par la délégation du Royaume-Uni n'a pas de caractère officiel, à la différence des comptes rendus de la Commission.

C'est pourquoi il demande que la déclaration du représentant du Royaume-Uni soit reproduite in extenso.

78. Le PRESIDENT dit qu'en l'absence d'objections il considérera que la majorité de la Commission est d'accord pour que la déclaration du représentant du Royaume-Uni soit reproduite in extenso dans le compte rendu.

Il en est ainsi décidé.

79. M. TIKHONOV (République socialiste soviétique de Biélorussie) note que la question des territoires n'ayant pas été examinés séparément concerne surtout les petits territoires. La délégation de la RSS de Biélorussie est fermement persuadée que la résolution 1514 (XV) est applicable à ces territoires, comme l'a confirmé l'Assemblée générale dans sa résolution 2066 (XX) et dans d'autres résolutions où est réaffirmé le droit inaliénable des peuples à la libre détermination. Mais les puissances coloniales invoquent des difficultés particulières pour ne pas appliquer ces résolutions. Dans sa résolution 2105 (XX), l'Assemblée générale prie les puissances coloniales de démanteler les bases militaires installées dans les territoires coloniaux et de s'abstenir d'en établir de nouvelles; la même disposition figure dans la résolution 2189 (XXI) adoptée par l'Assemblée générale le 13 décembre 1966, sur la base du projet de résolution A/L.506 et Add.1 et 2. Le représentant de la RSS de Biélorussie cite les déclarations du représentant de l'Union soviétique, d'où il ressort que des bombardiers B-52 partent de la base de Guam pour semer la mort au Viet-Nam et remarque qu'il ne semble pas que les Etats-Unis soient près de démanteler cette base. Plusieurs délégations éprouvent des inquiétudes à l'idée que les puissances coloniales se consacrent au développement de leurs bases, développement que favorise actuellement le Royaume-Uni dans l'océan Indien en soustrayant diverses îles à l'administration de l'île Maurice et des îles Seychelles, et en créant une nouvelle base dans le territoire qu'il a rebaptisé du nom de Territoire britannique de l'océan Indien; mais ces bases servent, soi-disant, à des fins défensives. Ce fait est confirmé par la presse occidentale qui, au cours des deux dernières années, a annoncé que des experts venus d'Australie, du Royaume-Uni et des Etats-Unis, étudient l'utilisation de bases dans l'océan Indien. Tous les alliés occidentaux se sont mis d'accord à ce sujet, et, dans la pratique, les Etats-Unis encouragent le Royaume-Uni à leur laisser jouer le rôle de gendarmes dans cette zone et à s'y charger de la responsabilité des questions nucléaires. Selon le correspondant militaire du New York Times, Hanson Baldwin, le Royaume-Uni, pour éviter l'établissement de bases dans des zones éventuellement dangereuses, du fait que leurs habitants pourraient s'opposer à ses agissements, a installé des bases dans l'océan Indien et créé une nouvelle colonie dans laquelle il pourra poster ses forces militaires colonialistes expulsées de zones ayant une plus forte densité de population. Comme le Royaume-Uni se trouve dans l'obligation d'abandonner Aden au plus tard en 1968, il crée, dans l'océan Indien, une nouvelle base pour combler ce vide. Mais il sera fait échec à ces intrigues. Le colonialisme est en très mauvaise posture, et sa défaite se trouvera accélérée par la conscience politique des peuples, qui ne cesse de se développer.

80. La délégation de la RSS de Biélorussie juge très précieux le travail accompli par le Comité spécial et appuie les conclusions et les recommandations formulées aux chapitres XIV à XXIII du document A/6300/Rev.1, mais elle considère que celles-ci sont insuffisantes, car elles ne traitent pas la question de l'élimination des bases dans les petits territoires. L'Assemblée générale doit réaffirmer le droit des peuples de ces territoires à la libre détermination et à la souveraineté sur leurs richesses naturelles. Elle doit exiger l'élimination des bases, conformément aux dispositions contenues dans ses résolutions 2105 (XX) et 2189 (XXI). Elle doit exiger également que l'on ne forme pas des groupements artificiels de territoires, en violation des résolutions des Nations Unies. D'autre part, on dispose de peu de renseignements sur ces territoires et, par conséquent, il faut qu'il s'y rende des missions de visite des Nations Unies qui détermineront quelle est la véritable situation. Ces missions doivent comprendre des représentants de pays qui aient démontré, par leurs actes, leur volonté d'appliquer la résolution 1514 (XV), et les puissances coloniales doivent donner des preuves de leur disposition à coopérer.

81. M. JOUEJATI (Syrie) dit que la position de sa délégation concernant les petits territoires est la suivante: la résolution 1514 (XV) leur est applicable et la puissance coloniale ne doit pas se servir des problèmes qui découlent de leur superficie comme prétexte pour leur refuser le droit à la libre détermination. De même, l'établissement de bases militaires dans ces territoires constitue une violation du principe de la libre détermination et de l'intégrité des territoires, ainsi qu'une menace à la paix et à la sécurité internationales; en effet, bien que les puissances administrantes soutiennent que les bases sont créées à des fins défensives, l'histoire a prouvé qu'elles ne laissaient pas d'avoir des fins offensives et qu'elles servaient uniquement à défendre des intérêts qui n'étaient pas ceux des territoires.

82. Quant à Gibraltar, le représentant de la Syrie estime que, du point de vue juridique, la position du Royaume-Uni est celle d'un usurpateur, comme l'a dit le représentant de l'Uruguay. Le Traité d'Utrecht a imposé des limitations au Royaume-Uni, et celui-ci ne peut étendre unilatéralement la cession du Rocher à tout l'isthme. La délégation espagnole vient de proposer que les négociations se poursuivent avec l'aide du Secrétaire général. Le représentant du Royaume-Uni, par contre, n'a pas affirmé clairement, dans son intervention, que l'objectif de ces négociations était, en définitive, la décolonisation. Au contraire, il semble vouloir recourir à toutes espèces de prétextes juridiques et à des exceptions dilatoires tels que, par exemple, la thèse selon laquelle la Cour internationale de Justice est l'organe compétent pour déterminer la validité de ses droits. C'est là une suggestion étrange si l'on se souvient que l'ONU comprend un organe chargé des questions de décolonisation. La thèse du Royaume-Uni est fondée sur l'argument selon lequel ses droits sur Gibraltar découlent du fait que leur titulaire légitime ne les a pas revendiqués. C'est ainsi que le Royaume-Uni remercie l'Espagne de l'assistance que lui a prêtée ce pays au cours d'une période de crise. Le représentant de la Syrie approuve la protestation du Gouvernement espagnol, car il y a lieu de se demander jusqu'où serait allée, sans ce pays, l'expansion progressive du Royaume-Uni sur le territoire espagnol. Le Royaume-Uni a conclu l'exposé de sa thèse en affirmant que le Rocher de Gibraltar était britannique. Il y a donc lieu de se demander ce que peuvent permettre d'obtenir les négociations. A l'heure actuelle, il est évident que c'est le Royaume-Uni qui fait obstacle aux négociations, et le représentant de la Syrie estime que la résolution du Comité spécial du 17 novembre 1966 dans laquelle les deux parties étaient invitées à s'abstenir d'actes qui fassent obstacle au succès de ces négociations doit être modifiée afin que cet appel ne soit adressé qu'au Royaume-Uni.

83. Il ne faut pas oublier que, dans la résolution 2065 (XX) concernant les îles Falkland (Malvinas), les Gouvernements de l'Argentine et du Royaume-Uni ont été invités à poursuivre les négociations en vue de trouver une solution pacifique au problème, en tenant dûment compte des dispositions et des objectifs de la Charte et de la résolution 1514 (XV) de l'Assemblée générale, ainsi que des intérêts de la population des îles. On a déjà entamé les négociations, mais l'essentiel est de parvenir à une solution le plus rapidement possible. Les Nations Unies peuvent jouer un rôle très utile en suivant de près les négociations pour s'assurer que la décolonisation se réalise. Le représentant de la Syrie prend note des déclarations de la délégation argentine selon lesquelles le Gouvernement argentin accueillerait avec satisfaction la participation de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. A son avis, c'est là l'élément le plus positif de tout le problème.

84. M. SIDI BABA (Maroc) estime que l'accusation portée par l'Espagne contre le Maroc, qui a prouvé qu'il était un ferme défenseur de l'anticolonialisme, selon laquelle ce pays est de connivence avec les colonialistes britanniques à Gibraltar, revêt un caractère de gravité particulière. Pour ce qui est de la présence d'ouvriers marocains sur le Rocher, leur nombre ne justifie pas l'emploi du terme "connivence", et, qui plus est, le Gouvernement marocain n'organise pas l'envoi de travailleurs à Gibraltar et n'a aucune autorité sur eux. Il se trouve, en Europe, des centaines de milliers d'ouvriers marocains, et il n'y a rien d'étrange à ce qu'il y en ait également à Gibraltar qui n'est qu'à quelques kilomètres de la côte marocaine. En outre, ces ouvriers ne sont pas les seuls étrangers qui se trouvent à Gibraltar, car on y compte également des Indiens, des Pakistanais, des Nord-Africains, des Maltais, des Italiens et des Espagnols; par conséquent, le fait de conclure que le Maroc appuie le colonialisme britannique à Gibraltar, en raison uniquement de la présence de quelques-uns de ses ressortissants dans le territoire, reflète un esprit que le représentant du Maroc préfère ne pas qualifier. Les rapports existant entre Tanger et Gibraltar remontent à une époque très reculée, et le fait que l'Espagne ait décidé de couper ou d'interrompre ses communications aériennes et maritimes avec Gibraltar et de lui
